He himself told them: "What you are seeing and what you are reading is not what's happening."It is important to note that fascism is not a political ideology or strategy but mental pathology at societal scale, starting with an impaired leader who attains power not to lead but to fulfill his own dysfunctional needs. Of course, such a leader is attractive in the first place because of similar pathologies in the population, which global economic inequities and massive social injustices in our day could have predicted. Since such a leader does not have any real ability to lead, he manipulates the psychological weaknesses in the population, augmenting societal disorder until the dynamic brings down the entire society. Destruction is always the inevitable result, as it is the nature of pathology, as opposed to healthy choices."

The Mueller Report, Napolitano believes, lays out a number of presidential acts that constitute obstruction of justice including:

- When Trump asked Deputy National Security Adviser KT McFarland to write an untruthful letter to the file, knowing the government would subpoena it.
- When Trump asked Corey Lewandowski to get Mueller fired.
- When Trump asked Don McGahn to get Mueller fired and then to lie about it.

- When Trump asked McGahn to go back to Mueller's team and change his testimony.
- When Trump dangled a pardon in front of Michael Cohen, in order to keep Cohen to testifying against him.

Politics The Guardian Bannon described Trump Organization as 'criminal enterprise', Michael Wolff book claims [Because that's what it is!] Former White House adviser says financial investigations will take down president in sequel to Fire and FurySupport the Guardian's independent journalism. Make a contribution today Donald Trump along with his children Eric, Ivanka and Donald Jr arrive for a press conference at Trump Tower in New York in 2017. Photograph: Timothy A Clary/AFP/Getty Images The former White House adviser Steve Bannon has described the Trump Organization as a criminal entity and predicted that investigations into the president's finances will lead to his political downfall, when he is revealed to be "not the billionaire he said he was, just another scumbag". The startling remarks are contained in Siege: Trump Under Fire, the author Michael Wolff's forthcoming account of the second year of the Trump administration. The book, published on 4 June, is a sequel to Fire and Fury: Trump in the White House, which was a bestseller in 2018. The Guardian obtained a copy. In a key passage, Bannon is reported as saying he believes investigations of Donald Trump's financial history will provide proof of the underlying criminality of his eponymous company. Assessing the president's exposure to various investigations, many seeded by the special counsel Robert Mueller during his investigation of Russian election interference, Wolff writes: "Trump was vulnerable because for 40 years he had run what increasingly seemed to resemble a semi-criminal enterprise.” He then quotes Bannon as saying: “I think we can drop the ‘semi’ part.” Bannon, a leading promoter of far-right populism, was a White House adviser until August 2017, when he was removed. He was a major source for Fire and Fury, also first reported by the Guardian. Among other claims in that book, he labelled as “treasonous” an infamous Trump Tower meeting between Donald Trump Jr, Trump’s son-in-law Jared Kushner, campaign manager Paul Manafort and a Russian lawyer. Amid publicity surrounding Fire and Fury, Bannon was ejected from circles close to Trump and his position at Breitbart News. In Siege, Wolff pays close attention to Trump’s financial affairs. Investigations into Trump’s business dealings, spearheaded by the southern district of New York, have shuttered the president’s charity and seen the Trump Organization chief financial officer, Allen Weisselberg, receive immunity for testimony in investigations of Michael Cohen, the former Trump attorney and fixer who is now in jail in New York. This month, the New York Times obtained tax information that showed Trump’s businesses lost more than $1bn from 1985 to 1994. The newspaper subsequently reported that in 2016 and 2017, Deutsche Bank employees flagged concerns over possible money laundering through transactions involving legal entities controlled by the president and Kushner. Some of the transactions involved individuals in Russia. The bank did not act but Congress and New York state are now investigating its relationship with Trump and his family. Deutsche Bank has lent billions to Trump and Kushner companies. Trump has attempted to block House subpoenas for his financial records sent to Deutsche Bank. In Siege, Wolff quotes Bannon saying investigations into Trump’s finances will cut adrift even his most ardent supporters: “This is where it isn’t a witch hunt - even for the hard core, this is where he turns into just a crooked business guy, and one worth $50m instead of $10bn. “Not the billionaire he said he was, just another scumbag.” Wolff also details a 2004 Palm Beach property deal involving the now disgraced financier Jeffrey Epstein and the Putin-friendly oligarch Dmitry Rybolovlev that, the author writes, earned Trump “$55m without putting up a dime”. Epstein, he writes, invited Trump to see a $36m Palm Beach mansion he planned to buy. According to Wolff, Trump went behind Epstein's back to buy the foreclosed property for around $40m, a sum Epstein had reason to believe Trump couldn't raise in his own right, through an entity called Trump Properties LLC, which was entirely financed by Deutsche Bank. Epstein, Wolff writes, knew Trump had been loaning out his name in real estate deals for a fee and suspected that in his case Trump was fronting for the property's real owners. Epstein threatened to expose the deal. As the dispute increased, he found himself under investigation by the Palm Beach police. According to Wolff, Trump made only minor improvements and put the house on the market for $125m. It was purchased for $96m by Rybolovlev, part of a circle of government-aligned industrialists in Russia, thereby earning Trump $55m without risking any of his own money. Wolff presents two theories as to how the deal worked: first, perhaps "Trump merely earned a fee for hiding the real owner - a shadow owner quite possibly being funneled cash by Rybolovlev for other reasons beyond the value of the house". Second, he suggests the real owner of the house and the real buyer were one and the same. "Rybolovlev might have, in effect, paid himself for the house, thereby cleansing the additional $55m for the second purchase of the house." "This," Wolff writes, "was Donald Trump's world of real estate."

Opinion: The abdication of King Trump THE ABDICATION OF KING TRUMP

By Ted Gup Updated 3:41 PM ET, Mon May 27, 2019

Ted Gup is an author and writer-in-residence at Durham University in the UK. He has been a contributor to the Washington Post, New York Times, NPR, Slate, The Guardian, National Geographic and other publications.

The opinions expressed in this commentary are solely those of the author. Read more opinion on CNN.

(CNN) In recent weeks, nearly all the talk in Washington centered around impeachment -- would they or wouldn't they? Now the nation faces a new worry -- abdication. That's right, the President who imagines himself a king, and expects others to treat him the same way, has declared that he will have nothing to do with Congress on infrastructure legislation -- perhaps the one area where he could have won bipartisan support -- so long as the Dems insist on holding him accountable. In effect, Donald Trump has announced that he has abdicated, having no longer any wish to serve. Fittingly, the word "abdication" has two meanings. The first applies to when a monarch relinquishes his throne (in Trump's case, not likely); the second, when anyone in a position of authority chooses to neglect or ignore his duties. The latter is what this petulant President has said he will do so long as anyone dares question him. He has announced, in effect, that America now has a government in absentia.

To understand what happened last week, it is best viewed through the lens of medieval times, which is the domain in which our President/king resides. What House Speaker Nancy Pelosi did by accusing him of a cover-up amounted to what monarchs call "Lese Majeste" -- an insult to the sovereign. (For Trump, there is no real issue of constitutionality. The only separation of powers he seems to recognize is that which he has doled out between his advisers, Jared Kushner and Ivanka Trump, and his son Don Jr.)

Which helps explain the calculated and choreographed Rose Garden hissy fit (complete with posters on the podium) and why it is that Trump, who was always accustomed to getting his own way, has done so again. His threat not to deal with Congress so long as it has the temerity to question him, creates for him the ideal scenario: he gets to hold on to the throne without having to govern, which is most likely what he wanted from the beginning. For all his scorn and righteous indignation, he's probably experiencing a measure of relief and even gratitude that the weight of the crown has been at least temporarily lifted.

Comment: Does President Trump want to be impeached? 02:45

After all, he has never had any interest in actually running things and when he did he often ran them into the ground (count the bankruptcies, and now the debacle of US immigration policy). He is the CEO who is averse to managing, the deal-maker extraordinaire who comes away from the negotiating table empty-handed, having offended lifelong allies to the delight of our adversaries; he is the wizard investor who is said to have lost more money over a decade than practically any other American. His competence rests exclusively on his own testimonials. In Texas they call that "all hat and no cattle."

He is about scoring points, nothing more. It is only fitting that he was the host of the TV program "The Apprentice," a show about sycophants vying for his favor. Trump is himself a lifelong apprentice, first desperately vying for the acceptance of his martinet father, and later, the nation. Look at his life -- he is a success at courtship and wooing; fidelity, not so much.

In many ways, his inauguration was the high point of his presidency. What followed was the bewildering realization that something more was expected of him. He is perpetually on the campaign trail in pursuit of validation, and another win.

SE Cupp: Conway crying sexism is her go-to move 02:14

Trump, the consummate dealmaker, can always walk away from the table, not because he is a canny and tough negotiator, but because he does not seem to care what the outcome is or what the ultimate shape of the deal is. He has no true investment in the deal (the well-being of our country and its people), only in his ego -- it is enough that he appears to have won.

His singular talents span the spectrum from bluff to bluster, which work well enough in inherited wealth and reality TV, but less so for those enterprises requiring actual hands-on governance. And is it not the ultimate expression of executive privilege, the right not to behave as an executive at all? He is drawn to the prerogatives of power, and not what that power can do for others.

So in threatening to eschew all manner of presidential engagement, save the pomp and circumstance for which he lives, he has simply shed all pretense and shown his true self. State dinners, motorcades, the pandering of Fox & Friends and endless ego-stroking were all that he ever wanted. Even on the campaign trail, nothing was further from his mind than finding solutions to the nation's problems.

Smerconish: Trump has no strategy other than be provocative 02:45 He has become a case study in the old adage, "be careful what you wish for." One can be forgiven for wondering if it had even occurred to him that certain responsibilities might come along with holding office. How utterly inconvenient for tweeting and tee-off times.

And now we have the worst of all possible worlds: an abdication that leaves some 327 million Americans in limbo.

The problem is that Trump, in his own inimitable way, has created a most imperfect vacuum for the nation. For the foreseeable future the presidency will be both vacant and occupied, with the country reduced to waiting out his tantrum and deciphering its future from a fusillade of tweets and campaign-like rants.

Meanwhile, the nation's bridges are left to crack, highways buckle, tracks heave, illicit drugs proliferate, medications grow ever-more expensive; diplomats scratch their heads and hind parts, idled by kingly disinterest, allies wonder whether we have their backs or should watch their backs, enemies salivate, polar ice caps slip into the sea, and poor, poor Doral Country Club -- under Trump's storied management -- continues, like the rest of us, to struggle.

Stay up to date...

Now, freed of such noisome distractions as legislation, budgets, and infrastructure, he, like a child with a giant LEGO set, can concentrate on trying to build that wall to the south and dispense with pretending to care about the nation or its ills.

Instead of railing against Speaker Pelosi, he should be writing her a thank you note for handing him an excuse, however implausible, allowing him to shed the duties of the presidency. The saddest and most telling of all his pronouncements since entering office was this: "I loved my previous life."

TRUMP'S 'UNHINGED' BEHAVIOR COULD BE DUE TO 'UNTREATED SYPHILIS,' EXPERT CLAIMS https://news.yahoo.com/trump-unhinged-behavior-could-due-160708680.html?soc_src=hl-viewer&soc_trk=fb An expert in infectious diseases has claimed that President Donald Trump's erratic and bizarre behavior, which has led many mental health professionals to express fears that he could be mentally ill, could be part of the symptoms of syphilis, a sexually transmitted disease (STD). The shocking suggestion that Trump could be exhibiting the symptoms of dementia due to syphilis was put forward by Steven Beutler, an expert in infectious diseases, in an article titled, "A Medical Theory For Trump's Bizarre Behavior," published on Friday by the New Republic. "Many mental health professionals believe the president is ill. But what if the cause is an untreated STD?" Trump's 'bizarre, volatile behavior' could be from untreated syphilis: infectious disease doctor <https://t.co/dozqfS39w1> pic.twitter.com/xgUV6pC7MV – Raw Story (@RawStory) February 18, 2017 Click here to continue and read more...

'...The fact that Trump has shown all the major symptoms of neurosyphilis, including irritability, delusional thinking, grandiosity, and patchy hair loss, provides a basis to fear that he could be in the late stages of neurological illness due to syphilis infection, according to the medical expert...' '... Neurosyphilis is often misdiagnosed because it mimics non-infectious psychiatric illness. And according to Beutler, all of the symptoms of neurosyphilis, including "patchy hair loss," have been observed in Trump. "Commonly recognized symptoms include irritability, loss of ability to concentrate, delusional thinking, and grandiosity. Memory, insight, and judgment can become impaired. Insomnia may occur... Dementia... and patchy hair loss can also be seen in later stages of syphilis." Beutler admitted that it is impossible to determine from a distance that Trump has syphilis. He insisted, however, that part of his training as a medical professional is making "differential diagnosis" based on incomplete information. "Part of my training is to ask the right questions to get a sense of what the problem might be and make a list of possible diagnoses that could explain the problem," he wrote. "This is called the 'differential diagnosis,'" he continued. "From there, additional questions, examinations, and tests are performed that narrow down the list, usually to one unifying diagnosis." ...'

Donald Trump: stable genius

(CNN)If Washington politics were a movie, this week might be the time you turn to your companion and say, "Who writes this stuff?":

A President and "world-class deal maker," marveled Frida Ghitis, who demonstrates with a "temper tantrum," that he can't make deals. Who storms out of meetings with congressional leaders while insisting he's calm (and lines up his top aides to confirm it for the cameras). Who says, "I don't do cover-ups," with his administration on information lockdown -- offering justifications "that wouldn't pass muster in an episode of 'The Simpsons,'" remarked Julian Zelizer.

And who launches into a tirade -- in the middle of an event about aid to farmers -- to say I'm not crazy, she's crazy.

"She" being House Speaker Nancy Pelosi, who offered Trump her thoughts and prayers, and wished aloud that someone would get him an intervention. There was no need, I'm an "extremely stable genius," Trump told reporters, adding that he'll talk to Democrats when they stop investigating him. He's right, suggested Marc Thiessen in the Washington Post: "Nancy Pelosi can't accuse him of engaging in a coverup in the morning and expect him to negotiate with her on a $2 trillion infrastructure package in the afternoon."

By week's end, Trump and supporters were previewing what critics believed his re-election campaign would look like. He retweeted a Fox Business Network video mashup of Pelosi stammering during a news conference on Capitol Hill on Thursday. "It's pathetic," protested SE Cupp, adding "childish" and "impotent." "But it's disgusting and disturbing to watch the president and leader of the free world do it time and time again."

GOP Ex-Lawmaker Demands Impeachment Of Donald Trump, Resignation Of Mike Pence Lee Moran HuffPost•May 24, 2019 Former Rep. Tom Coleman (R-Mo.) has penned a blistering op-ed calling for the impeachment of "illegitimate" President Donald Trump. Coleman, in his piece for The Kansas City Star published Thursday titled "Trump, Pence are illegitimate. Impeach them," argued that if Trump was impeached, then Vice President Mike Pence should resign as otherwise "the lingering stench of corruption" would trail his administration. Special counsel Robert Mueller's report, Coleman wrote, showed Trump and members of his team had "on multiple occasions welcomed Russian interference on his behalf during the 2016 presidential campaign." Therefore, Coleman reasoned, "the president's election victory brought forth nothing less than an illegitimate president." Coleman, who has criticized Trump in the past and opposed his candidacy, was voted out of Congress after 17 years in 1993. He noted in his op-ed that House Democrats were divided over whether to begin impeachment proceedings. But "critical times require exceptional leadership," he wrote, suggesting the "only viable option available" is for the Democratic-controlled House "to open its own investigation, hold public hearings and then determine if they should pursue removal of the president through impeachment." "The public would conclude Democrats are no better than the Republicans who have enabled Trump for the past two years” if they did not move to impeach him, Coleman wrote. He concluded with this warning: It could hand Trump a second term. Failure to pursue impeachment is to condone wrongdoing. To condone wrongdoing is to encourage more of it. To encourage wrongdoing is to give up on the rule of law and our democracy. To give up on the rule of law and democracy invites autocracy and eventually dictatorship. History has taught us this outcome. Dow rises 150 points at start of Friday action but poised for 5th weekly loss in a row ahead of Memorial Day U.S. stocks opened higher on Friday, capping a mostly downbeat week for equities, weighed by U.S.-China trade tensions, which put the three main indexes on track to post consecutive weekly losses heading into the Memorial Day holiday. The Dow Jones Industrial Average (DJIA) rose 150 points, or 0.6%, at 25,651, set for a weekly slump of 1.1% and its fifth straight weekly loss, as of Thursday's close, the S&P 500 index (SPX) rose 17 points, or 0.6%, at 2,839, poised for a 1.3% weekly skid. The main political news for the day centered on apparent softening of trade tensions between the U.S. and China and Theresa May's announced resignation as U.K. prime minister amid her failed attempts at Brexit.

Susan Edelman Blank "Kernberg described malignant narcissism as a syndrome characterized by a narcissistic personality disorder (NPD), antisocial features, paranoid traits, and egosyntonic aggression. Other symptoms may include an absence of conscience, a psychological need for power, and a sense of importance (grandiosity)."

Robert Reich The pattern is eerily similar to 2007 and 1928 (remember what happened immediately after those years).

- 1. Price-earnings ratios on the stock market are 28 to one – just what they were in 1928.
- 2. Households are taking on even more debt. Credit card delinquency rates in the first quarter of the year have hit the highest level since 2012, driven partly by a spike in overdue payments by people ages 18–29, according to the New York Federal Reserve. We're also seeing a spike in home refinancings – just as we did in the years leading up to the crash of 2008.
- 3. Another parallel: Corporations are deep in debt. The Federal Reserve warned that corporate America is taking on too much debt. Junk bonds are soaring once again. According to Bloomberg, "deeply indebted companies are borrowing even more to pay equity holders."

Bottom line: Watch your wallets. The years after 1928 and 2007 weren't pretty.

Jim Rogers Warns: 'Worst Bear Market' Is Coming Posted by Eugene Townes | May 14, 2019 | Markets On a recent call with ETMarkets.com, no-nonsense economic guru Jim Rogers restated his concern that a bear market was on the way, and investors should be on the lookout for small signs to avoid another crisis like 2008. Although Rogers could not give a timeline for the bear market to arrive, he did say that it will be the “worst in my lifetime,” a prediction he's stuck by for a while now, and the key to spotting a market correction lies within smaller markets.

Lee writes Psychiatrists warn the Mueller report provides more evidence Donald Trump is mentally unfit to serve”Such a mindset of false beliefs in freedom from consequences is extremely dangerous,” Bandy X. Lee writes This article originally appeared on Raw Story Three psychiatrists have written an editorial for the Boston Globe warning that special counsel Robert Mueller’s report on Russian interference in the 2016 presidential election shows more evidence that President Donald Trump is mentally unfit to hold office. The psychiatrists — Dr. Bandy X. Lee of Yale, Dr. Leonard L. Glass of Harvard Medical School, and Edwin B. Fisher of University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill — argue that Mueller’s report provides a disturbing new window into the president’s behavior, which is frequently marked by impulsive emotional meltdowns. “The pattern that emerges of the president is one of rash, short-sighted decision-making, without consideration of consequences,” they write. “Reckless, impulsive moves that are self-destructive, despite the intention of self-protection, are characteristic of dangerous impairment. They impede Trump’s capacity to prioritize national security.” They then quote from sections of the Mueller report that illustrate these behaviors, including his efforts to dangle pardons to potential witnesses and his effort to get Mueller fired as special counsel. They say that his ordering former White House counsel Don McGahn to get rid of Mueller should be seen as especially alarming given how inherently self-destructive it was.

The party told you to reject the evidence of your eyes and ears. It was their final, most essential command. His heart sank as he thought of the enormous power arrayed against him, the ease with which any Party intellectual would overthrow him in debate, the subtle arguments which he would not be able to understand, much less answer. And yet he was in the right! They were wrong and he was right.

Lee writes Psychiatrists warn the Mueller report provides more evidence Donald Trump is mentally unfit to serve"Such a mindset of false beliefs in freedom from consequences is extremely dangerous," Bandy X. Lee writes This article originally appeared on Raw Story Three psychiatrists have written an editorial for the Boston Globe warning that special counsel Robert Mueller's report on Russian interference in the 2016 presidential election shows more evidence that President Donald Trump is mentally unfit to hold office. The psychiatrists — Dr. Bandy X. Lee of Yale, Dr. Leonard L. Glass of Harvard Medical School, and Edwin B. Fisher of University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill — argue that Mueller's report provides a disturbing new window into the president's behavior, which is frequently marked by impulsive emotional meltdowns. "The pattern that emerges of the president is one of rash, short-sighted decision-making, without consideration of consequences," they write. "Reckless, impulsive moves that are self-destructive, despite the intention of self-protection, are characteristic of dangerous impairment. They impede Trump's capacity to prioritize national security." They then quote from sections of the Mueller report that illustrate these behaviors, including his efforts to dangle pardons to potential witnesses and his effort to get Mueller fired as special counsel. They say that his ordering former White House counsel Don McGahn to get rid of Mueller should be seen as especially alarming given how inherently self-destructive it was.

To those who said it can’t happen here, just read these nationalistic, nonsensical pro-Trump comments; it is happening right before our eyes.

Susan Edelman Blank Carol Rzepny yes, Carol, many Germans did not fall in line with the Nazis, many joined the underground, others hid Jews, many tried in small ways to resist, and others kept silent and prayed for deliverance from evil. GOP Rep. Amash becomes first Republican to call for Trump's impeachment

By Eli Watkins and Kevin Bohn, CNN

Updated 7:55 PM ET, Sat May 18, 2019

Washington (CNN) Michigan GOP Rep. Justin Amash said Saturday he had concluded President Donald Trump committed "impeachable conduct" and accused Attorney General William Barr of intentionally misleading the public.

Amash's comments recommending Congress pursue obstruction of justice charges against Trump were the first instance of a sitting Republican in Congress calling for Trump's impeachment.

Justin Amash is the loneliest Republican in Congress

Amash is a rare GOP critic of Trump and previously said Trump's conduct in pressuring then-FBI Director James Comey could merit impeachment. In a Twitter thread on Saturday, Amash said he believed "few members of Congress even read" special counsel Robert Mueller's report and that the report itself established "multiple examples" of Trump committing obstruction of justice.

"Contrary to Barr's portrayal, Mueller's report reveals that President Trump engaged in specific actions and a pattern of behavior that meet the threshold for impeachment," Amash said in a string of messages on Twitter.

- CNN found 77 instances of lies and false assertions in Mueller's report. Trump told the greatest number
- 77 lies and falsehoods Mueller called out
- What Trump associates told the public vs. what they told Mueller
- 4 times Barr twisted and cherry-picked Mueller's report

Democratic Rep. Rashida Tlaib, also of Michigan, responded to Amash's Twitter thread later Saturday and invited him to join her impeachment resolution.

".@justinamash come find me in 1628 Longworth. I've got an impeachment investigation resolution you're going to want to cosponsor," Tlaib tweeted.

Amash -- a libertarian conservative elected during the Tea Party wave of 2010 -- was a founding member of the House Freedom Caucus, a key bloc of Republicans who worked to shift the GOP caucus to the right on many issues, but in the Trump era, he has found himself breaking with his conservative allies who have embraced the President.

Amash said on Saturday that he made his conclusions "only after having read Mueller's redacted report carefully and completely, having read or watched pertinent statements and testimony, and having discussed this matter with my staff, who thoroughly reviewed materials and provided me with further analysis."

He said Barr misled the public in a range of venues regarding the Mueller report, a charge Democrats and others have made repeatedly that the attorney general has disputed.

"Barr's misrepresentations are significant but often subtle, frequently taking the form of sleight-of-hand qualifications or logical fallacies, which he hopes people will not notice," Amash said.

Amash said "contrary to Barr's portrayal," Trump's actions "meet the threshold for impeachment" and that anyone without the unique legal protections of the presidency would be facing an indictment.

He argued that it was Congress' role to move forward with impeachment and accused people on both sides of the aisle of political motives, saying they had shifted "their views 180 degrees ... depending on whether they're discussing (former President) Bill Clinton or Donald Trump."

"Our system of checks and balances relies on each branch's jealously guarding its powers and upholding its duties under our Constitution," Amash tweeted. "When loyalty to a political party or to an individual trumps loyalty to the Constitution, the Rule of Law -- the foundation of liberty -- crumbles."

CNN's Clare Foran and Ashley Killough contributed to this report.

Yale psychiatrist explains how to deprogram Trump supporters who've been sucked into the vortex of his lies

LAS VEGAS NEVADA, DECEMBER 14, 2015: Republican presidential candidate Donald Trump speaks at campaign event at

Even as President Donald Trump is battered by controversies, including a recent report that his self-proclaimed business acumen is largely a sham — he lost money starting in the 1980s — his approval ratings among his supporters remain high.

Raw Story spoke with Dr. Bandy X. Lee, a forensic psychiatrist at Yale School of Medicine, about why Trump supporters are so loyal to the President. She and several co-authors recently submitted an analysis of what the Mueller report revealed about the President’s mental health, covered here and here. Their summary of the report was the number one article in the

Dr. Lee has also been a vocal critic of the American Psychiatric Association’s alteration of the Goldwater rule since the Trump administration, so much so that she held a conference on it in April 2017, inviting the most preeminent psychiatrists in the nation.

Their critique of the altered Goldwater rule led to a book in defiance of the change, which became the New York Times bestseller, “The Dangerous Case of Donald Trump.” Since then, thousands of mental health professionals joined her to form the World Mental Health Coalition (dangerouscase.org), intended as an alternative to the American Psychiatric Association, and named her president.

Raw Story: If you had the chance to speak with Trump supporters, what would you say to them?

Dr. Bandy X. Lee: I am already in contact with many, and have worked with, shared meals with, and “hung out” with several while working in Alabama. Contrary to the stereotype, they are often some of the most humane and most innocent people I have met, which is why they trusted so easily.

It is heartbreaking to consider how they have been exploited—over the years by a politics that retains power not by serving them but through psychological manipulation, and now through a predatory president.

I would say to them, it has become time to ask ourselves: do we have the self-respect to demand a leader who is even capable of leading? Our recent test on his capacity was intended as a service to the public, based on the rigorous information in Robert Mueller's report: he failed on every criterion. We also just learned of the president's spectacular business failures during the years he flaunted himself as being the biggest success, while he lost more than any other American on record.

It is difficult to make this shift, especially when we have invested so much, but after a while, it takes less energy to change than to continue making excuses to protect "our guy."

Policy-wise, he is hurting his everyday supporters the most (not the billionaire supporters). If we stopped to think for a moment—doesn't it bother us that he deceived us into believing he was a successful businessman, the only qualification he brought for being a successful politician, when all he did was go to his father when in trouble? Doesn't it disturb us that he so lies, cheats, and defrauds the public, that it is safer to assume that every word out of his mouth is the opposite of what is true? Should we tolerate a president whom more than 800 former federal prosecutors, of both parties, would call a criminal?

Raw Story: Is there anything you would advise them to do?

Dr. Bandy X. Lee: The transition will be gradual and painful, but the moment they realize they hold the power and do not have to submit to a strong authority to be safe, they won't be so easily fooled any more. This is all understandable; working in the criminal justice system, I know how good serial predators can be—they can create powerful emotional bonds.

This is what they thrive on.

I rather hold responsible the institutions that propped him up for their short-term profits, and the American Psychiatric Association is chief among them. Given that the insidious effects of mental pathology defined this whole presidency, the Association was in a unique position to prevent vast suffering. Psychiatrists understand not just mental illness but criminal behavior, violence, capacity to serve in an office, and many other things. By aggressively shaping a milieu where mental health professionals would not be able to share their knowledge as a national mental health crisis was unfolding, the Association instead primed the public to become the president's prey.

Raw Story: Those are strong words. How do you make that claim?

Dr. Bandy X. Lee: The public has a right to know what the American Psychiatric Association has done. Imagine if a high official contracted Ebola. One would not think twice about deferring to doctors about proper management. The doctors do not make political decisions but medical ones, and based on recommendations, political bodies would coordinate. The important, immediate issue at hand is to contain the disease and spread of harm.

I have described the current president's condition as worse than Ebola—and yet, imagine if the Ebola doctors were prohibited from even uttering a word of caution, for fear of upsetting the high official, and leaving the disease to its natural course. By propagating popular misconceptions that mental health issues are somehow different than other health issues, that it is imaginary or subjective—or worse, just an insult—the APA has effectively stigmatized the entire field of mental health. By allowing a serious condition to continue without even educating the public, it has allowed pathology to spread unchecked.

Raw Story: Why did you decide to boycott the very symposium you helped to organize at the American Psychiatric Association?

Dr. Bandy X. Lee: I have lost faith in the Association's ability to have an honest discussion. Psychiatrists were never supposed to be beholden to public figures—our primary responsibilities are to patients and to society. The actual Goldwater rule says this: work to improve the community and public health, and when asked about a public figure, educate the public—just don't diagnose.

Instead, the APA expanded the “don’t diagnose” part out of proportion to silence an entire profession and to change public expectations. Its timing and aggressive public relations campaign make clear that it intended to protect Donald Trump, not ethics.

That said, I should clarify that the leadership did this by fiat, against member protests. We are now in a constitutional crisis, about to enter catastrophic wars, and economic breakdown is looming—all in ways that were wholly predictable from having a mentally unstable president.

Science now shows that even diagnosis does not require a personal interview. By distorting ethics and falsely intimidating experts, it deprived the public of critical knowledge at a critical time. Edmund Burke said, “All tyranny needs to gain a foothold is for people of good conscience to remain silent.” And what better way to serve tyranny than to institutionalize this silence?

Psychiatrists warn the Mueller report provides more evidence Donald Trump is mentally unfit to serve "Such a mindset of false beliefs in freedom from consequences is extremely dangerous," Bandy X. Lee writes Psychiatrists warn the Mueller report provides more evidence Donald Trump is mentally unfit to serve"Such a mindset of false beliefs in freedom from consequences is extremely dangerous," Bandy X. Lee writes This article originally appeared on Raw Story Three psychiatrists have written an editorial for the Boston Globe warning that special counsel Robert Mueller's report on Russian interference in the 2016 presidential election shows more evidence that President Donald Trump is mentally unfit to hold office. The psychiatrists — Dr. Bandy X. Lee of Yale, Dr. Leonard L. Glass of Harvard Medical School, and Edwin B. Fisher of University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill — argue that Mueller's report provides a disturbing new window into the president's behavior, which is frequently marked by impulsive emotional meltdowns. "The pattern that emerges of the president is one of rash, short-sighted decision-making, without consideration of consequences," they write. "Reckless, impulsive moves that are self-destructive, despite the intention of self-protection, are characteristic of dangerous impairment. They impede Trump's capacity to prioritize national security." They then quote from sections of the Mueller report that illustrate these behaviors, including his efforts to dangle pardons to potential witnesses and his effort to get Mueller fired as special counsel. They say that his ordering former White House counsel Don McGahn to get rid of Mueller should be seen as especially alarming given how inherently self-destructive it was.

$21 TRILLION DOLLARS IS MISSING FROM THE US GOVERNMENT. <https://missingmoney.solari.com> <https://home.solari.com> $21 Trillion dollars is missing from the US government. That is $65,000 per person - as much as the national debt!

“No money shall be drawn from the treasury, but in consequence of appropriations made by law; and a regular statement and account of receipts and expenditures of all public money shall be published from time to time.*~ Article I, Section 9, Clause 7, U.S. Constitution

What's going on? Where is the money? How could this happen? How much has really gone missing? What would happen if a corporation failed to pass an audit like this? Or a taxpayer? This means the Fed and their member banks are transacting government money outside the law. So are the corporate contractors that run the payment systems. So are the Wall Street firms who are selling government securities without full disclosure. Would your banks continue to handle your bank account if you behaved like this? Would your investors continue to buy your securities if you behaved like this? Would your accountant be silent? This is the reason that there is such a strong push to change or tear up the US Constitution. This is why members of the establishment say it is "old," "outdated!" This is why there is such a push for gun control. Don't buy it! We can use the Constitution to get our money and our government back. It is time to enforce the US Constitution. The Solari Report has been covering the missing money since 2000 when Catherine Austin Fitts began to warn Americans and global investors about mortgage fraud at the US Department of Housing and Development (HUD), the engineering of the housing bubble that led to trillions more dollars in bailouts and funds missing from the US government starting in fiscal 1998.

Psychiatrists warn the Mueller report provides more evidence Donald Trump is mentally unfit to serve "Such a mindset of false beliefs in freedom from consequences is extremely dangerous," Bandy X. Lee writes Psychiatrists warn the Mueller report provides more evidence Donald Trump is mentally unfit to serve "Such a mindset of false beliefs in freedom from consequences is extremely dangerous," Bandy X. Lee writes This article originally appeared on Raw Story Three psychiatrists have written an editorial for the Boston Globe warning that special counsel Robert Mueller's report on Russian interference in the 2016 presidential election shows more evidence that President Donald Trump is mentally unfit to hold office. The psychiatrists — Dr. Bandy X. Lee of Yale, Dr. Leonard L. Glass of Harvard Medical School, and Edwin B. Fisher of University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill — argue that Mueller's report provides a disturbing new window into the president's behavior, which is frequently marked by impulsive emotional meltdowns. "The pattern that emerges of the president is one of rash, short-sighted decision-making, without consideration of consequences," they write. "Reckless, impulsive moves that are self-destructive, despite the intention of self-protection, are characteristic of dangerous impairment. They impede Trump's capacity to prioritize national security." They then quote from sections of the Mueller report that illustrate these behaviors, including his efforts to dangle pardons to potential witnesses and his effort to get Mueller fired as special counsel. They say that his ordering former White House counsel Don McGahn to get rid of Mueller should be seen as especially alarming given how inherently self-destructive it was.

Politics Reuters Trump has asserted executive privilege over entire Mueller report: Justice Dept official

Politics The Daily Beast Samantha Bee Mocks Trump's Billion Dollar Loss: 'The Best at Being Terrible' While President Donald Trump “claims to be the best business boy,” Samantha Bee told viewers Wednesday night that he’s really just the “best at being terrible.” The Full Frontal host was referring to the revelations from this week’s New York Times report that showed Trump lost more than a billion dollars between 1985 and 1994. As The Daily Beast’s David Cay Johnston explained on MSNBC, in one of those years Trump accounted for two cents of every dollar lost in the entire American economy. “I used to think Donald Trump’s fortunes took a dip in the early ‘90s recession,” Bee said. “Now I think maybe he was the early '90s recession.” In response to the report, Trump has said that he intentionally lost the money, tweeting, “You always wanted to show losses for tax purposes” adding, “almost all real estate developers did.” “But was Trump really just pretending to lose all that money?” Bee asked. “I call as my next witness, Ivanka Trump,” she said, adding a comical gasp that hinted at her complicated past with the first daughter. The host cut to a clip from the 2003 documentary Born Rich in which Ivanka tells a story about her father pointing out a homeless man outside Trump Tower and saying, ““You know, that guy has 8 billion dollars more than me,’ because he was in such extreme debt at that point.” “And that is why it was OK for him to take that man’s change cup,” Bee joked. “Look, the only thing that Donald Trump really had going for him as a candidate was that he was supposed to be a great businessman. Now we know that not only is he a bad businessman, he is one of the worst in American history.” To the Republican “party of fiscal responsibility,” Bee asked, “Are you really going to choose this money pit over the Constitution?” Read more at The Daily Beast.

$21 TRILLION DOLLARS IS MISSING FROM THE US GOVERNMENT. <https://missingmoney.solari.com> <https://home.solari.com> $21 Trillion dollars is missing from the US government. That is $65,000 per person - as much as the national debt!

“No money shall be drawn from the treasury, but in consequence of appropriations made by law; and a regular statement and account of receipts and expenditures of all public money shall be published from time to time.”~ Article I, Section 9, Clause 7, U.S. Constitution

What's going on? Where is the money? How could this happen? How much has really gone missing? What would happen if a corporation failed to pass an audit like this? Or a taxpayer? This means the Fed and their member banks are transacting government money outside the law. So are the corporate contractors that run the payment systems. So are the Wall Street firms who are selling government securities without full disclosure. Would your banks continue to handle your bank account if you behaved like this? Would your investors continue to buy your securities if you behaved like this? Would your accountant be silent? This is the reason that there is such a strong push to change or tear up the US Constitution. This is why members of the establishment say it is "old," "outdated!" This is why there is such a push for gun control. Don't buy it! We can use the Constitution to get our money and our government back. It is time to enforce the US Constitution. The U.S. State Department allowed at least seven foreign governments to rent luxury condominiums in New York's Trump World Tower in 2017 without approval from Congress, according to documents and people familiar with the leases, a potential violation of the U.S. Constitution's emoluments clause. The 90-story Manhattan building, part of the real estate empire of Donald Trump, had housed diplomats and foreign officials before the property developer became president. The rental transactions, dating from the early months of Trump's presidency and first revealed by Reuters, could add to mounting scrutiny of his business dealings with foreign governments, which are now the subject of multiple lawsuits.

Analysis: 43 mind-boggling lines from Donald Trump's Wisconsin campaign rally

(CNN)President Donald Trump traveled to Wisconsin on Saturday night to rally his supporters, and -- pointedly -- to miss the annual White House Correspondents' Dinner, which he has yet to attend as President.

Trump, continuing a trend of late, made a slew of questionable claims, bashed the media and loudly proclaimed his rightness about, well, everything. I went through the transcript and picked out the most, uh, outstanding, lines from his Green Bay rally. They're below.

THE POINT -- NOW ON YOUTUBE!

In each episode of his weekly YouTube show, Chris Cillizza will delve a little deeper into the surreal world of politics. Click to subscribe!

1. "The strength of our nation is found in the heart of our people, so true." This is a very common Trump speech pattern. He reads a line from the teleprompter. And because he hasn't read the speech in advance, he responds by agreeing with his own words that he is seeing for the first time with a "so true." And away we go!

2. "We're going to get to the bottom of a lot of things happening in our country."

So true.

3. "And we're now the number one economy anywhere in the world and it's not even close."

This is, generally, true!

4. "By the way, Saturday night, is there anyplace that's more fun than a Trump rally?"

I might be able to think of one or two places. ...

5. "Can you imagine? Sleepy Joe? Crazy Bernie."

Why did Trump suddenly start talking about his potential 2020 opponents? Oh, I have no idea. But the crowd LOVED it.

6. "I think Pocahontas, she's finished, she's out. She's gone. No, when it was found that I had more Indian blood in me than she did."

Trump is referring to Massachusetts Sen. Elizabeth Warren with this taunt. And, yes, the crowd LOVED it.

7. "But can you imagine any of these people up here doing what I'm doing? They'd be 200 people show up if they were president. If they were president, nobody would show up."

It's fascinating that Trump understands the job of being president as getting lots of people to show up to rallies.

8. "The people that get it wrong the most are the weather forecasters and the political analysts."

He's not wrong!

9. "People are standing out 24 hours ago, 32 hours ago outside. Who stood out there for 24 hours?"

This comes from the Green Bay Press Gazette: "A line of supporters wound around the Resch Center; some people said they'd waited outside overnight." So true.

10. "We had 69,000 people sign up to come in. What does this place hold? Like 10,000 or 12,000 or whatever. Whatever it holds. We set the record." What record? Also, I have no idea how Trump came up with this 69,000 number. Here's how a local TV affiliate described the crowd: "This was a free event that anyone could attend, but Secret Service detail said only the first 10,000 people are being let into the center."

11. "I don't know what the hell it holds, but we just set the record." According to the internet, the Resch Center holds 10,500 people. But Trump has the record. Bigly.

12. "That's always dangerous. He said, 'Yes, it is, sir.' It's always dangerous. Yes. You ask like, 'No, sir.' I'm dead. They will take -- they will take that answer. That'll be headlines."

Let me translate this for you people who don't speak word salad: Trump brought the owner of the Resch Center onstage and asked if it was a record crowd. (Because that is very important to how he does his job.) The owner said it was a record. Trump was relieved because it would have been bad headlines if it was not a record.

13. "Now, this is the record. We set records everywhere."

It is VERY important for you to know that Donald Trump set a record. VERY.

14. "The greatest political hoax in American history, it really has been." For the record: The Mueller probe resulted in 199 charges against 37 people and entities. Seven people pleaded guilty to a variety of crimes while five were sentenced to prison. So, not really a "hoax."

15. "The USMCA like the song 'YMCA,' right?"

Ladies and gentlemen, the President of the United States!

16. "Can you believe I'm a politician? I can't even."

Honestly, same.

17. "You know, Canada, we love the song, 'Oh Canada.' Let's sing, 'Oh Canada,' right. We love the show."

WHAT. IS. HAPPENING. (And, no, there isn't much context to add here. He just started talking about Canada.)

18. "But who knows, I always say, 'Who knows?' Because who the hell knows?"

[nods head slowly]

19. "Don't forget, we are the piggy bank that everybody is robbing. We're the ones. We're the piggy bank that everybody is stealing from and robbing and taking advantage of."

USA! USA! USA!

20. "This I don't -- I tell you what, you know, people say, 'Oh, he wants to take over the country. He wants to extend.' "

I think Trump is ruling out changing the constitutional limit on a President serving two terms here. So there's that.

21. "You're right, USA. We love USA and that's right."

"I love lamp." -- Brick Tamland

22. "If you look at what's happened with the scum that's leaving the very top of government."

Just the President of the United States referring to top-level staff as "scum." Super normal stuff!!!

23. "The dirty -- these were dirty cops. These were dirty players."

Trump, presumably, is referring to longtime officials at the Department of Justice like James Comey and Robert Mueller.

24. "I mean we're draining the swamp, but are we having a good time or what?"

Who said you can't have fun draining the swamp? Not me!

25. "And look at all those beautiful red hats and some white ones. Some white. Look at that. Those are -- that's a lot of red hats. But you do have the white ones too, right?"

Red MAGA hats > White MAGA hats. But wait....

26. "And you have the black ones, too. You have a lot of them. You have a lot of different hats."

... there's more! SO MANY HATS. OF DIFFERING COLORS.

27. "It's called MAGA country. You know, I didn't hear that term until that third-rate actor in Chicago went out."

The President of the United States offers his thoughts on the Jussie Smollett case.

28. "Ronald Reagan used seldom Let's Make America Great. Close, but not the same. Let's -- apostrophe S. You don't want the apostrophe. It's too complicated. It doesn't work. But Ronald Reagan was good. He said let's make -- but he didn't use it. He used it a little bit. We seriously use it, right?"

OHMYGODOHMYGODOHMYGOD

29. "And MAGA we got for free. Because my whole deal was Make America Great Again, all of a sudden people are saying and going #MAGA."

30. "We have a massive television audience, do you ever see so many cameras? If somebody else were here, you'd have about like none." I've heard that this is a record crowd. So true.

31. "Because I have a couple of friends here. They're pretty wealthy people, very successful people. And you know what? The hell with them. I don't care."

Oh snap, Trump friends, you got dunked on! FACE!

32. "In Michigan, they gave me an award six years, seven years ago, I had no idea. It was the Man of the Year in Michigan."

There's no evidence Trump was ever named "Man of the Year" in Michigan.

33. "They will take your guns away, too, by the way."

Trump passes along this much-debunked notion that Democrats, if put in power, will collect all firearms in the country -- and no one bats an eye.

34. "Now we're sending many of them to sanctuary cities. Thank you very much. They're not too happy about it. I'm proud to tell you that was actually my sick idea."

There's zero evidence that the administration is shipping undocumented immigrants detained at the border to sanctuary cities. In fact, several administration officials have made clear that the policy is not only logistically untenable but also potentially illegal. But, hey, it was Trump's "sick idea"!

35. "To confront the border crisis, I declared a national emergency. The good news is everybody agrees."

[narrator voice] They don't.

36. "They are aggressively pushing extreme late-term abortion, allowing children to be ripped from their mother's womb."

Totally and completely false.

37. "The baby is born. The mother meets with the doctor. They take care of the baby. They wrap the baby beautifully. And then the doctor and the mother determine whether or not they will execute the baby."

Dangerously inaccurate.

38. "We've got a lot of young people out there. You want to know the truth? I actually think we have more than they do."

Hillary Clinton won voters aged 18-29 by 19 points in 2016.

39. "We're very close, $300 million for the Great Lakes Restoration Initiatives."

False!

40. "You know, a lot of times, if you're not going to brag about it, nobody else is, you might as well do it. True."

So true.

41. "And I have to say, every leader without fail that comes to see me in the Oval Office, they all say congratulations."

Every foreign leader who comes to see Trump tells him "congratulations." Every one. Absolutely. This is definitely, 100% true, I'm sure.

42. "With every last ounce of heart and hope and sweat, and so we are going to make our stand."

Speaking of making stands: Why the hell did Jon Snow approve a battle plan where he marched his forces outside of the walls of Winterfell to battle the army of the dead? Like, why not hang out inside the walls? Am I the only one who thinks this?

43. "Together with the great and proud people of Wisconsin, we will make America wealthy again."

[emoji with cash coming out of mouth] This feels like a good place to end.

Trump slams leaders of 'Dues Sucking firefighters' union after Biden endorsement [trump is so sick, so mentally ill! The question is, who has their backs? Only those as crazy as trump would say trump!]

Mark Steven Domingo, an Army veteran, was arrested Friday night after he took delivery of what he thought was a live bomb from an undercover law enforcement officer posing as a bomb-maker, authorities said. (FBI) A Reseda man planned to detonate improvised explosive devices at several Southern California locations to cause “mass casualties” in a terror plot thwarted by law enforcement officials, authorities said Monday.

Mark Steven Domingo, 26, an Army veteran, was arrested Friday night after he took delivery of what he thought was a live bomb from an undercover law enforcement officer posing as a bomb-maker, officials said. He was charged with attempting to provide material support to terrorists.

According to a federal affidavit, “after considering various attacks — including targeting Jews, churches, and police officers — Domingo decided to detonate an IED at a rally scheduled to take place in Long Beach this past weekend. As part of the plot, Domingo asked his confederate — who actually was cooperating with the FBI as part of the investigation — to find a bomb-maker, and Domingo last week purchased several hundred nails to be used as shrapnel inside the IED.

“Domingo said he specifically bought three-inch nails because they would be long enough to penetrate the human body and puncture internal organs,” the affidavit states.

Prosecutors said Domingo sought retribution for the New Zealand mosques attack and said he was willing to become a martyr.

“There must be retribution,” he said in an online post, according to the federal criminal complaint. He also allegedly expressed allegiance to the Islamic State.

“America needs another vegas event ...[to] give them a taste of the terror they gladly spread all over the world,” Domingo allegedly wrote in reference to the massacre at the Route 91 concert in October 2017.

The FBI saw the posts and used an informant to begin a series of meetings with Domingo. During these discussions, he talked about targeting “Jews, police officers, churches and a military facility,” authorities said. A law enforcement source told The Times he also considered an attack at the Santa Monica Pier.

Domingo talked about a drive-by shooting using an AK-47-style rifle, authorities allege. But officials say he ended up targeting rallies in Long Beach and Huntington Beach. Worried those events might be canceled, he also considered blowing up the Santa Monica Pier, documents show.

The terror plot was uncovered less than 48 hours after a gunman opened fire inside a San Diego County synagogue, killing one woman and wounding several others in what law enforcement officials are investigating as an anti-Semitic hate crime.

Southern California has been the scene of several terrorism plots and attacks, including one by a prison-based group that targeted the U.S. government and supporters of Israel.

In 2005, Kevin James founded Jam’iyyat Ul-Islam Is-Saheeh, or JIS, inside a California prison and led a conspiracy to attack Los Angeles International Airport, several Army recruiting centers and the Israeli Consulate in L.A. The group planned to stage attacks on political targets with the proceeds of gas station robberies, investigators said. Authorities said they learned of the potential plot when Torrance police investigating the robberies found lists of targets and other information at one suspect’s apartment in South Los Angeles.

Three years before that, a gunman killed two people at the busy LAX ticket counter of El Al Israel Airlines.

And in 2015, Syed Rizwan Farook and his wife, Tashfeen Malik, entered a holiday gathering for county employees at the Inland Regional Center in San Bernardino and, using rifles purchased by a friend, killed 14 people and injured 22 others.

Authorities said that Farook and a friend had plotted additional terror attacks targeting students at a nearby community college and drivers on the 91 Freeway.

Bartirromo.“This is the way you treat your friends? How do you treat your enemies?” the judge said while opening up the segment on Monday morning. "He wanted to divert attention from what Mueller had said about him and what I had commented about Mueller to his relationship with me. His relationship with me is not the story. He and I have been friends for 30 years and probably will be for the next 30 years." Still, Napolitano characterized Trump's attack on him as "brilliant." Also Read: Fox News' Andrew Napolitano Calls Out Jared Kushner for 'Deceptive' Effort to 'Diminish' Russian Interference

The segment with Bartiromo came after President Trump denounced Napolitano on Saturday, saying the judge had turned nasty because he wasn't appointed to the Supreme Court. "Thank you to brilliant and highly respected attorney Alan Dershowitz for destroying the very dumb legal argument of 'Judge' Andrew Napolitano," Trump tweeted after a Fox News segment. "Ever since Andrew came to my office to ask that I appoint him to the U.S. Supreme Court, and I said NO, he has been very hostile! Also asked for pardon for his friend. A good 'pal' of low ratings Shepard Smith." On set, the judge answered both charges - suggesting the president has mischaracterized the matter. Though Napolitano did confirm that he and Trump did have two separate 90 minute conversations in the immediate weeks after his 2016 election victory. A rep for Fox News did not offer any additional comment on the matter. Also Read: Fox News' Andrew Napolitano Says Mueller Report 'Might Be Enough to Prosecute' Trump

Once one of Trump's favorite Fox News personalities, Napolitano has increasingly raised eyebrows on set for his tough commentary on the president's legal woes. On his Fox News digital series, "Judge Napolitano's Chambers," the judge has bluntly called Trump's behavior documented in the Mueller Report as "criminal." "Prosecutors prosecute people who interfere with government functions and that's what the president did by obstruction, where is this going to end? I don't know, but I am disappointed in the behavior of the president," Napolitano said last week. "If he had ordered his aides to violate federal law to save a human life or to preserve human freedom, he would at least have a moral defense to his behavior," he added. "But ordering them to break federal law to save him from the consequences of his own behavior, that is immoral, that is criminal, that is defenseless, that is condemnable." Just days earlier, Napolitano said in a different monologue on the same program that it was his belief there was enough in the report to “prosecute” the president - even though the special counsel declined to do so. Read original story Andrew Napolitano Responds to Trump Twitter Attacks: ‘This Is the Way You Treat Your Friends’ At TheWrap

More than two-thirds of business owners surveyed by the bank said they had taken steps to prepare for an economic downturn, including setting cash aside or planning to reduce expenses. Of the 69 percent of owners who had started preparing for a recession, only 19 percent had opened a line of credit, a figure that Bank of America's head of small business Sharon Miller said was too low.

Politics National Review House Dem. Threatens Trump Officials with 'Incarceration' for Refusing to Honor Subpoenas Representative Gerry Connolly (D., Va.), a member of the House Oversight Committee, said Friday that the panel might resort to the threat of incarceration should Trump administration officials continue to ignore its numerous subpoena-backed requests for documents. “We're going to resist, and if a subpoena is issued and you're told you must testify, we will back that up,” Connolly told CNN's Wolf Blitzer. “And we will use any and all power in our command to make sure it's backed up - whether that's a contempt citation, whether that's going to court and getting that citation enforced, whether it's fines, whether it's possible incarceration. We will go to the max to enforce the constitutional role of the legislative branch of government."The president and his advisers have said explicitly that they will not yield to Democrats' demands that officials testify before the Oversight Committee regarding the issuance of security clearances, the formation of the so-called zero-tolerance immigration-enforcement policy, and other matters.White House adviser Stephen Miller, former security-clearance official Carl Kline, and John Gore, a deputy assistant attorney general in the Justice Department's Civil Rights Division, have thus far all refused to come before the panel.Connolly emphasized in particular the Committee's desire to hear from Miller, whom he called Trump's "immigration whisperer," regarding what measures the administration plans to take to harden the southern border in the wake of Secretary of Homeland Security Kierstjen Nielsen's departure."We want to hear from him: What is your thinking, what is it you've been advising the president, and where is it you think you're going to be taking us as a country with these kinds of policies and personnel changes?" Connolly said of Miller. [About time someone got tough with these mobsters; after all, trump's used to corrupt cowards who take dives.

Donald Trump is mentally unfit to serve"Such a mindset of false beliefs in freedom from consequences is extremely dangerous," Bandy X. Lee writes This article originally appeared on Raw Story Three psychiatrists have written an editorial for the Boston Globe warning that special counsel Robert Mueller's report on Russian interference in the 2016 presidential election shows more evidence that President Donald Trump is mentally unfit to hold office. The psychiatrists — Dr. Bandy X. Lee of Yale, Dr. Leonard L. Glass of Harvard Medical School, and Edwin B. Fisher of University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill — argue that Mueller's report provides a disturbing new window into the president's behavior, which is frequently marked by impulsive emotional meltdowns. "The pattern that emerges of the president is one of rash, short-sighted decision-making, without consideration of consequences,” they write. “Reckless, impulsive moves that are self-destructive, despite the intention of self-protection, are characteristic of dangerous impairment. They impede Trump’s capacity to prioritize national security.” They then quote from sections of the Mueller report that illustrate these behaviors, including his efforts to dangle pardons to potential witnesses and his effort to get Mueller fired as special counsel. They say that his ordering former White House counsel Don McGahn to get rid of Mueller should be seen as especially alarming given how inherently self-destructive it was.

Politics Reuters Trump has asserted executive privilege over entire Mueller report: Justice Dept official

Politics The Daily Beast Samantha Bee Mocks Trump's Billion Dollar Loss: 'The Best at Being Terrible' While President Donald Trump “claims to be the best business boy,” Samantha Bee told viewers Wednesday night that he’s really just the “best at being terrible.” The Full Frontal host was referring to the revelations from this week’s New York Times report that showed Trump lost more than a billion dollars between 1985 and 1994. As The Daily Beast’s David Cay Johnston explained on MSNBC, in one of those years Trump accounted for two cents of every dollar lost in the entire American economy. “I used to think Donald Trump’s fortunes took a dip in the early ‘90s recession,” Bee said. “Now I think maybe he was the early ‘90s recession.” In response to the report, Trump has said that he intentionally lost the money, tweeting, “You always wanted to show losses for tax purposes” adding, “almost all real estate developers did.” “But was Trump really just pretending to lose all that money?” Bee asked. “I call as my next witness, Ivanka Trump,” she said, adding a comical gasp that hinted at her complicated past with the first daughter. The host cut to a clip from the 2003 documentary Born Rich in which Ivanka tells a story about her father pointing out a homeless man outside Trump Tower and saying, ““You know, that guy has 8 billion dollars more than me,’ because he was in such extreme debt at that point.” “And that is why it was OK for him to take that man’s change cup,” Bee joked. “Look, the only thing that Donald Trump really had going for him as a candidate was that he was supposed to be a great businessman. Now we know that not only is he a bad businessman, he is one of the worst in American history.” To the Republican “party of fiscal responsibility,” Bee asked, “Are you really going to choose this money pit over the Constitution?” Read more at The Daily Beast.

The federal government will still have to pay more interest on its debt too, meaning they'll have to borrow more just to pay that interest back. Cramer breaks down why you should prepare for more market pullback

U.S. Reuters

Exclusive: Foreign government leases at Trump World Tower stir more emoluments concerns

The U.S. State Department allowed at least seven foreign governments to rent luxury condominiums in New York's Trump World Tower in 2017 without approval from Congress, according to documents and people familiar with the leases, a potential violation of the U.S. Constitution's emoluments clause. The 90-story Manhattan building, part of the real estate empire of Donald Trump, had housed diplomats and foreign officials before the property developer became president. The rental transactions, dating from the early months of Trump's presidency and first revealed by Reuters, could add to mounting scrutiny of his business dealings with foreign governments, which are now the subject of multiple lawsuits.

' ...Donnie Trump's Attorney General Bill Barr gave his first congressional testimony in the wake of the release of the Mueller report this morning and it revealed why Trump was in panic mode this morning. During her line of questioning, Senator Dianne Feinstein, ranking Democratic judiciary committee member, managed to get Barr to reveal the exact law Trump broke per the evidence in Mueller's report Feinstein simply described the evidence in Mueller's report that details Trump's efforts to get White House counsel Don Mcgahn to lie about Trump ordering him to fire Mueller. Feinstein then asked if it is illegal to try and get a witness to lie (duh), to which Barr answered, "Uh, yes." She then asked him to cite the exact law, to which Barr said, "The obstruction statutes." ...'

(CNN)President Donald Trump traveled to Wisconsin on Saturday night to rally his supporters, and -- pointedly -- to miss the annual White House Correspondents' Dinner, which he has yet to attend as President.

Trump, continuing a trend of late, made a slew of questionable claims, bashed the media and loudly proclaimed his rightness about, well, everything. I went through the transcript and picked out the most, uh, outstanding, lines from his Green Bay rally. They're below.

THE POINT -- NOW ON YOUTUBE!

In each episode of his weekly YouTube show, Chris Cillizza will delve a little deeper into the surreal world of politics. Click to subscribe!

1. "The strength of our nation is found in the heart of our people, so true."

This is a very common Trump speech pattern. He reads a line from the teleprompter. And because he hasn't read the speech in advance, he responds by agreeing with his own words that he is seeing for the first time with a "so true." And away we go!

2. "We're going to get to the bottom of a lot of things happening in our country."

So true.

3. "And we're now the number one economy anywhere in the world and it's not even close."

This is, generally, true!

4. "By the way, Saturday night, is there anyplace that's more fun than a Trump rally?"

I might be able to think of one or two places. ...

5. "Can you imagine? Sleepy Joe? Crazy Bernie."

Why did Trump suddenly start talking about his potential 2020 opponents? Oh, I have no idea. But the crowd LOVED it.

6. "I think Pocahontas, she's finished, she's out. She's gone. No, when it was found that I had more Indian blood in me than she did."

Trump is referring to Massachusetts Sen. Elizabeth Warren with this taunt. And, yes, the crowd LOVED it.

7. "But can you imagine any of these people up here doing what I'm doing? They'd be 200 people show up if they were president. If they were president, nobody would show up."

It's fascinating that Trump understands the job of being president as getting lots of people to show up to rallies.

8. "The people that get it wrong the most are the weather forecasters and the political analysts."

He's not wrong!

9. "People are standing out 24 hours ago, 32 hours ago outside. Who stood out there for 24 hours?"

This comes from the Green Bay Press Gazette: "A line of supporters wound around the Resch Center; some people said they'd waited outside overnight." So true.

10. "We had 69,000 people sign up to come in. What does this place hold? Like 10,000 or 12,000 or whatever. Whatever it holds. We set the record." What record? Also, I have no idea how Trump came up with this 69,000 number. Here's how a local TV affiliate described the crowd: "This was a free event that anyone could attend, but Secret Service detail said only the first 10,000 people are being let into the center."

11. "I don't know what the hell it holds, but we just set the record." According to the internet, the Resch Center holds 10,500 people. But Trump has the record. Bigly.

12. "That's always dangerous. He said, 'Yes, it is, sir.' It's always dangerous. Yes. You ask like, 'No, sir.' I'm dead. They will take -- they will take that answer. That'll be headlines."

Let me translate this for you people who don't speak word salad: Trump brought the owner of the Resch Center onstage and asked if it was a record crowd. (Because that is very important to how he does his job.) The owner said it was a record. Trump was relieved because it would have been bad headlines if it was not a record.

13. "Now, this is the record. We set records everywhere."

It is VERY important for you to know that Donald Trump set a record. VERY.

14. "The greatest political hoax in American history, it really has been."

For the record: The Mueller probe resulted in 199 charges against 37 people and entities. Seven people pleaded guilty to a variety of crimes while five were sentenced to prison. So, not really a "hoax."

15. "The USMCA like the song 'YMCA,' right?"

Ladies and gentlemen, the President of the United States!

16. "Can you believe I'm a politician? I can't even."

Honestly, same.

17. "You know, Canada, we love the song, 'Oh Canada.' Let's sing, 'Oh Canada,' right. We love the show."

WHAT. IS. HAPPENING. (And, no, there isn't much context to add here. He just started talking about Canada.)

18. "But who knows, I always say, 'Who knows?' Because who the hell knows?"

[nods head slowly]

19. "Don't forget, we are the piggy bank that everybody is robbing. We're the ones. We're the piggy bank that everybody is stealing from and robbing and taking advantage of."

USA! USA! USA!

20. "This I don't -- I tell you what, you know, people say, 'Oh, he wants to take over the country. He wants to extend.' "

I think Trump is ruling out changing the constitutional limit on a President serving two terms here. So there's that.

21. "You're right, USA. We love USA and that's right."

"I love lamp." -- Brick Tamland

22. "If you look at what's happened with the scum that's leaving the very top of government."

Just the President of the United States referring to top-level staff as "scum." Super normal stuff!!!

23. "The dirty -- these were dirty cops. These were dirty players."

Trump, presumably, is referring to longtime officials at the Department of Justice like James Comey and Robert Mueller.

24. "I mean we're draining the swamp, but are we having a good time or what?"

Who said you can't have fun draining the swamp? Not me!

25. "And look at all those beautiful red hats and some white ones. Some white. Look at that. Those are -- that's a lot of red hats. But you do have the white ones too, right?"

Red MAGA hats > White MAGA hats. But wait....

26. "And you have the black ones, too. You have a lot of them. You have a lot of different hats."

... there's more! SO MANY HATS. OF DIFFERING COLORS.

27. "It's called MAGA country. You know, I didn't hear that term until that third-rate actor in Chicago went out."

The President of the United States offers his thoughts on the Jussie Smollett case.

28. "Ronald Reagan used seldom Let's Make America Great. Close, but not the same. Let's -- apostrophe S. You don't want the apostrophe. It's too complicated. It doesn't work. But Ronald Reagan was good. He said let's make -- but he didn't use it. He used it a little bit. We seriously use it, right?"

OHMYGODOHMYGODOHMYGOD

29. "And MAGA we got for free. Because my whole deal was Make America Great Again, all of a sudden people are saying and going #MAGA."

30. "We have a massive television audience, do you ever see so many cameras? If somebody else were here, you'd have about like none." I've heard that this is a record crowd. So true.

31. "Because I have a couple of friends here. They're pretty wealthy people, very successful people. And you know what? The hell with them. I don't care."

Oh snap, Trump friends, you got dunked on! FACE!

32. "In Michigan, they gave me an award six years, seven years ago, I had no idea. It was the Man of the Year in Michigan."

There's no evidence Trump was ever named "Man of the Year" in Michigan.

33. "They will take your guns away, too, by the way."

Trump passes along this much-debunked notion that Democrats, if put in power, will collect all firearms in the country -- and no one bats an eye.

34. "Now we're sending many of them to sanctuary cities. Thank you very much. They're not too happy about it. I'm proud to tell you that was actually my sick idea."

There's zero evidence that the administration is shipping undocumented immigrants detained at the border to sanctuary cities. In fact, several administration officials have made clear that the policy is not only logistically untenable but also potentially illegal. But, hey, it was Trump's "sick idea"!

35. "To confront the border crisis, I declared a national emergency. The good news is everybody agrees."

[narrator voice] They don't.

36. "They are aggressively pushing extreme late-term abortion, allowing children to be ripped from their mother's womb."

Totally and completely false.

37. "The baby is born. The mother meets with the doctor. They take care of the baby. They wrap the baby beautifully. And then the doctor and the mother determine whether or not they will execute the baby."

Dangerously inaccurate.

38. "We've got a lot of young people out there. You want to know the truth? I actually think we have more than they do."

Hillary Clinton won voters aged 18-29 by 19 points in 2016.

39. "We're very close, $300 million for the Great Lakes Restoration Initiatives."

False!

40. "You know, a lot of times, if you're not going to brag about it, nobody else is, you might as well do it. True."

So true.

41. "And I have to say, every leader without fail that comes to see me in the Oval Office, they all say congratulations."

Every foreign leader who comes to see Trump tells him "congratulations."

Every one. Absolutely. This is definitely, 100% true, I'm sure.

42. "With every last ounce of heart and hope and sweat, and so we are going to make our stand."

Speaking of making stands: Why the hell did Jon Snow approve a battle plan where he marched his forces outside of the walls of Winterfell to battle the army of the dead? Like, why not hang out inside the walls? Am I the only one who thinks this?

43. "Together with the great and proud people of Wisconsin, we will make America wealthy again."

[emoji with cash coming out of mouth] This feels like a good place to end.

Trump slams leaders of 'Dues Sucking firefighters' union after Biden endorsement [trump is so sick, so mentally ill! The question is, who has their backs? Only those as crazy as trump would say trump!]

Mark Steven Domingo, an Army veteran, was arrested Friday night after he took delivery of what he thought was a live bomb from an undercover law enforcement officer posing as a bomb-maker, authorities said. (FBI)

A Reseda man planned to detonate improvised explosive devices at several Southern California locations to cause “mass casualties” in a terror plot thwarted by law enforcement officials, authorities said Monday.

Mark Steven Domingo, 26, an Army veteran, was arrested Friday night after he took delivery of what he thought was a live bomb from an undercover law enforcement officer posing as a bomb-maker, officials said. He was charged with attempting to provide material support to terrorists.

According to a federal affidavit, “after considering various attacks — including targeting Jews, churches, and police officers — Domingo decided to detonate an IED at a rally scheduled to take place in Long Beach this past weekend. As part of the plot, Domingo asked his confederate — who actually was cooperating with the FBI as part of the investigation — to find a bomb-maker, and Domingo last week purchased several hundred nails to be used as shrapnel inside the IED.

“Domingo said he specifically bought three-inch nails because they would be long enough to penetrate the human body and puncture internal organs,” the affidavit states.

Prosecutors said Domingo sought retribution for the New Zealand mosques attack and said he was willing to become a martyr.

“There must be retribution,” he said in an online post, according to the federal criminal complaint. He also allegedly expressed allegiance to the Islamic State.

“America needs another vegas event ...[to] give them a taste of the terror they gladly spread all over the world,” Domingo allegedly wrote in reference to the massacre at the Route 91 concert in October 2017.

The FBI saw the posts and used an informant to begin a series of meetings with Domingo. During these discussions, he talked about targeting “Jews, police officers, churches and a military facility,” authorities said. A law enforcement source told The Times he also considered an attack at the Santa Monica Pier.

Domingo talked about a drive-by shooting using an AK-47-style rifle, authorities allege. But officials say he ended up targeting rallies in Long Beach and Huntington Beach. Worried those events might be canceled, he also considered blowing up the Santa Monica Pier, documents show.

The terror plot was uncovered less than 48 hours after a gunman opened fire inside a San Diego County synagogue, killing one woman and wounding several others in what law enforcement officials are investigating as an anti-Semitic hate crime.

Southern California has been the scene of several terrorism plots and attacks, including one by a prison-based group that targeted the U.S. government and supporters of Israel.

In 2005, Kevin James founded Jam’iyyat Ul-Islam Is-Saheeh, or JIS, inside a California prison and led a conspiracy to attack Los Angeles International Airport, several Army recruiting centers and the Israeli Consulate in L.A. The group planned to stage attacks on political targets with the proceeds of gas station robberies, investigators said. Authorities said they learned of the potential plot when Torrance police investigating the robberies found lists of targets and other information at one suspect’s apartment in South Los Angeles.

Three years before that, a gunman killed two people at the busy LAX ticket counter of El Al Israel Airlines.

And in 2015, Syed Rizwan Farook and his wife, Tashfeen Malik, entered a holiday gathering for county employees at the Inland Regional Center in San Bernardino and, using rifles purchased by a friend, killed 14 people and injured 22 others.

Authorities said that Farook and a friend had plotted additional terror attacks targeting students at a nearby community college and drivers on the 91 Freeway.

Mueller complained to Barr that summary report mischaracterized his findings: report

Bartiromo. "This is the way you treat your friends? How do you treat your enemies?" the judge said while opening up the segment on Monday morning. "He wanted to divert attention from what Mueller had said about him and what I had commented about Mueller to his relationship with me. His relationship with me is not the story. He and I have been friends for 30 years and probably will be for the next 30 years." Still, Napolitano characterized Trump's attack on him as "brilliant." Also Read: Fox News' Andrew Napolitano Calls Out Jared Kushner for 'Deceptive' Effort to 'Diminish' Russian Interference

The segment with Bartiromo came after President Trump denounced Napolitano on Saturday, saying the judge had turned nasty because he wasn't appointed to the Supreme Court. "Thank you to brilliant and highly respected attorney Alan Dershowitz for destroying the very dumb legal argument of 'Judge' Andrew Napolitano," Trump tweeted after a Fox News segment. "Ever since Andrew came to my office to ask that I appoint him to the U.S. Supreme Court, and I said NO, he has been very hostile! Also asked for pardon for his friend. A good 'pal' of low ratings Shepard Smith." On set, the judge answered both charges - suggesting the president has mischaracterized the matter. Though Napolitano did confirm that he and Trump did have two separate 90 minute conversations in the immediate weeks after his 2016 election victory. A rep for Fox News did not offer any additional comment on the matter. Also Read: Fox News' Andrew Napolitano Says Mueller Report 'Might Be Enough to Prosecute' Trump

Once one of Trump's favorite Fox News personalities, Napolitano has increasingly raised eyebrows on set for his tough commentary on the president's legal woes. On his Fox News digital series, "Judge Napolitano's Chambers," the judge has bluntly called Trump's behavior documented in the Mueller Report as "criminal." "Prosecutors prosecute people who interfere with government functions and that's what the president did by obstruction, where is this going to end? I don't know, but I am disappointed in the behavior of the president," Napolitano said last week. "If he had ordered his aides to violate federal law to save a human life or to preserve human freedom, he would at least have a moral defense to his behavior," he added. "But ordering them to break federal law to save him from the consequences of his own behavior, that is immoral, that is criminal, that is defenseless, that is condemnable." Just days earlier, Napolitano said in a different monologue on the same program that it was his belief there was enough in the report to "prosecute" the president - even though the special counsel declined to do so. Politics National Review House Dem. Threatens Trump Officials with 'Incarceration' for Refusing to Honor Subpoenas Representative Gerry Connolly (D., Va.), a member of the House Oversight Committee, said Friday that the panel might resort to the threat of incarceration should Trump administration officials continue to ignore its numerous subpoena-backed requests for documents. "We're going to resist, and if a subpoena is issued and you're told you must testify, we will back that up," Connolly told CNN's Wolf Blitzer. "And we will use any and all power in our command to make sure it's backed up - whether that's a contempt citation, whether that's going to court and getting that citation enforced, whether it's fines, whether it's possible incarceration. We will go to the max to enforce the constitutional role of the legislative branch of government." The president and his advisers have said explicitly that they will not yield to Democrats' demands that officials testify before the Oversight Committee regarding the issuance of security clearances, the formation of the so-called zero-tolerance immigration-enforcement policy, and other matters. White House adviser Stephen Miller, former security-clearance official Carl Kline, and John Gore, a deputy assistant attorney general in the Justice Department's Civil Rights Division, have thus far all refused to come before the panel. Connolly emphasized in particular the Committee's desire to hear from Miller, whom he called Trump's "immigration whisperer," regarding what measures the administration plans to take to harden the southern border in the wake of Secretary of Homeland Security Kierstjen Nielsen's departure. "We want to hear from him: What is your thinking, what is it you've been advising the president, and where is it you think you're going to be taking us as a country with these kinds of policies and personnel changes?" Connolly said of Miller. [About time someone got tough with these mobsters; after all, trump's used to corrupt cowards who take dives.]

Lifestyle What Does Catnip Do to Cats? Isabelle Tavares, Reader's Digest

Ever wondered why your kitty goes crazy for catnip? Here's what the herb really does to your feline friends.

An interesting phenomenon is seeing cats go off-their-scratcher for catnip, which is an herb. Who knew that by sniffing or eating this plant that it would make cats act in interesting ways. For our entertainment or not, catnip has proven benefits for felines—but that still leaves us with the question, what does catnip do to cats?

Where did catnip come from?

Nepeta cataria, the scientific name for catnip, is an herb in the mint family. Indigenous to Europe, it was transplanted to North America during European settlement. But, catnip isn't the only herb known to get cats to boogie. A study suggests that valerian root, silver vine, and Tatarian honeysuckle can also make cats behave similarly to catnip. These alternative herbs are safe, but here are 12 dangerous mistakes cat owners should never make.

So, what does catnip do to cats?

Cats are receptive to a volatile oil (an oil that evaporates in the air) found in the stems and leaves of the catnip herb. When cats get a whiff of catnip, they behave similarly to female cats in heat—erratic movements, strange howls, and all. This out-of-fur experience is due to the active ingredient in the oil, nepetalactone. It binds to receptors inside the cat's nose and drives its sensory neurons crazy, according to Daniel Rotman, CEO of Pretty Litter.

However, when a cat eats the herb, it has a calming effect. "If the catnip is ingested, it causes fatigue and works as a sedative. For cats that sniff catnip and rub against the plants, they'll get more of the stimulating effects," Rotman said. "Both smelling and ingesting catnip is safe for your feline family member."

Catnip's effects have a ticking clock—about five to 30 minutes, Rotman said. This is all dependent on the cat because only two-thirds of adult cats are affected by catnip, according to a study. "About 50 percent of cats seem to be affected by catnip, and the behavior that results varies widely between individuals," Rotman said. "[This] is an inherited sensitivity and it doesn't show up immediately. Instead, it will take a few months since young kittens are not affected."

What are the benefits?

Under-stimulated house cats could do well to escape their bland surroundings. Cats are born to move—here's how you can even train a cat. Their razor-sharp instincts need to be housed in an equally stimulating home, studies show. If not, this leads to aggressive, depressed, or anxious behavior in cats.

Although using catnip may seem like a drug, Rotman confirmed that it's not addictive for cats. He did mention that catnip sometimes makes cats aggressive, though. "If you have a multi-cat household, it's recommended to introduce catnip to each cat individually to avoid any potential fighting," Rotman said. Now that you know how catnip affects your feline friend, you'll want to decode the rest of your kitty's behavior too.

But standing together, we can stop the Trump agenda and work towards a brighter future for America. Can you contribute $5 to take back the House this fall? (It'll be Triple-Matched).

Albert, we MUST win the House in November.

We've got tremendous momentum already. Every day, more people join our movement to fight back against the intolerance, discrimination, and injustice of the Trump Administration.

It's crucial that we keep it up through Election Day.

2018 is our chance to put our grassroots energy to the test. It's our chance to reclaim the House and restore the people's voice in our politics.

That's why it's CRITICAL we stand with Democrats Joe Radinovich (Minnesota), Anthony Brindisi (New York), and Lauren Baer (Florida). Please chip in now

$21 TRILLION DOLLARS IS MISSING FROM THE US GOVERNMENT.

<https://missingmoney.solari.com> <https://home.solari.com> $21 Trillion dollars is missing from the US government. That is $65,000 per person - as much as the national debt!

“No money shall be drawn from the treasury, but in consequence of appropriations made by law; and a regular statement and account of receipts and expenditures of all public money shall be published from time to time.” ~ Article I, Section 9, Clause 7, U.S. Constitution

What's going on? Where is the money? How could this happen? How much has really gone missing? What would happen if a corporation failed to pass an audit like this? Or a taxpayer? This means the Fed and their member banks are transacting government money outside the law. So are the corporate contractors that run the payment systems. So are the Wall Street firms who are selling government securities without full disclosure. Would your banks continue to handle your bank account if you behaved like this? Would your investors continue to buy your securities if you behaved like this? Would your accountant be silent? This is the reason that there is such a strong push to change or tear up the US Constitution. This is why members of the establishment say it is "old," "outdated!" This is why there is such a push for gun control. Don't buy it! We can use the Constitution to get our money and our government back. It is time to enforce the US Constitution. The Solari Report has been covering the missing money since 2000 when Catherine Austin Fitts began to warn Americans and global investors about mortgage fraud at the US Department of Housing and Development (HUD), the engineering of the housing bubble that led to trillions more dollars in bailouts and funds missing from the US government starting in fiscal 1998.

Jim Rogers: Get Ready for the Next Bear Market; 'It's Going to Be Terrible'

Rogers Holdings Chair and legendary investor Jim Rogers is back with his latest warning that the next bear market is going to be "horrible, compounded by too much debt and a trade war." The U.S. stock market is still in the midst of the longest bull market run in history, but that run will be short-lived from here on out, Rogers warned in a recent interview with Kitco News.

"Later, this year or next year when the economies around the world are getting bad, Mr. Trump is going to blame everything on the foreigners, the Chinese, the Germans, the Japanese, everybody, and then the trade war will come back and then it's all over,"

Rogers said. Rogers added that trade war tensions could continue to rise — and a new fight is brewing with France — and Trump will continue to push forward because he desperately wants a win on this front due to how easy he's said trade wars are to win, dubbing himself a "Tariff Man." "Mr. Trump is going to come back. Mr. Trump believes in his soul and his brain that trade wars are good and that he can win trade wars," he said. "Mr. Trump knows that he is smarter than everybody else so he knows that he can win a trade war, and it will come back strong. When the American economy gets bad eventually, he's going to blame it on trade and the trade war and it's going to be terrible."

MARKETWATCH

BARRONS The Dow Hit a New High. Let's Talk About a Recession.

Updated July 1, 2019

Stocks were hitting news highs after U.S. President Donald Trump and Chinese President Xi Jinping agreed to a trade cease-fire. Unfortunately, the agreement might have come too late to keep the U.S. from slipping

into recession. Yes, the Dow Jones Industrial Average just traded at a new high. So did the S&P 500. But there were other data points Monday that point in the opposite direction. The ISM manufacturing index fell to 51.7 in June. While that wasn't as low as feared or below the 50-level that would indicate slowing industrial activity, it was still the weakest reading since 2016. The forward-looking new-orders component, however, fell to 50. "Overall, this report is probably not enough to move the needle much in either direction on Fed rate cuts," according to a report from research firm Capital Economics. "But with global demand set to remain subdued, and the tariff truce agreed at the G20 summit likely to prove temporary, we expect U.S. manufacturing activity to remain weak in the second half of this year." Weak, obviously, is different than slowing. Yet any time the economy slows, there is a risk of recession, which is one reason the difference between the yields on the 10-year Treasury and the three-month bill has turned negative. That is known as a yield-curve inversion, and research has shown that if it lasts long enough, it is a reliable predictor of a recession. The Cleveland Fed recession model, which is based on that yield curve, is predicting a 37.8% chance of a slowdown in one year. A similar model from the New York Fed only shows a 29.6% chance, but that's not necessarily good news. Since 1960, any reading over 30% has led to a recession, according to Lisa Shalett, chief investment officer at Morgan Stanley Wealth Management. "The upshot is the New York Fed Probability of Recession in 12 Months Ahead, a model that uses leading indicators and economic variables that tend to move before changes in the economy, has neared the 30% threshold that has reliably predicted past economic downturns," she writes. "With the deterioration in the June data, we think the model's next report will show the economy continued to weaken." Read more: Don't Get Too Excited About This Trade War Truce The market doesn't seem too sure of itself, either. The major indexes were up more than 1% in early trading, but despite hitting new highs, the Dow and the S&P 500 gave back some of those gains. Donald Trump Says Continental Army 'Took Over The Airports' In The Revolutionary War | NBC News video_youtube NBC News

Politics The Independent Why Trump's bizarre airport claim may have been his gaffe correction strategy backfiring at the most embarrassing moment
‘Donald Trump's surprising claim that George Washington's revolutionary troops "took over the airports" during the War of Independence could be explained by his method of correcting himself when he misreads his autocue - doubling down and trying to incorporate the mistake into his speech. His bizarre ad lib, suggesting there were airports to seize more than 100 years before the first successful flight, came moments after he seemed to stumble over a phrase in his speech. Describing how Washington's patriots defeated the British between 1775 and 1783, the president told crowds gathered to hear his Fourth of July address: "Our army manned the air." At that point he paused briefly, apparently realising he had misspoken, before continuing: "It rammed the ramparts, it took over the airports, it did everything it had to do ..."Seemingly thrown by the mistakes, he then alluded to Fort McHenry, a Maryland stronghold best known for its role in a completely different conflict - the 1812 war with Britain...'

IVANKA TRUMP ACCUSED OF SKIMMING MILLIONS FROM THE TRUMP INAUGURAL COMMITTEE

Posted on June 19, 2019 by Andrew Bradford

In February, prosecutors with the Southern District of New York (SDNY) opened up a new front in the investigation of criminal acts by the Trump 2016 campaign and the president himself, sending a sweeping subpoena to the Trump inaugural committee that includes charges of money laundering and fraud. The subpoena reads like something that would normally be served on a mafia boss.

But there was especially bad news in that subpoena for Ivanka Trump, who currently works as a White House adviser and is reportedly her daddy's favorite child.

ProPublica has learned that one of the main points of interest for SDNY prosecutors is the rate charged by Trump properties for renting space for the inaugural:

“A spokesman confirmed that the nonprofit 58th Presidential Inaugural Committee paid the Trump International Hotel a rate of $175,000 per day for event space — in spite of internal objections at the time that the rate was far too high. If the committee is deemed by auditors or prosecutors to have paid an above-market rate, that could violate tax laws prohibiting self-dealing, according to experts.”

Who negotiated the contracts and set the rates with the inaugural committee? None other than Ivanka Trump, as ProPublica first reported back in December:

“During the planning, Ivanka Trump, the president-elect’s eldest daughter and a senior executive with the Trump Organization, was involved in negotiating the price the hotel charged the 58th Presidential Inaugural Committee for venue rentals.”

That kind of inside dealing is also referred to as skimming.

Brett Kappel, an attorney at Akerman LLP who advises nonprofits, noted that it appears tax laws were violated by Ivanka Trump and others inside the inaugural committee:

“Tax law bars nonprofits such as the inaugural committee from insider deals that would unduly benefit people — in this case the Trump family — that have influence over the nonprofit, Kappel said. In legal parlance, these are known as excess benefit transactions. A key question would be whether the Trump hotel charged the inaugural committee above-market rates, which could violate tax rules, Kappel said. If an IRS audit found such a civil violation, the inaugural committee would have to pay taxes on the amount of money it overpaid.

“It could become a criminal violation, Kappel said, if investigators uncover evidence that people knew that charging above-market rates to enrich the Trump Organization was illegal and did it anyway.”

It appears that Ivanka's willingness to help her father engage in grifting on a massive scale now has her at the center of a scandal that could well lead to her being charged with tax violations and financial fraud.

Jerry Falwell Jr. defied expectations when he supported Donald J. Trump in 2016. Now details are emerging about behind-the-scenes maneuvering before the endorsement.

Evangelicals spent thousands of years warning about the Antichrist.
Then, when he shows up,
they elect him president.

OCCUPY DEMOCRATS

MIAMI BEACH — Senator Ted Cruz was running neck and neck with Donald J. Trump in Iowa just before the caucuses in 2016, but his campaign was expecting a last-minute boost from a powerful endorser, Jerry Falwell Jr. Mr. Falwell was chancellor of one of the nation's largest Christian colleges, Liberty University, and a son of the Rev. Jerry Falwell Sr., the televangelist and co-founder of the modern religious right. Months earlier, Mr. Falwell had provided Liberty's basketball arena for Mr. Cruz's formal presidential announcement and required that the student body attend, giving the Texas Republican a guaranteed audience of thousands of cheering young religious conservatives. With the caucuses now fast approaching, the senator's father, Rafael Cruz, an evangelical pastor who had taken the lead in wooing Mr. Falwell, alerted the campaign that Mr. Falwell had pledged to endorse his son. But when the time came for an announcement, Mr. Falwell rocked the Cruz campaign and grabbed the attention of the entire political world. He endorsed Mr. Trump instead, becoming one of the first major evangelical leaders to get behind the thrice-married, insult-hurling real estate mogul's long-odds presidential bid. Mr. Falwell — who is not a minister and spent years as a lawyer and real estate developer — said his endorsement was based on Mr. Trump's business experience and leadership qualities. A person close to Mr. Falwell said he made his decision after "consultation with other individuals whose opinions he respects." But a far more complicated narrative is emerging about the behind-the-scenes maneuvering in the months before that important endorsement. That backstory, in true Trump-tabloid fashion, features the friendship between Mr. Falwell, his wife and a former pool attendant at the Fontainebleau hotel in Miami Beach; the family's investment in a gay-friendly youth hostel; purported sexually revealing photographs involving the Falwells; and an attempted hush-money arrangement engineered by the president's former fixer, Michael Cohen. The revelations have arisen from a lawsuit filed against the Falwells in Florida; the investigation into Mr. Cohen by federal prosecutors in New York; and the gonzo-style tactics of the comedian and actor Tom Arnold. Over the last two years, Mr. Arnold has fashioned himself an anti-Trump sleuth and crusader, working to dig up evidence of past malfeasance on television and in social media. In that role, Mr. Arnold befriended Mr. Cohen — who had lately become a vivid, if not entirely reliable, narrator of the Trump phenomenon — and then surreptitiously recorded him describing his effort to buy and bury embarrassing photographs involving the Falwells. Mr. Falwell addressed the Republican National Convention in 2016. He has advised the Trump administration on policy and has had entree to the White House. Credit John Moore/Getty Images Image Mr. Falwell addressed the Republican National Convention in 2016. He has advised the Trump administration on policy and has had entree to the White House. Mr. Falwell addressed the Republican National Convention in 2016. He has advised the Trump administration on policy and has had entree to the White House. Credit John Moore/Getty Images That attempt, Mr. Cohen says on the recording, came months before he brought Mr. Falwell “to the table” for Mr. Trump. Until then, he adds, “none of the evangelicals wanted to support Trump.” There is no evidence that Mr. Falwell’s endorsement was part of a quid pro quo arranged by Mr. Cohen. Indeed, the relationship, if any, between the endorsement and the photo episode remains unclear. But the new details — some of which have been reported by news outlets including BuzzFeed and Reuters over the last year — show how deeply Mr. Falwell was enmeshed in Mr. Cohen’s and Mr. Trump’s world. And they add another layer to one of the enduring curiosities of the Trump era: the support the president has received from evangelical Christians, who have traditionally demanded that their political leaders exhibit “family values” and moral “character.” Mr. Falwell’s father forged those words into weapons against the Democrats after he co-founded the Moral Majority political movement, which propelled Ronald Reagan into the White House and made religious conservatives a vital constituency for any Republican who would be president. By the time Republicans cast their first votes in 2016, Mr. Trump was starting to show surprising strength among some white evangelicals. But with Mr. Falwell serving as the torchbearer of his father’s legacy, his endorsement became a permission slip for deeply religious conservatives who were attracted by Mr. Trump’s promises to make America great again but wary of his well-known history of infidelity, his previous support of abortion rights and his admission that he had never asked for God’s forgiveness. “For those of the more fundamentalist variant of evangelicalism, the Falwell family, and the Falwell endorsements, are an important factor,” said Jim Guth, a political-science professor at Furman University who has long studied evangelical politics. Mr. Cruz still managed to win in Iowa. But Mr. Trump soon won South Carolina with strong evangelical support, sending him on a solid path toward the nomination. Three years later, Mr. Falwell remains an unwavering Trump supporter. Last month he went so far as to suggest that the president deserved an extended term as “reparations” for time lost to the Mueller investigation. In turn, he has had entree to the White House, providing input on education policies that stand to benefit Liberty. The Falwells declined to comment for this article. Mr. Falwell has said there were no compromising photographs, and the person close to them, who would speak only on the condition of anonymity, said the Falwells “did not know anything about Mr. Cohen’s alleged efforts” on their behalf. Mr. Falwell’s endorsement of Mr. Trump, the person said, was made after careful consideration. Mr. Cohen, he said, “did not try to exert any inappropriate pressure.” New Friendships, New Opportunities Mr. Falwell began to grow close to Mr. Trump and Mr. Cohen after Mr. Trump came to speak at Liberty, in Lynchburg, Va., in 2012. Mr. Cohen, who was working to connect his boss with important political constituencies and their leaders for a possible presidential run four years later, came along for the trip. Mr. Trump lacked the religious bona fides of those who typically filled the school’s speaker lineup. But he was the star of the top-rated “Apprentice” reality show, and Mr. Falwell admired his career in real estate. As it happened, the Falwell family was exploring a real estate venture of its own. Earlier that year, Mr. Falwell and his wife, Becki, had stayed at the Fontainebleau — the grande dame of the Miami Beach hotel scene and a somewhat unlikely vacation spot for the chancellor of a university whose student code prohibited short skirts, coed dorm visits and sex outside of “biblically ordained” marriage. Kennedy, Frank Sinatra and Elvis, the Fontainebleau was now the stomping grounds of the Kardashians, Paris Hilton and Lady Gaga, known for allowing topless sunbathing and for a cavernous nightclub that one travel guide described as “30,000 square feet of unadulterated fun.” Techno music was pumped out at its 11 pools, where waitresses in polka-dot swimsuits served drinks and white-uniformed male attendants brought fresh towels and positioned umbrellas for tips. The Falwells struck up a conversation with one of those pool attendants, Giancarlo Granda. Mr. Granda, then 21 and the son of immigrants from Cuba and Mexico, was working at the hotel while studying finance at Florida International University. Advertisement The Falwells, according to the person close to them, were impressed with Mr. Granda’s ambition. Soon he was hiking and water skiing with them in Virginia. Within months, they were offering to help him get started in business in Florida. Unsure how to capitalize on the offer, Mr. Granda consulted a close high school friend, Jesus Fernandez Jr., whose father, Jesus Fernandez Sr., had worked in Miami real estate for decades, the Fernandezes would later assert. Together, they directed Mr. Granda to a South Beach youth hostel that was for sale. The building also housed a restaurant and a liquor store. CreditAngel Valentin for The New York Times Mr. Falwell and his wife agreed to help finance the purchase after a meeting in Florida with Mr. Granda, the real estate agents, the younger Mr. Fernandez and his father — who was facing a $34 million bankruptcy. Negotiations were underway when Mr. Trump visited Liberty, and the Falwells invited Mr. Granda to fly up for the occasion. A photo taken on a private plane, reviewed by The New York Times, shows him holding a copy of “Trump: The Art of the Deal.” Mr. Falwell introduced Mr. Trump to Liberty’s students as “one of the greatest visionaries of our time,” who “single-handedly forced President Obama to release his birth certificate.” Mr. Trump shared his secrets to winning in business and life: “Get even” and “Always have a prenuptial agreement,” though he quickly added, “I won’t say it here, because you people don’t get divorced.” Mr. Granda, with a copy of “Trump: The Art of The Deal,” traveled by private plane to hear Mr. Trump speak at Liberty in 2012. Offstage, he posed for pictures with the Falwells and shook hands with their special guest, Mr. Granda. No Politics or Religion In 2013, the Falwells completed the deal for the Miami Hostel, which rents beds for as little as $15 a night, bunking 12 people to a room. The hostel became known as one of South Beach’s best budget party hostels and is sometimes listed as gay-friendly. The Falwells’ involvement came to light in a 2017 Politico article by Brandon Ambrosino, a Liberty graduate. He reported that the hostel featured a sign on its front gate declaring its house rules: “No Soliciting, Fundraising, Politics, Salesmen, Religion.” “Inside the Falwells’ hostel, the stench of general decay and cigarette smoke is overpowering,” Mr. Ambrosino wrote. Tourism pamphlets included one for Tootsie’s Cabaret, “74,000 square feet of adult entertainment and FULL NUDITY.” On a recent overnight visit, the sign forbidding politics and religion was gone, and there were no visible fliers for adult clubs. The hostel was tidy and relatively quiet — common for this time of year, Miami’s off-season. A warning was posted that the hostel was not responsible for accidents on the premises, “especially if you are drunk.” Real estate records show that an LLC called Alton Hostel Inc. bought the hostel and its building for $4.7 million in cash. Within weeks, Alton Hostel secured a $3.8 million mortgage from Carter Bank & Trust, the Virginia-based bank the Falwells had long used to finance and expand Liberty University. The source of Alton Hostel's initial full-cash payment is not known. But Mr. Falwell would later say in a sworn affidavit that his family's financial contribution to the deal amounted to a loan of $1.8 million, including $800,000 for renovations. The Falwells' son Jerry Falwell III, who goes by "Trey" and was 23 at the time, was listed as manager of the LLC; Mr. Granda was added later as a co-manager. In his affidavit, Mr. Falwell said his wife was also a member of the LLC. Around South Beach, people involved in the deal regarded it as the sort of thing Miami's young and good-looking could luck into when they encountered wealthy visitors. "Miami is a very touristy place," one of the brokers, Roberto Bracho, said in an interview. "If you are in the right place at the right time, you can hit the jackpot." The Fernandezes believed that they had been promised an ownership share. The Falwells denied making any such promise, and in his affidavit, Mr. Falwell sought to minimize his involvement, saying that, as an adviser on the deal, he could not have given them a stake. The Fernandezes threatened a lawsuit. Rigging Polls, Fixing Problems Mr. Cohen had kept in close touch with the Falwells after Mr. Trump's 2012 visit. He would later say he viewed them as family. Mr. Cohen even turned to a Falwell lieutenant — Liberty's deputy chief information officer at the time, John Gauger — as he worked to build Mr. Trump's political profile. Mr. Gauger also ran his own consulting firm, RedFinch Solutions. Mr. Cohen hired RedFinch to manipulate two online polls in Mr. Trump's favor — one in 2014 by CNBC, and another in early 2015 in the Drudge Report — Mr. Gauger told The Wall Street Journal in January. At around the same time, Mr. Cohen and Mr. Trump were arranging with The National Enquirer and its chief, the Trump ally David Pecker, to buy and bury stories about Mr. Trump and women that could harm his political prospects. Mr. Cohen's confessed role in two such deals — one with The Enquirer to silence the former Playboy model Karen McDougal, the other with the pornographic actress Stormy Daniels, whom he initially paid out of his own pocket — contributed to the three-year sentence he is now serving at the federal prison in Otisville, N.Y. Credit John Taggart for The New York Times Advertisement By Mr. Cohen's account, the Falwells appeared to be in need of just that sort of help. By late 2015, the lawsuit over ownership of the hostel had devolved into a fight over compromising photos, according to several people involved in the case. It was understood that between Mr. Granda, the Fernandezes and their lawyers, one or more people were in possession of photographs that could be used as leverage against the Falwells. And so Mr. Cohen tried to play the fixer for his friends. In a recent legal filing, Mr. Fernandez Jr. said he was forced to change his name because of the case. He became Gordon Bello. His father, Mr. Fernandez, Sr., became Jett Bello. Their name changes took place after Mr. Cohen intervened. Mr. Cohen described his involvement in his conversation with Mr. Arnold, which was first reported last month by Reuters. "There's a bunch of photographs, personal photographs, that somehow the guy ended up getting — whether it was off of Jerry's phone or somehow maybe it got AirDropped or whatever the hell the whole thing was," Mr. Cohen told Mr. Arnold in the recording, which Mr. Arnold shared with The Times. Mr. Cohen never identified "the guy." "These are photos between husband and wife," Mr. Cohen added, joking that "the evangelicals are kinkier than Tom Arnold." He explained, "I was going to pay him, and I was going to get the negatives and do an agreement where they turn over all the technology that has the photographs or anything like that, any copies." But the payoff "never happened," he said, "and the guy just either deleted them on his own or what have you." The person close to the Falwells said that Mr. Cohen was neither their lawyer nor their fixer, and that they had not been aware of "his alleged actions regarding photographs" until parts of the recording were released. Advertisement Mr. Cohen, who declined interview requests, told Mr. Arnold that he had been trying to protect Mrs. Falwell. "Even though she has a very nice figure," he said on the recording, "nobody wants their private photos published." In the process, he said, he had obtained one of the photos, of Mrs. Falwell, and still had it. Evangelicals for Trump With a few weeks to go before the Iowa caucuses kicked off the primary season on Feb. 1, 2016, Mr. Cruz was steadily racking up high-level endorsements. He was banking on strong evangelical support to push him past Mr. Trump in the state. In mid-January, Mr. Cruz's father reported back to his staff that Mr. Falwell had committed to endorsing his son, according to two people involved in the campaign at the time. A news release was prepared, they said, while aides began vetting Mr. Falwell's background, as is standard for presidential endorsers. Signs that something was amiss came shortly afterward, when Mr. Trump arrived at Liberty for another speech. Mr. Falwell introduced Mr. Trump as a man who "lives a life of loving and helping others as Jesus taught." Despite the generous introduction, the appearance seemed an unmitigated disaster for Mr. Trump. He betrayed his ignorance of the Bible by referring to a passage in "Two Corinthians" rather than "Second Corinthians," and loosely used the words "hell" and "damn." Even so, rumors began to spread that Mr. Falwell was leaning toward Mr. Trump. Rick Tyler, a senior Cruz adviser, called Mr. Falwell to say that if there was ever a good time to make his support official, this was it. That was when Mr. Falwell told him he had learned that he could not make any endorsement in the primaries. "He said his board wouldn't allow him to endorse," Mr. Tyler said in an interview. Around that time, Mr. Falwell was coming under heavy pressure to get behind Mr. Trump, according to someone who spoke to Mr. Falwell then. A few days later, Mr. Falwell announced his endorsement of Mr. Trump, calling him "a successful executive and entrepreneur, a wonderful father and a man who I believe can lead our country to greatness again." In an email, the person close to the Falwells said the Liberty chancellor had "never seriously considered endorsing Mr. Cruz," and did not know how the campaign had gotten that impression. What's more, he said, Mr. Cohen "did nothing more than ask" Mr. Falwell to endorse Mr. Trump. Though Mr. Falwell said he was making the endorsement as a private individual, not as the head of the university, the decision roiled the Liberty community. Some graduates and students expressed stunned disappointment. One of Liberty’s trustees, Mark DeMoss — an alumnus and a longtime confidant of Mr. Falwell’s father — told The Washington Post that Mr. Trump did not exhibit “Christ-like behavior that Liberty has spent 40 years promoting with its students.” (After clashing with Mr. Falwell and other board members, he resigned, he said in a statement at the time.) Speaking to Liberty students in 2012, Mr. Trump shared two pieces of advice he said he often gave: “Get even,” and “Always have a prenuptial agreement.”

At the Cruz campaign headquarters, the reaction was “anger and shock,” Mr. Tyler said. “Something changed, obviously.” An Adviser and Defender

The relationship between Mr. Falwell and Mr. Trump would prove mutually beneficial. Mr. Trump sought to make Mr. Falwell his secretary of education, Mr. Falwell has said. After he declined, he disclosed that he would serve as an outside adviser to the administration on education policy — a role in which, Mr. Falwell indicated, he would call for rollbacks of regulations governing accreditation, recruitment and student borrowing. (“A lot of what we sent them is actually what got implemented,” he told The New York Times Magazine last year.) Mr. Falwell, in turn, has remained one of the president’s most vocal defenders, even in the rare moments when other Republicans wouldn’t, as in August 2017, when Mr. Trump said there had been “very fine people on both sides” of the violent white nationalist rally in Charlottesville, Va., that resulted in the murder of a young counterdemonstrator. That month, with settlement talks involving the hostel at an impasse, the Fernandezes, now the Bellos, filed a written complaint. The complaint, first reported by BuzzFeed News several months after it was filed, asserted that “verbal offers were made to Granda to provide him with financial assistance.” Mr. Falwell, the complaint read, “indicated that he wanted to help Granda establish a new career and build a business” as the Falwells’ relationship with Mr. Granda “evolved.”

Advertisement In his sworn affidavit, Mr. Falwell said the family had made Mr. Granda a co-manager of the LLC in return for serving as its local representative. Mr. Falwell saw the hostel as a good opportunity to introduce his son and Mr. Granda to real estate investing, according to the person close to the family. Mr. Granda, he said, received only a “modest income,” and a financial stake that was of limited value because of the property’s heavy debt. The Comedian Gets His Tape Mr. Arnold’s anti-Trump antics have largely consisted of his public search for more recordings like the “Access Hollywood” outtake in which Mr. Trump boasted about grabbing women’s genitalia. Last year, Mr. Arnold even got his own television show on the Viceland network, “The Hunt for The Trump Tapes.” It produced no new tapes during its eight-episode run. But it did help lead to the recording of Mr. Cohen discussing the Falwells. Mr. Arnold first met Mr. Cohen last June at the Loews Regency hotel in Manhattan, as Mr. Arnold was taping his show. Their meeting didn’t result in a Cohen appearance on the program, but Mr. Cohen agreed to a photo with Mr. Arnold, which went viral on Twitter, and the two stayed in touch. Early this year, after noticing the articles in The Journal and BuzzFeed about Liberty, Mr. Cohen and the Fernandez suit, Mr. Arnold began suggesting on Twitter, without presenting any evidence, that the Falwells had been in a sexual relationship with Mr. Granda. Those tweets led Mr. Cohen to call Mr. Arnold and deny any such relationship. He then described his efforts to help with the photos. The comedian and actor Tom Arnold, left, secretly recorded Mr. Cohen describing his plan to help the Falwells by paying off someone who claimed to have compromising photos. Credit Tom Arnold Image The comedian and actor Tom Arnold, left, secretly recorded Mr. Cohen describing his plan to help the Falwells by paying off someone who claimed to have compromising photos. The comedian and actor Tom Arnold, left, secretly recorded Mr. Cohen describing his plan to help the Falwells by paying off someone who claimed to have compromising photos. Credit Tom Arnold That conversation, two months before Mr. Cohen went to prison, left more questions than answers. Mr. Cohen has publicly said nothing more. No photos have surfaced, and it is unclear how many there are. In all, three people said they had seen at least one photo, though their descriptions varied and could not be verified. Nor is it certain whom Mr. Cohen hoped to pay off. He never mentions the Bellos — formerly the Fernandezes — or their lawsuit on the tape, but makes reference to the “pool boy,” leaving open the possibility that the photos came from Mr. Granda, and that Mr. Granda then shared them with the Bellos. Then again, “the guy” to whom Mr. Cohen refers could be some other person entirely. Advertisement Mr. Granda, now working toward a graduate degree in real estate at Georgetown University, referred questions to his lawyer. The lawyer, Aaron Resnick, said his client had never interacted with Mr. Cohen, whom he called “a convicted felon and admitted liar.” He said any suggestion that Mr. Granda was the person referred to on the tape would be false, and he bristled at what he called “tabloid fodder” directed at a first-generation Hispanic-American. In a statement to The Times, the senior Bello said he and his son had been respectful to the Falwells, “despite the sensitive details surrounding this case.” It was Mr. Cohen — acting as their lawyer, he said — who had revealed “his client’s indiscretions.” He said the pending lawsuit prohibited him from offering more details about the photographs or why he and his son had felt compelled to change their names. Mr. Falwell has granted only one interview about the Arnold recording, to Todd Starnes of Fox News Radio, telling him there were “no compromising or embarrassing photos,” and saying, “We never engaged or paid Cohen to represent us in any legal or other professional capacity.” The new details about the lead-up to his endorsement of Mr. Trump have not affected Mr. Falwell’s continued enthusiastic support. Earlier this month, Mr. Falwell chastised a pastor who was embroiled in a controversy over his decision to pray for Mr. Trump during the president’s surprise visit to his church in the Washington suburbs. Suggesting that the pastor was being too accommodating of critics, Mr. Falwell directed a tweet at him reading, “Grow a pair,” a crude reference to the pastor’s masculinity. After the post drew criticism on Twitter as being beneath a religious leader, Mr. Falwell responded that he did not need to adhere to strict religious standards. “I have never been a minister,” he tweeted, saying that it was up to the students and faculty of Liberty to keep the school “strong spiritually.” He added, “While I am proud to be a conservative Christian, my job is to keep LU successful academically, financially and in athletics.”

In Iran crisis, our worst fears about Trump are realized

By Max Boot

More than three years ago, in March 2016, I joined 121 other Republican foreign policy analysts (I was then a Republican) to sign an open letter about then-candidate Donald Trump published on the national security website War on the Rocks.

The letter warned:

“His vision of American influence and power in the world is wildly inconsistent and unmoored in principle. He swings from isolationism to military adventurism within the space of one sentence.

His advocacy for aggressively waging trade wars is a recipe for economic disaster.

His embrace of the expansive use of torture is inexcusable.

His hateful, anti-Muslim rhetoric undercuts the seriousness of combating Islamic radicalism by alienating partners in the Islamic world. ...

... His insistence that Mexico will fund a wall on the southern border inflames unhelpful passions, and rests on an utter misreading of, and contempt for, our southern neighbor.

... His insistence that close allies such as Japan must pay vast sums for protection is the sentiment of a racketeer, not the leader of the alliances that have served us so well since World War II.

His admiration for foreign dictators such as Vladimir Putin is unacceptable. ...

He is fundamentally dishonest. ...

His equation of business acumen with foreign policy experience is false.”

The letter concluded: “Mr. Trump’s own statements lead us to conclude that as president, he would use the authority of his office to act in ways that make America less safe, and which would diminish our standing in the world.”

I wish we had been wrong, but we were all too right. The only warning that has not been vindicated is that his anti-Muslim rhetoric would alienate Muslim allies; President Trump’s kowtowing to the rulers of Egypt, Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates has kept them aligned. But all the other debilities we foresaw are now abundantly manifest.

Trump has shown no ability to grow in office; but then it’s hard to learn if all you read is Fox News chyrons. He is today the same compulsive liar and erratic ignoramus he was at the start of the 2016 campaign. Only now, the stakes are much higher. Trump is commander in chief as the United States is locked on a collision course with the Islamic Republic of Iran. The crisis in the Persian Gulf shows the danger of having a president who is so unfit for office. Indeed, this crisis is largely of Trump’s own making.

In May 2018, Trump exited the Iran nuclear deal, even though Iran was in compliance. Trump castigated the deal as “horrible,” “laughable,” “disastrous,” largely, it seems, because it was negotiated by his hated predecessor. Secretary of State Mike Pompeo laid out 12 demands that the current Iranian regime would never meet; they included Iran’s cutting off support for all of its regional proxies and ending its missile program. National security adviser John Bolton signaled that the administration is interested not in reform but regime change; in February, he posted a video on the 40th anniversary of the Iranian Revolution, telling the mullahs, “I don’t think you’ll have many more anniversaries to enjoy.”

[\[Jason Rezaian: What the Iran crisis tells us about Trump’s lack of credibility\]](#)

The administration has implemented punishing sanctions that have cut Iran's oil exports by more than half. The Iranian government considers this an act of "economic war," and it has responded like most nations under attack — not by surrendering but by hitting back. In recent weeks, Iran has been blamed for attacks on oil tankers in the Persian Gulf. Iran denies responsibility, but now it is threatening to ramp up uranium production and break out of the nuclear deal. What did Trump think would happen when he pulled out of the nuclear deal? Or did he think at all? Most analysts warned that the move would increase the risk of Iran's restarting its nuclear program and of war breaking out — and it has.

Here's what you need to know about the two suspected attacks on five ships in the Persian Gulf in the last month and the region where they occurred. (Joyce Lee, Elyse Samuels/The Washington Post)

Trump's response has been as incoherent as usual. He alternates between bluster ("If Iran wants to fight, that will be the official end of Iran") and offers to talk. He contradicts his own aides (remember the 12 demands?) by saying: "We just don't want them to have nuclear weapons." But if all he cares about is nukes, why did he pull out of a nuclear deal that was working?

The United States cannot successfully deal with a menace such as Iran when it is led by a president with no credibility or moral standing either at home or abroad. U.S. allies distrust Trump's claims of Iranian responsibility for the tanker attacks and bristle at Trump's unilateralism. According to the New York Times, even Trump's own intelligence and military chiefs don't trust him enough to share details of U.S. cyberoperations against Russia. If Trump's own subordinates don't trust him, how can the rest of the country or the world? Under another president such as Ronald Reagan, Iranian attacks on shipping in the Persian Gulf might be a casus belli. But we cannot risk a war under this president. The least bad outcome is for Trump to veer, as he has with North Korea, from irresponsible saber-rattling to oleaginous appeasement. Better for Trump to fall in love with another odious dictator than to start a war that could easily spin out of control. No matter how Trump handles this self-created crisis, his Iran policies drive home the warning in the War on the Rocks letter: He is diminishing America's safety and standing.

Politics The Daily Beast Fox's Judge Napolitano: Seems Trump 'Is Prepared to Commit a Felony to Get Re-Elected'

Fox News Reacting to President Trump saying he would accept foreign intel on a political opponent if offered, and that he doesn't feel it's necessary to contact the FBI, Fox News senior judicial analyst Judge Andrew Napolitano on Thursday said he worries the president is "prepared to commit a felony." Napolitano was asked by Fox News anchor Shep Smith if there was any "gray area" or "wiggle room" when it comes to campaigns legally receiving "dirt from a foreign entity on a political opponent." "There's no wiggle room with respect to dirt," the judge responded. "With respect to opposition research. The Federal Election Commission decided in other cases that that is a thing of value." This prompted Smith to wonder if what the president described he was willing to do during his interview with ABC News constituted a felony. "Correct," Napolitano confidently declared. "Meaning he would be committing a felony and the person giving it to him, if the person was here, would be committing a felony as well." After pondering what kind of message Trump is sending to foreign leaders around the world who want to curry his favor, Napolitano argued that regardless of the president's belief that freedom of speech protects him, the law strictly prohibits him from soliciting foreign assistance in an election. "If he is a candidate, then what he receives is regulated by federal laws that he took an oath to uphold," the Fox analyst explained. "Among them are you cannot take something, accept something, receive something from a foreign national under the guise of being the head of state or because you want to use it for your campaign." Smith went on to report that Senate Democrats are now working on legislation that would make it a requirement of the law that candidates report such contacts with the FBI. "The president told George Stephanopoulos the FBI director is wrong," Napolitano stated. "Such a statute would clarify this and impose upon the president-whoever that may be-more of a burden to enforce these laws on him or herself as well as on anybody else running for office." The Fox News anchor, meanwhile, wanted to get one more reaction from his guest, asking him what he thought when he first heard the president's remarks. "The president of the United States of America is prepared to commit a felony to get re-elected," Napolitano concluded. "That was my reaction and it was not a happy one. I thought he shot himself in the foot. I wish he didn't say it."Read more at The Daily Beast. Got a tip? Hatch Act of 1939

Long title An Act to Prevent Pernicious Political Activities

Enacted by the 76th United States Congress

Effective August 2, 1939

Legislative history

- Introduced in the Senate as S. 1871 by Carl Hatch (D-NM)
- Signed into law by President Franklin D. Roosevelt on August 2, 1939

The Hatch Act of 1939, officially An Act to Prevent Pernicious Political Activities, is a United States federal law whose main provision prohibits employees in the executive branch of the federal government, except the president, vice-president, and certain designated high-level officials,^[1] from engaging in some forms of political activity. It went into law on August 2, 1939. The law was named for Senator Carl Hatch of New Mexico. It was most recently amended in 2012.

Background

Widespread allegations that local Democratic Party politicians used employees of the Works Progress Administration (WPA) during the congressional elections of 1938 provided the immediate impetus for the passage of the Hatch Act. Criticism centered on swing states such as Kentucky,^[3] Tennessee, Pennsylvania, and Maryland. In Pennsylvania, Republicans and dissident Democrats publicized evidence that Democratic politicians were consulted on the appointment of WPA administrators and case workers and that they used WPA jobs to gain unfair political advantage.^[4] In 1938, a series of newspaper articles exposed WPA patronage, and political contributions in return for employment, prompting an investigation by the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee, headed by Sen. Morris Sheppard, a Texas Democrat.^[5]

Despite that investigation's inconclusive findings, many in both parties determined to take action against the growing power of the WPA and its chief administrator, Harry Hopkins, an intimate of President Roosevelt. The Act was sponsored by Senator Carl Hatch, a Democrat from New Mexico. At the time, Roosevelt was struggling to purge the Democratic party of its more conservative members, who were increasingly aligned with the administration's Republican opponents. The president considered vetoing the legislation or allowing it to become law without his signature, but instead signed it on the last day he could do so. His signing message welcomed the legislation as if he had called for it, and emphasized the protection his administration would provide for political expression on the part of public employees.^[6]

Provisions

The 1939 Act forbids the intimidation or bribery of voters and restricts political campaign activities by federal employees. It prohibits using any public funds designated for relief or public works for electoral purposes.

It forbids officials paid with federal funds from using promises of jobs, promotion, financial assistance, contracts, or any other benefit to coerce campaign contributions or political support. It provides that persons below the policy-making level in the executive branch of the federal government must not only refrain from political practices that would be illegal for any citizen, but must abstain from "any active part" in political campaigns, using this language to specify those who are exempt:[7]

- (i) an employee paid from an appropriation for the Executive Office of the President; or
- (ii) an employee appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, whose position is located within the United States, who determines policies to be pursued by the United States in the nationwide administration of Federal laws.

The act also precludes federal employees from membership in "any political organization which advocates the overthrow of our constitutional form of government,"[8] a provision meant to prohibit membership in organizations on the far left and far right, such as the Communist Party USA and the German-American Bund.[9]

An amendment on July 19, 1940, extended the Act to certain employees of state and local governments whose positions are primarily paid for by federal funds. It has been interpreted to bar political activity on the part of employees of state agencies administering federal unemployment insurance programs and appointed local law enforcement agency officials with oversight of federal grant funds. The Hatch Act bars state and local government employees from running for public office if any federal funds support the position, even if the position is funded almost entirely with local funds.[10]

The Merit Systems Protection Board and the Office of Special Counsel (OSC) are responsible for enforcement of the Hatch Act.[11]

Trump's Russian Laundromat | The New Republic

<http://www.newrepublic.com/article/143586/trumps-russian> Trump's Russian Laundromat How to use Trump Tower and other luxury high-rises to clean dirty money, run an international crime syndicate, and propel a failed real estate developer into the White House

In 1984, a Russian émigré named David Bogatin went shopping for apartments in New York City. The 38-year-old had arrived in America seven years before, with just $3 in his pocket. But for a former pilot in the Soviet Army—his specialty had been shooting down Americans over North Vietnam—he had clearly done quite well for himself. Bogatin wasn't hunting for a place in Brighton Beach, the Brooklyn enclave known as "Little Odessa" for its large population of immigrants from the Soviet Union. Instead, he was fixated on the glitziest apartment building on Fifth Avenue, a gaudy, 58-story edifice with gold-plated fixtures and a pink-marble atrium: Trump Tower.

If the transaction seemed suspicious—multiple apartments for a single buyer who appeared to have no legitimate way to put his hands on that much money—there may have been a reason. At the time, Russian mobsters were beginning to invest in high-end real estate, which offered an ideal vehicle to launder money from their criminal enterprises. “During the ’80s and ’90s, we in the U.S. government repeatedly saw a pattern by which criminals would use condos and high-rises to launder money,” says Jonathan Winer, a deputy assistant secretary of state for international law enforcement in the Clinton administration. “It didn’t matter that you paid too much, because the real estate values would rise, and it was a way of turning dirty money into clean money. It was done very systematically, and it explained why there are so many high-rises where the units were sold but no one is living in them.” When Trump Tower was built, as David Cay Johnston reports in The Making of Donald Trump, it was only the second high-rise in New York that accepted anonymous buyers.

In 1987, just three years after he attended the closing with Trump, Bogatin pleaded guilty to taking part in a massive gasoline-bootlegging scheme with Russian mobsters. After he fled the country, the government seized his five condos at Trump Tower, saying that he had purchased them to “launder money, to shelter and hide assets.” A Senate investigation into organized crime later revealed that Bogatin was a leading figure in the Russian mob in New York. His family ties, in fact, led straight to the top: His brother ran a $150 million stock scam with none other than Semion Mogilevich, whom the FBI considers the “boss of bosses” of the Russian mafia. At the time, Mogilevich—feared even by his fellow gangsters as “the most powerful mobster in the world”—was expanding his multibillion-dollar international criminal syndicate into America.

In 1987, on his first trip to Russia, Trump visited the Winter Palace with Ivana. The Soviets flew him to Moscow—all expenses paid—to discuss building a luxury hotel across from the Kremlin. Maxim Blokhin/TASS

The Mueller Report, Napolitano believes, lays out a number of presidential acts that constitute obstruction of justice including:

- When Trump asked Deputy National Security Adviser KT McFarland to write an untruthful letter to the file, knowing the government would subpoena it.
- When Trump asked Corey Lewandowski to get Mueller fired.
- When Trump asked Don McGahn to get Mueller fired and then to lie about it.

- When Trump asked McGahn to go back to Mueller's team and change his testimony.
- When Trump dangled a pardon in front of Michael Cohen, in order to keep Cohen to testifying against him.

'Obstruction of justice-the statute making obstruction criminal-prohibits interfering, or attempting to interfere, with a criminal prosecution or an investigation the government's conducting' Napolitano said. The Mueller Report, Napolitano believes, lays out a number of presidential acts that constitute obstruction of justice including:

- When Trump asked Deputy National Security Adviser KT McFarland to write an untruthful letter to the file, knowing the government would subpoena it.
- When Trump asked Corey Lewandowski to get Mueller fired.
- When Trump asked Don McGahn to get Mueller fired and then to lie about it.

- When Trump asked McGahn to go back to Mueller's team and change his testimony.
- When Trump dangled a pardon in front of Michael Cohen, in order to keep Cohen to testifying against him.

BRITISH WRITER PENS THE BEST DESCRIPTION OF TRUMP I'VE READ

(Caricature of Donald Trump is by DonkeyHotey.)

The following was found at LA Progressive: Someone on Quora asked "Why do some British people not like Donald Trump?"

Nate White, an articulate and witty writer from England wrote the following response:

A few things spring to mind. Trump lacks certain qualities which the British traditionally esteem. For instance, he has no class, no charm, no coolness, no credibility, no compassion, no wit, no warmth, no wisdom, no subtlety, no sensitivity, no self-awareness, no humility, no honour and no grace – all qualities, funnily enough, with which his predecessor Mr. Obama was generously blessed. So for us, the stark contrast does rather throw Trump's limitations into embarrassingly sharp relief. Plus, we like a laugh. And while Trump may be laughable, he has never once said anything wry, witty or even faintly amusing – not once, ever. I don't say that rhetorically, I mean it quite literally: not once, not ever. And that fact is particularly disturbing to the British sensibility – for us, to lack humour is almost inhuman. But with Trump, it's a fact. He doesn't even seem to understand what a joke is – his idea of a joke is a crass comment, an illiterate insult, a casual act of cruelty. Trump is a troll. And like all trolls, he is never funny and he never laughs; he only crows or jeers. And scarily, he doesn't just talk in crude, witless insults – he actually thinks in them. His mind is a simple bot-like algorithm of petty prejudices and knee-jerk nastiness. There is never any under-layer of irony, complexity, nuance or depth. It's all surface. Some Americans might see this as refreshingly upfront. Well, we don't. We see it as having no inner world, no soul. And in Britain we traditionally side with David, not Goliath. All our heroes are plucky underdogs: Robin Hood, Dick Whittington, Oliver Twist. Trump is neither plucky, nor an underdog. He is the exact opposite of that. He's not even a spoiled rich-boy, or a greedy fat-cat. He's more a fat white slug. A Jabba the Hutt of privilege. And worse, he is that most unforgivable of all things to the British: a bully. That is, except when he is among bullies; then he suddenly transforms into a snivelling sidekick instead. There are unspoken rules to this stuff – the Queensberry rules of basic decency – and he breaks them all. He punches downwards – which a gentleman should, would, could never do – and every blow he aims is below the belt. He particularly likes to kick the vulnerable or voiceless – and he kicks them when they are down. So the fact that a significant minority – perhaps a third – of Americans look at what he does, listen to what he says, and then think 'Yeah, he seems like my kind of guy' is a matter of some confusion and no little distress to British people, given that: • Americans are supposed to be nicer than us, and mostly are. • You don't need a particularly keen eye for detail to spot a few flaws in the man. This last point is what especially confuses and dismays British people, and many other people too; his faults seem pretty bloody hard to miss. After all, it's impossible to read a single tweet, or hear him speak a sentence or two, without staring deep into the abyss. He turns being artless into an art form; he is a Picasso of pettiness; a Shakespeare of shit. His faults are fractal: even his flaws have flaws, and so on ad infinitum. God knows there have always been stupid people in the world, and plenty of nasty people too. But rarely has stupidity been so nasty, or nastiness so stupid. He makes Nixon look trustworthy and George W look smart. In fact, if Frankenstein decided to make a monster assembled entirely from human flaws – he would make a Trump. And a remorseful Doctor Frankenstein would clutch out big clumpfuls of hair and scream in anguish: ‘My God... what... have... I... created? If being a twat was a TV show, Trump would be the boxed set.

Even Mueller is no hero. by Joe Pompeo

Outrage over report that White House ordered USS John McCain out of Trump's sight [This certainly fits the trump crazy reality!]

Mueller says his investigation did not exonerate Trump He said Justice Department guidelines prevented indicting a sitting president, a remark that suggested it was the rules, not the lack of evidence, that spared Trump from criminal charges. [What bull st! What rules? That some are above the law? That everyone's equal in the eyes of the law but that some are more equal than others? Pathetic!]

Politics USA TODAY Opinion I've warned that impeachment talk is dangerous, but the time has come: Laurence Tribe The consequential decision to impeach should not be made lightly. But Mueller's damning report is an invitation that Congress shouldn't refuse. [Laurence Tribe knows something about constitutional law. For corrupt greedy senile pelosi it should be his way or the highway!] ... Even the most pragmatic legal practitioners tip their hats in respect for the otherwise esoteric 'Laurence Tribe' (ie., those law school/paper chase days)

'Obstruction of justice-the statute making obstruction criminal-prohibits interfering, or attempting to interfere, with a criminal prosecution or an investigation the government's conducting' Napolitano said. The Mueller Report, Napolitano believes, lays out a number of presidential acts that constitute obstruction of justice including:

- When Trump asked Deputy National Security Adviser KT McFarland to write an untruthful letter to the file, knowing the government would subpoena it.
- When Trump asked Corey Lewandowski to get Mueller fired.
- When Trump asked Don McGahn to get Mueller fired and then to lie about it.

- When Trump asked McGahn to go back to Mueller's team and change his testimony.
- When Trump dangled a pardon in front of Michael Cohen, in order to keep Cohen to testifying against him.

‘.....But Trump told a different story to casino regulators who were deciding whether to grant him the lucrative gambling license.

"I don't think there's anything wrong with these people," he said about Shapiro and Sullivan during licensing hearings in 1982, according to "TrumpNation." "Many of them have been in Atlantic City for many, many years and I think they are well thought of." Sullivan's unsavory reputation did not stop Trump from later arranging for him to be hired as a labor negotiator for the Grand Hyatt, a hotel project on Manhattan's East Side, according to People magazine and the Los Angeles Times. Trump also introduced Sullivan to his own banker at Chase, though he declined to guarantee a loan to Sullivan, reported the L.A. Times.

...In his investigative biography, Trump: The Deals and the Downfall, reporter Wayne Barrett wrote that Trump's life "intertwines with the underworld," and he outlined the real-estate developer's numerous alleged ties to organized crime, including that Trump:

- Once met Salerno at the Manhattan townhouse of Roy Cohn, the infamous sidekick to Joe McCarthy who represented both men, according to an eyewitness source who talked to Barrett.

- Was very close to Cohn, whom Barrett describes as Trump's "bridge to the mob."
- Had ties to mob associates Shapiro and Sullivan.
- Paid almost double the market price for property in Atlantic City owned by Salvatore Testa, a capo in the Scarfo crime family.
- Evaded New Jersey state laws banning casino owners from making political contributions by channeling donations to Mike Mathews, then-candidate for mayor of Atlantic City, through Shapiro and another mob-tied associate.
- Failed to disclose to state casino regulators that Trump was the target of a bribery probe in 1979 and was questioned in a 1981 racketeering investigation. Neither federal probe led to criminal charges, noted the Philadelphia Inquirer's David Johnston in a review of the book.

Preferential Treatment For The Donald?

In the book, Barrett also claimed that New Jersey state regulators demonstrated a double standard by granting Trump a casino license while denying licenses to other developers and gambling executives whose conduct was far less troubling than Trump's. In 1985, Hilton Hotels was turned down for a license partly due to the chain's ties to Sidney Korshak, a lawyer with reputed mob connections. But with Trump, the New Jersey Division of Gaming Enforcement (DGE) never bothered to write a report that raised "the possibility that Cohn's mob liaisons . . . might have been used to facilitate Trump construction projects," wrote Barrett'

Business MarketWatch Man credited with calling the 2008 crisis says the next 20 years in the stock market will 'break a lot of hearts' Jeremy Grantham, an investor credited with predicting the 2000 and 2008 downturns, told CNBC on Thursday that investors should get inured to lackluster returns in the stock market for the next two decades, after a century of handsome gains. "In the last 100 years, we're used to delivering perhaps 6%," but the U.S. market will be delivering real returns of about 2% or 3% on average over next 20 years, the value investor and co-founder of Boston-based asset manager GMO told CNBC in a rare interview. Over the past five years, the S&P 500 index (SPX) has produced a compound annual growth rate of 8.1%, the Dow Jones Industrial Average (DJIA) has boasted a CAGR of 9.1%, while the Nasdaq Composite Index (COMP) has registered a compound return of 11.4% over the same period, according to FactSet data.

The U.S. State Department allowed at least seven foreign governments to rent luxury condominiums in New York's Trump World Tower in 2017 without approval from Congress, according to documents and people familiar with the leases, a potential violation of the U.S. Constitution's emoluments clause. The 90-story Manhattan building, part of the real estate empire of Donald Trump, had housed diplomats and foreign officials before the property developer became president. The rental transactions, dating from the early months of Trump's presidency and first revealed by Reuters, could add to mounting scrutiny of his business dealings with foreign governments, which are now the subject of multiple lawsuits.

Lee writes Psychiatrists warn the Mueller report provides more evidence Donald Trump is mentally unfit to serve"Such a mindset of false beliefs in freedom from consequences is extremely dangerous," Bandy X. Lee writes This article originally appeared on Raw Story Three psychiatrists have written an editorial for the Boston Globe warning that special counsel Robert Mueller's report on Russian interference in the 2016 presidential election shows more evidence that President Donald Trump is mentally unfit to hold office. The psychiatrists — Dr. Bandy X. Lee of Yale, Dr. Leonard L. Glass of Harvard Medical School, and Edwin B. Fisher of University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill — argue that Mueller's report provides a disturbing new window into the president's behavior, which is frequently marked by impulsive emotional meltdowns. "The pattern that emerges of the president is one of rash, short-sighted decision-making, without consideration of consequences," they write. "Reckless, impulsive moves that are self-destructive, despite the intention of self-protection, are characteristic of dangerous impairment. They impede Trump's capacity to prioritize national security." They then quote from sections of the Mueller report that illustrate these behaviors, including his efforts to dangle pardons to potential witnesses and his effort to get Mueller fired as special counsel. They say that his ordering former White House counsel Don McGahn to get rid of Mueller should be seen as especially alarming given how inherently self-destructive it was.

$21 TRILLION DOLLARS IS MISSING FROM THE US GOVERNMENT. <https://missingmoney.solari.com> <https://home.solari.com> $21 Trillion dollars is missing from the US government. That is $65,000 per person - as much as the national debt!

"No money shall be drawn from the treasury, but in consequence of appropriations made by law; and a regular statement and account of receipts and expenditures of all public money shall be published from time to time."*~ Article I, Section 9, Clause 7, U.S. Constitution

What's going on? Where is the money? How could this happen? How much has really gone missing? What would happen if a corporation failed to pass an audit like this? Or a taxpayer? This means the Fed and their member banks are transacting government money outside the law. So are the corporate contractors that run the payment systems. So are the Wall Street firms who are selling government securities without full disclosure. Would your banks continue to handle your bank account if you behaved like this? Would your investors continue to buy your securities if you behaved like this? Would your accountant be silent? This is the reason that there is such a strong push to change or tear up the US Constitution. This is why members of the establishment say it is "old," "outdated!" This is why there is such a push for gun control. Don't buy it! We can use the Constitution to get our money and our government back. It is time to enforce the US Constitution. The Solari Report has been covering the missing money since 2000 when Catherine Austin Fitts began to to warn Americans and global investors about mortgage fraud at the US Department of Housing and Development (HUD), the engineering of the housing bubble that lead to trillions more dollars in bailouts and funds missing from the US government starting in fiscal 1998.

Hatch Act of 1939

Long title	An Act to Prevent Pernicious Political Activities
Enacted by	the 76th United States Congress
Effective	August 2, 1939

Legislative history

- Introduced in the Senate as S. 1871 by Carl Hatch (D-NM)
- Signed into law by President Franklin D. Roosevelt on August 2, 1939

The Hatch Act of 1939, officially An Act to Prevent Pernicious Political Activities, is a United States federal law whose main provision prohibits employees in the executive branch of the federal government, except the president, vice-president, and certain designated high-level officials,^[1] from engaging in some forms of political activity. It went into law on August 2, 1939. The law was named for Senator Carl Hatch of New Mexico. It was most recently amended in 2012.

Background

Widespread allegations that local Democratic Party politicians used employees of the Works Progress Administration (WPA) during the congressional elections of 1938 provided the immediate impetus for the passage of the Hatch Act. Criticism centered on swing states such as Kentucky,^[3] Tennessee, Pennsylvania, and Maryland. In Pennsylvania, Republicans and dissident Democrats publicized evidence that Democratic politicians were consulted on the appointment of WPA administrators and case workers and that they used WPA jobs to gain unfair political advantage.^[4] In 1938, a series of newspaper articles exposed WPA patronage, and political contributions in return for employment, prompting an investigation by the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee, headed by Sen. Morris Sheppard, a Texas Democrat.^[5]

Despite that investigation's inconclusive findings, many in both parties determined to take action against the growing power of the WPA and its chief administrator, Harry Hopkins, an intimate of President Roosevelt. The Act was sponsored by Senator Carl Hatch, a Democrat from New Mexico. At the time, Roosevelt was struggling to purge the Democratic party of its more conservative members, who were increasingly aligned with the administration's Republican opponents. The president considered vetoing the legislation or allowing it to become law without his signature, but instead signed it on the last day he could do so. His signing message welcomed the legislation as if he had called for it, and emphasized the protection his administration would provide for political expression on the part of public employees.^[6]

Provisions

The 1939 Act forbids the intimidation or bribery of voters and restricts political campaign activities by federal employees. It prohibits using any public funds designated for relief or public works for electoral purposes. It forbids officials paid with federal funds from using promises of jobs, promotion, financial assistance, contracts, or any other benefit to coerce campaign contributions or political support. It provides that persons below the policy-making level in the executive branch of the federal government must not only refrain from political practices that would be illegal for any citizen, but must abstain from "any active part" in political campaigns, using this language to specify those who are exempt:[7]

- (i) an employee paid from an appropriation for the Executive Office of the President; or
- (ii) an employee appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, whose position is located within the United States, who determines policies to be pursued by the United States in the nationwide administration of Federal laws.

The act also precludes federal employees from membership in "any political organization which advocates the overthrow of our constitutional form of government,"[8] a provision meant to prohibit membership in organizations on the far left and far right, such as the Communist Party USA and the German-American Bund.^[9]

An amendment on July 19, 1940, extended the Act to certain employees of state and local governments whose positions are primarily paid for by federal funds. It has been interpreted to bar political activity on the part of employees of state agencies administering federal unemployment insurance programs and appointed local law enforcement agency officials with oversight of federal grant funds. The Hatch Act bars state and local government employees from running for public office if any federal funds support the position, even if the position is funded almost entirely with local funds.^[10]

The Merit Systems Protection Board and the Office of Special Counsel (OSC) are responsible for enforcement of the Hatch Act.^[11]

Politics USA TODAY Opinion I've warned that impeachment talk is dangerous, but the time has come: Laurence Tribe The consequential decision to impeach should not be made lightly. 'Obstruction of justice-the statute making obstruction criminal-prohibits interfering, or attempting to interfere, with a criminal prosecution or an investigation the government's conducting' Napolitano said. The Mueller Report, Napolitano believes, lays out a number of presidential acts that constitute obstruction of justice including:

- When Trump asked Deputy National Security Adviser KT McFarland to write an untruthful letter to the file, knowing the government would subpoena it.
- When Trump asked Corey Lewandowski to get Mueller fired.
- When Trump asked Don McGahn to get Mueller fired and then to lie about it.

- When Trump asked McGahn to go back to Mueller's team and change his testimony.
- When Trump dangled a pardon in front of Michael Cohen, in order to keep Cohen to testifying against him.

Trump's Russian Laundromat | The New Republic

<http://www.newrepublic.com/article/143586/trumps-russian> Trump's Russian Laundromat How to use Trump Tower and other luxury high-rises to clean dirty money, run an international crime syndicate, and propel a failed real estate developer into the White House

In 1984, a Russian émigré named David Bogatin went shopping for apartments in New York City. The 38-year-old had arrived in America seven years before, with just $3 in his pocket. But for a former pilot in the Soviet Army—his specialty had been shooting down Americans over North Vietnam—he had clearly done quite well for himself. Bogatin wasn't hunting for a place in Brighton Beach, the Brooklyn enclave known as "Little Odessa" for its large population of immigrants from the Soviet Union. Instead, he was fixated on the glitziest apartment building on Fifth Avenue, a gaudy, 58-story edifice with gold-plated fixtures and a pink-marble atrium: Trump Tower.

If the transaction seemed suspicious—multiple apartments for a single buyer who appeared to have no legitimate way to put his hands on that much money—there may have been a reason. At the time, Russian mobsters were beginning to invest in high-end real estate, which offered an ideal vehicle to launder money from their criminal enterprises. “During the ’80s and ’90s, we in the U.S. government repeatedly saw a pattern by which criminals would use condos and high-rises to launder money,” says Jonathan Winer, a deputy assistant secretary of state for international law enforcement in the Clinton administration. “It didn’t matter that you paid too much, because the real estate values would rise, and it was a way of turning dirty money into clean money. It was done very systematically, and it explained why there are so many high-rises where the units were sold but no one is living in them.” When Trump Tower was built, as David Cay Johnston reports in The Making of Donald Trump, it was only the second high-rise in New York that accepted anonymous buyers.

In 1987, just three years after he attended the closing with Trump, Bogatin pleaded guilty to taking part in a massive gasoline-bootlegging scheme with Russian mobsters. After he fled the country, the government seized his five condos at Trump Tower, saying that he had purchased them to “launder money, to shelter and hide assets.” A Senate investigation into organized crime later revealed that Bogatin was a leading figure in the Russian mob in New York. His family ties, in fact, led straight to the top: His brother ran a $150 million stock scam with none other than Semion Mogilevich, whom the FBI considers the “boss of bosses” of the Russian mafia. At the time, Mogilevich—feared even by his fellow gangsters as “the most powerful mobster in the world”—was expanding his multibillion-dollar international criminal syndicate into America.

In 1987, on his first trip to Russia, Trump visited the Winter Palace with Ivana. The Soviets flew him to Moscow—all expenses paid—to discuss building a luxury hotel across from the Kremlin. Maxim Blokhin/TASS

BRITISH WRITER PENS THE BEST DESCRIPTION OF TRUMP I'VE READ

(Caricature of Donald Trump is by DonkeyHotey.)

The following was found at LA Progressive: Someone on Quora asked "Why do some British people not like Donald Trump?"

Nate White, an articulate and witty writer from England wrote the following response:

A few things spring to mind. Trump lacks certain qualities which the British traditionally esteem. For instance, he has no class, no charm, no coolness, no credibility, no compassion, no wit, no warmth, no wisdom, no subtlety, no sensitivity, no self-awareness, no humility, no honour and no grace – all qualities, funnily enough, with which his predecessor Mr. Obama was generously blessed. So for us, the stark contrast does rather throw Trump's limitations into embarrassingly sharp relief. Plus, we like a laugh. And while Trump may be laughable, he has never once said anything wry, witty or even faintly amusing – not once, ever. I don't say that rhetorically, I mean it quite literally: not once, not ever. And that fact is particularly disturbing to the British sensibility – for us, to lack humour is almost inhuman. But with Trump, it's a fact. He doesn't even seem to understand what a joke is – his idea of a joke is a crass comment, an illiterate insult, a casual act of cruelty. Trump is a troll. And like all trolls, he is never funny and he never laughs; he only crows or jeers. And scarily, he doesn't just talk in crude, witless insults – he actually thinks in them. His mind is a simple bot-like algorithm of petty prejudices and knee-jerk nastiness. There is never any under-layer of irony, complexity, nuance or depth. It's all surface. Some Americans might see this as refreshingly upfront. Well, we don't. We see it as having no inner world, no soul. And in Britain we traditionally side with David, not Goliath. All our heroes are plucky underdogs: Robin Hood, Dick Whittington, Oliver Twist. Trump is neither plucky, nor an underdog. He is the exact opposite of that. He's not even a spoiled rich-boy, or a greedy fat-cat. He's more a fat white slug. A Jabba the Hutt of privilege. And worse, he is that most unforgivable of all things to the British: a bully. That is, except when he is among bullies; then he suddenly transforms into a snivelling sidekick instead. There are unspoken rules to this stuff – the Queensberry rules of basic decency – and he breaks them all. He punches downwards – which a gentleman should, would, could never do – and every blow he aims is below the belt. He particularly likes to kick the vulnerable or voiceless – and he kicks them when they are down. So the fact that a significant minority – perhaps a third – of Americans look at what he does, listen to what he says, and then think 'Yeah, he seems like my kind of guy' is a matter of some confusion and no little distress to British people, given that: • Americans are supposed to be nicer than us, and mostly are. • You don't need a particularly keen eye for detail to spot a few flaws in the man. This last point is what especially confuses and dismays British people, and many other people too; his faults seem pretty bloody hard to miss. After all, it's impossible to read a single tweet, or hear him speak a sentence or two, without staring deep into the abyss. He turns being artless into an art form; he is a Picasso of pettiness; a Shakespeare of shit. His faults are fractal: even his flaws have flaws, and so on ad infinitum. God knows there have always been stupid people in the world, and plenty of nasty people too. But rarely has stupidity been so nasty, or nastiness so stupid. He makes Nixon look trustworthy and George W look smart. In fact, if Frankenstein decided to make a monster assembled entirely from human flaws – he would make a Trump. And a remorseful Doctor Frankenstein would clutch out big clumpfuls of hair and scream in anguish: ‘My God... what... have... I... created? If being a twat was a TV show, Trump would be the boxed set.

'Obstruction of justice-the statute making obstruction criminal-prohibits interfering, or attempting to interfere, with a criminal prosecution or an investigation the government's conducting' Napolitano said. The Mueller Report, Napolitano believes, lays out a number of presidential acts that constitute obstruction of justice including:

- When Trump asked Deputy National Security Adviser KT McFarland to write an untruthful letter to the file, knowing the government would subpoena it.
- When Trump asked Corey Lewandowski to get Mueller fired.
- When Trump asked Don McGahn to get Mueller fired and then to lie about it.

- When Trump asked McGahn to go back to Mueller's team and change his testimony.
- When Trump dangled a pardon in front of Michael Cohen, in order to keep Cohen to testifying against him.

<http://albertpeia.com/defraudingamerica3.pdf> WASHPOST Pelosi accuses Trump of 'threats and temper tantrums' in Mexico negotiations While Republicans celebrated news of the White House deal with Mexico, Democrats denounced it as another example of the president fixing a crisis of his own making. [True enough regarding the Hegalian Dialectic, hocus pocus con game approach/methodology of trump et als. After all, Mexico has very little effective capability of actually performing its purported end of the so-called deal. The Hegelian Dialectic is, in short, the critical process by which the ruling elite create a problem, anticipating in advance the reaction that the population will have to the given crisis, and thus conditioning the people that a change is needed. When the population is properly conditioned, the desired agenda of the ruling elite is presented as the solution. The solution isn't intended to solve the problem, but rather to serve as the basis for a new problem or exacerbate the existing one. Then, of course, there's this reality as to timing, beyond the spin. The Mueller Report, Napolitano believes, lays out a number of presidential acts that constitute obstruction of justice including:

- When Trump asked Deputy National Security Adviser KT McFarland to write an untruthful letter to the file, knowing the government would subpoena it.
- When Trump asked Corey Lewandowski to get Mueller fired.
- When Trump asked Don McGahn to get Mueller fired and then to lie about it.

- When Trump asked McGahn to go back to Mueller's team and change his testimony.
- When Trump dangled a pardon in front of Michael Cohen, in order to keep Cohen to testifying against him.

CITING HIS "SERIOUS MENTAL ILLNESS," MULTIPLE PSYCHIATRISTS CALL FOR PRESIDENT TRUMP TO BE IMPEACHED

"Mental illness . . . renders him psychologically incapable of competently discharging the duties of president"

Brad Reed May 31, 2019 3:13PM (UTC)

This article originally appeared on Raw Story

Three psychiatrists have written an editorial for USA Today calling on Congress to impeach President Donald Trump — and their call to remove the president has nothing to do with special counsel Robert Mueller's findings.

The psychiatrists — John Gartner, a former assistant professor at Johns Hopkins University Medical School; Dr. David Reiss, who has been practicing psychiatry for 30 years; and Dr. Steven Buser, a former Air Force psychiatrist — argue that the president's "poor mental health" is a danger to the United States and should be used as a grounds to remove him from office.

“Many of us in the mental health community have been arguing for years that Trump should be removed because he is psychologically unfit,” they write. “We posted a professional petition online stating that ‘in our professional judgment . . . Donald Trump manifests a serious mental illness that renders him psychologically incapable of competently discharging the duties of president of the United States.’”

They go on to document how House Speaker Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) and even some members of his own administration have pondered removing Trump via the 25th amendment in which he’d be declared mentally unfit to perform his duties.

However, they think the most likely remedy at this point is for the House to start up impeachment hearings.

“Pelosi has thus far resisted calls for impeachment on the grounds that it would arouse the ire of Trump’s base going into the 2020 election,” they argue. “But she seems to ignore the opposite risk: Underreacting desensitizes us to the dangerous severity of Trump’s dysfunction, normalizing the abnormal.”

Donald Trump may be the most hated president in Hollywood since...well...ever. In the last month celebrities from Bill Maher to Cher have wished the worst, most vile things on the current president.

Maher hoped First Lady Melania Trump would divorce her husband. Singer/actress Cher wanted to see Trump impeached, “locked up” and assaulted in prison.

Author Fran Lebowitz claimed “impeachment” was just the “beginning of what he deserves” as she fantasized that Trump would be turned “over to the Saudis” to be tortured to death.

The man who predicted Trump's victory says Democrats may have to impeach him to have a chance in 2020

Allan Lichtman doesn't mind swimming against the political tide. Lichtman, a professor at American University in Washington, DC, was the most prominent voice predicting Donald Trump's victory in the run-up to the 2016 election. When Trump won, it marked the 9th(!) straight presidential election where Lichtman had correctly predicted the Electoral College winner. (That's all the way back to 1984, for you math wizards.) In short: Lichtman is someone the political world should listen to. So I reached out to him on Tuesday to see what he thought of Trump's current chances at a second term next ...

'Obstruction of justice-the statute making obstruction criminal-prohibits interfering, or attempting to interfere, with a criminal prosecution or an investigation the government's conducting' Napolitano said. The Mueller Report, Napolitano believes, lays out a number of presidential acts that constitute obstruction of justice including:

- When Trump asked Deputy National Security Adviser KT McFarland to write an untruthful letter to the file, knowing the government would subpoena it.
- When Trump asked Corey Lewandowski to get Mueller fired.
- When Trump asked Don McGahn to get Mueller fired and then to lie about it.

- When Trump asked McGahn to go back to Mueller's team and change his testimony.
- When Trump dangled a pardon in front of Michael Cohen, in order to keep Cohen to testifying against him.

Photo: Michael Ciaglo (Getty Images) Here's to hoping that Trump isn't a sure thing. But if I were a betting man, I'd have to put money on whatever Allan Lichtman says. Who is Allan Lichtman, you ask? Well, he's a political historian and an American University professor but more importantly, he's correctly predicted the last nine presidential elections. Sadly, Lichtman believes that the winner of the 2020 presidential election will be someone that we ...

The Root

The man who predicted Trump's victory says Democrats may have to impeach him to have a chance in 2020

Allan Lichtman doesn't mind swimming against the political tide. Lichtman, a professor at American University in Washington, DC, was the most prominent voice predicting Donald Trump's victory in the run-up to the 2016 election. When Trump won, it marked the 9th(!) straight presidential election where Lichtman had correctly predicted the Electoral College winner. (That's all the way back to 1984, for you math wizards.) In short: Lichtman is someone the political world should listen to. So I reached out to him on Tuesday to see what he thought of Trump's current chances at a second term next ...

- When Trump asked Don McGahn to get Mueller fired and then to lie about it.

Of course, such a leader is attractive in the first place because of similar pathologies in the population, which global economic inequities and massive social injustices in our day could have predicted. Politics The Guardian Bannon described Trump Organization as 'criminal enterprise', Michael Wolff book claims [Because that's what it is!] Former White House adviser says financial investigations will take down president in sequel to Fire and FurySupport the Guardian's independent journalism. Make a contribution today Donald Trump along with his children Eric, Ivanka and Donald Jr arrive for a press conference at Trump Tower in New York in 2017. Photograph: Timothy A Clary/AFP/Getty Images The former White House adviser Steve Bannon has described the Trump Organization as a criminal entity and predicted that investigations into the president's finances will lead to his political downfall, when he is revealed to be "not the billionaire he said he was, just another scumbag". The startling remarks are contained in Siege: Trump Under Fire, the author Michael Wolff's forthcoming account of the second year of the Trump administration. The book, published on 4 June, is a sequel to Fire and Fury: Trump in the White House, which was a bestseller in 2018. The Guardian obtained a copy. In a key passage, Bannon is reported as saying he believes investigations of Donald Trump's financial history will provide proof of the underlying criminality of his eponymous company. Assessing the president's exposure to various investigations, many seeded by the special counsel Robert Mueller during his investigation of Russian election interference, Wolff writes: "Trump was vulnerable because for 40 years he had run what increasingly seemed to resemble a semi-criminal enterprise.” He then quotes Bannon as saying: “I think we can drop the ‘semi’ part.” Bannon, a leading promoter of far-right populism, was a White House adviser until August 2017, when he was removed. He was a major source for Fire and Fury, also first reported by the Guardian. Among other claims in that book, he labelled as “treasonous” an infamous Trump Tower meeting between Donald Trump Jr, Trump’s son-in-law Jared Kushner, campaign manager Paul Manafort and a Russian lawyer. Amid publicity surrounding Fire and Fury, Bannon was ejected from circles close to Trump and his position at Breitbart News. In Siege, Wolff pays close attention to Trump’s financial affairs. Investigations into Trump’s business dealings, spearheaded by the southern district of New York, have shuttered the president’s charity and seen the Trump Organization chief financial officer, Allen Weisselberg, receive immunity for testimony in investigations of Michael Cohen, the former Trump attorney and fixer who is now in jail in New York. This month, the New York Times obtained tax information that showed Trump’s businesses lost more than $1bn from 1985 to 1994. The newspaper subsequently reported that in 2016 and 2017, Deutsche Bank employees flagged concerns over possible money laundering through transactions involving legal entities controlled by the president and Kushner. Some of the transactions involved individuals in Russia. The bank did not act but Congress and New York state are now investigating its relationship with Trump and his family. Deutsche Bank has lent billions to Trump and Kushner companies. Trump has attempted to block House subpoenas for his financial records sent to Deutsche Bank. In Siege, Wolff quotes Bannon saying investigations into Trump’s finances will cut adrift even his most ardent supporters: “This is where it isn’t a witch hunt - even for the hard core, this is where he turns into just a crooked business guy, and one worth $50m instead of $10bn. “Not the billionaire he said he was, just another scumbag.” Wolff also details a 2004 Palm Beach property deal involving the now disgraced financier Jeffrey Epstein and the Putin-friendly oligarch Dmitry Rybolovlev that, the author writes, earned Trump “$55m without putting up a dime”. Epstein, he writes, invited Trump to see a $36m Palm Beach mansion he planned to buy. According to Wolff, Trump went behind Epstein's back to buy the foreclosed property for around $40m, a sum Epstein had reason to believe Trump couldn't raise in his own right, through an entity called Trump Properties LLC, which was entirely financed by Deutsche Bank. Epstein, Wolff writes, knew Trump had been loaning out his name in real estate deals for a fee and suspected that in his case Trump was fronting for the property's real owners. Epstein threatened to expose the deal. As the dispute increased, he found himself under investigation by the Palm Beach police. According to Wolff, Trump made only minor improvements and put the house on the market for $125m. It was purchased for $96m by Rybolovlev, part of a circle of government-aligned industrialists in Russia, thereby earning Trump $55m without risking any of his own money. Wolff presents two theories as to how the deal worked: first, perhaps "Trump merely earned a fee for hiding the real owner - a shadow owner quite possibly being funneled cash by Rybolovlev for other reasons beyond the value of the house". Second, he suggests the real owner of the house and the real buyer were one and the same. "Rybolovlev might have, in effect, paid himself for the house, thereby cleansing the additional $55m for the second purchase of the house." "This," Wolff writes, "was Donald Trump's world of real estate."

Opinion: The abdication of King Trump THE ABDICATION OF KING TRUMP

By Ted Gup Updated 3:41 PM ET, Mon May 27, 2019

Ted Gup is an author and writer-in-residence at Durham University in the UK. He has been a contributor to the Washington Post, New York Times, NPR, Slate, The Guardian, National Geographic and other publications.

The opinions expressed in this commentary are solely those of the author. Read more opinion on CNN.

(CNN) In recent weeks, nearly all the talk in Washington centered around impeachment -- would they or wouldn't they? Now the nation faces a new worry -- abdication. That's right, the President who imagines himself a king, and expects others to treat him the same way, has declared that he will have nothing to do with Congress on infrastructure legislation -- perhaps the one area where he could have won bipartisan support -- so long as the Dems insist on holding him accountable. In effect, Donald Trump has announced that he has abdicated, having no longer any wish to serve. Fittingly, the word "abdication" has two meanings. The first applies to when a monarch relinquishes his throne (in Trump's case, not likely); the second, when anyone in a position of authority chooses to neglect or ignore his duties. The latter is what this petulant President has said he will do so long as anyone dares question him. He has announced, in effect, that America now has a government in absentia.

To understand what happened last week, it is best viewed through the lens of medieval times, which is the domain in which our President/king resides. What House Speaker Nancy Pelosi did by accusing him of a cover-up amounted to what monarchs call "Lese Majeste" -- an insult to the sovereign. (For Trump, there is no real issue of constitutionality. The only separation of powers he seems to recognize is that which he has doled out between his advisers, Jared Kushner and Ivanka Trump, and his son Don Jr.)

Which helps explain the calculated and choreographed Rose Garden hissy fit (complete with posters on the podium) and why it is that Trump, who was always accustomed to getting his own way, has done so again. His threat not to deal with Congress so long as it has the temerity to question him, creates for him the ideal scenario: he gets to hold on to the throne without having to govern, which is most likely what he wanted from the beginning. For all his scorn and righteous indignation, he's probably experiencing a measure of relief and even gratitude that the weight of the crown has been at least temporarily lifted.

Comment: Does President Trump want to be impeached? 02:45

After all, he has never had any interest in actually running things and when he did he often ran them into the ground (count the bankruptcies, and now the debacle of US immigration policy). He is the CEO who is averse to managing, the deal-maker extraordinaire who comes away from the negotiating table empty-handed, having offended lifelong allies to the delight of our adversaries; he is the wizard investor who is said to have lost more money over a decade than practically any other American. His competence rests exclusively on his own testimonials. In Texas they call that "all hat and no cattle."

He is about scoring points, nothing more. It is only fitting that he was the host of the TV program "The Apprentice," a show about sycophants vying for his favor. Trump is himself a lifelong apprentice, first desperately vying for the acceptance of his martinet father, and later, the nation. Look at his life -- he is a success at courtship and wooing; fidelity, not so much.

In many ways, his inauguration was the high point of his presidency. What followed was the bewildering realization that something more was expected of him. He is perpetually on the campaign trail in pursuit of validation, and another win.

SE Cupp: Conway crying sexism is her go-to move 02:14

Trump, the consummate dealmaker, can always walk away from the table, not because he is a canny and tough negotiator, but because he does not seem to care what the outcome is or what the ultimate shape of the deal is. He has no true investment in the deal (the well-being of our country and its people), only in his ego -- it is enough that he appears to have won.

His singular talents span the spectrum from bluff to bluster, which work well enough in inherited wealth and reality TV, but less so for those enterprises requiring actual hands-on governance. And is it not the ultimate expression of executive privilege, the right not to behave as an executive at all? He is drawn to the prerogatives of power, and not what that power can do for others.

So in threatening to eschew all manner of presidential engagement, save the pomp and circumstance for which he lives, he has simply shed all pretense and shown his true self. State dinners, motorcades, the pandering of Fox & Friends and endless ego-stroking were all that he ever wanted. Even on the campaign trail, nothing was further from his mind than finding solutions to the nation's problems.

Smerconish: Trump has no strategy other than be provocative 02:45
He has become a case study in the old adage, "be careful what you wish for." One can be forgiven for wondering if it had even occurred to him that certain responsibilities might come along with holding office. How utterly inconvenient for tweeting and tee-off times.

And now we have the worst of all possible worlds: an abdication that leaves some 327 million Americans in limbo.

The problem is that Trump, in his own inimitable way, has created a most imperfect vacuum for the nation. For the foreseeable future the presidency will be both vacant and occupied, with the country reduced to waiting out his tantrum and deciphering its future from a fusillade of tweets and campaign-like rants.

Meanwhile, the nation's bridges are left to crack, highways buckle, tracks heave, illicit drugs proliferate, medications grow ever-more expensive; diplomats scratch their heads and hind parts, idled by kingly disinterest, allies wonder whether we have their backs or should watch their backs, enemies salivate, polar ice caps slip into the sea, and poor, poor Doral Country Club -- under Trump's storied management -- continues, like the rest of us, to struggle.

Stay up to date...

Now, freed of such noisome distractions as legislation, budgets, and infrastructure, he, like a child with a giant LEGO set, can concentrate on trying to build that wall to the south and dispense with pretending to care about the nation or its ills.

Instead of railing against Speaker Pelosi, he should be writing her a thank you note for handing him an excuse, however implausible, allowing him to shed the duties of the presidency. The saddest and most telling of all his pronouncements since entering office was this: "I loved my previous life."

TRUMP'S 'UNHINGED' BEHAVIOR COULD BE DUE TO 'UNTREATED SYPHILIS,' EXPERT CLAIMS https://news.yahoo.com/trump-unhinged-behavior-could-due-160708680.html?soc_src=hl-viewer&soc_trk=fb An expert in infectious diseases has claimed that President Donald Trump's erratic and bizarre behavior, which has led many mental health professionals to express fears that he could be mentally ill, could be part of the symptoms of syphilis, a sexually transmitted disease (STD). The shocking suggestion that Trump could be exhibiting the symptoms of dementia due to syphilis was put forward by Steven Beutler, an expert in infectious diseases, in an article titled, "A Medical Theory For Trump's Bizarre Behavior," published on Friday by the New Republic. "Many mental health professionals believe the president is ill. But what if the cause is an untreated STD?" '... Neurosyphilis is often misdiagnosed because it mimics non-infectious psychiatric illness. And according to Beutler, all of the symptoms of neurosyphilis, including "patchy hair loss," have been observed in Trump. "Commonly recognized symptoms include irritability, loss of ability to concentrate, delusional thinking, and grandiosity. Memory, insight, and judgment can become impaired. Insomnia may occur... Dementia... and patchy hair loss can also be seen in later stages of syphilis." Beutler admitted that it is impossible to determine from a distance that Trump has syphilis. He insisted, however, that part of his training as a medical professional is making "differential diagnosis" based on incomplete information. "Part of my training is to ask the right questions to get a sense of what the problem might be and make a list of possible diagnoses that could explain the problem," he wrote. "This is called the 'differential diagnosis,'" he continued. "From there, additional questions, examinations, and tests are performed that narrow down the list, usually to one unifying diagnosis." ...'

Donald Trump: stable genius

(CNN)If Washington politics were a movie, this week might be the time you turn to your companion and say, "Who writes this stuff?":

A President and "world-class deal maker," marveled Frida Ghitis, who demonstrates with a "temper tantrum," that he can't make deals. Who storms out of meetings with congressional leaders while insisting he's calm (and lines up his top aides to confirm it for the cameras). Who says, "I don't do cover-ups," with his administration on information lockdown -- offering justifications "that wouldn't pass muster in an episode of 'The Simpsons,'" remarked Julian Zelizer.

And who launches into a tirade -- in the middle of an event about aid to farmers -- to say I'm not crazy, she's crazy.

"She" being House Speaker Nancy Pelosi, who offered Trump her thoughts and prayers, and wished aloud that someone would get him an intervention. There was no need, I'm an "extremely stable genius," Trump told reporters, adding that he'll talk to Democrats when they stop investigating him. He's right, suggested Marc Thiessen in the Washington Post: "Nancy Pelosi can't accuse him of engaging in a coverup in the morning and expect him to negotiate with her on a $2 trillion infrastructure package in the afternoon."

By week's end, Trump and supporters were previewing what critics believed his re-election campaign would look like. He retweeted a Fox Business Network video mashup of Pelosi stammering during a news conference on Capitol Hill on Thursday. "It's pathetic," protested SE Cupp, adding "childish" and "impotent." "But it's disgusting and disturbing to watch the president and leader of the free world do it time and time again."

GOP Ex-Lawmaker Demands Impeachment Of Donald Trump, Resignation Of Mike Pence Lee Moran HuffPost•May 24, 2019 Former Rep. Tom Coleman (R-Mo.) has penned a blistering op-ed calling for the impeachment of "illegitimate" President Donald Trump. Coleman, in his piece for The Kansas City Star published Thursday titled "Trump, Pence are illegitimate. Impeach them," argued that if Trump was impeached, then Vice President Mike Pence should resign as otherwise "the lingering stench of corruption" would trail his administration. Special counsel Robert Mueller's report, Coleman wrote, showed Trump and members of his team had "on multiple occasions welcomed Russian interference on his behalf during the 2016 presidential campaign." Therefore, Coleman reasoned, "the president's election victory brought forth nothing less than an illegitimate president." Coleman, who has criticized Trump in the past and opposed his candidacy, was voted out of Congress after 17 years in 1993. He noted in his op-ed that House Democrats were divided over whether to begin impeachment proceedings. But "critical times require exceptional leadership," he wrote, suggesting the "only viable option available" is for the Democratic-controlled House "to open its own investigation, hold public hearings and then determine if they should pursue removal of the president through impeachment." "The public would conclude Democrats are no better than the Republicans who have enabled Trump for the past two years” if they did not move to impeach him, Coleman wrote. He concluded with this warning: It could hand Trump a second term. Failure to pursue impeachment is to condone wrongdoing. To condone wrongdoing is to encourage more of it. To encourage wrongdoing is to give up on the rule of law and our democracy. To give up on the rule of law and democracy invites autocracy and eventually dictatorship. History has taught us this outcome. In my lifetime, it has occurred in other places including the Soviet Union and Germany, as well as in Russia and Venezuela today. Coleman... Continue reading on HuffPost

Dow rises 150 points at start of Friday action but poised for 5th weekly loss in a row ahead of Memorial Day U.S. stocks opened higher on Friday, capping a mostly downbeat week for equities, weighed by U.S.-China trade tensions, which put the three main indexes on track to post consecutive weekly losses heading into the Memorial Day holiday. The Dow Jones Industrial Average (DJIA) rose 150 points, or 0.6%, at 25,651, set for a weekly slump of 1.1% and its fifth straight weekly loss, as of Thursday's close, the S&P 500 index (SPX) rose 17 points, or 0.6%, at 2,839, poised for a 1.3% weekly skid. The main political news for the day centered on apparent softening of trade tensions between the U.S. and China and Theresa May's announced resignation as U.K. prime minister amid her failed attempts at Brexit.

Susan Edelman Blank "Kernberg described malignant narcissism as a syndrome characterized by a narcissistic personality disorder (NPD), antisocial features, paranoid traits, and egosyntonic aggression. Other symptoms may include an absence of conscience, a psychological need for power, and a sense of importance (grandiosity)."

Robert Reich The pattern is eerily similar to 2007 and 1928 (remember what happened immediately after those years).

- 1. Price-earnings ratios on the stock market are 28 to one – just what they were in 1928.
- 2. Households are taking on even more debt. Credit card delinquency rates in the first quarter of the year have hit the highest level since 2012, driven partly by a spike in overdue payments by people ages 18–29, according to the New York Federal Reserve. We're also seeing a spike in home refinancings – just as we did in the years leading up to the crash of 2008.
- 3. Another parallel: Corporations are deep in debt. The Federal Reserve warned that corporate America is taking on too much debt. Junk bonds are soaring once again. According to Bloomberg, "deeply indebted companies are borrowing even more to pay equity holders."

Bottom line: Watch your wallets. The years after 1928 and 2007 weren't pretty.

Lee writes Psychiatrists warn the Mueller report provides more evidence Donald Trump is mentally unfit to serve”Such a mindset of false beliefs in freedom from consequences is extremely dangerous,” Bandy X. Lee writes This article originally appeared on Raw Story Three psychiatrists have written an editorial for the Boston Globe warning that special counsel Robert Mueller’s report on Russian interference in the 2016 presidential election shows more evidence that President Donald Trump is mentally unfit to hold office. The psychiatrists — Dr. Bandy X. Lee of Yale, Dr. Leonard L. Glass of Harvard Medical School, and Edwin B. Fisher of University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill — argue that Mueller’s report provides a disturbing new window into the president’s behavior, which is frequently marked by impulsive emotional meltdowns. “The pattern that emerges of the president is one of rash, short-sighted decision-making, without consideration of consequences,” they write. “Reckless, impulsive moves that are self-destructive, despite the intention of self-protection, are characteristic of dangerous impairment. They impede Trump’s capacity to prioritize national security.” They then quote from sections of the Mueller report that illustrate these behaviors, including his efforts to dangle pardons to potential witnesses and his effort to get Mueller fired as special counsel. They say that his ordering former White House counsel Don McGahn to get rid of Mueller should be seen as especially alarming given how inherently self-destructive it was.

The party told you to reject the evidence of your eyes and ears. It was their final, most essential command. His heart sank as he thought of the enormous power arrayed against him, the ease with which any Party intellectual would overthrow him in debate, the subtle arguments which he would not be able to understand, much less answer. And yet he was in the right! They were wrong and he was right.

Lee writes This article originally appeared on Raw Story Three psychiatrists have written an editorial for the Boston Globe warning that special counsel Robert Mueller's report on Russian interference in the 2016 presidential election shows more evidence that President Donald Trump is mentally unfit to hold office. The psychiatrists — Dr. Bandy X. Lee of Yale, Dr. Leonard L. Glass of Harvard Medical School, and Edwin B. Fisher of University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill — argue that Mueller's report provides a disturbing new window into the president's behavior, which is frequently marked by impulsive emotional meltdowns. "The pattern that emerges of the president is one of rash, short-sighted decision-making, without consideration of consequences," they write. "Reckless, impulsive moves that are self-destructive, despite the intention of self-protection, are characteristic of dangerous impairment. They impede Trump's capacity to prioritize national security." They then quote from sections of the Mueller report that illustrate these behaviors, including his efforts to dangle pardons to potential witnesses and his effort to get Mueller fired as special counsel. They say that his ordering former White House counsel Don McGahn to get rid of Mueller should be seen as especially alarming given how inherently self-destructive it was.

Susan Edelman Blank As a psychotherapist, I read the pro-Trump comments with both fascination and horror as they corroborate the work of Robert Jay Lifton, who coined the term “malignant normality” to describe how so-called ordinary Germans could fall in line with the fascist doctrine of Nazism without blinking an eye. To those who said it can’t happen here, just read these nationalistic, nonsensical pro-Trump comments; it is happening right before our eyes.

Susan Edelman Blank Carol Rzepny yes, Carol, many Germans did not fall in line with the Nazis, many joined the underground, others hid Jews, many tried in small ways to resist, and others kept silent and prayed for deliverance from evil. The psychological makeup of today’s Trump resisters is similar to the psychological makeup of the Nazi resisters of the 30’s and 40’s. I just pray Trump can be stopped.

GOP Rep. Amash becomes first Republican to call for Trump's impeachment

Washington (CNN) Michigan GOP Rep. Justin Amash said Saturday he had concluded President Donald Trump committed "impeachable conduct" and accused Attorney General William Barr of intentionally misleading the public.

Amash's comments recommending Congress pursue obstruction of justice charges against Trump were the first instance of a sitting Republican in Congress calling for Trump's impeachment.

Justin Amash is the loneliest Republican in Congress

Amash is a rare GOP critic of Trump and previously said Trump's conduct in pressuring then-FBI Director James Comey could merit impeachment. In a Twitter thread on Saturday, Amash said he believed "few members of Congress even read" special counsel Robert Mueller's report and that the report itself established "multiple examples" of Trump committing obstruction of justice.

"Contrary to Barr's portrayal, Mueller's report reveals that President Trump engaged in specific actions and a pattern of behavior that meet the threshold for impeachment," Amash said in a string of messages on Twitter.

Democratic Rep. Rashida Tlaib, also of Michigan, responded to Amash's Twitter thread later Saturday and invited him to join her impeachment resolution.

".@justinamash come find me in 1628 Longworth. I've got an impeachment investigation resolution you're going to want to cosponsor," Tlaib tweeted.

Amash -- a libertarian conservative elected during the Tea Party wave of 2010 -- was a founding member of the House Freedom Caucus, a key bloc of Republicans who worked to shift the GOP caucus to the right on many issues, but in the Trump era, he has found himself breaking with his conservative allies who have embraced the President.

Amash said on Saturday that he made his conclusions "only after having read Mueller's redacted report carefully and completely, having read or watched pertinent statements and testimony, and having discussed this matter with my staff, who thoroughly reviewed materials and provided me with further analysis."

He said Barr misled the public in a range of venues regarding the Mueller report, a charge Democrats and others have made repeatedly that the attorney general has disputed.

"Barr's misrepresentations are significant but often subtle, frequently taking the form of sleight-of-hand qualifications or logical fallacies, which he hopes people will not notice," Amash said.

Amash said "contrary to Barr's portrayal," Trump's actions "meet the threshold for impeachment" and that anyone without the unique legal protections of the presidency would be facing an indictment.

He argued that it was Congress' role to move forward with impeachment and accused people on both sides of the aisle of political motives, saying they had shifted "their views 180 degrees ... depending on whether they're discussing (former President) Bill Clinton or Donald Trump."

"Our system of checks and balances relies on each branch's jealously guarding its powers and upholding its duties under our Constitution," Amash tweeted. "When loyalty to a political party or to an individual trumps loyalty to the Constitution, the Rule of Law -- the foundation of liberty -- crumbles."

CNN's Clare Foran and Ashley Killough contributed to this report.

Yale psychiatrist explains how to deprogram Trump supporters who've been sucked into the vortex of his lies

Tana Ganeva

LAS VEGAS NEVADA, DECEMBER 14, 2015: Republican presidential candidate Donald Trump speaks at campaign event at

Even as President Donald Trump is battered by controversies, including a recent report that his self-proclaimed business acumen is largely a sham — he lost money starting in the 1980s — his approval ratings among his supporters remain high.

Raw Story spoke with Dr. Bandy X. Lee, a forensic psychiatrist at Yale School of Medicine, about why Trump supporters are so loyal to the President. She and several co-authors recently submitted an analysis of what the Mueller report revealed about the President’s mental health, covered here and here. Their summary of the report was the number one article in the

Dr. Lee has also been a vocal critic of the American Psychiatric Association’s alteration of the Goldwater rule since the Trump administration, so much so that she held a conference on it in April 2017, inviting the most preeminent psychiatrists in the nation.

Their critique of the altered Goldwater rule led to a book in defiance of the change, which became the New York Times bestseller, “The Dangerous Case of Donald Trump.” Since then, thousands of mental health professionals joined her to form the World Mental Health Coalition (dangerouscase.org), intended as an alternative to the American Psychiatric Association, and named her president.

Raw Story: If you had the chance to speak with Trump supporters, what would you say to them?

Dr. Bandy X. Lee: I am already in contact with many, and have worked with, shared meals with, and “hung out” with several while working in Alabama. Contrary to the stereotype, they are often some of the most humane and most innocent people I have met, which is why they trusted so easily.

It is heartbreaking to consider how they have been exploited—over the years by a politics that retains power not by serving them but through psychological manipulation, and now through a predatory president.

I would say to them, it has become time to ask ourselves: do we have the self-respect to demand a leader who is even capable of leading? Our recent test on his capacity was intended as a service to the public, based on the rigorous information in Robert Mueller's report: he failed on every criterion. We also just learned of the president's spectacular business failures during the years he flaunted himself as being the biggest success, while he lost more than any other American on record.

It is difficult to make this shift, especially when we have invested so much, but after a while, it takes less energy to change than to continue making excuses to protect "our guy."

Policy-wise, he is hurting his everyday supporters the most (not the billionaire supporters). If we stopped to think for a moment—doesn't it bother us that he deceived us into believing he was a successful businessman, the only qualification he brought for being a successful politician, when all he did was go to his father when in trouble? Doesn't it disturb us that he so lies, cheats, and defrauds the public, that it is safer to assume that every word out of his mouth is the opposite of what is true? Should we tolerate a president whom more than 800 former federal prosecutors, of both parties, would call a criminal?

Raw Story: Is there anything you would advise them to do?

Dr. Bandy X. Lee: The transition will be gradual and painful, but the moment they realize they hold the power and do not have to submit to a strong authority to be safe, they won't be so easily fooled any more. This is all understandable; working in the criminal justice system, I know how good serial predators can be—they can create powerful emotional bonds.

This is what they thrive on.

I rather hold responsible the institutions that propped him up for their short-term profits, and the American Psychiatric Association is chief among them. Given that the insidious effects of mental pathology defined this whole presidency, the Association was in a unique position to prevent vast suffering. Psychiatrists understand not just mental illness but criminal behavior, violence, capacity to serve in an office, and many other things. By aggressively shaping a milieu where mental health professionals would not be able to share their knowledge as a national mental health crisis was unfolding, the Association instead primed the public to become the president's prey.

Raw Story: Those are strong words. How do you make that claim?

Dr. Bandy X. Lee: The public has a right to know what the American Psychiatric Association has done. Imagine if a high official contracted Ebola. One would not think twice about deferring to doctors about proper management. The doctors do not make political decisions but medical ones, and based on recommendations, political bodies would coordinate. The important, immediate issue at hand is to contain the disease and spread of harm.

I have described the current president's condition as worse than Ebola—and yet, imagine if the Ebola doctors were prohibited from even uttering a word of caution, for fear of upsetting the high official, and leaving the disease to its natural course. By propagating popular misconceptions that mental health issues are somehow different than other health issues, that it is imaginary or subjective—or worse, just an insult—the APA has effectively stigmatized the entire field of mental health. By allowing a serious condition to continue without even educating the public, it has allowed pathology to spread unchecked.

Raw Story: Why did you decide to boycott the very symposium you helped to organize at the American Psychiatric Association?

Dr. Bandy X. Lee: I have lost faith in the Association's ability to have an honest discussion. Psychiatrists were never supposed to be beholden to public figures—our primary responsibilities are to patients and to society. The actual Goldwater rule says this: work to improve the community and public health, and when asked about a public figure, educate the public—just don't diagnose.

Instead, the APA expanded the “don’t diagnose” part out of proportion to silence an entire profession and to change public expectations. Its timing and aggressive public relations campaign make clear that it intended to protect Donald Trump, not ethics.

That said, I should clarify that the leadership did this by fiat, against member protests. We are now in a constitutional crisis, about to enter catastrophic wars, and economic breakdown is looming—all in ways that were wholly predictable from having a mentally unstable president.

Science now shows that even diagnosis does not require a personal interview. By distorting ethics and falsely intimidating experts, it deprived the public of critical knowledge at a critical time. Edmund Burke said, “All tyranny needs to gain a foothold is for people of good conscience to remain silent.” And what better way to serve tyranny than to institutionalize this silence?

Psychiatrists warn the Mueller report provides more evidence Donald Trump is mentally unfit to serve "Such a mindset of false beliefs in freedom from consequences is extremely dangerous," Bandy X. Lee writes Psychiatrists warn the Mueller report provides more evidence Donald Trump is mentally unfit to serve"Such a mindset of false beliefs in freedom from consequences is extremely dangerous," Bandy X. Lee writes This article originally appeared on Raw Story Three psychiatrists have written an editorial for the Boston Globe warning that special counsel Robert Mueller's report on Russian interference in the 2016 presidential election shows more evidence that President Donald Trump is mentally unfit to hold office. The psychiatrists — Dr. Bandy X. Lee of Yale, Dr. Leonard L. Glass of Harvard Medical School, and Edwin B. Fisher of University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill — argue that Mueller's report provides a disturbing new window into the president's behavior, which is frequently marked by impulsive emotional meltdowns. "The pattern that emerges of the president is one of rash, short-sighted decision-making, without consideration of consequences," they write. "Reckless, impulsive moves that are self-destructive, despite the intention of self-protection, are characteristic of dangerous impairment. They impede Trump's capacity to prioritize national security." They then quote from sections of the Mueller report that illustrate these behaviors, including his efforts to dangle pardons to potential witnesses and his effort to get Mueller fired as special counsel. They say that his ordering former White House counsel Don McGahn to get rid of Mueller should be seen as especially alarming given how inherently self-destructive it was.

Susan Edelman Blank As a psychotherapist, I read the pro-Trump comments with both fascination and horror as they corroborate the work of Robert Jay Lifton, who coined the term “malignant normality” to describe how so-called ordinary Germans could fall in line with the fascist doctrine of Nazism without blinking an eye. To those who said it can’t happen here, just read these nationalistic, nonsensical pro-Trump comments; it is happening right before our eyes.

Susan Edelman Blank Carol Rzepny yes, Carol, many Germans did not fall in line with the Nazis, many joined the underground, others hid Jews, many tried in small ways to resist, and others kept silent and prayed for deliverance from evil. The psychological makeup of today’s Trump resisters is similar to the psychological makeup of the Nazi resisters of the 30’s and 40’s. I just pray Trump can be stopped.

$21 TRILLION DOLLARS IS MISSING FROM THE US GOVERNMENT. <https://missingmoney.solari.com> <https://home.solari.com> $21 Trillion dollars is missing from the US government. That is $65,000 per person - as much as the national debt!

“No money shall be drawn from the treasury, but in consequence of appropriations made by law; and a regular statement and account of receipts and expenditures of all public money shall be published from time to time.*~ Article I, Section 9, Clause 7, U.S. Constitution

What's going on? Where is the money? How could this happen? How much has really gone missing? What would happen if a corporation failed to pass an audit like this? Or a taxpayer? This means the Fed and their member banks are transacting government money outside the law. So are the corporate contractors that run the payment systems. So are the Wall Street firms who are selling government securities without full disclosure. Would your banks continue to handle your bank account if you behaved like this? Would your investors continue to buy your securities if you behaved like this? Would your accountant be silent? This is the reason that there is such a strong push to change or tear up the US Constitution. This is why members of the establishment say it is "old," "outdated!" This is why there is such a push for gun control. Don't buy it! We can use the Constitution to get our money and our government back. It is time to enforce the US Constitution. The Solari Report has been covering the missing money since 2000 when Catherine Austin Fitts began to warn Americans and global investors about mortgage fraud at the US Department of Housing and Development (HUD), the engineering of the housing bubble that led to trillions more dollars in bailouts and funds missing from the US government starting in fiscal 1998.

Opinions Democrats are complicit if they don't impeach Trump

Psychiatrists warn the Mueller report provides more evidence Donald Trump is mentally unfit to serve "Such a mindset of false beliefs in freedom from consequences is extremely dangerous," Bandy X. Lee writes Psychiatrists warn the Mueller report provides more evidence Donald Trump is mentally unfit to serve "Such a mindset of false beliefs in freedom from consequences is extremely dangerous," Bandy X. Lee writes This article originally appeared on Raw Story Three psychiatrists have written an editorial for the Boston Globe warning that special counsel Robert Mueller's report on Russian interference in the 2016 presidential election shows more evidence that President Donald Trump is mentally unfit to hold office. The psychiatrists — Dr. Bandy X. Lee of Yale, Dr. Leonard L. Glass of Harvard Medical School, and Edwin B. Fisher of University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill — argue that Mueller's report provides a disturbing new window into the president's behavior, which is frequently marked by impulsive emotional meltdowns. "The pattern that emerges of the president is one of rash, short-sighted decision-making, without consideration of consequences," they write. "Reckless, impulsive moves that are self-destructive, despite the intention of self-protection, are characteristic of dangerous impairment. They impede Trump's capacity to prioritize national security." They then quote from sections of the Mueller report that illustrate these behaviors, including his efforts to dangle pardons to potential witnesses and his effort to get Mueller fired as special counsel. They say that his ordering former White House counsel Don McGahn to get rid of Mueller should be seen as especially alarming given how inherently self-destructive it was.

Politics Reuters Trump has asserted executive privilege over entire Mueller report: Justice Dept official

Politics The Daily Beast Samantha Bee Mocks Trump's Billion Dollar Loss: 'The Best at Being Terrible' While President Donald Trump “claims to be the best business boy,” Samantha Bee told viewers Wednesday night that he’s really just the “best at being terrible.” The Full Frontal host was referring to the revelations from this week’s New York Times report that showed Trump lost more than a billion dollars between 1985 and 1994. As The Daily Beast’s David Cay Johnston explained on MSNBC, in one of those years Trump accounted for two cents of every dollar lost in the entire American economy. “I used to think Donald Trump’s fortunes took a dip in the early ‘90s recession,” Bee said. “Now I think maybe he was the early '90s recession." In response to the report, Trump has said that he intentionally lost the money, tweeting, "You always wanted to show losses for tax purposes" adding, "almost all real estate developers did." "But was Trump really just pretending to lose all that money?" Bee asked. "I call as my next witness, Ivanka Trump," she said, adding a comical gasp that hinted at her complicated past with the first daughter. The host cut to a clip from the 2003 documentary Born Rich in which Ivanka tells a story about her father pointing out a homeless man outside Trump Tower and saying, "'You know, that guy has 8 billion dollars more than me,' because he was in such extreme debt at that point." "And that is why it was OK for him to take that man's change cup," Bee joked. "Look, the only thing that Donald Trump really had going for him as a candidate was that he was supposed to be a great businessman. Now we know that not only is he a bad businessman, he is one of the worst in American history." To the Republican "party of fiscal responsibility," Bee asked, "Are you really going to choose this money pit over the Constitution?" Read more at The Daily Beast.

Susan Edelman Blank As a psychotherapist, I read the pro-Trump comments with both fascination and horror as they corroborate the work of Robert Jay Lifton, who coined the term “malignant normality” to describe how so-called ordinary Germans could fall in line with the fascist doctrine of Nazism without blinking an eye. To those who said it can't happen here, just read these nationalistic, nonsensical pro-Trump comments; it is happening right before our eyes.

Susan Edelman Blank Carol Rzepny yes, Carol, many Germans did not fall in line with the Nazis, many joined the underground, others hid Jews, many tried in small ways to resist, and others kept silent and prayed for deliverance from evil. The psychological makeup of today's Trump resisters is similar to the psychological makeup of the Nazi resisters of the 30's and 40's. I just pray Trump can be stopped.

$21 TRILLION DOLLARS IS MISSING FROM THE US GOVERNMENT. <https://missingmoney.solari.com> <https://home.solari.com> $21 Trillion dollars is missing from the US government. That is $65,000 per person - as much as the national debt!

“No money shall be drawn from the treasury, but in consequence of appropriations made by law; and a regular statement and account of receipts and expenditures of all public money shall be published from time to time.”~ Article I, Section 9, Clause 7, U.S. Constitution

What's going on? Where is the money? How could this happen? How much has really gone missing? What would happen if a corporation failed to pass an audit like this? Or a taxpayer? This means the Fed and their member banks are transacting government money outside the law. So are the corporate contractors that run the payment systems. So are the Wall Street firms who are selling government securities without full disclosure. Would your banks continue to handle your bank account if you behaved like this? Would your investors continue to buy your securities if you behaved like this? Would your accountant be silent? This is the reason that there is such a strong push to change or tear up the US Constitution. This is why members of the establishment say it is "old," "outdated!" This is why there is such a push for gun control. Don't buy it! We can use the Constitution to get our money and our government back. It is time to enforce the US Constitution. The Solari Report has been covering the missing money since 2000 when Catherine Austin Fitts began to warn Americans and global investors about mortgage fraud at the US Department of Housing and Development (HUD), the engineering of the housing bubble that led to trillions more dollars in bailouts and funds missing from the US government starting in fiscal 1998.

Business MarketWatch Man credited with calling the 2008 crisis says the next 20 years in the stock market will 'break a lot of hearts' Jeremy Grantham, an investor credited with predicting the 2000 and 2008 downturns, told CNBC on Thursday that investors should get inured to lackluster returns in the stock market for the next two decades, after a century of handsome gains. "In the last 100 years, we're used to delivering perhaps 6%," but the U.S. market will be delivering real returns of about 2% or 3% on average over next 20 years, the value investor and

$21 TRILLION DOLLARS IS MISSING FROM THE US GOVERNMENT. <https://missingmoney.solari.com> <https://home.solari.com> $21 Trillion dollars is missing from the US government. That is $65,000 per person - as much as the national debt!

“No money shall be drawn from the treasury, but in consequence of appropriations made by law; and a regular statement and account of receipts and expenditures of all public money shall be published from time to time.~ Article I, Section 9, Clause 7, U.S. Constitution

What's going on? Where is the money? How could this happen? How much has really gone missing? What would happen if a corporation failed to pass an audit like this? Or a taxpayer? This means the Fed and their member banks are transacting government money outside the law. So are the corporate contractors that run the payment systems. So are the Wall Street firms who are selling government securities without full disclosure. Would your banks continue to handle your bank account if you behaved like this? Would your investors continue to buy your securities if you behaved like this? Would your accountant be silent? This is the reason that there is such a strong push to change or tear up the US Constitution. This is why members of the establishment say it is "old," "outdated!" This is why there is such a push for gun control. Don't buy it! We can use the Constitution to get our money and our government back. It is time to enforce the US Constitution. The Solari Report has been covering the missing money since 2000 when Catherine Austin Fitts began to warn Americans and global investors about mortgage fraud at the US Department of Housing and Development (HUD), the engineering of the housing bubble that led to trillions more dollars in bailouts and funds missing from the US government starting in fiscal 1998.

The U.S. State Department allowed at least seven foreign governments to rent luxury condominiums in New York's Trump World Tower in 2017 without approval from Congress, according to documents and people familiar with the leases, a potential violation of the U.S. Constitution's emoluments clause. The 90-story Manhattan building, part of the real estate empire of Donald Trump, had housed diplomats and foreign officials before the property developer became president. The rental transactions, dating from the early months of Trump's presidency and first revealed by Reuters, could add to mounting scrutiny of his business dealings with foreign governments, which are now the subject of multiple lawsuits.

(CNN)President Donald Trump traveled to Wisconsin on Saturday night to rally his supporters, and -- pointedly -- to miss the annual White House Correspondents' Dinner, which he has yet to attend as President.

Trump, continuing a trend of late, made a slew of questionable claims, bashed the media and loudly proclaimed his rightness about, well, everything. I went through the transcript and picked out the most, uh, outstanding, lines from his Green Bay rally. They're below.

THE POINT -- NOW ON YOUTUBE!

In each episode of his weekly YouTube show, Chris Cillizza will delve a little deeper into the surreal world of politics. Click to subscribe!

1. "The strength of our nation is found in the heart of our people, so true."
This is a very common Trump speech pattern. He reads a line from the teleprompter. And because he hasn't read the speech in advance, he responds by agreeing with his own words that he is seeing for the first time with a "so true." And away we go!

2. "We're going to get to the bottom of a lot of things happening in our country."

So true.

3. "And we're now the number one economy anywhere in the world and it's not even close."

This is, generally, true!

4. "By the way, Saturday night, is there anyplace that's more fun than a Trump rally?"

I might be able to think of one or two places. ...

5. "Can you imagine? Sleepy Joe? Crazy Bernie."

Why did Trump suddenly start talking about his potential 2020 opponents? Oh, I have no idea. But the crowd LOVED it.

6. "I think Pocahontas, she's finished, she's out. She's gone. No, when it was found that I had more Indian blood in me than she did."

Trump is referring to Massachusetts Sen. Elizabeth Warren with this taunt. And, yes, the crowd LOVED it.

7. "But can you imagine any of these people up here doing what I'm doing? They'd be 200 people show up if they were president. If they were president, nobody would show up."

It's fascinating that Trump understands the job of being president as getting lots of people to show up to rallies.

8. "The people that get it wrong the most are the weather forecasters and the political analysts."

He's not wrong!

9. "People are standing out 24 hours ago, 32 hours ago outside. Who stood out there for 24 hours?"

This comes from the Green Bay Press Gazette: "A line of supporters wound around the Resch Center; some people said they'd waited outside overnight." So true.

10. "We had 69,000 people sign up to come in. What does this place hold? Like 10,000 or 12,000 or whatever. Whatever it holds. We set the record." What record? Also, I have no idea how Trump came up with this 69,000 number. Here's how a local TV affiliate described the crowd: "This was a free event that anyone could attend, but Secret Service detail said only the first 10,000 people are being let into the center."

11. "I don't know what the hell it holds, but we just set the record." According to the internet, the Resch Center holds 10,500 people. But Trump has the record. Bigly.

12. "That's always dangerous. He said, 'Yes, it is, sir.' It's always dangerous. Yes. You ask like, 'No, sir.' I'm dead. They will take -- they will take that answer. That'll be headlines."

Let me translate this for you people who don't speak word salad: Trump brought the owner of the Resch Center onstage and asked if it was a record crowd. (Because that is very important to how he does his job.) The owner said it was a record. Trump was relieved because it would have been bad headlines if it was not a record.

13. "Now, this is the record. We set records everywhere."

It is VERY important for you to know that Donald Trump set a record. VERY.

14. "The greatest political hoax in American history, it really has been." For the record: The Mueller probe resulted in 199 charges against 37 people and entities. Seven people pleaded guilty to a variety of crimes while five were sentenced to prison. So, not really a "hoax."

15. "The USMCA like the song 'YMCA,' right?"

Ladies and gentlemen, the President of the United States!

16. "Can you believe I'm a politician? I can't even."

Honestly, same.

17. "You know, Canada, we love the song, 'Oh Canada.' Let's sing, 'Oh Canada,' right. We love the show."

WHAT. IS. HAPPENING. (And, no, there isn't much context to add here. He just started talking about Canada.)

18. "But who knows, I always say, 'Who knows?' Because who the hell knows?"

[nods head slowly]

19. "Don't forget, we are the piggy bank that everybody is robbing. We're the ones. We're the piggy bank that everybody is stealing from and robbing and taking advantage of."

USA! USA! USA!

20. "This I don't -- I tell you what, you know, people say, 'Oh, he wants to take over the country. He wants to extend.' "

I think Trump is ruling out changing the constitutional limit on a President serving two terms here. So there's that.

21. "You're right, USA. We love USA and that's right."

"I love lamp." -- Brick Tamland

22. "If you look at what's happened with the scum that's leaving the very top of government."

Just the President of the United States referring to top-level staff as "scum." Super normal stuff!!!

23. "The dirty -- these were dirty cops. These were dirty players."

Trump, presumably, is referring to longtime officials at the Department of Justice like James Comey and Robert Mueller.

24. "I mean we're draining the swamp, but are we having a good time or what?"

Who said you can't have fun draining the swamp? Not me!

25. "And look at all those beautiful red hats and some white ones. Some white. Look at that. Those are -- that's a lot of red hats. But you do have the white ones too, right?"

Trump slams leaders of 'Dues Sucking firefighters' union after Biden endorsement [trump is so sick, so mentally ill! The question is, who has their backs? Only those as crazy as trump would say trump!]

Mark Steven Domingo, an Army veteran, was arrested Friday night after he took delivery of what he thought was a live bomb from an undercover law enforcement officer posing as a bomb-maker, authorities said. (FBI) A Reseda man planned to detonate improvised explosive devices at several Southern California locations to cause “mass casualties” in a terror plot thwarted by law enforcement officials, authorities said Monday.

Mark Steven Domingo, 26, an Army veteran, was arrested Friday night after he took delivery of what he thought was a live bomb from an undercover law enforcement officer posing as a bomb-maker, officials said. He was charged with attempting to provide material support to terrorists.

According to a federal affidavit, “after considering various attacks — including targeting Jews, churches, and police officers — Domingo decided to detonate an IED at a rally scheduled to take place in Long Beach this past weekend. As part of the plot, Domingo asked his confederate — who actually was cooperating with the FBI as part of the investigation — to find a bomb-maker, and Domingo last week purchased several hundred nails to be used as shrapnel inside the IED.

“Domingo said he specifically bought three-inch nails because they would be long enough to penetrate the human body and puncture internal organs,” the affidavit states.

Prosecutors said Domingo sought retribution for the New Zealand mosques attack and said he was willing to become a martyr.

“There must be retribution,” he said in an online post, according to the federal criminal complaint. He also allegedly expressed allegiance to the Islamic State.

“America needs another vegas event ...[to] give them a taste of the terror they gladly spread all over the world,” Domingo allegedly wrote in reference to the massacre at the Route 91 concert in October 2017.

The FBI saw the posts and used an informant to begin a series of meetings with Domingo. During these discussions, he talked about targeting “Jews, police officers, churches and a military facility,” authorities said. A law enforcement source told The Times he also considered an attack at the Santa Monica Pier.

Domingo talked about a drive-by shooting using an AK-47-style rifle, authorities allege. But officials say he ended up targeting rallies in Long Beach and Huntington Beach. Worried those events might be canceled, he also considered blowing up the Santa Monica Pier, documents show.

The terror plot was uncovered less than 48 hours after a gunman opened fire inside a San Diego County synagogue, killing one woman and wounding several others in what law enforcement officials are investigating as an anti-Semitic hate crime.

Southern California has been the scene of several terrorism plots and attacks, including one by a prison-based group that targeted the U.S. government and supporters of Israel.

In 2005, Kevin James founded Jam’iyyat Ul-Islam Is-Saheeh, or JIS, inside a California prison and led a conspiracy to attack Los Angeles International Airport, several Army recruiting centers and the Israeli Consulate in L.A. The group planned to stage attacks on political targets with the proceeds of gas station robberies, investigators said. Authorities said they learned of the potential plot when Torrance police investigating the robberies found lists of targets and other information at one suspect’s apartment in South Los Angeles.

Three years before that, a gunman killed two people at the busy LAX ticket counter of El Al Israel Airlines.

And in 2015, Syed Rizwan Farook and his wife, Tashfeen Malik, entered a holiday gathering for county employees at the Inland Regional Center in San Bernardino and, using rifles purchased by a friend, killed 14 people and injured 22 others.

Authorities said that Farook and a friend had plotted additional terror attacks targeting students at a nearby community college and drivers on the 91 Freeway.

How do you treat your enemies?” the judge said while opening up the segment on Monday morning. “He wanted to divert attention from what Mueller had said about him and what I had commented about Mueller to his relationship with me. His relationship with me is not the story. He and I have been friends for 30 years and probably will be for the next 30 years.”Still, Napolitano characterized Trump’s attack on him as “brilliant.”Also Read: Fox News'

Andrew Napolitano Calls Out Jared Kushner for 'Deceptive' Effort to 'Diminish' Russian InterferenceThe segment with Bartiromo came after President Trump denounced Napolitano on Saturday, saying the judge had turned nasty because he wasn't appointed to the Supreme Court. "Thank you to brilliant and highly respected attorney Alan Dershowitz for destroying the very dumb legal argument of 'Judge' Andrew Napolitano," Trump tweeted after a Fox News segment. "Ever since Andrew came to my office to ask that I appoint him to the U.S. Supreme Court, and I said NO, he has been very hostile! Also asked for pardon for his friend. A good 'pal' of low ratings Shepard Smith." On set, the judge answered both charges - suggesting the president has mischaracterized the matter. Though Napolitano did confirm that he and Trump did have two separate 90 minute conversations in the immediate weeks after his 2016 election victory. A rep for Fox News did not offer any additional comment on the matter. Also Read: Fox News' Andrew Napolitano Says Mueller Report 'Might Be Enough to Prosecute' Trump Once one of Trump's favorite Fox News personalities, Napolitano has increasingly raised eyebrows on set for his tough commentary on the president's legal woes. On his Fox News digital series, "Judge Napolitano's Chambers," the judge has bluntly called Trump's behavior documented in the Mueller Report as "criminal." "Prosecutors prosecute people who interfere with government functions and that's what the president did by obstruction, where is this going to end? I don't know, but I am disappointed in the behavior of the president," Napolitano said last week. "If he had ordered his aides to violate federal law to save a human life or to preserve human freedom, he would at least have a moral defense to his behavior," he added. "But ordering them to break federal law to save him from the consequences of his own behavior, that is immoral, that is criminal, that is defenseless, that is condemnable." Just days earlier, Napolitano said in a different monologue on the same program that it was his belief there was enough in the report to "prosecute" the president - even though the special counsel declined to do so. Politics National Review House Dem. Threatens Trump Officials with 'Incarceration' for Refusing to Honor Subpoenas Representative Gerry Connolly (D., Va.), a member of the House Oversight Committee, said Friday that the panel might resort to the threat of incarceration should Trump administration officials continue to ignore its numerous subpoena-backed requests for documents. “We're going to resist, and if a subpoena is issued and you're told you must testify, we will back that up,” Connolly told CNN's Wolf Blitzer. “And we will use any and all power in our command to make sure it's backed up - whether that's a contempt citation, whether that's going to court and getting that citation enforced, whether it's fines, whether it's possible incarceration. We will go to the max to enforce the constitutional role of the legislative branch of government."The president and his advisers have said explicitly that they will not yield to Democrats' demands that officials testify before the Oversight Committee regarding the issuance of security clearances, the formation of the so-called zero-tolerance immigration-enforcement policy, and other matters.White House adviser Stephen Miller, former security-clearance official Carl Kline, and John Gore, a deputy assistant attorney general in the Justice Department's Civil Rights Division, have thus far all refused to come before the panel.Connolly emphasized in particular the Committee's desire to hear from Miller, whom he called Trump's "immigration whisperer," regarding what measures the administration plans to take to harden the southern border in the wake of Secretary of Homeland Security Kierstjen Nielsen's departure."We want to hear from him: What is your thinking, what is it you've been advising the president, and where is it you think you're going to be taking us as a country with these kinds of policies and personnel changes?" Connolly said of Miller. [About time someone got tough with these mobsters; after all, trump's used to corrupt cowards who take dives.

Donald Trump is mentally unfit to serve"Such a mindset of false beliefs in freedom from consequences is extremely dangerous," Bandy X. Lee writes This article originally appeared on Raw Story Three psychiatrists have written an editorial for the Boston Globe warning that special counsel Robert Mueller's report on Russian interference in the 2016 presidential election shows more evidence that President Donald Trump is mentally unfit to hold office. The psychiatrists — Dr. Bandy X. Lee of

Yale, Dr. Leonard L. Glass of Harvard Medical School, and Edwin B. Fisher of University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill — argue that Mueller's report provides a disturbing new window into the president's behavior, which is frequently marked by impulsive emotional meltdowns. "The pattern that emerges of the president is one of rash, short-sighted decision-making, without consideration of consequences,” they write. “Reckless, impulsive moves that are self-destructive, despite the intention of self-protection, are characteristic of dangerous impairment. They impede Trump’s capacity to prioritize national security.” They then quote from sections of the Mueller report that illustrate these behaviors, including his efforts to dangle pardons to potential witnesses and his effort to get Mueller fired as special counsel. They say that his ordering former White House counsel Don McGahn to get rid of Mueller should be seen as especially alarming given how inherently self-destructive it was.

Politics Reuters Trump has asserted executive privilege over entire Mueller report: Justice Dept official

Politics The Daily Beast Samantha Bee Mocks Trump's Billion Dollar Loss: 'The Best at Being Terrible' While President Donald Trump “claims to be the best business boy,” Samantha Bee told viewers Wednesday night that he’s really just the “best at being terrible.” The Full Frontal host was referring to the revelations from this week’s New York Times report that showed Trump lost more than a billion dollars between 1985 and 1994. As The Daily Beast’s David Cay Johnston explained on MSNBC, in one of those years Trump accounted for two cents of every dollar lost in the entire American economy. “I used to think Donald Trump’s fortunes took a dip in the early ‘90s recession,” Bee said. “Now I think maybe he was the early ‘90s recession.” In response to the report, Trump has said that he intentionally lost the money, tweeting, “You always wanted to show losses for tax purposes” adding, “almost all real estate developers did.” “But was Trump really just pretending to lose all that money?” Bee asked. “I call as my next witness, Ivanka Trump,” she said, adding a comical gasp that hinted at her complicated past with the first daughter. The host cut to a clip from the 2003 documentary Born Rich in which Ivanka tells a story about her father pointing out a homeless man outside Trump Tower and saying, ““You know, that guy has 8 billion dollars more than me,’ because he was in such extreme debt at that point.” “And that is why it was OK for him to take that man’s change cup,” Bee joked. “Look, the only thing that Donald Trump really had going for him as a candidate was that he was supposed to be a great businessman. Now we know that not only is he a bad businessman, he is one of the worst in American history.” To the Republican “party of fiscal responsibility,” Bee asked, “Are you really going to choose this money pit over the Constitution?” Read more at The Daily Beast.

U.S. Reuters

Exclusive: Foreign government leases at Trump World Tower stir more emoluments concerns

The U.S. State Department allowed at least seven foreign governments to rent luxury condominiums in New York's Trump World Tower in 2017 without approval from Congress, according to documents and people familiar with the leases, a potential violation of the U.S. Constitution's emoluments clause. The 90-story Manhattan building, part of the real estate empire of Donald Trump, had housed diplomats and foreign officials before the property developer became president. The rental transactions, dating from the early months of Trump's presidency and first revealed by Reuters, could add to mounting scrutiny of his business dealings with foreign governments, which are now the subject of multiple lawsuits.

Feinstein then asked if it is illegal to try and get a witness to lie (duh), to which Barr answered, "Uh, yes." She then asked him to cite the exact law, to which Barr said, "The obstruction statutes." ...'

Analysis: 43 mind-boggling lines from Donald Trump's Wisconsin campaign rally

(CNN)President Donald Trump traveled to Wisconsin on Saturday night to rally his supporters, and -- pointedly -- to miss the annual White House Correspondents' Dinner, which he has yet to attend as President.

Trump, continuing a trend of late, made a slew of questionable claims, bashed the media and loudly proclaimed his rightness about, well, everything. I went through the transcript and picked out the most, uh, outstanding, lines from his Green Bay rally. They're below.

THE POINT -- NOW ON YOUTUBE!

In each episode of his weekly YouTube show, Chris Cillizza will delve a little deeper into the surreal world of politics. Click to subscribe!

1. "The strength of our nation is found in the heart of our people, so true."

This is a very common Trump speech pattern. He reads a line from the teleprompter. And because he hasn't read the speech in advance, he responds by agreeing with his own words that he is seeing for the first time with a "so true." And away we go!

2. "We're going to get to the bottom of a lot of things happening in our country."

So true.

3. "And we're now the number one economy anywhere in the world and it's not even close."

This is, generally, true!

4. "By the way, Saturday night, is there anyplace that's more fun than a Trump rally?"

I might be able to think of one or two places. ...

5. "Can you imagine? Sleepy Joe? Crazy Bernie."

Why did Trump suddenly start talking about his potential 2020 opponents? Oh, I have no idea. But the crowd LOVED it.

6. "I think Pocahontas, she's finished, she's out. She's gone. No, when it was found that I had more Indian blood in me than she did."

Trump is referring to Massachusetts Sen. Elizabeth Warren with this taunt. And, yes, the crowd LOVED it.

7. "But can you imagine any of these people up here doing what I'm doing? They'd be 200 people show up if they were president. If they were president, nobody would show up."

It's fascinating that Trump understands the job of being president as getting lots of people to show up to rallies.

8. "The people that get it wrong the most are the weather forecasters and the political analysts."

He's not wrong!

9. "People are standing out 24 hours ago, 32 hours ago outside. Who stood out there for 24 hours?"

This comes from the Green Bay Press Gazette: "A line of supporters wound around the Resch Center; some people said they'd waited outside overnight." So true.

10. "We had 69,000 people sign up to come in. What does this place hold? Like 10,000 or 12,000 or whatever. Whatever it holds. We set the record." What record? Also, I have no idea how Trump came up with this 69,000 number. Here's how a local TV affiliate described the crowd: "This was a free event that anyone could attend, but Secret Service detail said only the first 10,000 people are being let into the center."

11. "I don't know what the hell it holds, but we just set the record." According to the internet, the Resch Center holds 10,500 people. But Trump has the record. Bigly.

12. "That's always dangerous. He said, 'Yes, it is, sir.' It's always dangerous. Yes. You ask like, 'No, sir.' I'm dead. They will take -- they will take that answer. That'll be headlines."

Let me translate this for you people who don't speak word salad: Trump brought the owner of the Resch Center onstage and asked if it was a record crowd. (Because that is very important to how he does his job.) The owner said it was a record. Trump was relieved because it would have been bad headlines if it was not a record.

13. "Now, this is the record. We set records everywhere."

It is VERY important for you to know that Donald Trump set a record. VERY.

14. "The greatest political hoax in American history, it really has been."

For the record: The Mueller probe resulted in 199 charges against 37 people and entities. Seven people pleaded guilty to a variety of crimes while five were sentenced to prison. So, not really a "hoax."

15. "The USMCA like the song 'YMCA,' right?"

Ladies and gentlemen, the President of the United States!

16. "Can you believe I'm a politician? I can't even."

Honestly, same.

17. "You know, Canada, we love the song, 'Oh Canada.' Let's sing, 'Oh Canada,' right. We love the show."

WHAT. IS. HAPPENING. (And, no, there isn't much context to add here. He just started talking about Canada.)

18. "But who knows, I always say, 'Who knows?' Because who the hell knows?"

[nods head slowly]

19. "Don't forget, we are the piggy bank that everybody is robbing. We're the ones. We're the piggy bank that everybody is stealing from and robbing and taking advantage of."

USA! USA! USA!

20. "This I don't -- I tell you what, you know, people say, 'Oh, he wants to take over the country. He wants to extend.' "

I think Trump is ruling out changing the constitutional limit on a President serving two terms here. So there's that.

21. "You're right, USA. We love USA and that's right."

"I love lamp." -- Brick Tamland

22. "If you look at what's happened with the scum that's leaving the very top of government."

Just the President of the United States referring to top-level staff as "scum." Super normal stuff!!!

23. "The dirty -- these were dirty cops. These were dirty players."

Trump, presumably, is referring to longtime officials at the Department of Justice like James Comey and Robert Mueller.

24. "I mean we're draining the swamp, but are we having a good time or what?"

Who said you can't have fun draining the swamp? Not me!

25. "And look at all those beautiful red hats and some white ones. Some white. Look at that. Those are -- that's a lot of red hats. But you do have the white ones too, right?"

Red MAGA hats > White MAGA hats. But wait....

26. "And you have the black ones, too. You have a lot of them. You have a lot of different hats."

... there's more! SO MANY HATS. OF DIFFERING COLORS.

27. "It's called MAGA country. You know, I didn't hear that term until that third-rate actor in Chicago went out."

The President of the United States offers his thoughts on the Jussie Smollett case.

28. "Ronald Reagan used seldom Let's Make America Great. Close, but not the same. Let's -- apostrophe S. You don't want the apostrophe. It's too complicated. It doesn't work. But Ronald Reagan was good. He said let's make -- but he didn't use it. He used it a little bit. We seriously use it, right?"

OHMYGODOHMYGODOHMYGOD

29. "And MAGA we got for free. Because my whole deal was Make America Great Again, all of a sudden people are saying and going #MAGA."

30. "We have a massive television audience, do you ever see so many cameras? If somebody else were here, you'd have about like none." I've heard that this is a record crowd. So true.

31. "Because I have a couple of friends here. They're pretty wealthy people, very successful people. And you know what? The hell with them. I don't care."

Oh snap, Trump friends, you got dunked on! FACE!

32. "In Michigan, they gave me an award six years, seven years ago, I had no idea. It was the Man of the Year in Michigan."

There's no evidence Trump was ever named "Man of the Year" in Michigan.

33. "They will take your guns away, too, by the way."

Trump passes along this much-debunked notion that Democrats, if put in power, will collect all firearms in the country -- and no one bats an eye.

34. "Now we're sending many of them to sanctuary cities. Thank you very much. They're not too happy about it. I'm proud to tell you that was actually my sick idea."

There's zero evidence that the administration is shipping undocumented immigrants detained at the border to sanctuary cities. In fact, several administration officials have made clear that the policy is not only logistically untenable but also potentially illegal. But, hey, it was Trump's "sick idea"!

35. "To confront the border crisis, I declared a national emergency. The good news is everybody agrees."

[narrator voice] They don't.

36. "They are aggressively pushing extreme late-term abortion, allowing children to be ripped from their mother's womb."

Totally and completely false.

37. "The baby is born. The mother meets with the doctor. They take care of the baby. They wrap the baby beautifully. And then the doctor and the mother determine whether or not they will execute the baby."

Dangerously inaccurate.

38. "We've got a lot of young people out there. You want to know the truth? I actually think we have more than they do."

Hillary Clinton won voters aged 18-29 by 19 points in 2016.

39. "We're very close, $300 million for the Great Lakes Restoration Initiatives."

False!

40. "You know, a lot of times, if you're not going to brag about it, nobody else is, you might as well do it. True."

So true.

41. "And I have to say, every leader without fail that comes to see me in the Oval Office, they all say congratulations."

Every foreign leader who comes to see Trump tells him "congratulations."

Every one. Absolutely. This is definitely, 100% true, I'm sure.

42. "With every last ounce of heart and hope and sweat, and so we are going to make our stand."

Speaking of making stands: Why the hell did Jon Snow approve a battle plan where he marched his forces outside of the walls of Winterfell to battle the army of the dead? Like, why not hang out inside the walls? Am I the only one who thinks this?

43. "Together with the great and proud people of Wisconsin, we will make America wealthy again."

[emoji with cash coming out of mouth] This feels like a good place to end.

Trump slams leaders of 'Dues Sucking firefighters' union after Biden endorsement [trump is so sick, so mentally ill! The question is, who has their backs? Only those as crazy as trump would say trump!]

Mark Steven Domingo, an Army veteran, was arrested Friday night after he took delivery of what he thought was a live bomb from an undercover law enforcement officer posing as a bomb-maker, authorities said. (FBI)

A Reseda man planned to detonate improvised explosive devices at several Southern California locations to cause “mass casualties” in a terror plot thwarted by law enforcement officials, authorities said Monday.

Mark Steven Domingo, 26, an Army veteran, was arrested Friday night after he took delivery of what he thought was a live bomb from an undercover law enforcement officer posing as a bomb-maker, officials said. He was charged with attempting to provide material support to terrorists.

According to a federal affidavit, “after considering various attacks — including targeting Jews, churches, and police officers — Domingo decided to detonate an IED at a rally scheduled to take place in Long Beach this past weekend. As part of the plot, Domingo asked his confederate — who actually was cooperating with the FBI as part of the investigation — to find a bomb-maker, and Domingo last week purchased several hundred nails to be used as shrapnel inside the IED.

“Domingo said he specifically bought three-inch nails because they would be long enough to penetrate the human body and puncture internal organs,” the affidavit states.

Prosecutors said Domingo sought retribution for the New Zealand mosques attack and said he was willing to become a martyr.

“There must be retribution,” he said in an online post, according to the federal criminal complaint. He also allegedly expressed allegiance to the Islamic State.

“America needs another vegas event ...[to] give them a taste of the terror they gladly spread all over the world,” Domingo allegedly wrote in reference to the massacre at the Route 91 concert in October 2017.

The FBI saw the posts and used an informant to begin a series of meetings with Domingo. During these discussions, he talked about targeting “Jews, police officers, churches and a military facility,” authorities said. A law enforcement source told The Times he also considered an attack at the Santa Monica Pier.

Domingo talked about a drive-by shooting using an AK-47-style rifle, authorities allege. But officials say he ended up targeting rallies in Long Beach and Huntington Beach. Worried those events might be canceled, he also considered blowing up the Santa Monica Pier, documents show.

The terror plot was uncovered less than 48 hours after a gunman opened fire inside a San Diego County synagogue, killing one woman and wounding several others in what law enforcement officials are investigating as an anti-Semitic hate crime.

Southern California has been the scene of several terrorism plots and attacks, including one by a prison-based group that targeted the U.S. government and supporters of Israel.

In 2005, Kevin James founded Jam’iyyat Ul-Islam Is-Saheeh, or JIS, inside a California prison and led a conspiracy to attack Los Angeles International Airport, several Army recruiting centers and the Israeli Consulate in L.A. The group planned to stage attacks on political targets with the proceeds of gas station robberies, investigators said. Authorities said they learned of the potential plot when Torrance police investigating the robberies found lists of targets and other information at one suspect’s apartment in South Los Angeles.

Three years before that, a gunman killed two people at the busy LAX ticket counter of El Al Israel Airlines.

And in 2015, Syed Rizwan Farook and his wife, Tashfeen Malik, entered a holiday gathering for county employees at the Inland Regional Center in San Bernardino and, using rifles purchased by a friend, killed 14 people and injured 22 others.

Authorities said that Farook and a friend had plotted additional terror attacks targeting students at a nearby community college and drivers on the 91 Freeway.

Mueller complained to Barr that summary report mischaracterized his findings: report

Bartiromo. "This is the way you treat your friends? How do you treat your enemies?" the judge said while opening up the segment on Monday morning. "He wanted to divert attention from what Mueller had said about him and what I had commented about Mueller to his relationship with me. His relationship with me is not the story. He and I have been friends for 30 years and probably will be for the next 30 years." Still, Napolitano characterized Trump's attack on him as "brilliant." Also Read: Fox News' Andrew Napolitano Calls Out Jared Kushner for 'Deceptive' Effort to 'Diminish' Russian Interference

The segment with Bartiromo came after President Trump denounced Napolitano on Saturday, saying the judge had turned nasty because he wasn't appointed to the Supreme Court. "Thank you to brilliant and highly respected attorney Alan Dershowitz for destroying the very dumb legal argument of 'Judge' Andrew Napolitano," Trump tweeted after a Fox News segment. "Ever since Andrew came to my office to ask that I appoint him to the U.S. Supreme Court, and I said NO, he has been very hostile! Also asked for pardon for his friend. A good 'pal' of low ratings Shepard Smith." On set, the judge answered both charges - suggesting the president has mischaracterized the matter. Though Napolitano did confirm that he and Trump did have two separate 90 minute conversations in the immediate weeks after his 2016 election victory. A rep for Fox News did not offer any additional comment on the matter. Also Read: Fox News' Andrew Napolitano Says Mueller Report 'Might Be Enough to Prosecute' Trump

Once one of Trump's favorite Fox News personalities, Napolitano has increasingly raised eyebrows on set for his tough commentary on the president's legal woes. On his Fox News digital series, "Judge Napolitano's Chambers," the judge has bluntly called Trump's behavior documented in the Mueller Report as "criminal." "Prosecutors prosecute people who interfere with government functions and that's what the president did by obstruction, where is this going to end? I don't know, but I am disappointed in the behavior of the president," Napolitano said last week. "If he had ordered his aides to violate federal law to save a human life or to preserve human freedom, he would at least have a moral defense to his behavior," he added. "But ordering them to break federal law to save him from the consequences of his own behavior, that is immoral, that is criminal, that is defenseless, that is condemnable." Just days earlier, Napolitano said in a different monologue on the same program that it was his belief there was enough in the report to "prosecute" the president - even though the special counsel declined to do so. Politics National Review House Dem. Threatens Trump Officials with 'Incarceration' for Refusing to Honor Subpoenas Representative Gerry Connolly (D., Va.), a member of the House Oversight Committee, said Friday that the panel might resort to the threat of incarceration should Trump administration officials continue to ignore its numerous subpoena-backed requests for documents. "We're going to resist, and if a subpoena is issued and you're told you must testify, we will back that up," Connolly told CNN's Wolf Blitzer. "And we will use any and all power in our command to make sure it's backed up - whether that's a contempt citation, whether that's going to court and getting that citation enforced, whether it's fines, whether it's possible incarceration. We will go to the max to enforce the constitutional role of the legislative branch of government." The president and his advisers have said explicitly that they will not yield to Democrats' demands that officials testify before the Oversight Committee regarding the issuance of security clearances, the formation of the so-called zero-tolerance immigration-enforcement policy, and other matters. White House adviser Stephen Miller, former security-clearance official Carl Kline, and John Gore, a deputy assistant attorney general in the Justice Department's Civil Rights Division, have thus far all refused to come before the panel. Connolly emphasized in particular the Committee's desire to hear from Miller, whom he called Trump's "immigration whisperer," regarding what measures the administration plans to take to harden the southern border in the wake of Secretary of Homeland Security Kierstjen Nielsen's departure. "We want to hear from him: What is your thinking, what is it you've been advising the president, and where is it you think you're going to be taking us as a country with these kinds of policies and personnel changes?" Connolly said of Miller. [About time someone got tough with these mobsters; after all, Trump's used to corrupt cowards who take dives.]

Nancy Pelosi on impeaching President Trump: 'He's just not worth it'

Nancy Pelosi stands up in her spacious office in the U.S. Capitol, walks past an enormous window with a commanding view of the Mall and the Washington ... [No The bottom line is that she, pelosi is not worth it ... keep in mind the last time dems 'had it all', lost it all and then some ... a fk-up, to be sure, and now she's senile and lacks the energy required for the position typical go along/get along guinea who has cashed in on her position as corrupt guineas typically do/california version What in the world does she think trump does but divide the country and upon what basis did she think the dems got back the house? pelosi's 's senile beyond repair!]*

[Ah ... Eureka! behind pelosi's soft spot for trump ... The leading candidate for House speaker in January meanwhile compared Donald Trump to fascist leader Benito Mussolini Like the Republican president, 'he didn't care what they said about him, as long as they were talking about him,' Pelosi said of Mussolini great point madam senile!]

There was a time in america when successful, talented people desired to serve and give a little back (as they put it) ... followed now by untalented people who have for lack of talent become politicians and literally have been part of the asset/brain drain (without leaving the country) with obvious results; ie., bushes, et als (california's a disaster, etc.)

pelousi/pelosi, feinstein/blum are examples as are the clintons, obamas, bushes, now trumps, et als $22 trillion national debt, etc... well, 'their' money has to come from some place

$21 TRILLION DOLLARS IS MISSING FROM THE US GOVERNMENT.

<https://missingmoney.solari.com> <https://home.solari.com> $21 Trillion dollars is missing from the US government. That is $65,000 per person - as much as the national debt!

“No money shall be drawn from the treasury, but in consequence of appropriations made by law; and a regular statement and account of receipts and expenditures of all public money shall be published from time to time.” ~ Article I, Section 9, Clause 7, U.S. Constitution

What's going on? Where is the money? How could this happen? How much has really gone missing? What would happen if a corporation failed to pass an audit like this? Or a taxpayer? This means the Fed and their member banks are transacting government money outside the law. So are the corporate contractors that run the payment systems. So are the Wall Street firms who are selling government securities without full disclosure. Would your banks continue to handle your bank account if you behaved like this? Would your investors continue to buy your securities if you behaved like this? Would your accountant be silent? This is the reason that there is such a strong push to change or tear up the US Constitution. This is why members of the establishment say it is "old," "outdated!" This is why there is such a push for gun control. Don't buy it! We can use the Constitution to get our money and our government back. It is time to enforce the US Constitution. The Solari Report has been covering the missing money since 2000 when Catherine Austin Fitts began to warn Americans and global investors about mortgage fraud at the US Department of Housing and Development (HUD), the engineering of the housing bubble that led to trillions more dollars in bailouts and funds missing from the US government starting in fiscal 1998.

To those who said it can't happen here, just read these nationalistic, nonsensical pro-Trump comments; it is happening right before our eyes.

Psychiatrists warn the Mueller report provides more evidence Donald Trump is mentally unfit to serve "Such a mindset of false beliefs in freedom from consequences is extremely dangerous," Bandy X. Lee writes Psychiatrists warn the Mueller report provides more evidence Donald Trump is mentally unfit to serve"Such a mindset of false beliefs in freedom from consequences is extremely dangerous," Bandy X. Lee writes This article originally appeared on Raw Story Three psychiatrists have written an editorial for the Boston Globe warning that special counsel Robert Mueller's report on Russian interference in the 2016 presidential election shows more evidence that President Donald Trump is mentally unfit to hold office. The psychiatrists — Dr. Bandy X. Lee of Yale, Dr. Leonard L. Glass of Harvard Medical School, and Edwin B. Fisher of University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill — argue that Mueller's report provides a disturbing new window into the president's behavior, which is frequently marked by impulsive emotional meltdowns. "The pattern that emerges of the president is one of rash, short-sighted decision-making, without consideration of consequences," they write. "Reckless, impulsive moves that are self-destructive, despite the intention of self-protection, are characteristic of dangerous impairment. They impede Trump's capacity to prioritize national security." They then quote from sections of the Mueller report that illustrate these behaviors, including his efforts to dangle pardons to potential witnesses and his effort to get Mueller fired as special counsel. They say that his ordering former White House counsel Don McGahn to get rid of Mueller should be seen as especially alarming given how inherently self-destructive it was.

4-22-19 Update: Politics USA TODAY Opinion I've warned that impeachment talk is dangerous, but the time has come: Laurence Tribe The consequential decision to impeach should not be made lightly. But Mueller's damning report is an invitation that Congress shouldn't refuse. [Laurence Tribe knows something about constitutional law. For corrupt greedy senile guinea pelosi it should be his way or the highway!] ... Even the most pragmatic legal practitioners tip their hats in respect for the otherwise esoteric 'Laurence Tribe' (ie., those law school/paper chase days)

'Obstruction of justice-the statute making obstruction criminal-prohibits interfering, or attempting to interfere, with a criminal prosecution or an investigation the government's conducting' Napolitano said. The Mueller Report, Napolitano believes, lays out a number of presidential acts that constitute obstruction of justice including:

- When Trump asked Deputy National Security Adviser KT McFarland to write an untruthful letter to the file, knowing the government would subpoena it.
- When Trump asked Corey Lewandowski to get Mueller fired.
- When Trump asked Don McGahn to get Mueller fired and then to lie about it.
- When Trump asked McGahn to go back to Mueller's team and change his testimony.
- When Trump dangled a pardon in front of Michael Cohen, in order to keep Cohen to testifying against him.

'...Donnie Trump's Attorney General Bill Barr gave his first congressional testimony in the wake of the release of the Mueller report this morning and it revealed why Trump was in panic mode this morning. During her line of questioning, Senator Dianne Feinstein, ranking Democratic judiciary committee member, managed to get Barr to reveal the exact law Trump broke per the evidence in Mueller's report..... Feinstein simply described the evidence in Mueller's report that details Trump's efforts to get White House counsel Don McGahn to lie about Trump ordering him to fire Mueller. Feinstein then asked if it is illegal to try and get a witness to lie (duh), to which Barr answered, 'Uh, yes.' She then asked him to cite the exact law, to which Barr said,

'THE OBSTRUCTION STATUTES' .

$21 TRILLION DOLLARS IS MISSING FROM THE US GOVERNMENT. <https://missingmoney.solari.com> <https://home.solari.com> $21 Trillion dollars is missing from the US government. That is $65,000 per person - as much as the national debt!

"No money shall be drawn from the treasury, but in consequence of appropriations made by law; and a regular statement and account of receipts and expenditures of all public money shall be published from time to time."*~ Article I, Section 9, Clause 7, U.S. Constitution

What's going on? Where is the money? How could this happen? How much has really gone missing? What would happen if a corporation failed to pass an audit like this? Or a taxpayer? This means the Fed and their member banks are transacting government money outside the law. So are the corporate contractors that run the payment systems. So are the Wall Street firms who are selling government securities without full disclosure. Would your banks continue to handle your bank account if you behaved like this? Would your investors continue to buy your securities if you behaved like this? Would your accountant be silent? This is the reason that there is such a strong push to change or tear up the US Constitution. This is why members of the establishment say it is "old," "outdated!" This is why there is such a push for gun control. Don't buy it! We can use the Constitution to get our money and our government back. It is time to enforce the US Constitution. The Solari Report has been covering the missing money since 2000 when Catherine Austin Fitts began to to warn Americans and global investors about mortgage fraud at the US Department of Housing and Development (HUD), the engineering of the housing bubble that lead to trillions more dollars in bailouts and funds missing from the US government starting in fiscal 1998.

Psychiatrists warn the Mueller report provides more evidence Donald Trump is mentally unfit to serve "Such a mindset of false beliefs in freedom from consequences is extremely dangerous," Bandy X. Lee writes Psychiatrists warn the Mueller report provides more evidence Donald Trump is mentally unfit to serve"Such a mindset of false beliefs in freedom from consequences is extremely dangerous," Bandy X. Lee writes This article originally appeared on Raw Story Three psychiatrists have written an editorial for the Boston Globe warning that special counsel Robert Mueller's report on Russian interference in the 2016 presidential election shows more evidence that President Donald Trump is mentally unfit to hold office. The psychiatrists — Dr. Bandy X. Lee of Yale, Dr. Leonard L. Glass of Harvard Medical School, and Edwin B. Fisher of University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill — argue that Mueller's report provides a disturbing new window into the president's behavior, which is frequently marked by impulsive emotional meltdowns. "The pattern that emerges of the president is one of rash, short-sighted decision-making, without consideration of consequences," they write. "Reckless, impulsive moves that are self-destructive, despite the intention of self-protection, are characteristic of dangerous impairment. They impede Trump's capacity to prioritize national security." They then quote from sections of the Mueller report that illustrate these behaviors, including his efforts to dangle pardons to potential witnesses and his effort to get Mueller fired as special counsel. They say that his ordering former White House counsel Don McGahn to get rid of Mueller should be seen as especially alarming given how inherently self-destructive it was.

CITING HIS "SERIOUS MENTAL ILLNESS," MULTIPLE PSYCHIATRISTS CALL FOR PRESIDENT TRUMP TO BE IMPEACHED

"Mental illness . . . renders him psychologically incapable of competently discharging the duties of president"

Brad Reed May 31, 2019 3:13PM (UTC)

This article originally appeared on Raw Story

Three psychiatrists have written an editorial for USA Today calling on Congress to impeach President Donald Trump — and their call to remove the president has nothing to do with special counsel Robert Mueller's findings.

The psychiatrists — John Gartner, a former assistant professor at Johns Hopkins University Medical School; Dr. David Reiss, who has been practicing psychiatry for 30 years; and Dr. Steven Buser, a former Air Force psychiatrist — argue that the president's "poor mental health" is a danger to the United States and should be used as a grounds to remove him from office.

"Many of us in the mental health community have been arguing for years that Trump should be removed because he is psychologically unfit," they write. "We posted a professional petition online stating that 'in our professional judgment . . . Donald Trump manifests a serious mental illness that renders him psychologically incapable of competently discharging the duties of president of the United States.'"

They go on to document how House Speaker Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) and even some members of his own administration have pondered removing Trump via the 25th amendment in which he'd be declared mentally unfit to perform his duties.

However, they think the most likely remedy at this point is for the House to start up impeachment hearings.

“Pelosi has thus far resisted calls for impeachment on the grounds that it would arouse the ire of Trump’s base going into the 2020 election,” they argue. “But she seems to ignore the opposite risk: Underreacting desensitizes us to the dangerous severity of Trump’s dysfunction, normalizing the abnormal.”

Maher hoped First Lady Melania Trump would divorce her husband. Singer/actress Cher wanted to see Trump impeached, “locked up” and assaulted in prison.

Author Fran Lebowitz claimed “impeachment” was just the “beginning of what he deserves” as she fantasized that Trump would be turned “over to the Saudis” to be tortured to death.

"With the scale and scope of the trade war increasing further over the last week, we revised our inflation and growth forecasts, and adjusted our Fed probabilities," the analysts said in a research note.

The Root

The man who predicted Trump's victory says Democrats may have to impeach him to have a chance in 2020

Allan Lichtman doesn't mind swimming against the political tide. Lichtman, a professor at American University in Washington, DC, was the most prominent voice predicting Donald Trump's victory in the run-up to the 2016 election. When Trump won, it marked the 9th(!) straight presidential election where Lichtman had correctly predicted the Electoral College winner. (That's all the way back to 1984, for you math wizards.) In short: Lichtman is someone the political world should listen to. So I reached out to him on Tuesday to see what he thought of Trump's current chances at a second term next ...

The Mueller Report, Napolitano believes, lays out a number of presidential acts that constitute obstruction of justice including:

- When Trump asked Deputy National Security Adviser KT McFarland to write an untruthful letter to the file, knowing the government would subpoena it.
- When Trump asked Corey Lewandowski to get Mueller fired.
- When Trump asked Don McGahn to get Mueller fired and then to lie about it.

- When Trump asked McGahn to go back to Mueller's team and change his testimony.
- When Trump dangled a pardon in front of Michael Cohen, in order to keep Cohen to testifying against him.

Outrage over report that White House ordered USS John McCain out of Trump's sight [This certainly fits the trump crazy reality!]

Mueller says his investigation did not exonerate Trump He said Justice Department guidelines prevented indicting a sitting president, a remark that suggested it was the rules, not the lack of evidence, that spared Trump from criminal charges. [What bull st! What rules? That some are above the law? That everyone's equal in the eyes of the law but that some are more equal than others? Pathetic!]

Politics USA TODAY Opinion I've warned that impeachment talk is dangerous, but the time has come: Laurence Tribe The consequential decision to impeach should not be made lightly. But Mueller's damning report is an invitation that Congress shouldn't refuse. [Laurence Tribe knows something about constitutional law. For corrupt greedy senile pelosi it should be his way or the highway!] ... 'Obstruction of justice-the statute making obstruction criminal-prohibits interfering, or attempting to interfere, with a criminal prosecution or an investigation the government's conducting' Napolitano said. The Mueller Report, Napolitano believes, lays out a number of presidential acts that constitute obstruction of justice including:

- When Trump asked Deputy National Security Adviser KT McFarland to write an untruthful letter to the file, knowing the government would subpoena it.
- When Trump asked Corey Lewandowski to get Mueller fired.
- When Trump asked Don McGahn to get Mueller fired and then to lie about it.

- When Trump asked McGahn to go back to Mueller's team and change his testimony.
- When Trump dangled a pardon in front of Michael Cohen, in order to keep Cohen to testifying against him.

He himself told them: "What you are seeing and what you are reading is not what's happening."It is important to note that fascism is not a political ideology or strategy but mental pathology at societal scale, starting with an impaired leader who attains power not to lead but to fulfill his own dysfunctional needs. Of course, such a leader is attractive in the first place because of similar pathologies in the population, which global economic inequities and massive social injustices in our day could have predicted. Since such a leader does not have any real ability to lead, he manipulates the psychological weaknesses in the population, augmenting societal disorder until the dynamic brings down the entire society. Destruction is always the inevitable result, as it is the nature of pathology, as opposed to healthy choices."

The Beat with Ari New low? Trump's profane tirades make White House history. Pres. Trump swears more in public than any president in history. MSNBC's Ari Melber explores how Trump's deliberate strategy of swearing in public contrasts with past Presidents more private swearing – and raises the questions of hypocrisy facing some conservatives who campaigned against profanity in music, movies and politics, but now support Trump.

Politics The Guardian Bannon described Trump Organization as 'criminal enterprise', Michael Wolff book claims [Because that's what it is!] Former White House adviser says financial investigations will take down president in sequel to Fire and FurySupport the Guardian's independent journalism. Make a contribution today Donald Trump along with his children Eric, Ivanka and Donald Jr arrive for a press conference at Trump Tower in New York in 2017. Photograph: Timothy A Clary/AFP/Getty Images The former White House adviser Steve Bannon has described the Trump Organization as a criminal entity and predicted that investigations into the president's finances will lead to his political downfall, when he is revealed to be "not the billionaire he said he was, just another scumbag". The startling remarks are contained in Siege: Trump Under Fire, the author Michael Wolff's forthcoming account of the second year of the Trump administration. The book, published on 4 June, is a sequel to Fire and Fury: Trump in the White House, which was a bestseller in 2018. The Guardian obtained a copy. In a key passage, Bannon is reported as saying he believes investigations of Donald Trump's financial history will provide proof of the underlying criminality of his eponymous company. Assessing the president's exposure to various investigations, many seeded by the special counsel Robert Mueller during his investigation of Russian election interference, Wolff writes: "Trump was vulnerable because for 40 years he had run what increasingly seemed to resemble a semi-criminal enterprise.” He then quotes Bannon as saying: “I think we can drop the ‘semi’ part.” Bannon, a leading promoter of far-right populism, was a White House adviser until August 2017, when he was removed. He was a major source for Fire and Fury, also first reported by the Guardian. Among other claims in that book, he labelled as “treasonous” an infamous Trump Tower meeting between Donald Trump Jr, Trump’s son-in-law Jared Kushner, campaign manager Paul Manafort and a Russian lawyer. Amid publicity surrounding Fire and Fury, Bannon was ejected from circles close to Trump and his position at Breitbart News. In Siege, Wolff pays close attention to Trump’s financial affairs. Investigations into Trump’s business dealings, spearheaded by the southern district of New York, have shuttered the president’s charity and seen the Trump Organization chief financial officer, Allen Weisselberg, receive immunity for testimony in investigations of Michael Cohen, the former Trump attorney and fixer who is now in jail in New York. This month, the New York Times obtained tax information that showed Trump’s businesses lost more than $1bn from 1985 to 1994. The newspaper subsequently reported that in 2016 and 2017, Deutsche Bank employees flagged concerns over possible money laundering through transactions involving legal entities controlled by the president and Kushner. Some of the transactions involved individuals in Russia. The bank did not act but Congress and New York state are now investigating its relationship with Trump and his family. Deutsche Bank has lent billions to Trump and Kushner companies. Trump has attempted to block House subpoenas for his financial records sent to Deutsche Bank. In Siege, Wolff quotes Bannon saying investigations into Trump’s finances will cut adrift even his most ardent supporters: “This is where it isn’t a witch hunt - even for the hard core, this is where he turns into just a crooked business guy, and one worth $50m instead of $10bn. “Not the billionaire he said he was, just another scumbag.” Wolff also details a 2004 Palm Beach property deal involving the now disgraced financier Jeffrey Epstein and the Putin-friendly oligarch Dmitry Rybolovlev that, the author writes, earned Trump “$55m without putting up a dime”. Epstein, he writes, invited Trump to see a $36m Palm Beach mansion he planned to buy. According to Wolff, Trump went behind Epstein's back to buy the foreclosed property for around $40m, a sum Epstein had reason to believe Trump couldn't raise in his own right, through an entity called Trump Properties LLC, which was entirely financed by Deutsche Bank. Epstein, Wolff writes, knew Trump had been loaning out his name in real estate deals for a fee and suspected that in his case Trump was fronting for the property's real owners. Epstein threatened to expose the deal. As the dispute increased, he found himself under investigation by the Palm Beach police. According to Wolff, Trump made only minor improvements and put the house on the market for $125m. It was purchased for $96m by Rybolovlev, part of a circle of government-aligned industrialists in Russia, thereby earning Trump $55m without risking any of his own money. Wolff presents two theories as to how the deal worked: first, perhaps "Trump merely earned a fee for hiding the real owner - a shadow owner quite possibly being funneled cash by Rybolovlev for other reasons beyond the value of the house". Second, he suggests the real owner of the house and the real buyer were one and the same. "Rybolovlev might have, in effect, paid himself for the house, thereby cleansing the additional $55m for the second purchase of the house." "This," Wolff writes, "was Donald Trump's world of real estate."

Opinion: The abdication of King Trump THE ABDICATION OF KING TRUMP

By Ted Gup Updated 3:41 PM ET, Mon May 27, 2019

Ted Gup is an author and writer-in-residence at Durham University in the UK. He has been a contributor to the Washington Post, New York Times, NPR, Slate, The Guardian, National Geographic and other publications.

The opinions expressed in this commentary are solely those of the author. Read more opinion on CNN.

(CNN) In recent weeks, nearly all the talk in Washington centered around impeachment -- would they or wouldn't they? Now the nation faces a new worry -- abdication. That's right, the President who imagines himself a king, and expects others to treat him the same way, has declared that he will have nothing to do with Congress on infrastructure legislation -- perhaps the one area where he could have won bipartisan support -- so long as the Dems insist on holding him accountable. In effect, Donald Trump has announced that he has abdicated, having no longer any wish to serve. Fittingly, the word "abdication" has two meanings. The first applies to when a monarch relinquishes his throne (in Trump's case, not likely); the second, when anyone in a position of authority chooses to neglect or ignore his duties. The latter is what this petulant President has said he will do so long as anyone dares question him. He has announced, in effect, that America now has a government in absentia.

To understand what happened last week, it is best viewed through the lens of medieval times, which is the domain in which our President/king resides. What House Speaker Nancy Pelosi did by accusing him of a cover-up amounted to what monarchs call "Lese Majeste" -- an insult to the sovereign. (For Trump, there is no real issue of constitutionality. The only separation of powers he seems to recognize is that which he has doled out between his advisers, Jared Kushner and Ivanka Trump, and his son Don Jr.)

Which helps explain the calculated and choreographed Rose Garden hissy fit (complete with posters on the podium) and why it is that Trump, who was always accustomed to getting his own way, has done so again. His threat not to deal with Congress so long as it has the temerity to question him, creates for him the ideal scenario: he gets to hold on to the throne without having to govern, which is most likely what he wanted from the beginning. For all his scorn and righteous indignation, he's probably experiencing a measure of relief and even gratitude that the weight of the crown has been at least temporarily lifted.

Comment: Does President Trump want to be impeached? 02:45

After all, he has never had any interest in actually running things and when he did he often ran them into the ground (count the bankruptcies, and now the debacle of US immigration policy). He is the CEO who is averse to managing, the deal-maker extraordinaire who comes away from the negotiating table empty-handed, having offended lifelong allies to the delight of our adversaries; he is the wizard investor who is said to have lost more money over a decade than practically any other American. His competence rests exclusively on his own testimonials. In Texas they call that "all hat and no cattle."

He is about scoring points, nothing more. It is only fitting that he was the host of the TV program "The Apprentice," a show about sycophants vying for his favor. Trump is himself a lifelong apprentice, first desperately vying for the acceptance of his martinet father, and later, the nation. Look at his life -- he is a success at courtship and wooing; fidelity, not so much.

In many ways, his inauguration was the high point of his presidency. What followed was the bewildering realization that something more was expected of him. He is perpetually on the campaign trail in pursuit of validation, and another win.

SE Cupp: Conway crying sexism is her go-to move 02:14

Trump, the consummate dealmaker, can always walk away from the table, not because he is a canny and tough negotiator, but because he does not seem to care what the outcome is or what the ultimate shape of the deal is. He has no true investment in the deal (the well-being of our country and its people), only in his ego -- it is enough that he appears to have won.

His singular talents span the spectrum from bluff to bluster, which work well enough in inherited wealth and reality TV, but less so for those enterprises requiring actual hands-on governance. And is it not the ultimate expression of executive privilege, the right not to behave as an executive at all? He is drawn to the prerogatives of power, and not what that power can do for others.

So in threatening to eschew all manner of presidential engagement, save the pomp and circumstance for which he lives, he has simply shed all pretense and shown his true self. State dinners, motorcades, the pandering of Fox & Friends and endless ego-stroking were all that he ever wanted. Even on the campaign trail, nothing was further from his mind than finding solutions to the nation's problems.

Smerconish: Trump has no strategy other than be provocative 02:45 He has become a case study in the old adage, "be careful what you wish for." One can be forgiven for wondering if it had even occurred to him that certain responsibilities might come along with holding office. How utterly inconvenient for tweeting and tee-off times.

And now we have the worst of all possible worlds: an abdication that leaves some 327 million Americans in limbo.

The problem is that Trump, in his own inimitable way, has created a most imperfect vacuum for the nation. For the foreseeable future the presidency will be both vacant and occupied, with the country reduced to waiting out his tantrum and deciphering its future from a fusillade of tweets and campaign-like rants.

Meanwhile, the nation's bridges are left to crack, highways buckle, tracks heave, illicit drugs proliferate, medications grow ever-more expensive; diplomats scratch their heads and hind parts, idled by kingly disinterest, allies wonder whether we have their backs or should watch their backs, enemies salivate, polar ice caps slip into the sea, and poor, poor Doral Country Club -- under Trump's storied management -- continues, like the rest of us, to struggle.

Stay up to date...

Now, freed of such noisome distractions as legislation, budgets, and infrastructure, he, like a child with a giant LEGO set, can concentrate on trying to build that wall to the south and dispense with pretending to care about the nation or its ills.

Instead of railing against Speaker Pelosi, he should be writing her a thank you note for handing him an excuse, however implausible, allowing him to shed the duties of the presidency. The saddest and most telling of all his pronouncements since entering office was this: "I loved my previous life."

TRUMP'S 'UNHINGED' BEHAVIOR COULD BE DUE TO 'UNTREATED SYPHILIS,' EXPERT CLAIMS https://news.yahoo.com/trump-unhinged-behavior-could-due-160708680.html?soc_src=hl-viewer&soc_trk=fb An expert in infectious diseases has claimed that President Donald Trump's erratic and bizarre behavior, which has led many mental health professionals to express fears that he could be mentally ill, could be part of the symptoms of syphilis, a sexually transmitted disease (STD). The shocking suggestion that Trump could be exhibiting the symptoms of dementia due to syphilis was put forward by Steven Beutler, an expert in infectious diseases, in an article titled, "A Medical Theory For Trump's Bizarre Behavior," published on Friday by the New Republic. "Many mental health professionals believe the president is ill. But what if the cause is an untreated STD?" Trump's 'bizarre, volatile behavior' could be from untreated syphilis: infectious disease doctor <https://t.co/dozqfS39w1> pic.twitter.com/xgUV6pC7MV – Raw Story (@RawStory) February 18, 2017 Click here to continue and read more...

'...The fact that Trump has shown all the major symptoms of neurosyphilis, including irritability, delusional thinking, grandiosity, and patchy hair loss, provides a basis to fear that he could be in the late stages of neurological illness due to syphilis infection, according to the medical expert...' '... Neurosyphilis is often misdiagnosed because it mimics non-infectious psychiatric illness. And according to Beutler, all of the symptoms of neurosyphilis, including "patchy hair loss," have been observed in Trump. "Commonly recognized symptoms include irritability, loss of ability to concentrate, delusional thinking, and grandiosity. Memory, insight, and judgment can become impaired. Insomnia may occur... Dementia... and patchy hair loss can also be seen in later stages of syphilis." Beutler admitted that it is impossible to determine from a distance that Trump has syphilis. He insisted, however, that part of his training as a medical professional is making "differential diagnosis" based on incomplete information. "Part of my training is to ask the right questions to get a sense of what the problem might be and make a list of possible diagnoses that could explain the problem," he wrote. "This is called the 'differential diagnosis,'" he continued. "From there, additional questions, examinations, and tests are performed that narrow down the list, usually to one unifying diagnosis." ...'

Donald Trump: stable genius

(CNN)If Washington politics were a movie, this week might be the time you turn to your companion and say, "Who writes this stuff?":

A President and "world-class deal maker," marveled Frida Ghitis, who demonstrates with a "temper tantrum," that he can't make deals. Who storms out of meetings with congressional leaders while insisting he's calm (and lines up his top aides to confirm it for the cameras). Who says, "I don't do cover-ups," with his administration on information lockdown -- offering justifications "that wouldn't pass muster in an episode of 'The Simpsons,'" remarked Julian Zelizer.

And who launches into a tirade -- in the middle of an event about aid to farmers -- to say I'm not crazy, she's crazy.

"She" being House Speaker Nancy Pelosi, who offered Trump her thoughts and prayers, and wished aloud that someone would get him an intervention. There was no need, I'm an "extremely stable genius," Trump told reporters, adding that he'll talk to Democrats when they stop investigating him. He's right, suggested Marc Thiessen in the Washington Post: "Nancy Pelosi can't accuse him of engaging in a coverup in the morning and expect him to negotiate with her on a $2 trillion infrastructure package in the afternoon."

By week's end, Trump and supporters were previewing what critics believed his re-election campaign would look like. He retweeted a Fox Business Network video mashup of Pelosi stammering during a news conference on Capitol Hill on Thursday. "It's pathetic," protested SE Cupp, adding "childish" and "impotent." "But it's disgusting and disturbing to watch the president and leader of the free world do it time and time again."

GOP Ex-Lawmaker Demands Impeachment Of Donald Trump, Resignation Of Mike Pence Lee Moran HuffPost•May 24, 2019 Former Rep. Tom Coleman (R-Mo.) has penned a blistering op-ed calling for the impeachment of "illegitimate" President Donald Trump. Coleman, in his piece for The Kansas City Star published Thursday titled "Trump, Pence are illegitimate. Impeach them," argued that if Trump was impeached, then Vice President Mike Pence should resign as otherwise "the lingering stench of corruption" would trail his administration. Special counsel Robert Mueller's report, Coleman wrote, showed Trump and members of his team had "on multiple occasions welcomed Russian interference on his behalf during the 2016 presidential campaign." Therefore, Coleman reasoned, "the president's election victory brought forth nothing less than an illegitimate president." Coleman, who has criticized Trump in the past and opposed his candidacy, was voted out of Congress after 17 years in 1993. He noted in his op-ed that House Democrats were divided over whether to begin impeachment proceedings. But "critical times require exceptional leadership," he wrote, suggesting the "only viable option available" is for the Democratic-controlled House "to open its own investigation, hold public hearings and then determine if they should pursue removal of the president through impeachment." "The public would conclude Democrats are no better than the Republicans who have enabled Trump for the past two years” if they did not move to impeach him, Coleman wrote. He concluded with this warning: It could hand Trump a second term. Failure to pursue impeachment is to condone wrongdoing. To condone wrongdoing is to encourage more of it. To encourage wrongdoing is to give up on the rule of law and our democracy. To give up on the rule of law and democracy invites autocracy and eventually dictatorship. History has taught us this outcome. In my lifetime, it has occurred in other places including the Soviet Union and Germany, as well as in Russia and Venezuela today. Coleman... Continue reading on HuffPost

Dow rises 150 points at start of Friday action but poised for 5th weekly loss in a row ahead of Memorial Day U.S. stocks opened higher on Friday, capping a mostly downbeat week for equities, weighed by U.S.-China trade tensions, which put the three main indexes on track to post consecutive weekly losses heading into the Memorial Day holiday. The Dow Jones Industrial Average (DJIA) rose 150 points, or 0.6%, at 25,651, set for a weekly slump of 1.1% and its fifth straight weekly loss, as of Thursday's close, the S&P 500 index (SPX) rose 17 points, or 0.6%, at 2,839, poised for a 1.3% weekly skid. The main political news for the day centered on apparent softening of trade tensions between the U.S. and China and Theresa May's announced resignation as U.K. prime minister amid her failed attempts at Brexit.

Robert Reich The pattern is eerily similar to 2007 and 1928 (remember what happened immediately after those years).

- 1. Price-earnings ratios on the stock market are 28 to one – just what they were in 1928.
- 2. Households are taking on even more debt. Credit card delinquency rates in the first quarter of the year have hit the highest level since 2012, driven partly by a spike in overdue payments by people ages 18–29, according to the New York Federal Reserve. We're also seeing a spike in home refinancings – just as we did in the years leading up to the crash of 2008.
- 3. Another parallel: Corporations are deep in debt. The Federal Reserve warned that corporate America is taking on too much debt. Junk bonds are soaring once again. According to Bloomberg, "deeply indebted companies are borrowing even more to pay equity holders."

Bottom line: Watch your wallets. The years after 1928 and 2007 weren't pretty.

Susan Edelman Blank As a psychotherapist, I read the pro-Trump comments with both fascination and horror as they corroborate the work of Robert Jay Lifton, who coined the term “malignant normality” to describe how so-called ordinary Germans could fall in line with the fascist doctrine of Nazism without blinking an eye. To those who said it can’t happen here, just read these nationalistic, nonsensical pro-Trump comments; it is happening right before our eyes.

Susan Edelman Blank Carol Rzepny yes, Carol, many Germans did not fall in line with the Nazis, many joined the underground, others hid Jews, many tried in small ways to resist, and others kept silent and prayed for deliverance from evil. The psychological makeup of today’s Trump resisters is similar to the psychological makeup of the Nazi resisters of the 30’s and 40’s. I just pray Trump can be stopped.

Lee writes Psychiatrists warn the Mueller report provides more evidence Donald Trump is mentally unfit to serve”Such a mindset of false beliefs in freedom from consequences is extremely dangerous,” Bandy X. Lee writes This article originally appeared on Raw Story Three psychiatrists have written an editorial for the Boston Globe warning that special counsel Robert Mueller’s report on Russian interference in the 2016 presidential election shows more evidence that President Donald Trump is mentally unfit to hold office. The psychiatrists — Dr. Bandy X. Lee of Yale, Dr. Leonard L. Glass of Harvard Medical School, and Edwin B. Fisher of University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill — argue that Mueller’s report provides a disturbing new window into the president’s behavior, which is frequently marked by impulsive emotional meltdowns. “The pattern that emerges of the president is one of rash, short-sighted decision-making, without consideration of consequences,” they write. “Reckless, impulsive moves that are self-destructive, despite the intention of self-protection, are characteristic of dangerous impairment. They impede Trump’s capacity to prioritize national security.” They then quote from sections of the Mueller report that illustrate these behaviors, including his efforts to dangle pardons to potential witnesses and his effort to get Mueller fired as special counsel. They say that his ordering former White House counsel Don McGahn to get rid of Mueller should be seen as especially alarming given how inherently self-destructive it was.

4-22-19 Update: Politics USA TODAY Opinion I've warned that impeachment talk is dangerous, but the time has come: Laurence Tribe The consequential decision to impeach should not be made lightly. But Mueller's damning report is an invitation that Congress shouldn't refuse. [Laurence Tribe knows something about constitutional law. For corrupt greedy senile guinea Pelosi it should be his way or the highway!] ... Even the most pragmatic legal practitioners tip their hats in respect for the otherwise esoteric 'Laurence Tribe' (ie., those law school/paper chase days)

'Obstruction of justice-the statute making obstruction criminal-prohibits interfering, or attempting to interfere, with a criminal prosecution or an investigation the government's conducting' Napolitano said. The Mueller Report, Napolitano believes, lays out a number of presidential acts that constitute obstruction of justice including:

- When Trump asked Deputy National Security Adviser KT McFarland to write an untruthful letter to the file, knowing the government would subpoena it.
- When Trump asked Corey Lewandowski to get Mueller fired.
- When Trump asked Don McGahn to get Mueller fired and then to lie about it.
- When Trump asked McGahn to go back to Mueller's team and change his testimony.
- When Trump dangled a pardon in front of Michael Cohen, in order to keep Cohen to testifying against him.

'...Donnie Trump's Attorney General Bill Barr gave his first congressional testimony in the wake of the release of the Mueller report this morning and it revealed why Trump was in panic mode this morning. During her line of questioning, Senator Dianne Feinstein, ranking Democratic judiciary committee member, managed to get Barr to reveal the exact law Trump broke per the evidence in Mueller's report..... Feinstein simply described the evidence in Mueller's report that details Trump's efforts to get White House counsel Don McGahn to lie about Trump ordering him to fire Mueller. Feinstein then asked if it is illegal to try and get a witness to lie (duh), to which Barr answered, 'Uh, yes.' She then asked him to cite the exact law, to which Barr said,

'THE OBSTRUCTION STATUTES' .

The party told you to reject the evidence of your eyes and ears. It was their final, most essential command. His heart sank as he thought of the enormous power arrayed against him, the ease with which any Party intellectual would overthrow him in debate, the subtle arguments which he would not be able to understand, much less answer. And yet he was in the right! They were wrong and he was right.

Psychiatrists warn the Mueller report provides more evidence Donald Trump is mentally unfit to serve "Such a mindset of false beliefs in freedom from consequences is extremely dangerous," Bandy X. Lee writes Psychiatrists warn the Mueller report provides more evidence Donald Trump is mentally unfit to serve"Such a mindset of false beliefs in freedom from consequences is extremely dangerous," Bandy X. Lee writes This article originally appeared on Raw Story Three psychiatrists have written an editorial for the Boston Globe warning that special counsel Robert Mueller's report on Russian interference in the 2016 presidential election shows more evidence that President Donald Trump is mentally unfit to hold office. The psychiatrists — Dr. Bandy X. Lee of Yale, Dr. Leonard L. Glass of Harvard Medical School, and Edwin B. Fisher of University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill — argue that Mueller's report provides a disturbing new window into the president's behavior, which is frequently marked by impulsive emotional meltdowns. "The pattern that emerges of the president is one of rash, short-sighted decision-making, without consideration of consequences," they write. "Reckless, impulsive moves that are self-destructive, despite the intention of self-protection, are characteristic of dangerous impairment. They impede Trump's capacity to prioritize national security." They then quote from sections of the Mueller report that illustrate these behaviors, including his efforts to dangle pardons to potential witnesses and his effort to get Mueller fired as special counsel. They say that his ordering former White House counsel Don McGahn to get rid of Mueller should be seen as especially alarming given how inherently self-destructive it was.

Susan Edelman Blank As a psychotherapist, I read the pro-Trump comments with both fascination and horror as they corroborate the work of Robert Jay Lifton, who coined the term “malignant normality” to describe how so-called ordinary Germans could fall in line with the fascist doctrine of Nazism without blinking an eye. To those who said it can’t happen here, just read these nationalistic, nonsensical pro-Trump comments; it is happening right before our eyes.

Susan Edelman Blank Carol Rzepny yes, Carol, many Germans did not fall in line with the Nazis, many joined the underground, others hid Jews, many tried in small ways to resist, and others kept silent and prayed for deliverance from evil. The psychological makeup of today’s Trump resisters is similar to the psychological makeup of the Nazi resisters of the 30’s and 40’s. I just pray Trump can be stopped.

GOP Rep. Amash becomes first Republican to call for Trump's impeachment

By Eli Watkins and Kevin Bohn, CNN

Updated 7:55 PM ET, Sat May 18, 2019

Washington (CNN) Michigan GOP Rep. Justin Amash said Saturday he had concluded President Donald Trump committed "impeachable conduct" and accused Attorney General William Barr of intentionally misleading the public.

Amash's comments recommending Congress pursue obstruction of justice charges against Trump were the first instance of a sitting Republican in Congress calling for Trump's impeachment.

Justin Amash is the loneliest Republican in Congress

Amash is a rare GOP critic of Trump and previously said Trump's conduct in pressuring then-FBI Director James Comey could merit impeachment. In a Twitter thread on Saturday, Amash said he believed "few members of Congress even read" special counsel Robert Mueller's report and that the report itself established "multiple examples" of Trump committing obstruction of justice.

"Contrary to Barr's portrayal, Mueller's report reveals that President Trump engaged in specific actions and a pattern of behavior that meet the threshold for impeachment," Amash said in a string of messages on Twitter.

- CNN found 77 instances of lies and false assertions in Mueller's report. Trump told the greatest number
- 77 lies and falsehoods Mueller called out
- What Trump associates told the public vs. what they told Mueller
- 4 times Barr twisted and cherry-picked Mueller's report

Democratic Rep. Rashida Tlaib, also of Michigan, responded to Amash's Twitter thread later Saturday and invited him to join her impeachment resolution.

".@justinamash come find me in 1628 Longworth. I've got an impeachment investigation resolution you're going to want to cosponsor," Tlaib tweeted.

Amash -- a libertarian conservative elected during the Tea Party wave of 2010 -- was a founding member of the House Freedom Caucus, a key bloc of Republicans who worked to shift the GOP caucus to the right on many issues, but in the Trump era, he has found himself breaking with his conservative allies who have embraced the President.

Amash said on Saturday that he made his conclusions "only after having read Mueller's redacted report carefully and completely, having read or watched pertinent statements and testimony, and having discussed this matter with my staff, who thoroughly reviewed materials and provided me with further analysis."

He said Barr misled the public in a range of venues regarding the Mueller report, a charge Democrats and others have made repeatedly that the attorney general has disputed.

"Barr's misrepresentations are significant but often subtle, frequently taking the form of sleight-of-hand qualifications or logical fallacies, which he hopes people will not notice," Amash said.

Amash said "contrary to Barr's portrayal," Trump's actions "meet the threshold for impeachment" and that anyone without the unique legal protections of the presidency would be facing an indictment.

He argued that it was Congress' role to move forward with impeachment and accused people on both sides of the aisle of political motives, saying they had shifted "their views 180 degrees ... depending on whether they're discussing (former President) Bill Clinton or Donald Trump."

"Our system of checks and balances relies on each branch's jealously guarding its powers and upholding its duties under our Constitution," Amash tweeted. "When loyalty to a political party or to an individual trumps loyalty to the Constitution, the Rule of Law -- the foundation of liberty -- crumbles."

CNN's Clare Foran and Ashley Killough contributed to this report.

Yale psychiatrist explains how to deprogram Trump supporters who've been sucked into the vortex of his lies

Even as President Donald Trump is battered by controversies, including a recent report that his self-proclaimed business acumen is largely a sham — he lost money starting in the 1980s — his approval ratings among his supporters remain high.

Raw Story spoke with Dr. Bandy X. Lee, a forensic psychiatrist at Yale School of Medicine, about why Trump supporters are so loyal to the President. She and several co-authors recently submitted an analysis of what the Mueller report revealed about the President’s mental health, covered here and here. Their summary of the report was the number one article in the

Dr. Lee has also been a vocal critic of the American Psychiatric Association’s alteration of the Goldwater rule since the Trump administration, so much so that she held a conference on it in April 2017, inviting the most preeminent psychiatrists in the nation.

Their critique of the altered Goldwater rule led to a book in defiance of the change, which became the New York Times bestseller, “The Dangerous Case of Donald Trump.” Since then, thousands of mental health professionals joined her to form the World Mental Health Coalition (dangerouscase.org), intended as an alternative to the American Psychiatric Association, and named her president.

Raw Story: If you had the chance to speak with Trump supporters, what would you say to them?

Dr. Bandy X. Lee: I am already in contact with many, and have worked with, shared meals with, and “hung out” with several while working in Alabama. Contrary to the stereotype, they are often some of the most humane and most innocent people I have met, which is why they trusted so easily.

It is heartbreaking to consider how they have been exploited—over the years by a politics that retains power not by serving them but through psychological manipulation, and now through a predatory president.

I would say to them, it has become time to ask ourselves: do we have the self-respect to demand a leader who is even capable of leading? Our recent test on his capacity was intended as a service to the public, based on the rigorous information in Robert Mueller's report: he failed on every criterion. We also just learned of the president's spectacular business failures during the years he flaunted himself as being the biggest success, while he lost more than any other American on record.

It is difficult to make this shift, especially when we have invested so much, but after a while, it takes less energy to change than to continue making excuses to protect "our guy."

Policy-wise, he is hurting his everyday supporters the most (not the billionaire supporters). If we stopped to think for a moment—doesn't it bother us that he deceived us into believing he was a successful businessman, the only qualification he brought for being a successful politician, when all he did was go to his father when in trouble? Doesn't it disturb us that he so lies, cheats, and defrauds the public, that it is safer to assume that every word out of his mouth is the opposite of what is true? Should we tolerate a president whom more than 800 former federal prosecutors, of both parties, would call a criminal?

Raw Story: Is there anything you would advise them to do?

Dr. Bandy X. Lee: The transition will be gradual and painful, but the moment they realize they hold the power and do not have to submit to a strong authority to be safe, they won't be so easily fooled any more. This is all understandable; working in the criminal justice system, I know how good serial predators can be—they can create powerful emotional bonds.

This is what they thrive on.

I rather hold responsible the institutions that propped him up for their short-term profits, and the American Psychiatric Association is chief among them. Given that the insidious effects of mental pathology defined this whole presidency, the Association was in a unique position to prevent vast suffering. Psychiatrists understand not just mental illness but criminal behavior, violence, capacity to serve in an office, and many other things. By aggressively shaping a milieu where mental health professionals would not be able to share their knowledge as a national mental health crisis was unfolding, the Association instead primed the public to become the president's prey.

Raw Story: Those are strong words. How do you make that claim?

Dr. Bandy X. Lee: The public has a right to know what the American Psychiatric Association has done. Imagine if a high official contracted Ebola. One would not think twice about deferring to doctors about proper management. The doctors do not make political decisions but medical ones, and based on recommendations, political bodies would coordinate. The important, immediate issue at hand is to contain the disease and spread of harm.

I have described the current president's condition as worse than Ebola—and yet, imagine if the Ebola doctors were prohibited from even uttering a word of caution, for fear of upsetting the high official, and leaving the disease to its natural course. By propagating popular misconceptions that mental health issues are somehow different than other health issues, that it is imaginary or subjective—or worse, just an insult—the APA has effectively stigmatized the entire field of mental health. By allowing a serious condition to continue without even educating the public, it has allowed pathology to spread unchecked.

Raw Story: Why did you decide to boycott the very symposium you helped to organize at the American Psychiatric Association?

Dr. Bandy X. Lee: I have lost faith in the Association's ability to have an honest discussion. Psychiatrists were never supposed to be beholden to public figures—our primary responsibilities are to patients and to society. The actual Goldwater rule says this: work to improve the community and public health, and when asked about a public figure, educate the public—just don't diagnose.

Instead, the APA expanded the “don’t diagnose” part out of proportion to silence an entire profession and to change public expectations. Its timing and aggressive public relations campaign make clear that it intended to protect Donald Trump, not ethics.

That said, I should clarify that the leadership did this by fiat, against member protests. We are now in a constitutional crisis, about to enter catastrophic wars, and economic breakdown is looming—all in ways that were wholly predictable from having a mentally unstable president.

Science now shows that even diagnosis does not require a personal interview. By distorting ethics and falsely intimidating experts, it deprived the public of critical knowledge at a critical time. Edmund Burke said, “All tyranny needs to gain a foothold is for people of good conscience to remain silent.” And what better way to serve tyranny than to institutionalize this silence?

Psychiatrists warn the Mueller report provides more evidence Donald Trump is mentally unfit to serve "Such a mindset of false beliefs in freedom from consequences is extremely dangerous," Bandy X. Lee writes Psychiatrists warn the Mueller report provides more evidence Donald Trump is mentally unfit to serve"Such a mindset of false beliefs in freedom from consequences is extremely dangerous," Bandy X. Lee writes This article originally appeared on Raw Story Three psychiatrists have written an editorial for the Boston Globe warning that special counsel Robert Mueller's report on Russian interference in the 2016 presidential election shows more evidence that President Donald Trump is mentally unfit to hold office. The psychiatrists — Dr. Bandy X. Lee of Yale, Dr. Leonard L. Glass of Harvard Medical School, and Edwin B. Fisher of University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill — argue that Mueller's report provides a disturbing new window into the president's behavior, which is frequently marked by impulsive emotional meltdowns. "The pattern that emerges of the president is one of rash, short-sighted decision-making, without consideration of consequences," they write. "Reckless, impulsive moves that are self-destructive, despite the intention of self-protection, are characteristic of dangerous impairment. They impede Trump's capacity to prioritize national security." They then quote from sections of the Mueller report that illustrate these behaviors, including his efforts to dangle pardons to potential witnesses and his effort to get Mueller fired as special counsel. They say that his ordering former White House counsel Don McGahn to get rid of Mueller should be seen as especially alarming given how inherently self-destructive it was.

$21 TRILLION DOLLARS IS MISSING FROM THE US GOVERNMENT. <https://missingmoney.solari.com> <https://home.solari.com> $21 Trillion dollars is missing from the US government. That is $65,000 per person - as much as the national debt!

"No money shall be drawn from the treasury, but in consequence of appropriations made by law; and a regular statement and account of

receipts and expenditures of all public money shall be published from time to time.*~ Article I, Section 9, Clause 7, U.S. Constitution

What's going on? Where is the money? How could this happen? How much has really gone missing? What would happen if a corporation failed to pass an audit like this? Or a taxpayer? This means the Fed and their member banks are transacting government money outside the law. So are the corporate contractors that run the payment systems. So are the Wall Street firms who are selling government securities without full disclosure. Would your banks continue to handle your bank account if you behaved like this? Would your investors continue to buy your securities if you behaved like this? Would your accountant be silent? This is the reason that there is such a strong push to change or tear up the US Constitution. This is why members of the establishment say it is "old," "outdated!" This is why there is such a push for gun control. Don't buy it! We can use the Constitution to get our money and our government back. It is time to enforce the US Constitution. The Solari Report has been covering the missing money since 2000 when Catherine Austin Fitts began to warn Americans and global investors about mortgage fraud at the US Department of Housing and Development (HUD), the engineering of the housing bubble that led to trillions more dollars in bailouts and funds missing from the US government starting in fiscal 1998.
