I believe that to fully comprehend this horrific american scenario encompassing decline and fall, the following are helpful and instructive. First, an understanding of biological anthropology is helpful, particularly as pertains to breeding populations as regionally exist throughout america. Second, a thorough grasp of psychology is crucial given the alarming prevalence of severe mental illness throughout america and at all levels of society. Third, command of the subject generally denoted as criminology is necessary to fully enable successful approach to the uniquely pervasive levels of criminality throughout the united states. I believe word pictures in the minds eye of america's devastating plight can be derived from such profound literary works as: Lord of the Flies-Golding; 1984, Animal Farm-Orwell; and, given the wall obsession of mental case mobster thief in chief trump, the film, Escape From New York (america - full wall enclosure/containment of american criminality to america)-Carpenter.

CATCH UP ON THE LATEST NEWS ON RUDY GIULIANI, HIS ASSOCIATES AND THE IMPEACHMENT INQUIRY

Analysis by Zachary B. Wolf, CNN

(CNN)A version of this story first appeared in CNN's Impeachment Watch newsletter.

Bombshell of the day: Feds scrutinizing Giuliani business ties to indicted Ukrainians

Two of Rudy Giuliani's Ukraine contacts were arrested on charges of violating campaign finance laws. Now the feds are looking at Giuliani's financial dealings with the men, Lev Parnas and Igor Fruman. They introduced President Donald Trump's personal lawyer to Ukrainian officials who pushed unfounded theories about corruption involving former Vice President Joe Biden and his son Hunter, report CNN's Shimon Prokupez and Evan Perez. LINK

Trump, on his way to a rally in Minneapolis, told reporters he had no knowledge of the situation and hadn't spoken to Giuliani about it. "I don't know them," he said. "I don't know about them, I don't know what they do. But, I don't know, maybe they were clients of Rudy. You'd have to ask Rudy. I just don't know."

Let's back it up: What happened Wednesday night? This story is wild Parnas and Fruman were arrested at Dulles airport outside Washington late Wednesday.

They had one-way tickets to Frankfurt.

Now they're being held in Virginia.

The Soviet-born, Florida- and New York-dwelling, US citizens are accused of breaking finance law along with a Ukrainian-born American and a US-born American. A Russian investor is also involved, but wasn't indicted.

The lawyers negotiating their $1 million bail deals represented Paul Manafort, Trump's former campaign chairman, who's now in federal prison after being convicted of tax fraud.

They paraded their access to Trump. There are pictures of them with the President all over social media. Trump said today he doesn't know them.

They allegedly gave an illegal $325,000 contribution to Committee-1, which turns out to be a Trump-aligned super PAC whose staff includes Sean Spicer and other former White House officials. The super PAC, America First Action, says it hasn't spent the money and put it in a separate account.

They allegedly set up a scheme to raise tens of thousands of dollars for Congressman-1 (former Texas Republican Rep. Pete Sessions) before he lost reelection in 2018. They pushed him to get former US Ambassador to Ukraine Marie Yovanovitch recalled to Washington -- successfully, it turned out. She was recalled in May.

Sessions today denied knowing about any wrongdoing.

We're just learning about the other two Americans indicted, David Correia and Andrey Kukushkin, and we don't yet know who the identity of the unnamed Russian in the indictment.

It is a bizarre story, even before you get to the failed scheme for a chain of marijuana shops. LINK House Minority Leader Kevin McCarthy, said he'll give the $11,000 his Protect the House committee got from Parnas and Fruman to charity. LINK

Rick Perry subpoenaed

The energy secretary's turning into a key figure in this mess since he was pushing with the diplomats for Trump to be more engaged on Ukraine. Perry says he never pushed Biden theories with Trump. A House subpoena will likely run up against the same stonewalling from the White House that's greeted other subpoenas. LINK

Spokeswoman Shaylyn Hynes says: "The Department of Energy is aware of the House Committees' letter to Secretary Perry and it is currently under review by DOE's Office of General Counsel."

What else?

Mike Pompeo's senior adviser resigns -- Michael McKinley, a senior adviser to Secretary of State Mike Pompeo, has resigned, two sources familiar with the matter told CNN on Thursday. The Washington Post first reported McKinley's resignation, adding that it came in the midst of growing discontent at the State Department in response to Pompeo's perceived lack of support for department officials caught up in investigations linked to Ukraine.

Trump's former top Russia adviser to testify she was unaware of some aspects of Ukraine scandal -- Fiona Hill, President Donald Trump's former top Russia adviser, will explain to Congress when she testifies next week that she was unaware of some aspects of the escalating Ukraine scandal, according to a source close with Hill who spoke to her Thursday.

National security officials raised concerns about Trump's Ukraine policy before call -- At least four national security officials were so concerned by the Trump administration's efforts to pressure Ukraine for political purposes that they shared their discontent with a White House lawyer both before and after President Donald Trump's July phone call with Ukraine's President, The Washington Post reported Thursday, citing US officials and other people familiar with the matter.

H.R. McMaster says it's "absolutely not" appropriate for presidents to ask for foreign help -- The former national security adviser to President Donald Trump said it is "absolutely not" appropriate for a president to ask other countries to interfere in the political process of the US.

Trump rallies in Minnesota -- President Donald Trump used his rally in Minneapolis Thursday night to hit some of his favorite campaign trail targets -- railing against Democrats, reasserting his support for law enforcement and criticizing immigration policies, including targeting Somali refugees. He also responded to the latest news in the impeachment inquiry, taking aim the Bidens and insisting that he has done nothing wrong.

Whistleblower lawyers float written testimony -- House impeachment investigators have floated a variety of ways to keep the whistleblower's identity under wraps and still let the individual testify on Capitol Hill. His lawyers suggested just letting him testify in writing. LINK TO WSJ

All but 7 House Democrats now support the impeachment inquiry -- Support from Rep. Xochitl Torres Small of New Mexico brings the tally to 228 of 235 Dems. Just 1 non-Democrat, former Republican Justin Amash of Michigan, is on board. LINK

Sen. Cory Gardner has no answer on foreign influence -- He's running for reelection in Colorado, one of the most hotly contested states, and he would not answer if it's improper for a politician to ask foreign government for help. Says it's political. Video on Twitter

Sen. Lamar Alexander criticizes Trump -- He's retiring and he thinks impeachment is a mistake, but Alexander became the fifth Senate Republican to express frustration with the President asking foreign governments to investigate Biden. LINK

Pranked -- Sen. Lindsey Graham was duped by some Russian radio hosts. They did something similar to Democrat Adam Schiff, chair of the House Intelligence Committee, a while back. LINK to Politico

Coming Friday

Yovanovitch, the recalled Ukraine ambassador, is scheduled to testify before House investigators -- Will the State Department and the White House let her? That's the key question heading into Friday. Her prominence in the indictment against Giuliani's Ukraine middlemen makes her possible testimony that much more interesting.

She's still on the schedule, but here's what Trump said Thursday: "I just don't think, you're running a country, I just don't think that you can have all of these people testifying about every conversation you've had." Read more about her here

What are we doing here?

The President has invited foreign powers to interfere in the US presidential election.

Democrats want to impeach him for it.

It is a crossroads for the American system of government as the President tries to change what's acceptable for US politicians. This newsletter will focus on this consequential moment in US history.

First, this strategy of smearing his opponent in conspiracy theories and enlisting the support of foreign governments worked well for him against Hillary Clinton in 2016, and back then he didn't have access to all the elements of power he possesses as president.

Second, Trump may believe that by speaking openly about what he has done, it will look like it's nothing to be ashamed of, perfectly normal, instead of an astonishing abuse of power and violation of his oath of office. And Politics The Guardian Trump's foreign policy is for sale. That threatens our national security The president's efforts to govern in his own self-interest will undermine the world's faith in our commitments'Trump will use the full power of the United States to compel countries to do his dirty work.' Photograph: Mandel Ngan/AFP/Getty ImagesThe Ukraine scandal is not only undermining American democracy - it's damaging national security. US foreign policy increasingly looks like that of a mafia state, wielded at the behest of, and for the benefit of, one man's personal interests, and for sale to the highest bidders. This is devastating America's role in the world.Trump led an effort - along with other government officials and the president's personal lawyer - to use the power of the United States to pressure the government of Ukraine to fabricate smears about one of Trump's domestic political opponents. As the White House admitted in a transcript of Trump's 25 July call with the Ukrainian president, Volodymyr Zelenskiy, Trump asked Zelenskiy for a "favor" - to look into the former vice-president Joe Biden and his son - and said that the US attorney general, Bill Barr, and Trump's personal lawyer, Rudy Giuliani, would help.At the same time, Trump withheld military assistance to Ukraine - which is fighting a war with Russia - on a timeline that makes it clear that it was part of an attempt to use taxpayer dollars as leverage to get Ukraine to do Trump's personal bidding. The US under Trump could be treated like a powerful autocracy - a country that must be dealt with, but not trusted. This is confirmed by the whistleblower complaint from a member of the US intelligence community, who sums it all up: "The President of the United States is using the power of his office to solicit interference from a foreign country in the 2020 US election." The complaint also describes an effort by the White House to hide the president's conversation with Zelenskyy because officials knew how damning it was. And then, the White House and the Department of Justice intervened to prevent the complaint from making its way to Congress as the law requires. Many more facts are sure to follow, but the facts we already know are damning: Trump has been using the power of the presidency to extort a foreign government to help his own re-election chances. Trump's administration then tried to cover it up. And when it came out, Trump threatened the whistleblower with retaliation. All of this has fueled an impeachment inquiry. This kind of behavior, coming from the president of the United States, is shocking. But coming from Trump, it is hardly surprising. The former FBI director Robert Mueller documented in 448 pages of a Department of Justice report the extent to which Trump and his campaign worked to solicit, receive and coordinate assistance from Russia in the 2016 election, as well as the numerous attempts by Trump to obstruct that investigation. Trump refused to shed his private business interests before assuming office, meaning that as president he has faced numerous conflicts of interest. His family's financial dealings with countries ranging from China to Saudi Arabia raise suspicion about whose interests Trump is pursuing. 'Now we are learning that Trump attempted to convince the Australian prime minister to help discredit the origins of the Mueller investigation.' Photograph: Saul Loeb/AFP/Getty Images Now we are learning that Trump attempted to convince the Australian prime minister to help discredit the origins of the Mueller investigation - and the White House again recognized how explosive this was and hid the transcript of the conversation. It also appears that Barr is a lead player in conducting Trump's personal foreign policy, trying to get others, including the United Kingdom and Italy, to help discredit the Mueller investigation. That Trump and the top official in charge of enforcing US law would try to get some of America's closest allies and intelligence partners to help with Trump's own personal political agenda is deeply troubling. All of this makes clear (if it wasn't already clear) that Trump will use the full power of the United States to compel countries to do his dirty work. The reports of more hidden transcripts of presidential conversations - a practice that appears to extend at least to conversations with the Russian president, Vladimir Putin, and Saudi Arabia's leader, Mohammed bin Salman - raise serious questions about what other US interests Trump has sacrificed for his own gain. The possibilities for Trump to undermine US interests are endless. If allies want the United States to uphold treaties, maybe Trump will demand cash payments - not to the United States, but to Trump himself. If countries want good trade terms, maybe Trump will require them to fabricate scandals about members of Congress who are investigating him. Perhaps China will sweeten the pot of a trade deal with more trademarks for Ivanka Trump's businesses or assistance in her father's re-election campaign. In fact, there is a report that Trump may have already attempted to ask China to look into the Biden family. At their next summit, the North Korean leader, Kim Jong-un, could offer to use North Korea's cyber-hacking capabilities to help Trump's campaign in exchange for sanctions relief. We're through the looking glass now. America's friends are perplexed, and the damage could be incalculable. Some countries may try to placate Trump because the United States is indeed powerful and they are scared that the US mob-boss-in-chief might break their legs. But they will hate us, look for other options, and ditch us at the first opportunity. Our closest allies will reject us. No matter how important the US alliance is for these countries, the current scandal will force them to distance themselves even further from the United States. Intelligence cooperation could slow because allies know Trump is abusing those channels. No one will have faith in US commitments because they fear that Trump will sell them out for personal gain. The United States under Trump could be treated like a powerful autocracy - a country that must be dealt with, but not trusted, and always hedged against. Trump must be held to account for the sake of national security.

<http://albertpeia.com/defraudingamerica3.pdf> WASHPOST Whistleblower, working in stealth, almost single-handedly set impeachment in motion

The whistleblower has by some measures managed to exceed what former special counsel Robert S. Mueller III accomplished in two years of investigating President Trump: producing a file so concerning and factually sound that it has almost single-handedly set in motion the gears of impeachment. Effort to shield call with Ukrainian leader was part of broader secrecy effort While President Trump approved the release of the rough transcript to combat the whistleblower's allegations, he has once again charged that people with access to his calls are conspiring against him. Intelligence panel has deal to hear whistleblower's testimony Barr is said to have urged foreign governments to aid investigation of CIA, FBI activities related to 2016 election

Go after Trump, urges Watergate-era Democrat Elizabeth Holtzman, a former member of the Judiciary Committee that voted to impeach President Richard Nixon in 1974, warned Thursday that Democrats in charge of making the case against Donald Trump need to learn some lessons from the past. “Perhaps because I participated in the only impeachment process that was a success in that it did remove a president from office, I see that as a pretty good example of what worked,” she said in an interview with Yahoo News. Holtzman, now 78 and of counsel with the New York law firm Herrick Feinstein, was, in 1972, the youngest woman ever elected to Congress, where she served for eight years. She has long been a critic of the current president, and in January of this year published “The Case for Impeaching Trump,” a book which detailed allegations of what she views as violations of the Emoluments Clause. The book also takes issue with Trump over his policy of separating families who illegally cross the U.S. border with Mexico. Holtzman also analyzes his obstruction of investigations into his potential abuse of power and his refusal to harden the election system to avoid further interference. Those allegations, which predate by months and years the ones in the whistleblower’s report that came to light this week, are why Holtzman is urging this generation’s investigators to pursue multiple lines of inquiry. To those pundits and politicians who are saying it might be simpler politically to focus only on Trump’s urging the Ukrainian President Volodymyr Zelensky to investigate Joe Biden’s son, she responds that, because impeachment is a dramatic remedy, it requires a dramatic rationale. “The constitutional framers argued about exactly this,” she said, noting that some of the Founding Fathers suggested that an impeachment provision was not necessary because “we have elections and we will solve the problem of a bad president with elections.” Others at the constitutional convention pushed back — and won — by arguing that “a president can become such a danger to democracy that he has to be removed promptly.” The bar is high, she said, and “requires proving a threat to democracy. You show a number of grave, egregious abuses of power, you show that this is not an isolated act but a systemic use of power by the president of the United States against the Constitution and the people of the United States.” To those pundits and politicians who are saying it might be simpler politically to focus only on Trump’s urging the Ukrainian President Volodymyr Zelensky to investigate Joe Biden’s son, she responds that, because impeachment is a dramatic remedy, it requires a dramatic rationale. “The constitutional framers argued about exactly this,” she said, noting that some of the

You show a number of grave, egregious abuses of power, you show that this is not an isolated act but a systemic use of power by the president of the United States against the Constitution and the people of the United States.” She is not impressed so far by the questioning of recent witnesses Corey Lewandowski and Joseph Maguire, who she saw as “stonewalling” the House Judiciary and Intelligence committees. Representatives need to “get a lot tougher,” Holtzman said, and use such tools as contempt charges, fines, “warnings that they will draw the most serious adverse inference from refusal to cooperate that they can.” Should all that fail, she added, Democrats in Congress should “get out some fresh sheets, clean out the [detention] room in the Capitol and arrest them.” As for the political realities of this investigation, Holtzman says she is unsure whether the Republicans in the Senate will ever be persuaded to vote to impeach. Both houses of Congress were under Democratic control in 1974, and even then it was a long and difficult fight. But even if failure is likely, she concludes, House Democrats are correct to take action. “I don’t think she had a choice,” Holtzman said of House Speaker Nancy Pelosi, who finally agreed to back an impeachment investigation on Tuesday night, long after some in her party had begun calling for one. “I think her hand was forced by the latest information. You can’t have a president using a foreign country to interfere in a presidential election and not declare that is unacceptable,” Holtzman said. “If you don’t stop him here, where will he be stopped?”

Now, circle back to Trump's conversation with Zelensky. To revisit that conversation:

1. Trump, after congratulating Zelensky on his win, very quickly establishes that the United States has been very, very good to Ukraine. "I will say that we do a lot for Ukraine. We spend a lot of effort and a lot of time. Much more than the European countries are doing and they should be helping you more than they are."

2. He then makes clear that the US does a lot more for Ukraine than Ukraine does for the US.

"I wouldn't say that it's reciprocal necessarily because things are happening that are not good but the United States has been very, very good to Ukraine."

3. Trump directly asks Zelensky to investigate Joe Biden and his son, Hunter.

"There's a lot of talk about Biden's son, that Biden stopped the prosecution and a lot of people want to find out about that so whatever you can do with the Attorney General would be great. Biden went around bragging that he stopped the prosecution so if you can look into it ... It sounds horrible to me."

4. He suggests that Zelensky should talk to his personal lawyer Rudy Giuliani and Attorney General Bill Barr.

"I will have Mr. Giuliani give you a call and I am also going to have Attorney General Barr call and we will get to the bottom of it."

5. And then Trump reiterates that suggestion.

"I will tell Rudy and Attorney General Barr to call."Sooooooooooooo, yeah.

Graham and Sekulow are technically correct that Trump didn't directly tell Zelensky that if he wanted what the US had to offer (like hundreds of millions of military aid) that he had better look into the Bidens. (There is no evidence of wrongdoing by either Joe or Hunter Biden, by the way).

But come on, man! Put yourself in Zelensky's shoes for a minute and ask whether it is at all possible that the message you would have received from that call was something along the lines of "We do a lot for you. If you want us to keep doing it, you need to do this one thing for me." Plus, there's this: Impeachment -- which the House embarked on formally this week with the beginnings of an inquiry -- is a political process, not a legal one. Meaning that even if you buy Graham's no-quid-pro-quo argument, which you shouldn't, there is no requirement for proof that Trump said the words in order to impeach him.

Know who got this all exactly right? Lindsey Graham. In 1999 -- when he said this: "A president doesn't even have to be convicted of a crime to be impeached. Impeachment is about restoring honor and integrity to the office."

Analysis by Chris Cillizza, CNN Editor-at-large

1. "The meetings I had on up bilat or close were pretty staggering. I think we set a new record but you'll have to check that out."

Yes, the first thing Trump said was how he probably set a record for meetings with foreign officials at UNGA. And away we go!

2. "We have a tremendous trade deal with Japan. And that doesn't get covered because you waste your time on nonsense."

The "nonsense" to which Trump is referring is a transcript released by his White House of a phone call in which he very clearly pressures the Ukrainian president to look into debunked corruption allegations against the former vice president of the United States, who, by the by, is the frontrunner for the 2020 Democratic nomination.

3. "I think we'll make this little announcement to you because, important, you know, the so-called whistleblower, the one that didn't have any first-class or first-rate or second-tier information, from what I understand, you'll have to figure that out for yourself."

Er, what? What Trump was going for -- I think -- is to make the point that the whistleblower who raise the issue did not have first-hand knowledge of, among other things, the President's call with Ukrainian President Volodymyr Zelensky. Worth noting here that while that's true, the whistleblower's description of the call between the two men -- as relayed in the complaint -- is a very accurate depiction of what went on, according to the transcript of the call released Wednesday.

4. "I fully support transparency on the so-called whistleblower information even though it was supposedly second-hand information, which is sort of interesting. And other things have come out about the whistleblower that are also maybe even more interesting."

What other things? Trump doesn't say! Also, remember that Trump has described the whistleblower as "partisan" although he also had acknowledged he didn't know who the whistleblower is.

5. "But also insist on transparency from Joe Biden and his son Hunter on the millions of dollars that have been quickly and easily taken out of Ukraine and China. Millions of dollars, millions and millions and dollars taken out very rapidly while he was vice president. And I think they should have transparency for that."

Four Pinocchios. There is no evidence of wrongdoing by either Joe or Hunter Biden.

6. "It's all a hoax, folks. It's all a big hoax."

"I will say that we do a lot for Ukraine. We spend a lot of effort and a lot of time. Much more than the European countries are doing and they should be helping you more than they are. ... There's a lot of talk about Biden's son, that Biden stopped the prosecution and a lot of people want to find out about that so whatever you can do with the Attorney General would be great. Biden went around bragging that he stopped the prosecution so if you can look into it ... It sounds horrible to me." -- Donald Trump to Zelensky, according to a White House transcript of their phone conversation

7. "I've been up from early in the morning until late in the evening."

Ahem.

8. "CNN reported that senators Robert Menendez, Richard Durbin, and Patrick Leahy wrote a letter to Ukraine's prosecutor general expressing concern at the closing of four investigations they said were critical. In the letter they implied that their support for US assistance to Ukraine was at stake and that if they didn't do the right thing, they wouldn't get any assistance. See, doesn't that sound familiar? Doesn't that sound familiar?"

Let me quote CNN's Abby Phillip on this: "I'm going to repeat this, because it's very important: What Trump is talking about right now ... accusing Senators of threatening Ukraine ... is WILDLY misleading. Senators questioned why Ukraine stopped cooperating with a lawful US investigation into HIS former campaign manager."

The letter in question is here -- so you can read it yourself.

9. "So Senator Chris Murphy literally threatened the president of Ukraine that if he doesn't do things right, they won't have Democrats' support in Congress. So you can look all of this up."

I did look it up! What happened is this: Murphy traveled to Kiev earlier this month with Sen. Ron Johnson (R-Wisconsin). They met with Zelensky and, according to Murphy, he made clear that the Ukrainian government should not involve itself in American elections. "[Zelensky] wasn't surprised that I brought it up ... his response was pretty simple: that they have no intention of getting involved in an American election," Murphy said of the meeting.

10. "We're going to have much bigger trade deals with a lot of countries that have a opportunity to come and they all want to do business with the United States, especially now."

Bigger is always better.

11. "And the Democrats did this hoax during the United Nations week. It was perfect. Because this way it takes away from these tremendous achievements that we are taking care of doing, that we're involved in, in New York City at the United Nations."

To be clear: The reason we know of the existence of the whistleblower complaint is because Michael Atkinson, the intelligence community inspector general, alerted the relevant congressional committees to it. Know who appointed Atkinson to his role? I'll give you one guess. Yup! Donald Trump. In 2018!

12. "Impeachment for that? When you have a wonderful meeting or you have a wonderful phone conversation?"

"I will say that we do a lot for Ukraine. We spend a lot of effort and a lot of time. Much more than the European countries are doing and they should be helping you more than they are. ...There's a lot of talk about Biden's son, that Biden stopped the prosecution and a lot of people want to find out about that so whatever you can do with the Attorney General would be great. Biden went around bragging that he stopped the prosecution so if you can look into it ... It sounds horrible to me." -- Donald Trump to Zelensky

13. "So many leaders came up to me today and they said, 'sir, what you go through no president has ever gone through, and it's so bad for your country.'" The chances that this actually happened are very small. And if it did happen, it's because of Trump's known love of being told how great and right he is.

14. "The wall is being built, by the way. It got little coverage."

[narrator] It's not.

15. "And we are building an incredible wall. It's going to number one."

Everyone will be telling the wall "You're number one!"

16. "It's going to be virtually impossible to cross unless you are one hell of a mountain climber."Paging Alex Honnold!

17. "They've -- we had people going out, and real climbers, telling us which is the toughest to climb. But these are anti-climb panels, very tough to get across."

There is no evidence that the Trump administration had "real climbers" test their prototype border walls.

18. "And the wall is going up. Many miles a week."

Again, no.

19. "Well, that's what he did, isn't it, really, when you think about it. Look, that whole witch hunt was started -- and hopefully that'll all come out, but there have been some fantastic books written that just came out, whether you look at Gregg Jarrett or McCarthy's book that just -- just came out recently and so many other books -- I mean, a lot of books are coming out. When you start reading those books, you see what they did to us. What they've done to this country is a disgrace. They've hurt this country very badly and no other president should have to go through what I've gone through."

The question Trump was asked that elicited this response? "Can you explain to the American people why it is appropriate for an American president to ask a foreign leader for information about a political rival and what you would have said if you had discovered that Barack Obama perhaps had asked a foreign leader for information about you before you campaigned for the presidency?" So, yeah.

20. "You take a look at that call. It was perfect. I didn't know it. There was no quid pro quo."

"I will say that we do a lot for Ukraine. We spend a lot of effort and a lot of time. Much more than the European countries are doing and they should be helping you more than they are. ... There's a lot of talk about Biden's son, that Biden stopped the prosecution and a lot of people want to find out about that so whatever you can do with the Attorney General would be great. Biden went around bragging that he stopped the prosecution so if you can look into it ... It sounds horrible to me." -- Donald Trump to Zelensky

21. "I'm very happy -- yesterday, I guess we had a -- a 53 poll and a lot of people say add 10 points to anything -- anybody voting for Trump, you can add -- anytime you get a poll, you can add 10 points or seven or six points, take it anyway you want."

Riiiiiiight. The poll Trump is referring to is conducted by Rasmussen Reports. You can read more about that firm here.

22. "A -- an investigation started called the Russian witch hunt, affectionately, and it was a total phony scam. It was set up by people within the government to try to stop somebody from getting elected, and after that person -- namely me -- won and convincingly won at 306 to 223 in the electoral college -- which by the way, when you run a race, if you're running electoral -- no -- if you go by the college, Electoral College, that's a much different race than running popular vote."

Putting aside the seemingly obligatory Trump reference to the Electoral College here, what he is describing as a "total phony scam" -- the Mueller report -- determined that not only did Russia seek to interfere in our election to help Trump but also that they did so because they believed Trump was better for their interests. And, oh yeah, that the Trump campaign welcomed it.

23. "And it's like the hundred-yard dash or the mile. You train differently. And I can't help that my opponent didn't go to Wisconsin and should have gone much more to Michigan and Pennsylvania and other places, but that's the way it is." Yes, he is still talking about the Electoral College. The 2016 election ended 1,052 days ago.

24. "We are having great polls. We have internal polls, Ohio, Iowa, Pennsylvania is looking good, North Carolina."

So, uh, I don't know how to break this to you but ... this.

25. "He said, I can't believe it, I never knew you could be this really nice to a person. He said, I cannot believe it. You were so nice. I didn't think you had that in you to be so nice."

This is Trump, quoting Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-South Carolina), after the senator read the transcript of the call between trump and Zelensky. Which, well, OK.

26. "I'm nice to a lot of people. People don't understand that. But I was." Same.

27. "The Mueller report. No obstruction. No collusion."

"(I)f we had confidence after a thorough investigation of the facts that the President clearly did not commit obstruction of justice, we would so state. Based on the facts and the applicable legal standards, we are unable to reach that judgment. ... Accordingly, while this report does not conclude that the president committed a crime, it also does not exonerate him." -- The Mueller report

28. "I used to get great press until I ran for politics. I mean, I used to be the king of getting good press. I was very good at it and I got good. I mean, they covered me well for what otherwise I probably wouldn't be here."

He said the quiet part out loud.

29. "They said they don't know if one man anywhere in the world, with all the men they know -- or woman that could handle what I've had to handle. And I think that's true. But I handle it. To me, it's like putting on a suit."

"Easy, guys... I put my pants on just like the rest of you -- one leg at a time. Except, when my pants are on, I make gold records." -- Bruce Dickinson

30. "I know a lot about Venezuela. I've had many, many friends of mine come from Venezuela. They live many Miami. A certain section of Miami. I won't mention the name because they'll say I'm thinking about my business and I'm not."

[nods head slowly]

31. "Just put this in the back of your mind. It's all going to be fine."

This feels like a good place to end.

I believe that to fully comprehend this horrific american scenario encompassing decline and fall, the following are helpful and instructive. First, an understanding of biological anthropology is helpful, particularly as pertains to breeding populations as regionally exist throughout america. Second, a thorough grasp of psychology is crucial given the alarming prevalence of severe mental illness throughout america and at all levels of society. Third, command of the subject generally denoted as criminology is necessary to fully enable successful approach to the uniquely pervasive levels of criminality throughout the united states. I believe word pictures in the minds eye of america's devastating plight can be derived from such profound literary works as: Lord of the Flies-Golding, 1984, Animal Farm-Orwell, and, given the wall obsession of mental case mobster thief in chief trump, the film, Escape From New York (containment of american criminality to america)-Carpenter.

"It's Treachery If Not Treason": Harvard Law Professor On Trump-Ukraine Report HuffPost Lee Moran, HuffPost Fri, Sep 20 1:23 AM Harvard constitutional law professor Laurence Tribe on Thursday lamented America's election of a president in Donald Trump who "seems to know no bounds." "He violates the emoluments clauses, he enriches himself at the expense of American taxpayers, he takes money from foreign governments in order to benefit himself, he bends policy in the direction of those governments, whether it's Saudi Arabia or another country, to enhance his own wealth," Tribe told MSNBC's Lawrence O'Donnell. "And now, we understand, he may have been making some kind of deal with Ukraine, perhaps to get information of a negative kind about Joe Biden's son in exchange for aid to Ukraine," he added, in reference to a report in The Washington Post last week. "It's treachery if not treason and it's bribery and it's unacceptable," he said.

$21 TRILLION DOLLARS IS MISSING FROM THE US GOVERNMENT.

<https://missingmoney.solari.com><https://home.solari.com> $21 Trillion dollars is missing from the US government. That is $65,000 per person - as much as the national debt!“No money shall be drawn from the treasury, but in consequence of appropriations made by law; and a regular statement and account of receipts and expenditures of all public money shall be published from time to time.”~ Article I, Section 9, Clause 7, U.S. Constitution What's going on? Where is the money? How could this happen? How much has really gone missing? What would happen if a corporation failed to pass an audit like this? Or a taxpayer? This means the Fed and their member banks are transacting government money outside the law. So are the corporate contractors that run the payment systems. So are the Wall Street firms who are selling government securities without full disclosure. Would your banks continue to handle your bank account if you behaved like this? Would your investors continue to buy your securities if you behaved like this? Would your accountant be silent? This is the reason that there is such a strong push to change or tear up the US Constitution. This is why members of the establishment say it is "old," "outdated!" This is why there is such a push for gun control. Don't buy it! We can use the Constitution to get our money and our government back. It is time to enforce the US Constitution. The Solari Report has been covering the missing money since 2000 when Catherine Austin Fitts began to warn Americans and global investors about mortgage fraud at the US Department of Housing and Development (HUD), the engineering of the housing bubble that led to trillions more dollars in bailouts and funds missing from the US government starting in fiscal 1998.

The Solari Report has been covering the missing money since 2000 when Catherine Austin Fitts began to warn Americans and global investors about mortgage fraud at the US Department of Housing and Development (HUD), the engineering of the housing bubble that led to trillions more dollars in bailouts and funds missing from the US government starting in fiscal 1998.

Legendary journalist Cokie Roberts (daughter of Hale Boggs) dies at 75
Andrea Mitchell Reports [I did not know this] '...the circumstances of Boggs' death and disappearance. They center on his membership on the Warren Commission, which had been charged by President Lyndon B. Johnson to investigate the 1963 assassination of President John F. Kennedy in Dallas. Boggs dissented from the commission's majority report which supported the single bullet thesis — pointing to a lone assassin. Boggs said he "had strong doubts about it." In the 1979 novel "The Matarese Circle" author Robert Ludlum portrayed Boggs as having been killed to stop his probe into the assassination...'

THE VERY DARK TRUTH ABOUT DONALD TRUMP REVEALED IN HIS COKIE ROBERTS COMMENTS

Journalist Cokie Roberts passes away at 75

(CNN)'Usually when someone dies, you follow the rule your mom taught you: If you don't have anything nice to say, don't say anything at all. President Donald Trump doesn't follow that rule. Asked about the passing of legendary journalist Cokie Roberts on Tuesday, here's what Trump said (in part): "I never met her. She never treated me nicely. But I would like to wish her family well. She was a professional, and I respect professionals." So, yeah. The first words out of his mouth when asked about someone's death was a) never met her and b) "she never treated me nicely." Me, Me, Me, Me, Me Me. While all politicians -- and all people -- tend to see things through a how-does-this-impact-me lens, most of us understand that turning everything, especially someone else's death, into a conversation about ourselves is hugely selfish and narcissistic. It also reeks of a lack of empathy, an inability to step outside yourself and into another person's shoes for even a minute. That Trump's first instinct when asked about the death of a prominent journalist would be to make it about himself and then use it as a piece of ammo in his long-running fight with the news media is, even for this president, a remarkable thing. And by remarkable, I mean revealing. Revealing in that it makes clear -- and, if you have been paying attention to the presidency it might well already be crystal clear to you -- that Trump is simply unconcerned about anyone who isn't him. He doesn't view the presidency as a position of moral leadership. He just does and says what he wants, when he wants. That rejection of moral leadership -- of taking the high road, of understanding that you don't need to say everything you think -- is what makes Trump truly radical vis a vis the other men who have held the office of president. They tried -- and sometimes failed, but always tried -- to do what they believed to be the right thing, even if it wasn't what they wanted to do. Trump makes no attempt to do so. None. You can argue that what Trump says about a deceased journalist isn't that big a deal -- especially when compared to some of the other things he has said and done as president. I get that. But, it reveals something far deeper -- and darker -- about Trump. Someone who is incapable of expressing empathy -- or even of not saying something bad! -- about a dead person is someone who is so self-focused as to be largely (if not totally) blind to the world around him. That's a problem for any person. It's a massive problem -- and should be a huge area of concern -- when the person we are talking about is the president of the United States.....'

AS A FOREIGN REPORTER VISITING THE US I WAS STUNNED BY TRUMP'S PRESS CONFERENCE [The Guardian] Lenore Taylor, The Guardian•September 19, 2019 <https://news.yahoo.com/foreign-reporter-visiting-us-stunned-060052263.html> '...The wall was “amazing”, “world class”, “virtually impenetrable” and also “a good, strong rust colour” that could later be painted. It was designed to absorb heat, so it was “hot enough to fry an egg on”. There were no eggs to hand, but the president did sign his name on it and spoke for so long the TV feed eventually cut away, promising to return if news was ever made... He did, at one point, concede that would-be immigrants, unable to scale, burrow, blow torch or risk being burned, could always walk around the incomplete structure, but that would require them walking a long way. This seemed to me to be an important point, but the monologue quickly returned to the concrete. In writing about this not-especially-important or unusual press conference I’ve run into what US reporters must encounter every day. I’ve edited skittering, half-finished sentences to present them in some kind of consequential order and repeated remarks that made little sense. In most circumstances, presenting information in as intelligible a form as possible is what we are trained for. But the shock I felt hearing half an hour of unfiltered meanderings from the president of the United States made me wonder whether the editing does our readers a disservice. I’ve read so many stories about his bluster and boasting and ill-founded attacks, I’ve listened to speeches and hours of analysis, and yet I was still taken back by just how disjointed and meandering the unedited president could sound. Here he was trying to land the message that he had delivered at least something towards one of his biggest campaign promises and sounding like a construction manager with some long-winded and badly improvised sales lines. I’d understood the dilemma of normalising Trump’s ideas and policies – the racism, misogyny and demonisation of the free press. But watching just one press conference from Otay Mesa helped me understand how the process of reporting about this president can mask and normalise his full and alarming incoherence.'

THE 26 MOST OFF-THE-RAILS LINES FROM DONALD TRUMP'S PRESS GAGGLE ABOARD AIR FORCE ONE

Analysis by Chris Cillizza, CNN Editor-at-large September 19, 2019

Trump signs border wall San Diego

(CNN)As President Donald Trump jetted back to Washington after several days on the West Coast, he ventured to the press seats on Air Force One to talk to reporters, and talk he did!

I went through the transcript and picked out the lines you should see. Let's get into it.

1. "We have two concepts. We have that concept and we have a point at the top -- it's a little complicated; nobody cares -- but without the structural beam because the structural beam is in a different location. Both have advantages."

Donald Trump on border wall fencing which is both a) a little complicated and b) not a subject of much interest. And away we go!

2. "They just said, 'Sir, could you sign?' the Border Patrol said, 'Could you sign your name?' And I did. I autographed one of the bollards."

Somewhere near the San Diego-Mexico border, there is a concrete bollard with Donald Trump's signature on it. Because, why not?!

3. "There are a lot of bollards. That's a lot of bollards. So, that's pretty good."

So. Many. Bollards. But only one with a Trump autograph!

4. "Yeah, we're very happy -- yeah, we're very happy with what's been going in FEMA. They did a fantastic job."

The question Trump was asked was about the White House's decision to pull the nomination of Jeffrey Byard as FEMA director following revelations about his involvement in a bar fight. So, uh, Trump didn't answer the question.

5. "We're looking at many different things. That was a news conference that was given. And we're throwing out many different ideas to Republicans and Democrats -- see where they all come out. And that was a document that you were talking -- I haven't seen that document. "

Trump was asked about a draft proposal on gun control being shopped by Attorney General Bill Barr and White House legislative affairs head Eric Ueland. Which he apparently hasn't seen? OK!

6. "And those are ideas that we're talking to Republicans, Democrats, everybody about. Some -- some they like, some they don't like. Just a series of concepts and ideas."

To be clear: These "ideas" are being shopped by Trump's attorney general and his head liaison with Congress but they have nothing to do with him! Just a series of concepts! And ideas!

7. "I think there are certain Democrats that really want to do it. And I would like to do it, and Republicans would like to do it."

If Trump really wanted to do "it" -- with it being some sort of further background check restriction -- it would already be done. Congressional Republicans are just waiting for him to say something definitive before they act and he cuts their legs out from under them.

8. "And, you know, I've been very strong from the day you first met me on the Second Amendment."

To summarize: Donald Trump = very strong on 2nd Amendment.

9. "So, we have a whole series of ideas and concepts that we're going to be talking about. And some are liked, and some aren't liked."

Concepts. Ideas. A little of this. A little of that. You may like them. Or not.

10. "We had a very successful fundraiser. We raised a lot of money. A lot of people showed up. But we could have had many more show up had we had the room. We went to some very large and beautiful houses, and we had some beautiful fundraisers."

Beautiful fundraisers. Those are the best kind.

11. "The one thing that everybody was consistent on is we could have quadrupled the attendance if we wanted to."

Size matters -- bigly -- to this President.

12. "And we have tremendous things that we don't have to discuss pouring into the ocean. You know, there are needles. There are other things. A lot of bad -- a lot of -- a lot of -- it's a terrible situation."

Donald Trump, marine biologist

13. "I mean, if you were -- if he was Cecil B. DeMille, he would have gotten -- I mean, Cecil B. DeMille should be, if he ever came back from the dead, one of the greats of all time."

Trump is, for some unknown reason, comparing Barack Obama (and his production deal with Netflix) to Cecil B. DeMille. It's a pretty relevant cultural reference since DeMille died in 1959.

14. "So I think somebody should -- if they're going to be looking at me over nonsense, they should certainly be looking at that also."

Let's be clear about what Trump is saying here: Obama should be investigated because he got a book deal to write his memoir and a production deal with Netflix -- both after he left the White House. Why should Obama be investigated for making totally and completely legal deals as a private citizen? Oh, Trump didn't explain that part.

15. "I've written many best-sellers, that I can tell you."

There's no doubt that "The Art of the Deal" was a bestseller. Other than that? Er....

16. "I don't -- you know, I don't -- I can't speak for Biden. I can't speak -- I know nothing about it. But he's given some very strange answers, that I can tell you."

Classic Trump. Asked about Jimmy Carter's comment on 80 being too old to be president, he says he doesn't know anything about that story but then also insinuates that former Vice President Joe Biden, who is 76, might be losing it.

17. "No, Jimmy Carter said it, but he was referring to Biden. And he said that he was -- because Biden's having a hard time; there's no question about it."

(Narrator voice) Carter was not referring to any candidate in particular.

18. "I met with somebody three days ago -- 85 years old and sharp as there is in existence. You know, I'm sure you people have also. But not everybody is going to be that way."

So wise.

19. "If they don't do that, we may very well release them at the borders because we have no choice. We're not going to be taking people from other countries and having them -- you know, paying the cost of them in prison for 40 years."

In which the President of the United States threatens to release captured ISIS fighters at the border unless their home nations take them back for prosecution and imprisonment.

20. "It's got steel and concrete -- and very hard concrete, very strong concrete. You know, it's very, very -- 5,000-pound concrete is a very substantial concrete."

The border wall has "very hard concrete." That concrete is also "very strong." And, just to note, it also happened to be "very substantial."

21. "Well, we're looking at a lot of things. I know about that. I think it's crazy. It's been -- it costs a fortune to operate it and I think it's crazy."

Trump was asked repeatedly whether he wanted to shut down the Guantanamo Bay prison. This was his most coherent answer. Not kidding.

22. "Go eat that chocolate cake, OK? Eat that chocolate cake."

Trump is telling reporters to go eat their dessert. Which sounds delicious.

23. "I was a very good real estate developer."

I hadn't heard that!

24. "I offered to do it for $500 million and it would have been a much better job. And they wouldn't have had to empty the building, as I said. We could have done it with people in place. It would have been a great job."

This is the end of an extended riff by Trump on how he pitched the United Nations on rebuilding its structure -- but they rejected him. "They didn't know anything about building, although they did know about other things, which are not good," he added about the UN. And, no, I have no idea what the second part of that sentence means either.

25. "I do like leaving tips at the hotel. You know, I like to carry a little something. I like to give tips to the hotel."

Same.

26. "Yes. Treat me fairly."

This feels like a good place to end.

President Donald Trump announced Tuesday that the U.S. will not be a part of the Iran nuclear deal. He said the U.S. and its allies couldn't stop Iran from building a nuclear weapon "under the decaying and rotten structure of the current deal." By The White House

One day soon, we could wake up to find our nation mired in a war even more disastrous than the Iraq invasion of 2003. If the United States attacks Iran, it will be for one reason: President Trump desperately wants a war.

He has intensified his threats against Iran. He's moved warships to the region and raised the specter of deploying up to 120,000 troops. These belligerent actions should alarm all Americans.

The United States has no reason to attack Iran. Our disagreements can be handled diplomatically. President Obama and our European allies forced Iran to sign a deal that required a downscaling of its nuclear program in exchange for the lifting of harsh economic sanctions.

Trump pulled out of that agreement and has provoked conflict. Most Americans don't know much about Iran or the tensions between our countries. Russia and Saudi Arabia have done more to harm our national interests. Yet Trump wants to make Iran a central issue in American politics, even though Iran's leaders have complied with the agreement and don't want a fight.

Why is Trump pushing confrontation? It's likely because he views war as key to his re-election in 2020. If he succeeds in starting one, it will be the most dangerous power grab in American history.

Opinion

Trump's political success relies on projecting a "strongman" image, but his brand is sagging. His poll numbers stink. The Mueller Report has undermined his legitimacy. Calls for impeachment have snowballed. The American people may soon see his tax returns. Even some Republicans have turned against him.

He needs to change the narrative – fast.

“War is the traditional way authoritarian leaders distract the populace from their low ratings,” said Ruth Ben-Ghiat, a historian of fascism and authoritarian regimes at New York University. “There’s no better way to get out of an investigation or deflect any attack on his legitimacy. Wars can be spun as moments of national crisis that deserve exceptional measures and need strong leadership.”

American presidents have often seen their popularity spike in the wake of military action. Approval ratings for Presidents George Bush, Bill Clinton and George W. Bush all soared to record highs when they attacked other countries.

It’s called the “rally around the flag effect.” War can make people feel more patriotic, providing what Ben-Ghiat called a “unifying event.” War evokes our sense of national identity, establishes an “us vs. them” framework and forces us to choose sides. In war’s climate of fear, the president – as commander in chief and symbol of the nation – often gains public esteem.

We’re not suggesting that previous presidents used the military to inflate their popularity. Yet the current president’s trumped-up war rumbblings against Iran are clearly intended to revive his weak image. We know Trump views war with Iran as a popularity booster because he repeatedly accused President Obama of plotting to attack the country “to get elected” and “to save face.”

There’s no guarantee that military action would boost Trump. He’s the most unpopular president in recent history and few Americans trust him. Regardless of polls, he could use war as an excuse to seize more power. Invoking national security as his justification, he could ramp up the persecution of immigrants, crush his opposition and further degrade the Constitution.

“Citizens are more likely to tolerate – and even support – authoritarian power grabs when they fear for their safety,” wrote Steven Levitzky and Daniel Ziblatt in the New York Times.

Trump has repeatedly promoted the idea that he should serve more than two terms as president. He has accused his critics, like former FBI director James Comey, of treason.

With enhanced wartime powers, Trump could do more than tweet crazy ideas. He could act on them. For over two years, he has continually done shocking things to keep Americans in a state of anxiety. His policies have resulted in the deaths of innocent people. We can't put anything past him.

“Crises are a time-tested means of subverting democracy,” wrote Levitsky and Ziblatt.

Trump rules by crisis. He created a border crisis, changing U.S. immigration policy to create chaos. He created economic crises, launching trade wars, shutting down the government and tumbling markets. He created a constitutional crisis, bucking Congress' authority and defying the law. The list goes on.

Now he's stoking crisis with Iran. Here are three strategies to help prevent him from pursuing war as a political strategy:

- Call it out. This war will only happen because Trump wants to start one. Say it. A war against Iran will be a trumped-up war manufactured to burnish the president's power and popularity. He would put American troops in harm's way to save his own political bacon. “He needs an out,” said Ben-Ghiat. “War is an easy way to make himself seem indispensable at a moment of crisis.”
- Don't buy the lies. Trump's war would likely begin with murky accusations against Iran. He would invoke war as the only way to protect the nation. We've been through this before. The George W. Bush administration used false intelligence and lies used to justify the Iraq invasion. Trump, who lies in even the smallest of matters, would certainly do the same. Citizens, political leaders and journalists must actively challenge his propaganda and assume every word is untrue. We must never again allow our nation to be pulled into “elective war” based on lies. The press must avoid repeating the grave errors of the Iraq War.

• Hit the streets. Protest works. Americans must prepare for a massive show of democratic force. Trump's war must be viewed as a deadly plot to amass political power. Get ready to march – and keep marching until his strategy becomes untenable.

Hopefully, Trump will soon lose interest in attacking Iran. But he's a desperate man whose top advisers helped create the Iraq disaster. We must take the threat seriously. We must also remember that, if Trump gets his war, it won't just be Iran in the crosshairs.

American democracy, already under siege, is the real target.

Kavanaugh accused of more unwanted sexual contact by former classmate: report.

Supreme Court Justice Brett Kavanaugh was hit with another accusation of unwanted sexual contact by a male classmate who said he witnessed Kavanaugh expose himself and press his genitals against a woman without her consent. The New York Times reported Saturday that the latest allegation, which has until now not been public, was reported to the FBI during Kavanaugh's Supreme Court confirmation process last year but was not investigated by the FBI. In the Times report, two FBI officials told the newspaper that a Yale classmate of Kavanaugh's, D.C.-based nonprofit owner Max Stier, said that he had witnessed Kavanaugh expose himself at a party before other students pushed Kavanaugh's genitals into the hand of a female student, apparently without her consent. The Hill has reached out to the Supreme Court for comment. Stier did not speak publicly about the story, according to the Times, but two U.S. officials reportedly corroborated his account to the FBI with the newspaper. The allegation is the latest to be made public in a list of accusations of unwanted sexual contact or sexual assault that Kavanaugh has faced since he was first nominated to the Supreme Court by President Trump. Despite a tumultuous confirmation process culminating in emotional testimony from both Kavanaugh and one of his accusers, Christine Blasey Ford, he was eventually confirmed to the court in a narrow Senate vote. Kavanaugh has denied all of the allegations that he has faced, calling them politically motivated, and declined to answer questions about Stier's allegations to the Times on Saturday. Resources to help survivors of sexual assault include the National Sex Assault Hotline (800-656-4673), and The Rape, Abuse, & Incest National Network (RAINN) online hotline.

The Levin Report Jimmy Carter: There Should Be an Age Limit for the Presidency by Bess Levin [Yes ... 72 sounds about right!]

Levin Report Trump Worried Unsightly Homeless Are Hurting Property Values According to the president, wealthy foreigners are livid about what the homeless are doing to their investments. by Bess Levin

ABC News Pres. Donald J. Trump denied knowing identity of intelligence community whistleblower, yet attacked the person as "partisan" and called the unfolding controversy "just another political hack job."

Thomas Clay Jr.

It's Dan Coates. It has to be. Two weeks after he resigned he walked into a meeting at the White House and told his deputy she needed to resign immediately and she did. Four days after that the Inspector General got the whistleblower report! In addition to this we know the unnamed whistleblower has retained an attorney who was a career lawyer at the CIA and is now in private practice. This lends even more credence to it being Coates. If he told the president of Ukraine that the $250 million in military aid is dependent on them investigating Biden, holy shit! In an interesting turn of events, Rudy Giuliani said on CNN tonight that if Trump did do that, it wasn't illegal! Umm, yes it is Rudy. Offering a foreign nation money to do damage to your political enemies is downright corruption not seen since Sadaam and Idi Amin were around. This is tin pot dictator politicking and if this is true, Trump will have to resign. Trump is easy to predict because he is a simpleton and he only operates transactionally. My learned guess here is that Trump promised to deliver the military goods if the President of Ukraine opened an investigation of Biden. I would bet a shiny new platinum dollar that this is what Trump did. Watch Republicans the next few days. They are deathly quiet and today Mitch even approved $250 million in election security funds. That says that not only was he sick of being called Moscow Mitch, it also says he's nervous about something. This is not going to end well for Trump. Make no mistake, the Inspector General is a Trump appointee and whoever the whistleblower is, worked inside this administration. This isn't the 'deep state.' This is one of Trump's own people and the IG agreed that this was a matter that needed to go to congress. Bill Barr and Maguire are now breaking the law in full view of the people. The highest law enforcement official and the highest national security official in this country are crooks. They are felons thumbing their noses at the rule of law right now. Without the rule of law, we aren't a Republic, we are subjects of a dictator. Update* I am going to say something now that I hope everyone understands the gravitas of. After Adam Schiff sent his letter to the DNI to release the Whistleblower complaint, Trump released the $250 million to the Ukraine the next day. The. Next. Day. The ONLY thing that makes sense given this fact is that Trump withheld that money in order to make the Ukrainian president investigate Biden as Rudy Giuliani said tonight on CNN was the biggest scandal ever. Once someone explained that this was illegal as fuck, Trump released the funds in order to make it look as though he did not cajole the president of the Ukraine into investigating Biden and his son. Donald Trump was using the money of the American people to force a foreign government to start and investigation of his political opponent. That is why they are so desperate to conceal that whistleblower report. My god, this is unbelievable. He must be removed from office. If this is true, Trump will not be running for president. He will be running to Russia to avoid dying in prison. <https://www.cnn.com/2019/09/19/politics/rudy-giuliani-joe-biden-ukraine-cnntv/index.html>

DONALD TRUMP, NEWS, TRUMP'S MENTAL HEALTH DONALD TRUMP'S GHOSTWRITER SAYS POTUS IS THE "MOST PURELY EVIL HUMAN BEING" HE'S EVER MET He spilled the beans! by Andrea Thompson You've likely noticed that pretty much everyone who's ever had much experience with Donald Trump, whether it be in the past or present, doesn't usually have very many good things to say about the man. Virtually all of his former employees short of Sarah Huckabee Sanders (and Lord knows he has plenty of former employees) have more than plenty of information to dish out on the dude and his character as a human being — and none of it is flattering. Donald's ghostwriter for The Art Of The Deal, Tony Schwartz was no exception to this rule. During a Reddit "Ask Me Anything" Schwartz revealed his true feelings for the now-president and ultimately stated that Donald Trump is "the most purely evil human being" he has ever met in his life. "I believe deeply that most people are better than their worst behaviors," Schwartz wrote in the Reddit session. "I also believe there are some who are simply irredeemable and evil. [Psychiatrist and author] Scott Peck called them 'People of the Lie'. They lack any conscience, as Trump does, and so they're almost purely evil. Trump is the most purely evil human being I've ever met, and also the most insecure." The writer then went on to explain that the very worst part about working with Trump was "the shortness of his attention span and his utter lack of interest in anything but himself." Schwartz has attempted to make up for his mistake of helping Donald build a platform by very publicly denouncing the man at every opportunity and claims that the biggest change he's seen in Trump since having the displeasure of working with him personally was the fact that he's simply become more and more horrible with each passing day. "If he had any ideology when I met him, it was faintly libertarian," he stated. "As in: You do whatever you want to do so long as it doesn't get in the way of my doing whatever the hell I want to do. In the last few years, I believe he has moved relentlessly to the right. He's become more nativist, racist, narrow-minded and he's now just a shade to the right of Attila the Hun." "I never saw him read a book, and other than The Art of the Deal, I suspect he's never read a book in his adult life," Schwartz added. "As for comprehension for what he does read, I'd say it's early high school level. To judge his writing level, read his tweets, particularly the angrier ones, which is most, and which he writes himself. His way of communicating is very primitive." Seems that no one has any love left for Donald Trump.

MAIL.COM NEWS

Fellow Investor,

This is the most severe market warning I have ever issued.

What you do in the next few days could determine your financial destiny for the rest of your life.

Because I’m here to alert you that the same forces that have triggered every financial boom and bust during our lifetimes...

Are combining in a way that is far deadlier than anything we’ve ever seen.

This convergence is forming a powerful supercycle. And it’s lethal enough to rip through the world economy in the months ahead... changing our lives forever. I'm going as far as saying everything about how you earn, spend, save, and invest your money will be permanently altered.

Now, I fully understand just how shocking this forecast is... and I realize that you might dismiss it as being "too extreme."

However, I'm begging you to take a few minutes to learn exactly why we're in for a 60-month long rollercoaster ride through hell.

I'll detail exactly why this supercycle will trigger one of the most terrifying new markets here in my urgent video.

Please don't disregard this warning. I'm not making it lightly.

We warned investors that the stock market was going to collapse in 1987... we forecasted the tech stock bubble in 1999... and we predicted the housing crash of 2007.

If you were one of the millions of Americans who didn't heed our warnings then, I implore you to watch my video and listen this time.

There's not a moment to lose. See for yourself why I'm sounding the alarm bell with good reason.

Sincerely,

Sean Brodrick

Well, Mark, where does that leave pussy-grabbin', mentally ill mobster thief in chief, trump. My american experience, closely observed, with few exceptions (ie., the FBI Agent assigned my case who left the FBI), predominantly corruption and criminality ... substantially damaged, I barely got out of this trump-involved, primarily new jersey/new york (with additional corrupt governmental/judicial bureaucratic help/coverup in connecticut and virginia) and subsequently california coverup/mob scenario with my life ... and, during comey's tenure, I narrowly escaped/survived a carefully contrived, protected arson ... TRUMP'S COGNITIVE DEFICITS SEEM WORSE. WE NEED TO KNOW IF HE HAS DEMENTIA: PSYCHOLOGIST

John Gartner, Opinion contributor Published 3:15 p.m. ET April 9, 2019 | Updated 4:13 p.m. ET April 9, 2019

CLOSE https://www.usatoday.com/story/opinion/2019/04/09/does-donald-trump-have-dementia-we-need-know-psychologist-column/3404007002/?fbclid=IwAR0d40-jwzBDsTrRd00T4ZILe2IO4_cqRfd_IIMmMVBtETrCzmW7pM-hccU

We see signs that the president's abilities are declining, but the only way to find out for sure is to give him a full neuropsychological evaluation.

If Donald Trump were your father, you would run, not walk, to a neurologist for an evaluation of his cognitive health. You don't have to be a doctor to see something is very wrong. "He reminds me of Uncle Bruce in so many ways," said my aunt, who nursed her brother through Alzheimer's disease. Joe Scarborough, who has known Trump for years, said in 2017 that Trump's mental confusion reminded him of his mother, who had Alzheimer's for 10 years. "It's getting worse, and not a single person who works for him doesn't know he has early signs of dementia," he said of Trump last year on his MSNBC show.

To mental health professionals like me, the red flags are waving wildly. In January 2018, over 70 of us wrote a letter to the president's physician, Dr. Ronny Jackson, urging him to administer a cognitive exam during the president's physical because we had seen a marked deterioration in his verbal functioning, possibly due to cognitive decline.

President Donald Trump at the Conservative Political Action Conference outside Washington, D.C., on March 3, 2019.

Read more commentary:

Trump's troubling behavior raises questions his medical exam didn't answer

Dizzying GOP turnarounds amid one constant: Trump keeps being Trump
Trump's 'stable genius' reality check: America, this isn't a drill

In fact, Dr. Jackson did administer the Montreal Cognitive Assessment, a screening tool for dementia, and Trump passed. But while Trump bragged that this proved his superior intelligence, this 10-minute screening test, where one must identify a camel, draw a clock and repeat three numbers backwards, only ruled out full-blown dementia.

We argued in a subsequent op-ed that these findings did not rule out the early stages of dementia. We also predicted that if this was organic cognitive decline, it would continue to get worse. And since that op-ed, more than a year ago, it has gotten worse.

Confusing people and generations

Memory loss is the symptom most closely associated with Alzheimer's. While Trump famously forgets the names of people (as he did recently when he called Apple CEO Tim Cook "Tim Apple") and places (as when he called Paradise, California, "Pleasure"), one could make allowances for such gaffes. More troubling, Michael Wolff reported in "Fire and Fury" that at the end of 2017, Trump failed to recognize "a succession of old friends" at Mar-a-Lago.

Trump, 72, seemed to hit a new inflection point last week when he said, "My father is German. Right? Was German. And born in a very wonderful place in Germany." In fact, his father was born in the Bronx and it was his grandfather who was from Germany.

Dementia Care International says a "person may start to mix up relationships and generations" in the second stage of dementia.

One day, when my Uncle Bruce was agitated, he cried out for me saying, "Call John. He's a rich lawyer. He'll know what to do" — even though it was my father who was the lawyer, not me. That was not in the early phase of the illness. That incident took place a few months before Uncle Bruce was forced to enter the nursing home.

Capsicles and mishiz and midtown elections

In Alzheimer's, as language skills deteriorate, we see two types of tell-tale speech disorders, or paraphasias:

Semantic paraphasia involves choosing the incorrect words. For instance, after Attorney General William Barr released a letter on the Mueller report, Trump said: "I hope they now go and take a look at the oranges, the oranges of that investigation, the beginnings of that investigation."

Phonemic paraphasia, which is linked to the moderate to severe stages of Alzheimer's, is described as "the substitution of a word with a nonword that preserves at least half of the segments and/or number of syllables of the intended word." For example, Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu becomes "Betanyahu," big league becomes "bigly," anonymous becomes "enenamas" or "anonyminous," renovation becomes "renoversh," missiles become "mishiz," space capsule becomes "capsicle," midterm elections become "midtown" and "midturn" elections, and Christmas becomes "Chrissus."

Trump's speech patterns appear even more disordered when you go beyond the sound bite and look at a whole speech. He careens from one thought to the next in a parade of non sequiturs, frequently interrupting himself in the middle of a sentence to veer into another free association. When commentators described his two-hour speech at the Conservative Political Action Conference last month as "unhinged," they were referring in large part to this quality.

CPAC speech underscored need for assessment

At its extreme, this is called tangential speech. As psychologist Ben Michaelis told Stat, doctors evaluating for Alzheimer's listen for tangential remarks and non sequiturs and whether the patient can stay on topic.

You had to listen to Trump's whole CPAC speech to realize just how tangential it was. “Those who learned about the speech from glancing at mainstream news headlines the next morning would have no idea how flat-out bonkers the whole thing was ... even by Trumpian standards,” Amanda Marcotte wrote in Salon. The Washington Post's Eugene Robinson said Trump “gave a rambling and incoherent two-hour speech in which he raved like a lunatic.”

Americans have a right, indeed an urgent need, to know whether their president is suffering from dementia. We see clear signs that he is, but the only way to find out for sure is to give him a full neuropsychological evaluation and share the results with the American public. The need is more screamingly obvious now than it was a when we first called for it over a year ago.

Al Peia [In medicine, decompensation is the functional deterioration of a structure or system that had been previously working with the help of allostatic compensation. Decompensation is when someone with a mental illness, who was maintaining their mental illness well, starts to worsen. Signs that decompensation is occurring are a worsening of symptoms, inability to cope with stress and change, and difficulty with normal life situations like social situations and financial issues. Decompensation may occur due to fatigue, stress, illness, or old age. When a system is "compensated", it is able to function despite stressors or defects ... to lose the ability to maintain normal or appropriate psychological defenses, sometimes resulting in depression, anxiety, or delusions. ...] <http://albertpeia.com> Definition of allostasis: the process by which a state of internal, physiological equilibrium is maintained by an organism in response to actual or perceived environmental and psychological stressors

THE NEW YORK POST AFTER MAN CALLS HIM 'FREDO,' CHRIS CUOMO CAUGHT ON VIDEO FLYING INTO RAGE BY TAMAR LAPIN

If he calls Chris Cuomo that again, he could be sleeping with the fishes. The CNN anchor was caught on video flying into a rage at a man for calling him "Fredo" — an apparent insult referencing Fredo Corleone, the weak, dopey brother in "The Godfather."

"Punk ass bitches from the right call me 'Fredo.' My name is Chris Cuomo. I'm an anchor on CNN," the TV journalist says in the video, which was shared Monday evening on Twitter.

"Fredo is from the 'Godfather,' he was a weak brother and the use of it to an Italian is disparaging," he continues.

The 49-year-old anchor tells the man that the name "Fredo" is as offensive to Italian Americans as the n-word is to African Americans.

“Don’t f—ing insult me like that,” the Queens native fumes. “You call me ‘Fredo,’ it’s like I call you punk b—ch. You like that?”

The man in the video insists that he believed the anchor’s real name was Fredo.

But Cuomo, a dad of three, doesn’t buy it.

“You did not think that ... stand up like a man,” he seethes. “Own what you said.”

The situation then escalates with Cuomo telling the man: “I’ll f—ing throw you down these stairs like a f—ing punk ... you’re gonna call me Fredo, take a f—ing swing? I’ll f—ing wreck your shit.”

The clip was reportedly filmed Sunday on Shelter Island and sent to a right-wing website and blog, before being shared on Twitter.

A CNN spokesperson told the New York Post: “Chris Cuomo defended himself when he was verbally attacked with the use of an ethnic slur in an orchestrated setup. We completely support him.”

Cuomo, a son of the late New York Gov. Mario Cuomo and the younger brother of Gov. Andrew Cuomo, later noted on Twitter his appreciation for such expressions of support but regretted having overstepped a boundary himself:

Epstein had previously claimed someone had tried to murder him, but, that incident was labeled a suicide attempt. So why was he taken off suicide watch, thus enabling the current 'tying up of loose ends'? america's such a sick, pathetic nation!]

By Jason Abbruzzese and Brandy Zadrozny:

'The world of social media — already awash in conspiracy thinking in the Trump era — erupted with new theories Saturday after the news broke that Jeffrey Epstein had died by suicide under mysterious circumstances in his jail cell.

Many of the theories ventured into the realm of outlandish conjecture, amplified by conservative commentators and at least two Republican officials. Many people who have spent the last few years blaming the nation's problems on either the Clinton or the Trump administrations found new reasons to pin Epstein's death to their favorite targets — despite a complete lack of evidence at this point explaining how Epstein was able to kill himself.

The conspiracies spanned a wide range of topics from Epstein's connections to the Clinton family and President Donald Trump to fringe theories including QAnon. Others simply questioned the circumstances around Epstein's death.

Travis View, an independent conspiracy theory researcher, said Saturday's news sparked a significant wave of activity from various conspiracy threads — and offered evidence of just how widely embraced conspiracy theories have become.

“There's an outpouring of conspiracy theories as a consequence of his suicide,” View said. “The fringe conspiracies of two decades ago are touching the mainstream now where even lawyers and people who are otherwise close to the Republican party feel very comfortable asserting these types of theories.”

By mid-morning on the East Coast, a hashtag related to a conspiracy about the Clinton family had begun to trend on Twitter. Similar topics are well known by disinformation researchers to receive promotion from foreign influence campaigns that seek to promote misinformation and elevate divisive topics. A Twitter spokesperson told NBC News that the trends were due to organic conversation and that the company is monitoring the situation.

WAS JEFFREY EPSTEIN'S DEATH SUICIDE OR HOMICIDE? DR. SIEGEL SAYS ONE APPEARS 'MORE LIKELY' By Nick Givas | Fox News

Fox News medical contributor Dr. Marc Siegel said Thursday that it's "more likely" Jeffrey Epstein's death was a homicide rather than a suicide, following a full autopsy of Epstein's body that reportedly found broken bones in his neck.

"The hyoid bone in the neck being fractured and other fractures in the neck, make it more likely, and again, this is a percentage call, more likely that it was a homicide than a suicide," Siegel said during an interview on "America's Newsroom."

Siegel said he is still waiting for more information before rendering a final opinion, but expressed suspicion and skepticism about the details surrounding Epstein's death.

"It can either be a suicide or a homicide still... I am now more suspicious than ever that this could be a homicide," he said.

"If someone is attacked, you see signs of the attack on the body... It hasn't been released yet. I'm waiting to see that."

[JUDGE NAPOLITANO ON EPSTEIN SUICIDE: KEY QUESTION IS 'DID SOMEONE INTENTIONALLY LOOK THE OTHER WAY']

Siegel also addressed the lack of judgment allegedly displayed by prison doctors and officials, after they deemed Epstein to be in good mental health, just six days after he had been placed on suicide watch.

"Six days on a suicide watch, prison officials reportedly removed it. Prison officials, guided by who? What self-respecting psychiatrist would say, 'okay, he's no longer suicidal,'" he said.

"There was evidence on July 23rd that he may have done something to his neck, or someone did... suddenly six days later he waves his hand, says he's fine, and he's put in an area where ultimately he's unobserved -- because as you know, people fall asleep and they falsify records reportedly."

Siegel said he expects definitive answers to be disclosed to the public very soon.

An autopsy on the body of Epstein revealed the convicted sex offender had several broken bones in his neck, including the hyoid bone, according to a report.

The hyoid bone, which is near the Adam's apple, can be broken in a suicide by hanging – especially in older people –but is more common in strangulation murders, The Washington Post reported.

Epstein, 66, was found Saturday hanging in his cell in an “apparent suicide” at the Metropolitan Correctional Center in New York City, where he was being held on sex trafficking charges.

Fox News' Brie Stimson contributed to this report.

List of Inconsistencies...

Epstein was the highest profile prisoner in the US prison system.

On Tuesday the autopsy revealed Epstein suffered broken bones in his neck common in homicide by strangulation.

Since his death we have learned a number of things that make you question this man's death.

Here is a Complete List of Inconsistencies in Prison Policy Surrounding Jeffrey Epstein's Death:

* Epstein said he was considering cooperating in "naming names" in his international sex ring

* He was found unconscious in his prison cell just three weeks earlier

* Two days prior to his death documents released for the first time implicated several top Democrats in his pedo sex ring

* He was taken off suicide watch after a failed attempt just two weeks earlier

* He was in isolation (unusual for a suicidal individual)

* The cameras malfunctioned — There is no video

* Even Mexico had video of El Chapo's escape from prison

* Then later we hear the cameras showed the guards did not do rounds?

Which is it?

* The prison guards had worked several extra shifts last week

* One prison guard on his floor was not even a certified guard

* The prison guards "forgot" to check on Epstein

* The prison guards slept through their shift

* The guards did not check Epstein for several hours

* There were reports of screaming the morning Epstein died

* The MCC had not seen a successful suicide in 40 years

* Epstein said he was the victim of attempted murder three weeks ago

-  Epstein's former roommate is facing mass murder charges
-  Epstein had dirt on numerous globalist elites
-  Epstein was not given paper sheets
-  Epstein had sheets in his cell to hang himself
-  Epstein was not suicidal according to medical professionals
-  Epstein told his lawyers on Friday, a day before his death, "See you Sunday."
-  Epstein's former roommate heard nothing
-  Epstein reportedly had to get on his knees to hang himself from his bed
-  Epstein autopsy showed broken bones in neck common in strangulation deaths

This prison obviously suffered a breakdown in official policy.

And now the liberal media and Marco Rubio believe you are a conspiracy theorist for questioning Epstein's death.

$21 TRILLION DOLLARS IS MISSING FROM THE US GOVERNMENT. <https://missingmoney.solari.com><https://home.solari.com> $21 Trillion dollars is missing from the US government. That is $65,000 per person - as much as the national debt!"No money shall be drawn from the treasury, but in consequence of appropriations made by law; and a regular statement and account of receipts and expenditures of all public money shall be published from time to time."~ Article I, Section 9, Clause 7, U.S. Constitution

What's going on? Where is the money? How could this happen? How much has really gone missing? What would happen if a corporation failed to pass an audit like this? Or a taxpayer? This means the Fed and their member banks are transacting government money outside the law. So are the corporate contractors that run the payment systems. So are the Wall Street firms who are selling government securities without full disclosure. Would your banks continue to handle your bank account if you behaved like this? Would your investors continue to buy your securities if you behaved like this? Would your accountant be silent? This is the reason that there is such a strong push to change or tear up the US Constitution. This is why members of the establishment say it is "old," "outdated!" This is why there is such a push for gun control. Don't buy it! We can use the Constitution to get our money and our government back. It is time to enforce the US Constitution. The Solari Report has been covering the missing money since 2000 when Catherine Austin Fitts began to warn Americans and global investors about mortgage fraud at the US Department of Housing and Development (HUD), the engineering of the housing bubble that led to trillions more dollars in bailouts and funds missing from the US government starting in fiscal 1998.

As a federal organized crime prosecutor, I learned that the mafia uses a practice known as "kicking up" or "paying tribute" to the boss.
Essentially, all members of a mafia family must make sure that some of their earnings end up in the boss' pocket. From the member's point of view, "kicking up" is a way to show respect, curry favor, and reinforce the hierarchical power structure. From the boss's point of view, it's a way to get rich. BusinessFox Business Peter Schiff: China, Russia buying gold because 'they can read the writing on the wall' China and Russia are loading up on gold. China and Russia have been stockpiling gold, helping to propel the precious metal to its highest level in more than six years. The People's Bank of China has added about 100 tons of gold to its reserves since December. Russia has bought 106 tons of the precious metal this year. "They can read the writing on the wall," Euro Pacific Capital CEO Peter Schiff told FOX Business, adding that the two countries are "preparing for the world where the dollar is no longer the reserve currency." China's gold reserves now stand at more than 1,950 tons, Bloomberg says. Russia has more than 2,200 tons, and has the fifth-largest stockpile by country. Beijing's gold purchases, which amount to 100 tons since December, come as it has been less aggressively buying Treasuries amid the U.S-China trade war. In June, China fell behind Japan as the world's largest holder of U.S. debt, a title it had held since May 2017. Meanwhile, Russia has more than quadrupled its reserves over the past decade amid its promise to break its reliance on the U.S. dollar. Russia's central bank has bought 106 tons so far this year, according to Bloomberg. Trade war uncertainty and worries about the health of the global economy have helped propel gold prices to their highest level in six years. The precious metal is up almost 18 percent this year and last month hit $1,550 an ounce for the first time since April 2013.

A Fox host's tirade against Trump exposes depths of the president's corruption

By Greg Sargent Opinion writer

August 30, 2019

The impunity is the point.

For days now, President Trump has been embroiled in a public feud of sorts with Fox News, because he's angry that the network isn't functioning dutifully enough as his 24/7 propaganda channel.

This is mostly being discussed as another turn in Trump's ongoing war on the media, one in which his ire has boomeranged on his media supporters. But the story here is bigger than this: Trump's battle with Fox illuminates the multi-tentacled manner in which Trump is corrupting our democracy and political system, in a new and interesting way.

On Thursday night, Fox's Neil Cavuto unleashed a lengthy rebuke to Trump. In it, Cavuto pointedly noted: "Mr. President, we don't work for you."

This was a response to Trump's rage-tweet excoriating the network: "We have to start looking for a new News Outlet. Fox isn't working for us anymore!"

Trump is angry, Cavuto argued, because on occasion Fox doesn't sufficiently whitewash his failures and lies. Cavuto noted that Trump chafes because Fox covers bad economic numbers, market drops and Trump's ongoing trade disasters, and because Fox has pointed out that Trump lied when he claimed Mexico would pay for his wall, that Russia didn't interfere in 2016, and that he inherited a recession from Barack Obama.

"To fact check him is to be all but dead to him," Cavuto said, adding that many Trump supporters had contacted him to tell him that "I am either with him totally, or I am a Never Trumper fully."

My purpose here is not to defend Fox. Yes, its news anchors sometimes do cover the administration aggressively, but the news coverage also has a heavy pro-Trump tilt, and its opinion hosts regularly traffic in outright pro-Trump agitprop and white nationalist conspiracy theories.

As Margaret Sullivan puts it, Fox writ large and Trump are the "conjoined twins of misinformation." If anything, Trump's attacks have given the network a way to hype its largely nonexistent independence from him. Rather, what's interesting here is Cavuto's declaration that many Trump supporters have come to expect and demand from Fox absolute fealty to their leader.

Cavuto deserves some credit. In his rebuke, he exposed many of the false storylines that intertwine in Trump's preferred narrative of the last few years: Russia never tried to sabotage our political system on his behalf. Trump deserves total credit for what has been good about the economy, having inherited nothing but wreckage from the Obama years. All the recent bad economic news is fake news, as are claims that Trump's unhinged handling of trade is helping cause it. Trump's buffoonish vow to subjugate Mexico and force it to pay for his wall has proved to be a mirage.

Trump expects and demands that Fox News hew to this propagandistic narrative entirely. But, even more to the point, he publicly and unabashedly tells his supporters that he expects and demands it.

Corruption of our discourse

The whole point here is the open declaration that something meant to be a news network should function as his personal 24/7 propaganda and disinformation outlet. It's a double-fisted declaration of impunity: Trump must be immune from journalistic scrutiny and be permitted to operate and lie with absolute impunity, and he will publicly assert that an ostensibly journalistic institution should be entirely subservient to him with absolute, shameless impunity as well.

This is a form of insidious corruption — corruption of our discourse. All politicians shade the truth; politics inescapably involves artifice of one kind or another. But most hew to some kind of underlying belief that gaslighting voters too shamelessly treats them with a form of deep contempt; that at some point, factual reality has to matter; that journalism plays a legitimate institutional role in restraining political dishonesty; and that all this is a necessary foundation for deliberative democracy to function.

But Trump has crossed over into a form of autocratic disinformation that is designed to render fact-based deliberation and argument impossible. And Trump is openly declaring not just that his supporters have a stake in this; but also that they are entitled to their very own network devoted to it as well. If it doesn't play this role, it has somehow betrayed them.

The impunity is the point

All this is also key to Trump's public flaunting of his other excursions into corruption. When Trump declared his intention to hold the next Group of Seven meeting at his Florida resort; when Trump dangled pardons with what the special counsel determined was improper intent; when Trump calls for investigations of political opponents; when Trump declares his frustration with norms designed to prevent such manipulation of law enforcement — well, all of that is in plain sight.

Vox's David Roberts and former Obama adviser Dan Pfeiffer got at this in an interesting exchange:

This is one of the most important insights into media in the Trump era. The difference between Nixon and Trump is that Nixon talked about his crimes on secret tapes and Trump tweets about them. <https://twitter.com/drvox/status/1167156202293334016> ... It is a weird thing, in journalism & culture generally, that we view "secret" information, uncovered, as somehow more significant or valid than info on the public record. We shouldn't need any expose to point out that the right is dominated by white nationalism. It's right there!

Everything we know about Trump leaves little doubt that this is deliberately the case. Trump is openly asserting the power to do these things with impunity.

As political scientist Jonathan Bernstein observes, the fact that the lawlessness is by design so blatant itself undermines faith in constitutional government and "promotes contempt for the entire concept of the rule of law."

Trump's unabashed and open assertion of impunity is a central feature of his corruption. This public flaunting of that corruption — of our governing institutions and discourse alike — compounds it and makes it all the more corrosive.

TRUMP'S COGNITIVE DEFICITS SEEM WORSE. WE NEED TO KNOW IF HE HAS DEMENTIA: PSYCHOLOGIST

John Gartner, Opinion contributor Published 3:15 p.m. ET April 9, 2019 | Updated 4:13 p.m. ET April 9, 2019

We see signs that the president's abilities are declining, but the only way to find out for sure is to give him a full neuropsychological evaluation.

If Donald Trump were your father, you would run, not walk, to a neurologist for an evaluation of his cognitive health. You don't have to be a doctor to see something is very wrong. "He reminds me of Uncle Bruce in so many ways," said my aunt, who nursed her brother through Alzheimer's disease. Joe Scarborough, who has known Trump for years, said in 2017 that Trump's mental confusion reminded him of his mother, who had Alzheimer's for 10 years. "It's getting worse, and not a single person who works for him doesn't know he has early signs of dementia," he said of Trump last year on his MSNBC show.

To mental health professionals like me, the red flags are waving wildly. In January 2018, over 70 of us wrote a letter to the president's physician, Dr. Ronny Jackson, urging him to administer a cognitive exam during the president's physical because we had seen a marked deterioration in his verbal functioning, possibly due to cognitive decline.

President Donald Trump at the Conservative Political Action Conference outside Washington, D.C., on March 3, 2019.

Dizzying GOP turnarounds amid one constant: Trump keeps being Trump

In fact, Dr. Jackson did administer the Montreal Cognitive Assessment, a screening tool for dementia, and Trump passed. But while Trump bragged that this proved his superior intelligence, this 10-minute screening test, where one must identify a camel, draw a clock and repeat three numbers backwards, only ruled out full-blown dementia.

We argued in a subsequent op-ed that these findings did not rule out the early stages of dementia. We also predicted that if this was organic cognitive decline, it would continue to get worse. And since that op-ed, more than a year ago, it has gotten worse.

Confusing people and generations

Memory loss is the symptom most closely associated with Alzheimer's. While Trump famously forgets the names of people (as he did recently when he called Apple CEO Tim Cook "Tim Apple") and places (as when he called Paradise, California, "Pleasure"), one could make allowances for such gaffes. More troubling, Michael Wolff reported in "Fire and Fury" that at the end of 2017, Trump failed to recognize "a succession of old friends" at Mar-a-Lago.

Trump, 72, seemed to hit a new inflection point last week when he said, "My father is German. Right? Was German. And born in a very wonderful place in Germany." In fact, his father was born in the Bronx and it was his grandfather who was from Germany.

Dementia Care International says a "person may start to mix up relationships and generations" in the second stage of dementia.

One day, when my Uncle Bruce was agitated, he cried out for me saying, "Call John. He's a rich lawyer. He'll know what to do" — even though it was my father who was the lawyer, not me. That was not in the early phase of the illness. That incident took place a few months before Uncle Bruce was forced to enter the nursing home.

Capsicles and mishiz and midtowm elections

In Alzheimer's, as language skills deteriorate, we see two types of tell-tale speech disorders, or paraphasias:

Semantic paraphasia involves choosing the incorrect words. For instance, after Attorney General William Barr released a letter on the Mueller report, Trump said: “I hope they now go and take a look at the oranges, the oranges of that investigation, the beginnings of that investigation.”

Phonemic paraphasia, which is linked to the moderate to severe stages of Alzheimer’s, is described as “the substitution of a word with a nonword that preserves at least half of the segments and/or number of syllables of the intended word.” For example, Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu becomes “Betanyahu,” big league becomes “bigly,” anonymous becomes “enenamas” or “anonyminous,” renovation becomes “renoversh,” missiles become “mishiz,” space capsule becomes “capsicle,” midterm elections become “midtowm” and “midturn” elections, and Christmas becomes “Chrissus.”

Trump’s speech patterns appear even more disordered when you go beyond the sound bite and look at a whole speech. He careens from one thought to the next in a parade of non sequiturs, frequently interrupting himself in the middle of a sentence to veer into another free association. When commentators described his two-hour speech at the Conservative Political Action Conference last month as “unhinged,” they were referring in large part to this quality.

CPAC speech underscored need for assessment

At its extreme, this is called tangential speech. As psychologist Ben Michaelis told Stat, doctors evaluating for Alzheimer’s listen for tangential remarks and non sequiturs and whether the patient can stay on topic.

You had to listen to Trump’s whole CPAC speech to realize just how tangential it was. “Those who learned about the speech from glancing at mainstream news headlines the next morning would have no idea how flat-out bonkers the whole thing was ... even by Trumpian standards,” Amanda Marcotte wrote in Salon. The Washington Post’s Eugene Robinson said Trump “gave a rambling and incoherent two-hour speech in which he raved like a lunatic.”

Americans have a right, indeed an urgent need, to know whether their president is suffering from dementia. We see clear signs that he is, but the only way to find out for sure is to give him a full neuropsychological evaluation and share the results with the American public. The need is more screamingly obvious now than it was a when we first called for it over a year ago.

Well, Mark, where does that leave pussy-grabbin', mentally ill mobster thief in chief, trump. My american experience, closely observed, with few exceptions (ie., the FBI Agent assigned my case who left the FBI), predominantly corruption and criminality ... substantially damaged, I barely got out of this trump-involved, primarily new jersey/new york (with additional corrupt governmental/judicial bureaucratic help/coverup in connecticut and virginia) and subsequently california coverup/mob scenario with my life ... and, during comey's tenure, I narrowly escaped/survived a carefully contrived, protected arson ... THE NEW YORK POST AFTER MAN CALLS HIM 'FREDO,' CHRIS CUOMO CAUGHT ON VIDEO FLYING INTO RAGE BY TAMAR LAPIN

If he calls Chris Cuomo that again, he could be sleeping with the fishes. The CNN anchor was caught on video flying into a rage at a man for calling him "Fredo" — an apparent insult referencing Fredo Corleone, the weak, dopey brother in "The Godfather."

"Punk ass bitches from the right call me 'Fredo.' My name is Chris Cuomo. I'm an anchor on CNN," the TV journalist says in the video, which was shared Monday evening on Twitter.

"Fredo is from the 'Godfather,' he was a weak brother and the use of it to an Italian is disparaging," he continues.

The 49-year-old anchor tells the man that the name "Fredo" is as offensive to Italian Americans as the n-word is to African Americans.

“Don’t f—ing insult me like that,” the Queens native fumes. “You call me ‘Fredo,’ it’s like I call you punk b—ch. You like that?”

The man in the video insists that he believed the anchor’s real name was Fredo.

But Cuomo, a dad of three, doesn’t buy it.

“You did not think that ... stand up like a man,” he seethes. “Own what you said.”

The situation then escalates with Cuomo telling the man: “I’ll f—ing throw you down these stairs like a f—ing punk ... you’re gonna call me Fredo, take a f—ing swing? I’ll f—ing wreck your shit.”

The clip was reportedly filmed Sunday on Shelter Island and sent to a right-wing website and blog, before being shared on Twitter.

A CNN spokesperson told the New York Post: “Chris Cuomo defended himself when he was verbally attacked with the use of an ethnic slur in an orchestrated setup. We completely support him.”

Cuomo, a son of the late New York Gov. Mario Cuomo and the younger brother of Gov. Andrew Cuomo, later noted on Twitter his appreciation for such expressions of support but regretted having overstepped a boundary himself:

As always, Susan, your efforts are laudable, even courageous. Yet, I believe trump's nefarious malignancy/mental illness and presence/influence is more of a reflection of what america already is, as opposed to the cause thereof. Epstein had previously claimed someone had tried to murder him, but, that incident was labeled a suicide attempt. So why was he taken off suicide watch, thus enabling the current 'tying up of loose ends'? america's such a sick, pathetic nation!]

By Jason Abbruzzese and Brandy Zadrozny:

'The world of social media — already awash in conspiracy thinking in the Trump era — erupted with new theories Saturday after the news broke that Jeffrey Epstein had died by suicide under mysterious circumstances in his jail cell.

Many of the theories ventured into the realm of outlandish conjecture, amplified by conservative commentators and at least two Republican officials. Many people who have spent the last few years blaming the nation's problems on either the Clinton or the Trump administrations found new reasons to pin Epstein's death to their favorite targets —

despite a complete lack of evidence at this point explaining how Epstein was able to kill himself.

The conspiracies spanned a wide range of topics from Epstein's connections to the Clinton family and President Donald Trump to fringe theories including QAnon. Others simply questioned the circumstances around Epstein's death.

Travis View, an independent conspiracy theory researcher, said Saturday's news sparked a significant wave of activity from various conspiracy threads — and offered evidence of just how widely embraced conspiracy theories have become.

“There's an outpouring of conspiracy theories as a consequence of his suicide,” View said. “The fringe conspiracies of two decades ago are touching the mainstream now where even lawyers and people who are otherwise close to the Republican party feel very comfortable asserting these types of theories.”

By mid-morning on the East Coast, a hashtag related to a conspiracy about the Clinton family had begun to trend on Twitter. Similar topics are well known by disinformation researchers to receive promotion from foreign influence campaigns that seek to promote misinformation and elevate divisive topics. A Twitter spokesperson told NBC News that the trends were due to organic conversation and that the company is monitoring the situation.

WAS JEFFREY EPSTEIN'S DEATH SUICIDE OR HOMICIDE? DR. SIEGEL SAYS ONE APPEARS 'MORE LIKELY' By Nick Givas | Fox News

Fox News medical contributor Dr. Marc Siegel said Thursday that it's "more likely" Jeffrey Epstein's death was a homicide rather than a suicide, following a full autopsy of Epstein's body that reportedly found broken bones in his neck.

"The hyoid bone in the neck being fractured and other fractures in the neck, make it more likely, and again, this is a percentage call, more likely that it was a homicide than a suicide," Siegel said during an interview on "America's Newsroom."

Siegel said he is still waiting for more information before rendering a final opinion, but expressed suspicion and skepticism about the details surrounding Epstein's death.

"It can either be a suicide or a homicide still... I am now more suspicious than ever that this could be a homicide," he said.

"If someone is attacked, you see signs of the attack on the body... It hasn't been released yet. I'm waiting to see that."

[JUDGE NAPOLITANO ON EPSTEIN SUICIDE: KEY QUESTION IS 'DID SOMEONE INTENTIONALLY LOOK THE OTHER WAY']

Siegel also addressed the lack of judgment allegedly displayed by prison doctors and officials, after they deemed Epstein to be in good mental health, just six days after he had been placed on suicide watch.

"Six days on a suicide watch, prison officials reportedly removed it. Prison officials, guided by who? What self-respecting psychiatrist would say, 'okay, he's no longer suicidal,'" he said.

"There was evidence on July 23rd that he may have done something to his neck, or someone did... suddenly six days later he waves his hand, says he's fine, and he's put in an area where ultimately he's unobserved -- because as you know, people fall asleep and they falsify records reportedly."

Siegel said he expects definitive answers to be disclosed to the public very soon.

An autopsy on the body of Epstein revealed the convicted sex offender had several broken bones in his neck, including the hyoid bone, according to a report.

The hyoid bone, which is near the Adam's apple, can be broken in a suicide by hanging – especially in older people –but is more common in strangulation murders, The Washington Post reported.

Epstein, 66, was found Saturday hanging in his cell in an “apparent suicide” at the Metropolitan Correctional Center in New York City, where he was being held on sex trafficking charges.

Fox News' Brie Stimson contributed to this report.

List of Inconsistencies...

Epstein was the highest profile prisoner in the US prison system.

On Tuesday the autopsy revealed Epstein suffered broken bones in his neck common in homicide by strangulation.

Since his death we have learned a number of things that make you question this man's death.

Here is a Complete List of Inconsistencies in Prison Policy Surrounding Jeffrey Epstein's Death:

* Epstein said he was considering cooperating in "naming names" in his international sex ring

* He was found unconscious in his prison cell just three weeks earlier

* Two days prior to his death documents released for the first time implicated several top Democrats in his pedo sex ring

* He was taken off suicide watch after a failed attempt just two weeks earlier

* He was in isolation (unusual for a suicidal individual)

* The cameras malfunctioned — There is no video

* Even Mexico had video of El Chapo's escape from prison

* Then later we hear the cameras showed the guards did not do rounds?

Which is it?

* The prison guards had worked several extra shifts last week

* One prison guard on his floor was not even a certified guard

* The prison guards "forgot" to check on Epstein

* The prison guards slept through their shift

* The guards did not check Epstein for several hours

* There were reports of screaming the morning Epstein died

* The MCC had not seen a successful suicide in 40 years

* Epstein said he was the victim of attempted murder three weeks ago

-  Epstein's former roommate is facing mass murder charges
-  Epstein had dirt on numerous globalist elites
-  Epstein was not given paper sheets
-  Epstein had sheets in his cell to hang himself
-  Epstein was not suicidal according to medical professionals
-  Epstein told his lawyers on Friday, a day before his death, "See you Sunday."
-  Epstein's former roommate heard nothing
-  Epstein reportedly had to get on his knees to hang himself from his bed
-  Epstein autopsy showed broken bones in neck common in strangulation deaths

This prison obviously suffered a breakdown in official policy.

And now the liberal media and Marco Rubio believe you are a conspiracy theorist for questioning Epstein's death.

dollars is missing from the US government. That is $65,000 per person - as much as the national debt!" "No money shall be drawn from the treasury, but in consequence of appropriations made by law; and a regular statement and account of receipts and expenditures of all public money shall be published from time to time."~ Article I, Section 9, Clause 7, U.S. Constitution What's going on? Where is the money? How could this happen? How much has really gone missing? What would happen if a corporation failed to pass an audit like this? Or a taxpayer? This means the Fed and their member banks are transacting government money outside the law. So are the corporate contractors that run the payment systems. So are the Wall Street firms who are selling government securities without full disclosure. Would your banks continue to handle your bank account if you behaved like this? Would your investors continue to buy your securities if you behaved like this? Would your accountant be silent? This is the reason that there is such a strong push to change or tear up the US Constitution. This is why members of the establishment say it is "old," "outdated!" This is why there is such a push for gun control. Don't buy it! We can use the Constitution to get our money and our government back. It is time to enforce the US Constitution. The Solari Report has been covering the missing money since 2000 when Catherine Austin Fitts began to warn Americans and global investors about mortgage fraud at the US Department of Housing and Development (HUD), the engineering of the housing bubble that led to trillions more dollars in bailouts and funds missing from the US government starting in fiscal 1998.

<https://www.cnn.com/2019/08/27/politics/trump-g7-press-conference/index.html>

Analysis by Chris Cillizza, CNN Editor-at-large

(CNN)Before leaving France -- and the G7 conference -- behind, President Donald Trump took questions from the White House press corps. It was a typical Trump performance -- chaotic, confrontational and very, very loose with facts.

I went through the transcript of Trump's answers. They're below.

1. "Walmart just announced numbers that were, I mean, mind-boggling numbers. It's a great poll right there, and it's the ultimate poll, how the retailer is doing and how are certain -- certain companies doing."

The "mind-boggling" numbers Trump is referring to are stronger-than-expected earnings for Walmart. Those earning numbers are, uh, not a poll of any sort. And away we go!

Create an environment where kids are neither insecure, nor overconfident about family finances.

2. "It was a little different kind of a statement. I thought it was a beautiful statement."

Trump is talking here about a statement Monday by the Chinese vice premier that he would like to resolve the trade war with the US under "calm" circumstances. (The Chinese government appears to be deeply divided about whether to make a deal or not.) Also, Trump uses the words "beautiful" to describe a whole heck of a lot of things -- including sleeping gas and coal and chocolate cake.

3. "I've spent and I think I will, in a combination of loss and opportunity, probably it'll cost me anywhere from $3 to $5 billion to be President."

What evidence did Trump provide to back up this wild claim? Oh, none. Thanks for asking!

4. "I did a lot of great jobs and great deals that I don't do anymore."

Same.

5. "Doral happens to be within Miami. It's a city. It's a wonderful place. It's a very, very successful area of Florida. It's, very importantly, only five minutes from the airport; the airport is right next door."

Donald Trump owns Doral. Donald Trump is President. Donald Trump is selling Doral as the best location for the next G7 meeting in 2020. Donald Trump knows that if Doral hosts the G7, it will look mighty nice on Doral's marketing materials in the future. Totally normal stuff!

6. "With Doral, we have a series of magnificent buildings; we call them bungalows."

Bungalows, eh? And how did you come up with this exotic term?

7. "They each hold from 50 to 70 very luxurious rooms with magnificent views. We have incredible conference rooms, incredible restaurants."

Donald Trump owns Doral. Donald Trump is President. Oh wait, I already said that.

8. "And they've done a beautiful job. They've really done a beautiful job."

The "they" here is the Trump Organization. Which is named after Donald Trump. Who is the President. Whose sons run the company.

9. "The ballrooms are among the biggest in Florida and the best. It's brand new."

Is there some sort of ballroom rating scale I'm unaware of? Either way, Doral's ballrooms are the best. Many people are saying it.

10. "In my opinion, I'm not going to make any money. I don't want to make money. I don't care about making money. If I wanted to make money, I wouldn't worry about $3 billion to $5 billion."

OK, so, hosting the massive G7 conference at a hotel Trump owns won't make him any money? What about the massive delegations staying in these new-fangled bungalows? Or the residual publicity for the largest and best ballrooms in Florida?

11. "Because that's what -- I mean, at some point, I'm going to detail that and will show."

What Trump appears to be saying here is that he has a plan to "detail" and "show" how he being President is costing him between $3 and $5 billion. Which, honestly, I'd love to see! I will hold my breath until this report is revealed!

12. "Having it at that particular place, because of the way it's set up, each country can have their own villa, or their own bungalow."

These "bungalows" -- am I spelling that right???? -- seem like truly wondrous inventions.

13. "I think Iran wants to get this situation straightened out. Now, is that based on fact or based on gut? That's based on gut."

An amazing window into how Trump thinks and acts. First, he says Iran is going to want to "get this situation straightened out" before adding he doesn't actually know that, he just sort of senses it. Also, on Tuesday, Iran's president said there would be no talks between the two countries unless -- and until -- US economic sanctions are lifted.

14. "So I don't do things for political reasons."

Ah ha ha ha ha...wait, is he serious?

15. "A lot of people say having Russia -- which is a power -- having them inside the room is better than having them outside the room."

To be clear: The one prominent person advocating for Russia to be readmitted to the G7 -- from which they were removed after they annexed Crimea in 2014 -- is Donald John Trump. "A lot of people say" is just made up.

16. "By the way, there were numerous people during the G7 that felt that way. And we didn't take a vote or anything, but we did discuss it."

"We didn't take a vote on it or anything" = I may be totally making this up but you have zero way of proving it either way.

17. "President (Barack) Obama was not happy that this happened because it was embarrassing to him. Right? It was very embarrassing to him. And he wanted Russia to be out of the -- what was called the 'G8.' "

By Trump's re-telling of history, the reason Russia was removed from the G8 is not because they annexed sovereign land of the Ukraine. No, it was actually because, in so doing, they embarrassed President Obama, who then pushed them out of the G8. Which, well, OK.

18. "He was outsmarted by (Russian President Vladimir) Putin. He was outsmarted. President Putin outsmarted President Obama."

The Russian president outsmarted Obama by seizing Crimea? How? Why? So many questions ... and, oh, not for nothing but Trump is calling a past president dumb and praising an authoritarian ruler while representing America on foreign soil.

19. "I do nothing for politics. I know a lot of you aren't going to -- you're going to smile at that. I do nothing for politics."

[Smiles]

20. "Now, it's a very big area, a very important area. Russia has its submarine -- that's where they do their submarine work, and that's where they dock large and powerful submarines."

Crimea: Where Russia does its "submarine work."

21. "But not as powerful as ours and not as large as ours. But they have their submarines."

Russia, yeah, they have some submarines. I mean, they're not US submarines but they have them.

22. "It could have been stopped. It could have been stopped with the right -- whatever. It could have been stopped. But President Obama was unable to stop it, and it's too bad."

If only Obama had been smart enough to deploy the "whatever" in Crimea! How did he not think of that?

23. "You have a G8, now it's a G7, and you invite the person that was thrown out, really by President Obama and really because he got outsmarted. President Obama, pure and simple"

Say it with me: Russia was removed from the G8 because it annexed another country's land using military force. (I know it's a mouthful. But it's also true!)

24. "We've had many calls, not just one. This isn't one. And these are high-level calls."

Trump is talking about conversations his administration had had with China about the possibility of ending the trade war. There have been many calls. High level. The best calls. Believe me.

25. "Just so you understand: China wants to make a deal. Now, whether or not we make a deal -- it's got to be a great deal for us."

Not entirely accurate. There are elements within the Chinese government asking for a "calm" negotiation. There are others uninterested in coming to the table.

26. "You know -- and I told this to President Xi (Jinping), who I really respect. I really do. I have great respect and I like him too."

"My only question is, who is our bigger enemy, Jay Powell or Chairman Xi?" -- Donald Trump, four days ago.

27. "I have a lot of feeling for President Xi. He's very outstanding in so many ways."

"My only question is, who is our bigger enemy, Jay Powell or Chairman Xi?" -- Donald Trump, four days ago

28. "I don't want to do business. Forget about tariffs for a second. We're taking in tremendous amounts of money. Forget that. I don't want to do business."

In which the President of the United States casually floats the idea of the United States ending all business relationships with China. Totally normal!

29. "Now, when I raise and he raises, I raise and he raises, we can never catch up."

"If you've been in the game 30 minutes and you don't know who the patsy is, you're the patsy." -- Warren Buffett

30. "It's the way I negotiate. It's done very well for me over the years, and it's doing even better for the country."

Trump is suggesting here that there is a method to what looks like total chaos -- and contradiction -- from the outside. That it's all part of his negotiating style -- perhaps designed to keep his opponents off balance? As for how well it's worked for him, that's somewhat debatable; he is a billionaire, yes, but his companies have gone bankrupt six times.

31. "It should have been done by Bush. It should have been done by Clinton. Double Bush."

"Double Bush." -- The President of the United States. (The "it" is equalizing our trade relationship with China.)

32. "I love the UK. I own great property in the UK. I love the UK. I have no idea how my property is doing because I don't care. But I own Turnberry, and I own in Aberdeen, and I own in Ireland, as you know -- Doonbeg -- and great stuff."

Look, I own a lot of property in the UK that I don't care about. I care so little that I am now going to name all the properties I own in the UK.

33. "France is a great nation. It's being run. A lot of things are happening."

Say what you will about France but you can't argue that "it's being run." Also, "things are happening." A lot of things.

34. "I guess you would start off by saying, 'England.' Right? You know, I ask Boris (Johnson), 'Where's England? What's happening with England?' They don't use it too much anymore."

I, for one, would definitely start off a conversation about Brexit and the European Union by asking why people don't use the word "England" any more. Absolutely. This makes perfect sense.

35. "I haven't said that, but I think that having President Putin in what was the G8 -- he was a member of the G8, and I heard he was a good member of the G8."

Trump here denies he would invite Putin to the G7 meeting next year in America. Let me quote from earlier in this very press conference: "Would I invite him? I would certainly invite him." I mean ...

36. "People feel very much like me. Many people."

Same. Bigly.

37. "I'm not going to lose that wealth. I'm not going lose it on dreams, on windmills -- which, frankly, aren't working too well. I'm not going to lose it."

The question Trump was answering here? "What do you think the world should be doing about climate change? And do you still harbor that skepticism?"

38. "And I'm an environmentalist. A lot of people don't understand that. I have done more environmental impact statements, probably, than anybody that's -- I guess I can say definitely, because I have done many, many, many of them."

Many environmental impact statements. And, the best. Historically good.

39. "We can't let that wealth be taken away. Clean air, clean water."

Trump 2020: Don't take our wealth! Also, clean air and water! This feels like a good place to end

Politics The Guardian We need to cancel the next G7. Let's resume them when Trump is gone Right now, the G7 is not equipped to work towards its goals, and the biggest obstacle is US President Donald Trump 'Canceling the next summit is not a ridiculous recommendation.'

The 38 most bizarre lines from Donald Trump's wild impromptu news conference

Chris Cillizza

Analysis by Chris Cillizza, CNN Editor-at-large

August 22, 2019

President Trump: I am the chosen one

Witness his nearly hour-long impromptu news conference Wednesday at the White House -- all while his aides stood waiting for him to board Marine One for a speech to a veterans group in Kentucky. Trump prowled up and down the line of reporters -- bullying some, cajoling others and taking question after question after question.

I went through the entire transcript of Trump's press conference and picked out the "best" lines. They're below.

1. "But our economy is the strongest in the world, by far. Nothing even close. And a lot of good things are happening."...

2. "I was right, and just about everybody admits that. I was right."

Trump is talking here about the Federal Reserve but, really, he could be talking about anything in the world and he would still believe it.

3. "[Fed Chair Jerome Powell] raised interest rates too fast, too furious."

"I live my life a quarter-mile at a time." -- Dominic Toretto/Vin Diesel

4. "Oh, I have an appetite for background checks. We're going to be doing background checks."

"Trump cools on background check push in recent lawmaker conversations" -- CNN, August 20

5. "But there are certain weaknesses, and we want to fix the weaknesses. And I think that'll happen. Let's see what happens."

Trump's answer on whether background checks will be expanded should be in the vague answers Hall of Fame.

6. "Denmark, I looked forward to going, but I thought that the Prime Minister's statement -- that it was absurd; that it was an absurd idea -- it was nasty. I thought it was an inappropriate statement. All she had to do is say, 'No, we wouldn't be interested.'"

OK, so. Trump wanted to buy Greenland, which is owned by Denmark. The Danes said no. But it was the way they said "no" that pissed Trump off. Everyone knows "absurd" is fighting words, right? RIGHT?

7. "But all they had to do is say, 'No, we'd rather not do that,' or 'We'd rather not talk about it.' Don't say, 'What an absurd idea that is.'"

Did someone just say "absurd"?!?!?! [Looks around for someone to fight]

8. "I want guns to be in the hands of people that are mentally stable. And those people, I want them to easily be able to get a gun. But people that are insane, people that are sick up here [points to head], I don't want them to be able to get a gun."

The President of the United States on guns: Sane people = good. Insane people = bad? Trump's take on gun policy is, uh, pretty rudimentary.

9. "We're working on background checks. There are things we can do. But we already have very serious background checks. We have strong background checks. We can close up the gaps. We can do things that are very good and things that, frankly, gun owners want to have done. But we also have to remember the gun doesn't pull the trigger, a person does. And we have great mental illness."

I dare you to figure out what Trump actually wants to do on guns from this word salad. And I know what he meant, but "we have great mental illness" doesn't sound all that good.

10. "We're looking at a lot of different things relative to Antifa. Antifa, in my opinion, is a terrorist organization. You see what they've been doing. We've had great support on that. We're looking at various different things."

"Great support" on what, exactly?

11. "No President has ever done anywhere close to what I've done between Golan Heights, Jerusalem, Iran -- and other things."

He is always the first. And the best. Especially on those all-important "other things."

12. "No President has done what I've done."

FACT CHECK: True!

13. "[Rep. Rashida Tlaib] had a plan to greatly embarrass Israel by going there with the fact that she wanted to see her grandmother. I assume that's true. I hope that's true. But it was very bad."

In which Trump, as he so often does, questions whether the Democratic Michigan congresswoman was actually going to Israel to visit her grandmother without actually asserting that she wasn't.

14. "In my opinion, you vote for a Democrat, you're being very disloyal to Jewish people and you're being very disloyal to Israel. And only weak people would say anything other than that."

Yes, Trump is doubling down on his very controversial "dual loyalty" claims here. But he's also revealing what he believes to be the worst trait in a person: Being "weak."

15. "I think that if you vote for a Democrat, you're very, very disloyal to Israel and to the Jewish people."

He never, ever backs down. No matter what. He believes it to be a sign of, wait for it, weakness.

16. "That was outsmarting Obama. So, Russia outsmarted President Obama. They took over during his term, not during mine -- Crimea."

OK, so Russia seized Crimea from the Ukraine by force. But that was really because President Barack Obama was ... not smart? Huh!

17. "They were taken out because Putin outsmarted -- on Crimea, on the red line, on other things -- totally outsmarted Obama. Obama was upset; they took them out."

This is a stunning rewrite of history. Russia was removed from the G8 because they annexed land controlled by another country. They were not removed from the G8 because Obama was mad that Russian President Vladimir Putin had somehow outsmarted him.

18. "The fake news, of which many of you are members, is trying to convince the public to have a recession. 'Let's have a recession.'"

This is obviously just Trump saying stuff. BUT: The idea that reporters are rooting for a recession, which would undoubtedly cost people their jobs in our industry and practically every other one, is patently ridiculous.

19. "This isn't my trade war. This is a trade war that should have taken place a long time ago by a lot of other Presidents."

"Trade wars are good, and easy to win." -- Donald Trump, March 2018

20. "Somebody had to do it. I am the chosen one. Somebody had to do it."

Ahem.

21. "I was put here by people -- I was put here by people to do a great job. And that's what I'm doing. And nobody has done a job like I've done."

A totally normal statement from the President of the United States!

22. "The Prime Minister used a terrible word when describing something that we've been talking about for years with our country."

[narrator voice] The word was "absurd."

23. "She shouldn't treat the United States that way by saying, 'What an abs-...' She said 'absurd.' That's not the right word to use: 'absurd.'"

Look, I warned you guys about using that word! So now it's on. [Jumps into crowd like Amir Garrett taking on the entire Pirates team]

24. "We're building tremendous numbers of miles of wall right now in different locations. It all comes together likes a beautiful puzzle."

As of July, 46.7 miles of the border wall had been built. So, lot of puzzle pieces still out there.

25. "This guy is the most biased reporter. NBC. You know, I made a lot of money for NBC with 'The Apprentice' and I used to like them, but they are the most biased."

The person in question is NBC's White House reporter Peter Alexander. What did he say that set Trump off? "Joe Biden's gaffes." Yes, that's it.

26. "I am the least racist person ever to serve in office, OK? I am the least racist person."

The least racist person doesn't spend a ton of time talking about how they are the least racist person.

27. "In six years, when I'm not here, The New York Times goes out of business very quickly."

Put a pin in this. I'll take any and all bets of people willing to gamble that in 2025 The New York Times is out of business. Literally, set the line at five years from 2020. I will take the over on every bet.

28. "There are many, many things in play. People are talking about videos. People are talking about lots of different things. But we do have a way of bringing what we already have, because we have many, many -- as you know, we have many, many people that are unable to buy guns right now. Many people are unable to buy guns."

Trump regularly talks in circles. But when he talks about guns and the way forward on gun control(or not) he takes it to a whole other level.

29. "And you know, we can't let that slope go so easy that we're talking about background checks, then all of a sudden we're talking about, 'Let's take everybody's gun away.'"

This is a favorite argument of the NRA but bears very little connection to reality. Making sure everyone who buys a gun has to submit to a background check isn't even on the same planet as the government coming to peoples' houses and demanding they turn their guns over. Ridiculous.

30. "You approve one thing, then another thing, then another thing, then all of a sudden you're on that slope, and all of a sudden nobody has any legal protection."

Donald Trump on slippery slopes. Very detailed stuff here.

31. "We wiped out the caliphate, 100%. I did in record time."

Was there a previous record for wiping out ISIS that I am unaware of? Also, this.

32. "I went to the hospitals. It was totally falsely reported. There were beautiful, beautiful, very sad, you know, horrible moments. But there were beautiful moments, in the sense that these people -- the families and also the people that were so badly injured that I was with -- they love our country."

This is Trump on his hospital visit to victims of mass shootings in Dayton, Ohio, and El Paso, Texas. Very beautiful. Also sad. And horrible. But also beautiful.

33. "So when I went to Dayton, and when I went to El Paso, and I went into those hospitals, the love for me -- and me, maybe, as a representative of the country -- but for me -- and my love for them was unparalleled."

So, the big takeaway from Trump's visits to mass shooting victims was that they really loved him. Like, a lot.

34. "The doctors were coming out of the operating rooms. There were hundreds and hundreds of people all over the floor. You couldn't even walk on it."

So, according to the President, doctors stopped operating on patients in order to come out and meet him? OK! Very legal and very cool!

35. "I think the Fed has been very late and very early."

"WERE YOU RUSHING OR WERE YOU DRAGGING?"

36. "Plus, we're building large sections of the wall."

46.7 miles.

37. "It's only in your head. It's only anti-Semitic in your head."

Real quote from the President of the United States.

38. "You'll find out. ...You're going to find out."

This was Trump's response to a question about what the US's reaction will be to a drone shot down in Yemen. Guess we'll have to stay tuned until the next episode! This feels like a good place to end.

WHY ANTHONY SCARAMUCCI'S REBELLION BOTHERS DONALD TRUMP SO MUCH

(CNN)Chris Cillizza Donald Trump is doing a very poor job of not caring that his former friend Anthony Scaramucci has turned on him.

"Just another disgruntled former employee who got fired for gross incompetence," Trump tweeted Tuesday morning of his former White House communications director.

That Trump tweet came less than 12 hours after this one, again on the Mooch: "Nobody ever heard of this dope until he met me. He only lasted 11 days!"

And earlier on Monday, Trump sent this tweet: "Anthony Scaramucci is a highly unstable 'nut job' who was with other candidates in the primary who got shellacked, & then unfortunately wheedled his way into my campaign. I barely knew him until his 11 days of gross incompetence-made a fool of himself, bad on TV.

Scaramucci says he's recruiting ex-cabinet officials to speak out against Trump.

Does that seem like someone who is totally unbothered by Scaramucci's public rejection of him in a variety of interviews and tweets this month?

Remember, always, that Trump's Twitter feed is a direct line to his mental and emotional state. Trump's allies -- in the White House and outside of it -- can say whatever they want, but what really matters is what Trump tweets. If he tweets about it, he cares about it. Bigly.

Which begs the question: Why does Trump care so much about Scaramucci's rebellion?

The answer is, as always with Trump, tied directly to how he views the world: There are only two kinds of people -- the pro-Trump ones and the anti-Trump ones. People who have been pro-Trump for a long time, or at least before he was elected president, he keeps closer and values more. Those are his OG people, the ones who have been with him from the jump.

It's not a big group -- and it's mostly family. But there are a few non-family members in there -- and Scaramucci was one. When those pro-Trumpers turn on him, Trump goes bananas.

Scaramucci says Spicer is 100% right about this

We saw just that scenario play out with Michael Cohen, Trump's longtime attorney and personal fixer. In the immediate aftermath of Cohen's arrest on charges of tax evasion and other financial crimes, Trump stood up for him. Trump praised Cohen in April 2018 as "a fine person with a wonderful family" and someone who he had "always liked & respected."

Then, Cohen flipped -- entering into a plea agreement to cooperate with special counsel Robert Mueller and the Southern District of New York on several investigations into Trumpworld. Trump didn't take that decision well.

"If anyone is looking for a good lawyer, I would strongly suggest that you don't retain the services of Michael Cohen!" Trump tweeted in August 2018. Added Trump this past February: "Michael Cohen was one of many lawyers who represented me (unfortunately). He had other clients also. He was just disbarred by the State Supreme Court for lying & fraud. He did bad things unrelated to Trump. He is lying in order to reduce his prison time. Using Crooked's lawyer!" And this one from March: "Bad lawyer and fraudster Michael Cohen said under sworn testimony that he never asked for a Pardon. His lawyers totally contradicted him. He lied! Additionally, he directly asked me for a pardon. I said NO. He lied again! He also badly wanted to work at the White House. He lied!"

In short: Hell hath no fury like Donald Trump scorned.

Trump feels deeply done wrong by the likes of Scaramucci and Cohen (or even Omarosa Manigault Newman!). In his own mind, he brought them into the trust tree, made them who they are and now they have turned on him. For someone who demands total loyalty forever from the people in his orbit (but who, interestingly, doesn't feel the need to be loyal back), Trump sees what Scaramucci is doing as the ultimate betrayal. Hence his totally over-the-top reaction.

WAS JEFFREY EPSTEIN'S DEATH SUICIDE OR HOMICIDE? DR. SIEGEL SAYS ONE APPEARS 'MORE LIKELY' By Nick Givas | Fox News

Fox News medical contributor Dr. Marc Siegel said Thursday that it's "more likely" Jeffrey Epstein's death was a homicide rather than a suicide, following a full autopsy of Epstein's body that reportedly found broken bones in his neck.

"The hyoid bone in the neck being fractured and other fractures in the neck, make it more likely, and again, this is a percentage call, more likely that it was a homicide than a suicide," Siegel said during an interview on "America's Newsroom."

Siegel said he is still waiting for more information before rendering a final opinion, but expressed suspicion and skepticism about the details surrounding Epstein's death.

"It can either be a suicide or a homicide still... I am now more suspicious than ever that this could be a homicide," he said.

"If someone is attacked, you see signs of the attack on the body... It hasn't been released yet. I'm waiting to see that."

[JUDGE NAPOLITANO ON EPSTEIN SUICIDE: KEY QUESTION IS 'DID SOMEONE INTENTIONALLY LOOK THE OTHER WAY']

Siegel also addressed the lack of judgment allegedly displayed by prison doctors and officials, after they deemed Epstein to be in good mental health, just six days after he had been placed on suicide watch.

"Six days on a suicide watch, prison officials reportedly removed it. Prison officials, guided by who? What self-respecting psychiatrist would say, 'okay, he's no longer suicidal,'" he said.

"There was evidence on July 23rd that he may have done something to his neck, or someone did... suddenly six days later he waves his hand, says he's fine, and he's put in an area where ultimately he's unobserved -- because as you know, people fall asleep and they falsify records reportedly."

Siegel said he expects definitive answers to be disclosed to the public very soon.

An autopsy on the body of Epstein revealed the convicted sex offender had several broken bones in his neck, including the hyoid bone, according to a report.

The hyoid bone, which is near the Adam's apple, can be broken in a suicide by hanging – especially in older people –but is more common in strangulation murders, The Washington Post reported.

Epstein, 66, was found Saturday hanging in his cell in an “apparent suicide” at the Metropolitan Correctional Center in New York City, where he was being held on sex trafficking charges.

Fox News' Brie Stimson contributed to this report.

Epstein was the highest profile prisoner in the US prison system.

On Tuesday the autopsy revealed Epstein suffered broken bones in his neck common in homicide by strangulation.

Since his death we have learned a number of things that make you question this man's death.

Here is a Complete List of Inconsistencies in Prison Policy Surrounding Jeffrey Epstein's Death:

* Epstein said he was considering cooperating in "naming names" in his international sex ring

* He was found unconscious in his prison cell just three weeks earlier

-  Two days prior to his death documents released for the first time implicated several top Democrats in his pedo sex ring
-  He was taken off suicide watch after a failed attempt just two weeks earlier
-  He was in isolation (unusual for a suicidal individual)
-  The cameras malfunctioned — There is no video
-  Even Mexico had video of El Chapo's escape from prison
-  Then later we hear the cameras showed the guards did not do rounds?

Which is it?

-  The prison guards had worked several extra shifts last week
-  One prison guard on his floor was not even a certified guard
-  The prison guards “forgot” to check on Epstein
-  The prison guards slept through their shift
-  The guards did not check Epstein for several hours
-  There were reports of screaming the morning Epstein died
-  The MCC had not seen a successful suicide in 40 years
-  Epstein said he was the victim of attempted murder three weeks ago
-  Epstein's former roommate is facing mass murder charges
-  Epstein had dirt on numerous globalist elites
-  Epstein was not given paper sheets
-  Epstein had sheets in his cell to hang himself
-  Epstein was not suicidal according to medical professionals
-  Epstein told his lawyers on Friday, a day before his death, “See you Sunday.”
-  Epstein's former roommate heard nothing
-  Epstein reportedly had to get on his knees to hang himself from his bed
-  Epstein autopsy showed broken bones in neck common in strangulation deaths

This prison obviously suffered a breakdown in official policy.

And now the liberal media and Marco Rubio believe you are a conspiracy theorist for questioning Epstein's death.

THE NEW YORK POST AFTER MAN CALLS HIM 'FREDO,' CHRIS CUOMO CAUGHT ON VIDEO FLYING INTO RAGE BY TAMAR LAPIN

If he calls Chris Cuomo that again, he could be sleeping with the fishes.

The CNN anchor was caught on video flying into a rage at a man for calling him "Fredo" — an apparent insult referencing Fredo Corleone, the weak, dopey brother in "The Godfather."

"Punk ass bitches from the right call me 'Fredo.' My name is Chris Cuomo. I'm an anchor on CNN," the TV journalist says in the video, which was shared Monday evening on Twitter.

"Fredo is from the 'Godfather,' he was a weak brother and the use of it to an Italian is disparaging," he continues.

The 49-year-old anchor tells the man that the name "Fredo" is as offensive to Italian Americans as the n-word is to African Americans.

“Don’t f—ing insult me like that,” the Queens native fumes. “You call me ‘Fredo,’ it’s like I call you punk b—ch. You like that?”

The man in the video insists that he believed the anchor’s real name was Fredo.

But Cuomo, a dad of three, doesn’t buy it.

“You did not think that ... stand up like a man,” he seethes. “Own what you said.”

The situation then escalates with Cuomo telling the man: “I’ll f—ing throw you down these stairs like a f—ing punk ... you’re gonna call me Fredo, take a f—ing swing? I’ll f—ing wreck your shit.”

The clip was reportedly filmed Sunday on Shelter Island and sent to a right-wing website and blog, before being shared on Twitter.

A CNN spokesperson told the New York Post: “Chris Cuomo defended himself when he was verbally attacked with the use of an ethnic slur in an orchestrated setup. We completely support him.”

Cuomo, a son of the late New York Gov. Mario Cuomo and the younger brother of Gov. Andrew Cuomo, later noted on Twitter his appreciation for such expressions of support but regretted having overstepped a boundary himself:

(CNN)Jeffrey Epstein's death ends the criminal case against him, but his powerful friends and associates may not have heard the last of it.

US Attorney for the Southern District of New York Geoffrey Berman said the investigation of Epstein's alleged conduct, including a conspiracy charge, remains ongoing, and Attorney General Bill Barr similarly said the case will continue against anyone who was complicit with Epstein.

"Any co-conspirators should not rest easy. The victims deserve justice and they will get it," Barr said.

In addition, Epstein's accusers asked a federal judge on Monday to invalidate the non-prosecution agreement that Epstein reached with prosecutors in the US Attorney's Office in Florida a decade ago, which would give authorities "greater power" to go after his alleged co-conspirators.

Given that ongoing investigation, CNN took a look at the notable figures connected to Epstein who have been named in sworn testimony, as well as the major political figures with ties to him.

Unnamed assistants

The federal indictment against Epstein says that he ran a trafficking enterprise in which he sexually abused dozens of underage girls between 2002 and 2005 at his homes in Manhattan and Palm Beach, Florida. He also paid some of his victims to recruit other victims, the document states.

He was charged with sex trafficking of minors and conspiracy to engage in sex trafficking of minors, and he had pleaded not guilty to the charge.

After Jeffrey Epstein's death, prosecutors examine his inner circle

After Jeffrey Epstein's death, prosecutors examine his inner circle

The indictment specifically alleges Epstein worked and conspired with employees and associates who facilitated his conduct by, among other things, contacting victims and scheduling their sexual encounters with him.

The roles of three employees are laid out in the indictment, though they are not personally identified.

"Employee-1," based in New York, was directed by Epstein to communicate with victims to arrange their visits to his New York City mansion, the indictment says. This employee also sometimes asked the victim-recruiters to bring a specific underage girl for Epstein, the indictment states.

"Employee-2" and "Employee-3" were both assistants who worked for Epstein and both were also responsible for scheduling sexual encounters with victims ahead of his visits to his Palm Beach residence, according to the indictment.

It's unclear why the assistants were not named in the documents.

Other unnamed employees have similarly been noted in a draft version of a lawsuit that was expected to be filed by Jennifer Araoz, who said she was raped by Epstein when she was 15.

CNN usually does not name possible sexual misconduct victims, but is identifying Araoz because she came forward to speak publicly on a television news program and is named in the lawsuit draft.

Her draft complaint targeted Epstein as well as unidentified women called the "Recruiter," the "Secretary" and the "Maid," whom it dubs Jane Does 1, 2 and 3. The draft complaint said that the recruiter facilitated her "grooming" to be sexually assaulted by Epstein, and that the secretary and the maid would give her money after her visits to Epstein.

Ghislaine Maxwell

Jeffrey Epstein and Ghislaine Maxwell attend an event on March 15, 2005, in New York City.

Jeffrey Epstein and Ghislaine Maxwell attend an event on March 15, 2005, in New York City.

A series of documents unsealed last week accuse Ghislaine Maxwell, the British daughter of the late publishing tycoon Robert Maxwell, of assisting Epstein in his sexual abuse.

At the heart of the documents are allegations Virginia Roberts Giuffre made in a 2015 defamation case. Giuffre said Epstein kept her as a "sex slave" and that he was assisted by Maxwell. Testimony from another woman in those documents also alleged abuse at the hands of Epstein and Maxwell.

The case was settled in 2017.

An attorney for Maxwell did not respond to CNN's request for comment on Friday. Maxwell and her representatives have previously denied she engaged in sexual abuse or sex trafficking.

In the court filings, Maxwell and her attorney portray Giuffre as an unreliable narrator, pointing to errors in certain dates and figures she provided. Giuffre has said the errors were mistakes.

David Boies, an attorney for Giuffre, said Friday that her lawsuit "exposed for prosecutors, and now the public, the scope and scale and ugliness of the Epstein/Maxwell sex trafficking ring."

Les Wexner said he split ties with Jeffrey Epstein, his former money manager, 12 years ago.

Les Wexner said he split ties with Jeffrey Epstein, his former money manager, 12 years ago.

Epstein's longtime associate was Les Wexner, the CEO and founder of L Brands, the parent company of Victoria's Secret and Bath & Body Works. After Epstein's arrest on federal charges last month, Wexner acknowledged that Epstein was his former personal money manager and that he served as a trustee of the Wexner Foundation, the CEO's charitable group.

He said he severed ties with Epstein 12 years ago and denied knowledge of his criminal behavior.

"I would never have guessed that a person I employed more than a decade ago could have caused such pain to so many people," Wexner wrote in a letter to L Brands employees. "My heart goes out to each and every person who has been hurt."

L Brands CEO accuses Jeffrey Epstein of misappropriating money

Their connections ran deep, and Wexner gave Epstein "sweeping powers over his finances, philanthropy and private life," The New York Times reported.

Epstein even tried to get involved in the recruitment of models for Victoria's Secret's popular catalog, the Times reported. That troubled executives at the company, which used talent agencies to scout models. Wexner was alerted by executives and reportedly said he would handle the issue, but Epstein's involvement in trying to attract models continued, the Times reported.

L Brands' spokesperson said the board of directors has "engaged outside counsel to conduct a thorough review" at their direction.

"While Mr. Epstein served as Mr. Wexner's personal money manager for a period that ended nearly 12 years ago, we do not believe he was ever employed by nor served as an authorized representative of the company," an L Brands (LB) spokesperson said in a statement Friday.

Wexner has accused Epstein of misappropriating "vast sums of money" from him and his family, according to a letter to Wexner Foundation members. Wexner told members of his Ohio-based charitable group that he discovered the missing funds after cutting ties with Epstein in 2007.

"This was, frankly, a tremendous shock, even though it clearly pales in comparison to the unthinkable allegations against him now," said the letter, which was not signed by Wexner or dated.

One of Epstein's accusers said Epstein sexually assaulted her in Wexner's home, according to an affidavit filed in a New York court in April as part of a defamation lawsuit against attorney Alan Dershowitz.

Giuffre has accused Dershowitz, the high-profile attorney who was part of the legal team that negotiated Epstein's 2007 plea deal, of sexually abusing her.

Dershowitz has denied her claims and accused her of fabricating the allegations against him. He said in a statement that Friday's release of documents "categorically proves that Virginia Roberts (Giuffre) never had sex with me."

In April, she filed a separate defamation lawsuit against him, saying that he made "false and malicious" statements about her when he accused her of lying in making her accusations against him.

That case is ongoing, and Dershowitz has filed a motion to dismiss.

Prince Andrew

Giuffre has said that Epstein forced her to perform sex acts with a number of prominent men, including Prince Andrew, Duke of York, in 2001. In addition, another woman who said Epstein and Maxwell abused her said she was forced into sexual acts with Prince Andrew at Epstein's Upper East Side mansion, where Giuffre participated as well, according to the unsealed documents.

In response, a spokesperson for Buckingham Palace said: "This relates to proceedings in the United States, to which The Duke of York is not a party. Any suggestion of impropriety with underage minors is categorically untrue."

In a statement to CNN last month, the spokesperson said, "The Duke of York accepts it was unwise to have met Mr. Epstein in December 2010. The Duke has not met with Mr Epstein since."

Donald Trump and Bill Clinton

Among Epstein's powerful associates are presidents Donald Trump and Bill Clinton.

"I've known Jeff for fifteen years. Terrific guy," Trump told New York magazine in 2002. "He's a lot of fun to be with. It is even said that he likes beautiful women as much as I do, and many of them are on the younger side. No doubt about it -- Jeffrey enjoys his social life."

Jeffery Epstein's apparent suicide is fueling rumors and questions. Here's what we know, and what's next

However, on July 12, Trump said that he threw Epstein out of his Mar-a-Lago club years ago.

"Jeffrey Epstein was not somebody that I respected. I threw him out. In fact I think the great James Patterson, who's a member of Mar-a-Lago, made a statement yesterday, that many years ago I threw him out. I'm not a fan of Jeffrey Epstein," he said.

A spokesman for Clinton said in a statement last month that the former president took four trips on Epstein's airplane in 2002 and 2003. The statement said they also had one meeting in a Harlem office in 2002 and that Clinton made a brief visit to Epstein's New York apartment with a Secret Service detail.

"President Clinton knows nothing about the terrible crimes Jeffrey Epstein pleaded guilty to in Florida some years ago, or those with which he has been recently charged in New York," Clinton's spokesman, Angel Ureña, said in a statement posted to Twitter.

"He's not spoken to Epstein in well over a decade," the statement adds, "and has never been to Little St. James Island, Epstein's ranch in New Mexico, or his residence in Florida."

Bill Richardson and George Mitchell

Finally, the documents unsealed on Friday in Giuffre's lawsuit against Maxwell include allegations that Giuffre was instructed by Maxwell to have sex with former New Mexico Gov. Bill Richardson and former US Sen. George Mitchell, among others.

In a statement Friday, Mitchell called the claim false, adding: "I have never met, spoken with or had any contact with Ms. Giuffre."

A spokeswoman for Richardson called Giuffre's allegation "completely false."

"To be clear, in Governor Richardson's limited interactions with Mr. Epstein, he never saw him in the presence of young or underage girls," spokeswoman Madeleine Mahony said. "Governor Richardson has never been to Mr. Epstein's residence in the Virgin Islands. Governor Richardson has never met Ms. Giuffre."

By Jason Abbruzzese and Brandy Zadrozny:

'The world of social media — already awash in conspiracy thinking in the Trump era — erupted with new theories Saturday after the news broke that Jeffrey Epstein had died by suicide under mysterious circumstances in his jail cell.

Many of the theories ventured into the realm of outlandish conjecture, amplified by conservative commentators and at least two Republican officials. Many people who have spent the last few years blaming the nation's problems on either the Clinton or the Trump administrations found new reasons to pin Epstein's death to their favorite targets — despite a complete lack of evidence at this point explaining how Epstein was able to kill himself.

The conspiracies spanned a wide range of topics from Epstein's connections to the Clinton family and President Donald Trump to fringe theories including QAnon. Others simply questioned the circumstances around Epstein's death.

Travis View, an independent conspiracy theory researcher, said Saturday's news sparked a significant wave of activity from various conspiracy threads — and offered evidence of just how widely embraced conspiracy theories have become.

“There's an outpouring of conspiracy theories as a consequence of his suicide,” View said. “The fringe conspiracies of two decades ago are touching the mainstream now where even lawyers and people who are otherwise close to the Republican party feel very comfortable asserting these types of theories.”

By mid-morning on the East Coast, a hashtag related to a conspiracy about the Clinton family had begun to trend on Twitter. Similar topics are well known by disinformation researchers to receive promotion from foreign influence campaigns that seek to promote misinformation and elevate divisive topics. A Twitter spokesperson told NBC News that the trends were due to organic conversation and that the company is monitoring the situation.

World Associated Press China's Xi gets tougher on Trump after new tariff threat Facing another U.S. tariff hike, Chinese President Xi Jinping is getting tougher with Washington instead of backing down. Beijing fired what economists called a "warning shot" at Washington by letting its yuan currency weaken in response to President Donald Trump's latest threat of more punitive import duties on Sept. 1. Regulators are threatening to place American companies on an "unreliable entities" list that might face curbs on their operations.

Business MarketWatch Ex-Fed boss Greenspan says 'there is no barrier' to Treasury yields falling below zero There is some $15 trillion in government debt that now yields less than zero, and former Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan believes there's no reason why U.S. government bond yields couldn't join much of the developed world in the subzero world. Greenspan, during a phone interview with Bloomberg News on Tuesday, said "zero" has no real meaning for the U.S. bond market and that a slide below that psychological level, already traversed by many others countries, wouldn't be inconceivable for U.S. paper. The 93-year-old economist's comments come as more Wall Street participants contemplate the very real possibility of negative Treasury rates.

bipartisanreport.com Pope Francis Compares Trump To Hitler & Conservatives Go Nuts Pope Francis Hits Conservatives With Weekend Rebuke By Tasha Williams August 10, 2019 The president, while he pretends to be religious these past few years, is likely not a very big fan of Pope Francis, who has said numerous things in regards to American leadership. Trump hates criticism, so it is definitely the beloved Pope's status that keeps him off of Trump's list of people to attack. That may change after this weekend when Pope Francis basically compared Donald Trump to Hitler in a statement to La Stampa, an Italian news publication. Francis said this: "I am concerned because we hear speeches that resemble those of Hitler in 1934. Us first. We ... We ... These are frightening thoughts."

If he calls Chris Cuomo that again, he could be sleeping with the fishes. The CNN anchor was caught on video flying into a rage at a man for calling him "Fredo" — an apparent insult referencing Fredo Corleone, the weak, dopey brother in "The Godfather."

"Punk ass bitches from the right call me 'Fredo.' My name is Chris Cuomo. I'm an anchor on CNN," the TV journalist says in the video, which was shared Monday evening on Twitter.

"Fredo is from the 'Godfather,' he was a weak brother and the use of it to an Italian is disparaging," he continues.

The 49-year-old anchor tells the man that the name "Fredo" is as offensive to Italian Americans as the n-word is to African Americans.

"Don't f—ing insult me like that," the Queens native fumes. "You call me 'Fredo,' it's like I call you punk b—ch. You like that?"

The man in the video insists that he believed the anchor's real name was Fredo.

But Cuomo, a dad of three, doesn't buy it.

"You did not think that ... stand up like a man," he seethes. "Own what you said."

The situation then escalates with Cuomo telling the man: "I'll f—ing throw you down these stairs like a f—ing punk ... you're gonna call me Fredo, take a f—ing swing? I'll f—ing wreck your shit."

The clip was reportedly filmed Sunday on Shelter Island and sent to a right-wing website and blog, before being shared on Twitter.

A CNN spokesperson told the New York Post: "Chris Cuomo defended himself when he was verbally attacked with the use of an ethnic slur in an orchestrated setup. We completely support him."

Cuomo, a son of the late New York Gov. Mario Cuomo and the younger brother of Gov. Andrew Cuomo, later noted on Twitter his appreciation for such expressions of support but regretted having overstepped a boundary himself:

Epstein refuses to answer sex trafficking ring questions

World The Telegraph Celebrities, royals and politicians brace themselves as court orders release of explosive Jeffrey Epstein files In Room 270, the records management unit, on the second floor of an imposing granite and marble courthouse in lower Manhattan, 167 documents totaling more than 2,000 pages are being kept under lock and key. But they are about to be unsealed and made public - making a host of important people around the world, including celebrities, politicians and royals, very nervous. The files contain explosive allegations in the case of Giuffre v Maxwell, in which Virginia Giuffre, a woman who claims to have been Jeffrey Epstein's teenage "sex slave", sued Ghislaine Maxwell, a British socialite and the billionaire's former girlfriend, for defamation. The case was settled in May 2017 on the eve of the trial but the details were not disclosed and the final judgment and supporting documents were sealed, with the court noting the "highly sensitive nature of the underlying allegations." According to other court documents that have been published, Ms Giuffre has made allegations of sexual abuse against "numerous prominent American politicians, powerful business executives, foreign presidents, a well-known Prime Minister, and other world leaders." An appeal to unseal the rest of the documents was launched by the Miami Herald newspaper, which has spearheaded media investigations into Epstein. It was rejected three times. Jeffrey Epstein and Ghislaine Maxwell became a fixture on the New York social scene after she moved to the city in 1991 Credit: Joe Schildhorn/Patrick McMullan via Getty Images But last month the US Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit ordered their release, ruling that the public's right to know outweighed the privacy rights of the high-profile individuals named. It what may be an indication of the fame of those individuals, the judges made a striking plea to the media to "exercise restraint" in reporting the allegations about to come to light. They also allowed parties involved to apply for minor redactions, delaying the release. Another delay is possible as Miss Maxwell has launched an appeal to keep the documents sealed, her lawyers arguing that a full release would trigger a "furious feeding frenzy." They wrote: "Plaintiff Giuffre made numerous allegations of sexual, if not criminal, conduct against a wide range of third parties. Because of the media no reference to anyone in this case is benign: a reference to any person is toxic and lethal to that person's reputation. Facts and truth are all but irrelevant." The legal battle between Ms Giuffre and Miss Maxwell began in late 2014 when Ms Giuffre claimed that Epstein sexually abused her starting in 2000 when she was 16, with the "assistance and participation" of Miss Maxwell. She also made allegations against the Duke of York, which were categorically denied by Buckingham Palace. Miss Maxwell described the claims as "obvious lies," and Ms Giuffre then sued her for defamation. Buckingham Palace has categorically denied any misconduct on the part of Prince Andrew, who was pictured with Virginia Giuffre, then Virginia Roberts, and Ghislaine Maxwell in 2001 In a recent statement Josh Schiller, a lawyer for Ms Giuffre, said the appeal court was unlikely to overturn an unsealing decision, and he believed Miss Maxwell's appeal would cause only a "short delay" in releasing the documents. He added: "There is an overwhelming public interest." The appeal court's decision to release the documents came just three days before Epstein was arrested last month, charged with sex trafficking. Prosecutors in New York have accused him of assaulting dozens of girls as young as 14. The case has thrown the Marlborough College and Oxford-educated Miss Maxwell, 57, back into the spotlight. She moved to New York in 1991, the year her father - disgraced newspaper tycoon Robert Maxwell - died. In New York, herself and Epstein became a fixture on the social scene. Miss Maxwell was well-connected. Guests including Donald Trump had partied on her father's yacht, the Lady Ghislaine, as far back as 1989. She is a private helicopter pilot and a deep water submarine pilot. In 2012 she founded the TerraMar Project in New York, aimed at creating a "global ocean community" to protect international waters, and spoke about it at the United Nations. Last month, six days after Epstein's arrest, the TerraMar Project announced it would "cease all operations." Miss Maxwell sold her Manhattan townhouse for $15 million in 2016, and her current whereabouts are unclear.

To those who said it can't happen here, just read these nationalistic, nonsensical pro-Trump comments; it is happening right before our eyes.

The psychological makeup of today's Trump resisters is similar to the psychological makeup of the Nazi resisters of the 30's and 40's. I just pray Trump can be stopped.

Psychiatrists warn the Mueller report provides more evidence Donald Trump is mentally unfit to serve "Such a mindset of false beliefs in freedom from consequences is extremely dangerous," Bandy X. Lee writes Psychiatrists warn the Mueller report provides more evidence Donald Trump is mentally unfit to serve"Such a mindset of false beliefs in freedom from consequences is extremely dangerous," Bandy X. Lee writes This article originally appeared on Raw Story Three psychiatrists have written an editorial for the Boston Globe warning that special counsel Robert Mueller's report on Russian interference in the 2016 presidential election shows more evidence that President Donald Trump is mentally unfit to hold office. The psychiatrists — Dr. Bandy X. Lee of Yale, Dr. Leonard L. Glass of Harvard Medical School, and Edwin B. Fisher of University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill — argue that Mueller's report provides a disturbing new window into the president's behavior, which is frequently marked by impulsive emotional meltdowns. "The pattern that emerges of the president is one of rash, short-sighted decision-making, without consideration of consequences," they write. "Reckless, impulsive moves that are self-destructive, despite the intention of self-protection, are characteristic of dangerous impairment. They impede Trump's capacity to prioritize national security." They then quote from sections of the Mueller report that illustrate these behaviors, including his efforts to dangle pardons to potential witnesses and his effort to get Mueller fired as special counsel. They say that his ordering former White House counsel Don McGahn to get rid of Mueller should be seen as especially alarming given how inherently self-destructive it was.

The Mueller Report, Napolitano believes, lays out a number of presidential acts that constitute obstruction of justice including:

- When Trump asked Deputy National Security Adviser KT McFarland to write an untruthful letter to the file, knowing the government would subpoena it.
- When Trump asked Corey Lewandowski to get Mueller fired.
- When Trump asked Don McGahn to get Mueller fired and then to lie about it.

Feinstein simply described the evidence in Mueller's report that details Trump's efforts to get White House counsel Don McGahn to lie about Trump ordering him to fire Mueller. Feinstein then asked if it is illegal to try and get a witness to lie (duh), to which Barr answered, 'Uh, yes.' She then asked him to cite the exact law, to which Barr said,

$21 TRILLION DOLLARS IS MISSING FROM THE US GOVERNMENT. <https://missingmoney.solari.com> <https://home.solari.com> $21 Trillion dollars is missing from the US government. That is $65,000 per person - as much as the national debt!

"No money shall be drawn from the treasury, but in consequence of appropriations made by law; and a regular statement and account of receipts and expenditures of all public money shall be published from time to time."*~ Article I, Section 9, Clause 7, U.S. Constitution

What's going on? Where is the money? How could this happen? How much has really gone missing? What would happen if a corporation failed to pass an audit like this? Or a taxpayer? This means the Fed and their member banks are transacting government money outside the law. So are the corporate contractors that run the payment systems. So are the Wall Street firms who are selling government securities without full disclosure. Would your banks continue to handle your bank account if you behaved like this? Would your investors continue to buy your securities if you behaved like this? Would your accountant be silent? This is the reason that there is such a strong push to change or tear up the US Constitution. This is why members of the establishment say it is "old," "outdated!" This is why there is such a push for gun control. Don't buy it! We can use the Constitution to get our money and our government back. It is time to enforce the US Constitution. The Solari Report has been covering the missing money since 2000 when Catherine Austin Fitts began to to warn Americans and global investors about mortgage fraud at the US Department of Housing and Development (HUD), the engineering of the housing bubble that lead to trillions more dollars in bailouts and funds missing from the US government starting in fiscal 1998.

FORGET ABOUT 'CATS' AND CHECK OUT ONE OF THESE CAT CAFES INSTEAD

With the "Cats" movie trailer horrifying the internet, it's safe to say our beloved felines are trending yet again.

German philosopher Albert Schweitzer reportedly once said: "The only escape from the miseries of life is music and cats." But if seeing the live action adaptation of the Andrew Lloyd Webber musical doesn't sound like a welcome escape, might we suggest a cat cafe visit?

Started in Taiwan over 20 years ago with a cafe called Cat Flower Garden (now called Café Dogs & Cats), the concept was most enthusiastically embraced in Japan. Today, there are more cat cafes in Japan than anywhere else in the world--around 150 at last count.

Since 1998 the 1st cat cafe, there's been a storm of cat cafe openings around the world. You could say the concept is cat-ching on.

The United States has more than 125 cat cafes, and some of them serve more than coffee and cat cuddles.

There are now a slew of cat cafes in London, including one where guests can partake in high tea with the furry creatures. For about $33 per person, Lady Dinah's offers a 90-minute package involving cakes, scones, two drinks and, of course, quality time with the cats.

Cat cafes offering purr-fect coffee breaks exist all over Europe now as well, and India's first cat cafe has been open for nearly five years.

Australia, Colombia and South Africa have all embraced this particular cat life as well.

Anita Loughran, owner of Cat Cafe Melbourne, was so inspired by a trip to Japan that it was the motivation for the Melbourne cafe, which opened in 2014. "It's a place where animal and cat lovers can mingle, socialize and be comfortable in a quiet environment that reflects their interests," Loughran says.

$21 TRILLION DOLLARS IS MISSING FROM THE US GOVERNMENT. <https://missingmoney.solari.com> <https://home.solari.com> $21 Trillion dollars is missing from the US government. That is $65,000 per person - as much as the national debt!

"No money shall be drawn from the treasury, but in consequence of appropriations made by law; and a regular statement and account of receipts and expenditures of all public money shall be published from time to time."*~ Article I, Section 9, Clause 7, U.S. Constitution

What's going on? Where is the money? How could this happen? How much has really gone missing? What would happen if a corporation failed to pass an audit like this? Or a taxpayer? This means the Fed and their member banks are transacting government money outside the law. So are the corporate contractors that run the payment systems. So are the Wall Street firms who are selling government securities without full disclosure. Would your banks continue to handle your bank account if you behaved like this? Would your investors continue to buy your securities if you behaved like this? Would your accountant be silent? This is the reason that there is such a strong push to change or tear up the US Constitution. This is why members of the establishment say it is "old," "outdated!" This is why there is such a push for gun control. Don't buy it! We can use the Constitution to get our money and our government back. It is time to enforce the US Constitution. The Solari Report has been covering the missing money since 2000 when Catherine Austin Fitts began to to warn Americans and global investors about mortgage fraud at the US Department of Housing and Development (HUD), the engineering of the housing bubble that lead to trillions more dollars in bailouts and funds missing from the US government starting in fiscal 1998.

With the "Cats" movie trailer horrifying the internet, it's safe to say our beloved felines are trending yet again.

German philosopher Albert Schweitzer reportedly once said: "The only escape from the miseries of life is music and cats." But if seeing the live action adaptation of the Andrew Lloyd Webber musical doesn't sound like a welcome escape, might we suggest a cat cafe visit?

Started in Taiwan over 20 years ago with a cafe called Cat Flower Garden (now called Café Dogs & Cats), the concept was most enthusiastically embraced in Japan. Today, there are more cat cafes in Japan than anywhere else in the world--around 150 at last count.

Since 1998 the 1st cat cafe, there's been a storm of cat cafe openings around the world. You could say the concept is cat-ching on.

The United States has more than 125 cat cafes, and some of them serve more than coffee and cat cuddles.

There are now a slew of cat cafes in London, including one where guests can partake in high tea with the furry creatures. For about $33 per person, Lady Dinah's offers a 90-minute package involving cakes, scones, two drinks and, of course, quality time with the cats.

Cat cafes offering purr-fect coffee breaks exist all over Europe now as well, and India's first cat cafe has been open for nearly five years.

Australia, Colombia and South Africa have all embraced this particular cat life as well.

Anita Loughran, owner of Cat Cafe Melbourne, was so inspired by a trip to Japan that it was the motivation for the Melbourne cafe, which opened in 2014. "It's a place where animal and cat lovers can mingle, socialize and be comfortable in a quiet environment that reflects their interests," Loughran says.

$21 TRILLION DOLLARS IS MISSING FROM THE US GOVERNMENT. <https://missingmoney.solari.com> <https://home.solari.com> $21 Trillion dollars is missing from the US government. That is $65,000 per person - as much as the national debt!

"No money shall be drawn from the treasury, but in consequence of appropriations made by law; and a regular statement and account of receipts and expenditures of all public money shall be published from time to time."*~ Article I, Section 9, Clause 7, U.S. Constitution

What's going on? Where is the money? How could this happen? How much has really gone missing? What would happen if a corporation failed to pass an audit like this? Or a taxpayer? This means the Fed and their member banks are transacting government money outside the law. So are the corporate contractors that run the payment systems. So are the Wall Street firms who are selling government securities without full disclosure. Would your banks continue to handle your bank account if you behaved like this? Would your investors continue to buy your securities if you behaved like this? Would your accountant be silent? This is the reason that there is such a strong push to change or tear up the US Constitution. This is why members of the establishment say it is "old," "outdated!" This is why there is such a push for gun control. Don't buy it! We can use the Constitution to get our money and our government back. It is time to enforce the US Constitution. The Solari Report has been covering the missing money since 2000 when Catherine Austin Fitts began to to warn Americans and global investors about mortgage fraud at the US Department of Housing and Development (HUD), the engineering of the housing bubble that lead to trillions more dollars in bailouts and funds missing from the US government starting in fiscal 1998.

Psychiatrists warn the Mueller report provides more evidence Donald Trump is mentally unfit to serve "Such a mindset of false beliefs in freedom from consequences is extremely dangerous," Bandy X. Lee writes Psychiatrists warn the Mueller report provides more evidence Donald Trump is mentally unfit to serve"Such a mindset of false beliefs in freedom from consequences is extremely dangerous," Bandy X. Lee writes This article originally appeared on Raw Story Three psychiatrists have written an editorial for the Boston Globe warning that special counsel Robert Mueller's report on Russian interference in the 2016 presidential election shows more evidence that President Donald Trump is mentally unfit to hold office. The psychiatrists — Dr. Bandy X. Lee of Yale, Dr. Leonard L. Glass of Harvard Medical School, and Edwin B. Fisher of University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill — argue that Mueller's report provides a disturbing new window into the president's behavior, which is frequently marked by impulsive emotional meltdowns. "The pattern that emerges of the president is one of rash, short-sighted decision-making, without consideration of consequences," they write. "Reckless, impulsive moves that are self-destructive, despite the intention of self-protection, are characteristic of dangerous impairment. They impede Trump's capacity to prioritize national security." They then quote from sections of the Mueller report that illustrate these behaviors, including his efforts to dangle pardons to potential witnesses and his effort to get Mueller fired as special counsel. They say that his ordering former White House counsel Don McGahn to get rid of Mueller should be seen as especially alarming given how inherently self-destructive it was.

U.S. The Independent Woman has hands and legs amputated after dog licks her A dog lover woke up in hospital to find surgeons had amputated her hands and legs after she suffered a rare reaction to the saliva of one of her pets. Surgeons removed Marie Trainer's limbs to save her life as gangrene set in while she was in a coma. Ms Trainer is thought to have become infected when one of her two dogs licked a scratch on her arm, causing her immune system to flare up. When she first started feeling ill, in May, she thought it might be flu but was rushed to hospital after her temperature rose alarmingly. The 54-year-old, from Ohio, US, developed sepsis, and suffered liver and kidney failure. As she drifted in and out of consciousness, she also complained of excruciating pain in her hands and legs. Unable to breathe on her own, she was put into a coma and placed on life support. Within hours, she started to suffer gangrene and necrosis in her legs and hands. "We were getting new symptoms and worsening symptoms very rapidly," said Gina Premier, her stepdaughter who is a nurse practitioner at the hospital. Blood tests showed the infection was capnocytophaga canimorsus, a bacteria commonly found in dogs' saliva. It's believed such a severe reaction happens to only about one in a million people who come into contact with the saliva. Dr Margaret Kobe, medical director of infectious disease at Aultman Hospital told Fox 8: "It's fairly common in the oral flora or the mouth of a dog and it can be transmitted through a bite or sometimes just contact with saliva." People should ensure they wash their hands after playing with a dog, she said. The organism may induce the immune system to do "some pretty horrible things", she said. In this case, they caused blood clots that damaged the tissues in Ms Trainer's limbs so much they could not be saved. Ms Trainer had surgery at least six times and was in hospital for nearly three months but remembers nothing before waking up in intensive care. "It was very hard to find out that they had to remove my legs and my arms...very hard to cope with," she told Fox 59. She said her dogs licked her all the time. Ms Premier said that if surgeons had not performed the amputations, her stepmother would have died: "It was so rapid in progression... there was nothing they could do." Ms Trainer, a hairdresser, faces rehabilitation and an uncertain future but paid tribute to the devotion of her husband, Matthew. "He feeds me, dresses me, he's here for me every day," she said. "There's lots of healing to do." An online fundraising campaign to help her adapt to her new life has so far raised $18,676 (£15,400). Last year, a US man also had his limbs amputated after being infected by a dog lick.

Susan Edelman Blank Agree 100%! Susan Barth Madeline Taylor wrote: "Some of my esteemed colleagues are trying to decide if Trump is sociopathic. Some are reluctant to diagnose. I feel strongly about voicing my observations when anyone in a position of power exhibits racist, misogynistic, anti-Muslim, anti-Semitic, xenophobic, sadistic, sociopathic behavior. Anyone. Whether it's a boyfriend or the resident of the White House. Therefore, I will not close my eyes to the reality of Trump's brutality and pathological inability to empathize with others. On top of that are his cognitive dysfunctions; his inability to incorporate new information, his reckless behavior in relation to murderous dictators, his penchant for demonizing anyone who disagrees with him; his pathological lying and his outright delusions about which he demands agreement. This is massive psychopathology which most Americans don't recognize as such and about which professionals are trying to be careful not to name. However, any study of murderous dictators will reveal these same divide-and-conquer behaviors. Dictators amass Yes-men around them; dictators threaten certain members of the population with exclusion which eventually leads to deportations, gulags, and assassinations. DO NOT DOUBT that it can happen here. It took only a short decade in Germany to go from a democratically elected Hitler to the Brown Shirts, the SS, the SA, the Gestapo, propaganda against Jews, ("vermin," "rats," etc.) and concentration/murder camps. Trump has Rupert Murdoch's media empire as his personal megaphone. Now "the squad" "hates America" because they disagree with his policies. Tell a big lie over and over again...big lie over and over again... It's frightening that a certain percentage of the population will vigorously line up behind a charismatic, malignant narcissist because he appears "strong," and a certain percentage of the population will minimize or normalize what's happening because the reality is too horrible to permit into consciousness. Like a mother who can't tolerate knowing that her husband is sexually abusing their children, people tend to employ denial, disavowal, suppression, even dissociation in order just to get through the day because confronting what's really happening is too upsetting. But somebody has to have the courage to say what they see. I see sadistic, sociopathic behavior which is getting more and more extreme. The cruel separation of children from parents at the border; the unraveling of international alliances and treaties without regard for the safety of the U.S., a desperate desire for the approval of the most murderous dictators on the planet without regard, again, to the consequences for the rest of us, the verbal attacks on members of Congress who claim their right to disagree, to dissent, to differentiate. If we don't stand up en masse and declare that this behavior is ENTIRELY UNACCEPTABLE in a democracy, if we don't do everything in our power to get him and his white nationalist henchmen out of office, we are complicit in the ruination of America. If you're a woman, especially a woman who lives in the South, you've already lost a host of rights to decide what to do with your own body. Look how quickly the advances in women's rights, which took generations of female struggle to achieve, have been obliterated because of who's now in the White House, who's now on the Supreme Court, etc. Two short years and Planned Parenthood is threatened; environmental protections are unraveling; education is up for sale; clean air, clean water, clean food are threatened, etc. On top of everything already stated, Trump and his allies, including the entire Republican party, are without ethics and morals; they are criminals, thieves, pirates plundering our country because they are desperate for power and they need to annihilate ANY opposition. I suspect that it's motivated by the same thing that motivated the founders and their descendants: a need to preserve white, male supremacy over everything else. Sociopathic? That's not the half of it. needtoimpeach.com" -- Madeline Taylor

FORGET ABOUT 'CATS' AND CHECK OUT ONE OF THESE CAT CAFES INSTEAD

With the "Cats" movie trailer horrifying the internet, it's safe to say our beloved felines are trending yet again.

German philosopher Albert Schweitzer reportedly once said: "The only escape from the miseries of life is music and cats." But if seeing the live action adaptation of the Andrew Lloyd Webber musical doesn't sound like a welcome escape, might we suggest a cat cafe visit?

Started in Taiwan over 20 years ago with a cafe called Cat Flower Garden (now called Café Dogs & Cats), the concept was most enthusiastically embraced in Japan. Today, there are more cat cafes in Japan than anywhere else in the world -- around 150 at the last count.

Since the 1998 opening of the first cat cafe, there's been a storm of cat cafe opening around the world. You could say the concept is cat-ching on. The United States has more than 125 cat cafes, and some of them serve more than coffee and cat cuddles.

There are now a slew of cat cafes in London, including one where guests can partake in high tea with the furry creatures. For about $33 per person, Lady Dinah's offers a 90-minute package involving cakes, scones, two drinks and, of course, quality time with the cats.

Cat cafes offering purr-fect coffee breaks exist all over Europe now as well, and India's first cat cafe has been open for nearly five years.

Australia, Colombia and South Africa have all embraced this particular cat life as well.

Anita Loughran, owner of Cat Cafe Melbourne, was so inspired by a trip to Japan that it was the motivation for the Melbourne cafe, which opened in 2014. "It's a place where animal and cat lovers can mingle, socialize and be comfortable in a quiet environment that reflects their interests," Loughran says.

Politics The Independent US deficit to hit record high, surpassing \$1 trillion in 2019 The US deficit is projected to surpass $1tn in 2019, the largest it's been outside of the four-year period following the Great Recession. The new record, previously expected but made official in the White House Office of Management and Budget's newly released mid-year review, subtitled "Promises Kept, Taxpayers First," is in direct contrast with Donald Trump's 2016 campaign promise to wipe out the deficit. The then-candidate also promised to heavily scale back the federal debt, which has now exceeded $22tn. His own advisers knew that both promises were impossible, and they morphed into smaller numbers along the trail. Now, while running the country while simultaneously running for president, the president simply maintains that the economy is "perhaps the greatest economy we've had in the history of our country." This claim is often cited in conjunction with the Trump administration's many tax cuts for the wealthy. "The years when we increased deficits are years when the economy is slowing down," Gary Cohn, a previous director of the National Economic Council, told CNBC last year. But Republicans have maintained that the 2017 tax reform law, and many losses to federal regulations to support economic equality, would stimulate the economy. Last week, Larry Kudlow, the top White House economic adviser, said we have already “virtually paid for” the tax cuts. He also claimed last June that the deficit “is coming down rapidly.” It was not. Still, the deficit increase wasn’t unexpected. Deficits rose after tax cuts Ronald Reagan and George W. Bush, both Republicans. Economic forecasters on both sides projected the pattern would repeat with the Trump iteration. The new estimate confirms that they were right. <https://www.usdebtclock.org>

Lawyers For Cesar Sayoc Say Trump's Rhetoric Inspired Terrorist Plot On Democrats

SON OF A MAFIA GHOU LIANI GETTING DIVORCED

U.S.The Daily Beast Rudy Giuliani, Estranged Wife Argue in Court Over His Free Trump Legal Work REUTERS

Rudy Giuliani is providing gratis legal work for President Donald Trump to shortchange estranged wife Judith Nathan Giuliani, her lawyer said Thursday during a proceeding in their increasingly acrimonious divorce. “Not only is he working pro bono for the president, for this individual, but it’s costing him money,” said Bernard Clair, who represents Judith. “Not only does he work for free, but all of his expenses, every time he goes down to Washington, D.C., every time he travels for the president... it comes out of his own pocket.” “When he’s going to work for the president, he bundles, for lack of a better word, clients from his other businesses” to defray these costs, including a recent trip to Warsaw, Poland, Clair said. Clair said Giuliani’s work for Trump is meant to lead the court to “believe he somehow doesn’t have money.” The lawyer added that Giuliani spent “over one million on credit cards” but “says ‘woe is me’ financially... ‘I don’t have any money left.’” Giuliani borrowed $100,000 from Marc Mukasey, another one of Trump’s lawyers, Clair said.

Judge: Rudy Giuliani, Estranged Wife Can’t Be in Same Room at Country Clubs

Judith filed for divorce from the former New York City mayor in April 2018, after 15 years of marriage. Allegations that Giuliani has been holding out on her have been an ongoing theme of the divorce proceedings. Clair alleged in court in November that Giuliani cried poor after she served him divorce papers. Not only did he leave a cushy white-shoe law firm gig and start no-fee legal work for Trump, he spent $286,000 on his rumored girlfriend, a New Hampshire hospital administrator named Maria Rosa Ryan, Clair had said. “Mr. Giuliani has taken it upon himself to radically change the financial status quo that existed prior to this action,” Clair had told Justice Michael Katz, calling it “conduct that can only be characterized as SIDS... sudden income deficit syndrome.” In the proceeding last fall, Clair claimed that Giuliani earned $7.9 million in 2016 and $9.5 million in 2017. Giuliani and Judith’s monthly expenses were about $232,000 and $238,000, respectively, Clair had also said.

Faith Miller, a lawyer representing Giuliani, insisted the ex-mayor has been trying to find other sources of income, including a podcast. He has taken in more than $800,000 this year but it’s not enough to support their lifestyle, Miller said in this morning’s proceedings. Miller said that Giuliani was paying Judith monthly support payments of $42,000. “Mrs. Giuliani would have Mr. Giuliani work forever to support her lifestyle,” Miller said, noting that Judith is a registered nurse but refuses to work. “There’s absolutely no reason he should feel financial pressure at this stage of his life.” Clair alleged that Giuliani spent $50,000 for membership to a private plane service 10 days after Judith hit him with divorce papers. Miller, meanwhile, accused Judith of taking “everything that she in her own personal opinion was hers” from one of their homes, including “the china, silverware, the pictures off the walls.”“He walked in, the place was denuded, the place was a mess,” Miller said. “I did not! I did not,” Judith cried out, slapping her hand against the table.“I’m not going to tolerate an outburst,” Judge Katz warned. Miller also claimed that Judith had neglected to pay $77,000 in co-op fees at one of their homes, resulting in a “termination notice” by Giuliani’s return in May. The furniture and co-op fee allegations are among many petty squabbles in their made-for-tabloid split. In March, Katz told them not to be in the same room if they ran into each other at country clubs. Millionaire Rudy Giuliani Cries Poor in Divorce Court After Spending Big on Alleged Mistress“There was an issue at one of the clubs last week,” Lisa Zeiderman, one of Giuliani’s attorneys, previously told Katz. “We’re going to ask that Ms. Giuliani just keep her distance from Mr. Giuliani when they’re at clubs together and their children, as well, and not take photographs, because that’s what was happening last weekend, I’m advised, at one of the clubs.”“He just wants to be left alone,” Zeiderman had said. One of Judith’s lawyers had responded that Giuliani was just embarrassed to be spotted spending money on his purported girlfriend’s daughter. (Giuliani denied this after that hearing.) Clair had told Katz that “she went into the gift shop at the club. She saw Mr. Giuliani. He got anxious and yelled at her.”“I am tired of hearing about Mr. Giuliani’s personal life,” Katz had remarked, later saying, “Whoever is in the room first is allowed to stay in the room.”The second person who enters the room can go to another room “and vice versa,” Katz had instructed. Based on comments outside court, it does not appear that the drama will end prior to their scheduled divorce trial in Jan. 2020. Giuliani, whose hair appeared darker than in the recent past, was affable as he left court, chatting with a photographer about the ins-and-outs of high-end cameras. When asked about the loan to Mukasey, he said it was to cover taxes and that he had paid back $90,000. He told a reporter that while Trump’s tax cuts worked out “really well” for him, but that “my wife has tied up all my money” in a joint account with $5 million. Judith, who sported a blue blouse with roses on it and white pants, denied allegations that she cleaned out their decor. “I was entitled to my family antiques,” she told reporters, claiming Rudy had kept her heirloom Christmas decorations. YOU WILL NEVER GET THE TRUTH OUT OF A NARCISSIST 6 Obvious Signs You're Dealing With A Narcissist (as trump)

If you've ever had the misfortune of being wrapped up with a narcissist, then you already know what one of these horrible human beings are capable of. Since there is no concern for anyone else but themselves, they can prove to be some of the most toxic people that you could ever associate yourself with, especially when it comes to being in love with one of them. Narcissists see others as pawns, essentially. You are able to carry out there demands, not really thinking twice about them and always letting them have their way. If you aren't sure or know someone who might be dealing with a narcissist, you will want to look at these six warning signs the next time you see them.

1. Always Using Others To Their Advantage

Narcissists are always taking advantage of the others around them. Mentioned before, everyone essentially a piece of their master plan which involves getting exactly what they want no matter who gets in their way. The thing with a narcissist is that they will find new and inventive ways to manipulate you, your friends, and anyone else who decides to be apart of that persons life. There really is no other way to avoid this kind of behavior because they do it to literally anyone that wants to communicate. They see this as a weakness and prey upon those willing to give their help to just about anyone.

2. Always In Need Of Praise

Another thing that you will notice about a narcissist is that they are always needing constant approval from everyone. If there is even one person who defies them this praise they will act out in a temper tantrum to the likes that no one has ever seen before. You may think that this is an over exaggeration but I promise you it's not. Narcissists thrive off of attention which is one of the reasons why they keep you and everyone around for so long is because they need that validation. You may think that they could get anyone to do that, yes they could, but if you aren't doing it then you will witness what it's like to get on their bad side.

3. Extremely Arrogant With Everything

Narcissists are prone to being arrogant especially when you are trying to confront them on the things that are hurting those around them. They will consider this a personal attack from you and decide that you are doubting them at every turn, that you've never supported them or their ideas, and that you are the worst person on the planet. Again, you may think that this is an over exaggeration but this is truly how a narcissist feels whenever someone defies their wishes. These people will always prove to be toxic in the end.

4. Obviously Jealous

Narcissists do not hesitate with their jealousy and will proudly display it whenever they see something they don't have. They are the most envious whenever they see someone who is essentially better than they are and will act out in every single possible way to deprive that person of praise or attention. All of this seems like a bit much for one individual to carry out but it's true. A narcissist absolutely hates it whenever they find someone or something that is just far beyond their league and they know it's going to drive them crazy thinking about how much that specific thing is going to gain that much more attention than them.

5. Having Feelings Is Your Fault

Whenever you decide that you want to confront them about all of the things they've done wrong to you or someone else they will simply brush it off. If you give them any kind of emotion or any kind of feeling that goes against what they want they will just tell you that it's your fault for feeling that way. A narcissist has no empathy or sympathy for the people around them and it will clear as day when that happens to you. You may think that this person couldn't possibly say such horrible things to you but with a narcissist it comes naturally.

6. Over Exaggerate Their Accomplishments

Above all else a narcissist will always boast about themselves as if they were the crown jewels. A narcissist will not let down any opportune moment for them to speak highly of themselves to others. Again, it's all about that false validation, they will do absolutely everything and anything to obtain it. This is one of the biggest indications that you are dealing with a narcissist right off the bat. Especially if you are meeting this person for the first time ever. Since you are a clean slate this means that they can talk about every false little achievement they've made in their life up until this point. If you're lucky you might even get a chance to speak. So, the next time you think you or someone you might know is dealing with a narcissist, try to keep these six things in mind. They will make themselves very obvious and you will know the truth sooner rather than later. The indictment of Jeffrey Epstein has shone a light on what prosecutors say is a sprawling network of high school and college students forced to satisfy the US hedge fund billionaire's insatiable sexual appetite, strengthened by money and young recruiters. "He likes beautiful women... and many of them are on the younger side," Donald Trump said in 2002, describing his friend Epstein's taste in women.

Jim Rogers: Get Ready for the Next Bear Market; 'It's Going to Be Terrible'

Rogers Holdings Chair and legendary investor Jim Rogers is back with his latest warning that the next bear market is going to be "horrible, compounded by too much debt and a trade war." The U.S. stock market is still in the midst of the longest bull market run in history, but that run will be short-lived from here on out, Rogers warned in a recent interview with Kitco News.

"Later, this year or next year when the economies around the world are getting bad, Mr. Trump is going to blame everything on the foreigners, the Chinese, the Germans, the Japanese, everybody, and then the trade war will come back and then it's all over,"

Rogers said. Rogers added that trade war tensions could continue to rise — and a new fight is brewing with France — and Trump will continue to push forward because he desperately wants a win on this front due to how easy he's said trade wars are to win, dubbing himself a "Tariff Man." "Mr. Trump is going to come back. Mr. Trump believes in his soul and his brain that trade wars are good and that he can win trade wars," he said. "Mr. Trump knows that he is smarter than everybody else so he knows that he can win a trade war, and it will come back strong. When the American economy gets bad eventually, he's going to blame it on trade and the trade war and it's going to be terrible."

MARKETWATCH

BARRONS The Dow Hit a New High. Let’s Talk About a Recession.

Updated July 1, 2019

Stocks were hitting news highs after U.S. President Donald Trump and Chinese President Xi Jinping agreed to a trade cease-fire. Unfortunately, the agreement might have come too late to keep the U.S. from slipping into recession. Yes, the Dow Jones Industrial Average just traded at a new high. So did the S&P 500. But there were other data points Monday that point in the opposite direction. The ISM manufacturing index fell to 51.7 in June. While that wasn’t as low as feared or below the 50-level that would indicate slowing industrial activity, it was still the weakest reading since 2016. The forward-looking new-orders component, however, fell to

50. “Overall, this report is probably not enough to move the needle much in either direction on Fed rate cuts,” according to a report from research firm Capital Economics. “But with global demand set to remain subdued, and the tariff truce agreed at the G20 summit likely to prove temporary, we expect U.S. manufacturing activity to remain weak in the second half of this year.” Weak, obviously, is different than slowing. Yet any time the economy slows, there is a risk of recession, which is one reason the difference between the yields on the 10-year Treasury and the three-month bill has turned negative. That is known as a yield-curve inversion, and research has shown that if it lasts long enough, it is a reliable predictor of a recession. The Cleveland Fed recession model, which is based on that yield curve, is predicting a 37.8% chance of a slowdown in one year. A similar model from the New York Fed only shows a 29.6% chance, but that’s not necessarily good news. Since 1960, any reading over 30% has led to a recession, according to Lisa Shalett, chief investment officer at Morgan Stanley Wealth Management. “The upshot is the New York Fed Probability of Recession in 12 Months Ahead, a model that uses leading indicators and economic variables that tend to move before changes in the economy, has neared the 30% threshold that has reliably predicted past economic downturns,” she writes. “With the deterioration in the June data, we think the model’s next report will show the economy continued to weaken.” Read more: Don’t Get Too Excited About This Trade War Truce The market doesn’t seem too sure of itself, either. The major indexes were up more than 1% in early trading, but despite hitting new highs, the Dow and the S&P 500 gave back some of those gains. Let’s just say that kind of weakness after such a strong opening isn’t the type of trading that builds confidence in further gains.

Donald Trump Says Continental Army 'Took Over The Airports' In The Revolutionary War | NBC News video_youtube NBC News

Politics The Independent Why Trump's bizarre airport claim may have been his gaffe correction strategy backfiring at the most embarrassing moment 'Donald Trump's surprising claim that George Washington's revolutionary troops "took over the airports" during the War of Independence could be explained by his method of correcting himself when he misreads his autocue - doubling down and trying to incorporate the mistake into his speech. His bizarre ad lib, suggesting there were airports to seize more than 100 years before the first successful flight, came moments after he seemed to stumble over a phrase in his speech. Describing how Washington's patriots defeated the British between 1775 and 1783, the president told crowds gathered to hear his Fourth of July address: "Our army manned the air." At that point he paused briefly, apparently realising he had misspoken, before continuing: "It rammed the ramparts, it took over the airports, it did everything it had to do ..." Seemingly thrown by the mistakes, he then alluded to Fort McHenry, a Maryland stronghold best known for its role in a completely different conflict - the 1812 war with Britain...'

IVANKA TRUMP ACCUSED OF SKIMMING MILLIONS FROM THE TRUMP INAUGURAL COMMITTEE

Posted on June 19, 2019 by Andrew Bradford

In February, prosecutors with the Southern District of New York (SDNY) opened up a new front in the investigation of criminal acts by the Trump 2016 campaign and the president himself, sending a sweeping subpoena to the Trump inaugural committee that includes charges of money laundering and fraud. The subpoena reads like something that would normally be served on a mafia boss.

But there was especially bad news in that subpoena for Ivanka Trump, who currently works as a White House adviser and is reportedly her daddy's favorite child.

ProPublica has learned that one of the main points of interest for SDNY prosecutors is the rate charged by Trump properties for renting space for the inaugural:

“A spokesman confirmed that the nonprofit 58th Presidential Inaugural Committee paid the Trump International Hotel a rate of $175,000 per day for event space — in spite of internal objections at the time that the rate was far too high. If the committee is deemed by auditors or prosecutors to have paid an above-market rate, that could violate tax laws prohibiting self-dealing, according to experts.”

Who negotiated the contracts and set the rates with the inaugural committee? None other than Ivanka Trump, as ProPublica first reported back in December:

“During the planning, Ivanka Trump, the president-elect’s eldest daughter and a senior executive with the Trump Organization, was involved in negotiating the price the hotel charged the 58th Presidential Inaugural Committee for venue rentals.”

That kind of inside dealing is also referred to as skimming.

Brett Kappel, an attorney at Akerman LLP who advises nonprofits, noted that it appears tax laws were violated by Ivanka Trump and others inside the inaugural committee:

“Tax law bars nonprofits such as the inaugural committee from insider deals that would unduly benefit people — in this case the Trump family — that have influence over the nonprofit, Kappel said. In legal parlance, these are known as excess benefit transactions. A key question would be whether the Trump hotel charged the inaugural committee above-market rates, which could violate tax rules, Kappel said. If an IRS audit found such a civil violation, the inaugural committee would have to pay taxes on the amount of money it overpaid.

“It could become a criminal violation, Kappel said, if investigators uncover evidence that people knew that charging above-market rates to enrich the Trump Organization was illegal and did it anyway.”

It appears that Ivanka’s willingness to help her father engage in grifting on a massive scale now has her at the center of a scandal that could well lead to her being charged with tax violations and financial fraud.

Mark, you're talking distinctions without a difference when juxtaposed with pathological liar trump. Biden? He's gone along for the ride for too long and like pelosi, and trump, age has caught up with them, as invariably it does to all ... Biden had the opportunity to step up in 2016, but declined to do so, deferring to 'chosen one' hillary. Though not a mobster herself, hill was married to one and derivatively complicit thereby; but a woman first, not a compulsive liar and mental case as is proven mobster trump; hence, a clear preferred president to known but "protected" mobster trump. Yet I agree it was quite sickening listening to hers and bull sht wobama's campaign trail rants. The Mueller Report, the video says, contains damning evidence against Trump and points that he colluded with the Russians, multiple times in order to influence the presidential campaign in 2016. They said that they felt the need to make the video because "virtually no one has read it". Stars including Robert De Niro, Rosie Perez, Martin Sheen, Sophia Bush, Stephen King, Laurence Fishburne, George Takei, Jonathan Van Ness, and Rob Reiner broke down the report in a video made for NowThis, published on Thursday, June 20. The five-and-a-half minute long video starts with DeNiro saying, "In 2016 the Russian government attacked our democracy" following which Sheen says that Russia "interfered in the presidential election in a sweeping and systematic fashion."

Jerry Falwell Jr. defied expectations when he supported Donald J. Trump in 2016. Now details are emerging about behind-the-scenes maneuvering before the endorsement.

Evangelicals spent thousands of years warning
about the Antichrist.
Then, when he shows up,
they elect him president.

OCCUPY DEMOCRATS

MIAMI BEACH — Senator Ted Cruz was running neck and neck with Donald J. Trump in Iowa just before the caucuses in 2016, but his campaign was expecting a last-minute boost from a powerful endorser, Jerry Falwell Jr. Mr. Falwell was chancellor of one of the nation's largest Christian colleges, Liberty University, and a son of the Rev. Jerry Falwell Sr., the televangelist and co-founder of the modern religious right. Months earlier, Mr. Falwell had provided Liberty's basketball arena for Mr. Cruz's formal presidential announcement and required that the student body attend, giving the Texas Republican a guaranteed audience of thousands of cheering young religious conservatives. With the caucuses now fast approaching, the senator's father, Rafael Cruz, an evangelical pastor who had taken the lead in wooing Mr. Falwell, alerted the campaign that Mr. Falwell had pledged to endorse his son. But when the time came for an announcement, Mr. Falwell rocked the Cruz campaign and grabbed the attention of the entire political world. He endorsed Mr. Trump instead, becoming one of the first major evangelical leaders to get behind the thrice-married, insult-hurling real estate mogul's long-odds presidential bid. Mr. Falwell — who is not a minister and spent years as a lawyer and real estate developer — said his endorsement was based on Mr. Trump's business experience and leadership qualities. A person close to Mr. Falwell said he made his decision after "consultation with other individuals whose opinions he respects." But a far more complicated narrative is emerging about the behind-the-scenes maneuvering in the months before that important endorsement. That backstory, in true Trump-tabloid fashion, features the friendship between Mr. Falwell, his wife and a former pool attendant at the Fontainebleau hotel in Miami Beach; the family's investment in a gay-friendly youth hostel; purported sexually revealing photographs involving the Falwells; and an attempted hush-money arrangement engineered by the president's former fixer, Michael Cohen. The revelations have arisen from a lawsuit filed against the Falwells in Florida; the investigation into Mr. Cohen by federal prosecutors in New York; and the gonzo-style tactics of the comedian and actor Tom Arnold. Over the last two years, Mr. Arnold has fashioned himself an anti-Trump sleuth and crusader, working to dig up evidence of past malfeasance on television and in social media. In that role, Mr. Arnold befriended Mr. Cohen — who had lately become a vivid, if not entirely reliable, narrator of the Trump phenomenon — and then surreptitiously recorded him describing his effort to buy and bury embarrassing photographs involving the Falwells. Mr. Falwell addressed the Republican National Convention in 2016. He has advised the Trump administration on policy and has had entree to the White House. Credit John Moore/Getty Images Image Mr. Falwell addressed the Republican National Convention in 2016. He has advised the Trump administration on policy and has had entree to the White House. Mr. Falwell addressed the Republican National Convention in 2016. He has advised the Trump administration on policy and has had entree to the White House. Credit John Moore/Getty Images That attempt, Mr. Cohen says on the recording, came months before he brought Mr. Falwell “to the table” for Mr. Trump. Until then, he adds, “none of the evangelicals wanted to support Trump.” There is no evidence that Mr. Falwell’s endorsement was part of a quid pro quo arranged by Mr. Cohen. Indeed, the relationship, if any, between the endorsement and the photo episode remains unclear. But the new details — some of which have been reported by news outlets including BuzzFeed and Reuters over the last year — show how deeply Mr. Falwell was enmeshed in Mr. Cohen’s and Mr. Trump’s world. And they add another layer to one of the enduring curiosities of the Trump era: the support the president has received from evangelical Christians, who have traditionally demanded that their political leaders exhibit “family values” and moral “character.” Mr. Falwell’s father forged those words into weapons against the Democrats after he co-founded the Moral Majority political movement, which propelled Ronald Reagan into the White House and made religious conservatives a vital constituency for any Republican who would be president. By the time Republicans cast their first votes in 2016, Mr. Trump was starting to show surprising strength among some white evangelicals. But with Mr. Falwell serving as the torchbearer of his father’s legacy, his endorsement became a permission slip for deeply religious conservatives who were attracted by Mr. Trump’s promises to make America great again but wary of his well-known history of infidelity, his previous support of abortion rights and his admission that he had never asked for God’s forgiveness. “For those of the more fundamentalist variant of evangelicalism, the Falwell family, and the Falwell endorsements, are an important factor,” said Jim Guth, a political-science professor at Furman University who has long studied evangelical politics. Mr. Cruz still managed to win in Iowa. But Mr. Trump soon won South Carolina with strong evangelical support, sending him on a solid path toward the nomination. Three years later, Mr. Falwell remains an unwavering Trump supporter. Last month he went so far as to suggest that the president deserved an extended term as “reparations” for time lost to the Mueller investigation. In turn, he has had entree to the White House, providing input on education policies that stand to benefit Liberty. The Falwells declined to comment for this article. Mr. Falwell has said there were no compromising photographs, and the person close to them, who would speak only on the condition of anonymity, said the Falwells “did not know anything about Mr. Cohen’s alleged efforts” on their behalf. Mr. Falwell’s endorsement of Mr. Trump, the person said, was made after careful consideration. Mr. Cohen, he said, “did not try to exert any inappropriate pressure.” New Friendships, New Opportunities Mr. Falwell began to grow close to Mr. Trump and Mr. Cohen after Mr. Trump came to speak at Liberty, in Lynchburg, Va., in 2012. Mr. Cohen, who was working to connect his boss with important political constituencies and their leaders for a possible presidential run four years later, came along for the trip. Mr. Trump lacked the religious bona fides of those who typically filled the school’s speaker lineup. But he was the star of the top-rated “Apprentice” reality show, and Mr. Falwell admired his career in real estate. As it happened, the Falwell family was exploring a real estate venture of its own. Earlier that year, Mr. Falwell and his wife, Becki, had stayed at the Fontainebleau — the grande dame of the Miami Beach hotel scene and a somewhat unlikely vacation spot for the chancellor of a university whose student code prohibited short skirts, coed dorm visits and sex outside of “biblically ordained” marriage. The Fontainebleau Miami Beach hotel, where the Falwells befriended a pool attendant. Credit Jeffrey Greenberg/Universal Images Group, via Getty Images Once a glamorous hangout for John F. Kennedy, Frank Sinatra and Elvis, the Fontainebleau was now the stomping grounds of the Kardashians, Paris Hilton and Lady Gaga, known for allowing topless sunbathing and for a cavernous nightclub that one travel guide described as “30,000 square feet of unadulterated fun.” Techno music was pumped out at its 11 pools, where waitresses in polka-dot swimsuits served drinks and white-uniformed male attendants brought fresh towels and positioned umbrellas for tips. The Falwells struck up a conversation with one of those pool attendants, Giancarlo Granda. Mr. Granda, then 21 and the son of immigrants from Cuba and Mexico, was working at the hotel while studying finance at Florida International University. Advertisement The Falwells, according to the person close to them, were impressed with Mr. Granda’s ambition. Soon he was hiking and water skiing with them in Virginia. Within months, they were offering to help him get started in business in Florida. Unsure how to capitalize on the offer, Mr. Granda consulted a close high school friend, Jesus Fernandez Jr., whose father, Jesus Fernandez Sr., had worked in Miami real estate for decades, the Fernandezes would later assert. Together, they directed Mr. Granda to a South Beach youth hostel that was for sale. The building also housed a restaurant and a liquor store. The Miami Hostel is known as one of the best budget party hostels in South Beach.CreditAngel Valentin for The New York Times Mr. Falwell and his wife agreed to help finance the purchase after a meeting in Florida with Mr. Granda, the real estate agents, the younger Mr. Fernandez and his father — who was facing a $34 million bankruptcy. Negotiations were underway when Mr. Trump visited Liberty, and the Falwells invited Mr. Granda to fly up for the occasion. A photo taken on a private plane, reviewed by The New York Times, shows him holding a copy of “Trump: The Art of the Deal.” Mr. Falwell introduced Mr. Trump to Liberty’s students as “one of the greatest visionaries of our time,” who “single-handedly forced President Obama to release his birth certificate.” Mr. Trump shared his secrets to winning in business and life: “Get even” and “Always have a prenuptial agreement,” though he quickly added, “I won’t say it here, because you people don’t get divorced.” Mr. Granda, with a copy of “Trump: The Art of The Deal,” traveled by private plane to hear Mr. Trump speak at Liberty in 2012. Offstage, he posed for pictures with the Falwells and shook hands with their special guest, Mr. Granda. No Politics or Religion In 2013, the Falwells completed the deal for the Miami Hostel, which rents beds for as little as $15 a night, bunking 12 people to a room. The hostel became known as one of South Beach’s best budget party hostels and is sometimes listed as gay-friendly. The Falwells’ involvement came to light in a 2017 Politico article by Brandon Ambrosino, a Liberty graduate. He reported that the hostel featured a sign on its front gate declaring its house rules: “No Soliciting, Fundraising, Politics, Salesmen, Religion.” “Inside the Falwells’ hostel, the stench of general decay and cigarette smoke is overpowering,” Mr. Ambrosino wrote. Tourism pamphlets included one for Tootsie’s Cabaret, “74,000 square feet of adult entertainment and FULL NUDITY.” On a recent overnight visit, the sign forbidding politics and religion was gone, and there were no visible fliers for adult clubs. The hostel was tidy and relatively quiet — common for this time of year, Miami’s off-season. A warning was posted that the hostel was not responsible for accidents on the premises, “especially if you are drunk.” Real estate records show that an LLC called Alton Hostel Inc. bought the hostel and its building for $4.7 million in cash. Within weeks, Alton Hostel secured a $3.8 million mortgage from Carter Bank & Trust, the Virginia-based bank the Falwells had long used to finance and expand Liberty University. The source of Alton Hostel's initial full-cash payment is not known. But Mr. Falwell would later say in a sworn affidavit that his family's financial contribution to the deal amounted to a loan of $1.8 million, including $800,000 for renovations. The Falwells' son Jerry Falwell III, who goes by "Trey" and was 23 at the time, was listed as manager of the LLC; Mr. Granda was added later as a co-manager. In his affidavit, Mr. Falwell said his wife was also a member of the LLC. Around South Beach, people involved in the deal regarded it as the sort of thing Miami's young and good-looking could luck into when they encountered wealthy visitors. "Miami is a very touristy place," one of the brokers, Roberto Bracho, said in an interview. "If you are in the right place at the right time, you can hit the jackpot." The Fernandezes believed that they had been promised an ownership share. The Falwells denied making any such promise, and in his affidavit, Mr. Falwell sought to minimize his involvement, saying that, as an adviser on the deal, he could not have given them a stake. The Fernandezes threatened a lawsuit. Rigging Polls, Fixing Problems Mr. Cohen had kept in close touch with the Falwells after Mr. Trump's 2012 visit. He would later say he viewed them as family. Mr. Cohen even turned to a Falwell lieutenant — Liberty's deputy chief information officer at the time, John Gauger — as he worked to build Mr. Trump's political profile. Mr. Gauger also ran his own consulting firm, RedFinch Solutions. Mr. Cohen hired RedFinch to manipulate two online polls in Mr. Trump's favor — one in 2014 by CNBC, and another in early 2015 in the Drudge Report — Mr. Gauger told The Wall Street Journal in January. At around the same time, Mr. Cohen and Mr. Trump were arranging with The National Enquirer and its chief, the Trump ally David Pecker, to buy and bury stories about Mr. Trump and women that could harm his political prospects. Mr. Cohen's confessed role in two such deals — one with The Enquirer to silence the former Playboy model Karen McDougal, the other with the pornographic actress Stormy Daniels, whom he initially paid out of his own pocket — contributed to the three-year sentence he is now serving at the federal prison in Otisville, N.Y. Credit John Taggart for The New York Times Advertisement By Mr. Cohen's account, the Falwells appeared to be in need of just that sort of help. By late 2015, the lawsuit over ownership of the hostel had devolved into a fight over compromising photos, according to several people involved in the case. It was understood that between Mr. Granda, the Fernandezes and their lawyers, one or more people were in possession of photographs that could be used as leverage against the Falwells. And so Mr. Cohen tried to play the fixer for his friends. In a recent legal filing, Mr. Fernandez Jr. said he was forced to change his name because of the case. He became Gordon Bello. His father, Mr. Fernandez, Sr., became Jett Bello. Their name changes took place after Mr. Cohen intervened. Mr. Cohen described his involvement in his conversation with Mr. Arnold, which was first reported last month by Reuters. "There's a bunch of photographs, personal photographs, that somehow the guy ended up getting — whether it was off of Jerry's phone or somehow maybe it got AirDropped or whatever the hell the whole thing was," Mr. Cohen told Mr. Arnold in the recording, which Mr. Arnold shared with The Times. Mr. Cohen never identified "the guy." "These are photos between husband and wife," Mr. Cohen added, joking that "the evangelicals are kinkier than Tom Arnold." He explained, "I was going to pay him, and I was going to get the negatives and do an agreement where they turn over all the technology that has the photographs or anything like that, any copies." But the payoff "never happened," he said, "and the guy just either deleted them on his own or what have you." The person close to the Falwells said that Mr. Cohen was neither their lawyer nor their fixer, and that they had not been aware of "his alleged actions regarding photographs" until parts of the recording were released. Advertisement Mr. Cohen, who declined interview requests, told Mr. Arnold that he had been trying to protect Mrs. Falwell. "Even though she has a very nice figure," he said on the recording, "nobody wants their private photos published." In the process, he said, he had obtained one of the photos, of Mrs. Falwell, and still had it. Evangelicals for Trump With a few weeks to go before the Iowa caucuses kicked off the primary season on Feb. 1, 2016, Mr. Cruz was steadily racking up high-level endorsements. He was banking on strong evangelical support to push him past Mr. Trump in the state. In mid-January, Mr. Cruz's father reported back to his staff that Mr. Falwell had committed to endorsing his son, according to two people involved in the campaign at the time. A news release was prepared, they said, while aides began vetting Mr. Falwell's background, as is standard for presidential endorsers. Signs that something was amiss came shortly afterward, when Mr. Trump arrived at Liberty for another speech. Mr. Falwell introduced Mr. Trump as a man who "lives a life of loving and helping others as Jesus taught." Despite the generous introduction, the appearance seemed an unmitigated disaster for Mr. Trump. He betrayed his ignorance of the Bible by referring to a passage in "Two Corinthians" rather than "Second Corinthians," and loosely used the words "hell" and "damn." Even so, rumors began to spread that Mr. Falwell was leaning toward Mr. Trump. Rick Tyler, a senior Cruz adviser, called Mr. Falwell to say that if there was ever a good time to make his support official, this was it. That was when Mr. Falwell told him he had learned that he could not make any endorsement in the primaries. "He said his board wouldn't allow him to endorse," Mr. Tyler said in an interview. Around that time, Mr. Falwell was coming under heavy pressure to get behind Mr. Trump, according to someone who spoke to Mr. Falwell then. A few days later, Mr. Falwell announced his endorsement of Mr. Trump, calling him "a successful executive and entrepreneur, a wonderful father and a man who I believe can lead our country to greatness again." In an email, the person close to the Falwells said the Liberty chancellor had "never seriously considered endorsing Mr. Cruz," and did not know how the campaign had gotten that impression. What's more, he said, Mr. Cohen "did nothing more than ask" Mr. Falwell to endorse Mr. Trump. Though Mr. Falwell said he was making the endorsement as a private individual, not as the head of the university, the decision roiled the Liberty community. Some graduates and students expressed stunned disappointment. One of Liberty’s trustees, Mark DeMoss — an alumnus and a longtime confidant of Mr. Falwell’s father — told The Washington Post that Mr. Trump did not exhibit “Christ-like behavior that Liberty has spent 40 years promoting with its students.” (After clashing with Mr. Falwell and other board members, he resigned, he said in a statement at the time.) Speaking to Liberty students in 2012, Mr. Trump shared two pieces of advice he said he often gave: “Get even,” and “Always have a prenuptial agreement.”

At the Cruz campaign headquarters, the reaction was “anger and shock,” Mr. Tyler said. “Something changed, obviously.”

An Adviser and Defender

The relationship between Mr. Falwell and Mr. Trump would prove mutually beneficial. Mr. Trump sought to make Mr. Falwell his secretary of education, Mr. Falwell has said. After he declined, he disclosed that he would serve as an outside adviser to the administration on education policy — a role in which, Mr. Falwell indicated, he would call for rollbacks of regulations governing accreditation, recruitment and student borrowing. (“A lot of what we sent them is actually what got implemented,” he told The New York Times Magazine last year.) Mr. Falwell, in turn, has remained one of the president’s most vocal defenders, even in the rare moments when other Republicans wouldn’t, as in August 2017, when Mr. Trump said there had been “very fine people on both sides” of the violent white nationalist rally in Charlottesville, Va., that resulted in the murder of a young counterdemonstrator. That month, with settlement talks involving the hostel at an impasse, the Fernandezes, now the Bellos, filed a written complaint. The complaint, first reported by BuzzFeed News several months after it was filed, asserted that “verbal offers were made to Granda to provide him with financial assistance.” Mr. Falwell, the complaint read, “indicated that he wanted to help Granda establish a new career and build a business” as the Falwells’ relationship with Mr. Granda “evolved.”

Advertisement

In his sworn affidavit, Mr. Falwell said the family had made Mr. Granda a co-manager of the LLC in return for serving as its local representative. Mr. Falwell saw the hostel as a good opportunity to introduce his son and Mr. Granda to real estate investing, according to the person close to the family. Mr. Granda, he said, received only a “modest income,” and a financial stake that was of limited value because of the property’s heavy debt. The Comedian Gets His Tape Mr. Arnold’s anti-Trump antics have largely consisted of his public search for more recordings like the “Access Hollywood” outtake in which Mr. Trump boasted about grabbing women’s genitalia. Last year, Mr. Arnold even got his own television show on the Viceland network, “The Hunt for The Trump Tapes.” It produced no new tapes during its eight-episode run. But it did help lead to the recording of Mr. Cohen discussing the Falwells. Mr. Arnold first met Mr. Cohen last June at the Loews Regency hotel in Manhattan, as Mr. Arnold was taping his show. Their meeting didn’t result in a Cohen appearance on the program, but Mr. Cohen agreed to a photo with Mr. Arnold, which went viral on Twitter, and the two stayed in touch. Early this year, after noticing the articles in The Journal and BuzzFeed about Liberty, Mr. Cohen and the Fernandez suit, Mr. Arnold began suggesting on Twitter, without presenting any evidence, that the Falwells had been in a sexual relationship with Mr. Granda. Those tweets led Mr. Cohen to call Mr. Arnold and deny any such relationship. He then described his efforts to help with the photos. The comedian and actor Tom Arnold, left, secretly recorded Mr. Cohen describing his plan to help the Falwells by paying off someone who claimed to have compromising photos. Credit Tom Arnold Image The comedian and actor Tom Arnold, left, secretly recorded Mr. Cohen describing his plan to help the Falwells by paying off someone who claimed to have compromising photos. The comedian and actor Tom Arnold, left, secretly recorded Mr. Cohen describing his plan to help the Falwells by paying off someone who claimed to have compromising photos. Credit Tom Arnold That conversation, two months before Mr. Cohen went to prison, left more questions than answers. Mr. Cohen has publicly said nothing more. No photos have surfaced, and it is unclear how many there are. In all, three people said they had seen at least one photo, though their descriptions varied and could not be verified. Nor is it certain whom Mr. Cohen hoped to pay off. He never mentions the Bellos — formerly the Fernandezes — or their lawsuit on the tape, but makes reference to the “pool boy,” leaving open the possibility that the photos came from Mr. Granda, and that Mr. Granda then shared them with the Bellos. Then again, “the guy” to whom Mr. Cohen refers could be some other person entirely. Advertisement Mr. Granda, now working toward a graduate degree in real estate at Georgetown University, referred questions to his lawyer. The lawyer, Aaron Resnick, said his client had never interacted with Mr. Cohen, whom he called “a convicted felon and admitted liar.” He said any suggestion that Mr. Granda was the person referred to on the tape would be false, and he bristled at what he called “tabloid fodder” directed at a first-generation Hispanic-American. In a statement to The Times, the senior Bello said he and his son had been respectful to the Falwells, “despite the sensitive details surrounding this case.” It was Mr. Cohen — acting as their lawyer, he said — who had revealed “his client’s indiscretions.” He said the pending lawsuit prohibited him from offering more details about the photographs or why he and his son had felt compelled to change their names. Mr. Falwell has granted only one interview about the Arnold recording, to Todd Starnes of Fox News Radio, telling him there were “no compromising or embarrassing photos,” and saying, “We never engaged or paid Cohen to represent us in any legal or other professional capacity.” The new details about the lead-up to his endorsement of Mr. Trump have not affected Mr. Falwell’s continued enthusiastic support. Earlier this month, Mr. Falwell chastised a pastor who was embroiled in a controversy over his decision to pray for Mr. Trump during the president’s surprise visit to his church in the Washington suburbs. Suggesting that the pastor was being too accommodating of critics, Mr. Falwell directed a tweet at him reading, “Grow a pair,” a crude reference to the pastor’s masculinity. After the post drew criticism on Twitter as being beneath a religious leader, Mr. Falwell responded that he did not need to adhere to strict religious standards. “I have never been a minister,” he tweeted, saying that it was up to the students and faculty of Liberty to keep the school “strong spiritually.” He added, “While I am proud to be a conservative Christian, my job is to keep LU successful academically, financially and in athletics.”

was that. But they approached the job, and they took to the podium, with all the gravitas they could muster as appropriate to the job. In Iran crisis, our worst fears about Trump are realized

By Max Boot

More than three years ago, in March 2016, I joined 121 other Republican foreign policy analysts (I was then a Republican) to sign an open letter about then-candidate Donald Trump published on the national security website War on the Rocks.

The letter warned:

“His vision of American influence and power in the world is wildly inconsistent and unmoored in principle. He swings from isolationism to military adventurism within the space of one sentence.

His advocacy for aggressively waging trade wars is a recipe for economic disaster.

His embrace of the expansive use of torture is inexcusable.

His hateful, anti-Muslim rhetoric undercuts the seriousness of combating Islamic radicalism by alienating partners in the Islamic world. ...

... His insistence that Mexico will fund a wall on the southern border inflames unhelpful passions, and rests on an utter misreading of, and contempt for, our southern neighbor.

... His insistence that close allies such as Japan must pay vast sums for protection is the sentiment of a racketeer, not the leader of the alliances that have served us so well since World War II.

His admiration for foreign dictators such as Vladimir Putin is unacceptable. ...

He is fundamentally dishonest. ...

His equation of business acumen with foreign policy experience is false.”

The letter concluded: “Mr. Trump’s own statements lead us to conclude that as president, he would use the authority of his office to act in ways that make America less safe, and which would diminish our standing in the world.”

I wish we had been wrong, but we were all too right. The only warning that has not been vindicated is that his anti-Muslim rhetoric would alienate Muslim allies; President Trump’s kowtowing to the rulers of Egypt, Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates has kept them aligned. But all the other debilities we foresaw are now abundantly manifest.

Trump has shown no ability to grow in office; but then it’s hard to learn if all you read is Fox News chyrons. He is today the same compulsive liar and erratic ignoramus he was at the start of the 2016 campaign. Only now, the stakes are much higher. Trump is commander in chief as the United States is locked on a collision course with the Islamic Republic of Iran. The crisis in the Persian Gulf shows the danger of having a president who is so unfit for office. Indeed, this crisis is largely of Trump’s own making.

In May 2018, Trump exited the Iran nuclear deal, even though Iran was in compliance. Trump castigated the deal as “horrible,” “laughable,” “disastrous,” largely, it seems, because it was negotiated by his hated predecessor. Secretary of State Mike Pompeo laid out 12 demands that the current Iranian regime would never meet; they included Iran’s cutting off support for all of its regional proxies and ending its missile program. National security adviser John Bolton signaled that the administration is interested not in reform but regime change; in February, he posted a video on the 40th anniversary of the Iranian Revolution, telling the mullahs, “I don’t think you’ll have many more anniversaries to enjoy.”

The administration has implemented punishing sanctions that have cut Iran's oil exports by more than half. The Iranian government considers this an act of "economic war," and it has responded like most nations under attack — not by surrendering but by hitting back. In recent weeks, Iran has been blamed for attacks on oil tankers in the Persian Gulf. Iran denies responsibility, but now it is threatening to ramp up uranium production and break out of the nuclear deal. What did Trump think would happen when he pulled out of the nuclear deal? Or did he think at all? Most analysts warned that the move would increase the risk of Iran's restarting its nuclear program and of war breaking out — and it has.

Here's what you need to know about the two suspected attacks on five ships in the Persian Gulf in the last month and the region where they occurred. (Joyce Lee, Elyse Samuels/The Washington Post)

Trump's response has been as incoherent as usual. He alternates between bluster ("If Iran wants to fight, that will be the official end of Iran") and offers to talk. He contradicts his own aides (remember the 12 demands?) by saying: "We just don't want them to have nuclear weapons." But if all he cares about is nukes, why did he pull out of a nuclear deal that was working?

The United States cannot successfully deal with a menace such as Iran when it is led by a president with no credibility or moral standing either at home or abroad. U.S. allies distrust Trump's claims of Iranian responsibility for the tanker attacks and bristle at Trump's unilateralism. According to the New York Times, even Trump's own intelligence and military chiefs don't trust him enough to share details of U.S. cyberoperations against Russia. If Trump's own subordinates don't trust him, how can the rest of the country or the world? Under another president such as Ronald Reagan, Iranian attacks on shipping in the Persian Gulf might be a casus belli. But we cannot risk a war under this president. The least bad outcome is for Trump to veer, as he has with North Korea, from irresponsible saber-rattling to oleaginous appeasement. Better for Trump to fall in love with another odious dictator than to start a war that could easily spin out of control. No matter how Trump handles this self-created crisis, his Iran policies drive home the warning in the War on the Rocks letter: He is diminishing America's safety and standing.

Politics The Daily Beast Fox's Judge Napolitano: Seems Trump 'Is Prepared to Commit a Felony to Get Re-Elected'

Fox News Reacting to President Trump saying he would accept foreign intel on a political opponent if offered, and that he doesn't feel it's necessary to contact the FBI, Fox News senior judicial analyst Judge Andrew Napolitano on Thursday said he worries the president is "prepared to commit a felony." Napolitano was asked by Fox News anchor Shep Smith if there was any "gray area" or "wiggle room" when it comes to campaigns legally receiving "dirt from a foreign entity on a political opponent." "There's no wiggle room with respect to dirt," the judge responded. "With respect to opposition research. The Federal Election Commission decided in other cases that that is a thing of value." This prompted Smith to wonder if what the president described he was willing to do during his interview with ABC News constituted a felony. "Correct," Napolitano confidently declared. "Meaning he would be committing a felony and the person giving it to him, if the person was here, would be committing a felony as well." After pondering what kind of message Trump is sending to foreign leaders around the world who want to curry his favor, Napolitano argued that regardless of the president's belief that freedom of speech protects him, the law strictly prohibits him from soliciting foreign assistance in an election. "If he is a candidate, then what he receives is regulated by federal laws that he took an oath to uphold," the Fox analyst explained. "Among them are you cannot take something, accept something, receive something from a foreign national under the guise of being the head of state or because you want to use it for your campaign." Smith went on to report that Senate Democrats are now working on legislation that would make it a requirement of the law that candidates report such contacts with the FBI. "The president told George Stephanopoulos the FBI director is wrong," Napolitano stated. "Such a statute would clarify this and impose upon the president-whomever that may be more of a burden to enforce these laws on him or herself as well as on anybody else running for office." The Fox News anchor, meanwhile, wanted to get one more reaction from his guest, asking him what he thought when he first heard the president's remarks. "The president of the United States of America is prepared to commit a felony to get re-elected," Napolitano concluded. "That was my reaction and it was not a happy one. I thought he shot himself in the foot. I wish he didn't say it."Read more at The Daily Beast. Got a tip? Hatch Act of 1939

Long title An Act to Prevent Pernicious Political Activities

Enacted by the 76th United States Congress

Effective August 2, 1939

Legislative history

- Introduced in the Senate as S. 1871 by Carl Hatch (D-NM)
- Signed into law by President Franklin D. Roosevelt on August 2, 1939

The Hatch Act of 1939, officially An Act to Prevent Pernicious Political Activities, is a United States federal law whose main provision prohibits employees in the executive branch of the federal government, except the president, vice-president, and certain designated high-level officials,^[1] from engaging in some forms of political activity. It went into law on August 2, 1939. The law was named for Senator Carl Hatch of New Mexico. It was most recently amended in 2012.

Background

Widespread allegations that local Democratic Party politicians used employees of the Works Progress Administration (WPA) during the congressional elections of 1938 provided the immediate impetus for the passage of the Hatch Act. Criticism centered on swing states such as Kentucky,^[3] Tennessee, Pennsylvania, and Maryland. In Pennsylvania, Republicans and dissident Democrats publicized evidence that Democratic politicians were consulted on the appointment of WPA administrators and case workers and that they used WPA jobs to gain unfair political advantage.^[4] In 1938, a series of newspaper articles exposed WPA patronage, and political contributions in return for employment, prompting an investigation by the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee, headed by Sen. Morris Sheppard, a Texas Democrat.^[5]

Despite that investigation's inconclusive findings, many in both parties determined to take action against the growing power of the WPA and its chief administrator, Harry Hopkins, an intimate of President Roosevelt. The Act was sponsored by Senator Carl Hatch, a Democrat from New Mexico. At the time, Roosevelt was struggling to purge the Democratic party of its more conservative members, who were increasingly aligned with the administration's Republican opponents. The president considered vetoing the legislation or allowing it to become law without his signature, but instead signed it on the last day he could do so. His signing message welcomed the legislation as if he had called for it, and emphasized the protection his administration would provide for political expression on the part of public employees.^[6]

Provisions

The 1939 Act forbids the intimidation or bribery of voters and restricts political campaign activities by federal employees. It prohibits using any public funds designated for relief or public works for electoral purposes.

It forbids officials paid with federal funds from using promises of jobs, promotion, financial assistance, contracts, or any other benefit to coerce campaign contributions or political support. It provides that persons below the policy-making level in the executive branch of the federal government must not only refrain from political practices that would be illegal for any citizen, but must abstain from "any active part" in political campaigns, using this language to specify those who are exempt:[7]

- (i) an employee paid from an appropriation for the Executive Office of the President; or
- (ii) an employee appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, whose position is located within the United States, who determines policies to be pursued by the United States in the nationwide administration of Federal laws.

The act also precludes federal employees from membership in "any political organization which advocates the overthrow of our constitutional form of government,"[8] a provision meant to prohibit membership in organizations on the far left and far right, such as the Communist Party USA and the German-American Bund.[9]

An amendment on July 19, 1940, extended the Act to certain employees of state and local governments whose positions are primarily paid for by federal funds. It has been interpreted to bar political activity on the part of employees of state agencies administering federal unemployment insurance programs and appointed local law enforcement agency officials with oversight of federal grant funds. The Hatch Act bars state and local government employees from running for public office if any federal funds support the position, even if the position is funded almost entirely with local funds.[10]

The Merit Systems Protection Board and the Office of Special Counsel \(OSC\) are responsible for enforcement of the Hatch Act.[11]

Trump's Russian Laundromat | The New Republic

<http://www.newrepublic.com/article/143586/trumps-russian> Trump's Russian Laundromat How to use Trump Tower and other luxury high-rises to clean dirty money, run an international crime syndicate, and propel a failed real estate developer into the White House

In 1984, a Russian émigré named David Bogatin went shopping for apartments in New York City. The 38-year-old had arrived in America seven years before, with just $3 in his pocket. But for a former pilot in the Soviet Army—his specialty had been shooting down Americans over North Vietnam—he had clearly done quite well for himself. Bogatin wasn't hunting for a place in Brighton Beach, the Brooklyn enclave known as "Little Odessa" for its large population of immigrants from the Soviet Union. Instead, he was fixated on the glitziest apartment building on Fifth Avenue, a gaudy, 58-story edifice with gold-plated fixtures and a pink-marble atrium: Trump Tower.

If the transaction seemed suspicious—multiple apartments for a single buyer who appeared to have no legitimate way to put his hands on that much money—there may have been a reason. At the time, Russian mobsters were beginning to invest in high-end real estate, which offered an ideal vehicle to launder money from their criminal enterprises. “During the ’80s and ’90s, we in the U.S. government repeatedly saw a pattern by which criminals would use condos and high-rises to launder money,” says Jonathan Winer, a deputy assistant secretary of state for international law enforcement in the Clinton administration. “It didn’t matter that you paid too much, because the real estate values would rise, and it was a way of turning dirty money into clean money. It was done very systematically, and it explained why there are so many high-rises where the units were sold but no one is living in them.” When Trump Tower was built, as David Cay Johnston reports in The Making of Donald Trump, it was only the second high-rise in New York that accepted anonymous buyers.

In 1987, just three years after he attended the closing with Trump, Bogatin pleaded guilty to taking part in a massive gasoline-bootlegging scheme with Russian mobsters. After he fled the country, the government seized his five condos at Trump Tower, saying that he had purchased them to “launder money, to shelter and hide assets.” A Senate investigation into organized crime later revealed that Bogatin was a leading figure in the Russian mob in New York. His family ties, in fact, led straight to the top: His brother ran a $150 million stock scam with none other than Semion Mogilevich, whom the FBI considers the “boss of bosses” of the Russian mafia. At the time, Mogilevich—feared even by his fellow gangsters as “the most powerful mobster in the world”—was expanding his multibillion-dollar international criminal syndicate into America.

In 1987, on his first trip to Russia, Trump visited the Winter Palace with Ivana. The Soviets flew him to Moscow—all expenses paid—to discuss building a luxury hotel across from the Kremlin. Maxim Blokhin/TASS

'Obstruction of justice-the statute making obstruction criminal-prohibits interfering, or attempting to interfere, with a criminal prosecution or an investigation the government's conducting' Napolitano said. The Mueller Report, Napolitano believes, lays out a number of presidential acts that constitute obstruction of justice including:

- When Trump asked Deputy National Security Adviser KT McFarland to write an untruthful letter to the file, knowing the government would subpoena it.
- When Trump asked Corey Lewandowski to get Mueller fired.
- When Trump asked Don McGahn to get Mueller fired and then to lie about it.

- When Trump asked McGahn to go back to Mueller's team and change his testimony.
- When Trump dangled a pardon in front of Michael Cohen, in order to keep Cohen to testifying against him.

'Obstruction of justice-the statute making obstruction criminal-prohibits interfering, or attempting to interfere, with a criminal prosecution or an investigation the government's conducting' Napolitano said. The Mueller Report, Napolitano believes, lays out a number of presidential acts that constitute obstruction of justice including:

- When Trump asked Deputy National Security Adviser KT McFarland to write an untruthful letter to the file, knowing the government would subpoena it.
- When Trump asked Corey Lewandowski to get Mueller fired.
- When Trump asked Don McGahn to get Mueller fired and then to lie about it.

- When Trump asked McGahn to go back to Mueller's team and change his testimony.
- When Trump dangled a pardon in front of Michael Cohen, in order to keep Cohen to testifying against him.

BRITISH WRITER PENS THE BEST DESCRIPTION OF TRUMP I'VE READ

(Caricature of Donald Trump is by DonkeyHotey.)

The following was found at LA Progressive: Someone on Quora asked "Why do some British people not like Donald Trump?"

Nate White, an articulate and witty writer from England wrote the following response:

A few things spring to mind. Trump lacks certain qualities which the British traditionally esteem. For instance, he has no class, no charm, no coolness, no credibility, no compassion, no wit, no warmth, no wisdom, no subtlety, no sensitivity, no self-awareness, no humility, no honour and no grace – all qualities, funnily enough, with which his predecessor Mr. Obama was generously blessed. So for us, the stark contrast does rather throw Trump's limitations into embarrassingly sharp relief. Plus, we like a laugh. And while Trump may be laughable, he has never once said anything wry, witty or even faintly amusing – not once, ever. I don't say that rhetorically, I mean it quite literally: not once, not ever. And that fact is particularly disturbing to the British sensibility – for us, to lack humour is almost inhuman. But with Trump, it's a fact. He doesn't even seem to understand what a joke is – his idea of a joke is a crass comment, an illiterate insult, a casual act of cruelty. Trump is a troll. And like all trolls, he is never funny and he never laughs; he only crows or jeers. And scarily, he doesn't just talk in crude, witless insults – he actually thinks in them. His mind is a simple bot-like algorithm of petty prejudices and knee-jerk nastiness. There is never any under-layer of irony, complexity, nuance or depth. It's all surface. Some Americans might see this as refreshingly upfront. Well, we don't. We see it as having no inner world, no soul. And in Britain we traditionally side with David, not Goliath. All our heroes are plucky underdogs: Robin Hood, Dick Whittington, Oliver Twist. Trump is neither plucky, nor an underdog. He is the exact opposite of that. He's not even a spoiled rich-boy, or a greedy fat-cat. He's more a fat white slug. A Jabba the Hutt of privilege. And worse, he is that most unforgivable of all things to the British: a bully. That is, except when he is among bullies; then he suddenly transforms into a snivelling sidekick instead. There are unspoken rules to this stuff – the Queensberry rules of basic decency – and he breaks them all. He punches downwards – which a gentleman should, would, could never do – and every blow he aims is below the belt. He particularly likes to kick the vulnerable or voiceless – and he kicks them when they are down. So the fact that a significant minority – perhaps a third – of Americans look at what he does, listen to what he says, and then think 'Yeah, he seems like my kind of guy' is a matter of some confusion and no little distress to British people, given that: • Americans are supposed to be nicer than us, and mostly are. • You don't need a particularly keen eye for detail to spot a few flaws in the man. This last point is what especially confuses and dismays British people, and many other people too; his faults seem pretty bloody hard to miss. After all, it's impossible to read a single tweet, or hear him speak a sentence or two, without staring deep into the abyss. He turns being artless into an art form; he is a Picasso of pettiness; a Shakespeare of shit. His faults are fractal: even his flaws have flaws, and so on ad infinitum. God knows there have always been stupid people in the world, and plenty of nasty people too. But rarely has stupidity been so nasty, or nastiness so stupid. He makes Nixon look trustworthy and George W look smart. In fact, if Frankenstein decided to make a monster assembled entirely from human flaws – he would make a Trump. And a remorseful Doctor Frankenstein would clutch out big clumpfuls of hair and scream in anguish: ‘My God... what... have... I... created? If being a twat was a TV show, Trump would be the boxed set.

The Mueller Report, Napolitano believes, lays out a number of presidential acts that constitute obstruction of justice including:

- When Trump asked Deputy National Security Adviser KT McFarland to write an untruthful letter to the file, knowing the government would subpoena it.
- When Trump asked Corey Lewandowski to get Mueller fired.
- When Trump asked Don McGahn to get Mueller fired and then to lie about it.

- When Trump asked McGahn to go back to Mueller's team and change his testimony.
- When Trump dangled a pardon in front of Michael Cohen, in order to keep Cohen to testifying against him.

Trump Administration Denies U.S. Embassies Permission To Fly Pride Flag: Reports

<http://albertpeia.com/defraudingamerica3.pdf> WASHPOST Pelosi accuses Trump of 'threats and temper tantrums' in Mexico negotiations While Republicans celebrated news of the White House deal with Mexico, Democrats denounced it as another example of the president fixing a crisis of his own making. [True enough regarding the Hegalian Dialectic, hocus pocus con game approach/methodology of trump et als. After all, Mexico has very little effective capability of actually performing its purported end of the so-called deal. The Hegelian Dialectic is, in short, the critical process by which the ruling elite create a problem, anticipating in advance the reaction that the population will have to the given crisis, and thus conditioning the people that a change is needed. When the population is properly conditioned, the desired agenda of the ruling elite is presented as the solution. The solution isn't intended to solve the problem, but rather to serve as the basis for a new problem or exacerbate the existing one. Then, of course, there's this reality as to timing, beyond the spin. CITING HIS "SERIOUS MENTAL ILLNESS," MULTIPLE PSYCHIATRISTS CALL FOR PRESIDENT TRUMP TO BE IMPEACHED

"Mental illness . . . renders him psychologically incapable of competently discharging the duties of president"

Brad Reed May 31, 2019 3:13PM (UTC)

This article originally appeared on Raw Story

Three psychiatrists have written an editorial for USA Today calling on Congress to impeach President Donald Trump — and their call to remove the president has nothing to do with special counsel Robert Mueller's findings.

The psychiatrists — John Gartner, a former assistant professor at Johns Hopkins University Medical School; Dr. David Reiss, who has been practicing psychiatry for 30 years; and Dr. Steven Buser, a former Air Force psychiatrist — argue that the president's "poor mental health" is a danger to the United States and should be used as a grounds to remove him from office.

“Many of us in the mental health community have been arguing for years that Trump should be removed because he is psychologically unfit,” they write. “We posted a professional petition online stating that ‘in our professional judgment . . . Donald Trump manifests a serious mental illness that renders him psychologically incapable of competently discharging the duties of president of the United States.’”

They go on to document how House Speaker Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) and even some members of his own administration have pondered removing Trump via the 25th amendment in which he’d be declared mentally unfit to perform his duties.

However, they think the most likely remedy at this point is for the House to start up impeachment hearings.

“Pelosi has thus far resisted calls for impeachment on the grounds that it would arouse the ire of Trump’s base going into the 2020 election,” they argue. “But she seems to ignore the opposite risk: Underreacting desensitizes us to the dangerous severity of Trump’s dysfunction, normalizing the abnormal.”

The Root

The man who predicted Trump's victory says Democrats may have to impeach him to have a chance in 2020

Allan Lichtman doesn't mind swimming against the political tide. Lichtman, a professor at American University in Washington, DC, was the most prominent voice predicting Donald Trump's victory in the run-up to the 2016 election. When Trump won, it marked the 9th(!) straight presidential election where Lichtman had correctly predicted the Electoral College winner. (That's all the way back to 1984, for you math wizards.) In short: Lichtman is someone the political world should listen to. So I reached out to him on Tuesday to see what he thought of Trump's current chances at a second term next ...

He himself told them: "What you are seeing and what you are reading is not what's happening."It is important to note that fascism is not a political ideology or strategy but mental pathology at societal scale, starting with an impaired leader who attains power not to lead but to fulfill his own dysfunctional needs. Of course, such a leader is attractive in the first place because of similar pathologies in the population, which global economic inequities and massive social injustices in our day could have predicted. Since such a leader does not have any real ability to lead, he manipulates the psychological weaknesses in the population, augmenting societal disorder until the dynamic brings down the entire society. Destruction is always the inevitable result, as it is the nature of pathology, as opposed to healthy choices."

'Obstruction of justice-the statute making obstruction criminal-prohibits interfering, or attempting to interfere, with a criminal prosecution or an investigation the government's conducting' Napolitano said. The Mueller Report, Napolitano believes, lays out a number of presidential acts that constitute obstruction of justice including:

- When Trump asked Deputy National Security Adviser KT McFarland to write an untruthful letter to the file, knowing the government would subpoena it.
- When Trump asked Corey Lewandowski to get Mueller fired.
- When Trump asked Don McGahn to get Mueller fired and then to lie about it.

- When Trump asked McGahn to go back to Mueller's team and change his testimony.
- When Trump dangled a pardon in front of Michael Cohen, in order to keep Cohen to testifying against him.

Politics The Guardian Bannon described Trump Organization as 'criminal enterprise', Michael Wolff book claims [Because that's what it is!] Former White House adviser says financial investigations will take down president in sequel to Fire and FurySupport the Guardian's independent journalism. Make a contribution today Donald Trump along with his children Eric, Ivanka and Donald Jr arrive for a press conference at Trump Tower in New York in 2017. Photograph: Timothy A Clary/AFP/Getty Images The former White House adviser Steve Bannon has described the Trump Organization as a criminal entity and predicted that investigations into the president's finances will lead to his political downfall, when he is revealed to be "not the billionaire he said he was, just another scumbag". The startling remarks are contained in Siege: Trump Under Fire, the author Michael Wolff's forthcoming account of the second year of the Trump administration. The book, published on 4 June, is a sequel to Fire and Fury: Trump in the White House, which was a bestseller in 2018. The Guardian obtained a copy. In a key passage, Bannon is reported as saying he believes investigations of Donald Trump's financial history will provide proof of the underlying criminality of his eponymous company. Assessing the president's exposure to various investigations, many seeded by the special counsel Robert Mueller during his investigation of Russian election interference, Wolff writes: "Trump was vulnerable because for 40 years he had run what increasingly seemed to resemble a semi-criminal enterprise.” He then quotes Bannon as saying: “I think we can drop the ‘semi’ part.” Bannon, a leading promoter of far-right populism, was a White House adviser until August 2017, when he was removed. He was a major source for Fire and Fury, also first reported by the Guardian. Among other claims in that book, he labelled as “treasonous” an infamous Trump Tower meeting between Donald Trump Jr, Trump’s son-in-law Jared Kushner, campaign manager Paul Manafort and a Russian lawyer. Amid publicity surrounding Fire and Fury, Bannon was ejected from circles close to Trump and his position at Breitbart News. In Siege, Wolff pays close attention to Trump’s financial affairs. Investigations into Trump’s business dealings, spearheaded by the southern district of New York, have shuttered the president’s charity and seen the Trump Organization chief financial officer, Allen Weisselberg, receive immunity for testimony in investigations of Michael Cohen, the former Trump attorney and fixer who is now in jail in New York. This month, the New York Times obtained tax information that showed Trump’s businesses lost more than $1bn from 1985 to 1994. The newspaper subsequently reported that in 2016 and 2017, Deutsche Bank employees flagged concerns over possible money laundering through transactions involving legal entities controlled by the president and Kushner. Some of the transactions involved individuals in Russia. The bank did not act but Congress and New York state are now investigating its relationship with Trump and his family. Deutsche Bank has lent billions to Trump and Kushner companies. Trump has attempted to block House subpoenas for his financial records sent to Deutsche Bank. In Siege, Wolff quotes Bannon saying investigations into Trump’s finances will cut adrift even his most ardent supporters: “This is where it isn’t a witch hunt - even for the hard core, this is where he turns into just a crooked business guy, and one worth $50m instead of $10bn. “Not the billionaire he said he was, just another scumbag.” Wolff also details a 2004 Palm Beach property deal involving the now disgraced financier Jeffrey Epstein and the Putin-friendly oligarch Dmitry Rybolovlev that, the author writes, earned Trump “$55m without putting up a dime”. Epstein, he writes, invited Trump to see a $36m Palm Beach mansion he planned to buy. According to Wolff, Trump went behind Epstein's back to buy the foreclosed property for around $40m, a sum Epstein had reason to believe Trump couldn't raise in his own right, through an entity called Trump Properties LLC, which was entirely financed by Deutsche Bank. Epstein, Wolff writes, knew Trump had been loaning out his name in real estate deals for a fee and suspected that in his case Trump was fronting for the property's real owners. Epstein threatened to expose the deal. As the dispute increased, he found himself under investigation by the Palm Beach police. According to Wolff, Trump made only minor improvements and put the house on the market for $125m. It was purchased for $96m by Rybolovlev, part of a circle of government-aligned industrialists in Russia, thereby earning Trump $55m without risking any of his own money. Wolff presents two theories as to how the deal worked: first, perhaps "Trump merely earned a fee for hiding the real owner - a shadow owner quite possibly being funneled cash by Rybolovlev for other reasons beyond the value of the house". Second, he suggests the real owner of the house and the real buyer were one and the same. "Rybolovlev might have, in effect, paid himself for the house, thereby cleansing the additional $55m for the second purchase of the house." "This," Wolff writes, "was Donald Trump's world of real estate."

Opinion: The abdication of King Trump THE ABDICATION OF KING TRUMP

By Ted Gup Updated 3:41 PM ET, Mon May 27, 2019

Ted Gup is an author and writer-in-residence at Durham University in the UK. He has been a contributor to the Washington Post, New York Times, NPR, Slate, The Guardian, National Geographic and other publications.

The opinions expressed in this commentary are solely those of the author. Read more opinion on CNN.

(CNN) In recent weeks, nearly all the talk in Washington centered around impeachment -- would they or wouldn't they? Now the nation faces a new worry -- abdication. That's right, the President who imagines himself a king, and expects others to treat him the same way, has declared that he will have nothing to do with Congress on infrastructure legislation -- perhaps the one area where he could have won bipartisan support -- so long as the Dems insist on holding him accountable. In effect, Donald Trump has announced that he has abdicated, having no longer any wish to serve. Fittingly, the word "abdication" has two meanings. The first applies to when a monarch relinquishes his throne (in Trump's case, not likely); the second, when anyone in a position of authority chooses to neglect or ignore his duties. The latter is what this petulant President has said he will do so long as anyone dares question him. He has announced, in effect, that America now has a government in absentia.

To understand what happened last week, it is best viewed through the lens of medieval times, which is the domain in which our President/king resides. What House Speaker Nancy Pelosi did by accusing him of a cover-up amounted to what monarchs call "Lese Majeste" -- an insult to the sovereign. (For Trump, there is no real issue of constitutionality. The only separation of powers he seems to recognize is that which he has doled out between his advisers, Jared Kushner and Ivanka Trump, and his son Don Jr.)

Which helps explain the calculated and choreographed Rose Garden hissy fit (complete with posters on the podium) and why it is that Trump, who was always accustomed to getting his own way, has done so again. His threat not to deal with Congress so long as it has the temerity to question him, creates for him the ideal scenario: he gets to hold on to the throne without having to govern, which is most likely what he wanted from the beginning. For all his scorn and righteous indignation, he's probably experiencing a measure of relief and even gratitude that the weight of the crown has been at least temporarily lifted.

Comment: Does President Trump want to be impeached? 02:45

After all, he has never had any interest in actually running things and when he did he often ran them into the ground (count the bankruptcies, and now the debacle of US immigration policy). He is the CEO who is averse to managing, the deal-maker extraordinaire who comes away from the negotiating table empty-handed, having offended lifelong allies to the delight of our adversaries; he is the wizard investor who is said to have lost more money over a decade than practically any other American. His competence rests exclusively on his own testimonials. In Texas they call that "all hat and no cattle."

He is about scoring points, nothing more. It is only fitting that he was the host of the TV program "The Apprentice," a show about sycophants vying for his favor. Trump is himself a lifelong apprentice, first desperately vying for the acceptance of his martinet father, and later, the nation. Look at his life -- he is a success at courtship and wooing; fidelity, not so much.

In many ways, his inauguration was the high point of his presidency. What followed was the bewildering realization that something more was expected of him. He is perpetually on the campaign trail in pursuit of validation, and another win.

SE Cupp: Conway crying sexism is her go-to move 02:14

Trump, the consummate dealmaker, can always walk away from the table, not because he is a canny and tough negotiator, but because he does not seem to care what the outcome is or what the ultimate shape of the deal is. He has no true investment in the deal (the well-being of our country and its people), only in his ego -- it is enough that he appears to have won.

His singular talents span the spectrum from bluff to bluster, which work well enough in inherited wealth and reality TV, but less so for those enterprises requiring actual hands-on governance. And is it not the ultimate expression of executive privilege, the right not to behave as an executive at all? He is drawn to the prerogatives of power, and not what that power can do for others.

So in threatening to eschew all manner of presidential engagement, save the pomp and circumstance for which he lives, he has simply shed all pretense and shown his true self. State dinners, motorcades, the pandering of Fox & Friends and endless ego-stroking were all that he ever wanted. Even on the campaign trail, nothing was further from his mind than finding solutions to the nation's problems.

Smerconish: Trump has no strategy other than be provocative 02:45
He has become a case study in the old adage, "be careful what you wish for." One can be forgiven for wondering if it had even occurred to him that certain responsibilities might come along with holding office. How utterly inconvenient for tweeting and tee-off times.

And now we have the worst of all possible worlds: an abdication that leaves some 327 million Americans in limbo.

The problem is that Trump, in his own inimitable way, has created a most imperfect vacuum for the nation. For the foreseeable future the presidency will be both vacant and occupied, with the country reduced to waiting out his tantrum and deciphering its future from a fusillade of tweets and campaign-like rants.

Meanwhile, the nation's bridges are left to crack, highways buckle, tracks heave, illicit drugs proliferate, medications grow ever-more expensive; diplomats scratch their heads and hind parts, idled by kingly disinterest, allies wonder whether we have their backs or should watch their backs, enemies salivate, polar ice caps slip into the sea, and poor, poor Doral Country Club -- under Trump's storied management -- continues, like the rest of us, to struggle.

Stay up to date...

Now, freed of such noisome distractions as legislation, budgets, and infrastructure, he, like a child with a giant LEGO set, can concentrate on trying to build that wall to the south and dispense with pretending to care about the nation or its ills.

Instead of railing against Speaker Pelosi, he should be writing her a thank you note for handing him an excuse, however implausible, allowing him to shed the duties of the presidency. The saddest and most telling of all his pronouncements since entering office was this: "I loved my previous life."

TRUMP'S 'UNHINGED' BEHAVIOR COULD BE DUE TO 'UNTREATED SYPHILIS,' EXPERT CLAIMS https://news.yahoo.com/trump-unhinged-behavior-could-due-160708680.html?soc_src=hl-viewer&soc_trk=fb An expert in infectious diseases has claimed that President Donald Trump's erratic and bizarre behavior, which has led many mental health professionals to express fears that he could be mentally ill, could be part of the symptoms of syphilis, a sexually transmitted disease (STD). The shocking suggestion that Trump could be exhibiting the symptoms of dementia due to syphilis was put forward by Steven Beutler, an expert in infectious diseases, in an article titled, "A Medical Theory For Trump's Bizarre Behavior," published on Friday by the New Republic. "Many mental health professionals believe the president is ill. But what if the cause is an untreated STD?" Trump's 'bizarre, volatile behavior' could be from untreated syphilis: infectious disease doctor <https://t.co/dozqfS39w1> pic.twitter.com/xgUV6pC7MV – Raw Story (@RawStory) February 18, 2017 Click here to continue and read more...

'...The fact that Trump has shown all the major symptoms of neurosyphilis, including irritability, delusional thinking, grandiosity, and patchy hair loss, provides a basis to fear that he could be in the late stages of neurological illness due to syphilis infection, according to the medical expert...' '... Neurosyphilis is often misdiagnosed because it mimics non-infectious psychiatric illness. And according to Beutler, all of the symptoms of neurosyphilis, including "patchy hair loss," have been observed in Trump. "Commonly recognized symptoms include irritability, loss of ability to concentrate, delusional thinking, and grandiosity. Memory, insight, and judgment can become impaired. Insomnia may occur... Dementia... and patchy hair loss can also be seen in later stages of syphilis." Beutler admitted that it is impossible to determine from a distance that Trump has syphilis. He insisted, however, that part of his training as a medical professional is making "differential diagnosis" based on incomplete information. "Part of my training is to ask the right questions to get a sense of what the problem might be and make a list of possible diagnoses that could explain the problem," he wrote. "This is called the 'differential diagnosis,'" he continued. "From there, additional questions, examinations, and tests are performed that narrow down the list, usually to one unifying diagnosis." ...'

Donald Trump: stable genius

(CNN)If Washington politics were a movie, this week might be the time you turn to your companion and say, "Who writes this stuff?":

A President and "world-class deal maker," marveled Frida Ghitis, who demonstrates with a "temper tantrum," that he can't make deals. Who storms out of meetings with congressional leaders while insisting he's calm (and lines up his top aides to confirm it for the cameras). Who says, "I don't do cover-ups," with his administration on information lockdown -- offering justifications "that wouldn't pass muster in an episode of 'The Simpsons,'" remarked Julian Zelizer.

And who launches into a tirade -- in the middle of an event about aid to farmers -- to say I'm not crazy, she's crazy.

"She" being House Speaker Nancy Pelosi, who offered Trump her thoughts and prayers, and wished aloud that someone would get him an intervention. There was no need, I'm an "extremely stable genius," Trump told reporters, adding that he'll talk to Democrats when they stop investigating him. He's right, suggested Marc Thiessen in the Washington Post: "Nancy Pelosi can't accuse him of engaging in a coverup in the morning and expect him to negotiate with her on a $2 trillion infrastructure package in the afternoon."

By week's end, Trump and supporters were previewing what critics believed his re-election campaign would look like. He retweeted a Fox Business Network video mashup of Pelosi stammering during a news conference on Capitol Hill on Thursday. "It's pathetic," protested SE Cupp, adding "childish" and "impotent." "But it's disgusting and disturbing to watch the president and leader of the free world do it time and time again."

GOP Ex-Lawmaker Demands Impeachment Of Donald Trump, Resignation Of Mike Pence Lee Moran HuffPost•May 24, 2019 Former Rep. Tom Coleman (R-Mo.) has penned a blistering op-ed calling for the impeachment of "illegitimate" President Donald Trump. Coleman, in his piece for The Kansas City Star published Thursday titled "Trump, Pence are illegitimate. Impeach them," argued that if Trump was impeached, then Vice President Mike Pence should resign as otherwise "the lingering stench of corruption" would trail his administration. Special counsel Robert Mueller's report, Coleman wrote, showed Trump and members of his team had "on multiple occasions welcomed Russian interference on his behalf during the 2016 presidential campaign." Therefore, Coleman reasoned, "the president's election victory brought forth nothing less than an illegitimate president." Coleman, who has criticized Trump in the past and opposed his candidacy, was voted out of Congress after 17 years in 1993. He noted in his op-ed that House Democrats were divided over whether to begin impeachment proceedings. But "critical times require exceptional leadership," he wrote, suggesting the "only viable option available" is for the Democratic-controlled House "to open its own investigation, hold public hearings and then determine if they should pursue removal of the president through impeachment." "The public would conclude Democrats are no better than the Republicans who have enabled Trump for the past two years” if they did not move to impeach him, Coleman wrote. He concluded with this warning: It could hand Trump a second term. Failure to pursue impeachment is to condone wrongdoing. To condone wrongdoing is to encourage more of it. To encourage wrongdoing is to give up on the rule of law and our democracy. To give up on the rule of law and democracy invites autocracy and eventually dictatorship. History has taught us this outcome. In my lifetime, it has occurred in other places including the Soviet Union and Germany, as well as in Russia and Venezuela today. Coleman... Continue reading on HuffPost

GOP Ex-Lawmaker Demands Impeachment Of Trump, Resignation Of Pence

The 'Snit Hits The Fan' On New York Daily News' Scathing Trump Cover Trump's hometown tabloid offered up its take on the president's Rose Garden press conference with its latest cover.

Dow rises 150 points at start of Friday action but poised for 5th weekly loss in a row ahead of Memorial Day U.S. stocks opened higher on Friday, capping a mostly downbeat week for equities, weighed by U.S.-China trade tensions, which put the three main indexes on track to post consecutive weekly losses heading into the Memorial Day holiday. The Dow Jones Industrial Average (DJIA) rose 150 points, or 0.6%, at 25,651, set for a weekly slump of 1.1% and its fifth straight weekly loss, as of Thursday's close, the S&P 500 index (SPX) rose 17 points, or 0.6%, at 2,839, poised for a 1.3% weekly skid. The main political news for the day centered on apparent softening of trade tensions between the U.S. and China and Theresa May's announced resignation as U.K. prime minister amid her failed attempts at Brexit.

Business TheStreet.com The Markets Should Be More Worried Than They Appear With volumes flat on the NYSE and declining on the Nasdaq, and despite the fact that no significant technical events have occurred, we are becoming more cautious. No technical events were generated on the charts, leaving all of them in near-term neutral trends, except for the Dow Jones Industrials, which is still negative. The cumulative advance/decline lines are still neutral and above their 50-day Moving Averages on the NYSE and All Exchange, while the Nasdaq's is negative and below its 50 DMA.

Business Reuters China denounces U.S. 'rumors' and 'lies' about Huawei ties to Beijing The United States placed Huawei on a trade blacklist last week, effectively banning U.S. firms from doing business with the world's largest telecom network gear maker and escalating a trade battle between the world's two biggest economies. ALA. LAWMAKER CAUSES UPROAR WITH TRUMP JR. SLUR The Alabama House abruptly adjourned after one policymaker demanded the censure of another over comments that included slurring the president's son.

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — 'Alabama lawmakers abruptly adjourned after one lawmaker called for the censure of another over comments that included calling the president's son "evidently retarded." Republican Rep. Arnold Mooney of Shelby County on Wednesday went to the House microphone to read a letter seeking censure of Rep. John Rogers, a Democrat. Mooney said Rogers brought "shame" on Alabama with comments he made after debate on a proposed abortion ban. Susan Edelman Blank "Kernberg described malignant narcissism as a syndrome characterized by a narcissistic personality disorder (NPD), antisocial features, paranoid traits, and egosyntonic aggression. Other symptoms may include an absence of conscience, a psychological need for power, and a sense of importance (grandiosity)."

Robert Reich The pattern is eerily similar to 2007 and 1928 (remember what happened immediately after those years).

- 1. Price-earnings ratios on the stock market are 28 to one – just what they were in 1928.
- 2. Households are taking on even more debt. Credit card delinquency rates in the first quarter of the year have hit the highest level since 2012, driven partly by a spike in overdue payments by people ages 18–29, according to the New York Federal Reserve. We're also seeing a spike in home refinancings – just as we did in the years leading up to the crash of 2008.
- 3. Another parallel: Corporations are deep in debt. The Federal Reserve warned that corporate America is taking on too much debt. Junk bonds are soaring once again. According to Bloomberg, "deeply indebted companies are borrowing even more to pay equity holders."

Bottom line: Watch your wallets. The years after 1928 and 2007 weren't pretty.

During her line of questioning, Senator Dianne Feinstein, ranking Democratic judiciary committee member, managed to get Barr to reveal the exact law Trump broke per the evidence in Mueller's report..... Feinstein simply described the evidence in Mueller's report that details Trump's efforts to get White House counsel Don MCGahn to lie about Trump ordering him to fire Mueller. Feinstein then asked if it is illegal to try and get a witness to lie (duh), to which Barr answered, 'Uh, yes.' She then asked him to cite the exact law, to which Barr said, Jim Rogers Warns: 'Worst Bear Market' Is Coming Posted by Eugene Townes | May 14, 2019 | Markets On a recent call with ETMarkets.com, no-nonsense economic guru Jim Rogers restated his concern that a bear market was on the way, and investors should be on the lookout for small signs to avoid another crisis like 2008. Although Rogers could not give a timeline for the bear market to arrive, he did say that it will be the “worst in my lifetime,” a prediction he's stuck by for a while now, and the key to spotting a market correction lies within smaller markets.

To those who said it can’t happen here, just read these nationalistic, nonsensical pro-Trump comments; it is happening right before our eyes.

Psychiatrists warn the Mueller report provides more evidence Donald Trump is mentally unfit to serve “Such a mindset of false beliefs in freedom from consequences is extremely dangerous,” Bandy X. Lee writes Psychiatrists warn the Mueller report provides more evidence Donald Trump is mentally unfit to serve”Such a mindset of false beliefs in freedom from consequences is extremely dangerous,” Bandy X. Lee writes This article originally appeared on Raw Story Three psychiatrists have written an editorial for the Boston Globe warning that special counsel Robert Mueller’s report on Russian interference in the 2016 presidential election shows more evidence that President Donald Trump is mentally unfit to hold office. The psychiatrists — Dr. Bandy X. Lee of Yale, Dr. Leonard L. Glass of Harvard Medical School, and Edwin B. Fisher of University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill — argue that Mueller’s report provides a disturbing new window into the president’s behavior, which is frequently marked by impulsive emotional meltdowns. “The pattern that emerges of the president is one of rash, short-sighted decision-making, without consideration of consequences,” they write. “Reckless, impulsive moves that are self-destructive, despite the intention of self-protection, are characteristic of dangerous impairment. They impede Trump’s capacity to prioritize national security.” They then quote from sections of the Mueller report that illustrate these behaviors, including his efforts to dangle pardons to potential witnesses and his effort to get Mueller fired as special counsel. They say that his ordering former White House counsel Don McGahn to get rid of Mueller should be seen as especially alarming given how inherently self-destructive it was.

Mueller's damning report is an invitation that Congress shouldn't refuse. [Laurence Tribe knows something about constitutional law. 'Obstruction of justice-the statute making obstruction criminal-prohibits interfering, or attempting to interfere, with a criminal prosecution or an investigation the government's conducting' Napolitano said. The Mueller Report, Napolitano believes, lays out a number of presidential acts that constitute obstruction of justice including:

- When Trump asked Deputy National Security Adviser KT McFarland to write an untruthful letter to the file, knowing the government would subpoena it.
- When Trump asked Corey Lewandowski to get Mueller fired.
- When Trump asked Don McGahn to get Mueller fired and then to lie about it.
- When Trump asked McGahn to go back to Mueller's team and change his testimony.
- When Trump dangled a pardon in front of Michael Cohen, in order to keep Cohen to testifying against him.

'...Donnie Trump's Attorney General Bill Barr gave his first congressional testimony in the wake of the release of the Mueller report this morning and it revealed why Trump was in panic mode this morning. The party told you to reject the evidence of your eyes and ears. It was their final, most essential command. His heart sank as he thought of the enormous power arrayed against him, the ease with which any Party intellectual would overthrow him in debate, the subtle arguments which he would not be able to understand, much less answer. And yet he was in the right! They were wrong and he was right.

Psychiatrists warn the Mueller report provides more evidence Donald Trump is mentally unfit to serve "Such a mindset of false beliefs in freedom from consequences is extremely dangerous," Bandy X. Lee writes Psychiatrists warn the Mueller report provides more evidence Donald Trump is mentally unfit to serve"Such a mindset of false beliefs in freedom from consequences is extremely dangerous," Bandy X. Lee writes This article originally appeared on Raw Story Three psychiatrists have written an editorial for the Boston Globe warning that special counsel Robert Mueller's report on Russian interference in the 2016 presidential election shows more evidence that President Donald Trump is mentally unfit to hold office. The psychiatrists — Dr. Bandy X. Lee of Yale, Dr. Leonard L. Glass of Harvard Medical School, and Edwin B. Fisher of University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill — argue that Mueller's report provides a disturbing new window into the president's behavior, which is frequently marked by impulsive emotional meltdowns. "The pattern that emerges of the president is one of rash, short-sighted decision-making, without consideration of consequences," they write. "Reckless, impulsive moves that are self-destructive, despite the intention of self-protection, are characteristic of dangerous impairment. They impede Trump's capacity to prioritize national security." They then quote from sections of the Mueller report that illustrate these behaviors, including his efforts to dangle pardons to potential witnesses and his effort to get Mueller fired as special counsel. They say that his ordering former White House counsel Don McGahn to get rid of Mueller should be seen as especially alarming given how inherently self-destructive it was.

Susan Edelman Blank As a psychotherapist, I read the pro-Trump comments with both fascination and horror as they corroborate the work of Robert Jay Lifton, who coined the term “malignant normality” to describe how so-called ordinary Germans could fall in line with the fascist doctrine of Nazism without blinking an eye. To those who said it can’t happen here, just read these nationalistic, nonsensical pro-Trump comments; it is happening right before our eyes.

Susan Edelman Blank Carol Rzepny yes, Carol, many Germans did not fall in line with the Nazis, many joined the underground, others hid Jews, many tried in small ways to resist, and others kept silent and prayed for deliverance from evil. GOP Rep. Amash becomes first Republican to call for Trump's impeachment

By Eli Watkins and Kevin Bohn, CNN

Updated 7:55 PM ET, Sat May 18, 2019

Washington (CNN) Michigan GOP Rep. Justin Amash said Saturday he had concluded President Donald Trump committed "impeachable conduct" and accused Attorney General William Barr of intentionally misleading the public.

Amash's comments recommending Congress pursue obstruction of justice charges against Trump were the first instance of a sitting Republican in Congress calling for Trump's impeachment.

Justin Amash is the loneliest Republican in Congress

Amash is a rare GOP critic of Trump and previously said Trump's conduct in pressuring then-FBI Director James Comey could merit impeachment. In a Twitter thread on Saturday, Amash said he believed "few members of Congress even read" special counsel Robert Mueller's report and that the report itself established "multiple examples" of Trump committing obstruction of justice.

"Contrary to Barr's portrayal, Mueller's report reveals that President Trump engaged in specific actions and a pattern of behavior that meet the threshold for impeachment," Amash said in a string of messages on Twitter.

- CNN found 77 instances of lies and false assertions in Mueller's report. Trump told the greatest number
- 77 lies and falsehoods Mueller called out
- What Trump associates told the public vs. what they told Mueller
- 4 times Barr twisted and cherry-picked Mueller's report

Democratic Rep. Rashida Tlaib, also of Michigan, responded to Amash's Twitter thread later Saturday and invited him to join her impeachment resolution.

".@justinamash come find me in 1628 Longworth. I've got an impeachment investigation resolution you're going to want to cosponsor," Tlaib tweeted.

Amash -- a libertarian conservative elected during the Tea Party wave of 2010 -- was a founding member of the House Freedom Caucus, a key bloc of Republicans who worked to shift the GOP caucus to the right on many issues, but in the Trump era, he has found himself breaking with his conservative allies who have embraced the President.

Amash said on Saturday that he made his conclusions "only after having read Mueller's redacted report carefully and completely, having read or watched pertinent statements and testimony, and having discussed this matter with my staff, who thoroughly reviewed materials and provided me with further analysis."

He said Barr misled the public in a range of venues regarding the Mueller report, a charge Democrats and others have made repeatedly that the attorney general has disputed.

"Barr's misrepresentations are significant but often subtle, frequently taking the form of sleight-of-hand qualifications or logical fallacies, which he hopes people will not notice," Amash said.

Amash said "contrary to Barr's portrayal," Trump's actions "meet the threshold for impeachment" and that anyone without the unique legal protections of the presidency would be facing an indictment.

He argued that it was Congress' role to move forward with impeachment and accused people on both sides of the aisle of political motives, saying they had shifted "their views 180 degrees ... depending on whether they're discussing (former President) Bill Clinton or Donald Trump."

"Our system of checks and balances relies on each branch's jealously guarding its powers and upholding its duties under our Constitution," Amash tweeted. "When loyalty to a political party or to an individual trumps loyalty to the Constitution, the Rule of Law -- the foundation of liberty -- crumbles."

CNN's Clare Foran and Ashley Killough contributed to this report.

Yale psychiatrist explains how to deprogram Trump supporters who've been sucked into the vortex of his lies

LAS VEGAS NEVADA, DECEMBER 14, 2015: Republican presidential candidate Donald Trump speaks at campaign event at

Even as President Donald Trump is battered by controversies, including a recent report that his self-proclaimed business acumen is largely a sham — he lost money starting in the 1980s — his approval ratings among his supporters remain high.

Raw Story spoke with Dr. Bandy X. Lee, a forensic psychiatrist at Yale School of Medicine, about why Trump supporters are so loyal to the President. She and several co-authors recently submitted an analysis of what the Mueller report revealed about the President’s mental health, covered here and here. Their summary of the report was the number one article in the

Dr. Lee has also been a vocal critic of the American Psychiatric Association’s alteration of the Goldwater rule since the Trump administration, so much so that she held a conference on it in April 2017, inviting the most preeminent psychiatrists in the nation.

Their critique of the altered Goldwater rule led to a book in defiance of the change, which became the New York Times bestseller, “The Dangerous Case of Donald Trump.” Since then, thousands of mental health professionals joined her to form the World Mental Health Coalition (dangerouscase.org), intended as an alternative to the American Psychiatric Association, and named her president.

Raw Story: If you had the chance to speak with Trump supporters, what would you say to them?

Dr. Bandy X. Lee: I am already in contact with many, and have worked with, shared meals with, and “hung out” with several while working in Alabama. Contrary to the stereotype, they are often some of the most humane and most innocent people I have met, which is why they trusted so easily.

It is heartbreaking to consider how they have been exploited—over the years by a politics that retains power not by serving them but through psychological manipulation, and now through a predatory president.

I would say to them, it has become time to ask ourselves: do we have the self-respect to demand a leader who is even capable of leading? Our recent test on his capacity was intended as a service to the public, based on the rigorous information in Robert Mueller's report: he failed on every criterion. We also just learned of the president's spectacular business failures during the years he flaunted himself as being the biggest success, while he lost more than any other American on record.

It is difficult to make this shift, especially when we have invested so much, but after a while, it takes less energy to change than to continue making excuses to protect "our guy."

Policy-wise, he is hurting his everyday supporters the most (not the billionaire supporters). If we stopped to think for a moment—doesn't it bother us that he deceived us into believing he was a successful businessman, the only qualification he brought for being a successful politician, when all he did was go to his father when in trouble? Doesn't it disturb us that he so lies, cheats, and defrauds the public, that it is safer to assume that every word out of his mouth is the opposite of what is true? Should we tolerate a president whom more than 800 former federal prosecutors, of both parties, would call a criminal?

Raw Story: Is there anything you would advise them to do?

Dr. Bandy X. Lee: The transition will be gradual and painful, but the moment they realize they hold the power and do not have to submit to a strong authority to be safe, they won't be so easily fooled any more. This is all understandable; working in the criminal justice system, I know how good serial predators can be—they can create powerful emotional bonds.

This is what they thrive on.

I rather hold responsible the institutions that propped him up for their short-term profits, and the American Psychiatric Association is chief among them. Given that the insidious effects of mental pathology defined this whole presidency, the Association was in a unique position to prevent vast suffering. Psychiatrists understand not just mental illness but criminal behavior, violence, capacity to serve in an office, and many other things. By aggressively shaping a milieu where mental health professionals would not be able to share their knowledge as a national mental health crisis was unfolding, the Association instead primed the public to become the president's prey.

Raw Story: Those are strong words. How do you make that claim?

Dr. Bandy X. Lee: The public has a right to know what the American Psychiatric Association has done. Imagine if a high official contracted Ebola. One would not think twice about deferring to doctors about proper management. The doctors do not make political decisions but medical ones, and based on recommendations, political bodies would coordinate. The important, immediate issue at hand is to contain the disease and spread of harm.

I have described the current president's condition as worse than Ebola—and yet, imagine if the Ebola doctors were prohibited from even uttering a word of caution, for fear of upsetting the high official, and leaving the disease to its natural course. By propagating popular misconceptions that mental health issues are somehow different than other health issues, that it is imaginary or subjective—or worse, just an insult—the APA has effectively stigmatized the entire field of mental health. By allowing a serious condition to continue without even educating the public, it has allowed pathology to spread unchecked.

Raw Story: Why did you decide to boycott the very symposium you helped to organize at the American Psychiatric Association?

Dr. Bandy X. Lee: I have lost faith in the Association's ability to have an honest discussion. Psychiatrists were never supposed to be beholden to public figures—our primary responsibilities are to patients and to society. The actual Goldwater rule says this: work to improve the community and public health, and when asked about a public figure, educate the public—just don't diagnose.

Instead, the APA expanded the “don’t diagnose” part out of proportion to silence an entire profession and to change public expectations. Its timing and aggressive public relations campaign make clear that it intended to protect Donald Trump, not ethics.

That said, I should clarify that the leadership did this by fiat, against member protests. We are now in a constitutional crisis, about to enter catastrophic wars, and economic breakdown is looming—all in ways that were wholly predictable from having a mentally unstable president.

Science now shows that even diagnosis does not require a personal interview. By distorting ethics and falsely intimidating experts, it deprived the public of critical knowledge at a critical time. Edmund Burke said, “All tyranny needs to gain a foothold is for people of good conscience to remain silent.” And what better way to serve tyranny than to institutionalize this silence?

Psychiatrists warn the Mueller report provides more evidence Donald Trump is mentally unfit to serve "Such a mindset of false beliefs in freedom from consequences is extremely dangerous," Bandy X. Lee writes Psychiatrists warn the Mueller report provides more evidence Donald Trump is mentally unfit to serve"Such a mindset of false beliefs in freedom from consequences is extremely dangerous," Bandy X. Lee writes This article originally appeared on Raw Story Three psychiatrists have written an editorial for the Boston Globe warning that special counsel Robert Mueller's report on Russian interference in the 2016 presidential election shows more evidence that President Donald Trump is mentally unfit to hold office. The psychiatrists — Dr. Bandy X. Lee of Yale, Dr. Leonard L. Glass of Harvard Medical School, and Edwin B. Fisher of University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill — argue that Mueller's report provides a disturbing new window into the president's behavior, which is frequently marked by impulsive emotional meltdowns. "The pattern that emerges of the president is one of rash, short-sighted decision-making, without consideration of consequences," they write. "Reckless, impulsive moves that are self-destructive, despite the intention of self-protection, are characteristic of dangerous impairment. They impede Trump's capacity to prioritize national security." They then quote from sections of the Mueller report that illustrate these behaviors, including his efforts to dangle pardons to potential witnesses and his effort to get Mueller fired as special counsel. They say that his ordering former White House counsel Don McGahn to get rid of Mueller should be seen as especially alarming given how inherently self-destructive it was.

$21 TRILLION DOLLARS IS MISSING FROM THE US GOVERNMENT. <https://missingmoney.solari.com> <https://home.solari.com> $21 Trillion dollars is missing from the US government. That is $65,000 per person - as much as the national debt!

“No money shall be drawn from the treasury, but in consequence of appropriations made by law; and a regular statement and account of receipts and expenditures of all public money shall be published from time to time.*~ Article I, Section 9, Clause 7, U.S. Constitution

What's going on? Where is the money? How could this happen? How much has really gone missing? What would happen if a corporation failed to pass an audit like this? Or a taxpayer? This means the Fed and their member banks are transacting government money outside the law. So are the corporate contractors that run the payment systems. So are the Wall Street firms who are selling government securities without full disclosure. Would your banks continue to handle your bank account if you behaved like this? Would your investors continue to buy your securities if you behaved like this? Would your accountant be silent? This is the reason that there is such a strong push to change or tear up the US Constitution. This is why members of the establishment say it is "old," "outdated!" This is why there is such a push for gun control. Don't buy it! We can use the Constitution to get our money and our government back. It is time to enforce the US Constitution. The Solari Report has been covering the missing money since 2000 when Catherine Austin Fitts began to warn Americans and global investors about mortgage fraud at the US Department of Housing and Development (HUD), the engineering of the housing bubble that led to trillions more dollars in bailouts and funds missing from the US government starting in fiscal 1998.

Lee

writes This article originally appeared on Raw Story Three psychiatrists have written an editorial for the Boston Globe warning that special counsel Robert Mueller's report on Russian interference in the 2016 presidential election shows more evidence that President Donald Trump is mentally unfit to hold office. The psychiatrists — Dr. Bandy X. Lee of Yale, Dr. Leonard L. Glass of Harvard Medical School, and Edwin B. Fisher of University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill — argue that Mueller's report provides a disturbing new window into the president's behavior, which is frequently marked by impulsive emotional meltdowns. "The pattern that emerges of the president is one of rash, short-sighted decision-making, without consideration of consequences," they write. "Reckless, impulsive moves that are self-destructive, despite the intention of self-protection, are characteristic of dangerous impairment. They impede Trump's capacity to prioritize national security." They then quote from sections of the Mueller report that illustrate these behaviors, including his efforts to dangle pardons to potential witnesses and his effort to get Mueller fired as special counsel. They say that his ordering former White House counsel Don McGahn to get rid of Mueller should be seen as especially alarming given how inherently self-destructive it was.

Politics Reuters Trump has asserted executive privilege over entire Mueller report: Justice Dept official

Politics The Daily Beast Samantha Bee Mocks Trump's Billion Dollar Loss: 'The Best at Being Terrible' While President Donald Trump “claims to be the best business boy,” Samantha Bee told viewers Wednesday night that he’s really just the “best at being terrible.” The Full Frontal host was referring to the revelations from this week’s New York Times report that showed Trump lost more than a billion dollars between 1985 and 1994. As The Daily Beast’s David Cay Johnston explained on MSNBC, in one of those years Trump accounted for two cents of every dollar lost in the entire American economy. “I used to think Donald Trump’s fortunes took a dip in the early ‘90s recession,” Bee said. “Now I think maybe he was the early '90s recession." In response to the report, Trump has said that he intentionally lost the money, tweeting, "You always wanted to show losses for tax purposes" adding, "almost all real estate developers did." "But was Trump really just pretending to lose all that money?" Bee asked. "I call as my next witness, Ivanka Trump," she said, adding a comical gasp that hinted at her complicated past with the first daughter. The host cut to a clip from the 2003 documentary Born Rich in which Ivanka tells a story about her father pointing out a homeless man outside Trump Tower and saying, "'You know, that guy has 8 billion dollars more than me,' because he was in such extreme debt at that point." "And that is why it was OK for him to take that man's change cup," Bee joked. "Look, the only thing that Donald Trump really had going for him as a candidate was that he was supposed to be a great businessman. Now we know that not only is he a bad businessman, he is one of the worst in American history." To the Republican "party of fiscal responsibility," Bee asked, "Are you really going to choose this money pit over the Constitution?" Read more at The Daily Beast.

To those who said it can't happen here, just read these nationalistic, nonsensical pro-Trump comments; it is happening right before our eyes.

Susan Edelman Blank Carol Rzepny yes, Carol, many Germans did not fall in line with the Nazis, many joined the underground, others hid Jews, many tried in small ways to resist, and others kept silent and prayed for deliverance from evil. $21 TRILLION DOLLARS IS MISSING FROM THE US GOVERNMENT. <https://missingmoney.solari.com> <https://home.solari.com> $21 Trillion dollars is missing from the US government. That is $65,000 per person - as much as the national debt!

“No money shall be drawn from the treasury, but in consequence of appropriations made by law; and a regular statement and account of receipts and expenditures of all public money shall be published from time to time.”~ Article I, Section 9, Clause 7, U.S. Constitution

What's going on? Where is the money? How could this happen? How much has really gone missing? What would happen if a corporation failed to pass an audit like this? Or a taxpayer? This means the Fed and their member banks are transacting government money outside the law. So are the corporate contractors that run the payment systems. So are the Wall Street firms who are selling government securities without full disclosure. Would your banks continue to handle your bank account if you behaved like this? Would your investors continue to buy your securities if you behaved like this? Would your accountant be silent? This is the reason that there is such a strong push to change or tear up the US Constitution. This is why members of the establishment say it is "old," "outdated!" This is why there is such a push for gun control. Don't buy it! We can use the Constitution to get our money and our government back. It is time to enforce the US Constitution. The Solari Report has been covering the missing money since 2000 when Catherine Austin Fitts began to warn Americans and global investors about mortgage fraud at the US Department of Housing and Development (HUD), the engineering of the housing bubble that led to trillions more dollars in bailouts and funds missing from the US government starting in fiscal 1998.

Business MarketWatch Man credited with calling the 2008 crisis says the next 20 years in the stock market will 'break a lot of hearts' Jeremy Grantham, an investor credited with predicting the 2000 and 2008 downturns, told CNBC on Thursday that investors should get inured to lackluster returns in the stock market for the next two decades, after a century of handsome gains. "In the last 100 years, we're used to delivering perhaps 6%," but the U.S. market will be delivering real returns of about 2% or 3% on average over next 20 years, the value investor and co-founder of Boston-based asset manager GMO told CNBC in a rare interview. Over the past five years, the S&P 500 index (SPX) has produced a compound annual growth rate of 8.1%, the Dow Jones Industrial Average (DJIA) has boasted a CAGR of 9.1%, while the Nasdaq Composite Index (COMP) has registered a compound return of 11.4% over the same period, according to FactSet data.

The U.S. State Department allowed at least seven foreign governments to rent luxury condominiums in New York's Trump World Tower in 2017 without approval from Congress, according to documents and people familiar with the leases, a potential violation of the U.S. Constitution's emoluments clause. The 90-story Manhattan building, part of the real estate empire of Donald Trump, had housed diplomats and foreign officials before the property developer became president. The rental transactions, dating from the early months of Trump's presidency and first revealed by Reuters, could add to mounting scrutiny of his business dealings with foreign governments, which are now the subject of multiple lawsuits.

Sen. Feinstein Gets Trump's AG Barr To Admit Trump Is GUILTY During Congressional Testimony

'...Donnie Trump's Attorney General Bill Barr gave his first congressional testimony in the wake of the release of the Mueller report this morning and it revealed why Trump was in panic mode this morning. During her line of questioning, Senator Dianne Feinstein, ranking Democratic judiciary committee member, managed to get Barr to reveal the exact law Trump broke per the evidence in Mueller's report Feinstein simply described the evidence in Mueller's report that details Trump's efforts to get White House counsel Don Mcgahn to lie about Trump ordering him to fire Mueller. Feinstein then asked if it is illegal to try and get a witness to lie (duh), to which Barr answered, "Uh, yes." She then asked him to cite the exact law, to which Barr said, "The obstruction statutes." ...'

Analysis: 43 mind-boggling lines from Donald Trump's Wisconsin campaign rally

(CNN)President Donald Trump traveled to Wisconsin on Saturday night to rally his supporters, and -- pointedly -- to miss the annual White House Correspondents' Dinner, which he has yet to attend as President.

Trump, continuing a trend of late, made a slew of questionable claims, bashed the media and loudly proclaimed his rightness about, well, everything. I went through the transcript and picked out the most, uh, outstanding, lines from his Green Bay rally. They're below.

THE POINT -- NOW ON YOUTUBE!

In each episode of his weekly YouTube show, Chris Cillizza will delve a little deeper into the surreal world of politics. Click to subscribe!

1. "The strength of our nation is found in the heart of our people, so true." This is a very common Trump speech pattern. He reads a line from the teleprompter. And because he hasn't read the speech in advance, he responds by agreeing with his own words that he is seeing for the first time with a "so true." And away we go!

2. "We're going to get to the bottom of a lot of things happening in our country."

So true.

3. "And we're now the number one economy anywhere in the world and it's not even close."

This is, generally, true!

4. "By the way, Saturday night, is there anyplace that's more fun than a Trump rally?"

I might be able to think of one or two places. ...

5. "Can you imagine? Sleepy Joe? Crazy Bernie."

Why did Trump suddenly start talking about his potential 2020 opponents? Oh, I have no idea. But the crowd LOVED it.

6. "I think Pocahontas, she's finished, she's out. She's gone. No, when it was found that I had more Indian blood in me than she did."

Trump is referring to Massachusetts Sen. Elizabeth Warren with this taunt. And, yes, the crowd LOVED it.

7. "But can you imagine any of these people up here doing what I'm doing? They'd be 200 people show up if they were president. If they were president, nobody would show up."

It's fascinating that Trump understands the job of being president as getting lots of people to show up to rallies.

8. "The people that get it wrong the most are the weather forecasters and the political analysts."

He's not wrong!

9. "People are standing out 24 hours ago, 32 hours ago outside. Who stood out there for 24 hours?"

This comes from the Green Bay Press Gazette: "A line of supporters wound around the Resch Center; some people said they'd waited outside overnight." So true.

10. "We had 69,000 people sign up to come in. What does this place hold? Like 10,000 or 12,000 or whatever. Whatever it holds. We set the record." What record? Also, I have no idea how Trump came up with this 69,000 number. Here's how a local TV affiliate described the crowd: "This was a free event that anyone could attend, but Secret Service detail said only the first 10,000 people are being let into the center."

11. "I don't know what the hell it holds, but we just set the record." According to the internet, the Resch Center holds 10,500 people. But Trump has the record. Bigly.

12. "That's always dangerous. He said, 'Yes, it is, sir.' It's always dangerous. Yes. You ask like, 'No, sir.' I'm dead. They will take -- they will take that answer. That'll be headlines."

Let me translate this for you people who don't speak word salad: Trump brought the owner of the Resch Center onstage and asked if it was a record crowd. (Because that is very important to how he does his job.) The owner said it was a record. Trump was relieved because it would have been bad headlines if it was not a record.

13. "Now, this is the record. We set records everywhere."

It is VERY important for you to know that Donald Trump set a record. VERY.

14. "The greatest political hoax in American history, it really has been." For the record: The Mueller probe resulted in 199 charges against 37 people and entities. Seven people pleaded guilty to a variety of crimes while five were sentenced to prison. So, not really a "hoax."

15. "The USMCA like the song 'YMCA,' right?"

Ladies and gentlemen, the President of the United States!

16. "Can you believe I'm a politician? I can't even."

Honestly, same.

17. "You know, Canada, we love the song, 'Oh Canada.' Let's sing, 'Oh Canada,' right. We love the show."

WHAT. IS. HAPPENING. (And, no, there isn't much context to add here. He just started talking about Canada.)

18. "But who knows, I always say, 'Who knows?' Because who the hell knows?"

[nods head slowly]

19. "Don't forget, we are the piggy bank that everybody is robbing. We're the ones. We're the piggy bank that everybody is stealing from and robbing and taking advantage of."

USA! USA! USA!

20. "This I don't -- I tell you what, you know, people say, 'Oh, he wants to take over the country. He wants to extend.' "

I think Trump is ruling out changing the constitutional limit on a President serving two terms here. So there's that.

21. "You're right, USA. We love USA and that's right."

"I love lamp." -- Brick Tamland

22. "If you look at what's happened with the scum that's leaving the very top of government."

Just the President of the United States referring to top-level staff as "scum." Super normal stuff!!!

23. "The dirty -- these were dirty cops. These were dirty players."

Trump, presumably, is referring to longtime officials at the Department of Justice like James Comey and Robert Mueller.

24. "I mean we're draining the swamp, but are we having a good time or what?"

Who said you can't have fun draining the swamp? Not me!

25. "And look at all those beautiful red hats and some white ones. Some white. Look at that. Those are -- that's a lot of red hats. But you do have the white ones too, right?"

Red MAGA hats > White MAGA hats. But wait....

26. "And you have the black ones, too. You have a lot of them. You have a lot of different hats."

... there's more! SO MANY HATS. OF DIFFERING COLORS.

27. "It's called MAGA country. You know, I didn't hear that term until that third-rate actor in Chicago went out."

The President of the United States offers his thoughts on the Jussie Smollett case.

28. "Ronald Reagan used seldom Let's Make America Great. Close, but not the same. Let's -- apostrophe S. You don't want the apostrophe. It's too complicated. It doesn't work. But Ronald Reagan was good. He said let's make -- but he didn't use it. He used it a little bit. We seriously use it, right?"

OHMYGODOHMYGODOHMYGOD

29. "And MAGA we got for free. Because my whole deal was Make America Great Again, all of a sudden people are saying and going #MAGA."

30. "We have a massive television audience, do you ever see so many cameras? If somebody else were here, you'd have about like none." I've heard that this is a record crowd. So true.

31. "Because I have a couple of friends here. They're pretty wealthy people, very successful people. And you know what? The hell with them. I don't care."

Oh snap, Trump friends, you got dunked on! FACE!

32. "In Michigan, they gave me an award six years, seven years ago, I had no idea. It was the Man of the Year in Michigan."

There's no evidence Trump was ever named "Man of the Year" in Michigan.

33. "They will take your guns away, too, by the way."

Trump passes along this much-debunked notion that Democrats, if put in power, will collect all firearms in the country -- and no one bats an eye.

34. "Now we're sending many of them to sanctuary cities. Thank you very much. They're not too happy about it. I'm proud to tell you that was actually my sick idea."

There's zero evidence that the administration is shipping undocumented immigrants detained at the border to sanctuary cities. In fact, several administration officials have made clear that the policy is not only logistically untenable but also potentially illegal. But, hey, it was Trump's "sick idea"!

35. "To confront the border crisis, I declared a national emergency. The good news is everybody agrees."

36. "They are aggressively pushing extreme late-term abortion, allowing children to be ripped from their mother's womb."

Totally and completely false.

37. "The baby is born. The mother meets with the doctor. They take care of the baby. They wrap the baby beautifully. And then the doctor and the mother determine whether or not they will execute the baby."

Dangerously inaccurate.

38. "We've got a lot of young people out there. You want to know the truth? I actually think we have more than they do."

Hillary Clinton won voters aged 18-29 by 19 points in 2016.

39. "We're very close, $300 million for the Great Lakes Restoration Initiatives."

False!

40. "You know, a lot of times, if you're not going to brag about it, nobody else is, you might as well do it. True."

So true.

41. "And I have to say, every leader without fail that comes to see me in the Oval Office, they all say congratulations."

Every foreign leader who comes to see Trump tells him "congratulations." Every one. Absolutely. This is definitely, 100% true, I'm sure.

42. "With every last ounce of heart and hope and sweat, and so we are going to make our stand."

Speaking of making stands: Why the hell did Jon Snow approve a battle plan where he marched his forces outside of the walls of Winterfell to battle the army of the dead? Like, why not hang out inside the walls? Am I the only one who thinks this?

43. "Together with the great and proud people of Wisconsin, we will make America wealthy again."

[emoji with cash coming out of mouth] This feels like a good place to end.

Trump slams leaders of 'Dues Sucking firefighters' union after Biden endorsement [trump is so sick, so mentally ill! The question is, who has their backs? Only those as crazy as trump would say trump!]

Mark Steven Domingo, an Army veteran, was arrested Friday night after he took delivery of what he thought was a live bomb from an undercover law enforcement officer posing as a bomb-maker, authorities said. (FBI) A Reseda man planned to detonate improvised explosive devices at several Southern California locations to cause “mass casualties” in a terror plot thwarted by law enforcement officials, authorities said Monday.

Mark Steven Domingo, 26, an Army veteran, was arrested Friday night after he took delivery of what he thought was a live bomb from an undercover law enforcement officer posing as a bomb-maker, officials said. He was charged with attempting to provide material support to terrorists.

According to a federal affidavit, “after considering various attacks — including targeting Jews, churches, and police officers — Domingo decided to detonate an IED at a rally scheduled to take place in Long Beach this past weekend. As part of the plot, Domingo asked his confederate — who actually was cooperating with the FBI as part of the investigation — to find a bomb-maker, and Domingo last week purchased several hundred nails to be used as shrapnel inside the IED.

“Domingo said he specifically bought three-inch nails because they would be long enough to penetrate the human body and puncture internal organs,” the affidavit states.

Prosecutors said Domingo sought retribution for the New Zealand mosques attack and said he was willing to become a martyr.

“There must be retribution,” he said in an online post, according to the federal criminal complaint. He also allegedly expressed allegiance to the Islamic State.

“America needs another vegas event ...[to] give them a taste of the terror they gladly spread all over the world,” Domingo allegedly wrote in reference to the massacre at the Route 91 concert in October 2017.

The FBI saw the posts and used an informant to begin a series of meetings with Domingo. During these discussions, he talked about targeting “Jews, police officers, churches and a military facility,” authorities said. A law enforcement source told The Times he also considered an attack at the Santa Monica Pier.

Domingo talked about a drive-by shooting using an AK-47-style rifle, authorities allege. But officials say he ended up targeting rallies in Long Beach and Huntington Beach. Worried those events might be canceled, he also considered blowing up the Santa Monica Pier, documents show.

The terror plot was uncovered less than 48 hours after a gunman opened fire inside a San Diego County synagogue, killing one woman and wounding several others in what law enforcement officials are investigating as an anti-Semitic hate crime.

Southern California has been the scene of several terrorism plots and attacks, including one by a prison-based group that targeted the U.S. government and supporters of Israel.

In 2005, Kevin James founded Jam’iyyat Ul-Islam Is-Saheeh, or JIS, inside a California prison and led a conspiracy to attack Los Angeles International Airport, several Army recruiting centers and the Israeli Consulate in L.A. The group planned to stage attacks on political targets with the proceeds of gas station robberies, investigators said. Authorities said they learned of the potential plot when Torrance police investigating the robberies found lists of targets and other information at one suspect’s apartment in South Los Angeles.

Three years before that, a gunman killed two people at the busy LAX ticket counter of El Al Israel Airlines.

And in 2015, Syed Rizwan Farook and his wife, Tashfeen Malik, entered a holiday gathering for county employees at the Inland Regional Center in San Bernardino and, using rifles purchased by a friend, killed 14 people and injured 22 others.

Authorities said that Farook and a friend had plotted additional terror attacks targeting students at a nearby community college and drivers on the 91 Freeway.

Bartirromo.“This is the way you treat your friends? How do you treat your enemies?” the judge said while opening up the segment on Monday morning. "He wanted to divert attention from what Mueller had said about him and what I had commented about Mueller to his relationship with me. His relationship with me is not the story. He and I have been friends for 30 years and probably will be for the next 30 years." Still, Napolitano characterized Trump's attack on him as "brilliant." Also Read: Fox News' Andrew Napolitano Calls Out Jared Kushner for 'Deceptive' Effort to 'Diminish' Russian Interference

The segment with Bartiromo came after President Trump denounced Napolitano on Saturday, saying the judge had turned nasty because he wasn't appointed to the Supreme Court. "Thank you to brilliant and highly respected attorney Alan Dershowitz for destroying the very dumb legal argument of 'Judge' Andrew Napolitano," Trump tweeted after a Fox News segment. "Ever since Andrew came to my office to ask that I appoint him to the U.S. Supreme Court, and I said NO, he has been very hostile! Also asked for pardon for his friend. A good 'pal' of low ratings Shepard Smith." On set, the judge answered both charges - suggesting the president has mischaracterized the matter. Though Napolitano did confirm that he and Trump did have two separate 90 minute conversations in the immediate weeks after his 2016 election victory. A rep for Fox News did not offer any additional comment on the matter. Also Read: Fox News' Andrew Napolitano Says Mueller Report 'Might Be Enough to Prosecute' Trump

Once one of Trump's favorite Fox News personalities, Napolitano has increasingly raised eyebrows on set for his tough commentary on the president's legal woes. On his Fox News digital series, "Judge Napolitano's Chambers," the judge has bluntly called Trump's behavior documented in the Mueller Report as "criminal." "Prosecutors prosecute people who interfere with government functions and that's what the president did by obstruction, where is this going to end? I don't know, but I am disappointed in the behavior of the president," Napolitano said last week. "If he had ordered his aides to violate federal law to save a human life or to preserve human freedom, he would at least have a moral defense to his behavior," he added. "But ordering them to break federal law to save him from the consequences of his own behavior, that is immoral, that is criminal, that is defenseless, that is condemnable." Just days earlier, Napolitano said in a different monologue on the same program that it was his belief there was enough in the report to “prosecute” the president - even though the special counsel declined to do so. Read original story Andrew Napolitano Responds to Trump Twitter Attacks: ‘This Is the Way You Treat Your Friends’ At TheWrap

More than two-thirds of business owners surveyed by the bank said they had taken steps to prepare for an economic downturn, including setting cash aside or planning to reduce expenses. Of the 69 percent of owners who had started preparing for a recession, only 19 percent had opened a line of credit, a figure that Bank of America's head of small business Sharon Miller said was too low.

Trump has made 10,000 untrue claims as president, factcheckers say Donald Trump has made more than 10,000 false or misleading claims since he became president in January 2017, according to a count by factcheckers at the Washington Post. Trump's strike rate of “alternative facts” – a phrase made infamous by senior adviser Kellyanne Conway – has increased rapidly in recent months, the paper said on Monday. The distinct worsening of the problem coincided with the publication of special counsel Robert Mueller's report on Russian election interference, a partial government shutdown over border wall funding and a series of freewheeling campaign rallies during the midterm elections.

Politics National Review House Dem. Threatens Trump Officials with 'Incarceration' for Refusing to Honor Subpoenas Representative Gerry Connolly (D., Va.), a member of the House Oversight Committee, said Friday that the panel might resort to the threat of incarceration should Trump administration officials continue to ignore its numerous subpoena-backed requests for documents. “We're going to resist, and if a subpoena is issued and you're told you must testify, we will back that up,” Connolly told CNN's Wolf Blitzer. “And we will use any and all power in our command to make sure it's backed up - whether that's a contempt citation, whether that's going to court and getting that citation enforced, whether it's fines, whether it's possible incarceration. We will go to the max to enforce the constitutional role of the legislative branch of government."The president and his advisers have said explicitly that they will not yield to Democrats' demands that officials testify before the Oversight Committee regarding the issuance of security clearances, the formation of the so-called zero-tolerance immigration-enforcement policy, and other matters.White House adviser Stephen Miller, former security-clearance official Carl Kline, and John Gore, a deputy assistant attorney general in the Justice Department's Civil Rights Division, have thus far all refused to come before the panel.Connolly emphasized in particular the Committee's desire to hear from Miller, whom he called Trump's "immigration whisperer," regarding what measures the administration plans to take to harden the southern border in the wake of Secretary of Homeland Security Kierstjen Nielsen's departure."We want to hear from him: What is your thinking, what is it you've been advising the president, and where is it you think you're going to be taking us as a country with these kinds of policies and personnel changes?" Connolly said of Miller. [About time someone got tough with these mobsters; after all, trump's used to corrupt cowards who take dives.

Donald Trump is mentally unfit to serve"Such a mindset of false beliefs in freedom from consequences is extremely dangerous," Bandy X. Lee writes This article originally appeared on Raw Story Three psychiatrists have written an editorial for the Boston Globe warning that special counsel Robert Mueller's report on Russian interference in the 2016 presidential election shows more evidence that President Donald Trump is mentally unfit to hold office. The psychiatrists — Dr. Bandy X. Lee of

of University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill — argue that Mueller's report provides a disturbing new window into the president's behavior, which is frequently marked by impulsive emotional meltdowns. "The pattern that emerges of the president is one of rash, short-sighted decision-making, without consideration of consequences,” they write. “Reckless, impulsive moves that are self-destructive, despite the intention of self-protection, are characteristic of dangerous impairment. They impede Trump’s capacity to prioritize national security.” They then quote from sections of the Mueller report that illustrate these behaviors, including his efforts to dangle pardons to potential witnesses and his effort to get Mueller fired as special counsel. They say that his ordering former White House counsel Don McGahn to get rid of Mueller should be seen as especially alarming given how inherently self-destructive it was.

Politics Reuters Trump has asserted executive privilege over entire Mueller report: Justice Dept official

Politics The Daily Beast Samantha Bee Mocks Trump's Billion Dollar Loss: 'The Best at Being Terrible' While President Donald Trump “claims to be the best business boy,” Samantha Bee told viewers Wednesday night that he’s really just the “best at being terrible.” The Full Frontal host was referring to the revelations from this week’s New York Times report that showed Trump lost more than a billion dollars between 1985 and 1994. As The Daily Beast’s David Cay Johnston explained on MSNBC, in one of those years Trump accounted for two cents of every dollar lost in the entire American economy. “I used to think Donald Trump’s fortunes took a dip in the early ‘90s recession,” Bee said. “Now I think maybe he was the early ‘90s recession.” In response to the report, Trump has said that he intentionally lost the money, tweeting, “You always wanted to show losses for tax purposes” adding, “almost all real estate developers did.” “But was Trump really just pretending to lose all that money?” Bee asked. “I call as my next witness, Ivanka Trump,” she said, adding a comical gasp that hinted at her complicated past with the first daughter. The host cut to a clip from the 2003 documentary Born Rich in which Ivanka tells a story about her father pointing out a homeless man outside Trump Tower and saying, ““You know, that guy has 8 billion dollars more than me,’ because he was in such extreme debt at that point.” “And that is why it was OK for him to take that man’s change cup,” Bee joked. “Look, the only thing that Donald Trump really had going for him as a candidate was that he was supposed to be a great businessman. Now we know that not only is he a bad businessman, he is one of the worst in American history.” To the Republican “party of fiscal responsibility,” Bee asked, “Are you really going to choose this money pit over the Constitution?” Read more at The Daily Beast.

Business MarketWatch Man credited with calling the 2008 crisis says the next 20 years in the stock market will 'break a lot of hearts' Jeremy Grantham, an investor credited with predicting the 2000 and 2008 downturns, told CNBC on Thursday that investors should get inured to lackluster returns in the stock market for the next two decades, after a century of handsome gains. "In the last 100 years, we're used to delivering perhaps 6%," but the U.S. market will be delivering real returns of about 2% or 3% on average over next 20 years, the value investor and co-founder of Boston-based asset manager GMO told CNBC in a rare interview. Over the past five years, the S&P 500 index (SPX) has produced a compound annual growth rate of 8.1%, the Dow Jones Industrial Average (DJIA) has boasted a CAGR of 9.1%, while the Nasdaq Composite Index (COMP) has registered a compound return of 11.4% over the same period, according to FactSet data.

Cramer breaks down why you should prepare for more market pullback

U.S. Reuters

The U.S. State Department allowed at least seven foreign governments to rent luxury condominiums in New York's Trump World Tower in 2017 without approval from Congress, according to documents and people familiar with the leases, a potential violation of the U.S. Constitution's emoluments clause. The 90-story Manhattan building, part of the real estate empire of Donald Trump, had housed diplomats and foreign officials before the property developer became president. The rental transactions, dating from the early months of Trump's presidency and first revealed by Reuters, could add to mounting scrutiny of his business dealings with foreign governments, which are now the subject of multiple lawsuits.

' ...Donnie Trump's Attorney General Bill Barr gave his first congressional testimony in the wake of the release of the Mueller report this morning and it revealed why Trump was in panic mode this morning. During her line of questioning, Senator Dianne Feinstein, ranking Democratic judiciary committee member, managed to get Barr to reveal the exact law Trump broke per the evidence in Mueller's report Feinstein simply described the evidence in Mueller's report that details Trump's efforts to get White House counsel Don Mcgahn to lie about Trump ordering him to fire Mueller. Feinstein then asked if it is illegal to try and get a witness to lie (duh), to which Barr answered, "Uh, yes." She then asked him to cite the exact law, to which Barr said, "The obstruction statutes." ...'

(CNN)President Donald Trump traveled to Wisconsin on Saturday night to rally his supporters, and -- pointedly -- to miss the annual White House Correspondents' Dinner, which he has yet to attend as President.

Trump, continuing a trend of late, made a slew of questionable claims, bashed the media and loudly proclaimed his rightness about, well, everything. I went through the transcript and picked out the most, uh, outstanding, lines from his Green Bay rally. They're below.

THE POINT -- NOW ON YOUTUBE!

In each episode of his weekly YouTube show, Chris Cillizza will delve a little deeper into the surreal world of politics. Click to subscribe!

1. "The strength of our nation is found in the heart of our people, so true."

This is a very common Trump speech pattern. He reads a line from the teleprompter. And because he hasn't read the speech in advance, he responds by agreeing with his own words that he is seeing for the first time with a "so true." And away we go!

2. "We're going to get to the bottom of a lot of things happening in our country."

So true.

3. "And we're now the number one economy anywhere in the world and it's not even close."

This is, generally, true!

4. "By the way, Saturday night, is there anyplace that's more fun than a Trump rally?"

I might be able to think of one or two places. ...

5. "Can you imagine? Sleepy Joe? Crazy Bernie."

Why did Trump suddenly start talking about his potential 2020 opponents? Oh, I have no idea. But the crowd LOVED it.

6. "I think Pocahontas, she's finished, she's out. She's gone. No, when it was found that I had more Indian blood in me than she did."

Trump is referring to Massachusetts Sen. Elizabeth Warren with this taunt. And, yes, the crowd LOVED it.

7. "But can you imagine any of these people up here doing what I'm doing? They'd be 200 people show up if they were president. If they were president, nobody would show up."

It's fascinating that Trump understands the job of being president as getting lots of people to show up to rallies.

8. "The people that get it wrong the most are the weather forecasters and the political analysts."

He's not wrong!

9. "People are standing out 24 hours ago, 32 hours ago outside. Who stood out there for 24 hours?"

This comes from the Green Bay Press Gazette: "A line of supporters wound around the Resch Center; some people said they'd waited outside overnight." So true.

10. "We had 69,000 people sign up to come in. What does this place hold? Like 10,000 or 12,000 or whatever. Whatever it holds. We set the record." What record? Also, I have no idea how Trump came up with this 69,000 number. Here's how a local TV affiliate described the crowd: "This was a free event that anyone could attend, but Secret Service detail said only the first 10,000 people are being let into the center."

11. "I don't know what the hell it holds, but we just set the record." According to the internet, the Resch Center holds 10,500 people. But Trump has the record. Bigly.

12. "That's always dangerous. He said, 'Yes, it is, sir.' It's always dangerous. Yes. You ask like, 'No, sir.' I'm dead. They will take -- they will take that answer. That'll be headlines."

Let me translate this for you people who don't speak word salad: Trump brought the owner of the Resch Center onstage and asked if it was a record crowd. (Because that is very important to how he does his job.) The owner said it was a record. Trump was relieved because it would have been bad headlines if it was not a record.

13. "Now, this is the record. We set records everywhere."

It is VERY important for you to know that Donald Trump set a record. VERY.

14. "The greatest political hoax in American history, it really has been."

For the record: The Mueller probe resulted in 199 charges against 37 people and entities. Seven people pleaded guilty to a variety of crimes while five were sentenced to prison. So, not really a "hoax."

15. "The USMCA like the song 'YMCA,' right?"

Ladies and gentlemen, the President of the United States!

16. "Can you believe I'm a politician? I can't even."

Honestly, same.

17. "You know, Canada, we love the song, 'Oh Canada.' Let's sing, 'Oh Canada,' right. We love the show."

WHAT. IS. HAPPENING. (And, no, there isn't much context to add here. He just started talking about Canada.)

18. "But who knows, I always say, 'Who knows?' Because who the hell knows?"

[nods head slowly]

19. "Don't forget, we are the piggy bank that everybody is robbing. We're the ones. We're the piggy bank that everybody is stealing from and robbing and taking advantage of."

USA! USA! USA!

20. "This I don't -- I tell you what, you know, people say, 'Oh, he wants to take over the country. He wants to extend.' "

I think Trump is ruling out changing the constitutional limit on a President serving two terms here. So there's that.

21. "You're right, USA. We love USA and that's right."

"I love lamp." -- Brick Tamland

22. "If you look at what's happened with the scum that's leaving the very top of government."

Just the President of the United States referring to top-level staff as "scum." Super normal stuff!!!

23. "The dirty -- these were dirty cops. These were dirty players."

Trump, presumably, is referring to longtime officials at the Department of Justice like James Comey and Robert Mueller.

24. "I mean we're draining the swamp, but are we having a good time or what?"

Who said you can't have fun draining the swamp? Not me!

25. "And look at all those beautiful red hats and some white ones. Some white. Look at that. Those are -- that's a lot of red hats. But you do have the white ones too, right?"

Red MAGA hats > White MAGA hats. But wait....

26. "And you have the black ones, too. You have a lot of them. You have a lot of different hats."

... there's more! SO MANY HATS. OF DIFFERING COLORS.

27. "It's called MAGA country. You know, I didn't hear that term until that third-rate actor in Chicago went out."

The President of the United States offers his thoughts on the Jussie Smollett case.

28. "Ronald Reagan used seldom Let's Make America Great. Close, but not the same. Let's -- apostrophe S. You don't want the apostrophe. It's too complicated. It doesn't work. But Ronald Reagan was good. He said let's make -- but he didn't use it. He used it a little bit. We seriously use it, right?"

OHMYGODOHMYGODOHMYGOD

29. "And MAGA we got for free. Because my whole deal was Make America Great Again, all of a sudden people are saying and going #MAGA."

30. "We have a massive television audience, do you ever see so many cameras? If somebody else were here, you'd have about like none." I've heard that this is a record crowd. So true.

31. "Because I have a couple of friends here. They're pretty wealthy people, very successful people. And you know what? The hell with them. I don't care."

Oh snap, Trump friends, you got dunked on! FACE!

32. "In Michigan, they gave me an award six years, seven years ago, I had no idea. It was the Man of the Year in Michigan."

There's no evidence Trump was ever named "Man of the Year" in Michigan.

33. "They will take your guns away, too, by the way."

Trump passes along this much-debunked notion that Democrats, if put in power, will collect all firearms in the country -- and no one bats an eye.

34. "Now we're sending many of them to sanctuary cities. Thank you very much. They're not too happy about it. I'm proud to tell you that was actually my sick idea."

There's zero evidence that the administration is shipping undocumented immigrants detained at the border to sanctuary cities. In fact, several administration officials have made clear that the policy is not only logistically untenable but also potentially illegal. But, hey, it was Trump's "sick idea"!

35. "To confront the border crisis, I declared a national emergency. The good news is everybody agrees."

[narrator voice] They don't.

36. "They are aggressively pushing extreme late-term abortion, allowing children to be ripped from their mother's womb."

Totally and completely false.

37. "The baby is born. The mother meets with the doctor. They take care of the baby. They wrap the baby beautifully. And then the doctor and the mother determine whether or not they will execute the baby."

Dangerously inaccurate.

38. "We've got a lot of young people out there. You want to know the truth? I actually think we have more than they do."

Hillary Clinton won voters aged 18-29 by 19 points in 2016.

39. "We're very close, $300 million for the Great Lakes Restoration Initiatives."

False!

Mark Steven Domingo, an Army veteran, was arrested Friday night after he took delivery of what he thought was a live bomb from an undercover law enforcement officer posing as a bomb-maker, authorities said. (FBI)

A Reseda man planned to detonate improvised explosive devices at several Southern California locations to cause “mass casualties” in a terror plot thwarted by law enforcement officials, authorities said Monday.

Mark Steven Domingo, 26, an Army veteran, was arrested Friday night after he took delivery of what he thought was a live bomb from an undercover law enforcement officer posing as a bomb-maker, officials said. He was charged with attempting to provide material support to terrorists.

According to a federal affidavit, “after considering various attacks — including targeting Jews, churches, and police officers — Domingo decided to detonate an IED at a rally scheduled to take place in Long Beach this past weekend. As part of the plot, Domingo asked his confederate — who actually was cooperating with the FBI as part of the investigation — to find a bomb-maker, and Domingo last week purchased several hundred nails to be used as shrapnel inside the IED.

“Domingo said he specifically bought three-inch nails because they would be long enough to penetrate the human body and puncture internal organs,” the affidavit states.

Prosecutors said Domingo sought retribution for the New Zealand mosques attack and said he was willing to become a martyr.

“There must be retribution,” he said in an online post, according to the federal criminal complaint. He also allegedly expressed allegiance to the Islamic State.

“America needs another vegas event ...[to] give them a taste of the terror they gladly spread all over the world,” Domingo allegedly wrote in reference to the massacre at the Route 91 concert in October 2017.

The FBI saw the posts and used an informant to begin a series of meetings with Domingo. During these discussions, he talked about targeting “Jews, police officers, churches and a military facility,” authorities said. A law enforcement source told The Times he also considered an attack at the Santa Monica Pier.

Domingo talked about a drive-by shooting using an AK-47-style rifle, authorities allege. But officials say he ended up targeting rallies in Long Beach and Huntington Beach. Worried those events might be canceled, he also considered blowing up the Santa Monica Pier, documents show.

The terror plot was uncovered less than 48 hours after a gunman opened fire inside a San Diego County synagogue, killing one woman and wounding several others in what law enforcement officials are investigating as an anti-Semitic hate crime.

Southern California has been the scene of several terrorism plots and attacks, including one by a prison-based group that targeted the U.S. government and supporters of Israel.

In 2005, Kevin James founded Jam’iyyat Ul-Islam Is-Saheeh, or JIS, inside a California prison and led a conspiracy to attack Los Angeles International Airport, several Army recruiting centers and the Israeli Consulate in L.A. The group planned to stage attacks on political targets with the proceeds of gas station robberies, investigators said. Authorities said they learned of the potential plot when Torrance police investigating the robberies found lists of targets and other information at one suspect’s apartment in South Los Angeles.

Three years before that, a gunman killed two people at the busy LAX ticket counter of El Al Israel Airlines.

And in 2015, Syed Rizwan Farook and his wife, Tashfeen Malik, entered a holiday gathering for county employees at the Inland Regional Center in San Bernardino and, using rifles purchased by a friend, killed 14 people and injured 22 others.

Authorities said that Farook and a friend had plotted additional terror attacks targeting students at a nearby community college and drivers on the 91 Freeway.

Mueller complained to Barr that summary report mischaracterized his findings: report

Bartiromo. "This is the way you treat your friends? How do you treat your enemies?" the judge said while opening up the segment on Monday morning. "He wanted to divert attention from what Mueller had said about him and what I had commented about Mueller to his relationship with me. His relationship with me is not the story. He and I have been friends for 30 years and probably will be for the next 30 years." Still, Napolitano characterized Trump's attack on him as "brilliant." Also Read: Fox News' Andrew Napolitano Calls Out Jared Kushner for 'Deceptive' Effort to 'Diminish' Russian Interference

The segment with Bartiromo came after President Trump denounced Napolitano on Saturday, saying the judge had turned nasty because he wasn't appointed to the Supreme Court. "Thank you to brilliant and highly respected attorney Alan Dershowitz for destroying the very dumb legal argument of 'Judge' Andrew Napolitano," Trump tweeted after a Fox News segment. "Ever since Andrew came to my office to ask that I appoint him to the U.S. Supreme Court, and I said NO, he has been very hostile! Also asked for pardon for his friend. A good 'pal' of low ratings Shepard Smith." On set, the judge answered both charges - suggesting the president has mischaracterized the matter. Though Napolitano did confirm that he and Trump did have two separate 90 minute conversations in the immediate weeks after his 2016 election victory. A rep for Fox News did not offer any additional comment on the matter. Also Read: Fox News' Andrew Napolitano Says Mueller Report 'Might Be Enough to Prosecute' Trump

Once one of Trump's favorite Fox News personalities, Napolitano has increasingly raised eyebrows on set for his tough commentary on the president's legal woes. On his Fox News digital series, "Judge Napolitano's Chambers," the judge has bluntly called Trump's behavior documented in the Mueller Report as "criminal." "Prosecutors prosecute people who interfere with government functions and that's what the president did by obstruction, where is this going to end? I don't know, but I am disappointed in the behavior of the president," Napolitano said last week. "If he had ordered his aides to violate federal law to save a human life or to preserve human freedom, he would at least have a moral defense to his behavior," he added. "But ordering them to break federal law to save him from the consequences of his own behavior, that is immoral, that is criminal, that is defenseless, that is condemnable." Just days earlier, Napolitano said in a different monologue on the same program that it was his belief there was enough in the report to "prosecute" the president - even though the special counsel declined to do so. Threatens Trump Officials with 'Incarceration' for Refusing to Honor Subpoenas](#) Representative Gerry Connolly (D., Va.), a member of the House Oversight Committee, said Friday that the panel might resort to the threat of incarceration should Trump administration officials continue to ignore its numerous subpoena-backed requests for documents. "We're going to resist, and if a subpoena is issued and you're told you must testify, we will back that up," Connolly told CNN's Wolf Blitzer. "And we will use any and all power in our command to make sure it's backed up - whether that's a contempt citation, whether that's going to court and getting that citation enforced, whether it's fines, whether it's possible incarceration. We will go to the max to enforce the constitutional role of the legislative branch of government." The president and his advisers have said explicitly that they will not yield to Democrats' demands that officials testify before the Oversight Committee regarding the issuance of security clearances, the formation of the so-called zero-tolerance immigration-enforcement policy, and other matters. White House adviser Stephen Miller, former security-clearance official Carl Kline, and John Gore, a deputy assistant attorney general in the Justice Department's Civil Rights Division, have thus far all refused to come before the panel. Connolly emphasized in particular the Committee's desire to hear from Miller, whom he called Trump's "immigration whisperer," regarding what measures the administration plans to take to harden the southern border in the wake of Secretary of Homeland Security Kierstjen Nielsen's departure. "We want to hear from him: What is your thinking, what is it you've been advising the president, and where is it you think you're going to be taking us as a country with these kinds of policies and personnel changes?" Connolly said of Miller. [About time someone got tough with these mobsters; after all, trump's used to corrupt cowards who take dives.]

Lifestyle What Does Catnip Do to Cats? Isabelle Tavares, Reader's Digest

Ever wondered why your kitty goes crazy for catnip? Here's what the herb really does to your feline friends.

An interesting phenomenon is seeing cats go off-their-scratcher for catnip, which is an herb. Who knew that by sniffing or eating this plant that it would make cats act in interesting ways. For our entertainment or not, catnip has proven benefits for felines—but that still leaves us with the question, what does catnip do to cats?

Where did catnip come from?

Nepeta cataria, the scientific name for catnip, is an herb in the mint family. Indigenous to Europe, it was transplanted to North America during European settlement. But, catnip isn't the only herb known to get cats to boogie. A study suggests that valerian root, silver vine, and Tatarian honeysuckle can also make cats behave similarly to catnip. These alternative herbs are safe, but here are 12 dangerous mistakes cat owners should never make.

So, what does catnip do to cats?

Cats are receptive to a volatile oil (an oil that evaporates in the air) found in the stems and leaves of the catnip herb. When cats get a whiff of catnip, they behave similarly to female cats in heat—erratic movements, strange howls, and all. This out-of-fur experience is due to the active ingredient in the oil, nepetalactone. It binds to receptors inside the cat's nose and drives its sensory neurons crazy, according to Daniel Rotman, CEO of Pretty Litter.

However, when a cat eats the herb, it has a calming effect. "If the catnip is ingested, it causes fatigue and works as a sedative. For cats that sniff catnip and rub against the plants, they'll get more of the stimulating effects," Rotman said. "Both smelling and ingesting catnip is safe for your feline family member."

Catnip's effects have a ticking clock—about five to 30 minutes, Rotman said. This is all dependent on the cat because only two-thirds of adult cats are affected by catnip, according to a study. "About 50 percent of cats seem to be affected by catnip, and the behavior that results varies widely between individuals," Rotman said. "[This] is an inherited sensitivity and it doesn't show up immediately. Instead, it will take a few months since young kittens are not affected."

What are the benefits?

Under-stimulated house cats could do well to escape their bland surroundings. Cats are born to move—here's how you can even train a cat. Their razor-sharp instincts need to be housed in an equally stimulating home, studies show. If not, this leads to aggressive, depressed, or anxious behavior in cats.

Although using catnip may seem like a drug, Rotman confirmed that it's not addictive for cats. He did mention that catnip sometimes makes cats aggressive, though. "If you have a multi-cat household, it's recommended to introduce catnip to each cat individually to avoid any potential fighting," Rotman said. Now that you know how catnip affects your feline friend, you'll want to decode the rest of your kitty's behavior too.

But standing together, we can stop the Trump agenda and work towards a brighter future for America. Can you contribute $5 to take back the House this fall? (It'll be Triple-Matched).

Albert, we MUST win the House in November.

We've got tremendous momentum already. Every day, more people join our movement to fight back against the intolerance, discrimination, and injustice of the Trump Administration.

It's crucial that we keep it up through Election Day.

2018 is our chance to put our grassroots energy to the test. It's our chance to reclaim the House and restore the people's voice in our politics.

That's why it's CRITICAL we stand with Democrats Joe Radinovich (Minnesota), Anthony Brindisi (New York), and Lauren Baer (Florida). Please chip in now

$21 TRILLION DOLLARS IS MISSING FROM THE US GOVERNMENT.

<https://missingmoney.solari.com> <https://home.solari.com> $21 Trillion dollars is missing from the US government. That is $65,000 per person - as much as the national debt!

“No money shall be drawn from the treasury, but in consequence of appropriations made by law; and a regular statement and account of receipts and expenditures of all public money shall be published from time to time.” ~ Article I, Section 9, Clause 7, U.S. Constitution

What's going on? Where is the money? How could this happen? How much has really gone missing? What would happen if a corporation failed to pass an audit like this? Or a taxpayer? This means the Fed and their member banks are transacting government money outside the law. So are the corporate contractors that run the payment systems. So are the Wall Street firms who are selling government securities without full disclosure. Would your banks continue to handle your bank account if you behaved like this? Would your investors continue to buy your securities if you behaved like this? Would your accountant be silent? This is the reason that there is such a strong push to change or tear up the US Constitution. This is why members of the establishment say it is "old," "outdated!" This is why there is such a push for gun control. Don't buy it! We can use the Constitution to get our money and our government back. It is time to enforce the US Constitution. The Solari Report has been covering the missing money since 2000 when Catherine Austin Fitts began to warn Americans and global investors about mortgage fraud at the US Department of Housing and Development (HUD), the engineering of the housing bubble that led to trillions more dollars in bailouts and funds missing from the US government starting in fiscal 1998.

FORGET ABOUT 'CATS' AND CHECK OUT ONE OF THESE CAT CAFES INSTEAD

With the "Cats" movie trailer horrifying the internet, it's safe to say our beloved felines are trending yet again.

German philosopher Albert Schweitzer reportedly once said: "The only escape from the miseries of life is music and cats." But if seeing the live action adaptation of the Andrew Lloyd Webber musical doesn't sound like a welcome escape, might we suggest a cat cafe visit?

Started in Taiwan over 20 years ago with a cafe called Cat Flower Garden (now called Café Dogs & Cats), the concept was most enthusiastically embraced in Japan. Today, there are more cat cafes in Japan than anywhere else in the world -- around 150 at the last count.

Since the 1998 opening of the first cat cafe, there's been a storm of cat cafe opening around the world. You could say the concept is cat-ching on. The United States has more than 125 cat cafes, and some of them serve more than coffee and cat cuddles.

There are now a slew of cat cafes in London, including one where guests can partake in high tea with the furry creatures. For about $33 per person, Lady Dinah's offers a 90-minute package involving cakes, scones, two drinks and, of course, quality time with the cats.

Cat cafes offering purr-fect coffee breaks exist all over Europe now as well, and India's first cat cafe has been open for nearly five years.

Australia, Colombia and South Africa have all embraced this particular cat life as well.

Anita Loughran, owner of Cat Cafe Melbourne, was so inspired by a trip to Japan that it was the motivation for the Melbourne cafe, which opened in 2014. "It's a place where animal and cat lovers can mingle, socialize and be comfortable in a quiet environment that reflects their interests," Loughran says.

Politics The Independent US deficit to hit record high, surpassing \$1 trillion in 2019 The US deficit is projected to surpass $1tn in 2019, the largest it's been outside of the four-year period following the Great Recession. The new record, previously expected but made official in the White House Office of Management and Budget's newly released mid-year review, subtitled "Promises Kept, Taxpayers First," is in direct contrast with Donald Trump's 2016 campaign promise to wipe out the deficit. The then-candidate also promised to heavily scale back the federal debt, which has now exceeded $22tn. His own advisers knew that both promises were impossible, and they morphed into smaller numbers along the trail. Now, while running the country while simultaneously running for president, the president simply maintains that the economy is "perhaps the greatest economy we've had in the history of our country." This claim is often cited in conjunction with the Trump administration's many tax cuts for the wealthy. "The years when we increased deficits are years when the economy is slowing down," Gary Cohn, a previous director of the National Economic Council, told CNBC last year. But Republicans have maintained that the 2017 tax reform law, and many losses to federal regulations to support economic equality, would stimulate the economy. Last week, Larry Kudlow, the top White House economic adviser, said we have already “virtually paid for” the tax cuts. He also claimed last June that the deficit “is coming down rapidly.” It was not. Still, the deficit increase wasn’t unexpected. Deficits rose after tax cuts Ronald Reagan and George W. Bush, both Republicans. Economic forecasters on both sides projected the pattern would repeat with the Trump iteration. The new estimate confirms that they were right. <https://www.usdebtclock.org>

Business MarketWatch Warning: The stock market could be about to drop through this ‘trapdoor’ Back in 2007, when Wall Street was careening toward the financial crisis, the S&P 500 split from the consumer discretionary-to-consumer staples ratio, in a sign that appetite for risk was drying up even as the broader market pushed higher. Now, as Jesse Felder points out this week on the Felder Report blog, we’re seeing the rare divergence pop up once again, which should have investors at least rethinking their approach to this aging bull market. This chart, highlighted in our Need to Know column, lays out the troubling action Felder says could open the “trapdoor to lower stock prices.

Lawyers For Cesar Sayoc Say Trump's Rhetoric Inspired Terrorist Plot On Democrats

U.S.The Daily Beast Rudy Giuliani, Estranged Wife Argue in Court Over His Free Trump Legal Work REUTERS

Rudy Giuliani is providing gratis legal work for President Donald Trump to shortchange estranged wife Judith Nathan Giuliani, her lawyer said Thursday during a proceeding in their increasingly acrimonious divorce. “Not only is he working pro bono for the president, for this individual, but it’s costing him money,” said Bernard Clair, who represents Judith. “Not only does he work for free, but all of his expenses, every time he goes down to Washington, D.C., every time he travels for the president... it comes out of his own pocket.” “When he’s going to work for the president, he bundles, for lack of a better word, clients from his other businesses” to defray these costs, including a recent trip to Warsaw, Poland, Clair said. Clair said Giuliani’s work for Trump is meant to lead the court to “believe he somehow doesn’t have money.” The lawyer added that Giuliani spent “over one million on credit cards” but “says ‘woe is me’ financially... ‘I don’t have any money left.’” Giuliani borrowed $100,000 from Marc Mukasey, another one of Trump’s lawyers, Clair said.

Judge: Rudy Giuliani, Estranged Wife Can’t Be in Same Room at Country Clubs Judith filed for divorce from the former New York City mayor in April 2018, after 15 years of marriage. Allegations that Giuliani has been holding out on her have been an ongoing theme of the divorce proceedings. Clair alleged in court in November that Giuliani cried poor after she served him divorce papers. Not only did he leave a cushy white-shoe law firm gig and start no-fee legal work for Trump, he spent $286,000 on his rumored girlfriend, a New Hampshire hospital administrator named Maria Rosa Ryan, Clair had said. “Mr. Giuliani has taken it upon himself to radically change the financial status quo that existed prior to this action,” Clair had told Justice Michael Katz, calling it “conduct that can only be characterized as SIDS... sudden income deficit syndrome.” In the proceeding last fall, Clair claimed that Giuliani earned $7.9 million in 2016 and $9.5 million in 2017. Giuliani and Judith’s monthly expenses were about $232,000 and $238,000, respectively, Clair had also said.

Faith Miller, a lawyer representing Giuliani, insisted the ex-mayor has been trying to find other sources of income, including a podcast. He has taken in more than $800,000 this year but it’s not enough to support their lifestyle, Miller said in this morning’s proceedings. Miller said that Giuliani was paying Judith monthly support payments of $42,000. “Mrs. Giuliani would have Mr. Giuliani work forever to support her lifestyle,” Miller said, noting that Judith is a registered nurse but refuses to work. “There’s absolutely no reason he should feel financial pressure at this stage of his life.” Clair alleged that Giuliani spent $50,000 for membership to a private plane service 10 days after Judith hit him with divorce papers. Miller, meanwhile, accused Judith of taking “everything that she in her own personal opinion was hers” from one of their homes, including “the china, silverware, the pictures off the walls.”“He walked in, the place was denuded, the place was a mess,” Miller said. “I did not! I did not,” Judith cried out, slapping her hand against the table.“I’m not going to tolerate an outburst,” Judge Katz warned. Miller also claimed that Judith had neglected to pay $77,000 in co-op fees at one of their homes, resulting in a “termination notice” by Giuliani’s return in May. The furniture and co-op fee allegations are among many petty squabbles in their made-for-tabloid split. In March, Katz told them not to be in the same room if they ran into each other at country clubs. Millionaire Rudy Giuliani Cries Poor in Divorce Court After Spending Big on Alleged Mistress“There was an issue at one of the clubs last week,” Lisa Zeiderman, one of Giuliani’s attorneys, previously told Katz. “We’re going to ask that Ms. Giuliani just keep her distance from Mr. Giuliani when they’re at clubs together and their children, as well, and not take photographs, because that’s what was happening last weekend, I’m advised, at one of the clubs.”“He just wants to be left alone,” Zeiderman had said. One of Judith’s lawyers had responded that Giuliani was just embarrassed to be spotted spending money on his purported girlfriend’s daughter. (Giuliani denied this after that hearing.) Clair had told Katz that “she went into the gift shop at the club. She saw Mr. Giuliani. He got anxious and yelled at her.”“I am tired of hearing about Mr. Giuliani’s personal life,” Katz had remarked, later saying, “Whoever is in the room first is allowed to stay in the room.”The second person who enters the room can go to another room “and vice versa,” Katz had instructed. Based on comments outside court, it does not appear that the drama will end prior to their scheduled divorce trial in Jan. 2020. Giuliani, whose hair appeared darker than in the recent past, was affable as he left court, chatting with a photographer about the ins-and-outs of high-end cameras. When asked about the loan to Mukasey, he said it was to cover taxes and that he had paid back $90,000. He told a reporter that while Trump’s tax cuts worked out “really well” for him, but that “my wife has tied up all my money” in a joint account with $5 million. Judith, who sported a blue blouse with roses on it and white pants, denied allegations that she cleaned out their decor. “I was entitled to my family antiques,” she told reporters, claiming Rudy had kept her heirloom Christmas decorations. YOU WILL NEVER GET THE TRUTH OUT OF A NARCISSIST 6 Obvious Signs You're Dealing With A Narcissist (as trump)

If you've ever had the misfortune of being wrapped up with a narcissist, then you already know what one of these horrible human beings are capable of. Since there is no concern for anyone else but themselves, they can prove to be some of the most toxic people that you could ever associate yourself with, especially when it comes to being in love with one of them. Narcissists see others as pawns, essentially. You are able to carry out there demands, not really thinking twice about them and always letting them have their way. If you aren't sure or know someone who might be dealing with a narcissist, you will want to look at these six warning signs the next time you see them.

1. Always Using Others To Their Advantage

Narcissists are always taking advantage of the others around them. Mentioned before, everyone essentially a piece of their master plan which involves getting exactly what they want no matter who gets in their way. The thing with a narcissist is that they will find new and inventive ways to manipulate you, your friends, and anyone else who decides to be apart of that persons life. There really is no other way to avoid this kind of behavior because they do it to literally anyone that wants to communicate. They see this as a weakness and prey upon those willing to give their help to just about anyone.

2. Always In Need Of Praise

Another thing that you will notice about a narcissist is that they are always needing constant approval from everyone. If there is even one person who defies them this praise they will act out in a temper tantrum to the likes that no one has ever seen before. You may think that this is an over exaggeration but I promise you it's not. Narcissists thrive off of attention which is one of the reasons why they keep you and everyone around for so long is because they need that validation. You may think that they could get anyone to do that, yes they could, but if you aren't doing it then you will witness what it's like to get on their bad side.

3. Extremely Arrogant With Everything

Narcissists are prone to being arrogant especially when you are trying to confront them on the things that are hurting those around them. They will consider this a personal attack from you and decide that you are doubting them at every turn, that you've never supported them or their ideas, and that you are the worst person on the planet. Again, you may think that this is an over exaggeration but this is truly how a narcissist feels whenever someone defies their wishes. These people will always prove to be toxic in the end.

4. Obviously Jealous

Narcissists do not hesitate with their jealousy and will proudly display it whenever they see something they don't have. They are the most envious whenever they see someone who is essentially better than they are and will act out in every single possible way to deprive that person of praise or attention. All of this seems like a bit much for one individual to carry out but it's true. A narcissist absolutely hates it whenever they find someone or something that is just far beyond their league and they know it's going to drive them crazy thinking about how much that specific thing is going to gain that much more attention than them.

5. Having Feelings Is Your Fault

Whenever you decide that you want to confront them about all of the things they've done wrong to you or someone else they will simply brush

it off. If you give them any kind of emotion or any kind of feeling that goes against what they want they will just tell you that it's your fault for feeling that way. A narcissist has no empathy or sympathy for the people around them and it will clear as day when that happens to you. You may think that this person couldn't possibly say such horrible things to you but with a narcissist it comes naturally.

6. Over Exaggerate Their Accomplishments

Above all else a narcissist will always boast about themselves as if they were the crown jewels. A narcissist will not let down any opportune moment for them to speak highly of themselves to others. Again, it's all about that false validation, they will do absolutely everything and anything to obtain it. This is one of the biggest indications that you are dealing with a narcissist right off the bat. Especially if you are meeting this person for the first time ever. Since you are a clean slate this means that they can talk about every false little achievement they've made in their life up until this point. If you're lucky you might even get a chance to speak. So, the next time you think you or someone you might know is dealing with a narcissist, try to keep these six things in mind. They will make themselves very obvious and you will know the truth sooner rather than later. Jim Rogers: Get Ready for the Next Bear Market; 'It's Going to Be Terrible'

Rogers Holdings Chair and legendary investor Jim Rogers is back with his latest warning that the next bear market is going to be "horrible, compounded by too much debt and a trade war." The U.S. stock market is still in the midst of the longest bull market run in history, but that run will be short-lived from here on out, Rogers warned in a recent interview with Kitco News.

"Later, this year or next year when the economies around the world are getting bad, Mr. Trump is going to blame everything on the foreigners, the Chinese, the Germans, the Japanese, everybody, and then the trade war will come back and then it's all over,"

Rogers said. Rogers added that trade war tensions could continue to rise — and a new fight is brewing with France — and Trump will continue to push forward because he desperately wants a win on this front due to how easy he's said trade wars are to win, dubbing himself a "Tariff Man." "Mr. Trump is going to come back. Mr. Trump believes in his soul and his brain that trade wars are good and that he can win trade wars," he said. "Mr. Trump knows that he is smarter than everybody else so he knows that he can win a trade war, and it will come back strong. When the American economy gets bad eventually, he's going to blame it on trade and the trade war and it's going to be terrible."

Official Trump Impeachment Petition Trump is a DANGER to our nation. But we'll never impeach him without a wave of support from across the country.

MARKETWATCH

BARRONS The Dow Hit a New High. Let’s Talk About a Recession.

Updated July 1, 2019

Stocks were hitting news highs after U.S. President Donald Trump and Chinese President Xi Jinping agreed to a trade cease-fire. Unfortunately, the agreement might have come too late to keep the U.S. from slipping into recession. Yes, the Dow Jones Industrial Average just traded at a new high. So did the S&P 500. But there were other data points Monday that point in the opposite direction. The ISM manufacturing index fell to 51.7 in June. While that wasn’t as low as feared or below the 50-level that would indicate slowing industrial activity, it was still the weakest reading since 2016. The forward-looking new-orders component, however, fell to

50. “Overall, this report is probably not enough to move the needle much in either direction on Fed rate cuts,” according to a report from research firm Capital Economics. “But with global demand set to remain subdued, and the tariff truce agreed at the G20 summit likely to prove temporary, we expect U.S. manufacturing activity to remain weak in the second half of this year.” Weak, obviously, is different than slowing. Yet any time the economy slows, there is a risk of recession, which is one reason the difference between the yields on the 10-year Treasury and the three-month bill has turned negative. That is known as a yield-curve inversion, and research has shown that if it lasts long enough, it is a reliable predictor of a recession. The Cleveland Fed recession model, which is based on that yield curve, is predicting a 37.8% chance of a slowdown in one year. A similar model from the New York Fed only shows a 29.6% chance, but that’s not necessarily good news. Since 1960, any reading over 30% has led to a recession, according to Lisa Shalett, chief investment officer at Morgan Stanley Wealth Management. “The upshot is the New York Fed Probability of Recession in 12 Months Ahead, a model that uses leading indicators and economic variables that tend to move before changes in the economy, has neared the 30% threshold that has reliably predicted past economic downturns,” she writes. “With the deterioration in the June data, we think the model’s next report will show the economy continued to weaken.” Read more: Don’t Get Too Excited About This Trade War Truce The market doesn’t seem too sure of itself, either. The major indexes were up more than 1% in early trading, but despite hitting new highs, the Dow and the S&P 500 gave back some of those gains. Let’s just say that kind of weakness after such a strong opening isn’t the type of trading that builds confidence in further gains.

Donald Trump Says Continental Army 'Took Over The Airports' In The Revolutionary War | NBC News video_youtube NBC News

Politics The Independent Why Trump's bizarre airport claim may have been his gaffe correction strategy backfiring at the most embarrassing moment 'Donald Trump's surprising claim that George Washington's revolutionary troops "took over the airports" during the War of Independence could be explained by his method of correcting himself when he misreads his autocue - doubling down and trying to incorporate the mistake into his speech. His bizarre ad lib, suggesting there were airports to seize more than 100 years before the first successful flight, came moments after he seemed to stumble over a phrase in his speech. Describing how Washington's patriots defeated the British between 1775 and 1783, the president told crowds gathered to hear his Fourth of July address: "Our army manned the air." At that point he paused briefly, apparently realising he had misspoken, before continuing: "It rammed the ramparts, it took over the airports, it did everything it had to do ..." Seemingly thrown by the mistakes, he then alluded to Fort McHenry, a Maryland stronghold best known for its role in a completely different conflict - the 1812 war with Britain...'

IVANKA TRUMP ACCUSED OF SKIMMING MILLIONS FROM THE TRUMP INAUGURAL COMMITTEE

Posted on June 19, 2019 by Andrew Bradford

In February, prosecutors with the Southern District of New York (SDNY) opened up a new front in the investigation of criminal acts by the Trump 2016 campaign and the president himself, sending a sweeping subpoena to the Trump inaugural committee that includes charges of money laundering and fraud. The subpoena reads like something that would normally be served on a mafia boss.

But there was especially bad news in that subpoena for Ivanka Trump, who currently works as a White House adviser and is reportedly her daddy's favorite child.

ProPublica has learned that one of the main points of interest for SDNY prosecutors is the rate charged by Trump properties for renting space for the inaugural:

“A spokesman confirmed that the nonprofit 58th Presidential Inaugural Committee paid the Trump International Hotel a rate of $175,000 per day for event space — in spite of internal objections at the time that the rate was far too high. If the committee is deemed by auditors or prosecutors to have paid an above-market rate, that could violate tax laws prohibiting self-dealing, according to experts.”

Who negotiated the contracts and set the rates with the inaugural committee? None other than Ivanka Trump, as ProPublica first reported back in December:

“During the planning, Ivanka Trump, the president-elect’s eldest daughter and a senior executive with the Trump Organization, was involved in negotiating the price the hotel charged the 58th Presidential Inaugural Committee for venue rentals.”

That kind of inside dealing is also referred to as skimming.

Brett Kappel, an attorney at Akerman LLP who advises nonprofits, noted that it appears tax laws were violated by Ivanka Trump and others inside the inaugural committee:

“Tax law bars nonprofits such as the inaugural committee from insider deals that would unduly benefit people — in this case the Trump family — that have influence over the nonprofit, Kappel said. In legal parlance, these are known as excess benefit transactions. A key question would be whether the Trump hotel charged the inaugural committee above-market rates, which could violate tax rules, Kappel said. If an IRS audit found such a civil violation, the inaugural committee would have to pay taxes on the amount of money it overpaid.

“It could become a criminal violation, Kappel said, if investigators uncover evidence that people knew that charging above-market rates to enrich the Trump Organization was illegal and did it anyway.”

It appears that Ivanka’s willingness to help her father engage in grifting on a massive scale now has her at the center of a scandal that could well lead to her being charged with tax violations and financial fraud.

The Mueller Report, the video says, contains damning evidence against Trump and points that he colluded with the Russians, multiple times in order to influence the presidential campaign in 2016. They said that they felt the need to make the video because "virtually no one has read it". Stars including Robert De Niro, Rosie Perez, Martin Sheen, Sophia Bush, Stephen King, Laurence Fishburne, George Takei, Jonathan Van Ness, and Rob Reiner broke down the report in a video made for NowThis, published on Thursday, June 20. The five-and-a-half minute long video starts with DeNiro saying, "In 2016 the Russian government attacked our democracy" following which Sheen says that Russia "interfered in the presidential election in a sweeping and systematic fashion."

Jerry Falwell Jr. defied expectations when he supported Donald J. Trump in 2016. Now details are emerging about behind-the-scenes maneuvering before the endorsement.

Evangelicals spent thousands of years warning
about the Antichrist.
Then, when he shows up,
they elect him president.

OCCUPY DEMOCRATS

MIAMI BEACH — Senator Ted Cruz was running neck and neck with Donald J. Trump in Iowa just before the caucuses in 2016, but his campaign was expecting a last-minute boost from a powerful endorser, Jerry Falwell Jr. Mr. Falwell was chancellor of one of the nation's largest Christian colleges, Liberty University, and a son of the Rev. Jerry Falwell Sr., the televangelist and co-founder of the modern religious right. Months earlier, Mr. Falwell had provided Liberty's basketball arena for Mr. Cruz's formal presidential announcement and required that the student body attend, giving the Texas Republican a guaranteed audience of thousands of cheering young religious conservatives. With the caucuses now fast approaching, the senator's father, Rafael Cruz, an evangelical pastor who had taken the lead in wooing Mr. Falwell, alerted the campaign that Mr. Falwell had pledged to endorse his son. But when the time came for an announcement, Mr. Falwell rocked the Cruz campaign and grabbed the attention of the entire political world. He endorsed Mr. Trump instead, becoming one of the first major evangelical leaders to get behind the thrice-married, insult-hurling real estate mogul's long-odds presidential bid. Mr. Falwell — who is not a minister and spent years as a lawyer and real estate developer — said his endorsement was based on Mr. Trump's business experience and leadership qualities. A person close to Mr. Falwell said he made his decision after "consultation with other individuals whose opinions he respects." But a far more complicated narrative is emerging about the behind-the-scenes maneuvering in the months before that important endorsement. That backstory, in true Trump-tabloid fashion, features the friendship between Mr. Falwell, his wife and a former pool attendant at the Fontainebleau hotel in Miami Beach; the family's investment in a gay-friendly youth hostel; purported sexually revealing photographs involving the Falwells; and an attempted hush-money arrangement engineered by the president's former fixer, Michael Cohen. The revelations have arisen from a lawsuit filed against the Falwells in Florida; the investigation into Mr. Cohen by federal prosecutors in New York; and the gonzo-style tactics of the comedian and actor Tom Arnold. Over the last two years, Mr. Arnold has fashioned himself an anti-Trump sleuth and crusader, working to dig up evidence of past malfeasance on television and in social media. In that role, Mr. Arnold befriended Mr. Cohen — who had lately become a vivid, if not entirely reliable, narrator of the Trump phenomenon — and then surreptitiously recorded him describing his effort to buy and bury embarrassing photographs involving the Falwells. Credit John Moore/Getty Images That attempt, Mr. Cohen says on the recording, came months before he brought Mr. Falwell “to the table” for Mr. Trump. Until then, he adds, “none of the evangelicals wanted to support Trump.” There is no evidence that Mr. Falwell’s endorsement was part of a quid pro quo arranged by Mr. Cohen. Indeed, the relationship, if any, between the endorsement and the photo episode remains unclear. But the new details — some of which have been reported by news outlets including BuzzFeed and Reuters over the last year — show how deeply Mr. Falwell was enmeshed in Mr. Cohen’s and Mr. Trump’s world. And they add another layer to one of the enduring curiosities of the Trump era: the support the president has received from evangelical Christians, who have traditionally demanded that their political leaders exhibit “family values” and moral “character.” Mr. Falwell’s father forged those words into weapons against the Democrats after he co-founded the Moral Majority political movement, which propelled Ronald Reagan into the White House and made religious conservatives a vital constituency for any Republican who would be president. By the time Republicans cast their first votes in 2016, Mr. Trump was starting to show surprising strength among some white evangelicals. But with Mr. Falwell serving as the torchbearer of his father’s legacy, his endorsement became a permission slip for deeply religious conservatives who were attracted by Mr. Trump’s promises to make America great again but wary of his well-known history of infidelity, his previous support of abortion rights and his admission that he had never asked for God’s forgiveness. “For those of the more fundamentalist variant of evangelicalism, the Falwell family, and the Falwell endorsements, are an important factor,” said Jim Guth, a political-science professor at Furman University who has long studied evangelical politics. Mr. Cruz still managed to win in Iowa. But Mr. Trump soon won South Carolina with strong evangelical support, sending him on a solid path toward the nomination. Three years later, Mr. Falwell remains an unwavering Trump supporter. Last month he went so far as to suggest that the president deserved an extended term as “reparations” for time lost to the Mueller investigation. In turn, he has had entree to the White House, providing input on education policies that stand to benefit Liberty. The Falwells declined to comment for this article. Mr. Falwell has said there were no compromising photographs, and the person close to them, who would speak only on the condition of anonymity, said the Falwells “did not know anything about Mr. Cohen’s alleged efforts” on their behalf. Mr. Falwell’s endorsement of Mr. Trump, the person said, was made after careful consideration. Mr. Cohen, he said, “did not try to exert any inappropriate pressure.” New Friendships, New Opportunities Mr. Falwell began to grow close to Mr. Trump and Mr. Cohen after Mr. Trump came to speak at Liberty, in Lynchburg, Va., in 2012. Mr. Cohen, who was working to connect his boss with important political constituencies and their leaders for a possible presidential run four years later, came along for the trip. Mr. Trump lacked the religious bona fides of those who typically filled the school’s speaker lineup. But he was the star of the top-rated “Apprentice” reality show, and Mr. Falwell admired his career in real estate. As it happened, the Falwell family was exploring a real estate venture of its own. Earlier that year, Mr. Falwell and his wife, Becki, had stayed at the Fontainebleau — the grande dame of the Miami Beach hotel scene and a somewhat unlikely vacation spot for the chancellor of a university whose student code prohibited short skirts, coed dorm visits and sex outside of “biblically ordained” marriage. Kennedy, Frank Sinatra and Elvis, the Fontainebleau was now the stomping grounds of the Kardashians, Paris Hilton and Lady Gaga, known for allowing topless sunbathing and for a cavernous nightclub that one travel guide described as “30,000 square feet of unadulterated fun.” Techno music was pumped out at its 11 pools, where waitresses in polka-dot swimsuits served drinks and white-uniformed male attendants brought fresh towels and positioned umbrellas for tips. The Falwells struck up a conversation with one of those pool attendants, Giancarlo Granda. Mr. Granda, then 21 and the son of immigrants from Cuba and Mexico, was working at the hotel while studying finance at Florida International University. Advertisement The Falwells, according to the person close to them, were impressed with Mr. Granda’s ambition. Soon he was hiking and water skiing with them in Virginia. Within months, they were offering to help him get started in business in Florida. Unsure how to capitalize on the offer, Mr. Granda consulted a close high school friend, Jesus Fernandez Jr., whose father, Jesus Fernandez Sr., had worked in Miami real estate for decades, the Fernandezes would later assert. Together, they directed Mr. Granda to a South Beach youth hostel that was for sale. The building also housed a restaurant and a liquor store. Negotiations were underway when Mr. Trump visited Liberty, and the Falwells invited Mr. Granda to fly up for the occasion. A photo taken on a private plane, reviewed by The New York Times, shows him holding a copy of “Trump: The Art of the Deal.” Mr. Falwell introduced Mr. Trump to Liberty’s students as “one of the greatest visionaries of our time,” who “single-handedly forced President Obama to release his birth certificate.” Mr. Trump shared his secrets to winning in business and life: “Get even” and “Always have a prenuptial agreement,” though he quickly added, “I won’t say it here, because you people don’t get divorced.” Mr. Granda, with a copy of “Trump: The Art of The Deal,” traveled by private plane to hear Mr. Trump speak at Liberty in 2012. Offstage, he posed for pictures with the Falwells and shook hands with their special guest, Mr. Granda. No Politics or Religion In 2013, the Falwells completed the deal for the Miami Hostel, which rents beds for as little as $15 a night, bunking 12 people to a room. The hostel became known as one of South Beach’s best budget party hostels and is sometimes listed as gay-friendly. The Falwells’ involvement came to light in a 2017 Politico article by Brandon Ambrosino, a Liberty graduate. He reported that the hostel featured a sign on its front gate declaring its house rules: “No Soliciting, Fundraising, Politics, Salesmen, Religion.” “Inside the Falwells’ hostel, the stench of general decay and cigarette smoke is overpowering,” Mr. Ambrosino wrote. Tourism pamphlets included one for Tootsie’s Cabaret, “74,000 square feet of adult entertainment and FULL NUDITY.” On a recent overnight visit, the sign forbidding politics and religion was gone, and there were no visible fliers for adult clubs. The hostel was tidy and relatively quiet — common for this time of year, Miami’s off-season. A warning was posted that the hostel was not responsible for accidents on the premises, “especially if you are drunk.” Real estate records show that an LLC called Alton Hostel Inc. bought the hostel and its building for $4.7 million in cash. Within weeks, Alton Hostel secured a $3.8 million mortgage from Carter Bank & Trust, the Virginia-based bank the Falwells had long used to finance and expand Liberty University. The source of Alton Hostel's initial full-cash payment is not known. But Mr. Falwell would later say in a sworn affidavit that his family's financial contribution to the deal amounted to a loan of $1.8 million, including $800,000 for renovations. The Falwells' son Jerry Falwell III, who goes by "Trey" and was 23 at the time, was listed as manager of the LLC; Mr. Granda was added later as a co-manager. In his affidavit, Mr. Falwell said his wife was also a member of the LLC. Around South Beach, people involved in the deal regarded it as the sort of thing Miami's young and good-looking could luck into when they encountered wealthy visitors. "Miami is a very touristy place," one of the brokers, Roberto Bracho, said in an interview. "If you are in the right place at the right time, you can hit the jackpot." The Fernandezes believed that they had been promised an ownership share. The Falwells denied making any such promise, and in his affidavit, Mr. Falwell sought to minimize his involvement, saying that, as an adviser on the deal, he could not have given them a stake. The Fernandezes threatened a lawsuit. Rigging Polls, Fixing Problems Mr. Cohen had kept in close touch with the Falwells after Mr. Trump's 2012 visit. He would later say he viewed them as family. Mr. Cohen even turned to a Falwell lieutenant — Liberty's deputy chief information officer at the time, John Gauger — as he worked to build Mr. Trump's political profile. Mr. Gauger also ran his own consulting firm, RedFinch Solutions. Mr. Cohen hired RedFinch to manipulate two online polls in Mr. Trump's favor — one in 2014 by CNBC, and another in early 2015 in the Drudge Report — Mr. Gauger told The Wall Street Journal in January. At around the same time, Mr. Cohen and Mr. Trump were arranging with The National Enquirer and its chief, the Trump ally David Pecker, to buy and bury stories about Mr. Trump and women that could harm his political prospects. Mr. Cohen's confessed role in two such deals — one with The Enquirer to silence the former Playboy model Karen McDougal, the other with the pornographic actress Stormy Daniels, whom he initially paid out of his own pocket — contributed to the three-year sentence he is now serving at the federal prison in Otisville, N.Y. Credit John Taggart for The New York Times Advertisement By Mr. Cohen's account, the Falwells appeared to be in need of just that sort of help. By late 2015, the lawsuit over ownership of the hostel had devolved into a fight over compromising photos, according to several people involved in the case. It was understood that between Mr. Granda, the Fernandezes and their lawyers, one or more people were in possession of photographs that could be used as leverage against the Falwells. And so Mr. Cohen tried to play the fixer for his friends. In a recent legal filing, Mr. Fernandez Jr. said he was forced to change his name because of the case. He became Gordon Bello. His father, Mr. Fernandez, Sr., became Jett Bello. Their name changes took place after Mr. Cohen intervened. Mr. Cohen described his involvement in his conversation with Mr. Arnold, which was first reported last month by Reuters. "There's a bunch of photographs, personal photographs, that somehow the guy ended up getting — whether it was off of Jerry's phone or somehow maybe it got AirDropped or whatever the hell the whole thing was," Mr. Cohen told Mr. Arnold in the recording, which Mr. Arnold shared with The Times. Mr. Cohen never identified "the guy." "These are photos between husband and wife," Mr. Cohen added, joking that "the evangelicals are kinkier than Tom Arnold." He explained, "I was going to pay him, and I was going to get the negatives and do an agreement where they turn over all the technology that has the photographs or anything like that, any copies." But the payoff "never happened," he said, "and the guy just either deleted them on his own or what have you." The person close to the Falwells said that Mr. Cohen was neither their lawyer nor their fixer, and that they had not been aware of "his alleged actions regarding photographs" until parts of the recording were released. Advertisement Mr. Cohen, who declined interview requests, told Mr. Arnold that he had been trying to protect Mrs. Falwell. "Even though she has a very nice figure," he said on the recording, "nobody wants their private photos published." In the process, he said, he had obtained one of the photos, of Mrs. Falwell, and still had it. Evangelicals for Trump With a few weeks to go before the Iowa caucuses kicked off the primary season on Feb. 1, 2016, Mr. Cruz was steadily racking up high-level endorsements. He was banking on strong evangelical support to push him past Mr. Trump in the state. In mid-January, Mr. Cruz's father reported back to his staff that Mr. Falwell had committed to endorsing his son, according to two people involved in the campaign at the time. A news release was prepared, they said, while aides began vetting Mr. Falwell's background, as is standard for presidential endorsers. Senator Ted Cruz announced his presidential run at Liberty University in 2015. His campaign was anticipating an endorsement from Mr. Falwell when the evangelical leader instead threw his support behind Mr. Trump.

Signs that something was amiss came shortly afterward, when Mr. Trump arrived at Liberty for another speech. Mr. Falwell introduced Mr. Trump as a man who "lives a life of loving and helping others as Jesus taught." Despite the generous introduction, the appearance seemed an unmitigated disaster for Mr. Trump. He betrayed his ignorance of the Bible by referring to a passage in "Two Corinthians" rather than "Second Corinthians," and loosely used the words "hell" and "damn." Even so, rumors began to spread that Mr. Falwell was leaning toward Mr. Trump. Rick Tyler, a senior Cruz adviser, called Mr. Falwell to say that if there was ever a good time to make his support official, this was it. That was when Mr. Falwell told him he had learned that he could not make any endorsement in the primaries. "He said his board wouldn't allow him to endorse," Mr. Tyler said in an interview. Around that time, Mr. Falwell was coming under heavy pressure to get behind Mr. Trump, according to someone who spoke to Mr. Falwell then. A few days later, Mr. Falwell announced his endorsement of Mr. Trump, calling him "a successful executive and entrepreneur, a wonderful father and a man who I believe can lead our country to greatness again." In an email, the person close to the Falwells said the Liberty chancellor had "never seriously considered endorsing Mr. Cruz," and did not know how the campaign had gotten that impression. What's more, he said, Mr. Cohen "did nothing more than ask" Mr. Falwell to endorse Mr. Trump. Though Mr. Falwell said he was making the endorsement as a private individual, not as the head of the university, the decision roiled the Liberty community. Some graduates and students expressed stunned disappointment. One of Liberty’s trustees, Mark DeMoss — an alumnus and a longtime confidant of Mr. Falwell’s father — told The Washington Post that Mr. Trump did not exhibit “Christ-like behavior that Liberty has spent 40 years promoting with its students.” (After clashing with Mr. Falwell and other board members, he resigned, he said in a statement at the time.) Speaking to Liberty students in 2012, Mr. Trump shared two pieces of advice he said he often gave: “Get even,” and “Always have a prenuptial agreement.”

At the Cruz campaign headquarters, the reaction was “anger and shock,” Mr. Tyler said. “Something changed, obviously.” An Adviser and Defender

The relationship between Mr. Falwell and Mr. Trump would prove mutually beneficial. Mr. Trump sought to make Mr. Falwell his secretary of education, Mr. Falwell has said. After he declined, he disclosed that he would serve as an outside adviser to the administration on education policy — a role in which, Mr. Falwell indicated, he would call for rollbacks of regulations governing accreditation, recruitment and student borrowing. (“A lot of what we sent them is actually what got implemented,” he told The New York Times Magazine last year.) Mr. Falwell, in turn, has remained one of the president’s most vocal defenders, even in the rare moments when other Republicans wouldn’t, as in August 2017, when Mr. Trump said there had been “very fine people on both sides” of the violent white nationalist rally in Charlottesville, Va., that resulted in the murder of a young counterdemonstrator. That month, with settlement talks involving the hostel at an impasse, the Fernandezes, now the Bellos, filed a written complaint. The complaint, first reported by BuzzFeed News several months after it was filed, asserted that “verbal offers were made to Granda to provide him with financial assistance.” Mr. Falwell, the complaint read, “indicated that he wanted to help Granda establish a new career and build a business” as the Falwells’ relationship with Mr. Granda “evolved.”

Advertisement

In his sworn affidavit, Mr. Falwell said the family had made Mr. Granda a co-manager of the LLC in return for serving as its local representative. Mr. Falwell saw the hostel as a good opportunity to introduce his son and Mr. Granda to real estate investing, according to the person close to the family. Mr. Granda, he said, received only a “modest income,” and a financial stake that was of limited value because of the property’s heavy debt. The Comedian Gets His Tape Mr. Arnold’s anti-Trump antics have largely consisted of his public search for more recordings like the “Access Hollywood” outtake in which Mr. Trump boasted about grabbing women’s genitalia. Last year, Mr. Arnold even got his own television show on the Viceland network, “The Hunt for The Trump Tapes.” It produced no new tapes during its eight-episode run. But it did help lead to the recording of Mr. Cohen discussing the Falwells. Mr. Arnold first met Mr. Cohen last June at the Loews Regency hotel in Manhattan, as Mr. Arnold was taping his show. Their meeting didn’t result in a Cohen appearance on the program, but Mr. Cohen agreed to a photo with Mr. Arnold, which went viral on Twitter, and the two stayed in touch. Early this year, after noticing the articles in The Journal and BuzzFeed about Liberty, Mr. Cohen and the Fernandez suit, Mr. Arnold began suggesting on Twitter, without presenting any evidence, that the Falwells had been in a sexual relationship with Mr. Granda. Those tweets led Mr. Cohen to call Mr. Arnold and deny any such relationship. He then described his efforts to help with the photos. The comedian and actor Tom Arnold, left, secretly recorded Mr. Cohen describing his plan to help the Falwells by paying off someone who claimed to have compromising photos. Credit Tom Arnold Image The comedian and actor Tom Arnold, left, secretly recorded Mr. Cohen describing his plan to help the Falwells by paying off someone who claimed to have compromising photos. The comedian and actor Tom Arnold, left, secretly recorded Mr. Cohen describing his plan to help the Falwells by paying off someone who claimed to have compromising photos. Credit Tom Arnold That conversation, two months before Mr. Cohen went to prison, left more questions than answers. Mr. Cohen has publicly said nothing more. No photos have surfaced, and it is unclear how many there are. In all, three people said they had seen at least one photo, though their descriptions varied and could not be verified. Nor is it certain whom Mr. Cohen hoped to pay off. He never mentions the Bellos — formerly the Fernandezes — or their lawsuit on the tape, but makes reference to the “pool boy,” leaving open the possibility that the photos came from Mr. Granda, and that Mr. Granda then shared them with the Bellos. Then again, “the guy” to whom Mr. Cohen refers could be some other person entirely. Advertisement Mr. Granda, now working toward a graduate degree in real estate at Georgetown University, referred questions to his lawyer. The lawyer, Aaron Resnick, said his client had never interacted with Mr. Cohen, whom he called “a convicted felon and admitted liar.” He said any suggestion that Mr. Granda was the person referred to on the tape would be false, and he bristled at what he called “tabloid fodder” directed at a first-generation Hispanic-American. In a statement to The Times, the senior Bello said he and his son had been respectful to the Falwells, “despite the sensitive details surrounding this case.” It was Mr. Cohen — acting as their lawyer, he said — who had revealed “his client’s indiscretions.” He said the pending lawsuit prohibited him from offering more details about the photographs or why he and his son had felt compelled to change their names. Mr. Falwell has granted only one interview about the Arnold recording, to Todd Starnes of Fox News Radio, telling him there were “no compromising or embarrassing photos,” and saying, “We never engaged or paid Cohen to represent us in any legal or other professional capacity.” The new details about the lead-up to his endorsement of Mr. Trump have not affected Mr. Falwell’s continued enthusiastic support. Earlier this month, Mr. Falwell chastised a pastor who was embroiled in a controversy over his decision to pray for Mr. Trump during the president’s surprise visit to his church in the Washington suburbs. Suggesting that the pastor was being too accommodating of critics, Mr. Falwell directed a tweet at him reading, “Grow a pair,” a crude reference to the pastor’s masculinity. After the post drew criticism on Twitter as being beneath a religious leader, Mr. Falwell responded that he did not need to adhere to strict religious standards. “I have never been a minister,” he tweeted, saying that it was up to the students and faculty of Liberty to keep the school “strong spiritually.” He added, “While I am proud to be a conservative Christian, my job is to keep LU successful academically, financially and in athletics.”

"These were the presidents of my lifetime. These were not perfect men. They were not perfect presidents, god knows. Not one of them was that. But they approached the job, and they took to the podium, with all the gravitas they could muster as appropriate to the job. They tried, at least, to reach for something in the presidency that was beyond their grasp as ordinary human beings. They were not all ennobled by the attempt, but they tried nonetheless.

"And comes now this hopeless, vicious buffoon, and the audience of equally hopeless and vicious buffoons who laughed and cheered when he made sport of a woman whose lasting memory of the trauma she suffered is the laughter of the perpetrators. Now he comes, a man swathed in scandal, with no interest beyond what he can put in his pocket and what he can put over on a universe of suckers, and he does something like this while occupying an office that we gave him, and while endowed with a public trust that he dishonors every day he wakes up in the White House.

"The scion of a multigenerational criminal enterprise, the parameters of which we are only now beginning to comprehend. A vessel for all the worst elements of the American condition. And a cheap, soulless bully besides. We never have had such a cheap counterfeit of a president* as currently occupies the office. We never have had a president* so completely deserving of scorn and yet so small in the office that it almost seems a waste of time and energy to summon up the requisite contempt.

"Watch how a republic dies in the empty eyes of an empty man who feels nothing but his own imaginary greatness, and who cannot find in himself the decency simply to shut up even when it is in his best interest to do so. Presidents don't have to be heroes to be good presidents. They just have to realize that their humanity is our common humanity, and that their political commonwealth is our political commonwealth, too. Watch him behind the seal of the President of the United States. Isn't he a funny man? Isn't what happened to that lady hilarious? Watch the assembled morons cheer.

This is the only story now."

In Iran crisis, our worst fears about Trump are realized

By Max Boot

More than three years ago, in March 2016, I joined 121 other Republican foreign policy analysts (I was then a Republican) to sign an open letter about then-candidate Donald Trump published on the national security website War on the Rocks.

The letter warned:

“His vision of American influence and power in the world is wildly inconsistent and unmoored in principle. He swings from isolationism to military adventurism within the space of one sentence.

His advocacy for aggressively waging trade wars is a recipe for economic disaster.

His embrace of the expansive use of torture is inexcusable.

His hateful, anti-Muslim rhetoric undercuts the seriousness of combating Islamic radicalism by alienating partners in the Islamic world. ...

... His insistence that Mexico will fund a wall on the southern border inflames unhelpful passions, and rests on an utter misreading of, and contempt for, our southern neighbor.

... His insistence that close allies such as Japan must pay vast sums for protection is the sentiment of a racketeer, not the leader of the alliances that have served us so well since World War II.

His admiration for foreign dictators such as Vladimir Putin is unacceptable. ...

He is fundamentally dishonest. ...

His equation of business acumen with foreign policy experience is false.”

The letter concluded: “Mr. Trump’s own statements lead us to conclude that as president, he would use the authority of his office to act in ways that make America less safe, and which would diminish our standing in the world.”

I wish we had been wrong, but we were all too right. The only warning that has not been vindicated is that his anti-Muslim rhetoric would alienate Muslim allies; President Trump’s kowtowing to the rulers of Egypt, Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates has kept them aligned. But all the other debilities we foresaw are now abundantly manifest.

Trump has shown no ability to grow in office; but then it’s hard to learn if all you read is Fox News chyrons. He is today the same compulsive liar and erratic ignoramus he was at the start of the 2016 campaign. Only now, the stakes are much higher. Trump is commander in chief as the United States is locked on a collision course with the Islamic Republic of Iran. The crisis in the Persian Gulf shows the danger of having a president who is so unfit for office. Indeed, this crisis is largely of Trump’s own making.

In May 2018, Trump exited the Iran nuclear deal, even though Iran was in compliance. Trump castigated the deal as “horrible,” “laughable,” “disastrous,” largely, it seems, because it was negotiated by his hated predecessor. Secretary of State Mike Pompeo laid out 12 demands that the current Iranian regime would never meet; they included Iran’s cutting off support for all of its regional proxies and ending its missile program. National security adviser John Bolton signaled that the administration is interested not in reform but regime change; in February, he posted a video on the 40th anniversary of the Iranian Revolution, telling the mullahs, “I don’t think you’ll have many more anniversaries to enjoy.”

The administration has implemented punishing sanctions that have cut Iran's oil exports by more than half. The Iranian government considers this an act of "economic war," and it has responded like most nations under attack — not by surrendering but by hitting back. In recent weeks, Iran has been blamed for attacks on oil tankers in the Persian Gulf. Iran denies responsibility, but now it is threatening to ramp up uranium production and break out of the nuclear deal. What did Trump think would happen when he pulled out of the nuclear deal? Or did he think at all? Most analysts warned that the move would increase the risk of Iran's restarting its nuclear program and of war breaking out — and it has.

Here's what you need to know about the two suspected attacks on five ships in the Persian Gulf in the last month and the region where they occurred. (Joyce Lee, Elyse Samuels/The Washington Post)

Trump's response has been as incoherent as usual. He alternates between bluster ("If Iran wants to fight, that will be the official end of Iran") and offers to talk. He contradicts his own aides (remember the 12 demands?) by saying: "We just don't want them to have nuclear weapons." But if all he cares about is nukes, why did he pull out of a nuclear deal that was working?

The United States cannot successfully deal with a menace such as Iran when it is led by a president with no credibility or moral standing either at home or abroad. U.S. allies distrust Trump's claims of Iranian responsibility for the tanker attacks and bristle at Trump's unilateralism. According to the New York Times, even Trump's own intelligence and military chiefs don't trust him enough to share details of U.S. cyberoperations against Russia. If Trump's own subordinates don't trust him, how can the rest of the country or the world? Under another president such as Ronald Reagan, Iranian attacks on shipping in the Persian Gulf might be a casus belli. But we cannot risk a war under this president. The least bad outcome is for Trump to veer, as he has with North Korea, from irresponsible saber-rattling to oleaginous appeasement. Better for Trump to fall in love with another odious dictator than to start a war that could easily spin out of control. No matter how Trump handles this self-created crisis, his Iran policies drive home the warning in the War on the Rocks letter: He is diminishing America's safety and standing.

Politics The Daily Beast Fox's Judge Napolitano: Seems Trump 'Is Prepared to Commit a Felony to Get Re-Elected'

Fox News Reacting to President Trump saying he would accept foreign intel on a political opponent if offered, and that he doesn't feel it's necessary to contact the FBI, Fox News senior judicial analyst Judge Andrew Napolitano on Thursday said he worries the president is "prepared to commit a felony." Napolitano was asked by Fox News anchor Shep Smith if there was any "gray area" or "wiggle room" when it comes to campaigns legally receiving "dirt from a foreign entity on a political opponent." "There's no wiggle room with respect to dirt," the judge responded. "With respect to opposition research. The Federal Election Commission decided in other cases that that is a thing of value." This prompted Smith to wonder if what the president described he was willing to do during his interview with ABC News constituted a felony. "Correct," Napolitano confidently declared. "Meaning he would be committing a felony and the person giving it to him, if the person was here, would be committing a felony as well." After pondering what kind of message Trump is sending to foreign leaders around the world who want to curry his favor, Napolitano argued that regardless of the president's belief that freedom of speech protects him, the law strictly prohibits him from soliciting foreign assistance in an election. "If he is a candidate, then what he receives is regulated by federal laws that he took an oath to uphold," the Fox analyst explained. "Among them are you cannot take something, accept something, receive something from a foreign national under the guise of being the head of state or because you want to use it for your campaign." Smith went on to report that Senate Democrats are now working on legislation that would make it a requirement of the law that candidates report such contacts with the FBI. "The president told George Stephanopoulos the FBI director is wrong," Napolitano stated. "Such a statute would clarify this and impose upon the president-whoever that may be-more of a burden to enforce these laws on him or herself as well as on anybody else running for office." The Fox News anchor, meanwhile, wanted to get one more reaction from his guest, asking him what he thought when he first heard the president's remarks. "The president of the United States of America is prepared to commit a felony to get re-elected," Napolitano concluded. "That was my reaction and it was not a happy one. I thought he shot himself in the foot. I wish he didn't say it."Read more at The Daily Beast. Got a tip? Hatch Act of 1939

Long title An Act to Prevent Pernicious Political Activities

Enacted by the 76th United States Congress

Effective August 2, 1939

Legislative history

- Introduced in the Senate as S. 1871 by Carl Hatch (D-NM)
- Signed into law by President Franklin D. Roosevelt on August 2, 1939

The Hatch Act of 1939, officially An Act to Prevent Pernicious Political Activities, is a United States federal law whose main provision prohibits employees in the executive branch of the federal government, except the president, vice-president, and certain designated high-level officials,^[1] from engaging in some forms of political activity. It went into law on August 2, 1939. The law was named for Senator Carl Hatch of New Mexico. It was most recently amended in 2012.

Background

Widespread allegations that local Democratic Party politicians used employees of the Works Progress Administration (WPA) during the congressional elections of 1938 provided the immediate impetus for the passage of the Hatch Act. Criticism centered on swing states such as Kentucky,^[3] Tennessee, Pennsylvania, and Maryland. In Pennsylvania, Republicans and dissident Democrats publicized evidence that Democratic politicians were consulted on the appointment of WPA administrators and case workers and that they used WPA jobs to gain unfair political advantage.^[4] In 1938, a series of newspaper articles exposed WPA patronage, and political contributions in return for employment, prompting an investigation by the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee, headed by Sen. Morris Sheppard, a Texas Democrat.^[5]

Despite that investigation's inconclusive findings, many in both parties determined to take action against the growing power of the WPA and its chief administrator, Harry Hopkins, an intimate of President Roosevelt. The Act was sponsored by Senator Carl Hatch, a Democrat from New Mexico. At the time, Roosevelt was struggling to purge the Democratic party of its more conservative members, who were increasingly aligned with the administration's Republican opponents. The president considered vetoing the legislation or allowing it to become law without his signature, but instead signed it on the last day he could do so. His signing message welcomed the legislation as if he had called for it, and emphasized the protection his administration would provide for political expression on the part of public employees.^[6]

Provisions

The 1939 Act forbids the intimidation or bribery of voters and restricts political campaign activities by federal employees. It prohibits using any public funds designated for relief or public works for electoral purposes.

It forbids officials paid with federal funds from using promises of jobs, promotion, financial assistance, contracts, or any other benefit to coerce campaign contributions or political support. It provides that persons below the policy-making level in the executive branch of the federal government must not only refrain from political practices that would be illegal for any citizen, but must abstain from "any active part" in political campaigns, using this language to specify those who are exempt:[7]

- (i) an employee paid from an appropriation for the Executive Office of the President; or
- (ii) an employee appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, whose position is located within the United States, who determines policies to be pursued by the United States in the nationwide administration of Federal laws.

The act also precludes federal employees from membership in "any political organization which advocates the overthrow of our constitutional form of government,"[8] a provision meant to prohibit membership in organizations on the far left and far right, such as the Communist Party USA and the German-American Bund.[9]

An amendment on July 19, 1940, extended the Act to certain employees of state and local governments whose positions are primarily paid for by federal funds. It has been interpreted to bar political activity on the part of employees of state agencies administering federal unemployment insurance programs and appointed local law enforcement agency officials with oversight of federal grant funds. The Hatch Act bars state and local government employees from running for public office if any federal funds support the position, even if the position is funded almost entirely with local funds.[10]

The Merit Systems Protection Board and the Office of Special Counsel \(OSC\) are responsible for enforcement of the Hatch Act.[11]

'Obstruction of justice-the statute making obstruction criminal-prohibits interfering, or attempting to interfere, with a criminal prosecution or an investigation the government's conducting' Napolitano said. The Mueller Report, Napolitano believes, lays out a number of presidential acts that constitute obstruction of justice including:

- When Trump asked Deputy National Security Adviser KT McFarland to write an untruthful letter to the file, knowing the government would subpoena it.
- When Trump asked Corey Lewandowski to get Mueller fired.
- When Trump asked Don McGahn to get Mueller fired and then to lie about it.

- When Trump asked McGahn to go back to Mueller's team and change his testimony.
- When Trump dangled a pardon in front of Michael Cohen, in order to keep Cohen to testifying against him.

Trump's Russian Laundromat | The New Republic

<http://www.newrepublic.com/article/143586/trumps-russian> Trump's Russian Laundromat How to use Trump Tower and other luxury high-rises to clean dirty money, run an international crime syndicate, and propel a failed real estate developer into the White House

In 1984, a Russian émigré named David Bogatin went shopping for apartments in New York City. The 38-year-old had arrived in America seven years before, with just $3 in his pocket. But for a former pilot in the Soviet Army—his specialty had been shooting down Americans over North Vietnam—he had clearly done quite well for himself. Bogatin wasn't hunting for a place in Brighton Beach, the Brooklyn enclave known as "Little Odessa" for its large population of immigrants from the Soviet Union. Instead, he was fixated on the glitziest apartment building on Fifth Avenue, a gaudy, 58-story edifice with gold-plated fixtures and a pink-marble atrium: Trump Tower.

If the transaction seemed suspicious—multiple apartments for a single buyer who appeared to have no legitimate way to put his hands on that much money—there may have been a reason. At the time, Russian mobsters were beginning to invest in high-end real estate, which offered an ideal vehicle to launder money from their criminal enterprises. “During the ’80s and ’90s, we in the U.S. government repeatedly saw a pattern by which criminals would use condos and high-rises to launder money,” says Jonathan Winer, a deputy assistant secretary of state for international law enforcement in the Clinton administration. “It didn’t matter that you paid too much, because the real estate values would rise, and it was a way of turning dirty money into clean money. It was done very systematically, and it explained why there are so many high-rises where the units were sold but no one is living in them.” When Trump Tower was built, as David Cay Johnston reports in The Making of Donald Trump, it was only the second high-rise in New York that accepted anonymous buyers.

In 1987, just three years after he attended the closing with Trump, Bogatin pleaded guilty to taking part in a massive gasoline-bootlegging scheme with Russian mobsters. After he fled the country, the government seized his five condos at Trump Tower, saying that he had purchased them to “launder money, to shelter and hide assets.” A Senate investigation into organized crime later revealed that Bogatin was a leading figure in the Russian mob in New York. His family ties, in fact, led straight to the top: His brother ran a $150 million stock scam with none other than Semion Mogilevich, whom the FBI considers the “boss of bosses” of the Russian mafia. At the time, Mogilevich—feared even by his fellow gangsters as “the most powerful mobster in the world”—was expanding his multibillion-dollar international criminal syndicate into America.

In 1987, on his first trip to Russia, Trump visited the Winter Palace with Ivana. The Soviets flew him to Moscow—all expenses paid—to discuss building a luxury hotel across from the Kremlin. Maxim Blokhin/TASS

Notorious gangster wrote letter praising Trump and complaining about Mueller investigation

FACEBOOK NEWS

BRITISH WRITER PENS THE BEST DESCRIPTION OF TRUMP I'VE READ

(Caricature of Donald Trump is by DonkeyHotey.)

The following was found at LA Progressive: Someone on Quora asked "Why do some British people not like Donald Trump?"

Nate White, an articulate and witty writer from England wrote the following response:

A few things spring to mind. Trump lacks certain qualities which the British traditionally esteem. For instance, he has no class, no charm, no coolness, no credibility, no compassion, no wit, no warmth, no wisdom, no subtlety, no sensitivity, no self-awareness, no humility, no honour and no grace – all qualities, funnily enough, with which his predecessor Mr. Obama was generously blessed. So for us, the stark contrast does rather throw Trump's limitations into embarrassingly sharp relief. Plus, we like a laugh. And while Trump may be laughable, he has never once said anything wry, witty or even faintly amusing – not once, ever. I don't say that rhetorically, I mean it quite literally: not once, not ever. And that fact is particularly disturbing to the British sensibility – for us, to lack humour is almost inhuman. But with Trump, it's a fact. He doesn't even seem to understand what a joke is – his idea of a joke is a crass comment, an illiterate insult, a casual act of cruelty. Trump is a troll. And like all trolls, he is never funny and he never laughs; he only crows or jeers. And scarily, he doesn't just talk in crude, witless insults – he actually thinks in them. His mind is a simple bot-like algorithm of petty prejudices and knee-jerk nastiness. There is never any under-layer of irony, complexity, nuance or depth. It's all surface. Some Americans might see this as refreshingly upfront. Well, we don't. We see it as having no inner world, no soul. And in Britain we traditionally side with David, not Goliath. All our heroes are plucky underdogs: Robin Hood, Dick Whittington, Oliver Twist. Trump is neither plucky, nor an underdog. He is the exact opposite of that. He's not even a spoiled rich-boy, or a greedy fat-cat. He's more a fat white slug. A Jabba the Hutt of privilege. And worse, he is that most unforgivable of all things to the British: a bully. That is, except when he is among bullies; then he suddenly transforms into a snivelling sidekick instead. There are unspoken rules to this stuff – the Queensberry rules of basic decency – and he breaks them all. He punches downwards – which a gentleman should, would, could never do – and every blow he aims is below the belt. He particularly likes to kick the vulnerable or voiceless – and he kicks them when they are down. So the fact that a significant minority – perhaps a third – of Americans look at what he does, listen to what he says, and then think 'Yeah, he seems like my kind of guy' is a matter of some confusion and no little distress to British people, given that: • Americans are supposed to be nicer than us, and mostly are. • You don't need a particularly keen eye for detail to spot a few flaws in the man. This last point is what especially confuses and dismays British people, and many other people too; his faults seem pretty bloody hard to miss. After all, it's impossible to read a single tweet, or hear him speak a sentence or two, without staring deep into the abyss. He turns being artless into an art form; he is a Picasso of pettiness; a Shakespeare of shit. His faults are fractal: even his flaws have flaws, and so on ad infinitum. God knows there have always been stupid people in the world, and plenty of nasty people too. But rarely has stupidity been so nasty, or nastiness so stupid. He makes Nixon look trustworthy and George W look smart. In fact, if Frankenstein decided to make a monster assembled entirely from human flaws – he would make a Trump. And a remorseful Doctor Frankenstein would clutch out big clumpfuls of hair and scream in anguish: ‘My God... what... have... I... created? If being a twat was a TV show, Trump would be the boxed set.

Trump Administration Denies U.S. Embassies Permission To Fly Pride Flag: Reports

<http://albertpeia.com/defraudingamerica3.pdf> WASHPOST Pelosi accuses Trump of 'threats and temper tantrums' in Mexico negotiations While Republicans celebrated news of the White House deal with Mexico, Democrats denounced it as another example of the president fixing a crisis of his own making. [True enough regarding the Hegalian Dialectic, hocus pocus con game approach/methodology of trump et als. After all, Mexico has very little effective capability of actually performing its purported end of the so-called deal. The Hegelian Dialectic is, in short, the critical process by which the ruling elite create a problem, anticipating in advance the reaction that the population will have to the given crisis, and thus conditioning the people that a change is needed. When the population is properly conditioned, the desired agenda of the ruling elite is presented as the solution. The solution isn't intended to solve the problem, but rather to serve as the basis for a new problem or exacerbate the existing one. Then, of course, there's this reality as to timing, beyond the spin. NASA asteroid: LOOK OUT as a 360FT space rock scrapes past Earth TONIGHT

AN ASTEROID measuring a terrifying 360.8ft (150m) across will come hurtling past our home planet later tonight, NASA's asteroid trackers have warned.

Express.co.uk

Asteroid nearly the width of a football field has small chance of hitting Earth this year

An asteroid called 2006 QV89, which has a diameter slightly smaller than the width of a football field, is set to pass by Earth in September.

CITING HIS "SERIOUS MENTAL ILLNESS," MULTIPLE PSYCHIATRISTS CALL FOR PRESIDENT TRUMP TO BE IMPEACHED

"Mental illness . . . renders him psychologically incapable of competently discharging the duties of president"

Brad Reed May 31, 2019 3:13PM (UTC)

This article originally appeared on Raw Story

Three psychiatrists have written an editorial for USA Today calling on Congress to impeach President Donald Trump — and their call to remove the president has nothing to do with special counsel Robert Mueller's findings.

The psychiatrists — John Gartner, a former assistant professor at Johns Hopkins University Medical School; Dr. David Reiss, who has been practicing psychiatry for 30 years; and Dr. Steven Buser, a former Air Force psychiatrist — argue that the president's "poor mental health" is a danger to the United States and should be used as a grounds to remove him from office.

“Many of us in the mental health community have been arguing for years that Trump should be removed because he is psychologically unfit,” they write. “We posted a professional petition online stating that ‘in our professional judgment . . . Donald Trump manifests a serious mental illness that renders him psychologically incapable of competently discharging the duties of president of the United States.’”

They go on to document how House Speaker Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) and even some members of his own administration have pondered removing Trump via the 25th amendment in which he’d be declared mentally unfit to perform his duties.

However, they think the most likely remedy at this point is for the House to start up impeachment hearings.

“Pelosi has thus far resisted calls for impeachment on the grounds that it would arouse the ire of Trump’s base going into the 2020 election,” they argue. “But she seems to ignore the opposite risk: Underreacting desensitizes us to the dangerous severity of Trump’s dysfunction, normalizing the abnormal.”

Furious Celebs Want President Assaulted, Tortured...

By Geoffrey Dickens | June 5, 2019

Donald Trump may be the most hated president in Hollywood since...well...ever. In the last month celebrities from Bill Maher to Cher have wished the worst, most vile things on the current president.

Maher hoped First Lady Melania Trump would divorce her husband. Singer/actress Cher wanted to see Trump impeached, “locked up” and assaulted in prison.

Author Fran Lebowitz claimed “impeachment” was just the “beginning of what he deserves” as she fantasized that Trump would be turned “over to the Saudis” to be tortured to death.

- When Trump asked Deputy National Security Adviser KT McFarland to write an untruthful letter to the file, knowing the government would subpoena it.
- When Trump asked Corey Lewandowski to get Mueller fired.
- When Trump asked Don McGahn to get Mueller fired and then to lie about it.

- When Trump asked McGahn to go back to Mueller's team and change his testimony.
- When Trump dangled a pardon in front of Michael Cohen, in order to keep Cohen to testifying against him.

The Root

The man who predicted Trump's victory says Democrats may have to impeach him to have a chance in 2020

Allan Lichtman doesn't mind swimming against the political tide. Lichtman, a professor at American University in Washington, DC, was the most prominent voice predicting Donald Trump's victory in the run-up to the 2016 election. When Trump won, it marked the 9th(!) straight presidential election where Lichtman had correctly predicted the Electoral College winner. (That's all the way back to 1984, for you math wizards.) In short: Lichtman is someone the political world should listen to. So I reached out to him on Tuesday to see what he thought of Trump's current chances at a second term next ...

But Mueller's damning report is an invitation that Congress shouldn't refuse. [Laurence Tribe knows something about constitutional law. For corrupt greedy senile pelosi it should be his way or the highway!] ... Even the most pragmatic legal practitioners tip their hats in respect for the otherwise esoteric 'Laurence Tribe' (ie., those law school/paper chase days)

'Obstruction of justice-the statute making obstruction criminal-prohibits interfering, or attempting to interfere, with a criminal prosecution or an investigation the government's conducting' Napolitano said. The Mueller Report, Napolitano believes, lays out a number of presidential acts that constitute obstruction of justice including:

- When Trump asked Deputy National Security Adviser KT McFarland to write an untruthful letter to the file, knowing the government would subpoena it.
- When Trump asked Corey Lewandowski to get Mueller fired.
- When Trump asked Don McGahn to get Mueller fired and then to lie about it.

- When Trump asked McGahn to go back to Mueller's team and change his testimony.
- When Trump dangled a pardon in front of Michael Cohen, in order to keep Cohen to testifying against him.

Photo: Michael Ciaglo (Getty Images) Here's to hoping that Trump isn't a sure thing. But if I were a betting man, I'd have to put money on whatever Allan Lichtman says. Who is Allan Lichtman, you ask? Well, he's a political historian and an American University professor but more importantly, he's correctly predicted the last nine presidential elections. Sadly, Lichtman believes that the winner of the 2020 presidential election will be someone that we ...

The man who predicted Trump's victory says Democrats may have to impeach him to have a chance in 2020

Allan Lichtman doesn't mind swimming against the political tide. Lichtman, a professor at American University in Washington, DC, was the most prominent voice predicting Donald Trump's victory in the run-up to the 2016 election. When Trump won, it marked the 9th(!) straight presidential election where Lichtman had correctly predicted the Electoral College winner. (That's all the way back to 1984, for you math wizards.) In short: Lichtman is someone the political world should listen to. So I reached out to him on Tuesday to see what he thought of Trump's current chances at a second term next ...
