The name of John the Baptist, on the other hand, in the sacred language adopted by the Roman Church, was 'Joannes.' To make the festival of the 24th of June, suit Christians and Pagans alike, all that was needed was just to call it the 'Festival of Joannes,' and thus the Christians would think that they were honoring John the Baptist, while the Pagans were still worshipping their old god 'Oannes,' or 'Tammuz.' So we now have Saint John's Day, another Pagan Holiday added to the rest of the Pagan/Catholic celebrations.

Cyrus, Xerxes, and many of the Medo-Persian kings, will banish its priests from Babylon, and labor to root out the evilness and superstitious beliefs of the priests in their empire, but too late, for it has found a secure retreat in Pergamos, and "Satan's Seat" is erected there, and the worship of the 'Queen of Heaven' will not wane, as the Christian Church will take up the scepter of lies and continue where the Babylonian priests left off.

The Church aided and abetted slavery, at one time owning more slaves than most of the monarchies of Europe combined, and actively engaging in the most revolting forms of slave trade, although it now appears to want to keep this sequence of events a holy secret. Papal records appear lacking in the administrative transactions of these large land grants. At one period in time, the Church will have owned almost one-third of all the lands in what is now Italy [754].

Pope Gregory is unable to reach an accord with the invading Lombards and resigns himself to paying a annual tribute [extortion money] to them to prevent their destroying Rome. It is none other than this 'Celestial concierge' who will finally give a name to the new Christian concept of a state of limbo to further threaten man to convert to Christianity. The Holy Father Pope Gregory the Great, about 604 CE, was the first to formulate the hitherto vacuous doctrine into respectable Latin and to actually name the place 'Purgatory,' previously unnamed although its latitude and longitude in Ecclesiastical Cosmogony has yet to be satisfactorily defined.

The Church will institute a 'Pay-as-you-sin' plan by selling pieces of paper to forgive one's sins, which betrays a darkened understanding, or a malevolent wit, of course, to imagine that this 'Pay-as-you-enter' and 'Pay-as-you-leave' plan of priestly prayers for the 'Souls in purgatory' smacks vaguely of buying Yahveh's grace or of bribing the Holy Church.

"No stipend, no prayers." Martin Luther claimed the Popes' idea about letting souls out of their torture for money, or special prayers, was an "Invention," and felt strongly enough about it to start his own religion over it. ~Purgatory by John Patrick Michael Murphy.

The Holy Council of Trent, to ensure that its Doctrine of Purgatory, and the superior usefulness of 'Pay for Sin Prayers,' should be believed by the faithful, and those who might be curious enough to question just where their money went in this direction, solemnly warned and commanded the Bishops, "To exclude from their preaching difficult and subtle questions which tend not to edification, and from the discussion of which there is no increase either of piety or devotion," though there might thereby be a decrease of churchly revenues.

Some of these un-edifying questions might, to some of the inquisitive faithful, be, "Why should there be any 'Difficult and subtle questions?'" ... Especially when the Holy Ghost was present, in person, and in at least three councils, and who one would call upon, at a moment's notice, to "Instruct" them on these very points?

It is useless to ask questions as to what good paid prayers do for the 'Souls of the dead' when the answer to such questions from, "The Angelic Doctor," Saint Thomas, "Unless they [i.e., the souls of the dead] know that they are to be delivered, they would not ask for the prayers." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, Vol. XII, p. 578.

The truth of the whole matter is money, financial rewards so the Church can further its cause and malicious sanctions throughout the world against all mankind. "There are large numbers of men so perversely minded that they will believe everything except what is recommended by sound intelligence and reason, and shrink from philosophy as the hydrophobic shrinks from water. These people will not read us, and do not concern us; we have not written for them. Their mind is the prey of the priests, just as their body will be the prey of the worms. We have written only for the friends of humanity and reason. The rest belong to another world; even their God tells them that his Kingdom is not of this world, that is to say, not of the world in which people use their judgment, and that the simple are blessed because theirs is the Kingdom of Heaven. Let us, therefore, leave to them their opinions, and not envy the priests such a possession. Let us pursue our way, without lingering to count the number of the credulous. When we have unveiled the sanctuary in which the priest shuts himself, we can hardly expect that he will press his followers to read us. We will be content with a happy revolution, and we will see that, for the honour of reason, it is so complete as to prevent the clergy from doing any further harm to mankind." ~A Short History of the Bible, Being a Popular Account of the Formation and Development of the Canon by Bronson C. Keeler. The Book Tree, Escondido, California, 1997, 1881.

"The celebration of the mass for money would be sinful; but it is perfectly legitimate to accept a stipend offered on such occasion for the support of the celebrant. The amount of the stipend varying for different times and countries, is usually fixed [in advance] by Ecclesiastical authority." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, Vol. 14, p. 1

The installment plan of payments is distinctly recognized and enjoined by the Church Father, Tertullian, who advises a widow, "... To pray for the soul of her husband, begging repose for him, and participation in the first Resurrection."

He commands her also to make 'Oblations,' another euphemism for priestly 'Tips' for him on the anniversary of her husband's demise [I prefer the terms extortion or blackmail, which sounds more appropriate], and charges her with infidelity if she neglects to succor his soul. ~Catholic Encyclopedia, Vol. XII, p. 577.

"Glory be to thee, Jesus of many forms, glory to thee who appears in the guise of our poor manhood." ~Acts of Thomas

AD 541-Emperor Justinian allows the fanatical inquisitor Ioannis Asiacus to compulsorily [forcibly] convert the Pagans of Phrygia, Caria, and Lydia in Asia Minor, and within thirty-five years of this Christian Crusade, 99 Christian churches and 12 monasteries are built on the sites of demolished Pagan temples.

AD 543- Justinian issues an edict condemning the writings of the early Greek/Christian theologian and philosopher, Origen, 185-254. Disastrous earthquakes occur around the world. "Upon the blood of the Pagans the Christian Church is built." ~E. Christopher Reyes.

AD 545- Trullan Synod. Eastern-Church discipline on clerical celibacy is settled, permitting marriage before ordination to the diaconate and continuation in marriage afterwards, but prohibiting marriage following the death of the wife thereafter. Anti-Roman canons contributed to East-West alienation.

During the century, the monastic influence of Ireland and England increased in Western Europe; schools and learning also decline; regulations regarding clerical celibacy become stricter in the East.

AD 546-Hundreds of Pagans are ordered put to death in Constantinople by the fanatical Christian inquisitor Ioannis Asiacus.

AD 550- Wales is converted to Christianity by Saint David. St. David converts Wales; the crucifix is introduced as a Christian icon.

Church bells are used in France to ward off evil.

AD 553-Fifth Ecumenical Council also known as the Second Council, called by Justinian I. The Council condemns Three Chapters and condemns the Greek theologian authors [anathematizes]. The works of Dionysius the Areopagite as mentioned in Acts 17:34 are first cited in 553 at the Second Council of Constantinople. The influence is perceptible in the theological system of the 8th Century as perceived by the Doctor of the Eastern Church, John of Damascus.

In the West, the works of Dionysius are unknown until early in the 7th Century when they exert a vast influence upon the thought of Christianized Europe. In the 9th Century, the Scottish theologian John Scotus Erigena translates his writings into Latin. In this more available form, Dionysius provides inspiration to the scholastic theologians, the English humanists John Colet and William Grocyn and most notably Saint

To Pope Pius XII. "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

Thomas Aquinas. From these men theologians and artists will obtain a conception of angels and are introduced to the concepts of Neoplatonism.

The influence of his writings is discernible in "The Divine Comedy" of Dante [poet to the Pope] and the works of the English poet John Milton. The Bible is modified to remove portions that do not concur with prevailing Christian thinking [Astrology, Palmistry, Numerology, Reincarnation].

AD 556-Emperor Justinian orders the notorious fanatic [Christian Inquisitor] Amantius to go to Antioch, to locate, arrest, torture, and exterminate the last non-Christians in the city and to burn down all the private libraries.

AD 561-574-Pope John III, consecrated Pope on 17th of July 561, in 571, to escape possible capture by invading forces retires to the catacombs of Praetextatus. Many of the records regarding this Pope have perished, but we still have remnants which show that, "...Roving monks were proving to be a social menace... There... Were long periods when many monasteries were nothing but houses of ill repute... The second Council of Tours in the year 567... Publicly admitted there was hardly a cleric anywhere without his wife or mistress." ~De Rosa, op. cit., pp. 402-03.

AD 562-Mass arrests, public mockings, tortures, imprisonments and executions of the gentile Hellenes in Athens, Antioch, Palmyra and Constantinople is ordered by the Emperor.

AD 570-The Holy Lance: mentioned in the Gospel of John 9:34, is said to have been discovered in the Pilgrimage of 570 by Saint Antoninus of Piacenza, having been seen in the Basilica of Mount Sion [Zion] along with the crown of thorns. The name of the soldier who pierced the side of Jesus, Loginos is said to be inscribed upon it [In 615, King Chosroes' troops capture Jerusalem and the point of the broken lance is given to Nicetas who takes to Constantinople to be secured at the Church of Saint Sophia. Presented in 1244 by Baldwin to Saint Louis].

In 1492 the Sultan, Bajazet delivers it to Pope Innocent VIII as a conciliatory gesture for the release of his brother who is a prisoner. The Holy Lance is now preserved at St. Peter's, in Rome. Another lance is known as the Lance of St. Maurice and is stored in Vienna. A third lance is preserved in Krakow and is known to be at least eight centuries old.

AD 570-The Great Prophet Muhammad, Mahomet, Messenger of God has a revelation where the Angel Gabriel [Jibril] visits him in 612. A message is given to him for a new religion "Islam" which means, "Surrender." Followers must surrender to God. Muhammad, or Muhammad, ignores the message out of the embarrassment it would cause him and his family. Why did the messenger of God pick him, a poor humble businessman? It would take another visit before the Prophet Muhammad embarks upon spreading the word of God to the Arab world. The Angel Gabriel reveals the Koran to the Prophet Muhammad over a period of twenty-three years. ~See, John 14:16, 14:26, 15:26, 16:7.

In 620, Mohammad has another vision in which he ascends a ladder of light to sit at the foot of God's Heavenly Throne. He gains converts and due to persecution he sets about to organize armies to overcome his oppressors. According to the Koran, a non-believer is not an atheist, but one who is ungrateful to God. Muhammad believes that all rightly guided faith comes from one God, Moses and Jesus are recognized as Great Prophets. Resurrection and Judgment Day are recognized tenets of this new faith.

There is no need for priesthood; each Muslim is responsible to God for his or her own fate, and all religions that give respect to God come from God. "A seeker after truth must shun no science, scorn no book, nor cling fanatically to a single creed." ~Rasā'ī IV, 42, p. 87.

With this philosophy, the Muslims become the greatest initiators of mathematics and sciences in the world eventually bringing to an end the era known as the Dark Ages brought about by Christianity. "God is One, there is no God but God."

Jesus is seen as a Prophet and not as a Divine Being. Islam in its original interpretations of "Surrender to God" allows everyone to be one with God. The religion of Muhammad, the Holy Prophet, does not lay claim to any monopoly of God for theirs was a religion of tolerance. It was not until they had endured countless atrocities at the hands of the Christians that they organized into a coherent group to rebel against those who would kill their women and children and steal their lands in the name of God.

In Sura 57, A. 16-the Christians and Jews are referred to as those who were given The Book of which some have ignored. The Islamic Faith, early on recognized the good as well as the bad in all cultures, denying that which is evil and accepting that which is good in all of us. The Prophet Jesus, Mary, mother of Jesus, and the disciples are all mentioned in the Holy Qur-on [Saras 3:35-37, 3:45, 6:85, 22:58]

A philosophy of the Belief in Truth, that cruelty will ruin oneself, and that wealth and position will not save one is fundamental to the Islamic faith. The Islamic faith teaches that God is near us, there is one and only one God, God is eternal, God is merciful, and God forgives all sins.

It is said that Mahomet had access to "The First Gospel of the Infancy of Jesus Christ" when compiling the Koran. This book was also received and accepted by the Gnostics in the 2nd century. In the Koran, Sura 4:157, we have, "That they said [in boast], 'We killed the Christ Jesus the son of Mary, the messenger of Allah'—but they killed him not, nor crucified him. Only a likeness of that was shown to them." ~Holy Koran, Sura 4:157.

To the Muslim, the particulars of the death of Jesus are a moot point. What people fail to understand is the message is what is important and not so much the messenger.

The Islamic libraries contained books from various cultures, creeds, and religions when their western counterparts were floundering in the Dark Ages due to the vice-like grip of the Roman Catholic Church's restrictions on all literature, both scientific and religious.

"English North Americans embraced slavery because they were Christians, not in spite of it." ~Forrest G. Woods, historian, author.

Freedom of the press is not known then, nor now, by Catholics, hence the Forbidden Books List, which endeavors [so the Church claims] to protect the faith. The basic teachings of Islam resemble Arianism, which at one time is the accepted belief of the early church followers.

His Holiness Pope Honorius, 625-638, contends that if God is as the Church later supplanted of three minds "Trilogy" then there would be conflict. Forty-two years after the death of Honorius he is anathematized for his thinking and denunciation of the Trinity [what happened to the infallibility of the Pope?] Muhammad believed that the Christians, Jews, and Muslims were all praying to the same God and that only a Prophet could save mankind. Muhammad did not believe that he was that Prophet, sent to save the world.

But, he had another vision in which the angel Gabriel visited him and said, "Muhammad! Thou art the Apostle of God and I am Gabriel." Later, Muhammad would state, "Never once did I receive a revelation without feeling that my soul was being torn away from."

Muhammad's followers began by trusting their memories to retain the words of the revelation they had received from the Prophet. Those who could write traced them in ancient characters on palm leaves, tanned hides, or dry bones. After the Prophet's death, the fragments are then collected by Zaid ibn Thabit, Muhammad's trusted disciple. He, who was charged by Abu Bekr, the caliph, to collect all that could be discovered of the sacred text to be put into one volume.

The chapters are arranged according to their length, without regard to historical sequence. The revision made twenty years later affected details of the language of the text. Prophets who communicate the word of god are not considered divine.

Muslim writings portray a faction of evil beings, called "Jinns," who cause destruction and preside in places where evil activities take place. The original "Jinn" was called "Iblis," who was cast out of Heaven by Allah for refusing to worship Adam, the first man, due to jealousy.

"The best and most accessible edition of the Koran is that of Flugel, 'Al-Qoran: Corani textus Arabicus' [Leipzig, 1834 and since]. Maracci's famous Latin translation of the Koran, with a refutation and commentary, is still unique and useful: 'Alcorani textus universus' [(Padua, 1698]. The Standard English versions are those of Sale [London, 1734] with a still useful introductory essay; Rodwell [London, 1861], arranged in chronological order; and Palmer in 'Sacred Books of the East.'" ~Oxford, 1880, Catholic Encyclopedia.

I have found the Qur-an, revised and edited by The Presidency of Islamic Researches, IFTA, as printed by King Fahd an outstanding piece of literature, having access to both the Arabic writing with its English translation alongside accompanied by scholarly notes most enlightening. ~Reference to the Great Prophet [Mohammad] is made in the Christian Bible: Deuteronomy 18:14-20, and 18:18-19, as well as John 15:16, and 16:7-8.

The Prophet Mohammed is known by his deeds to have been a man of gallant courage, noteworthy generalship, strong patriotism, merciful by nature, and quick to forgive [He was however, ruthless in his dealings with the Jews]. Christian leaders such as Martin Luther saw Mohammed as "A devil and first-born child of Satan." Martin Luther was also positive that, "Flies are the images of heretics and devils!" ~Martin Luther

Spanheim and D'Herbelot portrayed Mohammed as a "Wicked impostor," and a "Dastardly liar," and Pridaux brands him as a "Willful deceiver."

Many forget that it was Luther Martin Luther, after admonishing Philip of Hesse to tell a "Good stout lie," defends his advice by declaring its okay to lie.

"What would it matter if, for the sake of the Christian Church, one were to tell a big lie?" ~Martin Luther.

It is this type of overt religious hatred, and subliminal pious influence that perpetuates animosity between the various reverent faiths. In the 20th century, Hitler will use his "Christian" upbringing to condemn the Jews as well as to sentence them to death based on his interpretations of Christian secular hatred.

"He who is folkishly oriented has the most sacred duty, each within his own denomination, to see to it that God's will is not simply talked about outwardly, but that God's will is also fulfilled and God's labor not ravished. Because 'God's Will' once gave men their form, their being, and their faculties. Who destroys His work thereby declares war on the creation of the Lord, the Divine Will." ~The most infamous Catholic of them all, Adolf Hitler, Mein Kampf.

"Jihad," in Islam, is the spiritual struggle against all evil. Jihad is the duty all Muslims, or Sunnites, comprising of four ways that they may fulfill a Jihad: by the "Heart," the "Tongue," the "Hand," or the "Sword."

The spiritual battle of the heart is against vice, passion, obsessions, and ignorance; spreading the word of Islam by one's tongue is choosing to do good and avoiding evil by one's hand; and last is the waging of war against non-Muslims with the sword. Islamic Law divides the world into dar al-Islam [abode of Islam] and dar al-harb [abode of war, or non-Muslim rule]. Islam stresses the inner, spiritual jihad, but the Islamic Law also states that all nations must surrender to Islamic rule [if not its faith]. Therefore, all adult, male, and able-bodied Muslims are expected to take part in aggressive jihads against non-Muslim neighbors and neighboring lands.

Those who perish in this type of jihad become martyrs of their faith and are rewarded with in a special place in heaven. There exists two kinds of non-Muslim enemies: kafir [nonbelievers in Islam] and ahl al-kitab [people of the Book]. The Kafirs, Buddhists and Hindus, must convert to Islam or face execution, and once converted to the faith, "Islam," it is considered a capital offense to renounce the faith [similar to Catholicism]. People of the "Book" include Jews, Christians, and the followers of Zoroastrianism.

They need only submit to Muslim political authority to avoid or end a jihad. The Catholic Church will take strong offense to the Muslims challenging their authority, and Pope Urban II will one day decide that a religious war is a good means to occupy the loutish knights riding across the European countryside creating pandemonium amongst the poor landless serfs.

But, the Muslims are as unwavering in their faith as the Christians in Europe, the Middle East, and India, "That in the Mahometan religion it was an established tenet that the more the glory of the Prophet was exalted, and the more his followers exerted themselves in the subversion of idolatry, the greater would be their reward in Heaven; that therefore it was his firm resolution, with the assistance of God, to root out the abominable worship of idols from the land of India: why then should he spare Tannasar?" ~Mahometans In India: Bloody Invasions Under Mahmud A.D. 1000 by Alexander Dow.

AD 578-582-The Christians torture and crucify Hellenes [Greek Pagans] all around the Eastern Empire, thus exterminating the last non-Christians of Heliopolis [Baalbek].

AD 580-662-Maximus, the Confessor, known as the Father of Byzantine Theology, believes that human beings only fulfill themselves when they are United with God. Man [and woman] has a potential for the Divine and will become fully human when this is realized.

The Christian Inquisitors assault the secret Pagan temple of Zeus, in Antioch. The priest commits suicide, but the remaining Pagans are arrested. All of the prisoners [the Vice Governor Anatolius is included], are tortured and then sent to Constantinople to face trial. Sentenced to death they are thrown to the lions. The wild beasts, not being that interested are unwilling to tear them to pieces, so the victims end up being crucified. Their dead bodies are dragged in the streets by the Christian mobs and after wards thrown unburied into the local dump.

The "Logos" did not become man to make reparations for the sin of first man and the 'Incarnation' would have occurred even if Adam had not sinned, man achieving his "Ultimate Being" by reaching perfection [This revelation is similar to the Buddhist Enlightenment].

AD 583-New persecutions are instituted against the gentile Hellenes by Emperor Maurice.

AD 585-Jeremiah, the Prophet [2 Chronicles 36:21, Jeremiah 1:1, Daniel 9:2], is alleged to have traveled to Ireland bringing with him many meaningful objects from Jerusalem. One item is the "Ark of the Covenant." The Church, through the centuries, has played down this significant event.

The Patriarch Saint of Ireland, falling upon "Saint Patriarch," the Roman Catholics choosing to bestow the honor upon their own Christian missionary who died in the county of Down, on March 17, 465, one thousand and fifty years later. Saint Patrick is not the traditional patron of Ireland, but it serves the Roman Catholic Church's purpose.

It is alleged that the "Ark of the Covenant," was last seen was in Ireland! "The fact is, Rome began early to covet Ireland. Once they got possession, it was necessary for them to destroy the influence of Jeremiah. This they did, in part, by substituting the name of St. Patrick in the place of the prophet's; and more, they then set to work to destroy even the old and famous capital city of Tara. In 565 AD, St. Ruadham, along with a posse of bishops and chiefs of the South of Ireland, cursed the city, so that neither King nor Queen might ever rule or reign therein again. They forced the government, monarchy, and people to abandon the place. From thence Tara was deserted..." ~From The Ten Lost Tribes, Rev. Joseph Wild, D.D., 1883, London: Robert Banks, Printer, Racquet Court, Fleet Street, E. C.

Suppression of the truth is pervasive and necessary in attempting to destroy the traditions of the 'Tuath de Danan,' of Irish folklore in order to spread the news of Christianity. Accounts of the Hebrews who transplanted their royal lineage and priesthood from Palestine to Ireland, for safe keeping via the Prophet Jeremiah and Barech are lost. Christians Historians reject it as fable and prose.

"Irish historians are unanimous that about 580 B.C.E., there arrived in Ulster a notable man, a patriarch or saint, accompanied by an Eastern princess, and a lesser person by the name of Simon Brach, or Barech. This party brought with them several remarkable things about which Ireland's songs and legends cluster; those things were a harp [David's harp] and a wonderful stone, the Stone of Destiny, the Lia Phail, Irish tradition tells us that Jeremiah married the princess Tamar Tephi to Eochaidh, the Heremon, or head king of Ireland, after the latter embraced the worship of the true Jehovah. Jeremiah became the chief figure in Irish history, life and religion." ~Tracing Our White Ancestors by Frederick Haberman

Irish Legends include: "The Wishing Well," similar to the pit where Joseph was cast down or hidden and his blood soaked pieces of his coat of many colors was taken from him [the kilt is the Irish substitute worn today]. Northern and Western Ireland were once called Scotland [and they also had the kilt of many colors as well].

Irish legend has wishing wells, with small bits of torn clothing placed around the edge of the well. Supposedly brought to Ireland by the Prophet Jeremy [Jeremiah] and his companion Barech, of Palestine.

"Sacred Wells," common in Ireland, based upon Joseph's grandeur in Egypt being brought about by his being put in a pit [Genesis 37:24, in the Septuagint it is a 'Cistern,' and in the Vulgate Bible it is 'Cistern,' while the Fenton Version has 'Well']. ~Note: It is noteworthy that while the variations of which Saint Jerome and Augustine complained were largely due to blunders, or natural mistakes, of earlier copyists, they did sometimes represent various readings in the Greek originals. Want to know why the Protestants hate the Catholics? Even today? "On all sides the Protestants of Ireland were attacked unawares, ejected from their houses, hunted down, slaughtered, exposed to all the perils, all the tortures that religious and patriotic hatred could invent. A half-savage people, passionately attached to its barbarism, eager to avenge in a day ages of outrage and misery, with a proud joy committed excesses which struck their ancient masters with horror and dismay." ~Guizot on the Irish Massacres of 22 October 1641.

The Catholic burned the Protestant homes, turned them naked into the cold of winter, drowned them naked in the rivers, and if they happened to surface, they would hit them with rifle butts or shoot them, men were cut to pieces before their wives, young virgin girls raped before their families, and children 7 or 8 hung before their parents' eyes; the Irish taught their kids to strip and kill Protestant kids by burying them alive [70 per trench], which persecution ran for 8 yrs., that is until Cromwell came along.

It was at the well that his brother, Reuben, tore his clothes, because Joseph was not in the well. ~British History Traced From Egypt & Palestine And Other Essays, Israel in Ireland by Covenant Publishing Company Limited, 1927.

"The pot of gold," is a reference to a pot made of gold [not filled with gold] This is in reference to the "Ark of the Covenant" being covered with gold, as depicted in the "Throne Room of God," and under the rainbow [in Heaven]. "The Little People," as the Angels argue over the body of Moses, at his death, the angels disagree over the hiding place of the "Ark of the Covenant."

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

The Ark is finally hidden and the angels still argue over the place where it is hidden. Many believe that this is a spiritual battle, replicated in modern day Ireland with the conflict between the Protestants and the Gentile Christian Church attempting to have dominion over the resting place of the Ark of the Covenant. A conspiracy theory having the Ark hidden behind legends would conceal the real roots and national background of the people of Ireland and their roots being from the Israelites. Jeremiah took the Ark and other sacred objects along with the royal princesses of Israel to a New World, for safety to be re-united with the remnant of their own people, Israel when the time was suitable.

"Birth Stones," the emerald is the stone of the tribe of Dan, one of the tribes of Israel, which migrated early in Israel's history, allegedly to far off Ireland.

AD 587- The barbarian Visigoths in Spain are converted to Christianity.

AD 589- Catholic Third Council of Toledo, Reccared and the Visigoths convert from Arianism [Jesus is not God] to Catholicism and the Filioque clause is added to Nicene Creed of 381.

Under the reign of the Catholic King Authari, and Queen Theodelinda, the Lombards are converted to Roman Catholicism [not by choice].

Catholic Spain, the Third Council of Toledo orders that children born of marriage between Jews and Christians be baptized by force, and a policy of forced conversion of all Jews is initiated. Thousands flee, and thousands of others are forcibly converted.

"It is odd that the Jews have always classified Jesus as a myth, yet his crucifixion allegedly took place in Jerusalem.... Apart from the Gospels, which cannot be regarded as either historical or objective since they were written for the sole purpose of fostering the faith of Christians, what other documentary evidence exists to prove that Jesus ever existed at all?" ~Soledad de Montalvo, Excursus from: #3, 47: 223.

AD 590- 604-Gregory I, better known as Pope Gregory the Great, last of the four Doctors of the Church. Son of a senator and great-grandson of Pope Felix III [483-492] Gregory is elected prefect of Rome in 570 at the age of thirty. His demeanor and approachability are prerequisites for Pope Pelagius II [579-90 C.E.] sending him as a representative of the Church to Emperor of Constantinople.

Pope Gregory is instrumental in preventing the invasion of Rome by paying an annual tribute to the Lombards. Some of his works include: "The Moralia" [Morals on the Book of Job] "The Liber Pastoralis Curae [Pastoral Care] and "The Dialogues" [About the legends of Saints] Responsible for the introduction of the Gregorian Chant in the liturgy.

"And Pope Gregory the Great, contemporary of his namesake of Tours, though he had been born into an old Roman family scorned classical learning, boasted of his ignorance, and fostered irrationalism. In Spain, the most respected scholar was Archbishop Isidore of Seville, one of the tireless compilers whom the early Middle Ages brought forth in profusion. Yet he forbade his churchmen and monks to read any ancient authors except grammarians. The rhetorical works of Cicero and Quintilian he dismissed as 'Too diffuse to be read,' a flagrant case of the darkest of pots calling the kettle black. Is it any wonder that the Classics were forgotten and many manuscripts were lost?" ~Testaments of Time, The Search for Lost Manuscripts and Records by Leo Duell Knopf, 1966, 1965.

Pope Gregory I, is considered one of the "Good Popes" who did not use his power and virtue to promote civilization. He was a Benedictine monk of ascetic life and infinite credulity, see his Magna Moralia and Dialogues, yet, he is a shrewd businessman. "In the year 590, the Bishops of Italy and the Grisons (Switzerland) to the number of nine, rejected the Communion of the Pope, as a heretic." ~Dr. Allix, Remarks on the Ancient Churches of Piedmont, chap. 5, p. 32, quoted in The History of the Christian Church, William Jones, chap. 4, sec. 1, p. 244.

Pope Gregory the Great declares the title of "Universal Priest" to be Anti-Christ, "Whosoever calls himself, or desires to be called, 'Universal Priest,' is in his elation the precursor of Anti-Christ, because he proudly puts himself above all others. Nor is it by dissimilar pride that he is led into error; for, as that perverse one wishes to appear as God above all men, so whosoever this one is who covets being called sole priest, he extols himself above all other priests." ~Pope Gregory the Great, 590-604, in Letter to Emperor Mauricius Augustus, against assumption of the title "Universal" by the Patriarch of Constantinople, in his Epistles, Book VII, Letter 33, trans. in Nicene and Post-Nicene Fathers, 2nd series, Vol. 12, p. 226, 2^d pagination.

Gregory believed that such religious pomposity was Satanic or anti-Christ in nature, but Pope Boniface III, 607 C.E., three years after the death of Pope Gregory, fiendishly petitions Emperor Phocas to declare the Roman See the head of all Christian Churches and that the title "Universal Bishop" would apply exclusively to the Bishop of Rome. This was done in an attempt to end the ambitions of the Eastern Patriarch of Constantinople. Emperor Phocas with the proclaimed subservience of the Catholic Church grants the request, and a grateful and acquiescent Pope Boniface III erects a gilded statue of the Emperor in Rome proclaiming his magnitude and greatness.

"The Church brutalized the breed of our forefathers... She [paraphrase]... Aimed at creating ferocious, currish and stupid natures... It is enough to make the blood boil... To be the heirs of such hateful ancestry."

~Sir Francis Galton, 1822-1911.

Pope [Saint] Gregory I expected the speedy 'End of the World,' as the Huns rampaged, pillaged, and raped across the known world, which was not conducive to efforts to reform the appalling social order, the entire civilized world was then at the lowest level it had touched since the beginning of history, and the large landholders whom he persuaded of this left their estates and slaves, then almost the only form of wealth, to the Papacy. ~Note: Jesus states that "Male and female" humans have existed "From the beginning of the Creation." ~Mark 10:6.

It became the richest owner of land, from 1,400 to 1,800 square miles, and many slaves in Europe, also attaining money estimated to have reached an income of about £400,000 a year, or five times that sum in modern values. He maintained in full the institution of slavery, which even Saint Augustine had found just, and the few cases in which Catholic writers quote him rejoicing over the manumission of slaves, not his own, are cases of men who had inherited money and promised to leave it to the Church.

His use of the wealth was severely impersonal, if sometimes questionable in ethic, but in many ways, he hindered the restoration of civilization.

He paid copious compliments to the most vicious and brutal rulers of the time, Queen Brunichildis of Gaul, now France, and the Emperor Phocas, when they promised to help the Church, and shockingly rejoiced in their murders of good men who opposed the Papacy.

Pope Saint Gregory I also reaffirms the law of religious compulsion and the law that no slave could be allowed to enter the clergy; and he heavily rebuked a Gallic [French] Bishop for attempting to restore education [VI, 54]. Against this the chief Catholic historian of the Papacy at this date, Mgr. Mann, quotes some praise of learning by Gregory in his supposed "Commentary on the First Book of Kings."

Even the Benedictine editors of his works had pointed out that this is spurious. The charge that Pope Gregory burned the last surviving books and destroyed the statues of pagan Rome is often described as quite baseless. It is, in fact, given by the learned Bishop, John of Salisbury, as a clerical tradition of Rome itself, and seems likely enough. ~A summary study of Pope Gregory's character and work, based upon his extraordinarily numerous letters, will be found in McCabé's Crises in the History of the Papacy (1916, ch. IV).

"The idea of Purgatory came from Persia, and Pope Gregory I, in 604 C.E., was the first Christian with brains enough to sense its commercial value. The Council of Trent, 1545-1563, declared the Purgatory swindle to be a matter of Catholic faith. What happened to the millions of good Catholics who died without the benefit of a 'Cooling Off' sojourn in Purgatory some priest might explain." ~Frank C. Hughes.

When it was realized that a potential financial profit had been overlooked, the Christian Fathers held a hasty council session at Lyons in the year 1274 AD confirming at Florence in 1439, and in the famous Council of Trent, in the 1540's, and resolved, "Whereas the Catholic Church, instructed by the Holy Ghost, has from the Sacred Scriptures [chapter and verse not cited, which is a common practice when they prevaricate] and the ancient tradition of the Fathers taught in councils [unspecified] and very recently in this Ecumenical Synod, that there is a purgatory, and that the souls there in detained are helped by the suffrages [i.e., paid prayers] of the faithful, but principally by the acceptable sacrifice of the altar; the Holy Synod enjoins on the Bishops that they diligently endeavor to have the sound Doctrine of the Fathers in councils regarding Purgatory everywhere taught and preached, held and believed by the faithful." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, Vol. XII, p. 575.

It may have been the Holy Ghost that inspired the Holy Council of Trent as to the 'Installment-Pay-As-You-Sin-Plan,' revealing that, "Indulgences [at so much per sin] are most salutary for Christian people, and may be applied to the souls in Purgatory." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, Vol. XII, p. 578.

AD591- The Third Synod of Orléans decrees that Jews can no longer show themselves in the public streets

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

during Passover Week.

Theodelinda, Queen of the Lombards, begins her gradual conversion from Arianism [God is not Divine] to Catholicism.

The Catholic Church, and its Christian writers, are proud to point to the fact that several Popes have passed edicts towards the protection of Jews, but like their word, which is often encased in falsehoods, history shows the opposite. We all know what happened just prior to and during WWII with Hitler when the Church turned the other cheek during the mass extermination of Jews.

Pope [Saint] Gregory the Great kindly decrees that Jews are not to be forced into Christian Baptism, "Lest they return to their former superstition and die the worse for having been 'Born Again.'"

"You are of your father the Devil, and your will is to do your father's desire. He was a murderer from the beginning, and has nothing to do with the truth because there is no truth in him. When he lies, he speaks according to his own nature, for he is a liar and the father of lies. But because I tell you the truth, you do not believe me." ~Pope Gregory the Great to the Jews, 591 C.E., cf. John 8:44-45.

"With the Christian God established under state protection as the source of all wisdom, and the highlighting of miracles as a sign of God's favor, scientific and mathematical research became redundant."

~C. Freeman, The Closing of the Western Mind, xvii.

AD 592- The diabolical Christian doctrine of purgatory is introduced.

AD 597- Saint Augustine sets up house in Canterbury and begins converting the Kingdom of Kent to Christianity. He founds Saint Martin's Church, the oldest site of Christian worship in England.

AD 600- The earliest references to King Arthur and the mythic Merlin the Druid Magician [possibly Myraddin, who assisted Ambrosius Aurelianus near Solway Firth], are found in the Welsh poem, "Y Gododdin," written in Latin, in the 9th century.

Merlin, the Magician, is born of a virgin, a demon child, endowed with magical powers of prophecy. Merlin's spells of magic are believed to have caused the Battle of Ardeyd, near Carlisle, a vision caused him to be transformed into a crazy man, living in the forests of Scotland. There is also the Welsh story, "The Mabinogion," era 1100 C.E.

Prayers are now directed to the Virgin Mary.

Under Pope Gregory I, the papacy becomes the absolute supreme authority of the Western Church; establishing of the doctrine, "Religio illigito," the policy by which all Jews are to be forcibly converted through restriction of Jewish religious activity and proffering political, financial, and economic inducements to converts. The Jews are supposed to be protected from violence, and allowed to co-exist, but are prohibited from attaining any equal status to Christians. Pope Saint Gregory, the Great also decrees that Jews shall not have excessive freedoms, but also "In no way should they suffer a violation of their rights," which does not stop the odious Christians from persecuting them, nor the Church from ignoring its own decrees.

AD 600- Archbishop of Canterbury, Augustine, condemns Astrology. The Church has already made significant changes to the Bible to edit out any references to Astrology.

AD 606- Amid the convulsions, confusions, and spiritual despots of the nations, Pope Sabinian, of Rome is made 'Universal Bishop,' with the ten chief kingdoms of Europe recognizing him as 'Christ's Vicar' on earth, the only center of unity, the only source of stability to their thrones, the only voice of God on earth. There is hardly a form of "Pious Fraud" or saintly imposture practiced to this day along the banks of the Tiber River, in 'God's City,' that cannot be proved to have had its counterpart on the banks of the Euphrates, or in the structures that come from it.

Earlier Popes did not agree with Universal titles. Pope Gregory criticizes titles of Universal, "Lo, he received the keys of the Heavenly Kingdom, and power to bind and loose is given him, the care and principality of the whole Church is committed to him, and yet he [Peter] is not called the Universal Apostle; while the most Holy man, my fellow-priest John, attempts to be called Universal Bishop. I am compelled to cry out and say, 'O tempora, O mores!'" ~Book V, Epistle XX: To Mauricius Augustus, Pope Gregory the Great, 590-604.

Even the images of the Virgin Mary, made to shed tears, tears long ago shed by the pagan images, oftentimes destroyed by the good Christians, who would adorn the images with images they will call their own. To these tender-hearted idols Lucan alludes, when, speaking of the prodigies that occurred during the civil wars, he says, "Tears shed by Gods, our country's patrons, and sweat from Lares, told the city's woes." Virgil will also refer to the same hypocrisy of idols that weep, made to fool the naïve, when he says, "The weeping statues did the wars foretell, and Holy sweat from brazen idols fell." ~The Two Babylons by Rev. Alexander Hislop.

Virgil tell us that when the priests put forth their magic powers, "Then statues laughed, and lamps were spontaneously enkindled." When in the consulship of Appius Claudius, 300 B.C.E., and Marcus Perpenna, Publius Crassus is slain in a dreadful battle with Aristonicus, Apollo's statue, at Cumae, is said to shed tears for four days without intermission.

AD 614- Chosroes II and his Persian [Sasanid] troops overrun Palestine slaughtering thousands of Christians and destroying their churches. The Jews support the invaders, hoping to receive better treatment than from Rome in defiance of the Emperor, Heraclius, who previously ordered all Jews to be baptized against their will.

Khosrau II [also spelled Chosroes] of Persia, upon conquering Damascus, Jerusalem, takes the Holy Cross of Christ.

AD 615- 618-Pope Saint Deusdedit [also listed as Pope Adeodatus I], his father is Stephen, a Catholic sub-deacon. Pope Saint Deusdedit, is the first Pope to use Seals [of lead] for official documents.

AD 618- The earliest records of a quantity of of the Prophet Mohammed's teachings.

AD 624- Mohammed marries Aisha, the ten year-old daughter of Abu Bekr.

AD 625- 642?-Khalid ibn al-Walid, an exceptional Arab general known as "The Sword of Allah," unites Islam after the death of its founder, Muhammad. Born to the Quraysh tribe of Mecca, Khalid, a pagan, is instrumental in an early defeat of the Islamic Prophet Muhammad at the Battle of Uhud in 625. Khalid later converts to Islam.

During the secessionist wars after Muhammad's death in 632, Khalid subdues the rebellious tribes of the desolate tracts and cements the Muslim alliance across the Arabian Peninsula. The Caliph Umar sent Khalid across the desert into Iraq where Muslim armies defeat the Persians and gain control of the Euphrates region. Khalid is then transferred to Syrian where he led the Muslim cavalry against the Byzantine armies at the Battle of Yarmuk in 637.

Damascus, once a Byzantine stronghold, finally surrenders. The Middle East thus falls under Arab, Islamic rule.

AD 626- Husayn ibn Mansur is imprisoned by the ruling Islamic authorities and crucified like his champion, Jesus. In his death he cries out, "I am the Truth" as did Jesus. His claim of God being subjective is understood as blasphemous under Koran teachings at the time.

AD 627- The adversaries of Mohammed, from Mecca, besiege Medina and slaughter 700 Jews.

AD 628- Mohammed successfully captures Mecca and writes letters to all the rulers of the world, explaining the main beliefs of the Muslim faith.

The Battle of Mut'ah, Heraclius recovers the Cross of Christ and Jerusalem from the Muslims.

AD 629- Pope Honorius I sides with the Roman Emperor Heraclius in the Monothelite controversy, for which he will be anathematized many years after his death.

Heraclius overthrows the Persians and takes a bloody revenge upon the Jews who supported them.

AD 630- The prostitution of adult women did not appear to have unduly worried the Great Church of Rome. The punishment inflicted on the pimps who ran the child prostitution arrangement, therefore varied according to their wealth and respectability. Paradoxically, the Byzantine administration considered the job of enforcement as Imperial Inspector of the Brothels as eminently honorable, so much so that in 630 the Bishop of Palermo was appointed to this post.

AD 633- Christianity spreads. Some progress of Mohammedanism. The churches of Jerusalem, Antioch, and Alexandria, Egypt, are lost to the Christian faith, which desecrates ancient religious icons.

AD 640- Library of Alexandria, "The Center of Western Culture," with 300,000 ancient papyrus scrolls, is destroyed.

AD 641- Under the leadership of Abd-al-Rahman, Muslims conquer southern areas of Azerbaijan, Daghestan, Georgia, and Armenia. Under the leadership of Amr ibn al-As, Muslims conquer the Byzantine city of Alexandria in Egypt. Amr forbids the looting of the city and proclaims 'Freedom of Worship' for all. According to some accounts, he also has what was left of the Great Library burned the following year.

Al-As creates the first Muslim city in Egypt, al-Fustat, and builds there the first Mosque in Egypt. ~The Knights Templar Calendar, http://www.geocities.com/rpcv_geo/calendar.html

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

Book-copying industry at Alexandria is destroyed by the Arabs; end of the Alexandrian school, the center of Western culture.

AD 642-649-Pope Theodore I, father is a Catholic Bishop.

AD 650- Paulus Aegineta describes "Melancholic lycanthropia." [Despondent Weewolves].

Caliph Othman puts Mohammed's teachings [The Holy Koran] into 114 chapters, which are influenced by Jewish and Christian theologies.

AD 651 (?) -1534-Peter's Pence: a monetary offering to the Pope. A tax on an individual's household goods is paid to the Church. Also known as Romescot. A larger tax was paid by royalty and is probably one of the primary factors in King Henry VIII's opposition and efforts to dissolve Roman Catholicism and the Pope in England. The misuse of this taxation system and the monies collected will contribute to the Enlightenment Era and the spread of Protestantism.

The Church displays hardly any morals or principles when it comes to compilation of financial wealth from young and old, rich or poor. Emperor Charlemagne, and his Christian followers, recognize the significance of the Jews in trade and extend privileges to Jews for engaging in business, but the Jews are required to pay a tenth of their annual income for protection by the Carolingians.

"Rich widows were surrounded by swarms of clerical sycophants, who addressed them in tender diminutives, studied and consulted their every foible, and, under the guise of piety, lay in wait for their gifts or bequests. The evil attained such a point that a law was made under Valentinian depriving the Christian priests and monks of that power of receiving Legacies which was possessed by every other class of the community." ~Lecky, History of European Morals, vol. 2, pg 151.

And even the great Christian saints lament the fact that they cannot receive monies from gifts to idols. Indeed, so great had financial insatiability in its volume then become, that, "Church property excited the cupidity [greediness] of the various factions, upon the death of Charlemagne." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 5, 774. In the 21st century, the clever Pope John Paul II still refuses to unlock Vatican records or admit the ill-gotten gains taken from the Jews during the 'Terrorizing Reign' in Nazi Germany during WWII.

"I fear that Christians who stand with only one leg upon earth, also stand with only one leg in Heaven." ~Months before his execution by the Nazis, Dietrich Bonhoeffer.

"The priests of the idols might receive inheritances; only the clergy and monks were prohibited by this law, and prohibited not by persecutors, but by Christian princes... I grieve that we should merit this law." ~Saint Jerome, Epist. lii.

AD 656-747-John of Damascus, at the Monastery of Mar Sabbas near Bethlehem, defends the use of icons. The Church will vacillate between the use, and its non-use, of icons due to the financial rewards versus its teachings, and will opt for the rewards and its teachings will be modified accordingly.

Does not the Bible proclaim, "Thou shall have no false images before me?" ~Exodus 20:4 [See AD 787, on how the Church attempts to resolve this matter].

"Each nation has created a God, and the God has always resembled his creators. He hated and loved what they hated and loved, and he was invariably found on the side of those in power. Each God was intensely patriotic, and detested all nations but his own. All these Gods demanded praise, flattery, and worship. Most of them were pleased with sacrifice, and the smell of innocent blood has ever been considered a Divine perfume. All these Gods have insisted upon having a vast number of priests, and the priests have always insisted upon being supported by the people, and the principal business of these priests has been to boast about their God, and to insist that he could easily vanquish all the other Gods put together." ~Robert G. Ingersoll, The Gods, 1872.

AD 660-Paulicians, Iconoclasts [image worshippers] reject sacraments, baptism, and marriage. ~Idols are also referred to in Exodus 20:2-4, I John 5:21, Rev. 16:2, I Cor. 12:1-3.

A source of revenue that cannot be overlooked by the Church. The early Church Fathers condemned married life, and considered it their duty to dissuade women from cohabiting with their husbands. A woman who deserted her husband was an object of admiration. Anyone guilty of sexual intercourse, whether married or not, they deplored and were unworthy of entering Heaven on the day of Resurrection. Saint Ambrose said that "Married people ought to blush at the state in which they are living."

He maintained that the race was born in a state of virginity and that to change that state was to deface the work of the Mighty Creator! Both Saint Ambrose and Tertullian declared that the extinction of the human race was preferable to its propagation by sexual congress!

Bishop Gregory of Nyssa held that Adam and Eve had been created sexless, and that the phrase "Male and female created He them" referred to a subsequent act necessitated by Adam's disobedience. ~From The Ten Commandments by Joseph Lewis.

AD 668-First Siege of Constantinople: This attack lasts off and on for seven years, with the Muslim forces generally spending the winters on the island of Cyzicus, a few miles south of Constantinople, and only sailing against the city during the spring and summer months.

The Greeks are able to fend off repeated attacks with a weapon desperately feared by the Arabs called 'Greek Fire,' which is equivalent to modern napalm. It burned through ships, shields, and flesh and it could not be put out once it started.

Muawiyah has to send emissaries to Byzantine Emperor Constans to beg him to let the survivors return home unimpeded, a request that is granted in exchange for a yearly tribute of 3,000 pieces of gold, fifty slaves, and fifty Arab horses. ~The Knights Templar Calendar, http://www.geocities.com/tpcv_geo/calendar.html

AD 673-735-Bede: Biblical scholar who translated the Bible into the Anglo-Saxon language. Bede was also known as the "Father of English History." The Church is not happy with this turn of events and is quite content to keep its audience forever in darkness. Until this translation was available in plain everyday common language, the only people who could read Scripture [Latin, Ancient Hebrew, and Ancient Greek] were church members and the rich.

The Church sees the Scriptures translated into everyday common language as a blasphemy to the word of God, for not only does it make the word available to mankind, it also undermines the power of the Church by standardizing what the Church has not really come to terms with itself.

AD 674-674-678: The siege of Constantinople, and the first use of Greek fire [napalm like substance]. Economics and Law: Between 600 and 800, the initiation of private legal codes: The Farmer's Law [Georgikos Nomos] and the Rhodian Sea Law.

AD 675-749-Saint John of Damascus, formerly financial officer to the Saracen Caliph of Damascus, resigns his post in 700 because of the treatment of the Christians under the Caliph. He is considered a Saint in both Western and Eastern Christian Churches.

AD 679-After the assassination of the last Merovingian monarch, Dagobert II, protectors of the royal lineage form a secret society, the "Priory of Zion," around the "Sang real," the "Royal blood," of the descendants of Jesus and Mary Magdalen.

This may be the true meaning of sangraal, Baigent and Leigh suggest, the Holy Grail of medieval romancers. The Knights Templar, the authors found, may have had much to do with this Priory of Zion, the foundations of which may harken back to the House of David, to Jesus and Solomon, the lineage of the Israelite kings.

Early church fathers, as well as Pope Gregory the Great, incorrectly identified Mary Magdalene with the sinful woman who anointed Christ's feet at the house of Simon the Pharisee, while others believed Mary was Mary of Bethany, sister of Martha, and Lazarus.

The Templars may have secretly dedicated themselves to the very special bloodline of Mary Magdalene, believing the wisdom-legacy of Solomon and Jesus to be their own. Enthroning this lineage during the Middle Ages, the Templars would have set their golden age in motion. ~from Secret History, By David Lewis

The "Priory of Zion," a fourteen hundred year old secret society today, claims it possesses proof that Jesus Christ survived the crucifixion. "The gifts of German princes, nobles, and private individuals increased the landed possessions of the abbey so rapidly that they soon extended over distant parts of Germany." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 6, pg 313.

"In parts of Germany [in 1770] the number and wealth of the religious houses, in some instances their uselessness, and occasionally their disorders, tempted the princes to lay violent and rapacious hands on them." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 4, 38.

"The luxury of bishops and the worldly possessions of monks" led to violent rebellions in Italy in the 12th century. ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 1, 748. It may also be the repository of Europe's secret history and the underground annals of all of Christendom, or it may be all be just an extremely elaborate hoax.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

In 1982 a book, "Holy Blood, Holy Grail," by the BBC documentary filmmaker Henry Lincoln and historians Michael Baigent and Richard Leigh becomes a bestseller.

Legend has it that somewhere beneath its ancient cobblestone streets, the small village of Rennes le Chateau harbors a fabulous treasure. Locals believe the legends that the valuable treasures belonged to the Cathars, Christian heretics exterminated by the Catholic Church in the 13th century. ~from the works of Jonathan Vankin and John Whalen.

AD 680-Third Council of Constantinople [Sixth Ecumenical Council] requested by Emperor Constantine IV to condemn monotheism [some say it was convened by order of Pognatius] decides in the belief in one God, it was also decided that Christ had two wills. There is disagreement in the nature of Jesus. Jesus has only one will, but has two natures: human & divine according to the new Church Doctrine.

This interpretation of new doctrine is to be another divisive factor in the nature of the Roman Catholic faith and the Orthodox faith for centuries [Christmas being celebrated on the 25th of December by Catholics and on the 6th of January by the Orthodox. Both days relate to the winter solstice].

The Jews and Muslims share in the contradiction of the Christian Doctrine of the Trinity, Monotheism being a firm tenet of Muslims and Jews, therefore the Trinity is incompatible with the tenets of monotheism, some groups rejecting Trinitarianism in favor of Unitarianism.

The Third Council of Constantinople, 6th Ecumenical, against Monothelites, condemns Pope Honorius I, Patriarch Sergius I of Constantinople, Heraclius' Ecthesis.

Spain, the Christian King Ewig orders all the Jew to be converted to Catholicism or face expulsion.

AD 681- Pope [Saint] Gregory the Great decrees that Jews are not to be killed. Of course, the people will ignore their Pope and continue to persecute the Jews.

The Synod of Toledo orders the burning of the Talmud and other books, which Jesus once quoted. The anti-Semite, Pope Stephen IV, condemns ownership of hereditary estates by "The Jewish people, ever rebellious against God and derogatory of our rites."

AD 692- Trullan Synod. Eastern-Church discipline on clerical celibacy is settled by permitting marriage before ordination to the diaconate and continuation in marriage afterwards, but prohibiting marriage following the death of the wife thereafter. Anti-Roman canons contribute to East-West alienation.

During the century, the monastic influence of Ireland and England increased in Western Europe; schools and learning declined; regulations regarding clerical celibacy become stricter in the East.

The Trullan Synod, 692 C.E., prohibited Christians from being treated by Jewish doctors.

"The monarch, whose spiritual rank is less honorable than that of the meanest deacon, was seated below the rails of the sanctuary, and confounded with the rest of the faithful multitude." ~Gibbon, Rise and Fall, Ch. xx.

At first the Emperor's throne stood side by side with the Bishop's in the choir; but Saint Ambrose gave the Emperor a seat next to the choir. Yet, after the ancient custom, which the Concilium Quinisext., 692 C.E., in its 69th canon, expressly confirmed, the Emperors might enter the choir of the Church, and lay their oblations in person upon the altar, a privilege, which was denied to all the laity, and which implied at least a half-priestly character in the Emperor [The State is the Church].

Encyclopedic error: The Columbia Encyclopedia states that the, "Burning of heretics was not common in the Middle Ages," it appears that the editors have overlooked the fact that in the article on Witchcraft it also states, "Burning, as for heresy, was common." "I should have no compassion on these witches; I should burn them all." ~Martin Luther, 1521.

"Heretics are not to be disputed with, but to be condemned unheard, and whilst they perish by fire, the faithful ought to pursue the evil to its source, and bathe their heads in the blood of the Catholic Bishops, and of the Pope, who is the Devil in disguise." ~Martin Luther, 1521, Riffel, Kirchengeschichte.

The editors omits also to remind the reader that until the 11th century the population was too ignorant, the clergy generally too illiterate, and immorally and sensually orientated, and the middle class too scanty for heresy to spread, and that burning began as soon as heresy began. "Most of these Gods were revengeful, savage, lustful, and ignorant. As they generally depended upon their priests for information, their ignorance can hardly excite our astonishment." ~Robert G. Ingersoll, The Gods, 1872.

The encyclopedic authors exonerate the clergy of their vicious and mendacious crimes at the expense of the laity. There exists a list in the so-called "Apostolic Canons," supposedly written at the end of the 1st century of the books approved by God. ~The Canons of the Holy and Altogether August Apostles, Wheaton Christian Ethereal Library.

The "Apostles" list includes 1, 2 and 3 Maccabees, and perhaps Judith and Sirach, among the books of the Old Testament, and 1 and 2 Clement in the New, along with the Apostolic Constitutions. It, however, omits Revelations. These canons are included by name with those approved by the Synod in Trullo. Orthodox Quinisext Council, convoked by Justinian II, approves Canons of the Apostles of Apostolic Constitutions, but Clerical celibacy is rejected by Pope Constantine.

AD 693- The Council of Toledo declares that, "Sodomists" [homosexuals] have infiltrated the Catholic Church and order that clerics who lay with men should be degraded, exiled, and damned. But, as we now know this did not stop them in the late 20th century. In 2010 Christian evangelists will take their contemptible Christian hatred to Ghana, Africa, where the government, by their instigation will initiate legislation to have homosexuals, gays, lesbians, and sodomists arrested and even put to death for their actions. How history repeats itself!

AD 694- Spain, the Catholic King Egica accuses Jews of treason and their properties to be confiscated, Jews are declared slaves, and are forbidden to practice their faith. It is decreed that Jewish children be taken from them at age seven and be raised as Christians by tutors.

AD 707- The chief icon representing Christianity is the cross, which one would naturally suppose would be found upon every tomb in the catacombs of Rome, on the graves and cemeteries of the early Christians, as is now visible in Catholic cemeteries. But this is not so.

The only approach to such a symbol to be found in the catacombs is the Buddhist sacred Swastika, also seen in the old Buddhist Zodiacs, and in the Asoka inscriptions. No cross of present day shape is to be found in the mausoleums of ancient Rome. The cross was not the symbol of early Christianity. Jesus, after his acceptance as the 'Christ.'

Jesus was worshiped under the symbol of a meek and mild lamb, "The Lamb of God." It is not until the Council of Constantinople in 707 that the symbol of the cross with a man nailed to it is ordered to be used in place of the lamb, or ram, which was formerly used to denote the Victorious Sun [Sol Invictus] as he passed through the sign Aries, giving new life to the world, when he was worshipped as "The Lamb of God."

The lamb would later give place to the Phallus. The astronomical "Aries," the ram or lamb, and the Christian "Savior," has been certified by theologians as representing the Astrological aspect of the superstitious Christians. ~Exodus 40:38, Matthew 2:2, 2:16, Ezekiel 4:6, Daniel 2:27, Bank of Wisdom, Box 926, Louisville, KY 40201, The Rationalist's Manual, M. D. Aletheia, author of A Rationalist Catechism, and The Agnostic's Primer.

AD 709- The Catholic Church commences the ceremony of kissing of the Pope's foot

AD 711- The Islamic Faith is established in Spain. The Islamic faith is generally tolerant of the Jews and Christians, and it is not until the Christians take up swords against these followers that condemnation on both sides begins in earnest.

The Jewish version of the Spanish Inquisition, which took place four hundred and fifty years ago culminating with the torture, exile, and confiscation of their properties, is the source from which has emanated much Jewish fear of the Catholic Church. The Vicar of Christ, along with his apologists claim no great harm was done and that the Church merely enforced laws to protect its 'Purity of Faith' and to bring back into the fold, with whatever force necessary, those who were led astray.

According to the Apologetics, "The Spanish Inquisition arose primarily because a tender-hearted monk wanted to save the wicked from Eternal torture of perdition by tormenting them a little in this world to the end that they might abjure their heresies and be saved." ~Kershner, Pioneers of Christian Thought, pg. 103.

The desolation and human slaughter begat by Christianity, "Let us look for a moment at the number of victims sacrificed on the altars of the Christian Moloch: 1,000,000 perished during the early Arian schism; 1,000,000 during the Carthaginian struggle; 7,000,000 during the Saracen slaughters. In Spain 5,000,000 perished during the eight Crusades; 2,000,000 of Saxons and Scandinavians lost their lives in opposing the introduction of the blessings of Christianity. 1,000,000 were destroyed in the Holy(?) Wars against the Netherlands, Albigenses, Waldenses, and Huguenots. 30,000,000 Mexicans and Peruvians were slaughtered ere they could be convinced of the beauties(?) of the Christian creed. 9,000,000 were burned for witchcraft. Total, 56,000,000." And, all in the name of Jesus, their Christ, their Savior and Peace Maker and hypocritically proclaimed for 'Greater Glory of God.'" ~For the Christian

The Jews are allowed to practice their beliefs with the Muslims, however, the conquering Christians are not so permissive. This history is remembered by Rabbis who seek a union of forces with Catholic priests against the injustices of our time that afflict the Jews hold that as long as Christianity is divided; as long as Catholics are in the minority there is no fear.

But should the Catholic Church ever become the only Christian Church, as she was during the middle ages, then beware of the Auto-da-Fe, Act of Faith, 1723, the ceremony accompanying the pronouncement of judgment by the Inquisition and followed by the execution of sentence by the secular authorities; broadly: the burning of a heretic. ~Zane Publishing, Inc. and Meriam-Webster, Incorporated, 1996.

"The steady growth of power and wealth of the Church, since the beginning of the 12th century, introduced an ever-increasing spirit of worldliness." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 7, 129.

The Catholic voice is quite bashful in calling lust, immorality, lasciviousness acts, and murder for what they are. Catholics contend that those in Jewry who speak or write about the Spanish Inquisition, have received their knowledge of it from prejudicial sources, or from persons whose data concerning it were taken from corrupted already sources.

An Inquisition is a court of inquiry; that all societies, including the Masonic Lodges, have temporary or permanent trial courts, under different names, to examine members charged with violating their principles. The Catholic Church imposed its Inquisition upon the world to lend formality, legitimacy, and organizational procedures in punishing those who did not adhere to their doctrines, although today, they say it was merely to bring wayfaring Catholics back into the fold.

If adjudged guilty, such members are punished. If secular societies may legitimately institute such courts, and impose sentences, then why has not the Catholic Church a greater reason for the institution of an inquisitorial court, considering that to violate her sacred principles is to violate the principles God taught man through Moses and His Son Jesus, the Messiah?

"...Prelates were the most powerful and the wealthiest subjects of the State." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 2, 186.

The corruptness of the Church and its proclaimed leaders, who practiced many forms of lasciviousness and immorality is the reason. The inability of the Church to police itself, much less admit to its sins is another. To properly understand this question, it is necessary to bear in mind that the Inquisition was allegedly instituted in Spain for persons who professed to be Catholics and not for practicing Jews. It was to unearth, and to bring to penance, not merely heretics, as many Jews believe, but also bigamists, adulterers, blasphemers, and other violators of the principles of the Church to which they, as Baptized men and women, were obligated to be true.

In "We Jews," we have, "The task of the Inquisition was not to Persecute Jews but to cleanse the Church of unorthodoxy. The Inquisition was not concerned with infidels outside the Church but with heretics within it." ~ George E. Sokolsky, publicist, of New York City, N.Y., 1935, p. 53.

The Spanish Inquisition was instituted to supposedly weed out those Baptized Jews and Moslems, or so the Catholic Church will attempt to have you believe, those who pretended to be sincere Catholics, while they secretly adhered to the practices of Judaism and Mohammedanism, which is a most serious sacrilegious offense. They were also enemies of the State, which was Christian in principle and carried the Cross in battle against the Crescent. In spite of historical documentation to the contrary, Christian apologists will claim that their divinely inspired religious followers did not conspire to harm the Jews. But Jesus says that pretending to be religious will lead you astray, and only those who do God's will can be saved in the Judgment. ~Matthew, verses 21-23.

"It appears to be a fact as well as a theory that Jews who never ceased professing Judaism were, on the whole, left undisturbed." ~ Dr. Salo Wittmayer Baron, in his book, "A Social and Religious History of the Jews," N.Y., 1937, Vol. 2 p. 58.

In the fourteen years of the activity of the Spanish Inquisition, from its establishment in 1478 to the expulsion of the Jews from Spain, we hear of only one persecution directed against a Jewish community, however, please bear in mind that the Church has gone to extremes to expunge historical records of their dastardly crimes, and we must therefore take what they say with a grain of salt.

The Jewry of Huesca are accused in 1489 of having admitted conversos, pseudo-converts from Judaism to Christianity, to the Jewish fold. It was the Inquisitorial Courts inability to check Jewish influence on the conversos that served as an alleged argument for the Catholic monarchs to banish Jews from Spain [in actuality it was their acquired real estate and accumulated wealth]. What ever happened to freedom of religion that the Churches espouses?

Spain is at war for more than a six hundred years against the Mohammedans, with whom the Jews after many years of mass murdering by Christians have aligned themselves with, and the Inquisition is just another tool to try to legitimize their further extermination in the battle of the Cross against the Crescent.

~see Graetz's History of the Jews, the Jewish Encyclopedia, and the Encyclopedia of Jewish Knowledge

“The Spanish Jews welcomed the Arab invasions seeing it as a reprieve from already ongoing persecutions and confiscations. It is even said that they invited, the Arab invasion. After centuries of Crusades with their wanton killing of Jews, did they have a choice? Under the Caliphate, Mohammedan ruler, of the West, with its capital at Cordova, their members grew and they eventually attained great influence in Spain.” ~Dr. Cecil Roth, in Vallentine's J.E., p. 612

“It is admitted that the African Jews aided the Arabs in the capture of Cordova, Malaga, Granada, Seville, and Toledo and these cities were placed under Jewish control by the conquerors.” ~Encyclopedia of Jewish Knowledge p. 531.

The Columbia Encyclopedia states the Inquisitors, were always anxious to avoid the extreme penalty but the civil rulers were sterner. All the greed and sacrifice of the innocent was, the writer says, because the confiscated property of the heretic went to them. It did not. It was divided between the informers, the Inquisitors, and the civic power. The writer does not perceive how much he (or she) gives away in saying that the civic authorities received the loot. It was because civic rulers were so reluctant to persecute that the Papacy tempted them with this loot, besides threatening them with excommunication [so be guarded of what you read in an encyclopedia]

The preponderance of civil and human abuses are committed, with a few exceptions, by the civil power, to whom the Inquisitors would turn over their victims for the ultimate punishments and these are allegedly condemned by Popes Leo X, Paul III, Paul IV, and Sixtus IV who reigned during that period of history. Papal promiscuity has been forever immortalized in the very structures and statuary of the Vatican, Saint Peter's, and other of Rome's most famous churches and basilicas.

The most magnificent Sistine Chapel was built by and named after Pope Sixtus IV, who taxed others for keeping a mistress but paid none for his own vile indiscretions. Here the cardinals meet to elect the next Pope and sixty-five feet above them the huge ceiling bears the incredible artwork of Michelangelo who painted all his figures in the nude, but the Popes felt that this was too obscene.

Inside Saint Peter's Basilica, the burial monument of Pope Paul III, 1534-49, which is adorned with reclining female figures, one figure, representing Justice, was naked for 300 years until Pope Pius IX had clothes painted on her. The figure is modeled after Pope Paul III's sister, Guilis, the beautiful young mistress of Pope Alexander VI. Thus is immortalized the promiscuity of the “Celibate” Popes.

Pope Alexander VI, fathered four illegitimate children by Lady Vanozza Catani and two more from Dame Giulia. “A characteristic instance of the corruption of the Papal court is the fact that Borgia's [Pope Alexander VI] daughter Lucrezia lived with his mistress Giulia, who bore him a daughter, Laura, in 1492 [the year of his consecration as Pope].” ~From the works of Joseph McCabe, Rationalist Encyclopedia.

“Nomen Alexandri ne to fortasse moretur, Hospes, abi! Jacet hic et scelus et vitium. Lest Alexander's name your eye detain, Stranger, pass on! Here's nought but sin and stain.” ~Q.R. [Quarterly Reviewer]

Popes, Cardinals, Bishops, and Priests without number have been habitual fornicators, adulterers, homosexuals, incestuous, mass-murderers, and ruthless and depraved villains who pursued their degenerate and immoral lifestyles immune from discipline, and far from being excommunicated, such Popes remain proudly displayed on the list of past “Vicars of Christ,” and today a priest who engages in sexual misconduct is rarely expelled from the priesthood or excommunicated from the Church.

To Pope Pius XII, “I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians.” ~Mahatma Gandhi

Instead, he is reassigned elsewhere and perhaps given psychological counseling. Priests pronounced cured by such treatment centers [for example, Servants of the Paraclete in Jemez Springs, New Mexico] are routinely reassigned to new parishes only to abuse more victims. ~e.g. Our Sunday Visitor, February 27, 1994, p. 5; National Catholic Reporter, January 7, 1994, p. 9.

Catholic apologists still contend that the Popes were actually the protectors of the Jews, and not their enemies. Rome was a haven of refuge for the persecuted Jews when the Eternal City was ruled by the Popes, to which many of the Jews driven out of Spain migrated. The Roman citizenry during this period detested the Papacy and what it stood for, and any enemy of the corrupt Papacy was reciprocally a friend of the people.

Cecil Roth of London, while addressing the Zionist Forum in Buffalo, N.Y., states: "Only in Rome has the colony of Jews continued its existence since before the beginning of the Christian era, because of all the dynasties of Europe, the Papacy not only refused to persecute the Jews of Rome and Italy, but throughout the ages Popes were protectors of the Jews."

Centuries before the Catholic Church came into existence the Jewish Church condemned to death violators of their Mosaic Law, for infractions of the Law which were not as serious as the offenses of which the Jews were guilty in Spain, and some apologists use this to justify their persecution.

"According to the Jewish law there are four kinds of execution, stoning, burning, the sword and strangling. Death by strangling is not in the scriptures, but the Rabbis interpreted that wherever death is mentioned without specific mode, strangling is generally meant." ~Carl Alpert, Boston. 1935, p. 77.

Interesting enough, there is no crucifixion permitted under Hebrew laws. That abuses took place at times on the part of the Inquisitors is not denied. The Catholic Church, claiming Divine Protection from error in defining matters of faith and morals, does not claim to be immune from acts of abuse of their power on the part of some of her children, even in high places. Such an abuse on the part of officials of the Church caused Pope Leo X, after many complaints, to Excommunicate the Catholic Tribunal at Toledo, and to have the witnesses who appeared before its Inquisitorial trial arrested for perjury.

Pope Leo X, upon his election as Pope, spends 100,000 ducats on his inauguration festival, which is 1/7th of the Vatican treasury, and he soon depletes the rest of the Church's money on his assortment of amusement and parties. Pope Leo is such a big spender that he is soon forced to borrow money from several bankers at a 40% interest.

The Church claims abuse of power as rare, and that a Spirit of Charity dominated those historic inquiries into heresy. Torturing and burning were not part of the solemn religious ceremony called the Auto-da-Fe, where the penitents abjured their errors and made public recantation, by making an Act of Faith. The Church apologists then use the fact that extreme punishments meted out during the middle ages, such as burning at the stake, which we abhor, were common throughout the world at that time. They did not originate during the Middle Ages, having been the law before the Christian era [everyone else is doing it so why shouldn't we?]

The Catholic Church claims it can no more be judged by the abuses of the horrific Spanish Inquisition, which ended in the deportation of about 160,000 Jews, many who were not guilty of offenses against the Church or the State, than Judaism can be judged by the persecution of the people of Edom, descendants of Esau.

"After the victory over the Samaritans, Hyrcanus marched against the Idumeans, laid siege to their two fortresses, and after having demolished them, gave the Idumeans the choice between acceptance of Judaism, and exile... For the first time Judaism, in the person of its head, John Hyrcanus (high priest), practiced intolerance against other faiths, but it soon found out with deep pain how highly injurious it is to allow religious zeal for the preservation of the faith to degenerate into the desire to effect violent conversion of others..." ~The History of the Jews by Graetz.

Exile, which climaxed the Spanish Inquisition in 1492, is deplorable irrespective of the cause of it or whom it afflicts. That the Catholic Church has as a legitimate right to weed out pseudo converts from Judaism as the priests and Sanhedrin in Jewry had to bring to book the members of their Church who violated the Mosaic Law is not in question, what is questioned is the methodology used.

"The Amsterdam Rabbis introduced the innovation of bringing religious opinions and convictions before their judgment seat, of constituting themselves a sort of Inquisitional Tribunal, and instituting auto-da-fe which, even if bloodless, were not less painful to the sufferers." ~Heinrich Graetz, History of the Jews, Vol. 4, p. 684. The Spanish Inquisition was established with Papal approval in 1478 at the request of King Ferdinand V and Queen Isabella I of Spain to deal with the Marranos, contrary to what the Church claims, that Jews who through coercion or social pressure had insincerely converted to Christianity. Suspected Marranos [converted Jews] were tortured until they confessed to practicing Judaism, and then were burned to death en masse at an auto-da-fe. After fourteen years of continual torture, and death by burning, in 1492, by Papal edict, the Spanish Jews are finally given the choice of either exile or baptism, and almost all the Jews chose to leave at this time.

Before his death, King Ferdinand will commission his successor, Charles V, to carry on the work of the spread of Christianity and support of the heinous Inquisition, and, "... In his will, dated the day before his death, he enjoined his heir, Charles V, to be strenuous in supporting the tribunal. As all other virtues, so this testament ran, 'Are nothing without faith by which and in which, we are saved, we command the illustrious prince, our grandson, to labor with all his strength to destroy and extirpate heresy from our kingdoms and lordships, appointing ministers, God-fearing and of good conscience, who will conduct the Inquisition justly and properly for the service of God and the exaltation of the Catholic faith, and who will also have a great zeal for the destruction of the sect of Mohammed..." ~History of the Christian Church, by Philip Schaff, Volume VI, Chapter 7, § 60.

"The fundamental defect of Christian ethics consists in the fact that it labels certain classes of acts 'Sins' and others 'Virtue' on grounds that have nothing to do with their social consequences." ~Bertrand Russell, The Quotable Bertrand Russell, ed. Lee Eisher, Buffalo, NY: Prometheus, 1993, p. 118.

In 1502, it turned its attention to similar converts from Islam, and in the 1520s to persons suspected of Protestantism. Within a few years of the founding of the Inquisition, the Papacy relinquished nearly all supervision to the monarchs.

Thus, the Spanish Inquisition became more an instrument of the state for political power than the Church for heretics. The Marranos are tried, and found guilty of heresy. They are under the jurisdiction of the Catholic Church through their Baptism, which the Church does not admit that they had any choice, either submit or be exiled. A Catholic who denies one or more of the teachings of Christ is held by the Church to be a heretic.

The Catholic Church teaches that they have Absolute Authority in all matters of faith and morals, hence she is obligated to declare, as did St. Paul, "Even if an angel from heaven should preach a gospel to you other than that, which we have preached to you, let him be Anathema." ~Galatians 1:8.

And so the Church justifies killing in the name of God. This applies to the denial of any single basic Christian teaching, for to deny one of God's teachings is to deny God. A Catholic who proclaims belief in only nine of the Ten Commandments, is also considered a heretic, as the denial of one of the Commandments is also a denial of God, its Divine Author. The same applies to every article in the Apostles Creed, and other teachings of the Church.

Heresy, to the Church, is worse than murder. Murder robs man of his physical life; whereas heresy robs man of his spiritual inheritance; with the result that the heretic is deprived of an eternity of happiness, in the event of dying unrepentant, which the Church will not allow. Trial and punishment for Heresy is of Jewish and not of Catholic origin, its objective being Purity of Faith in the hearts of man with the teachings of the Church; and to safeguard the attainment of eternal life.

The Orthodox Jewish concept of the subject states: "The term 'Heretic' in connection with Judaism may conveniently be applied to any one who does not accept the two Torahs-the Written and Oral-in which Jewish teaching is contained. Apart from the idolaters of ancient times, the Talmud knows four main kinds of such Heretics, which however, it is not always careful to distinguish: (1) the Cutheans or Samaritans, who accepted only the Pentateuch and the Book of Joshua as inspired, and rejected the rest of the Scriptures; (2) the Sadducees and Boethusians, who rejected the Oral Law; (3) the Minim, Judaeo-Christians [that is converts from the Synagogue to the Church] and Gnostics-who desired to supplement the Torah Of Moses with some other Torah of superior authority; (4) the Apikorism, who denied the divine origin of the Torah. The Karaite heresy, which appeared later, was essentially the same as that of the Sadducees." ~from Vallentine's Jewish Encyclopedia, pg. 279.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

The Karaites are apparently the first Jewish sect to adopt the notion of reincarnation in the 8th century B.C.E., apparently at least in part in an attempt to account for the suffering of innocent children. The argument on reincarnation is that they [the Jews] must have sinned in a previous life in order to deserve such hardship. ~See John 9 for Yeshua's explanation.

"The attribute of reincarnation is accustomed to mean the males and not the females." Women do not have the same obligations of men. They do not have to be Torah scholars. Women are perfect when they come into the world [vs. the Christian belief that women caused the downfall of man]. The souls of women have already made their atonement. After death, women enter into Gehinom [Hell] to be purified, and not to suffer everlasting persecution. Their portion in the Garden of Eden is even greater than men. Men are obligated in the commandments of action.

For woman, most are not obligatory, only a few are obligatory. Torah learning, especially the study of the Oral law, is only for men. The Torah which the men learn in their lives protects them after they pass away. It protects them from entering into Gehinom, but they have to reincarnate. About this is quoted the passage, "This generation goes and another generation comes, and the earth stands forever." ~Arizal, The Gateway to Reincarnation, Chapter 9.

Saadia Gaon calls the idea of reincarnation "Nonsense and stupidity." The Jewish philosopher Jewish Albo also rejected the idea of the "Transmigration of souls" in the 15th century. ~See: What Does Judaism Say About...? by Louis Jacobs, The Encyclopedia Judaica, article Afterlife, Do modern day Jews believe in reincarnation of the spirit? I know some ancient sects had? by David Brown, AMF International.

We know the details of the Jewish struggle against the Greeks and Hellenism from the two Books of the Maccabees. The Sadducees were heavily influenced by Greek thought, "The Sadducees were always more acceptable in the eyes of the Hellenist Jews than their rabbinic foes. The alliance of the Hellenists and the Sadducees against traditional Judaism guaranteed constant turmoil in Jewish life throughout the time of the Second Temple and even thereafter." ~ Rabbi Berel Wein, Echoes of Glory, p. 38.

Mattathias, a cohen, stabs the Jew who does not keep the Law, also killing the Greek official present, and then turns to the crowd and announces: "Follow me, all of you who are for God's law and stand by the covenant." ~1 Maccabees 2:27.

The famous philosopher, Spinoza, denied belief in a personal God causing him to be Excommunicated by the sons of Jews who were deported from Spain and Portugal on account of the heretical conduct of the Marranos. Spinoza was also banished from Amsterdam, and to avoid assassination, after "A fanatic made an attempt on his life with a knife," he left his native city where the "Curses had been pronounced upon him" by the Rabbis in their leading Synagogue.

One of history's greatest thinkers, a Jew, born in Amsterdam, he studied medicine and afterward theology. He endeavored to understand what he studied. In theology he necessarily failed miserably. Theology is not intended to be understood, only to be believed. It is an act, not of reason, but of faith. Spinoza put to the rabbis so many questions, and so persistently asked for reasons, that he became the most troublesome of students.

When the rabbis found it impossible to answer the questions, they concluded to silence the questioner. He was tried, found guilty, and excommunicated from the Synagogue. By the terrible curse of the Jewish religion, he was made an outcast from every Jewish home. Even his father could not give him shelter, and his mother could not give him bread or speak to him, without becoming an outcast herself. All the cruelty of Jehovah, all the infamy of the Old Testament, was in this curse.

In the darkness of the synagogue the rabbis lit their torches, and while pronouncing the curse, extinguished them in blood, imploring God that in like manner the soul of Benedict Spinoza might be extinguished.

According to his belief, the universe did not commence to be. It is; from eternity it was; to eternity it will be. Spinoza was a naturalist, that is to say, a pantheist. Spinoza has been hated because he has not been answered. He was a real republican. He regarded the people as the true and only source of political power. He put the state above the Church, the people above the priest.

Spinoza believed in the absolute liberty of worship, thought and speech. In every relation of life he was just, true, gentle, patient, modest and loving. He respected the rights of others, and endeavored to enjoy his own, and yet he brought upon himself the hatred of the Jewish and the Christian world. The priests hated the philosopher, revelation reviled reason, and faith was the sworn foe of every fact. Spinoza was a philosopher, a philanthropist. Yet the rabbis and the priests, the ignorant zealots and the cruel bigots, feeling that this quiet, thoughtful, modest man was in some way forging weapons to be used against the Church, hated him with all their hearts.

Spinoza does not retaliate. He found excuses for their acts. Their ignorance, their malice, their misguided and revengeful zeal excited only pity in his breast. He injured no man. He did not live on alms. On Sunday, February 21, 1677, Spinoza, one of the greatest and subtlest of metaphysicians, one of the noblest and purest of human beings, at the age of forty-four, passed tranquilly away; and notwithstanding the curse of the synagogue under which he had lived and most lovingly labored, death left upon his lips the smile of perfect peace. ~From the works of Robert Green Ingersoll.

"Popular religion may be summed up as a respect for Ecclesiastics." ~Spinoza.

Gabriel da Costa is another Jew whose tragic life and treatment by the Rabbis caused him to be arrested in Amsterdam, fined 300 guilders, and his "Heterodox book to be publicly burned."

Encyclopedia of Jewish Knowledge states: "He fled to Hamburg, but soon returned to Amsterdam, and in 1633 became, in his own words, 'An ape among the apes' offering his submission to the Synagogue. Formalist he could not be, and his contrariness resulted in his being made subject to the 'great ban.' For seven years he lived silent and solitary, boycotted even by his relatives. Then he yielded, made confession of error and suffered the ignominy of a public scourging and 39 stripes. He went home, wrote an impassioned sketch of his own life, 'A Specimen of Human Existence,' and shot himself."

That the charges against Spinoza and da Costa were warranted, no one today can rightly deny, for the Jews of Amsterdam had a definite Doctrinal Code, which they had a right to uphold, as did the Church and the State in Spain. Yet these Rabbis, who belonged to the Amsterdam community that was started by the Maranos [called the pretending to be Catholics], who cursed the Catholic Church and Spain for the deportation of their forbears, deemed it legitimate to curse, scourge, excommunicate, and drive from Amsterdam those of their fellow Israelites who were guilty of heresy. To these Iberian descendents a Dutch Auto da Fe was perfectly legitimate, but not one in Spain or Portugal, where the welfare of the State as well as the Church was at stake.

AD 721- The amulets worn by the Jews, slips of parchment on which passages of their Law were written, were worn as symbols of piety by the Pharisaic school, but they were also regarded as security from evil spirits and from other harm.

The use of amulets was inherited by the Christian Church, the inscription on them being "Ichthys" [the Greek word for "Fish"], for it contained the initials of the Greek words for Jesus Christ, Son of God, Savior. Amulets to protect one against all types of evil become extremely popular with Christians around the fourth century and the Church felt compelled to condemn the wearing of amulets in 721.

Priests caught wearing amulets were threatened with having their holy orders deprived. Throughout the 8th and 11th century, monarchs are free to appoint their choices as Bishops and Abbots to the monasteries. Later, the Church will assert its power by stating God has supremacy over the state and challenge this authority [It is the will of God over the will of the monarch].

AD 725-Emperor Leo III orders the removal of all religious icons from Catholic Churches and monasteries, and nearly all of the ancient images of Jesus are destroyed during the iconoclastic periods of the 8th and 9th centuries.

AD 726-Emperor Leo III issues a decree forbidding the veneration of images that is condemned by Pope Gregory II. The "Iconoclasts," as image worshippers, are validated at the Second Council of Nice in 787 & 843.

The church supports the veneration of images. Images are attractive to converts who like to be able to see their God. The Church sees this acceptance as a means to increase their following and thereby rules against the Biblical teachings by new dogma.

AD 730-First Iconoclasm, Byzantine Emperor Leo III bans all Christian icons, Pope Gregory II excommunicates him.

AD 731- Pope Gregory III and a Synod at Rome condemns Iconoclasm, with a declaration that the veneration of sacred images is in accord with Catholic tradition.

Among other alleged misdeeds and errors was numbered that of holding “That beneath the earth there was another world and other men, another sun and moon.”

In reply, the Pope directs St. Boniface to convoke a council and, ‘If it be made clear’ that if Vergilius adheres to this ‘perverse teaching, contrary to the Lord and to his own soul,’ he was to be expelled from the Church and deprived of his priestly dignity!

This is the only information that we possess regarding an incident, which is made to figure principally in the imaginary warfare between theology and science...The case of the Irish monk who suffered the penalty of being several centuries ahead of his age remains on the page of history, like the parallel case of famous astronomer, Galileo, as a solemn admonition against a hasty resort to Ecclesiastical censure. ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 1, 581-2.

“Historically, the Church fought venomously against each new scientific advance. But after fruitlessly criticizing each new scientific achievement, the Church soon flip-flopped its position and embraced the new discovery as a ‘Gift from God to mankind.’” ~David Mills, Science Shams & Bible Bloopers, p362.

Jews, as well as the early Christians, are viewed as second-class citizens by the Muslims and are forbidden to read the Koran, forbidden to build any houses higher than a mosque, forbidden to perform public rituals, forbidden to ride horses, and forbidden or to marry Muslim women. Jews and Christians also have to wear a special sash and a yellow cloth badge to identify them from Muslims, and there is an added tax for being a non-believer.

AD 751-54 Pepin the Short [714-768], King of the Franks, unites the Frankish Monks to defeat the Lombards who pose a threat to Pope Stephen III. Territories near Rome are given to the Church and the Papal States lays claim to them.

“Pepin addressed to the Pope the suggestive question: ‘In regard to the Kings of the Franks who no longer possess the royal power, is this state of things proper?’ ... Pope Saint Zacharias replied that such a state of things was not proper [that “He should be king who possessed the royal power]. After this decision the place Pepin desired was declared vacant... Still this external cooperation of the Pope in the transfer of the Kingdom would necessarily enhance the importance of the Church. Pepin was also obliged to acknowledge the increased power of the Church by calling on it for moral support.” ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 11, 663.

For further persuasion to the cause of Christianity, His Holiness, Pope Stephen II, procured from the ‘Vatican Forgery Mill’ an identical autographed letter from Saint Peter himself, prophetically addressed "To the King of the Franks," and mystically worded so that, "When Pope Stephen II performed the ceremony of anointing Pepin and his son at Saint Denis, it was Saint Peter who was regarded as the mystical giver of the secular power!" ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 11, 663.

By the end of the 4th century, "The Church had now placed herself under the fostering care of the secular power, which was yet half-Pagan; what wonder is it that she degenerated with such frightful rapidity as to be almost overwhelmed by Mohammedanism by reason of her dissensions, corruptions and weakness? ... Was the weakness borrowed from a distant Oriental Brahmanism? Or was it inherent in the Christian community itself?" ~Lundy, Monumental Christianity.

One of the texts the mystics like to cite as a scriptural allusion to the principle of reincarnation is the following verse in the Book of Job: "Behold, all these things does God do... Twice, even three times with a man, to bring his soul back from the pit that he may be enlightened with the light of the living." ~Job 33:29. In other words, God will allow a person to come back to the world "Of the living" from "The pit," which is one of the classic biblical terms for Gehinnom or "Purgatory," a second and even third [or even a multitude of] time(s).

This verse, and others, are understood by mystics as mere allusions to the concept of reincarnation. The true authority for the concept is rooted in the tradition. ~Yaakov Astor, Soul Searching, Targum Press., Note: Origen of Alexandria, one of Christianity's greatest systematic theologians, was a believer in reincarnation.

"Were an Asiatic to ask me for a definition of Europe, I should be forced to answer him: 'It is that part of the world, which is haunted by the incredible delusion that a person's present birth is first entrance into life...'" ~Schopenhauer, Parerga and Paralipomena.

This craftiness of Papal forgery and their blatant fraud is described by an historical authority, "The Pontiff dictated his letter in the name of the Apostle Peter, closely imitating his Epistles, and speaking in a language, which implied that he was possessed of an authority to anoint, or dethrone kings, and to perform the offices, not of a messenger, of a teacher sent from God, which is the highest characteristic of an Apostle, but of a delegated minister of His power and justice." ~Historians History of the World, vol. viii, p. 557.

The proclaimed 'Divine Birthright' is thus swapped for a pandemonium of political potage, and for over a thousand years it has been a calamity indeed, for by conspiracy, fraud, and unrighteous conquest was laid the foundation of the sacred "Patrimony of Saint Peter," and the 'Unholy League' between the Papacy and the French kings, between the Papacy and the ruling elite, between the Papacy and the powerful.

AD752-The Donation of Constantine, grants the Western Roman Empire to the Pope, which later proves to be yet another Christian forgery. The fictitious Donation of Constantine proclaims to the world the "Universal Pope" of Rome, "... Our most gracious serenity desires, in clear discourse, through the page of this our Imperial Decree, to bring to the knowledge of all the people in the whole world what things our Savior and Redeemer the Lord Jesus Christ, the Son of the most High Father, has most wonderfully seen fit to bring about through his Holy Apostles Peter and Paul and by the intervention of our father Sylvester, the highest Pontiff and the 'Universal Pope.' First, indeed, putting forth, with the inmost confession of our heart, for the purpose of instructing the mind of all of you, our Creed, which we have learned from the aforesaid most blessed father and our confessor, Sylvester the 'Universal Pontiff,'" and then at length announcing the mercy of God, which has been poured upon us... For let all the people and the nations of the races in the whole world rejoice with us; we exhorting all of you to give unbounded thanks, together with us, to our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. For He is God in Heaven above and on earth below, who, visiting us through His Holy Apostles, made us worthy to receive the Holy Sacrament of Baptism and health of body. In return for which, to those same Holy Apostles, my masters, Saint Peter and Saint Paul; and, through them, also to Saint Sylvester, our father, the chief Pontiff and 'Universal Pope,' of the city of Rome, and to all the Pontiffs his successors, who until the End of the World shall be about to sit in the seat of Saint Peter: we concede and, by this present, do confer, our Imperial Lateran palace, which is preferred to, and ranks above, all the palaces in the whole world; then a diadem, that is, the crown of our head, and at the same time the tiara; and, also, the shoulder band, that is, the collar that usually surrounds our imperial neck; and also the purple mantle, and crimson tunic, and all the imperial raiment; and the same rank as those presiding over the imperial cavalry; conferring also the imperial scepters, and, at the same time, the spears and standards; also the banners and different imperial ornaments, and all the advantage of our high imperial position, and the glory of our power." ~Donation of Constantine. Though proved a forgery in the 15th century, the use of the phrase "Universal Pope" in the Donation of Constantine shows that it was attributed to the Bishop of Rome in the 8th century.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

The forged Donation of Constantine was used by Pope John Paul II to infer his Title and Power in the Catholic Church in the 20th century.

AD 754-Fifth Council of Constantinople requested by Emperor Constantine V to deal with worshipping images [idolatry]. The Council approves the image worshipping [a position later rejected by the Seventh Council in 787].

The Church is in a dilemma as to how to handle the income received versus its dogma preached.

AD 754-Constantine V, son of Emperor Leopold III, condemns image worshipping as idolatry, but converted Pagans will continue in their reverence to statuary and pictures.

“An essential difference exists between idolatry and the veneration of images practiced in the Catholic Church, viz., that while the idolater credits the image he reverences with Divinity or Divine powers, the Catholic knows ‘That in images there is no Divinity or virtue on account of which they are to be worshipped, that no petitions can be addressed to them, and that no trust is to be placed in them...that the honor, which is given to them is referred to the objects [proto-typa], which they represent, so that through the images which we kiss, and before which we uncover our heads and kneel, we adore Christ and venerate the Saints whose likenesses they are.’” ~Conc. find., Sess. XXV, De Invocatione Sanctorum, Catholic Encyclopedia.

“It has indeed been said that the ‘Saints are the successors to the Gods.’ Instances have been cited of Pagan feasts becoming Christian; of pagan temples consecrated to the worship of the true God; of statues of Pagan Gods baptized and transformed into Christian Saints.” ~Catholic Encyclopedia, Vol. XV, p. 710.

The Catholic Encyclopedia, as claimed by a former priest, is: “A very pretentious work in fifteen large and sumptuous volumes, 1907-12, which was financed by the wealthy Catholics of the United States. In the Introduction it promises ‘The whole truth without prejudice’ and says that in ascertaining the truth ‘The most recent and acknowledged scientific methods are employed.’ In reality it often employs the worst tricks and vices of Catholic propaganda, so that it can safely be consulted only for illustrations of these and for details of undisputed Catholic teaching, ritual, and administration.” ~Father Joseph McCabe.

“In Biblical matters one need not read farther than ‘Adam,’ it is almost always Fundamentalist; in biography [of Saints, Popes, etc.] it is childishly credulous; in history, particularly the history of the Papacy and of the crimes and vices of the Middle Ages, it is monstrously untruthful; in quoting authorities it is gravely deceitful; and in scientific articles [evolution, etc.] it is little above the level of the American Baptists.”

*“An exposure of its historical methods will be found in McCabe's Popes and their Church [4th ed., 1904, pp. 97-109], but specimens occur in many articles of this work. Another feature of interest is that the writers are almost entirely priests or professional propagandists, which reveals the extraordinary poverty of the Church in distinguished lay scholars. Hilaire Belloc is entrusted with only one short article ‘Land Tenure’ and that on a ‘Safe’ subject. The peculiarities of Catholic Truth exhibited in the work are so singular that, in order to confuse the non-Catholic who might compare the articles with those of ordinary Encyclopedias, the American and English Catholics went on to secure an important influence in the writing of the latest edition of the Encyclopedia Britannica and the new Encyclopedia Americana.”* ~Father J. McCabe, Rationalists Encyclopedia.

A council of more than 300 Byzantine Bishops endorses Iconoclast errors. This council and its actions are later condemned by the Lateran Synod of 769. Stephen II [III] is crowned Pepin ruler of the Franks. Pepin twice invades Italy, in 754 and 756, to defend the Pope against the Lombards. Pepin allegedly land grants to the Papacy, via the Donation of Pepin, which are later extended by Emperor Charlemagne (773) and forms part of the States of the Church, until taken back by Mussolini in the 20th century.

AD 756-The Donation of Pepin recognizes the legitimacy of the Papal States.

AD 759-826-Theodore of the Monastery of Studius near Constantinople defends the worshipping of superstitious icons.

What does the Bible say about this? “Thou shall not make unto thee any graven image nor any likeness of anything that is in the Heaven above, or in the earth beneath, or that is in the water under the earth.” ~Exodus 20:4.

Please notice that it is not only forbidden to worship idols, but even making them is forbidden. However the whole Roman Catholic Church is filled with idols, pictures, and amulets, that are worshipped by the whole congregation.

"Their idols are silver and gold, the work of man's hands. They have mouths, but they speak not, eyes have they, but they see not, they have ears but they hear not, noses have they but they smell not. They have hands, but they handle not, feet they have, but they walk not, neither speak they through their throat. They that make them are like unto them. So is everyone that trusteth in them." ~Psalms 115:4-8.

AD 764-Caliph al-Mansur retains Jewish Astrologer Jacob ibn Tariq who obtained much insight into Astrology via India to set up a school of astronomy in Baghdad.

AD 768-Roman nobleman gathers together a group of priests and elects his own brother as "Pope" [Pope Stephen III or IV]

AD 772-795-Adrian I: deacon, who with Pope Stephen II founded the Papal States. Born into Roman aristocracy, Adrian is elected Pope by unanimous approbation when he is only a deacon. Pope Adrian supports Charlemagne, Charles the Great, 742-814, King of the Franks, AD 768-814, and Emperor of the Romans [800-14], in his efforts to reform the Frankish Church [loose morals, decadence, debauchery, and simony] and to suppress Adoptianism.

He also sends two representatives to the Second Council of Nice, which condemns iconoclasm [image worshipping] and leads in the restoration of images in churches. "Simony, the most abominable of crimes... was the evil so prevalent during the Middle Ages." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 14, 1, 2.

Charlemagne opposes the strengthening of ties between the Papacy and the Byzantine Empire, had his theologians compose a detailed disclaimer of the Council's decisions. Despite Adrian's intervention, a Synod is held at Frankfurt, Germany, in 794.

The Catholic Charlemagne, in 782 has 4,500 Saxons, unwilling to convert to Christianity, beheaded. On May of 1234, between 5,000 and 11,000 men, women and children are slain in Steding, Germany because they were unwilling to pay the suffocating church taxes.

The Second Council of Nicaea Synod condemns the intention that images and idols shall be adored. Much information regarding this Pope is inaccurate in present encyclopedias. ~The author, E. Christopher Reyes has written to some publishers, with corrections acknowledged, due to errancy, and has been informed that future editions will reflect the changes enumerated. Adrian was the Pope of Charlemagne's time, and historians know well that the Emperor came, as he shows in his letters, to loathe the Pope and to defy him on a point of doctrine; for at that time the use and veneration of statues in the churches became a doctrinal issue between East and West.

The notice of Adrian in the older edition of the Encyclopedia Britannica was one of those inept paragraphs by some man who knew nothing about the importance of the quarrel, but a priestly hand has untruthfully inserted in the new edition: "The friendly relations between Pope and Emperor were not disturbed by the difference, which arose between them on the question of the veneration of images."

All attempts by the Catholic Emperor Charlemagne to establish even a rudimentary education in Christianized Europe were abortive, and "The accumulated wisdom of the past... Was in danger of perishing," but "When the permanent renaissance of learning came several centuries later, the light began again to pierce through the storm-clouds of feudal strife and anarchy." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 1, 277.

"If you think your belief is based upon reason, you will support it by argument rather than by persecution, and will abandon it if the argument goes against you. But if your belief is based upon faith, you will realize that argument is useless, and will therefore resort to force either in the form of persecution or by stunting or distorting the minds of the young in what is called 'Education.'" ~Bertrand Russell, The Quotable Bertrand Russell, ed. Lee Eisler, Buffalo, NY: Prometheus, 1993, p. 261.

The 'Donatio Constantini' is proven a forgery and traced to Saint Adrian I, the mettle of which saints are made is exemplified in, "Nominally, Saint Adrian I, 772-775, was now monarch of about two-thirds of the Italian peninsula, but his sway was little more than nominal... It was in no slight degree owing to Adrian's political sagacity, vigilance, and activity, that the temporal power of the Papacy did not remain a fiction of the imagination. ... The temporal power of the Popes, of which Saint Adrian I must be considered the real founder." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 1, 155-156.

AD 773-Constantinople's Emperor confiscates the Pope's numerous estates in Calabria and Sicily. The Lombards were allies of Constantinople's Emperor, and Pope Gregory III asked for assistance from his fellow Catholics, the Franks. Lombard's King, Pope Stephen II named King Peppin of the Franks as Protector of Rome, and with help from these Franks the Lombards were defeated.

AD 785-Council of Paderborn enacts penalties against sorcerers, to be reduced to serfdom and made over to the service of the Church. A further decree stipulates that, "Whosoever, blinded by the devil, and infected with Pagan errors, holds another person for a witch that eats human flesh, and therefore burns her, eats her flesh, or gives it to others to eat, shall be punished with death."

Sixteen hundred years later, the ignorance of the Church still prevails, "Idiots, the lame, the blind, the dumb, are men in whom the Devils have established themselves, and all the physicians who heal these infirmities, as though they proceeded from natural causes, are ignorant blockheads..." ~Martin Luther, 1521. Torture is permitted by the Roman Civil Law in dealing with those who are neither Catholic or Roman pagan worshippers. After the year 500 C.E., the workers of Europe are called in our modern literature "Serfs," but, be forewarned that for centuries all literature is written in Latin, and there is no distinction in Latin between the words such as, 'Slave' and 'Serf.'

The workers were slaves, held to the land and forbidden to leave or go anywhere without first requesting and obtaining permission from the lord and the Popes from the 6th century onward the Church owned vast numbers of them [slaves]. Vinogradov, one of the best historical sociologists of recent times, says that they were in law and fact, 'Slaves.'

They were bought and sold like cattle, and no law protected them from the cruelty of their owners. The only real change when the Roman Church came to dominate Europe in the 5th Century is that, whereas in the Roman Empire, two workers out of three had been free, literate, and almost pampered, in the new Europe not one worker in ten is either free or literate or has a life of elementary comfort and decency.

The nobles sold freedom to immense bodies of serfs so that they could go on the looting expeditions of the Crusaders or enjoy the more luxurious life, which the Arabs had brought to Europe, Kings emancipated bodies of serfs to help fight their rebellious nobles, nobles emancipated them to fight the kings or other nobles, and Abbays and Bishops were, says the Catholic historian Muratori, the last to emancipate slaves, saying that they must not, "... Alienate Church property." ~See Darrow's Slavery in the Roman Empire, and J. McCabe's Rationalist Encyclopedia.

With the Crusades, the Holy Mother, the Church, has become the Global Pariah of society. She will attack her enemies, with no quarter asked, nor given. She will humiliate and mortify those who write against her, and she will annihilate all those who resist.

AD787-Image worshipping: officially condemned by the Second Council at Nicaea. Icons are viewed as against Biblical Scriptures. However, later on in history this perception is reversed as church officials interpret icons as a pictorial "Confession of Faith" as they become a means of soliciting funds and converting Pagans.

The Son of God assuming the body of a man and assuming all the human frailties of man takes on the characteristics of "Created Nature," which includes "Describability." This is an attempt to interpret Old Testament Scriptures: to allow for events that are not described in Scripture [contrary to the Old Testament-Exodus 20:2-4]

AD790-Saint Angilbert, Abbott, during this period was leading a quite worldly life. Angilbert is said to have had an enthrallment with Emperor Charlemagne's unmarried daughter Bertha, and became the father of two children. Charlemagne is considered a devout Christian, although he did have four wives, and children by five mistresses.

AD794-1185-Palmistry becomes popular amongst the ruling classes in Japan during the Heian Period. Repopularized, 1603-1867.

AD796-Frejus, France, a clause is added to the Nicene Creed, "...Holy Spirit proceeded not only from the Father but also from the Son." ~By Karen Armstrong-A History of God.

Emphasis is placed on equality of the Father and Son in an effort to further justify the Trinity accepted by the Church.

AD800-The Book of Jasher is discovered and translated from the Hebrew [mentioned in Joshua 10:13, & 2 Samuel 1:18] This great work is suppressed by the Church and later re-discovered in 1829. The Book of Jasher is in contradiction to known Church Doctrine regarding the sequence of events on the Creation and early prophets. Also, how can you have day and night on the first day of creation without a star [sun]? ~Genesis 1:19, cf. Genesis 1:3-5 and Genesis 1:16-17.

AD800-1100-Vikings: plunderers, Pagans, navigators, who conquer the seacoasts of most of Europe and plunder the countryside. The Nordic interpretations are set forth in the Elder Edda that foretells of the destruction of the earth by fire and its repopulation by the survivors Lif & Lifthrasir. Their God of War was Odin who lived in Valhalla, and Odin, also known as Othin, Wotan, Woden, Wuotan, Voden, or Votan, in Norse mythology, was their principal God, ruler of Heaven and Earth, and the God of War, Wisdom, and Poetry.

With his brothers Vili and Ve, they killed the primordial frost giant Ymir, then used Ymir's body to make all the different realms of the world, as well as the sea and sky. The Vili and Ve also created the first human beings, Ask and Embla.

Another source of Odin's wisdom was the heroic test he undertook by hanging himself from Yggdrasil, the "Cosmic Tree," that connected and supported all the dominions of the world, almost dying in this ordeal. After nine days and nights of hanging, pierced by a spear, in a self-inflicted wound, he hallowed himself to himself, discovering the secret of the sacred runes [stones], and became the master of magic spells and occult wisdom.

Through his voluntary sacrifice he became rejuvenated. Odin is the supreme chief of the Aesir [The Nordic society of warrior gods], other Gods were younger, more attractive, and even physically stronger, but Odin's powers of wisdom and strength were supreme. In war, it was Odin who decided the fates of all warriors. He was also called "All-Father."

The Vikings believed that one day all the gods and men would be destroyed and a new peaceful world would emerge. Valhalla; where the souls of slain rested contained 540 doors of which 800 heroes could walk abreast [$540 \times 800 = 432,000$].

Fearing men and clergy, the Vikings, with their shallow draft sailing vessels, sailed up and down the rivers of Europe demanding huge ransoms to be paid to avoid destruction and death at their hands. The Vikings are finally conquered, not by military might, but by their inability to solidify their dominion under one ruler. Eventually it became easier for the Norsemen to assimilate into the general population of society and become merchants than to continue warfare, which was not their primary past-time.

They were farmers and the various conquered lands offered them good fertile soils to pursue their true vocations, converting to Christianity was secondary as the Vikings substitute their swords with plowshares. The Viking language continues from the French word, "Mercredi," which was taken into the Old English as "Woden's day," from which the modern English word Wednesday is derived.

AD 800-The German, Charlemagne, supporter of Christianity, an illiterate Christian, is crowned Emperor of the Romans by Pope Leo III on the 25th of December. After Emperor Constantine had granted the Church freedom to operate in public, the Church increasingly began to assume many of the civil tasks no longer performed by the government.

A document known as "The Donation of Constantine," grants the Church great political as well as spiritual authority over all matters in the Western Empire. By 800, they had taken control of most of Europe.

Charlemagne conquers much of this territory in the name of the Church and the Pope becomes uncomfortable at this accumulation of power in one man and offers to crown Charlemagne as the Holy Roman Emperor, thereby appearing to put him at the service of the Pope.

Charlemagne refuses, but in a clever maneuver, the Pope produces a crown and crowns the unsuspecting monarch publicly anyway. This establishes the precedent for Charlemagne's heirs to need the Pope's approval to ascend to the title of Holy Roman Emperor. His heirs will now need the Pope's blessing as much as the Church needs the Empire's armies and funds.

AD 801-Visigoth, Theodulf, Bishop of Orleans, makes the Spanish family of [Vulgate] manuscripts together with those of Southern France the basis of his text with he inscribes variant readings in the margins, which soon truly help the process of Scriptural corruption. The Bishop's texts, though arranged at vast labor, was far inferior to that of Alcuin and exerts little influence in face of the authoritative version of Alcuin. Manuscripts are soon rapidly multiplied in the 9th century on the Alcuinian model by the school of Tours, but with whole carelessness and haste, which facilitates a speedy degeneration of the text. Again the mass confusion in Biblical interpretations calls for a remedy.

AD 809-813- Reign of Abbasid Caliph Al-Amin of Baghdad, whose mother becomes extremely distraught by his preference for male eunuchs and attempts to hide his preference by packing his court with girls disguised as boys. These "Ghulamīyyat" then become a fashion in Moslem courts.

AD 809-823-Catholic Hypocrisy: Reign of the homosexual Pope John XII who loves both boys and strapping muscular young men, he dies at the young age of 26 from a stroke while having sex with one of his beautiful young men, aka John the Bad; some authors say he was killed by a husband whose wife he had raped.

"No False Prophet ever went to God in a more embarrassing position." John XII was twenty-four when an enraged husband caught him humping his wife and gave him the last rites with one hammer blow on the back of his head." ~Dr. Joseph McCabe, Rationalists Encyclopaedia. cf. Romans 16:17; II Peter 2:1.

His Holiness, Pope Benedict VII, also died under similar unpleasant circumstances.

AD 810-George Syncellus, Byzantine historian: chronicler of events from creation to the Roman domination. His now famous works are used to cross-reference other writings for authenticity and accuracy.

AD 815-877-John Erigna, Irishman, theologian, writer, & freethinker: His works are condemned by several Church Councils in 855, 859, 1050 & 1225, for denial of the presence of Jesus in the Eucharist and the suggestion of free will and self determination of the resolve of man.

The story of Jesus and his disciples being at supper, and his breaking bread, may be correct; but the expressions, "Do this in remembrance of me," "This is my Body," and "This is my blood," are unquestionably of Essene origin, inserted to give to the new mystic ceremony some authority.

AD 816-896-Pope Formosus: is a key figure in the condemnation of Photius of Constantinople, a great scholar who disagrees with the Church on religious matters and a man who dares to challenge the authority of the Church and the authoritative power of Pope Adrian II. Formosus is exiled in 876 to France after getting involved in too much Monarchical Politics. In 882, he is recalled to Rome and eventually elected Pope in 891.

"I have read the chronology of Justus of Tiberias... And being under the Jewish prejudices, as indeed he was himself also a Jew by birth, he makes not one mention of Jesus, of what happened to him, or of the wonderful works that he did." ~Photius, Patriarch of Constantinople, 9th Century.

Pope Formosus is tried posthumously by his rivals in a mock trial wearing the full vestments of the Papacy in 896 in what is to be called the "Cadaver Synod" that is convened one year after his death and has his body is ordered exhumed by his successor, Pope Boniface VI, who disliked his policies.

The deceased Pope is tried [his corpse] and found guilty. The three fingers of the corpse's right hand are chopped off [these are the fingers used for pronouncing blessings and other duties of his former rank as Pope] his body was first buried in a common grave and then thrown into the Tiber River, whence it was allegedly retrieved and interred by a hermit.

Pope Theodore II [897] later reverses the decisions of the trial and his predecessor and has the body exhumed [third time], clothed in Papal vestments, and re-interred in Saint Peter's Basilica.

AD 825- The Holy Roman Emperor Louis [son of the illiterate Catholic Emperor Charlemagne] issues a Charter of Protection for Jews, encouraging Jewish trade [including the slave trade] and relaxes some political restrictions, allowing some juridical autonomy-action, which was due to his needs for Jewish money, which in turn, makes him behold to the Jewish merchants.

AD 830- How does the Church expect its congregations to respect the Jews, and cease the ruthless murdering of them when, Agobard, Archbishop of Lyons, writes anti-Jewish pamphlets in which he refers to Jews as "Sons of Darkness."

AD 833-King Alfred's envoys Sighelm and Aethelstan convey alms to Saint Thomas in India.

AD 834-In the year 834 Pope Boniface IV moved the Roman Catholic Church feast of All Saints' Day, which is also known as All Hallows' Day [Halloween], from May to November 1 to counter the growing Pagan rite celebrated on October 31 to honor Samhain, the Lord of the Dead. October 31 was called All Hallows' Evening, eventually abbreviated Halloween. In the medieval times the Satanic witches actually took Halloween as an opportunity to mock the saints of the church commemorated on All Saints' Day.

AD 841-Saint Agobard, Archbishop of Lyons, writes his book, "Contra Insulsam Vulgi Opinionem de Grandine et Tonitruis," "Against the Foolish Belief of the Common Sort Concerning Hail and Thunder," which addresses superstitions and witchcraft of his times.

Because it is preposterous, it must be true, "In view of the evidence for these things [Superstitions], it would take more faith to believe that there is no God than to believe that He is responsible for these things. Medieval superstition may strain our credulity, but Christianity, as it is presented in the Scriptures, is not of the same class. The miracles described within the Bible are not fantastic stories. Rather, they fit within the context of history to such an extent that it would strain our credulity not to believe them.”

Miracles, as described in the Bible, are no more than the imaginations of early Christians, run rampant, in order to establish a new faith. Little is documented, little is verifiable, and little is attestable, except in the imaginations of their creators.

“Some form years ago,” writes Dr. Cazenove, “An audience in Oxford was listening to a professor of modern history [Dr. Arnold of Rugby], who discussed this subject. After pointing out the difference between the Gospel miracles, and those recorded by Ecclesiastical historians, the lecturer proceeded as follows: ‘Some appear to be unable to conceive of belief or unbelief, except as having some ulterior object: ‘We believe this because we love it: we disbelieve it because we wish it to be disproved.’” ~See Smith's Dictionary, vol. II, pg 967.

Medieval superstition often strains our credulity, but Christian writers deny it is presented in the Scriptures, and if so, it is not of the same class.

AD843-Condemnation of image worshipping, Iconoclasm, at the Council of Orthodoxy, has the support of Empress Theodora II. The interdiction of monarchs throughout the next seven hundred years is a continual plague upon the Church in its efforts to reign supreme over the people as well as the lands.

The Church does not wish to be dependent upon any particular monarch as to whether or not any of its Doctrines are accepted or rejected. This would entail different Doctrine throughout the world. The see saw battle of wills condemns innocents on both sides who dare to take a stand or reveal their true nature regarding this issue.

AD 846- Muslims invade Italy and attack Rome.

AD 847- Pope Leo IV, 847-855: Grants forgiveness of sins for those in the Frankish Army who die in battle against the heathens. The kingdom of heaven will be given as a reward to all of those who shall be killed in this war for the Omnipotent knows that they lost their lives fighting for the truth of the faith, and for the preservation of their country as well as for the defense of Christians, and therefore God will give them, their reward. ~In Migne, Patrologia Latina, 115:656-657, and 161:720, trans. Oliver J. Thatcher, and Edgar Holmes McNeal, eds., A Source Book for Medieval History, (New York: Scribners, 1905, pgs. 511-12).

Period of composition of the False Decretals, a collection of forged documents attributed to Popes from Saint Clement (88-97) to Gregory II (714-731). The Decretals strongly support the self-sufficiency and rights of Bishops, and are suspect for a long time before being repudiated entirely about 1628.

AD848-Gothescaloh is condemned for espousing his doctrine that Jesus had not died for all mankind. He is flogged by the Synods of Mainz in 848 and by the Quierey in 849. Church Authorities will use this incident to claim they were not abusive in their treatment of heretics [they didn't kill him, did they?] However, they do forget their claims to individual rights and freedom to choose one's beliefs.

Their next claim will be that punishment is necessary for Purity of Faith. Again, individual rights are secondary to the proclaimed policies and dictates of the Church, which abhors individuality.

Bordeaux, France, the Jews are accused of betraying the city to the invading Danes. In Toulouse, on Easter, a Jew is publicly humiliated by being slapped in the face by the Catholic Bishop as punishment for his people's betrayal of Jesus to the Romans, which has now become a customary part of Easter observances in Toulouse for some years.

AD849- Gottschalk, a German Bishop, who preached the doctrine of twofold predestination is sentenced by the Council of Quincy to be flogged and suffer perpetual imprisonment.

AD 850- First use of “Holy Water.” [salted water].

Pépin the Great strengthens his position in Aquitaine by confederation with the Northmen. ~Decay of the Frankish Empire, v. 22.

AD 852- An uprising against the Moslems in Armenia.

AD855 (?) - Female Pope [?]-Pope Joan, first female occupier to the Papacy (?). Women are generally not given the same rights and privileges as their male counterparts in Italy [education as well as land rights] and it is alleged that Joan's father, an Englishman, dressed her as a boy in order to help his daughter obtain a better education. It is claimed that Joan fell in love with a Benedictine Monk and they go to Athens where he dies. She is alleged to have entered the priest hood as a man, rising to the rank of Cardinal without detection and is elected Pope.

This monumental embarrassment, although there is no evidence to prove this claim one way or the other but remains a stigma to the Church, causes such concern in the Church that it is said the Vatican now requires Cardinals eligible for the papacy to remain naked beneath their gowns and sit on a specially constructed seat [similar to a toilet seat] where their genitalia will be exposed from beneath.

An inspection by their peers would then be confirmed: "Testiculo habet, et bene pendentes," "He has testicles, and they hang well." Joan is known as Pope John VIII [872-882], who allegedly dies in childbirth during a ceremony much to the humiliation of the Church. In the Cathedral of Siena there is a papal bust with the inscription Johannes VIII, Femina ex Angli. ~The Bad Popes, by E.R. Chamberlin.

Other writers deny this narrative... Middle Age gossip, especially in the licentious period from the 13th century to the 17th century relished every kind of sex story, especially, the legend of a female Pope, who embarrassed the Papal Court by her pregnancy, was very popular. Her 'Pontificate' was said to be from 855 to 858, which, we have every reason to believe, was, as stated in all lists of the Popes, the period of Pope Benedict III.

Pope John VIII was troubled throughout his pontificate by the Saracens, whom he was indebted to buy off by a yearly tribute. His attempts to unite the Eastern Church with Rome were defeated by the craft of Photius, Patriarch of Constantinople, who, had been previously excommunicated by Pope Nicholas I. According to the annalist Fulda, John was murdered by members of his own household. Poison was administered to him, but as it worked too slowly, and his death was accelerated by his skull being fractured by a blow from a hammer. ~Gregorovius, Rome in the Middle Ages, III., p. 204.

The Papal Court was in fact gross and barbaric, as is described by the monk, Secretary of Charlemagne, Eginhard, in his "Annals," but it was not until centuries later that the lascivious story of Joan appeared, having been suppressed.

The real interest of it is that it was extraordinarily popular during just those centuries when the Church is supposed to have kept Europe pious, virtuous, and devoted to the Papacy; so popular was the story, that Pope Joan was included in the series of busts of Popes in Siena Cathedral, ancient Saena Julia, a city in central Italy, capital of Siena Province, in the Tuscany Region.

The statement that from 858 onward the Cardinals took measures to verify the sex of a candidate for the Papacy must, like the legend of Joan, should be regarded as popular fiction of the erotic later Middle Ages. Real authorities on the Middle Ages seem to have found, like myself, that the knight in shining armor figure is a sheer myth largely founded upon ridiculous Spanish fiction, which Cervantes caricatures in Don Quixote.

As Prof. Medley states in Traills' Social England, if a knight met a maid unprotected on the road he raped her; and some now differ with the learned professor only in this that according to all the leading authorities on women in the Middle Ages she is not likely to have waited to be raped. ~From the works of J. McCabe, Rationalists

Encyclopedia, and Appeal to Reason Library:

AD 858-867-Meatless Fridays-Pope Nicholas I declares; abstinence from meat [meatless Fridays].

"... Abstinence purifies the soul, elevates the mind, subordinates the flesh to the spirit, begets a humble and contrite heart, scatters the clouds of concupiscence, extinguishes the fire of lust, and enkindles the true light of chastity." ~Saint Augustine, in 354.

"When the other races were divided by their own peculiar languages [at Babel], Heber's family preserved that language, which is not unreasonably believed to have been the common language of the race, and that on this account it was henceforth called Hebrew... As for the origin of writing, our Saint agrees with Saint Chrysostom, Saint Jerome, and other erudite Saints, that, 'God himself showed the model and method of all writing when he delivered the Law written with his own finger to Moses.'" ~White, Warfare of Science against Theology, ii, 122, 181.

"If the Gentiles laugh at us, and disbelieve our Scriptures, let at least their own prophetess Sibylla oblige them to believe, who says thus in express words: If, therefore, this prophetess confesses the Resurrection... It is vain for them to deny our doctrine. They say there is a bird single in its kind, which affords a copious demonstration of the Resurrection... They call it a Phoenix, and relate [here repeating the old Pagan fable of the self-resurrecting Phoenix]. If, therefore, as even themselves say, a Resurrection is exhibited by means of an irrational bird, wherefore do they disparage our accounts, when we profess that He who by His power brings that into being which was not in being before, is able to restore this body, and raise it up again after its dissolution?" ~Apost. Const. V, 1, vii; Ante-Nicene Fathers, vii, 440-441.

"Almost every particular in the life of Christ as detailed in the Gospels is to be found in the [Greek] Sibyls, so that it can scarcely be doubted that the Sibyls were copied from the Gospel history, or the Gospel history from them. It is also very certain that there was an Erythraean Sibyl before the time of Christ." ~Higgins, Anac., 576.

During the 3rd century it was also customary to extend meatless Fridays to Saturday. Pope Gregory enjoins the membership to abstain on Saturday [1073-1085], but, Pope Innocent III grants an exception for meatless Friday if Christmas falls on that day.

Pope Saint Nicholas I, with his farsightedness and administrative abilities enabled the Church to extract itself from the influence of the Holy Roman Empire and become a dominant political power in the Dark Ages.

The infamous "Donation of Constantine," upon which the whole concept of the Church as a sovereign state is founded, is now confirmed to be a forgery. His extant letters, in Migne, which number more than 5,000, repeatedly mourn the corruption in his reign. For the failure of his moral campaign the Pious unscrupulousness of many of his own major acts was largely responsible.

His first act is to crush the century old attempt of the Romans to win secular self-government. He next induces the Emperor's widow, Constance, a priest-ridden weakling, to make Sicily a fief of the Papacy and nominate him guardian of her boy, Frederic II, with a fee of £30,000 a year; and at her death he encouraged, if he did not invite, as is affirmed in the contemporary "Chronique d'Ernouf," Ch. 30, a French adventurer to seize Frederic's Sicilian throne and a German to seize his Empire.

Pope Saint Nicholas I makes the appalling excuse that an Oath of Loyalty to an infant, his engagement to protect Frederic's rights, is not binding. He holds the principal role in developing the sale of indulgences, and is the virtual founder of the Inquisition.

The Crusade Pope, Innocent III, summoned ends in a sickening pillage of Christian Constantinople, and he turns a blind eye to the savagery of his Crusaders, his "Whores of War," if they would secure the submission of the Greek Church, Orthodox, to Rome [which they did not]. In the end he could not even plead that he had left the world a better place than he had found it.

Hoping to confront all those who steadfastly refuse to convert, Pope Innocent III approves the sadistic torturing of all heathens, infidels, skeptics, and the genocidal removal of the Jews; the systematic removal, by whatever means possible, of a racial and cultural group. The first known recorded genocide, the purposeful intent to kill, murder, assassinate, or massacre a distinct group of people.

AD 860-The Archbishop John of Ravenna ignores requests [official summons] from Pope Saint Nicholas to appear before the Holy See to answer questions regarding the abuse, injustices, and oppression of the local inhabitants [as well as some of the clergy] for making unfounded financial demands, taxes, and false imprisonment. Later, he is also accused of forging documents to support his claims against the Church. Ravenna is excommunicated in 860 and the Pope finally addresses the abuse of powers by Bishops. The Archbishop Ravenna is accepted back into the Church in 861, and is again excommunicated for further abuses in 862.

AD 863- Pope Nicholas deposes Photius and pronounces Ignatius to be the Patriarch of Constantinople; Photius in turn excommunicates [places a curse] upon the Pope.

AD 864-Bulgaria, the leading Balkan power, accepts the Greek Orthodox faith.

The Popes and monarchs continue their battle on who has more power; Pope Nicholas asserts his elite right to appoint and depose Bishops, but the sovereigns and prelates of France and Germany resist the Pope's declaration.

Christianity is first introduced into Russia, which makes small progress.

AD 865-925-Abu Bakr Muhammad b. Zakariya ar Razi, perhaps the greatest freethinkers, and most definitely radical intellectual, in the Islamic world, and considered the greatest physician in the Islamic sphere, writing over two hundred books on a wide variety of subjects. His greatest medical work was the monumental 'Encyclopaedia al Hawi,' on which he worked for fifteen years.

Ar Razi was a thorough empiricist, which is evidenced by his extant clinical notebook, in which he carefully recorded the progress of his patients, their maladies, and the results of the treatment. He wrote one of the earliest treatises on infectious diseases—smallpox and measles.

Ar Razi earns an early universal condemnation from Muslims for blasphemy by his views on revealed religions, as he saw no possibility of a reconciliation between philosophy and religion, and in two heretical works, one of which may well have influenced the European free thought classic “De Tribus Impostoribus,” Ar Razi gave vent to his hatred of revealed religions. “The period of Catholic ascendancy was on the whole one of the most deplorable in the history of the human mind... The spirit that shrinks from inquiry as sinful and deems a state of doubt a state of guilt, is the most enduring disease that can afflict the mind of man. Not till the education of Europe passed from the monasteries to the universities, not till Mohammedan science, and classical free thought, and industrial independence broke the scepter of the Church, did the intellectual revival of Europe begin.” ~William E. H. Lecky.

The bane of Christianity is Free thinkers, “The expression 'Free Thought' is often used as if it meant merely opposition to the prevailing orthodoxy. But this is only a symptom of Free Thought, frequent, but invariable. 'Free Thought' means thinking freely, as freely, at least, as is possible for a human being. The person who is free in any respect is free from something; what is the free thinker free from? To be worthy of the name, he must be free of two things: the force of tradition, and the tyrant of his own passions. No one is completely free from either, but in the measure of a man's emancipation he deserves to be called a free thinker.” ~Bertrand Russell, The Value of Free Thought: How to Become a Truth-Seeker and Break the Chains of Mental Slavery, 1944, in Bertrand Russell on God and Religion, Buffalo, NY: Prometheus, 1986, p. 239.

On religion and its ability to be self-supporting, “I think they were intended not so much to secure religion as the emoluments of it. When a religion is good, I conceive that it will support itself; and when it does not support itself, and God does not care to support it; so that it's professors are obliged to call for help of the civil power, its a sign, I appetent, of its being a bad one.” ~Benjamin Franklin, Franklin Works Vol. VIII, pg. 506.

On witches and vampires, many will be surprised to learn that Ben Franklin also believed in vampires, “Gentlemen: There is a great danger for the United States of America, this great danger is the Jew. Gentlemen, in every land, which the Jews have settled, they have depressed the moral level and lowered the degree of commercial honesty. They have remained apart and unassimilated ... They have created a state within a state, and when they are opposed they attempt to strangle the nation financially as in the case of Portugal and Spain. For more than 1700 years, they have lamented their sorrowful fate... Namely, that they were driven out of their motherland, but gentlemen, if the civilized world today should give them back Palestine and their property, they would immediately find pressing reasons for not returning there. Why? Because they are Vampires ... They cannot live among themselves; they must live among Christians and others who do not belong to their race.” ~ Found in the Pinckney Papers, Library of Congress.

Mexico, prior to the arrival of Spanish Conquistadors, according to the renown vampire author Montague Summers whose 1928 book The Vampire: His Kith and Kin is a classic. Montague Summers further wrote that Arabia knew of the vampire as well. Vampire-like beings appeared in the “Tales of the Arabian Nights” called “Algul;” this was a ghou, which also consumed human flesh. One African tribe, the Caffre, held the belief that the dead could return and survive on the blood of the living. In ancient Peru there were also vampire legends; the “Canchus” were believed to be devil worshipers who sucked out the blood of the young.

“Fairies are fallen Angels... Some fairies were said to suck human blood like vampires... Many contemporary Witches believe in fairies and some see them clairvoyantly. Some Witches say their Craft [Witch-Craft] was passed down from fairies...” ~Rosemary Ellen Guiley, The Encyclopedia of Witches and Witchcraft, p. 117. John 6:54. cf. Vlad the Impaler [Dracula].

Christian proselytizers will often intermix military campaigns with missionary campaigns in their fervor to “Civilize the heathens,” who are often simple people, whose only crime is that they are not Christians. This disposition of conquering the heathens by any means, at any cost, is supported in the Christian Bible:

✠ “But those mine enemies, which would not that I should reign over them, bring hither, and slay them before me.” ~Luke 19:27.

Ar Razi's heretical book, 'On Prophecy' did not survive the religious discriminatory practices ensuing from the established religious orders. He believed that all men are by nature equal and equally endowed with the faculty of reason that must not be disparaged in favor of blind faith; reason further enables men to perceive scientific truths in an immediate way. “It's interesting to speculate how it developed that in two of the most anti-feminist institutions, the Church and the Law Court, the men are wearing the dresses." ~Flo Kennedy.

The prophets, those 'Billy goats' with long beards, as Ar Razi disdainfully described them, cannot claim any intellectual or spiritual superiority. They pretend to come with a message from God, all the while exhausting themselves in spouting their lies, and imposing on the masses blind obedience to the "Words of the Master."

The Roman Church demands obedience, regardless of the mendacity of our rulers, "In a like manner we must endure the authority of the prince. If he misuse or abuse his authority, we are not to entertain a grudge, seek revenge or punishment. Obedience is to be rendered for God's sake, for the ruler is God's representative. However they may tax or exact, we must obey and endure patiently." ~Martin Luther, Tribute to Caesar, sermon, from The Political Theories of Martin Luther, Luther Hess Waring, New York, Putnam's, 1910, p. 104.

The miracles of the early prophets are impostures, based on trickery, or the stories regarding them are lies. Custom, tradition, and intellectual laziness lead men to follow their religious leaders blindly.

"Those who wish to seek out the causes of miracles, and to understand the things of nature as philosophers, and not stare at them in astonishment like fools, are soon considered heretical and impious and proclaimed as such by those whom the mob adore as the interpreters of nature and the gods. For these men know that once ignorance is put aside, that wonderment would be taken away which is the only means by which their authority is preserved." ~Baruch Spinoza

Religions have been the sole cause of the bloody wars that have ravaged mankind. Religions have also been resolutely hostile to philosophical speculation and to scientific research. The so-called Holy Scriptures are deemed worthless by some because they have done more harm than good, whereas the "Writings of the ancients like Plato, Aristotle, Euclid, and Hippocrates have rendered much greater service to humanity... The people who gather round the religious leaders are either feeble-minded, or they are women and adolescents. Religion stifles truth and fosters enmity. If a book in itself constitutes a demonstration that it is true revelation, the treatises of geometry, astronomy, medicine and logic can justify such a claim much better than the Quran [the transcendent literary beauty of which, denied by Razi, was thought by Orthodox Muslims to prove the truth of Muhammad's mission]."

In his political philosophy, Ar Razi believed that man could live in an orderly society without being terrorized by religious law or coerced by the prophets. Ar Razi believed in scientific and philosophical progress, that the sciences progressed from generation to generation. He held that one must keep an open mind, and not reject empirical observations simply because they do not fit into one's preconceived scheme of things. Ar Razi believed that his own contributions to the sciences would be superseded by even greater minds than his. His heretical writings have not survived and were not widely read; nonetheless they are a witness to the remarkably tolerant Islamic culture and society in which Ar Razi lived. These qualities, so rare at any time, are so much the more remarkable from someone living in the early years of the 10th century, and are just what we need if Islamic society is to regain its former glory.

AD866-Pope Saint Nicholas I prohibits the use of torture in dealing with devil worshipers and witchcraft [Pseudo-Isidorian Decretals]. Yet, in spite of this, various techniques are forcefully induced upon victims suspected of witchcraft. ~Cf. Exodus 22:18-20.

"In addition to the 'Pseudo Isidorian Decretals' there were other forgeries, which were successfully used for the promotion of the doctrine of Papal Primacy. One famous instance is that of Thomas Aquinas. In 1264 A.D. [Saint] Thomas authored a work entitled 'Against the Errors of the Greeks'. This work deals with the issues of the theological debate between the Greek and Roman Churches in that day on such subjects as the 'Trinity,' the Procession of the Holy Spirit, Purgatory and the Papacy. In his defense of the Papacy, Thomas bases practically his entire argument on forged quotations of Church fathers... These spurious quotations had enormous influence on many Western theologians in succeeding centuries." ~William Webster, The Church of Rome at the Bar of History.

Abuse of powers is a common occurrence and in 862, Lothar II of Lorraine abandons his wife, Theutberga, to marry another woman, Waldrada.

The principles in the 'Decretals,' part of the Canon Law of the Church, specifically states that "An oath disadvantageous to the Church is not binding."

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

Church followers are not allowed to talk to non-members, or receive literature from non-members, which carries through to the 21st century; Catholic Church Doctrine, as early as the 2nd century, ordered that, “Christians should hold no conversation, or should interchange none of the most ordinary courtesies of life, with the excommunicated or the heretics,” which still survives in the 21st century, and is binding upon the flock via the Catechism.

In Pope Pius X's Encyclical Letter on the teaching of Christian doctrine it is enacted, “That all parish priests, and in general, all those entrusted with the care of souls, shall on every Sunday and feast day throughout the year, without exception, give boys and girls an hour's instruction from the catechism on those things, which every one must believe, and do in order to be saved; at stated times during the year they shall prepare boys and girls by continued instruction, lasting several days, to receive the sacraments of penance and confirmation; they shall likewise and with special care on all the weekdays in Lent, and if necessary on other days after the feast of Easter, prepare boys and girls by suitable instruction and exhortations to make their first Communion in a Holy manner; in each and every parish the society, commonly called the Confraternity of Christian Doctrine, shall be Canonically erected; through this the parish priests, especially in the places where there is a scarcity of priests, will have lay helpers for the catechetical instruction in pious lay persons who will devote themselves to the office of teaching.”

Pope Urban VI, in command of the Roman Catholic Church, “... Made a solemn and general declaration against keeping faith with heretics.”

“The Church [religion], which taught men not to keep faith with heretics, had no claim to toleration.... All of which proves that there is more likelihood of the truth being spoken if a man is taken on his honor than on his religion.” ~John Locke, the eminent English free thinker.

The Bishops of Lorraine support the monarch in his decision [against Church Doctrine] and in 863 a Papal Legate at the Synod of Metz condemns the abandoned wife and not the monarch. This further embarrassment to the Church finally causes it to summons the Archbishops and to remove them from office. It appears that they may have accepted some monetary reward for siding with the monarch. King Louis II is incensed for the action taken by Church officials and lays siege to Rome. The Pope is without food for two days while in seclusion.

AD867-872-Pope Adrian II is the last married Catholic Pope. Actually, he was married before he became Pope, but refused to adopt celibacy or give up his wife when he ascended the papal throne.

Pope Adrian II fathered one daughter. The Pope's daughter is abducted by the son of a Bishop and brother of a leading Cardinal, and the Pope enlists the assistance of the Emperor who send troops. The abductors are then murdered [with the Church's blessing?]

Yet the church says, “There can be no doubt that at this period (800's) the law of celibacy was ill observed by priests.” ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 1, pg. 507.

The notice of the Pope in the 11th edition of one famous encyclopedia states that, “His (the noble abductor's) reputation suffered but a momentary eclipse,” which is perfectly true, for the abducting family was esteemed both in Church and nobility and the Romans in large part supported them. ~This last sentence has been removed from the new edition of the encyclopedia.

AD 869-Sixth Ecumenical Council requested by Emperor Basil I. This Council is not recognized by the Eastern Orthodox Church, and Basil I deposes of Photius, Patriarch of Constantinople [the deposition of Photius is confirmed and all iconoclasts are henceforth anathematized]. The schism between East and West continues. Neither side is willing to relinquish its authorities, its power, or its lands.

The Ecumenical Council of Constantinople IV issues a second condemnation of Iconoclasm, condemns and deposes Photius as patriarch of Constantinople and restores Ignatius to the patriarchate. This is the last ecumenical council held in the East. It is first called ecumenical by canonists toward the end of the 11th century.

AD870- The Great Famine of 970: “Huge taxes on grain creates record famine on the Rhineland. Bishop Hatto of Bingen invites the poor to his barn under the plea of distributing corn to them; but when the barn is crowded he locks the door and sets fire to the building. Mazoria of Theophylact executes Pope John X.” ~Mercenaries Scottish History Timeline: 9th to 12th Centuries by Christine O'Keeffe, Ver. 1.1. Monday, February 16, 2004.

Mazoria's son is conceived after her rape by Pope Sergius III succeeds as Pope John XI. Mazoria is executed by her second son Alberic Jr. whose son Octavian, succeeds as Pope John XII in 955.

Saint Henri II, Saxon Emperor of Germany and nephew of Otto, establishes Bénédictine abbeys and works with the King of France, Louis the Pious assists Pope Benoît VIII with reforms.

AD 871- Reign of Alfred the Great, the only English King ever anointed by a Pope of Rome.

Hincmar, a French prelate, encourages Charles the Bald to resist the self-proclaimed authority of the Pope over the church of France.

AD 872-882-Pope John VIII is forced to pay tribute to the Muslims after his supporters are defeated in Italy. This reluctant accord saves the Vatican from invasion and possible destruction.

Anathema: All who profess teachings contrary to the Church are excommunicated or anathematized. During the first few centuries the Anathema did not seem to differ significantly from the sentence of excommunication.

However, beginning with the 6th century a distinction is made between the two. A Council of Tours desires that after three warnings there is to be recited in chorus Psalm CVIII against the usurper of the goods of the Church, that he may fall into the Curse of Judas, and “That he may be not only excommunicated, but anathematized, and that he may be stricken by the sword of Heaven.”

This distinction was introduced into the canons of the Church, as is proved by the letter of John VIII (872-82) found in the Decree of Gratian, (c. III, q. V, c. XII): “Know that Engeltrude is not only under the ban of excommunication, which separates her from the society of the brethren, but under the anathema, which separates from the body of Christ, which is the Church.” ~From the Catholic Encyclopedia.

Either believe or be cursed, “In passing this sentence, the Pontiff is vested in a nice, stole, and a violet cape, wearing his mitre, and assisted by twelve priests clad in their surplices and holding lighted candles. He takes his seat in front of the altar or in some other suitable place, amid pronounces the formula of anathema, which ends with these words: ‘Wherefore in the name of God the All-powerful, Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, of the Blessed Peter, Prince of the Apostles, and of all the saints, in virtue of the power, which has been given us of binding and loosing in Heaven and on earth, we deprive N-- himself and all his accomplices and all his abettors of the Communion of the Body and Blood of Our Lord, we separate him from the society of all Christians, we exclude him from the bosom of our Holy Mother the Church in Heaven and on earth, we declare him excommunicated and anathematized and we judge him condemned to eternal fire with Satan and his angels and all the reprobate, so long as he will not burst the fetters of the demon, do penance and satisfy the Church; we deliver him to Satan to mortify his body, that his soul may be saved on the day of judgment.’”

“The Pontiff and the twelve priests then cast to the ground the lighted candles they have been carrying, and notice is sent in writing to the priests and neighboring bishops of the name of the one who has been excommunicated and the cause of his excommunication, in order that they may have no communication with him.”

“Although he is delivered to Satan and his angels, he can still, and is even bound to repent. The Pontifical gives the form for absolving him and reconciling him with the Church. The promulgation of the anathema with such solemnity is well calculated to strike terror to the criminal and bring him to a state of repentance, especially if the Church adds to it the ceremony of the Maranatha.”

One wonders what Jesus would have said regarding this ritual and condemnation in his name! The Maranatha Anathema: an even more solemn event in the declaration of Pope Silverius [536-38]: “If anyone henceforth deceives a Bishop in such a manner, let him be anathema maranatha before God and his holy angels.”

Pope Benedict XIV [1740-58--De Synodo Dioecesana X, I] cites the anathema maranatha formulated by the Fathers of the Fourth Council of Toledo against those who were guilty of the crime of high treason: “He who dares to despise our decision, let him be stricken with Anathema Maranatha, i.e. may he be damned at the coming of the Lord, may he have his place with Judas Iscariot, he and his companions. Amen.” ~From the Catholic Encyclopedia, 1999.

There is frequent mention of this anathema maranatha in the Bulls of erection for abbeys and other establishments. ~The Church justifies its anathemas and excommunications via I Corinthians 5:5, Matthew 18:17 and it is right to condemn by way of Romans 12:14.

To Pope Pius XII, “I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians.” ~Mahatma Gandhi

From 882 to 1046, there are thirty-seven Popes, some of whom serve only a few weeks in their esteemed offices. Murder is alleged in many cases [poisoning being the number one choice], in an attainable position approached by bribery as a route to the papacy; in later centuries it is estimated that as many as forty Popes bought their jobs. The Church was a means for poor and uneducated to attain wealth and power.

Sons of many influential families were coerced into seeking Church careers, with even the nobility and their mistresses seeing no reason to adjust their life-styles due to having taken religious vows [including celibacy].

"The prosperity of nations depends upon principles to which the clergy, as a body, are invariably opposed." ~Henry Thomas Buckle, Vol. 11, Pt. 1, p. 42.

Deprived of the support of their so-called Holy Empire, the Papacy is soon to become the possession of the great infamous Roman families, replete with local dominance for which the men are prepared to rape, murder, lie, and steal. A third of the Popes elected between 872 and 1012 will die under suspicious circumstances.

Pope John VIII, 872-82, will be bludgeoned to death by his own entourage; Pope Stephen VI, 896-7, will be strangled, to death; Pope Leo V, 903, murdered by his so-called pious successor Pope Sergius III, 904-11; Pope John X, 914-28, will be suffocated to death; Pope Stephen VIII, 939-42, will be hideously disfigured, a fate also shared by the Greek anti-pope John XVI, 997-8, who, unfortunately for him, did not die soon after the removal of his eyes, nose, lips, tongue and hands [perhaps he was caught with another man's wife, for which it was quite common in that era to cut off a man's nose for adultery].

AD 875- The death of Emperor Louis; Charles the Bald and Louis of Germany both contend for the succession. Charles the Bald by granting new privileges to the Church of Rome, obtains the support of the Pope, and is acknowledged as the king of Italy and Emperor of the West.

Alfred, King of Wessex, fits out a fleet and conquers the Danes in a great sea battle. ~See Career Of Alfrd the Great, v, 49.

AD 876- Sens, southeast of Paris, Jews are expelled from the city and their properties impounded.

The death of Louis of Germany and division of his kingdom among his three sons: Bavaria goes to Carloman; Saxony to Louis the Stammerer, and Eastern France [Franconia and Swabia] to Charles the Fat. Their uncle, Charles the Bald, attempts to disinherit them, but is defeated by Louis at Andernach.

AD 877- Carloman acquires the crown of Italy but the Pope opposes him; the Pope is driven from Rome by Lambert, Duke of Spoleto, and takes refuge in France.

AD 879- Methodius is forbidden by the Pope to perform the services of the Church for the Slavonians in their own language.

AD 882- 942-Saadia ibn Joseph believed suffering was the punishment for our sins and was meant to purify us, discipline us, and make us humble.

AD 881- Methodius gets leave to use the Slavonic tongue in the churches.

Charles the Fat ascends the throne of Italy and Germany and becomes Emperor of the West.

AD 882- 884-Pope Marinus I, his father is a Catholic priest.

AD 888- Alfred the Great begins his translations from Latin into Anglo-Saxon. ~Augustine's Missionary Work In England, iv, 182.

AD 895- Rome is captured by Emperor Arnulf of Germany who is crowned Emperor of the West.

AD 896- Pope Boniface VI condemned as heretic the belief "In the power of man's innate will to seek God." He is later denounced by the Roman Council held by Pope John IX held in 898. Pope Boniface VI's father is the Catholic Bishop Hadrian.

Pope Stephen VII declares the election of his predecessor, Pope Formosus, invalid; disinters his body and has it thrown into the Tiber.

AD 897- Pope Stephen imprisoned and strangled to death.

AD 900- Jewish slave merchants lose their slavery trade to the Italian Christians. During this century, Jews from Northern France and Italy, speaking a language called Laaz, begin speaking earliest Yiddish, as a result of contact with German speakers.

The earliest [complete] copy of the Hebrew Old Testament dates from 900 C.E. In the early part of the 10th century [916 C.E.], there existed a group of Jews called the Massorettes who were quite meticulous in their copying of Scripture, and all these texts were all in capital letters, with no punctuation or paragraphs.

AD 903- Pope Leo V, ordained for only a month before being imprisoned and tortured by Christophorus, who then enthroned himself. Both men are killed in 904 by orders of Pope Sergius III, 904-911.

Pope Sergius has a son by his teenage mistress, Marozia, and his son later becomes Pope John XI, 931-935, whom the church states: is not illegitimate, although his father [the Pope] was not married.

AD 904-911- Pope Sergius III's bastard son sat in the pontifical chair, while John XII turned the Lateran Palace into a virtual brothel. So notorious was his profligacy that decent women are deterred from even going near the Holy Palace for fear of his promiscuous and unbridled lust. "Women... Fear to come and pray at the thresholds of the Holy Apostles, for they had heard how [Pope] John a little time ago took women pilgrims by force to his bed, wives, widows, and virgins alike." ~Harry J. Margoulias, Byzantine Christianity: Emperor, Church and the West, Rand McNally, 1982, pp. 103-04.

From this government of whores we receive the word pornocracy, which was used by the rivals of Pope Sergius, who is regarded as one of the worst and most extravagant Popes in Catholic history. Pope Sergius had a pannel [Pannel: a mistress of a priest] named Marozia who was not liked by the Papal Court and exerted great influence in the Vatican.

A politically astute woman, Marozia, mistress of Pope Sergius, Pope from 904 to 911. Pope John X, 914 to 928, was also romantically involved with Marozia's mother. Marozia succeeded in having Pope John X deposed and the Papacy installed upon her illegitimate son, fathered by Pope Sergius, as John XI, Pope from 931 to 935. And Marozia also managed to see one of her grandson's become Pope John XII.

AD 906- "De Ecclesiasticis Disciplinis" by Regino of Prum states, "...Certain abandoned women, turning aside to follow Satan, being seduced by the illusions and phantasms of demons, believe and openly profess that in the dead of night they ride upon certain beasts along with the pagan goddess 'Diana' [the Queen of Heaven] and a countless horde of women and that in these silent hours they fly over vast tracts of country and obey her as their mistress, while on other nights they are summoned to pay her homage."

If it were only the women, Regino would not have been so concerned, however, an enormous number of people [Innumera Multitudo] believe this to be true and stray from the true Faith [follow Paganism]. To this he says, "... It is the duty of priests, earnestly to instruct the people that these things are absolutely untrue, and that such imaginings are planted in the minds of mis-believing folk, not by a Divine spirit, but by the spirit of Evil."

AD 912- Rollo, converts to Christianity and takes the name of Robert and receives from Peter the Simple the province afterward called Normandy, of which he is the first duke. ~Decay Of The Frankish Empire, v, 22.

AD 913- Igor, son of Rurik, upon the death of his guardian, Oleg, is invested with the government of Russia.

AD 914- Theodora, mother of Pope Leo V's beautiful young mistress, Marozia, has her lover ordained on the papal throne as Pope John X, 914-928. "Pope John X, ruled 914-28, one of the many scandalous Popes of the Iron Age. Bishop Liutprand, contemporary Bishop of Cremona and one of the few cultivated writers of the time; note that he belonged to the Lombard part of Italy, tells us that John, while Archbishop of Ravenna, was the notorious lover of one of the chief ladies [illiterates who could not write their names] of the Roman 'Nobility,' Theodora [Antapodosis, II, 48], and he was raised to the Papal throne by her and her family. Cardinal Baronius, the 'Father of Catholic history,' admits this, and it is on account of Theodora and her two daughters that he calls this section of Papal history 'The Rule of the Whores.' John quarreled with Theodora's even more brazen daughter Marozia [the mother of one Pope and mistress of another], and she had him murdered. So say the Annals of Beneventum [in the Monumenta Germaniae, Vol. V], written by contemporary monks, as well as Liutprand." ~Dr. Joseph McCabe, Rationalists Encyclopaedia.

Theodora and her daughter, Marozia, control the Papacy through their lovers and this also may be the source of the Pope Joan legend, first female Pope, Pope John XII, 955-963. Pope John XII ascends to the papacy at the tender age of nineteen, he seduced his father's mistress and his own sisters and raped pilgrims, and he castrated the single Cardinal who criticized him. There is nothing immoral he did not do during the 10 years of his pontificate, yet the feeble reference to his scandalous private life in the 11th edition of an encyclopedia is cut out in the fourteenth, leaving him as one of the great Holy Fathers.

Upon the tombstone epitaph, which describes Pope John XII, the most corrupt young hoodlum who ever wore the tiara, is inscribed, "An ornament of the whole world." ~From J. McCabe's Rationalist Encyclopedia.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

"The Papacy was corrupt for whole centuries: especially from about 880 to 1050 C.E., and [with a short decent pontificate at rare intervals] 1290 to about 1660 C.E. No 'Primacy' in any other organized religion has so disgraceful a record." ~Dr. Joseph McCabe, former Benedictine Monk.

AD 914-928-Pope John X, one of the many scandalous Popes of the "Iron Age." Bishop Liutprand, contemporary Bishop of Cremona notes that Archbishop of Ravenna was known as the notorious lover of one of the chief ladies [many of whom could not write their names-but then again, neither could many of the high ranking clergy until the 12th century], of the Roman "Nobility," Theodora [Antapodosis, II, 48], and he was raised to the Papal throne by her and her family.

Cardinal Baronius, the "Father of Catholic History," admits this, and it is on account of Theodora and her two daughters that he calls this section of Papal history "The Rule of the Whores."

John quarreled with Theodora's shameless daughter Marozia who is mother of one Pope and mistress of another, some say the Pope's son, and she had him murdered. ~See the Annals of Beneventum, in the Monumenta Germaniae, Vol. V, written by contemporary monks, as well as Liutprand J. McCabe, Rationalists Encyclopaedia.

If the Catholic Church committed the same deeds it had perpetrated in earlier years we would call it murder. But no Saints have ever been accused of murder, no Popes, no members of the Church oligarchy, "The principle of the Inquisition was murderous... The Popes were not only murderers in the great style, but they also made murder a legal basis of the Christian Church and a condition of Salvation." ~Lord Acton.

AD 915- the intolerant Catholic Church via Pope John X plays a significant role in the expulsion of Saracens from Central and Southern Italy.

AD 923-The "Satanic Verses," although not mentioned in the Koran are mentioned in the works of the historian, Abu Jafar at-Tabari who tells of Muhammad being concerned over the disagreement between him and his tribesmen after he had forbidden them to worship their pagan goddesses. Allegedly encouraged by "Satan," Muhammad uttered some verses that allowed the "Banat at-Lah."

AD 926-Druze, Druses, followers of the Egyptian Caliph al-Hakim-bi-Amrih Allah are named after his disciple Mohammed Ben Israel Darasi, who believed that God is Divinely Incarnated as a living person and the last of which is Hakim and, Jesus is another Divine Incarnate of God. The followers believe in "Transmigration of Souls," also known today as reincarnation.

"After all, it is no more surprising to be born twice, than it is to be born once." ~ Voltaire, French free thinker.

Theirs was a secret order that followed the teachings of Christianity when with Christians and the teachings of Muhammad when with the Muslims.

The specific practice of their faith is secret and therefore we are unable to ascertain the true numbers of their faith. Today, 2000, their followers are estimated at 350,000.

AD 928-931- Pope Stephen VII [or VIII] is a Roman son of Teudemund, and Cardinal-priest of Saint Anastasia. Little is known of the circumstances of his election, and even less regarding his brief Papal career. His remembrance survives in the privileges he granted to several monasteries in Italy and France. A Greek writer of the 12th century accuses Pope Stephen VIII, an accusation, which if true, makes this Pontiff a trendsetter in clerical appearances.

Pope Stephen VIII is "The first Pope who was shameless enough to shave himself and to order the rest of Italy to do likewise." Pope Stephen VIII has his ears and nose cut off and never has any further public contact [for obvious reasons]. I have been trying to find out why and by whom since the Pope maintained a large army it would have to be someone close to him or someone with power [no success yet].

In his blind rage, Stephen not only abused the memory of Pope Formosus but also treated his body with absolute indignity. Pope Stephen was strangled in prison in the summer of 897, and the six following Popes owe their elevation to the struggles of the political parties [897-904].

Guido and Marozia usurp supreme temporal power in Rome and confine Pope John X in prison, where he eventually dies; the date uncertain.

AD 929- Abu Taher, the Carmathian leader, plunders the sacred city of Mecca and massacres the pilgrims.

AD 931-935-Pope John XI, according to the official biographical record of the Popes, the "Liber Pontificalis," the English translation, "The Book of the Popes," 1916, he was the son of Pope Sergius III. Abbot Flodoard, one of the most conscientious writers of the time, says, in his Annals, 933, that his mother was Marozia, the worst of the three "Whores." ~cf. Genesis 38:24.

Marozia still rules in Rome and she makes her son Pope John XI.

"He was a worthless nonentity, thrust into the Papal chair by his mother." ~Cardinal Baronius of Pope John XI.

Pope John XII keeps a stable of two thousand horses, which he feeds almonds and figs steeped in wine. His Holiness Pope John XII had his Spiritual Director blinded and had another Cardinal castrated, for not accepting his policies, which eventually caused the death of the poor man. Pope John XII, son of the brutal ruler of Rome, Alberic, and the son of Marozia, seized power from, and probably murdered, his mother, and made his son Pope at the age of nineteen. Pope John had been wildly corrupt from boyhood in his father's palace, and harem, and Bishop Liutprand [De Rebus Gestis Othonis] and the monk annalist Benedict of Soracte describe him as a monster of vice in the Papal seat.

Denounced by Emperor Otto for incest, rape, and turning the Papal Palace into a "Brothel," the Roman clergy even take oaths relating to the charges, adding chronic drunkenness, unnatural vices, etc... stating that he castrated Cardinals and cut out the eyes of priests who protested. Bishop Liutprand was present at the trial. As it did not suit the Emperor's political interests to condemn him, he said that John was, "Just a boy" and they must let him "Sow his wild oats."

This is the period of the Ottonian Renaissance, which certain American historians have "Discovered," asking us to use the expression Dark Age no longer. "After one of the longest reigns of the 10th century the Pope is slain by the husband of a woman he is claimed to have raped." ~From J. McCabe, Rationalists Encyclopaedia.

AD 932- Hugh marries Marozia and is expelled from Rome by her son Alberic, who then confines his mother, and his brother, Pope John, in St. Angelo and governs the city.

AD 933- The Saracens invade Castile, Spain, and are defeated at Uxama.

AD 937- The anti-Semite Catholic, Agobard, Archbishop of Lyons, writes anti-Jewish pamphlets in which he refers to Jews as "Sons of darkness."

AD 940-1003-Gerbert d'Aurillac travels to Spain to learn the secrets pertaining to Alchemy [the changing of base metals into gold or silver]. He later becomes Pope Sylvester II. Pope Sylvester claims to have a head that can prophesy and is said to have received secret wisdom from this head known as "Meridiana" who offers him riches, magical powers, and her body [Sexual connotations are implied in this statement]. How did alchemy survive for so many centuries without producing gold?

Early alchemists actually believed they had done so, one ancient Egyptian recipe for "Diplosis," the doubling of the amount, of gold called for a heating a mixture of two parts gold with one part each of silver and copper for twice as much of a golden substance will then result. Egyptian alchemists believed that the gold acted as a seed in the copper and silver.

The seed grew, eating the copper and silver as food, until the whole mixture was full-grown gold. Bernard Trevisan, an Italian alchemist, says, "Is not gold merely [the Sun's] beams condensed to a solid yellow?" Of the twenty-five Popes between 955 and 1057, thirteen are appointed by the local aristocracy, while the other twelve are appointed [with no fewer than five being dismissed] by their German Emperors.

The ancient axiom that no one may judge the Pope was still in the law-books, but in practice it had long since been set aside. "If anyone, therefore, shall say that blessed Peter the Apostle was not appointed the Prince of all the Apostles and the visible Head of the whole Church Militant; or that the same directly and immediately received from the same our Lord Jesus Christ a primacy of honor only, and not of true and proper jurisdiction: let him be anathema." ~First Vatican Council, session 4, chapter 1.

If bread and wine can be changed into the body and blood of Christ, some alchemists believed that a man of pure heart and spirit might turn lead to gold. Because the Roman Catholic Church came to support Aristotle's basic ideas, with an added role for God, alchemy no longer was anathema [as many European alchemists of the medieval era were also clerics].

AD 945-975- Aethelred the Unready, King of England, invades Scotland but is defeated. Mercenary soldiers seize Waterford.

Cows die of the Black Plague.

AD 950-The violent conversion of the last Gentile, Hellenes of Laconia, by the Armenian "Saint" Nikon. End of the World: "Treatise on the Antichrist" by Adso of Montier-en-Der, 950 C.E., a response to a variety of crises at mid-century that provokes widespread Apocalyptic unrest, and rapidly becomes a central text in the European eschatological literature. ~[ed. by Verhelst, CCSL, Cont. med. aevi 40; study in the context of 1000, by Verhelst, Adso van Montier-en-Der en de angst voor het jaar Duizend, Tijdschrift voor Geschiedenis, 90, 1977, 1-10]; and C. End of the World: Acrostic [puzzle] on the End of the World, predecessor of Celano's "Dies irae," is found in a manuscript from Aniane [in the second half of the 10th century, ed. Paulin Blanc, "Nouvelle Prose sur le Dernier Jour, Composée avec chant noté, vers l'An Mille..."] ~Mémoires de la Société Archéologique de Montpellier, 2, 1850, 451-509, second copy located by Michel Huglo: BN lat. 1928 f.178, Fécamp c.1040.

A Catholic monk named Adso writes one of the most complete treatise on the Anti-Christ. The Anti-Christ will be coming from the Jewish tribe of Dan, he argues, and this demonic person will be raised in the East. Before he can come, however, a Frankish King must reign. This king will triumph over all the enemies of Christendom and rule a peaceful Christian world, and then he will go to Golgotha to surrender his crown, which will signal the coming of the Anti-Christ. Adso's concept of "The Last World Emperor" becomes widespread, and soon becomes the idyllic for temporal power. The Chanson de Roland, written about 1095, depicts Emperor Charlemagne [814] as the Messianic ruler who triumphs over all Muslims and Pagans. ~Medieval Apocalypticism: Looking for the Last Emperor: The late Middle Ages Was No Tranquil Era of Religious Harmony, But a Hotbed of Dissent and Extreme Speculation. By E. Randolph Daniel, January 1, 1999.

AD 960- The devastating Black Plague hits Europe. Millions die.

AD 961- Berengar is finally dethroned by Otho the Great and the sovereignty of Italy passes from Charlemagne's descendants to German rulers.

AD 962- Otto I, the Great, is crowned by Pope John XII, revives Charlemagne's kingdom, which now becomes the Holy Roman Empire.

AD 963- Al Hakem, the Caliph of Cordova is famous as a patron of literature and learning, and is said to have collected a library of 600,000 volumes, employs agents in Africa and Arabia to purchase or copy manuscripts.

AD 964- Pope Leo VIII is expelled and Pope John XII reinstated, but he dies soon after; Rome is besieged and captured by the Emperor, after a rebellion encouraged by Berengar.

AD 965- 972-Pope John XIII, son of a Bishop and a descendant of the licentious Empress Theodora. Actually born from an incestuous relationship between Pope Sergio III and his 13-year-old daughter Marozie, Pope John will take his mother as his own mistress, and at the tender age of 18 turn the Lateran into his personal brothel.

He was accused by a synod of "Sacrilege, simony, perjury, murder, adultery and incest," and was temporarily deposed. Pope John took his revenge on opponents by sadistically hacking off their limbs, and was eventually murdered by an enraged husband who caught him having sex with his wife. The Pope is driven out of Rome by an angry crowd for his insatiable greed and nepotism, and upon the Emperor restoring his authority; he wreaks his vengeance with a tenacity and savagery, which shocked even the Italians.

The body of the Prefect, equivalent to the Mayor today, who had died during his tenure, was ordered dug up and torn to pieces. His successor, Pope Benedict V, was humiliated in public by being suspended by his hair for a time, and then he was led around naked on a donkey through the city of Rome. Since the Pope was not accused of Rape or Adultery during his time Catholics consider him a Good Pope. Pope John XIII's father is a Bishop.

AD 966- Mieszko [Miecislav] embraces Christianity and is the first of a royal line in Poland, baptized; he brings Latin Christianity to Poland.

AD 968 (?)-Mexico, Toltec deity, Quexalcote or Quetzalcoatl, who arouses the anger of the priests by offering butterflies as sacrifices instead of human beings, was:

- † Born of the virgin, Chimalman.
- † The cross, depicted in early Mexican artwork, is attributed to being of Mayan derivation.
- † Quexalcote is "Crucified" on a wooden cross by the high priests between two thieves. Ancient pictographs on the Mexican Pyramids attest to this. The images are cut into stone, but the wavy lines insinuate that the crucifix was made of wood and not of stonework.
- † A ritual cup was presented to Quexalcote while on the cross.
- † "He died, was buried, and descended into hell." [The Underworld].
- † On the third day, He arose again [Resurrection]. This miraculous birth and conception is contained in the Codex Vaticanus that is secreted away in the Vatican, Rome. ~Note: We havenot a single witness to the resurrection. None of the women, or men, who allegedly went to the tomb and saw Jesus has left us any verifiable testimony.

- † The Great Deluge, [Great Flood/Inundation] in Mexico is written to have occurred at approximately BC 11,600 according to Aztec myths and legends.
- † In their beliefs there caused to be a Great Flood to destroy the evil in this world.
- † Following the prodigious rains that lasted fifty-two years, a period so great that the heavens fell, there became a need for a new creation [a new race of man, second man-see also: I Corinthians 15 and Acts 4:12 here on earth].

Later Christian clergy reduced this religious cross to being an imperfect reproduction of the swastika [it appears as an equilateral cross] and further degenerates Mexican culture by stating they had no Astronomical measuring devices [How then can the Church justify the culture of this indigenous people being able to formulate a system of counting and a calendar more accurate than that of modern day man's] $18 \times 20 + 5$, is how the Aztecs interpolated their calendar, a system more accurate than today's Georgian Calendar.

How then does the Church explain the Codex Dresdensis, 51-58, explaining lunar and solar eclipses? How then, does the Christian Church explain a culture tracing its roots to 3113 B.C.E? See also BC 2500 in this book.

In Prescott's book, Conquest of Mexico, we have, "O my child, take and receive the water of the Lord of the world, which is our life, which is given for the increasing and renewing of our body. It is to wash and to purify. I pray that these heavenly drops may enter into your body, and dwell there; that they may destroy and remove from you all the evil and sin which was given you before the beginning of the world, since all of us are under its power.' She then washed the body of the child with water, and spoke in this manner: "Whencesoever thou comest, thou that art hurtful to this child, leave him and depart from him, for he now liveth anew, and is 'Born Anew;' now he is purified and cleansed afresh, and our mother Chalcchivitycuc [the goddess of water] bringeth him into the world.' Having thus prayed, the midwife took the child in both hands, and, lifting him towards heaven, said, "O Lord, thou see st here thy creature, whom thou hast sent into the world, thus place of sorrow, suffering, and penitence. Grant him, O Lord, thy gifts and inspiration, for thou art the Great God, and with thee is the great goddess."

And this is 500 years before the first arrival of pernicious Christian missionaries. "According to the ancient traditions collected by the Bishop Francis Nunez del la Vega, the Wodan of the Chiapanese [of Mexico] was grandson of that illustrious old man, who at the time of the 'Great Deluge,' in which the greater part of the human race perished, was saved on a raft, together with his family. Wodan co-operated in the construction of the great edifice which had been undertaken by men to reach the skies; the execution of this rash project was interrupted; each family received from that time a 'different language;' and the great spirit Teotl ordered Wodan to go and people the country of Anahuac." ~Humboldt. The ancient Mexicans even had one of their days called 'Wodansday.'

The Mormons believe that Jesus visited earth twice, tracing the history of their prophets from Mormon who spoke of the Nephites of Jerusalem in BC 600 who split into two factions, one known as the Nephites and the other the Lamanites. The Lamanites are believed to be the ancestors of the North American Indians. Maroni is the last of the Nephite prophets sealing the sacred records in AD 421.

In the diary of the Spanish conquistador, De Soto, 1539-1543, he wrote of fair skins Giants who inhabited the North American Continent. As the great Aztec pyramids were built upon raised lands, so were the ancient pyramids of Egypt said to have been built on "The raised land," legend telling of how valley surrounding the Nile river in the aftermath of the Great Flood was elevated. An ancient Babylonian text, based on previous Sumerian writings, from the 3rd century B.C.E., tells of a quarrel which ends in murder. The leader, Ka' in [Cain?], journeying to the far off land of Dammu, where he built a conurbation and twin towers [Twin towers being a distinctive feature of the Aztec temples]. "In the beginning, before the light of the sun had been created, this place, Cholula, was in obscurity and darkness; all was a plain, without hill or elevation, encircled in every part by water, without tree or created thing. Immediately after the light and the sun arose in the East there appeared giant men of deformed stature who possessed the land. Enamored by the light and beauty of the sun, they determined to build a tower so high that its summit should reach the sky." ~Inscription in Cholula, 1585, discovered by Diego de Duran, a Franciscan collector, Note: Teotihuacan, a city the Aztecs tell was built by their earliest ancestors, lies fifty kilometers north-east of Mexico City and was called the 'City of Gods', or 'City where Gods are born'.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

The Aztecs called their city Tenochtitlan, the City of Tenoch. In the ancient Aztec language the letter 'T' prefixed many of their words... could Tenoch have formerly been Enoch, named after the descendant of Cain? Some religious groups believe that the Mark of Cain was the absence of hair. Are the Aztecs, lacking facial hair, the lost descendants of the family of Cain? ~See The Lost Realms by Zecharia Sitchin pgs. 40-42.

The curse is deemed by others to be merely skin pigmentation. ~Jewish Tradition, History and Culture by Janice Barsky, October 14, 2000.

An Egyptian Jew named Artapanus, late 3rd or early 2nd century B.C.E., claims that "Abraham taught astrology to the Egyptian priests of Heliopolis."

"And behold, they were cut off from his presence. And he had caused the cursing to come upon them, yea, even a sore cursing, because of their iniquity. For behold, they had hardened their hearts against him, that they had become like flint; wherefore, as they were white, and exceedingly fair and delightsome, that they might not be enticing unto my people the Lord God did cause a skin of blackness to come upon them." ~See 2 Nephi 5:20-21, from The Book of Mormon. For revelations regarding the Second Coming, see 2 Nephi 6:13-14, Book of Mormon and the Bible, Genesis 4:15, 17, 24, Hebrews 11:5, and Jude 14.

The "The Holy See" has gone out of its way to degenerate people, races and cultures along with their scientific findings along with any Biblical origin if it appears to contradict their doctrines. Pictographs on the ancient temples of the Aztecs proclaim, "For our sake the Gods did penance."

All of this occurred, hundreds, if not thousands, of years before the appearance of the first Christians subjugators in the Americas. Legends speak of black haired giants, white haired Giants, and red haired people [Similar to Sumerian myths]. Quetzalcoatl descended to the underworld [Netherworld] and confronted the Lord of Death, Mictlantecuitli, and returned with some bones for humankind.

The bones are then ground up by the Goddess Mother of the Universe and mixed with clay into which Quetzalcoatl sheds some of his blood. A new race of people comes into being. The Sun God refuses to move and a sacrifice are given to appease him.

To keep the Sun moving continuous sacrifices must be made. One must understand that the Spaniards did not reach the New World with Christianity until 1519 [five hundred fifty one years after the Creation and Flood myths by the New World natives] and the advent of Cortez.

"An ambassador was sent from Heaven on an embassy to a Virgin of Tulan, called Chimalman... Announcing that it was the Will of the God that she should conceive a son; and having delivered her the message he rose and left the house; and as soon as he had left it she conceived a son, without connection with man, who was called Quetzalcoatl, who they say is the God of Air." ~Kingsborough, Mexican Antiquities, vol. vi, p. 176.

Quetzalcoatl sacrificed himself, drawing forth his own blood with the help of thorns; the word Quetzalcoatltopitzin means "Our well-beloved son."

Cortez, introduced to the similarities of the savages' faith and his Christianity, complains that the Devil had absolutely taught the barbarious Mexicans the same things, which God had taught to Christendom.

Centuries later this story of a man who descends from the heavens, is martyred, and Resurrected so frightened the early friars that as they learned to speak the new language they destroyed or melted down anything and everything, which mentioned the name of the Mexican God Quexalcote.

Under Spanish rule almost 50% of the population is decimated by either torture or the diseases of the Old World [Europe]. Much is written in literature regarding the Christian martyrs who traveled to the new world, but you have never read of the indigenous martyrs who gave their lives fighting for their own beliefs, freedom of religion, and freedom to say no to a god they did not believe in.

The Aztecs believed that the final destination of man's soul lay not in his position in life, but in how he died. Warriors killed in battle would travel with the entourage of the Son and ride across the heavens. Others were not so fortunate. Their souls would dwell in the underworld in total darkness and oblivion. The hearts of the sacrificial victims were cut out and eaten by the priests in a belief that this would bring them closer to their god, the temple being built on top of a stepped pyramid dedicated to Omoteotl [Lord and Lady of Duality].

End of the World: An eclipse is interpreted as a prologue to the End of the World by the army of the German Emperor Otto III.

AD 973-74- So decadent has the general spirit of this Christian Age become that Pope Boniface VII robs

Saint Peter's Church and its treasury and the flees to Constantinople while Pope John XVIII, in 1003, is prevented, only by general indignation, from accepting a large sum of money from Emperor Basil to recognize the right of the Greek patriarch to the title of "Universal Bishop."

Pope Gregory the Great calls the title Universal "Pestiferous," "... Be it known then to your Fraternity that John, formerly Bishop of the City of Constantinople, against God, against the peace of the Church, to the contempt and injury of all priests, exceeded the bounds of modesty and of his own measure, and unlawfully usurped in synod the proud and pestiferous title of ecumenical, that is to say, Universal... I exhort and entreat that not one of you ever accept this name, that not one consent to it, that not one write it, that not one admit it wherever it may have been written, or add his subscription to it; but, as becomes ministers of Almighty God, that each keep himself from this kind of poisoned infection, and give no place to the cunning liar-in-wait, since this thing is being done to the injury and rendering asunder of the whole Church, and, as we have said, to the condemning of all of you. For if one, as he supposes, is 'Universal Bishop,' it remains that you are not Bishops ... " ~Book IX, Epistle LXVIII: To Eusebius of Thessalonica, Pope Gregory the Great, 590-604.

Pope Benedict VI is thrown into prison by the Anti-Pope Boniface VII, and strangled to death by his orders, in 974.

AD974-83-The Bishop of Sutri is elected as the next Pope, known as Benedict VII with the full support of Emperor Otto II. His reign is opposed by the Anti-Pope Boniface VII, who is eventually forced to flee. Pope Benedict VII sets out to rid the Church of corruption, which has now negatively affected many aspects of how the Church administration is carried out.

Pope Benedict VII was a layman and became Pope by force, and drove out the Anti-Pope Boniface VII. The zeal of the Roman Church, once destitute of civil power, will arouse itself, to put the false system and all its abettors beyond the pale of Christianity. If it had appeared openly and all at once in all its grossness, this would certainly have arrested its progress.

Therefore, it was brought upon the masses secretly, and little by little, one corruption being introduced after another, as Apostasy proceeded, the old Pagan gods were soon forgotten, and the new God, with its backsliding Church came prepared to tolerate it, till it reached the gargantuan stature we now see and know. Of the gradual introduction of all that is now most characteristic of Rome, through the working of the "Mystery of Iniquity," we have very striking evidence, preserved by Rome itself, in the inscriptions copied from the Roman catacombs. These catacombs are extensive excavations underground in the neighborhood of Rome, in which the Christians, in times of persecution, during their first three centuries, celebrated and worshipped, and where they buried their dead.

On some of the tombstones, there are carved inscriptions, still found, which are in direct collision with now well known principles and practices of Rome. A distinguishing mark of the Papacy is enforced celibacy of the clergy, yet from the inscriptions we have most decisive evidence, that even in Rome, there was a time when no such system of clerical celibacy was known, much less practiced. Witness the following, found on different tombs:

† "To Basilius, the presbyter, and Felicitas, his wife. They made this for themselves."

† "Petronia, a priest's wife, the type of modesty. In this place I lay my bones. Spare your tears, dear husband and daughter, and believe that it is forbidden to weep for one who lives in God."

A prayer here and there for the dead: "May God refresh thy spirit," which proves that even then the 'Mystery of Iniquity' had begun to work; but inscriptions such as the above equally show that it had been slowly and cautiously working up to the period to which they refer, the Roman Church had not proceeded the length it had done now, of absolutely "Forbidding its priests to Marry." ~The Ultimate Deception-The Two Babylons or The Papal Worship Proved To Be The Worship of Nimrod and His Wife, by The Late Rev. Alexander Hislop

Craftily and gradually did Rome lay the foundation of its system of priest-craft, on which it was afterwards to build so vast an empire. At its commencement, "Mystery" was stamped upon its system to create an air of magic and superstitious nature, which was readily accepted by the then ignorant masses, and when it had succeeded in dimming the light of the Gospel, obscuring the fullness and freeness of the Grace of God, a mysterious power was then attributed to the clergy, which gave them "Dominion over the faith," of the people, a dominion directly disclaimed by Apostolic men. ~2 Corinthians 1:24.

AD975-1034- Edgar, King of England, dies. Mercenary soldiers destroy everything in their path.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

The Black Plague spreads to people throughout the lands.

AD 976- Henry, Duke of Bavaria, defeats Otho II and deposed, takes refuge in Bohemia.

Death of Al Hakem; his reign is considered the most glorious of the Saracenic dominion in Spain.

Commotion in Venice as the Doge attempts to introduce mercenary troops and is slain; his palace, St. Mark's, and other churches are burned.

AD 979- King Edward the Martyr, assassinated by command of his mother-in-law, Elfrida; Ethelred the Unready succeeds [Date uncertain].

AD 980- 1037- Avicenna, Arabic philosopher and physician [Abu Ali al-Husayn ibn Abd Allah ibn Sina] is born near Bukhoro [Uzbekistan] and the son of a government official, Avicenna studies in Bukhoro.

At eighteen years of age he was rewarded for his medical proficiency with the post of Court Physician to the Samanid ruler of Bukhoro.

He remained in this position until 999 of the Samanid Empire. He spent the last fourteen years of his life as scientific adviser and physician to the ruler of Esfahan [Isfahan]. Avicenna is considered by Muslims as one of the greatest Islamic philosophers. His work, "The Canon of Medicine," was long unsurpassed in the Middle East and in Europe as a textbook. This work is significant, as a systematic classification of medical and pharmaceutical knowledge known up to the time of Avicenna..

The first Latin translation of this work was made in the 12th century, and the Hebrew version appeared in 1491 [Arabic text followed in 1593, which made it the second text ever printed in Arabic].

Avicenna's best known philosophical work is, "Kitab ash-Shifa" [or Book of Healing], which is a collection of essays on Aristotelian logic, psychology metaphysics, the natural sciences, and other subject matters. Avicenna's philosophy is based on a combination of Neoplatonism and Aristotelianism.

AD 983- 984-It is not known whether Pope John XIV died from starvation while in prison or from being murdered by the Anti-Pope, Boniface VII. We do know his tenure was short and directly after being selected Pope, Emperor Otto II, his staunch supporter and who was still a young man, also, suddenly passes away.

Upon receiving news that the Emperor was dead, Anti-Pope Boniface returned to Rome and had Pope John XIV thrown into the dungeons of the Castle of Saint' Angelo and he assumed the throne of the Papacy. Pope John XIV dies four months later while still imprisoned.

AD 985- 996-Pope John XV's father is Leo the priest.

AD 987- Death of Louis V, the last of the Carolingian line; Hugh Capet is elected King of France; this inaugurates the Capetian dynasty.

AD 988- Conversion to Christianity and Baptism of Saint Vladimir and the people of Kiev, which consequently becomes part of Russia.

AD 991- Archbishop Gerbert, of Rheims, introduces the use of Arabic numerals, which he had learned at Cordova, Spain.

AD 992- End of the World: Good Friday coincides with the Feast of the Annunciation, which has long been believed to be the event that will bring forth the Anti-Christ, and thus the End-Times events foretold in the Book of Revelation. Dubious records from Germany report that a new sun rose in the North and that as many as three suns and three moons were fighting.

AD 993- Pope John XV is the first Pope to decree the official canonization of a saint, Bishop Ulrich [Uldaric] of Augsburg, for the Universal Roman Catholic Church.

AD 995- Canonization of dead saints by the Church.

AD 997- September 26th, Russian Orthodoxy is declared the state religion of Russia by the Czar. In the 20th century Russia will accept only three primary religions [Orthodoxy, Islam, and Jewish faith].

Saint Stephen becomes ruler of Hungary, assisting in organizing the religious hierarchy and establishing Latin Christianity in his country.

AD 998- Cluny, France, a day is set aside for the salvation of souls in purgatory by prayer. "Now there is no need to pray for the dead who are in Heaven, for they are in no need; nor again for those who are in hell, because they cannot be loosed from sins. Therefore after this life, there are some not yet loosed from sins, who can be loosed there from; and the like have charity, without which sins cannot be loosed, for 'charity covereth all sins.'" ~Proverbs 10:12.

There is no Purgatory in the Bible, yet the concept is fantastically conceived by the early Church fathers to strike fear in the hearts and minds of man. Borrowed by Hellenized beliefs, the concept merely meant dead, as in a deep sleep, "These words clearly teach us that Severus knew of no other purgation than that by which we are cleansed in this life from sin by a change of character and, which change if we steadily maintain, then, when life is ended, we are received into the abode of Christ, without any dread of the fire of purgatory." ~Clericus.

The dead will not be consigned to everlasting death, since the Church preaches, "He that liveth and believeth in Me, shall not die forever." ~John 11:26, also Verse 14 of the Apocalypse.

And, of course nor will man obtain glory without being cleansed, because nothing unclean shall obtain it, and the Church shall be the self appointed instrument of God which will vouchsafe the keys to the pearly gates of a Catholic Heaven. Gregory of Nyssa [De iis qui in fide dormiunt] says, "If one who loves and believes in Christ, has failed to wash away his sins in this life, He is set free after death by the fire of Purgatory... This we preach, holding to the teaching of truth, and this is our belief; this the universal Church holds, by praying for the dead that they may be loosed from sins."

The early Church Fathers and Saints, borrowing heavily from their Pagan contemporaries, and history, wrote the Gospels in a manner to cover all sources of potential denial and recalcitrants. "This cannot be understood except as referring to Purgatory: and who soever resists the authority of the Church, incurs the note of heresy." ~Saint Thomas Aquinas Summa Theologica, 13th century.

"And making a gathering, he sent twelve thousand drachms of silver to Jerusalem for sacrifice to be offered for the sins of the dead, thinking well and religiously concerning the Resurrection. For if he had not hoped that they that were slain should rise again, it would have seemed superfluous and vain to pray for the dead, and because he considered that they who had fallen asleep with godliness, had great grace laid up for them. With Godliness... Judas hoped that these men who died fighting for the cause of God and religion, might find mercy: either because they might be excused from mortal sin by ignorance; or might have repented of their sin, at least at their death. It is therefore a Holy and wholesome thought to pray for the dead, that they may be loosed from sins." ~2 Maccabee 12:43-46, and 1 Corinthians 3:11-15.

If "Adultery, fraud, and manslaughter are mortal sins," then the greatest sinner of all is the Holy Mother, the Church, perpetrator of all since creation. ~Saint Cyprian of Carthage, Treatise VII, 250 A.D.

In Paganized Rome, before there was Christianity, a purgatorial state is envisioned, but there seems to have been no hope held for any exemptions from its pains. Virgil, describing its different tortures says, "Nor can the grovelling mind, in the dark dungeon of the limbs confined, assert the native skies, or own its heavenly kind. Nor death itself can wholly wash their stains; but long-contracted filth, even in the soul, remains the relics of inveterate vice they were, and spots of sin obscene in every face appear. For this are various penance enjoined; and some are hung to bleach upon the wind, some plunged in water, others purged in fires, till all the dregs are drained, and all the rust expires. All have their Manes, and those Manes bear. The few so cleansed to these abodes repair, and breathe in ample fields the soft Elysian air. Then are they happy, when by length of time the scurf is worn away of each committed crime No speck is left of their habitual stains, But the pure ether of the soul remains."

The ancient Greeks also spoke of the future judgment of the dead, holding out the hope of final deliverance for all, as Plato maintains that, of "Those who are judged," "Some" must first, "Proceed to a subterranean place of Judgment, where they shall sustain the punishment they have deserved;" while others, in consequence of a favorable judgment, being elevated at once into a certain celestial place, "Shall pass their time in a manner becoming the life they have lived in a human shape." ~The Two Babylons by Rev. Alexander Hislop.

Not only are there funeral services and funeral dues for the repose of the dearly departed, at the time of burial, but the priest pays repeated visits to the family for the same purpose, which entail heavy expenses, beginning with what is called The month's mind, that is, a service in behalf of the deceased when a month after death has elapsed. Something entirely similar to this had evidently been the case in ancient Greece, "The Argives sacrificed on the thirtieth day [after death] to Mercury as the conductor of the dead." ~Muller, History of the Dorians

Prayers for the dead go hand in hand with a purgatory; but no prayers can be completely effectual without the interposition of the priests; and no priestly functions can be rendered unless there be special pay for them. The Bible will also be used by the Church to prod declared miscreants to take up the cause of the Church in the Crusades so that no matter what their sins, they would be forgiven by the Vicars of Christ.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

The Catholic Catechism says:

1031. "The Church gives the name Purgatory to this final purification of the elect, which is entirely different from the punishment of the damned." ~Cf. Council of Florence (1439): DS 1304; Council of Trent (1563): DS 1820; (1547): 1580; see also Benedict XII, Benedictus Deus (1336): DS 1000.

"The Church formulated her doctrine of faith on Purgatory especially at the Councils of Florence and Trent. The tradition of the Church, by reference to certain texts of Scripture, speaks of a cleansing fire." ~Cf. 1 Corinthians 3:15; 1 Peter 1:7.

Some writers say that it was the Pope, Benedict XII, who gave rise to the popular saying "Drunk as a Pope," and that the Pope's austerity and arrogance narrowly restricted what little influence for good he had. "As for certain lesser faults, we must believe that, before the Final Judgment, there is a purifying fire. He who is truth says that whoever utters blasphemy against the Holy Spirit will be pardoned neither in this age nor in the age to come. From this sentence we understand that certain offenses can be forgiven in this age, but certain others in the age to come." ~Saint Gregory the Great, Dial. 4, 39: PL 77, 396; cf. Matthew 12:32-36.

Saint Gregory was God's Disciple who prophesied the End of the World to steal the lands from the nobles who did oblige and the lands of which he refused to surrender when the world did not end.

1472. "To understand this doctrine and practice of the Church, it is necessary to understand that sin has a double consequence. Grave sin deprives us of communion with God and therefore makes us incapable of eternal life, the privation of which is called the 'Eternal Punishment' of sin. On the other hand every sin, even venial, entails an unhealthy attachment to creatures, which must be purified either here on earth, or after death in the state called Purgatory. This purification frees one from what is called the 'temporal punishment' of sin. These two punishments must not be conceived of as a kind of vengeance inflicted by God from without, but as following from the very nature of sin. A conversion, which proceeds from a fervent charity can attain the complete purification of the sinner in such a way that no punishment would remain." ~Cf. Council of Trent, 1551: DS 1712-1713; 1563: 1820, What the Early Church Believed, Essays by Tom Jensen.

"Tell me there is a God in the serene Heavens that will damn his children for the expression of an honest belief! More men have died in their sins, judged by your Orthodox Creeds, than there are leaves on all the forests in the wide world ten thousand times over. Tell me these men are in Hell; that these men are in torment; that these children are in Eternal Pain, and that they are to be Punished Forever and Forever! I denounce this doctrine as the most infamous of lies." ~Ingersoll, Man, Woman and Child.

"The souls who are in Purgatory cannot, as I understand, choose but be there, and this is by God's ordinance who therein has done justly." ~Saint Catherine of Genoa, A Treatise On Purgatory, 15th century A.D.

One cannot but wonder how many unscrupulous Popes, Bishops, Cardinals, and clergy also reside in Purgatory or its more sinister and diabolical fiery counterpart. Every person will have to pay for their sins to "The very last penny." ~Luke 12:59.

Does this also include those ambassadors of the Church who have abused the might of the Lord to pursue their own vicious agendas and vices?

Peter's Pence or Rome-scot "Was a tax of a penny on each hearth, which was collected and sent to Rome from the beginning of the 10th century." ~Stubbs.

Peter Pence: A name for the hearth tax because it was paid on the feast of Saint Peter ad Vincula. The fee known as Saint Peter's Pence was an annual fee of 1d per household, which was paid to the Holy See for the privilege of living in a Christian land. King Henry VIII abolished it in 1534, but it is still collected in Catholic churches.

AD 1000- January 1st: Many Christians in Europe predict the End of the World on this date. As the date approaches, Christian armies wage violent war against some of the Pagan countries in Northern Europe. Their motivation is to convert the world to Christianity, by book or by sword, if necessary, before Christ returns in the year 1000 C.E. Meanwhile, a few Christians give their worldly possessions to the Catholic Church in anticipation of the end and of receiving good evaluations to God in Heaven. Fortunately, the level of education is so low that many citizens are yet unaware of the year, and they do not know enough to be afraid. Otherwise, the alarm might have been far worse. Regrettably, when Jesus did not appear, the Catholic Church does not return their gifts, and serious criticism of the Church follows. The Church reacts by exterminating more heretics.

May: The body of the Christian Emperor, Charlemagne, is disinterred on Pentecost. A legend had arisen that a Christian Emperor would rise from his sleep to fight the Anti-Christ.

End of the World: Expectation of the End of the World causes prisoners to be let out of jail, the sowing of seed and other agricultural work to be neglected by the farmers, and famine ensues therefrom. The epoch of the year 1000, owing to expectations of the coming of the 'Day of Judgment,' marks a year of crisis, and Raoul Glaber tells us of two ecclesiastical agitators, one named Leotardus, at Châlons, and the other Wilgardus, at Ravenna, who caused a great disturbance.

Leotardus pretends to have had extraordinary revelations and preaches a socialistic doctrine preventing the people from paying tithes. When his followers eventually desert him he drowns himself in a well. ~ Apoc. xx, 7, Migne, P. L., CXLII, 643-644.

Today, the Christian ministry proudly passes the basket for offerings, which they keep for their self-gratification and personal enrichment, "Does not all Scripture seem to you to forbid a prophet to receive gifts and money? When therefore I see the prophetess receiving gold and silver and costly garments, how can I avoid reproving her?" ~ Prolegomena: The Life and Writings of Eusebius of Caesarea: Testimonies of the Ancients Against Eusebius. Jesus says unto Simon, "Indeed, Simon, it is very difficult for the wealthy to enter the Kingdom of Heaven, for the rich care only for themselves, and despise greatly them that have not. For truly I tell ye this day, unless the rich share with the poor, and look to the needy in their despair, they cannot fulfill the Holy Law of humane love, nor shall they enter into the Kingdom of the Elect." ~ The Essene Humane Gospel of Jesus, Translated From The Original Hebrew And Aramaic Texts, Typesetting by: Followers of the Essene Way [F.E.W.]

End of the World: Seeking a credible explanation, apologetic theologians claim that the text saying a Thousand Years is but a day in the sight of God. ~ Psalms 90:4; another borrowing from Oriental sages says a Day of Brahma lasted a thousand years, and on the basis of this Scripture it was decided that the world would end in the year 1000 C.E.

With the approach of that year, Europe is seized by an apocalyptic mania. Farms and towns were abandoned as fanatics tramped the countryside announcing the Last Days. In some areas, vast agricultural and commercial endeavors came to a standstill, but, the year passed uneventfully enough, but human society suffered greatly from famines and civil disorders caused by the doomsday belief. ~ Ginsberg, Dr. H.L., Encyclopedia Judaica. Vol. xi, Pg. 1407.

During the Crusades, the malevolent Christians of Europe will invade and battle the Muslims of the Middle East.

End of the World: The year goes down as one of the most heightened periods of hysteria over the supposed return of Christ, their Savior as all members of society appear affected by the prediction that Jesus is returning at the start of the new millennium.

But, none of the events predicted by the Bible are transpiring at this time; the magic of the number 1000 is the sole motivation for the expectation of the Savior. During closing months of 999 C.E., all and sundry are on their best behavior; worldly goods are sold, and sometimes given to the poor; swarms of pilgrims head East to meet their Lord at Jerusalem; buildings are left un-repaired; crops are left unplanted; and criminals are even set free from jails. Yet, when the year 999 C.E., turns into 1000 C.E., still nothing occurs, much to the dismay of the Christian leaders.

Franciscan monks declare that Christ has really returned to earth in 1000 C.E., disguised as Saint Francis, the new Messiah, who was "Entirely transformed into the person of Christ."

Saint Francis is said to have performed all the Christ-like miracles, such as casting out devils, turning water into wine, curing the sick, raising from the dead, making the blind see, etc. There are those who go so far as to claim that Christ is now important only as a precursor of Saint Francis.

Not only is the Christ figure supposed to return just before Doomsday, but also the Anti-Christ, his feindish adversary, for the Final Battle assembled on either side. ~ Ginsberg, Dr. H.L., Encyclopedia Judaica. Vol. 11, pg. 1407, Summers, Montague. The Vampire. Pg. 150. John 6:54. cf. Vlad the Impaler [Dracula].

AD 1005-End of the World: A terrible famine throughout Europe is seen as a sign of the nearness of the End.

AD 1007-1072-Saint Peter Damian, Doctor of the Church, born in Ravenna, Italy, he became prior of a hermitage near Gubbio in 1043. He corresponded with King Henry III, Holy Roman Emperor, and with Pope Leo IX, aggressive against the abuses practiced by the clergy, particularly simony and the violation of the vow of celibacy, and urged reforms.

Saint Peter Damien, the fiercest censor of his age, unrolls a frightful picture of the decay of clerical morality in the lurid pages of his 'Book of Gomorrah,' which tells of the pedophile priests. "A cleric or monk who seduces youths or young boys or is found kissing or in any other impure situations is to be publicly flogged," Saint Damien states, but the Pope will ignore his requests to purify the ranks of the clerics. From its inception, rooted heavily in corrupt Roman politics, the Vatican continues onward in its ethically ambiguous path into the 21st century.

"A religion of love is the logical and natural development of sexual worship. Love is the extension of sexual love. The conversion experience is most common in adolescents when sexuality is growing, and it is confusing young people unfamiliar with it, and its concomitant hormones. This is the time when sexual predators claiming to be Angels of God circle round the young, metaphorically sniffing the air and ready to seduce young people of their innocence." ~Dr. G. J. Jordan.

Cardinal Bishop of Ostia [Dean of the Sacred College of Cardinals] in 1057. The close friend of many Popes, whom he served as legate, was closely associated with the reformer Hildebrand, who becomes Pope Gregory VII in 1073. "At the time of [Pope] Gregory VII's elevation to the Papacy [1073–85], the Christian world was in a deplorable condition. During the desolating period of transition, the terrible period of warfare and rapine, violence, and corruption in high places, which followed immediately upon the dissolution of the Carolingian Empire, a period when society in Europe seemed doomed to destruction and ruin, the Church had not been able to escape from the general debasement to which it had so signally contributed, if not caused. The 10th century, the saddest perhaps in Christian annals, is characterised by the remark of Cardinal Baronius [Vatican historian, 1538–1607] that 'Christ was asleep in the vessel of the Church.'" ~Catholic Encyclopedia, Peccied., ii, pp. 289, 294, passim; also vi, pp.

Damian was one of the most prolific and elegant writers in Latin of the medieval period. Pope Gregory VII prescribed continence for priests and "Looked with abhorrence on the contamination of the Holy Sacerdotal character, even in its lowest degree, by any sexual connection." ~See The Ten Commandments by Joseph Lewis.

"At the time of Gregory VII's elevation to the Papacy, 1073-85, the Christian world was in a deplorable condition. During the desolating period of transition, - the terrible period of warfare and rapine, violence, and corruption in high places, which followed immediately upon the dissolution of the Carolingian Empire [in the 800's], a period when society in Europe seemed doomed to destruction and ruin, the Church had not been able to escape from the general debasement. The 10th century, the saddest perhaps, in Christian annals, is characterized by the vivid remark of [Cardinal] Baronius that Christ was asleep in the vessel of the Church." ~Forgery in Christianity by Joseph Wheless.

The sale of sacred things, particularly ecclesiastical offices, simony, so called from Acts 8:18-23, of Simon Magus offering apostles money to endow him with their powers. In Catholic theology it is supposed to be as grave a sin as sexual misconduct; yet Catholic writers, in their discussion of their "Few bad Popes," mildly ignore the fact that for more than a thousand years, under "Good" Popes and bad, it was one of the chief sources of Papal revenue under an officially organized system.

It began by bribery to get the position of Pope in the 5th century. In 530, Pope Boniface II proposed to prevent it by having a Pope nominate his successor, but the angry priests and people, who profited by it in electing the Pope, forced him publicly to withdraw his decree.

Upon his death the Senate passed a severe censure on bribery, and the King, in Ravenna, issued a decree in which he describes the sordid prevalence of simony in the Roman Church, candidates selling the altar vessels and seizing the funds to help the poor for the purpose of bribery. ~Mansi, Collection of Councils, 532. It became worse as time progressed. ~Milman, History of Latin Christianity.

Simony continues through the 16th century, and assumes monstrous proportions when the Roman See, already rich, is witness to hundreds of thousands of pounds in gifts and lucrative offices changing hands at a single election as the Orsini, Borgia, Colonna, Rovere, etc., fought for the Papal tiara. ~Petrucci della Gattina, Histoire des Conclaves, 4 Vols. 1864-6, and Pastor's Catholic History of the Popes, Engl. Trans., 14 Vols. 1891-1924.

A subtle nest of complacent plotting and skulduggery continues in the headship of the Ecclesiastical conspiracy, one of which must certainly be the chief object of their so-called pious references, "Nearly every Pontificate will add its supplement of false documents to this formidable corpus, whence the theologians, Saint Thomas Aquinas among them, will for a long period confidently derive the justification for whatever the Roman Pontiffs may desire to do or to say. Much more guilty than the forgers themselves are men such as Baronius, Bellarmine, and different Jesuits who, in the 16th and 17th centuries, employ their erudition and their zeal in the face of considerations of fact and good sense, which admit of no reasonable rejoinder, to bolster up a body of arguments for the sake of conclusions drawn from them, which they could not consent to abandon.” ~ Guignebert, Triumph of Christianity.

Long before this the sale of offices had spread throughout the Church with Pope Saint Gregory I, 590-604, bitterly complaining in his letters that it is rife everywhere. The poverty to which Europe has sunk at this time is the excuse for the failure to restore schools, hospitals, etc., but the Abbeys and Bishoprics are rich with the Papacy itself having an income of about £400,000 a year.

The sales continue to be habitual, and the Avignon [French] Popes of the 14th century organized it, to their own profit, on a scandalous scale; Pope John XXIII, whose crimes and vices ran to several pages in the records of the Council of Constance, extended it further. “Lettuce leaves reduce sex drive.” ~Pope John XII. It is at Avignon that a series of forged documents are produced, today they are called the “False Isidorian Decretals.”

In this perpetrated fraud, the Popes, and their minions compile a succession of fictitious letters, dating back [actually back-dated] them to an earlier century and weave them around a series of “Official Laws” that makes the Church the absolute master of all Europe, Asia Minor and Egypt. The Frenchman, Voltaire, 1694-1778, termed the Isidorian Decretals, “The boldest and most magnificent forgery that ever deceived the world.”

Dietrich also witnesses the numerous literary outrages of the Vatican and he writes that the Church was, “One of the most disastrous in Papal history.” ~De schismate of Dietrich von Nieheim, 1338-1418, The Popes: A Concise Biographical History, op. cit., p. 275.

When Rome was suffering under the heavy hand of God from the pestilence [Black Plague, Black Death], in 590, Pope Gregory exhorted the people to unite publicly in supplication to God, consigning that they should meet at daybreak in ‘Seven Different Companies,’ according to their respective ages, sexes, and stations, and walk in seven different processions, reciting litanies or supplications, till they all met at one place.

The people did so, and proceeded singing and uttering the words, “*Lord, have mercy upon us, carrying along with them, as Baronius relates, by Pope Saint Gregory's express command, an image of the Virgin. The very idea of such processions was an affront to the majesty of heaven; it implied that God who is a Spirit 'Saw with eyes of flesh,' and might be moved by the imposing picturesqueness of such a spectacle, just as sensuous mortals might. As an experiment it had but slender success. In the space of one hour, while thus engaged, eighty persons fell to the ground, and breathed their last. Yet this is now held up to Britons as 'The more excellent way' for deprecating the wrath of God in a season of national distress. 'Had this calamity,' says Dr. Wiseman, referring to the Indian disasters, 'Had this calamity fallen upon our forefathers in Catholic days, one would have seen the streets of this city [London] trodden in every direction by penitential processions, crying out, like David, when pestilence had struck the people.'” ~The Two Babylons by Rev. Alexander Hislop.*

“The historic idea, is simple enough, and as old as old can be. We have it in Homer, the procession of Hecuba and the ladies of Troy to the shrine of Minerva, in the Acropolis of that city.” ~Dr. Wiseman

In these centuries, the “Ages of Faith,” the Papacy would not merely sell the “Expectation” of a rich Ecclesiastical office, even recruited scouts all over Europe reporting on the chances of death of the actual holders, but sold the same benefice several times over, as one cleric overbid another. The sale of indulgences also was now organized, and the system reached its height under Pope Leo X.

The pretence that the Council of Trent and the Counter-Reformation put an end to it is false. Even the “Reform Popes” did little to check it, and it flourished in the 17th century, especially under Pope Innocent X, 1644-55, who permitted his sister Olimpia, for financial favors he received, to turn her palace into a sort of bourse [exchange and sale of items] at which queues of ecclesiastics waited with their moneybags for their turn to buy lucrative offices. -Second Vol., L. von Ranke, Popes of Rome, two vols. 1846-7, for the pontificate of Innocent and of Clement IX, 1667-9, and J. McCabe, Rationalists Encyclopedia.

The Reformation was supposed to sweep the corruption and abuses perpetrated by the priesthood but lying definitely was not one of them. Martin Luther, in private correspondence, argued, “What harm would it do, if a man told a good strong lie for the sake of the good and for the Christian Church... A lie out of necessity.” a useful lie, a helpful lie, such lies would not be against God, he would accept them.” ~Martin Luther, Cited by his secretary, in a letter in Max Lenz, ed., Briefwechsel Landgraf Phillips des Grossmüthigen von Hessen mit Bucer, vol. I.

To Pope Pius XII, “I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians.” ~Mahatma Gandhi

During the Reformation era the Church itself claims, “Churchmen in high places were constantly unmindful of justice.” ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 12, 767.

It is interesting to note that the sole purpose of the Reformation Period was to reform the corrupt and lascivious Holy Mother, the Church, yet the debauched ministry will even to the 21st century a its leaders ‘Turn the other cheek,’ to its sins.

”Historically nothing is more incorrect than the assertion that the Reformation was a movement in favor of intellectual freedom. The exact contrary is the truth. For themselves, it is true, Lutherans and Calvinists claimed liberty of conscience... But to grant it to others never occurred to them so long as they were the stronger side. The complete extirpation of the Catholic Church, and in fact of everything that stood in their way, was regarded by the reformers as something entirely natural.” ~Johann von Dollinger,

From The Protestant Inquisition, Reformation Intolerance and Persecution, by Dave Armstrong.

AD1009- Rivalry from Islamic followers prompts the Eastern Orthodox Churches to break with idolatry, but this ‘Iconoclasm’ also begins a breach with the idol-worshipping Catholic West commencing centuries of bloodshed, which lives on in the 21st century as religious hatred, ethno-centrism, and purging of cultures different from the mainstream.

The Egyptian caliph, Al-Hakim, destroys the Church of the Holy Sepulcher, and begins persecution of Christians and Jews. Strong religious dissension begins with Caliph Al-Hakim bi-Amr Allah, sixth Fatimid Caliph in Egypt and later the founder of the Druze sect, when he orders the Holy Sepulcher, and all Christian buildings in Jerusalem to be destroyed.

AD 1010- Pope Leo VII encourages his newly appointed Archbishop of Mainz to expel all Jews who refuse to be baptized Catholic.

AD 1012-55-The anti-Semite, Pope Benedict IX, 1032-44, 1045, 1047-48 [Pope twice. Reinstated by himself in 1045], sells the Papacy to his godfather. Pope Benedict is nephew to Pope Benedict VIII and Pope John XIX [1024-32]. He regains the throne in 1047, and is ousted in 1048. His immediate successor, Pope Gregory VI, 1044-46, persuades Pope Benedict IX to resign the Chair of Peter, and to do so bestowed valuable possessions on him. ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 1, 31, Forgery in Christianity by Joseph Wheless.

Corruption in the Catholic Church is rampant and some of the clergy are attempting to make amends. However, favoritism and nepotism are not warranted as serious charges within the system. Pope Benedict IX excommunicates the Archbishop of Milan, Heribert, in 1048. He dislikes the Archbishop for constantly criticizing his lax moral lifestyle and his lusty sexual appetite.

In 1044 Anti-Pope Sylvester III [formerly Bishop of Sabina] is elected due to Benedict’s corrupt lifestyle. Pope Sylvester is then forced to resign [some say it was voluntary in order to marry] and the office is given to Archbishop John Gratian [for a sum of money]

The Archbishop is elected as Pope Gregory VI in May of AD 1045. The Council of Sutri in 1046 appoints another German Pope, Damasus II in 1048. Having been forced to resign the Papacy [which he assumed at age twenty] and regaining it only to be forced to leave again, Pope Benedict IX lives out his life at Grottaferrata.

Perhaps the vilest of men who ever wore the Papal tiara, his [almost] immediate successor spoke of his “Rapes, murders, and other unspeakable acts,” appears to have been deleted from modern Christian encyclopedias. Pope Benedict IX loved sexual orgies, and even dabbled in Satanism and witchcraft, unfortunately, no one has ever been held accountable for the terrors and horrors imposed by the servants of the Church. ~cf. Exodus 22:18-20.

“She [the Catholic Church] worked hard at it night and day during nine centuries and imprisoned, tortured, hanged, and burned whole hordes and armies of witches, and washed the Christian world clean with their foul blood. Then it was discovered that there was no such thing as witches, and never had been. One doesn’t know whether to laugh or to cry. Who discovered that there was no such thing as a witch; the priest, the parson? No, these never discover anything...” ~Samuel Clemens [Mark Twain], American novelist, free thinker.

As one of the worst Popes during the Dark Ages, it has now been discovered that Pope Benedict IX also, “Dabbled in Witchcraft and Satanism,” and Pope Pius XII also believed Karl Marx, the father of Communism, was himself a “Dedicated and consecrated Satanist.” What should have been the glory of the Church is obfuscated in rites and rituals, but even this cannot conceal the tribulations of the epicenter of evil.

Considered by some to be insane, the Caliph Al-Hakim bi-Amr Allah, sixth Fatimid Caliph in Egypt in 1012 orders that all Christian and Jewish houses of worship be destroyed, which is the prelude to the Crusades. Later in history, Muslims will contribute greatly to the rebuilding of the Holy Sepulcher.

AD 1013-Caliph Al-Hakim begins a systematic persecution of both Christians and Jews: “The Christians were ordered to dress in black and to hang wooden crosses from their necks, half a meter long, half a meter wide, weighing five rats, and uncovered so that people could see them. They were forbidden to ride horses and allowed only to ride mules or donkeys, with wooden saddles and black girths without any ornament. They had to wear the zunnar sash, and could not employ any Muslim or buy any slave of either sex. These orders were so strictly enforced that many of them became Muslims... Churches were destroyed and their contents were pillaged... In the year 1013 the Jews were compelled to wear belts around their necks when they entered the public baths... He [Al-Hakim] ordered the Christians and Jews to leave Egypt.” ~Al-Maqrizi, 15th-century Egyptian scholar; translation from Chronicles of the Crusades. Note: It is only fair to point out that even fellow Muslim rulers considered Al-Hakim to be insane, and that not all Muslim rulers persecuted Christians and Jews.

AD 1015 (?) - 1245 (?) - Troubadours; musicians, poets who traveled throughout Europe singing and performing in France, Italy and parts of Spain. Banded together to form a secret society. Initiation ritual of the troubadours is called “Courts of Love.”

They were considered heretics and banned by the Church. The Church at one time or another has banned the works of Aristotle, Galileo, and Judy Blume, as well as such well known prohibited works as the Marquis de Sade's 120 Days of Sodom, the Communist Manifesto, Huckleberry Finn, Milton's Areopagitica, Uncle Tom's Cabin, Born the Fourth of July, and The Satanic Verses.

“The doctrine that the earth is neither the center of the universe nor immovable, but moves even with a daily rotation, is absurd, and both philosophically and theologically false, and at the least an error of faith.” ~Catholic Church's 17th century decision against Galileo Galilei.

“Have no doubt on one point: at its very birth, this unworthy religion [Christianity] would have been destroyed without shift, if only there had been employed against it no other weapon than the contempt it deserves, but it was persecuted, and so it grew. If today, the effort were made to cover it with ridicule it would soon fade.” ~The infamous, Marquis de Sade, Philosophie dans le Boudoir.

AD 1016- Pope Benedict VIII repulses the Saracens at Luni, Tuscany; they besiege Salerno and are defeated by the aid of a band of Norman pilgrims returning from Jerusalem.

AD 1020-The Bishop of Worms, Buchard, issues a “Decretum,” to be known as the “Corrector,” confirming his belief in witchcraft, magic potions, and the practice of such in abortions. ~ cf. Numbers 5:27-28. The first use of the word “Werewolf” [werewolf] is recorded in Olde English.

AD 1022- Guido Aretinus invents the staff, and is the first to adopt as names for the notes of the musical scale the initial syllables of the hemistichs of a hymn in honor of Saint John the Baptist.

AD 1023-Muslims permit merchants to establish a hospital for the poor and sick Christians in the City of Jerusalem [Knights Hospitallers]. A little known fact in history in that the Islamic faith is tolerant of other faiths and it was not until the Crusades with the barbaric treatment of non-Christians that the Muslims retaliated with a vengeance to protect themselves and their faithful.

Muslims do not see corruption within the Roman Catholic Church, along with the vices of its leaders, as the way of God. After centuries of xenophobia having slowly filtered into Christendom, members came to hate all that was non-Catholic, and came to despise the Arabs through the more abhorrent Jews, after the early Christians made initial contact with civilization through the Crusades.

The Christian forgers will seldom, if ever, admit their treacheries, but name other counterfeiters, “Now, this business of forging old literature has existed at all times and at all places this Addition. Mr. Thomas Chenery, in a most valuable and interesting lecture on the Arabic language, given at Oxford in 1869, says [and his remarks apply equally to the Benedictines]: ‘The notion of ancient Arabic literature, of which some fragments are said to have come down to us, is, or ought to be, quite exploded. The Arabs, for instance, have preserved what they say is the lament of Amr, son of Al Harith, son of Modad the Jorhomi, who was expelled from Mecca and from the care of the Ka'beh, and forced to take refuge in Yemen at some remote time. Albert Schultens believed this Amr to have been contemporary with Solomon, and published the verses among his 'Monumenta Vetustiora Arabiae' as 'Carmen Salamonis aetatem contingens.' But he probably did not know that the Muslim men of letters were among the most unscrupulous and shameless of forgers, and were in the constant habit of placing snatches of poetry in the mouths of the heroes whose deeds they chronicled. The piece in question is in regular metre, determined by the quantity of syllables after the manner of Latin or Greek, and there is reason to believe that this more elaborate form of poetry was introduced at no early period. The conclusion to which we are forced to come is that these verses were probably composed by some versifier under the Khalifs when the old legends of the people were digested into a regular historical chronicle." ~The Mysteries of Chronology, with Proposal for a New English Era to be called The Victorian, by F.F. Arbuthnot, 1833-1901, Author, Editor, and Translator of Various Works, London, William Heinemann, 1900, And V.E. [Victorian era] 64.

"Indeed, whatever influence came from the Mosque passed through the Synagogue before it reached the Church." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 1, 676.

The religion of the Muslim or Mohammedans, the word means "Submission," and should to be used instead of Mohammedanism. The "Cambridge Mediaeval History," is regrettably out of proportion in the space it donates to the Arabs and Persians; while it devotes stout volumes to the vulgar behavior of the Christian nations of Europe, it does little to show the contributions of their contemporaries.

The Arabs were not fanatical about any religion, and after the death of Mohammed the many even disowned the Prophet and his supposed revelation. His successor, Omar, a genuine extremist, would reunite them by declaring war on rich Persia. It was, says Sir W. Muir, "The scent of war that turned the sullen temper of the Arabs into eager loyalty."

It was the skepticism of early Moslem rulers, in Syria and Spain, who descended from the men who had derided Mohammed's claims, that enabled the Arabs to reach a high stage of civilization in just two generations, while the Christian world took a thousand years. ~J. McCabe, Rationalists Encyclopaedia.

AD 1024—Pope Benedict VIII, Theophylactus, brother of his successor, Pope John XIX is not a cleric prior to his election as Pope and is chased from 'The City of God' by the Anti-Pope Gregory VI. He is restored to the papacy in 1014 with the assistance of King Henry I.

The Middle Ages in Europe witnessed a universal paradox of tolerance and condemnation with regards to prostitution, and while technically a sin [because it hinged on the act of fornication], prostitution is recognized by the church and others as a necessary, or "Lesser evil." ~Karras, 246.

"It is with pleasure that we can observe the human inconsistency of the most illustrious Saints and Bishops, Ambrose of Milan, and Martin of Tours, who, on this occasion, asserted the cause of toleration. They pitied the unhappy men who had been executed at Treves; they refused to hold communion with their Episcopal murderers; and if Martin deviated from that generous resolution, his motives were laudable, and his repentance was exemplary. The Bishops of Tours and Milan pronounced, without hesitation, the Eternal Damnation of heretics; but they were surprised and shocked by the bloody image of their temporal death, and the honest feelings of nature resisted the artificial prejudices of theology." ~Gibbon, Rise and Fall, Ch. Xxvii.

The Church of Rome does not condemn prostitution, but taxed it, and in the well ordered world of the City of God, by Augustine, there was no need whatsoever for domestic contraception, for, if possessed by a non-procreative urge, a man simply had to go to a prostitute and pour out his sperm but in vas, since coitus interruptus was strictly forbidden.

The prostitute's role was therefore that of a 'Natural' contraceptive. "The consequences of the Popes' ill-conceived dictates [about contraception] are as catastrophic as the persecution of heretics in bygone years. The result will be, in effect, to sentence millions to face starvation and hundreds of millions more to a marginal, subhuman existence." ~Joseph Daleiden.

Saint Augustine explains it this way, "If you expel prostitution from society, you will unsettle everything on account of lusts." ~Richards, 118.

"[Christian women with male concubines], on account of their prominent ancestry and great property, the so-called faithful want no children from slaves or lowborn commoners, they use drugs of sterility [oral contraceptives] or bind themselves tightly in order to expel a fetus, which has already been engendered [abortion]." ~Hippolytus, Refutation of All Heresies 9:12, 225 C.E. cf. Numbers 5:27-28.

Saint Augustine makes an exception to the Commandment, on killing, "However, there are some exceptions made by the Divine Authority to its own law, that men may not be put to death. These exceptions are of two kinds, being justified either by a general law, or by a special commission granted for a time to some individual. And in this latter case, he to whom authority is delegated, and who is but the sword in the hand of him who uses it, is not himself responsible for the death he deals. And, according by, they who have waged war in obedience to the Divine Command, or in conformity with His laws, have represented in their persons the public justice or the wisdom of government, and in this capacity have put to death wicked men; such persons have by no means violated the Commandment, "Thou shalt not kill [murder]." ~Saint Augustine of Hippo, City of God, p. 49, translated By Rev. Marcus Dods, D.D.

The original is "Lo tirtzack," which translated accurately is, "Any kind of killing whatsoever."

Saint Augustine also views that it is valid to use violence against the enemies of Christianity, so long as the motive isn't revenge. "We are therefore resolved, neither on the one hand to lay aside Christian gentleness, nor on the other to leave in your city that, which would be a most pernicious example for all others to follow." ~Saint Augustine, Letter 91, translated by The Rev. J. G. Cunningham, M.A.

Abstention was preached before the 20th century for birth control, "[Some] complain of the scantiness of their means, and allege that they have not enough for bringing up more children, as though, in truth, their means were in [their] power... Or God did not daily make the rich poor and the poor rich. Wherefore, if any one on any account of poverty shall be unable to bring up children, it is better to abstain from relations with his wife." ~Lactantius, Divine Institutes 6:20, 307 C.E.

The mighty Church preserves the power to giveth and it also retains the power to taketh away, "Do you really think that a case of such cruel rage should be held up to the world as passing unpunished? We do not desire to gratify our anger by vindictive retribution for the past, but we are concerned to make provision in a truly merciful spirit for the future. Now, wicked men have something in respect to which they may be punished, and that by Christians, in a merciful way, and so as to promote their own profit and well-being. For they have these three things: the life and health of the body, the means of supporting that life, and the means and opportunities of living a wicked life. Let the two former remain untouched in the possession of those who repent of their crime: this we desire, and this we spare no pains to secure. But as to the third, upon it God will, if it please Him, inflict punishment in His great compassion, dealing with it as a decaying or diseased part, which must be removed with the pruning-knife." ~Saint Augustine, Letter 91.

In 1022 at the Synod of Paulia he issues an injunction [celibacy] against the marriage of priests and cohabitations [concubines]. To the early Christian Fathers everything except absolute Virginity was considered adultery; woman was regarded as "The tool of Satan."

Hermes, the Shepherd, denounced all pleasure in sexual intercourse, the only excuse for which was propagation. He advocated that husband and wife should live as brother and sister! Justin Martyr preached "That total abstinence is a higher virtue and that sexual activity is unnecessary to life."

Saint Basil would speak to a woman only under extreme necessity. Saint John of Lycopolis had not seen a woman for forty-eight years! St. Gregory suffered a haunting remorse because he chanced to touch the necklace of his niece. ~Read The Ten Commandments by Joseph Lewis

The Medieval perspective towards sex and the sexes is steeped in Christian religious hypocrisy with prostitutes being refused burial on so-called Christian consecrated ground, yet the Church, via the Bishop of Winchester will receive rents from the brothels in the red-light district of Southwark, England, which is just outside the City of London's famous walls.

AD 1027-Truce of God; Church Decree restricting private warfare, the intent being to protect the defenseless against the corrupt practices of the nobility. Kings, queens, dukes, counts, etc., were often too quick to declare war on their neighbors in order to increase their land holdings and treasuries. Based on Canon Law, the Church Decree, forbid hostilities between Saturday night and Monday morning.

The penalty for violations by the poor was death, for the nobility the penalty was Excommunication and by anathema of Eternal Perdition [Eternal Hell] There is definitely a clear distinction in punishment between the ruling and non ruling classes with extra privileges continuing to be extended to those in power.

The Vatican has initiated wars throughout history to promote its interests at the cost tens of millions of lives. Catholic apologists are quick to claim that it was necessary to keep the peace and enforce the laws of the lands [killing of women and defenseless children promotes peace?]

The wars it set afoot were for the recovery, proliferation, or alleged protection of its temporal possessions from the eighth to the 20th century. From the Crusades, summoned by the Popes in a religious fervor to impose Catholicism, led to horrendous losses and culminated in futility. Catholic authorities hurled nation against nation because a monarch refused to submit to them and was declared deposed, blessed the Normans in England, the English in Ireland, and stood by while the Christian Nazis tried to take over the world.

Byzantine Emperor Constantine VIII seeks a treaty that would allow rebuilding of the Church of the Holy Sepulcher.

The Thirty Years War, instigated by the Jesuits, and the King's willingness to pay homage via medieval fees, later known as 'Peter's Pence,' and the loss of an unknown number of lives and led to epidemics of vice, was decidedly motivated by the Papacy and the Jesuits.

Christian writers are remiss in telling history, often writing historical trivia which enhances their faith, "This was the century of the last religious wars in 'Christendom,' the Thirty Years' War in Germany, fomented by the Jesuits, reducing the people to cannibalism, and the population of Bohemia from 4,000,000 to 780,000, and of Germany from 20,000,000 to 7,000,000, and making Southern Germany almost a desert ..." ~Cushing B. Hassell, History of the Church of God, Chapter XVII.

Constantine, by recognizing Christianity, literally gave them the right to steal, burn, desecrate other religious institutions, their temples, and their Gods, "When peace was given to the Church by Constantine, at the beginning of the 4th century, an era of temporal prosperity for the Church set in. As Europe gradually became Christian, the donations for religious purposes increased by leaps and bounds. Gifts of land and money for Ecclesiastical purposes were now legally recognized, and though some of the later Roman Emperors placed restrictions upon the donations of the faithful, yet the wealth of the Church rapidly increased. Whatever losses were suffered in the [incursions of the barbarians], were made up for later, when the conquering barbarians in their turn were converted to Christianity... The wealth of the Church at this period [the so-called Reformation] has sometimes been made a matter of reproach to her,... Admitting that abuses were indeed at times unquestionable." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 3, 762.

And this wealth does not include the Catholic tax imposed upon all inhabitants for the privilege of living in a corrupt Christian countries. The amazing feature is that the Popes can pose as serene advocates of peace while they incite to war, in the interest of the Church, as explicitly as Pope Gregory VII or Innocent III did, the Popes repeatedly demanded "The extinction of Bolshevism in Spain, Mexico, and Russia," the annexation of Mexico by the United States, and war upon Russia by Germany.

The Catholic Presses of the world support their demands, censoring all who deviate from their judgment. The Pope remained in close alliance with Japan during its series of vile aggressions, and attempted to paralyze or stifle America's assistance to Britain, when Germany attacked Russia, by inciting the great body of American Catholics to cause trouble and facilitate that destruction of Russia [Orthodox] for which he hoped. ~From the works of Father Joseph McCabe

No one knows how many millions of lives have been sacrificed in the name of God and His self-proclaimed representatives on earth, "We are doing for Popery at home, what we have done for idolaters abroad, and in the end the results will be the same; nay, worse; for Popish cruelty, and thirst for the blood of the innocent, have been the most savage and merciless that the earth has seen. Cawnpore, Delhi, and Bareilly, are but dust in comparison with the demoniacal brutalities perpetrated by the Inquisition, and by the armies of Popish fanaticism." ~Dr. Bonar.

Various versions of Biblical texts abound and the Church is more determined to standardize. In the 11th century Lanfranc, Bishop of Canterbury, 1069-89, attempts a correction of the edited Vulgate, apparently with little success.

"About this time of Pope Gregory VII, in particular, 1073-1085, the work of forging false documents and their systematic utilization, i.e., fitting them together into a body of doctrine, reached a magnitude and a degree of openness absolutely stupefying." ~Guinebert, Triumph of Christianity, p. 251.

About the middle of the 12th century, Stephen Harding of Citeaux produces a revision—extant in manuscript in Dijon public library [number 9], as does Cardinal Nicolaus. The increased demand for Bibles in the 13th century gives opportunity for further corruption of the text—publishers and copyists being unconcerned as to the character of the sacred manuscripts chosen as a basis. ~Vulgate, The International Standard Bible Encyclopedia, 1915.

AD1031-1044-The illegitimate son of Pope John XIX is awarded the Chair of Peter as Pope Benedict IX. Among the early Germanic tribes, Teutons Hel, a hollow place underground, was the common and very dim abode of all the dead except warriors, who earned residence in Valhalla by ferocity in fighting. The general tendency was in the direction of an underworld of discomfort for all but a few who were particularly appreciated by the kings and priests, and these, naturally, went to the home of the great Sky-Gods.

"They are called Fathers, and they often are." ~Erasmus on the fatherhood of the corrupt priesthood

Moral corruption has run rampant in the Vatican from its earliest days, "His Holiness Benedict IX was eleven years old in October 1032 when he became Pope in the footsteps of his father Pope John XIX. His exploits with women brought an early puberty and by the time he was fourteen he had surpassed the exploits of all predecessors. Saint Peter Damian has this to say, 'That wretch, from the beginning of his Pontificate to the end of his life, feasted on immorality.' Another observer was more precise: 'A demon from Hell in the guise of a priest has occupied the Chair of Peter.'" ~Saint Peter Damain regarding Pope John XIX, from Peter de Rosa, Vicars of Christ: The Dark Side of the Papacy.

AD1032-1044-While condemning the world for witchcraft, Pope Benedict IX, is alleged to have "Dabbled in witchcraft and Satanism" in the Dark Ages. ~cf. Exodus 22:18-20.

Pope Benedict IX is Pope three times, from 1032 to 1044, and from April to May 1045, and finally from 1047 to 1048. The primary reason for this ungodly reign? He profited by selling the Papal Throne for vast sums of money and then by reclaiming it, twice. He hands the Papacy over to his godfather, Giovanni Graziano, a Roman priest, who then offers Benedict a pension.

Upon the fall of the Roman Empire, moral decline continued, and the diminutive literate minority in the Dark Ages were so thickly ignorant that the grossest forgeries are imposed upon them. Capacious collection of creative stories of saints and martyrs, of which the Catholic Church is often so proud, they continued to emerge into the light of the new and more uninformed Europe.

The masses will continue to believe fables, legends, and myths as if real and pay little attention to history as the Holy Mother the Church deems it not worth the brutal tortures of their Inquisition to establish whether Saint George really fought a dragon, or that Saint Denis had carried his head in his hands.

The powerful Church sees itself as the protector of mankind, and in such justifies whatever means it deems necessary to shield society, "When anyone uses measures involving the infliction of some pain, in order to prevent an inconsiderate person from incurring the most dreadful punishments by becoming accustomed to crimes, which yield him no advantage, he is like one who pulls a boy's hair in order to prevent him from provoking serpents by clapping his hands at them; in both cases, while the acting of love is vexatious to its object, no member of the body is injured, whereas safety and life are endangered by that, from which the person is deterred... Wherefore it is for the most part an advantage to themselves when certain things are removed from persons in whose keeping it is hazardous to leave them, lest they abuse them. When surgeons see that a gangrene must be cut away or cauterized, they often, out of compassion, turn a deaf ear to many cries. If we had been indulgently forgiven by our parents and teachers in our tender years on every occasion on which, being found in a fault, we begged to be let off, which of us would not have grown up intolerable? Which of us would have learned any useful thing? Such punishments are administered by wise care, not by wanton cruelty." ~Saint Augustine, Letter 104, translated by The Rev. J. G. Cunningham, M.A.

His Holiness, Pope Benedict IX was eleven years old in October 1032 when he became Pope in the footsteps of his father Pope John XIX. His exploits with women brought an early puberty and by the time he was fourteen he had surpassed the exploits of all predecessors.

Reign of Pope Benedict IX, who has been called the Christian incarnation of Elagabalus, an ancient Roman Sun God, once the Supreme and only God. Elagabalus once held the position of Pontifex Maximus as well as that of creating a new, higher ranking position, which he also held, called the Sacerdos amplissimus Dei Solis Elagabali. He reputedly tortured and sacrificed human victims, preferring young noble boys, and would observe their entrails for signs of Divination. Elagabalus' often eccentric behavior is corroborated by Cassius Dio, Herodian, and the Historia Augusta. ~The Sumerians: Their History, Culture, and Character by Samuel Noah Kramer, page 146. Note: Elagabalus had numerous rivals, the foremost being his cousin Bassianus, who later became Emperor Alexander Severus. When Elagabalus ordered a proscription against his cousin Bassianus, and his supporters, his soldiers refused, and on March 11, 222, they had Elagabalus, along with his mother murdered and thrown into the Tiber River, and Alexander Severus was declared Emperor in his place.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

AD 1033-1109-Anselm of Canterbury, Archbishop, philosopher, writer of "Why Did God Become A Man?" This church leader, proposed an argument for God's existence that is still being debated today. Exiled by the King of England for opposing him from 1097-1100 and again from 1103-1107 for disputing the King's right to appoint church officials [Does the King have the right to invest Bishops?] This issue is not resolved until 1107 by the West Minster Agreement.

Archbishop Anselm argued that those who doubt the existence of God would have to have some understanding of what they are disbelieving. They would have to understand God to be a being, that which nothing greater can be thought of or that it he is greater to exist outside the mind rather than just in the mind.

To doubt God's existence would be a contradiction because one would be saying that it is possible to think of something greater, yet think that nothing greater can be contemplated. Hence, by definition God exists necessarily. This opposition or juxtaposition is later to be taken up by Thomas Aquinas, Immanuel Kant, René Descartes, Baruch Spinoza, and Gottfried Leibniz.

Anselm is Canonized in 1163 and pronounced Doctor of the Church in 1720 for standing up to contemporary monarchs in defense of the Church. A Jew, Taranto, in Italy, buys land for vineyards; in contrast to the slowly changing Western Christendom, Byzantine law does allow Jews to own land and engage in agriculture.

Institution of the "Truce of God." A suspension of private feuds is officially observed in England, France, Italy, and elsewhere. Such a truce provides that these feuds should cease on all the more important church festivals and fasts, from Thursday evening to Monday morning, and during Lent, or similar occasions.

End of the World: Some believe this to be the 1000th anniversary of the death and resurrection of their Lord Jesus Christ. His Second Coming is anticipated, but Jesus' actual date of execution is unknown, but is believed to be in the range of 27 to 33 C.E.

AD 1045- King Ferdinand of Castile, the Catholic ruler, exacts tribute from his Moorish neighbors.

AD 1046-The "Fear of God" inspired some lay people to demand changes in the corrupt Catholic Church, and Heinrich III [Henry III], the German king, and Holy Roman Emperor, ruling from what is today is Northern Germany, was moved by this godliness to change the Church. With a vast army he arrived in Rome in 1046, suppressed the crooked political factions having influence over the Papacy and started appointing a series of new Popes. Economic times were benefiting across Western Europe, which, accompanied by a religious revival, included the building of Monasteries, also involved in encouraging religious reforms, with a serious effort at reform beginning with Pope Leo IX, 1049-1054.

Slaves were not allowed to enter the priesthood, and in general neither could serfs.

AD 1047-1048-Pope Benedict IX, alleged to have been twelve years of age at the time he became Pope, while others say he was in his twenties. It was his family's position and money that put him in the papacy [the first time], in 1032-1034. Theophylactus, the Pope led a life of debauchery, and eventually, even the Roman people became ashamed of his lascivious lifestyle and drove him from the city in 1044, electing Pope Sylvester II, the anti-pope.

Pope Benedict regained the papacy the following year and sold the Papacy a month later to John Gratian, who became known as Pope Gregory VI. Holy Roman Emperor Henry III convoked a Synod at Sutri, which deposed all three claimants and elected Pope Clement II, who died in 1047. Benedict held on in Rome until July, 1048, when he was removed in favor of Pope Damasus II.

Pope Benedict IX retires to a palatial family estate refusing to appear before a Synod, which accuses him with selling Church preferment in 1049. He is in due course excommunicated by Pope Leo IX who may have lifted the ban before Benedict's death. At the time of Pope Leo IX's election in 1049 C.E., according to the testimony of Saint Bruno the Church of Peter languished in despicable lasciviousness and debauchery.

"The whole worldly in wickedness, Holiness had disappeared, justice had perished, and truth had been buried; Simon Magus was lording it over the Church, whose Bishops were given to luxury and fornication." ~Saint Bruno, Bishop of Segni, from the works of Joseph Wheless.

AD 1048-1118-Alexius I, Comnenus I, resists Norman invaders [Pagans] and in 1095 appeals to Pope Urban II for assistance in recovering Anatolia from the Seljuk [Muslims]. This marks the foundation for the establishment of the Crusades, which are later declared to allegedly free the Holy Lands from the auspices of the infidels. In various letters written after the Council of Clermont, Pope Urban II explains his reasons for launching a crusade, and what those that, "Took the Cross" could expect to gain from it: "We know you have already heard from the testimony of many that the frenzy of the barbarians has devastated the churches of God in the East. and has even, shame to say, seized into slavery the Holy City of Christ, Jerusalem. Grieving in pious contemplation of this disaster. We visited France and strongly urged the princes and people of that land to work for the liberation of the Eastern Church." ~Pope Urban II, Letter to Flanders, translation from Chronicles of the Crusades. Cf. Exodus 22:18-20.

To all the Christians who will take up the sword in the Crusades [Take to the Cross so the Church says], there shall be a forgiveness of sin. The Church extols of the killing of men, "We have heard that some of you desire to go to Jerusalem. because you know that this would greatly please us. Know, then, that anyone who sets out on that journey, not out of lust for worldly advantage but only for the Salvation of his soul and for the liberation of the Church, is remitted in entirety all penance for his sins, if he has made a true and perfect act of confession. This is because he has dedicated his person and his wealth to the love of God and his neighbor." ~Pope Urban II, Letter to Bologna, translation from Chronicles of the Crusades.

The Christian God fails to protect and save the vast majority of its own people from the Sword of Islam and the Christians began to doubt the power of their God. Jerusalem is taken only to be lost again to the fierce fighting soldiers of Muhammad.

Due to its significant losses, financially as well as in human lives, the Church attempts to denigrate the Great Prophet. The Catholic Monk, Matthew Paris, who died in 1259, maliciously says, "His great work, 'Chronica Majora,' from the Creation until the year of his death, it is well known that Mohammed was once a Cardinal and became heretic because he failed to be elected Pope. Also having drunk to excess, he fell by the roadside, and in this condition was killed by swine. And for that reason, his followers abhor pork even unto this day!"

So saith the self-proclaimed knowledgeable Monk on the alleged unworthy motives why Mohammed quit the 'True Church' and became an insolent Infidel. This notable occurrence most probably occurred when Buddha was canonized a Catholic Saint. ~See the Catholic Encyclopedia, article on Matthew Paris.

Upon the death of Pope Clement II, the deposed Pope again intrudes himself.

"If the test of the validity of a religion is to be its growth, spread and proselytizing capacity, then Mohammedanism can make a more impressive appeal than Christianity. Christianity had the advantage of being launched six and a half centuries before Mohammedanism. Yet today the Mohammedans far outnumber the Christians, and the Mohammedans have, moreover, reconquered the very areas in which Christianity arose and established its first strongholds." ~Dr. Harry Elmer Barnes, The Twilight of Christianity, p. 416.

AD 1049- Sex abuse continues within the Church, and when the good intentioned Saint Damian endeavors to persuade Pope Leo IX, 1049-54 C.E., to expel the contemptuous homosexuals from the clergy, Pope Leo will straightforwardly refuse. "If he got rid of the gays," says Nigel Cawthorne in his Sex Lives of the Popes, "Perhaps he feared he would have had no one left..."

Jonathan Levy states, "Many of the Vatican's activities fall outside the traditional actions of a state, particularly when it comes to financing the Church. In the case of the pedophilia coverup, a Vatican policy of protecting guilty priests violates customary international law as well as the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child."

AD 1050- 1122- Omar Khayyam, Persian mathematician, astronomer, and author of one of the world's best known works of poetry. Omar Khayyam wrote his exquisite Persian verses on the futility of trying to discern any purpose of life, scoffing at believers yearning for a Heaven, "Fools, your reward is neither here nor there..." and he belittled the Divine prophecies, "The revelations of the devout and learn'd who rose before us and as prophets burn'd are all but stories, which, awoke from sleep. They told their comrades, and to sleep return'd." Omar's life is a mystery as to how he circumvented the sword of the Muslim world [beheading] with the blasphemous words and the verses attributed to him not sprouting until two centuries after his death.

The early Church dislikes poets and mathematicians, for they seek out rationality in this mundane world, which challenges the Church's authority, 'By Faith Alone,' or 'Leap of Faith' construct. "The good Christian should beware of mathematicians, and all those who make empty prophecies. The danger already exists that the mathematicians have made a covenant with the devil to darken the spirit and to confine man in the bonds of Hell.” ~Saint Augustine, De Genesi ad Litteram, Book II, xviii, 37.

“How is it that beliefs and practices that are anything but reasonable could have been, and still are, accepted by reasonable beings.” ~Henri Bergson.

In Rouen, Orléans, Limoges, Mainz, and most likely also in Rome, the Jews are converted by force, massacred, or expelled by the Catholic majority.

Synod of Narbonne, 1050, prohibited Christians from living in Jewish homes.

AD 1052- Archbishop Robert, with the Norman Bishops and nobles is driven out of England.

AD 1053- In Italy, the Norman conquests of that country are conferred on them as a fief [a feudal estate] of the Roman Catholic Church.

AD 1054- The third Black Plague destroys the European population; called the bolgach and tregait; the Triads of Britain call it the ‘Sickness of the bloody sweat,’ on account of the corn having been destroyed by inclement [wet] weather in the time of the Norman invasion by ‘William the Bastard.’

The Great Schism between Eastern and Western theological beliefs. Disputes over interpretations of Scripture and which church, the Western or Eastern Christians will have control over the Scriptural translations. A schism had developed when The Council of Nice in 325 had added the Filoque [and from the Son] otherwise known as the Trinity to the interpretation of the Bible, which is rejected by the Eastern Church. The Bible as we know it today contains 66 different Books, which were penned by an estimated 39 different authors. There also exists some extra-Biblical works of Ecclesiastical writings commonly known as the Apocrypha. ~Mystery Books of the Bible by Gregory B. Dill.

The Western [Roman Catholic] Church in this 20th century is still in the process of creating new interpretations to Scripture [interpretations which are not included in Scripture]. Pope Leo IX issues an Anathema, which is a solemn curse of Excommunication against the Constantinople Patriarch [Eastern Orthodox Church].

The Patriarch [Eastern Church] then summons a council that in turn excommunicates the papal representatives. The struggle for dominance will continue for another 946 years with Pope John Paul II making a conciliatory gesture in the 20th century to make amends. However, Pope John Paul will not renounce his superiority via his descendancy of authority from the forged document of Peter.

The period of the Great Schism of the West, particularly, “... Was also an epoch when many fanatical or designing persons reaped a rich harvest out of the credulity of the populace.” ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 7, 699.

“The Church at that time [1072] was torn by the schisms of anti-Popes” ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 1, 541.

Pope Leo IX, in 1054 C.E., cites The Donation of Constantine to assert his Papal Primacy. Pope John Paul II will do the same in the 20th century to claim worldly powers over all other churches. ~Pope Leo IX, in a letter to Michael Cærularius, Patriarch of Constantinople.

Pope Leo IX, in his letter to Michael Cærularius, then Patriarch of Constantinople, cites a large portion of the Donation of Constantine, which now includes the phrase Vicarius Filii Dei, the Roman numeral meaning, which add up to 666 [the number of the Beast]. The motive for Pope Leo providing the Greek Patriarch with the bulk of the text of the false Donation, was to officially notify Caerulius that Emperor Constantine had conferred a unique dignity, authority and primacy on the See of Peter, making Constantinople subject to Rome, and that he alone, as the “Universal Bishop,” had primacy over all Churches.

AD 1059- Pope Nicholas II and the Council of Rome decree that future Popes shall be elected by the College of Cardinals, but confirmed by the people and clergy of Rome and the Emperor.

AD 1061- 73-Pope Alexander II was the team leader in “... That great agitation against simony and clerical incontinence... A faction elected Honorius II as Pope; public opinion clamoring for reform. Alexander was omnipresent through his legates, punishing simoniacal Bishops and incontinent clergy.” ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 1, pg. 286.

Catholic authors admit, reluctantly, the immoral clamor, which pervaded the Church during this era and affectionately claim that their sanctimonious Pontiffs attempted reform. ~Pope Alexander II will refuse to discipline a priest who committed adultery with his father's second wife because he hadn't committed the sin of matrimony, which was considered the greatest evil which had to be eliminated for the priesthood to be totally devoted to the Church.

And the Church will continue to do little to change the moral degradation, denying its membership good leadership and continually being caught in lecherous acts.

AD 1062- The Archbishop of Cologne, Anno, assumes the reins of government after seizing the young Emperor Henry IV.

AD 1065- Saint Arialdo is 'martyred at Milan for his attempt to reform the 'simoniacal' and 'immoral' clergy of that city. ... For inveighing against abuses he is excommunicated by the Bishop. —Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 1, 707.

AD 1066- Believing a comet is the harbinger of bad or evil things to happen, the Saxons [Germanic tribes] lose faith and are conquered by William the Conqueror. The ruthless Christian, William the Conqueror, will eventually die a painful death from a riding accident, his body will swell from infection, and during his funerary mass, remains will explode to the horror of those attending. A putrid stench will exude from the remains of his corpse, which even the ceremonial incense cannot hide. —www.outcivilisation.com.

“The populace, instead of rearing up in hot indignation at the cruelty, the barbarity, and the inhumanity of burning alive the victims of the Inquisition, cheered with gusto... In the early days the feet and hands were often amputated in toto, but Justinian tempered the severity of this law, restricting it to the amputation of one hand only.” ~Scott.

The most merciful Christian Emperor, William, declares, “We decree that no one shall be killed or hung for any misdeeds, but rather that his eyes be plucked out and his feet, hands and testicles be cut off.” ~William the Conqueror.

AD 1067- Council of Mantua, Hildebrand denies the imperial right to interfere in the election of a Pope.

AD 1068- Carrier pigeons are employed by the Saracens [Muslims] to convey intelligence to the besieged in Palermo.

AD 1070- [One thousand years of anti-Semitism] The Synod of Narbonne decrees that Christians are not permitted to live in Jewish homes.

AD 1073- 1085-Regarding the latest translation of the Bible into English, Pope Gregory VII states, “Not without reason has it pleased Almighty God that Holy Scripture should be a secret in certain places, lest it were plainly apparent to all men, perchance it would be little esteemed and be subject to disrespect; or it might be falsely understood by those of mediocre learning and lead to error.”

Pope Gregory VII, bemoaning the difficulty in stamping out marriage among priests, declares, “The Church cannot escape from the clutches of the laity unless priests first escape from the clutches of their wives.”

[Vicar of Christ] Pope Gregory VII declares that:

1. That the Roman Church was founded by the Lord alone.
2. That the Roman Pontiff alone is justly called “Universal.”
3. That he alone can depose Bishops or restore them.
9. That all Princes should kiss the feet of the Pope.
12. That it is lawful for him to depose Emperors.
18. That his sentence ought not to be reviewed by any one; and he alone can review [the decisions] of all monarchs
19. That he ought to be judged by no one.
22. That the Roman Church never erred; nor will it, according to Scripture, ever err.
27. That he can absolve subjects from their allegiance to unrighteous [rulers].

It is with the Patrine Powers that Pope Gregory VII proclaims the Papacy's dominion over all mankind: Jews, Muslims, all, bar none, the world is under his jurisdiction, with or without the consent of the individual, “To [Pope] Gregory, the Petrine Power to bind and to loose exempted no one and nothing from the Pope's jurisdiction. He argued that the Pope's power referred also to secular and terrestrial matters that were of special importance in the case of kings.... Further, the Pope exercised a universal regimen over the whole of Christendom, and kings [and emperors] belonged to the sheep who were by Christ's commission subjected to Peter's successors. Therefore, the Petrine Powers entitled the Pope to dispose of all property, including kingdoms and the possessions of men.” ~Abbd Guelt, The Papacy: Its Historic Origin and Primitive Relations with the Eastern Churches, 1866.

To Pope Pius XII, “I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians.” ~Mahatma Gandhi

Not unpredictably, Pope Boniface VIII will also proclaim, in his Bull, Unam Sanctam, 1302, "It is necessary to Salvation that every human creature be subject to the Roman Pontiff." The concept of Universal Authority being vested in one man is alien to the early Church of Christ as well as to the Church of the Seven Ecumenical Councils.

But the King of France will not hear of this, and King Philip IV summons his Parliament together in Paris and lays before it an impeachment of the Pope for heresy, simony and rapacity. Pope Boniface is specifically accused of "... Wizardry, dealing with the Devil, disbelief in Jesus Christ, declaring that sins of the flesh were not sins, and causing the murder of Pope Celestine and others. He had a certain 'Idol' in which a 'Diabolical Spirit' was enclosed whom he was in the habit of consulting a strange voice answered him." ~A History of the Popes, Dr. Joseph McCabe, C. A. Watts & Co, London, 1939.

If God is a mere idol, picture, amulet, or clay statuary, then why must he be protected? "But I should like if those who worship idols would tell me if they wish to become like those whom they worship? Does any one of you wish to see in such sort as they see? Or to hear after the manner of their hearing? Or to have such understanding as they have? Far be this from any of my hearers! For this were rather to be thought a curse and a reproach to a man, who bears in himself the image of God, although he has lost the likeness. What sort of Gods, then, are they to be reckoned, the imitation of whom would be execrable to their worshipers, and to have whose likeness would be a reproach? What then? Melt your useless images, and make useful vessels. Melt the unserviceable and inactive metal, and make implements fit for the use of men. But, says one, human laws do not allow us. He says well; for it is human laws, and not their own power, that prevents it. What kind of Gods, then, are those, which are defended by human laws, and not by their own energies? And so also they are preserved from thieves by watch-dogs and the protection of bolts, at least if they be of silver, or gold, or even of brass; for those that are of stone and earthenware are protected by their own worthlessness, for no one will steal a stone or a crockery God. Hence those seem to be the more miserable whose more precious metal exposes them to the greater danger. Since, then, they can be stolen, since they must be guarded by men, since they can be melted, and weighed out, and forged with hammers, ought men possessed of understanding to hold them as Gods?" ~The Recognitions of Clement, About the Recognitions and Homilies. 5.15, Folly of Idolatry.

"[Pope] Boniface VIII, 1235-1303: Historians and literary men who now repeat fraudulent Catholic claims about 'The glorious 13th century' shrink from noticing that it was crowned by the pontificate, 1294-1303, of one of the most scandalous in the long gallery of 'Bad Popes.' Apart from a very serious but un-provable charge that he had his predecessor murdered - he certainly took the Papacy from him by fraud and imprisoned him, his successor Pope Clement V had, as part of his own corrupt bargain for the Papal chair, to convene a Council of the French Church, in 1312, to try the dead Boniface, and, at this, voluntary Roman witnesses, chiefly priests and lawyers, accused Boniface of blasphemy, cynical skepticism, denial of immortality, defense of adultery [No more harm in it than rubbing your hands together], and mockery of all religion and morals. The statement of the Catholic Encyclopedia that the prelates acquitted him of the charges is false. They were afraid to make any pronouncement on the evidence, which was endorsed by the greatest lawyers in France. Gregorovius, the Papal historian, tries to relieve him of the charge of vice on the ground that he was eighty years old, but even the Catholic Encyclopedia makes him only sixty-eight years old when he died, or less than sixty at his accession. The severe strictures on him in Prof. Rockwell's article in the Encyclopedia Britannica have been cut out of the article in the last edition, but the Cambridge Mediaeval History, which reflects the general opinion of historians, says that, "The evidence seems conclusive that he was doctrinally a sceptic' and 'It is probable that for him, as later for [Pope] Alexander VI, the moral code had little meaning' [VII, 5]. Dante voices contemporary opinion in Italy when he puts the Pope deep in Hell [Dante's Inferno, aka the Divine Comedy, Canto XIX, 52-7]." ~Dr. Joseph McCabe, Rationalists Encyclopaedia. The dogma of Papal Infallibility, which is proclaimed, until the 19th century, is only an extension of a false teaching regarding universal authority, and according to the Dogma of Infallibility, a Pope cannot err when he teaches ex cathedra, literally, "From the throne," on faith and morals; furthermore, Catholics are taught that a Pope is superior to any Council of the Church and to all other Christian religions. The truth is finally revealed. The Pope is not happy with the common folks having access to the Bible [He even professes to speak for God by saying what pleases God is the secrecy of the words of God]

The Church, for centuries, has kept a close control on access to the Bible and foresees that power is no longer strength once it is revealed [“Power told is power lost,” is an old Native American Zuni saying]. Pope Gregory is more frequently quoted by his pre-Papal name, Hildebrand, a stern ascetic who fought fiercely for imposing celibacy upon the clergy and monks. He wore a monastic dress, but whether he ever was a monk is disputed. ~Dr. W. Martens, War Gregor VII Moensch? 1891.

Being restricted from seeking a normal outlet for the passions of the flesh, the ‘Pious’ were forced to satisfy their sexual longings through prohibited channels. The result was that while celibacy produced fanatical asceticism on the one hand, it was also the cause of the most demoralizing promiscuity on the other.

The gross immorality that followed the imposition of celibacy on the clergy can never be completely revealed for the Church has seen fit to destroy any documents which do not sit well with them. Priests became adulterers and corrupters of the home, and nunneries became notorious brothels.

Authoritative writers of the Middle Ages tell of nunneries that were like brothels, and of the widespread prevalence of incest among the priests, many of whom lived with their mothers and sisters. John Knox committed adultery with his stepmother. Gregory, Bishop of Vercelli, was convicted of incest, having had relations with a widow betrothed to his uncle. ~Note: According to Genesis 4:17 one must infer incest for Cain would have had to have sex with either his own mother, Eve, or an unnamed sister. Cf. Genesis 19:30-38, 20:12, 38:16.

In an effort to impose celibacy on the priest, the clergyman's mother or sister was not permitted to sleep in the same house with him. Experience had taught them that no blood tie was strong enough to prevent sexual satisfaction.

The hot passions of the body easily overpower the cool resolutions of the mind. On co-habitation, Saint Bernard said that for men and women to live together without having sexual relations was a greater miracle than raising the dead. Saint Bernard of Clairvaux, referring to the Christian soldiers called Crusaders, also makes this pronouncement: “If they kill, it is to the profit of Christ; if they die, it is to their own.”

Cardinal Peter d'Ailly declared that the immorality in the nunneries was so notorious that it was common for girls who wanted to enter a life of prostitution simply to take the veil. One of the reasons for the Church's denunciation of Savonarola was that he declared the nuns in the convents were no better than harlots, and that the whole fabric of morality was being corrupted by the adultery of members of the religious orders. ~See The Ten Commandments by Joseph Lewis.

To purify the Papacy, which has been desecrated for a century and a half, he induced the Lateran Synod in 1059 to deprive the Roman people and clergy of the right to elect a Pope and confines this to the Cardinals, but he himself accepted election, in 1073, by “Popular confusion.” ~see Letters of his friend Abbot Didier I. I.

This was the keynote of his turbulent career: the good power of the Church overriding all scruples. ~Doellinger, Das Papstthum, 1892, Ch. II, § 2.

Pope Gregory and his ‘Saintly lieutenants’ freely use forgeries, and Pope Gregory even tampers with the texts of Decrees he quotes. He began or incited wars with, “Cursed be he that refraineth his sword from blood,” he would quote, in most countries to make princes feudatories [good taxpaying Catholics] of the Church, and during his tenure, there was not a country in which he was generally respected.

A German Synod of Bishops and Abbots declares him deposed [removed from office], and in his last year even the Romans, infuriated by the brutality of his Norman hirelings, drive him into exile and out of the ‘City of God.’ For his one alleged spiritual triumph, over King Henry IV. It is mythical. Henry succeeded his father at the age of six, but during his minority, his mother ruled in his name.

After King Henry came of age in 1065 he crushed a rebellion in Saxony. About that time there began the struggle between the Pope and the King for temporal power in the empire. Despite a Papal Decree prohibiting appointment of Church officials by the King, Henry appoints, 1075, prelates in various parts of Italy. Reprimanded by Pope Gregory VII, Henry convokes, AD 1076, a German council at Worms to depose of the Pope. This act results in his Excommunication, with the consequent release of his subjects from allegiance to him.

Catholics smiled in those days at the death of Pope Gregory and the Pope laments, “have loved justice and hated iniquity, and therefore I die in exile.” He was piously unscrupulous, ignorant, a man of fiery temper; and the end of his life opens the most licentious period in European history, and the terrible corruption of the monks and priests whom he had forbidden to marry. ~See Bishop A. H. Mathew, The Life and Times of Hildebrand (1910). For AD 1073- All the known copies of Sappho's lesbian love poems are burned by Catholic Ecclesiastical authorities in Constantinople and Rome.

Pope Gregory VII, 1073-1085, decrees that anyone who accepts a Church position offered by a layman will be deposed [removed], and any layman who gave a Church position to anyone would be excommunicated. In England, William the Conqueror protested, as did King Philip I of France. The Holy Roman Emperor, Henry IV [ruler of German and other lands], also defies Pope Gregory. William the Conqueror, and Philip I, regarding the Papacy, are unwilling to take on powerful opponents, and Pope Gregory excommunicates and deposes King Henry.

The Nobles felt liberated from Henry's dominance and supported the Pope, and in January 1077, Henry crosses the Alps to the Pope's residence at Conossa for what would be one of the most celebrated summit meetings in the history of all Europe when Pope Gregory lifts the sentence of excommunication and restores Henry to his rightful kingship.

In 1080 Gregory will again excommunicate and deposed Henry, but this time, Henry uses a power that several Kings had in greater amount than the Pope: Henry went to Italy with an army and took control of Rome, and he was in control of Rome at the time of Gregory's death in 1085.

Eventually an agreement was approved whereby the Church would choose who would be a Bishop within the Holy Roman Empire, but the Holy Roman Emperor was to have a veto power over the selection.

AD 1074- Pope Gregory VII puts forward the first idea of a general crusade against the infidel Turks.

In the support of family, Pope Gregory VII legislates that anyone wishing to be ordained must first pledge celibacy, and continuing his attack against women, he publicly states that, "... The Church cannot escape from the clutches of the laity unless priests first escape the clutches of their wives."

AD 1075- Lay investiture prohibited by a council called by Pope Gregory VII.

Pope Gregory VII declares that no one can judge a Pope except God, which opens the door to the perfidious concept of Infallibility, and Pope Gregory is the first Pope to decree that Rome can never be in error.

AD 1075- Pope Saint Gregory laments over the decadent state of the Church. "The Eastern Church has fallen away from the Faith and is now assailed on every side by infidels. Wherever I turn my eyes to the West, to the North, to the South, I find everywhere bishops who have obtained their office in an irregular way, whose lives and conversations are strangely at variance with their sacred calling; who go through their duties not for the love of Christ but from motives of worldly gain. And those among whom I live are worse than Jews or Pagans." ... Gregory made every effort to stamp out of the Church the two consuming evils of the age, simony and clerical incontinency... Pope Gregory began his great work of purifying the Church by a reformation of the clergy. In 1074 he enacted the following decrees [a series aimed at the two universal vices named]. But they met with vigorous resistance... Called forth a most violent storm of opposition throughout Italy, Germany, and France. And the reason for this opposition on the part of the vast throng of immoral and simoniacal clerics is not far to seek." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 6, 793-4.

AD 1076 (?) -Atziz, Malek Shah's lieutenant, conquers Syria from the Fatimites of Egypt, and takes possession of Jerusalem. Christian pilgrims are persecuted by the Seljukian Turks.

Henry IV, Emperor of Germany, holds a council at Rome, which deposes Pope Gregory VII. In union with the German princes the Pope now deposes the Emperor.

The Assassins, Persians, name derived from the Arabic: hashishin-meaning users of hashish. Their founder and Grand Master is Hasan-I Sabbah who dies in 1124 initiating new converts who are sworn to secrecy and execute their assassinations with a blind obedience. The weapon of choice is a dagger and their leader exploited this fear of the sect to gain tribute from other Arab chieftains.

Excessive fees: Archbishop Lanfranc in England orders a priest's benediction on for a marriage, but for another 100 years the poor inhabitants will continue to marry without benefit of clergy.

"According to a recent report, researchers have discovered almost two pounds of marijuana 'Cultivated for psychoactive purposes' in the Gobi Desert, an area located in Southern Mongolia and the Northern Inner Mongolia region of China. According to the researchers, the marijuana stash is about 2,700 years old."

AD 1078- Pope Alexander II warns the Bishops of Spain to prevent violence against the Jews for the reason that, unlike the Saracens, they "Are prepared to live in servitude."

The Christian Synod of Gerona, 1078, requires Jews to pay taxes to support the Church.

AD 1079- Celibacy of the priesthood. The Vatican fears the families of the married priests will inherit their wealth and votes to deny marriage to them henceforth, but this does not stop the Popes from having clandestine affairs and making illegitimate children.

142-Peter Abelard, French teacher, philosopher, theologian, and original thinker, argues the old questions of fatalism versus free will. Debates on Astrology and the Church's traditional thoughts are re-opened. Astrology is disliked by Church Authorities and is condensed in the Bible. Abelard falls in love with the niece of the canon of the Cathedral of Notre Dame and secretly marries her [Heloise]. The uncle [Fulbert], upon hearing of his niece becoming impregnated by Abelard, believing she has been abandoned, has him castrated.

Heloise retires to live in a monastery and Abelard flees the area. Abelard publishes a comprehensive discourse on the Trinity that is rejected by the Roman Catholic Authorities in 1121. He becomes abbot at the monastery at Saint-Gildas-de-Rhuis. Saint Bernard of hearing of the Abbot Abelard writing love letters to Heloise prevails upon Pope Innocent II in having him condemned as a threat to the Church. Abelard's body, upon his death, is laid next to his lover Heloise in 1164 where they are consumed by fire. Today, the letters he wrote to Heloise are considered classical, in the romantic sense.

The Council of Rome initiates the persecution of the Berengarius and its followers who cannot bear the dogma of "Transmutation of bread & wine into Christ."

AD 1080-Pope Saint Gregory VII writes to King Harold of Denmark forbidding witches to be put to death or tortured based upon the belief that they can cause storms, crop failure, or pestilence.

AD 1087-Northern Europe, Norse Pagans are the subject of much religious intolerance from the Christians as their priests are killed, temples torn down, and their followers persecuted and killed. King Inge I of Sweden, earlier, had been forced away, traveled with his house-carls through Smalandia and Ostrogothia, riding both day and night, until he arrived in Sweden. Having arrived at Old Uppsala, Inge I surrounded the hall of Blot-Sweyn, and subsequently set the hall on fire. When the Paga King ran out, he was immediately slain.

Constantinople is captured by Alexis Comnenus, who is placed by his soldiers on the Byzantine throne.

AD 1106-Robert II, homosexual son of William the Conqueror is captured in battle and imprisoned for the rest of his life.

AD 1157-Homosexual Catholic Kings: Birth of Richard Plantagenet, a.k.a. Richard the Lion Hearted, Richard I, King of England and Duke of Aquitaine. His lover for many years is Philip, King of France. He is one of the era's most widely respected, but ruthless generals, and produces no heirs, eventually his loathsome brother John ascends to the British throne. The result is the Magna Carta, which gives basic rights to the people and is loathed and detested by the Pope.

AD 1182- The senseless massacres of Jews takes place in the First Crusade, which destroys entire Jewish communities in Mainz, Speyer, Worms, Cologne and other major Christian cities. A Jewish chronicler reports, "The enemies stripped them naked and dragged them off, granting quarter to none, save those few who accepted [Christian] Baptism. The number of the slain was eight hundred in these two days.”

~Rüdiger, Bishop of Speyer.

The calling of Pope Urban II to free Jerusalem from the infidels is but a farce to rid Christianity of all of its adversaries. The chronicler Guibert de Nogent reports that the Rouen Crusaders said, “We desire to go and fight God's enemies in the East; but we have before our eyes certain Jews, a race more inimical to God than any other.” ~The Christian chronicler Guibert de Nogent's report on the Rouen Crusaders.

The Jews are exiled from France by Philip Augustus.

AD 1184-Carthusians, a monastic order founded by Saint Bruno who retired with six companions to the solitude of the valley of Chartreuse, near Grenoble, living as hermits, wearing rude clothing and eating vegetables and coarse bread. “Pious men eat what the brilliant forces of nature leave over them after the offering. But those ungodly, cooking good food, sin as they eat it.” ~The Bhagavad Gita.

“They cannot be righteous, nor can they touch Holy things, whose hands are stained with blood, or whose mouths are defiled with flesh.” ~Holy Bible.

After 1170, when the order receives Papal consent, it expands rapidly.

The Synod of Verona, 1184, imposed upon the Catholic Bishops the duty to search out the heretics in their dioceses and to hand them over to the secular power [by which the Church can deny complicity in case of any deaths]. Other synods, and the Fourth Lateran Council, 1215, under Pope Innocent III, repeated and enforced this diabolical decree, especially the Synod of Toulouse, 1229, which established Inquisitors in every parish [one priest and two laymen].

Pope Innocent IV sanctioned the laws of Emperor Frederick II and of Louis IX against heretics, torture was also applied in trials, and the guilty persons were delivered up to the civil authorities and in truth, then burned alive at the stake. The Church believed that the Bible gave them the right to burn their enemies at the stake, “Let burning coals fall upon them: let them be cast into the fire; into deep pits, that they rise not up again.” ~Psalms 140:10.

In the spring of 1535, on a beautiful sunlit May day, King Henry VIII will have four Carthusian monks taken from their incarceration at the Towers for denying his “Royal Supremacy,” tied to the hurdles at the Tower, and dragged by horses through the streets of London, then strung up on gallows where they were hung till nearly dead, cut down, revived with vinegar, castrated, disembowelled, and decapitated, after which their bodies were drawn and quartered and perched for public display.

King Henry VIII is a strong Catholic and believes in the Divine Rights of monarchs. There may be demon-possessed individuals, but Henry views the Biblical “Sons of God” as the ancient kings/rulers/princes. The “Sons of God” were supposed to teach mankind about the Mysteries of heaven and of earth, but later lusted after mortal women and defiled themselves through sexual intercourse. Enoch has recorded not only their Divine instructions, but also their subsequent fall from grace, and before the end they were indiscriminately enjoying virgins, matrons, men, and beasts. ~cf. Jubilees 4:15-22, Jubilees 5:1, and Genesis 24.

The early Sumerian king list names eight kings with a total of 241,200 years from the time when “The Kingship was lowered from Heaven” to the time when “The Flood swept” over the land once more “The kingship was lowered from Heaven.” ~Thorikild Jacobsen, The Sumerian King List, 1939, pp. 71, 77.

Fearful of sexual encounters and even the very thought of sex, there is in existence the confession of a member of the Carthusian Order in the monastery of Vallis Dei, near Séz in Normandy. He had every virtue, was earnest in his devotions, and practiced mortification to an even greater degree than was prescribed by the severe rules of the order. He rarely slept on the couch provided for each brother, but passed his nights in prayer on the steps of the altar. In the hair shirt he wore next to his skin, he cultivated lice and maggots so assiduously that they were often seen crawling over his face.

He scourged himself for every unhallowed wandering thought. But still the visions of sexual pleasures came to his mind. With all this laceration, the flesh would still assert itself, and he was tormented with evil desires which the sharp cords of the discipline failed to subdue.

When he is forced to make frequent visits on business to the neighboring town, he never leaves the gate of his retreat without lamenting and expressing the fear that he should not return to it in the same virtuous condition in which he left. Although he preserved his virginity to old age, he nevertheless continually accused himself of having committed every sin possible to man. ~From The Ten Commandments by Joseph Lewis.

End of the World: A document called the Toledo Letter appears and rapidly spreads throughout Europe predicting that an ominous conjunction of the planets signaled the imminent End of the World in September 1186. When the letter reaches the Archbishop of Canterbury, in England, it prompts him to order a 3-day fast. September 1186 came and went, but the World didn't End. This does not deter the letter's true believers who keep circulating the letter for several more centuries, after changing the Doomsday Date and a few other minor particulars.

AD 1085- Death of Pope Gregory VII, in exile at Salerno; the Papacy remains vacant till the following year.

AD 1086- The completion of the Domesday [Doomsday] Book, ~See v, 242. The Mahometans of Spain invite the chief of the Almoravides to assist them. ~Decline of the Moorish Power In Spain, v, 256.

AD 1088- Yusef is called into Spain by the Moorish princes, but their petty jealousies and discords render his assistance unavailing.

Church Support of Slavery: Equal rights, fair representation, just laws? For centuries the Vatican has supported slavery, and Pope Urban II, 1088-1099, creator of the murderous Crusades, orders that married priests who ignore the celibacy laws be imprisoned for the good of their souls, and that the wives and children of these married priests be sold into slavery, with the money to be given up to church coffers. Did not Saint Augustine write, "Slavery is now penal in character and planned by that law, which commands the preservation of the natural order and forbids disturbance." ~Saint Augustine, City of God.

AD 1089- King Henry IV excommunicated by Pope Urban II.

AD 1090- 1153-Bernard of Clairvaux, Saint Bernard, in Dijon, France, at twenty-three he announces to his family his intentions of joining the priesthood. His brother, the Count of Fontaine is appalled and tries to talk him out of it. Less than a year later, thirty-one members of the family join the Cistercian Order. At the age of twenty-five he is made Abbot at Clairvaux.

Saint Bernard is also the nephew of one of the original nine members of the Knights Templar, Andre de Montbard. Bernard, later appointed, drafts the rules for the Knights Templar [The Poor Fellow-Soldiers of Christ and the Temple of Solomon]

The Knights are officially recognized in 1128 by Pope Celestine II, and are sworn to poverty, chastity, and obedience. To ensure chastity the Knights sleep fully clothed and in lighted rooms. They are created to redeem a lawless class with St. Bernard calling them, "Christ's Legal Executioners." The Knights are absolved of their sins of killing so long as their enemies are also the enemies of the Church.

The Knights Templar bring back decks of numbered cards with individual pictures displayed on the backs from their Crusades. [The forerunners of Tarot Cards?]. ~cf. Exodus 22:18-20.

Saint Bernard is instrumental in the struggle between Pope Innocent II and the Anti-Pope Anacietus II. Innocent II wins with his support.

Prayer beads are introduced into the Church.

AD 1091- Yusef conquers Seville and Almeria Spain, sends Almoatamad to Africa, and becomes supreme ruler in Mahometan Spain.

AD 1094- Year of the Plague: Battle of Fidonach, "It is not possible to count the people it killed." ~Mercenaries Scottish History Timeline: 9th to 12th Centuries by Christine O'Keeffe, Ver. 1.1. Monday, February 16, 2004

AD 1095- 1270- Kings Philip and Henry are again excommunicated by Pope Urban II.

Henry of Besangon marries Theresa, daughter of Alfonso the Valiant, who erects Portugal into a county for his son-in-law.

Beginning of the Ten Crusades, first called by Pope Urban II, to restore Asia Minor to Byzantium and conquer the Holy Land from the Turks. "God wills it!" says Pope Urban II, and for nearly five centuries Religiously Instituted Wars will commence by the Order by the Pope at the Council of Clermont, France, 1095, for the liberation of the Holy Lands held by Infidels, and the Vicar of Christ creates the first organized effort of the West Byzantine after Emperor Alexius Comnenus I requests help.

Fourteen Bishops, two hundred-fifty Archbishops, four hundred Abbots, and a multitude of knights and their entourage are present when Pope Urban makes the announcement. The Christian soldiers will hack their way to Jerusalem, indiscriminately killing the Jews ecstatically as the Church will then seize their properties to reward the supporters of Christianity. "Let those who have hitherto been robbers now become soldiers." ~ Pope Urban II addressing his gangsters.

The Jew hating Pope Urban II will issue an edict blaming the Jews for the death of Christ, the Savior, which ruling the Papacy will not overturn for more than eight hundred years [in the 1960's]. The following year, large numbers of peasants, with some knights among them, with the Christian vanguard led by Walter the Penniless make their way toward Jerusalem massacring more Jews in the Rhineland as they make their way to Jerusalem.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

Eight hundred Jews perish in Worms, and more than a thousand Jews die in Mainz and are buried in mass graves. In all, five thousand Jews are killed in the Rhineland. Walter's ruthless Catholic army is not stopped until Muslim forces in Dorylaeum, in Asia Minor, defeat them, but two other Christian armies will follow him continuing on toward Jerusalem, which they reach in 1099.

The Council of Clermont is famous due to the concourse of both French and German Bishops, and of monarchy as well. Having arranged the matters relating to the Church, the Lord Pope went forth into a specified spacious plain, for no building was large enough to hold all the people present.

The Pope then, with pleasant and persuasive eloquence, addressed those attending saying: "Oh, race of Franks, race from across the mountains, race beloved and chosen by God, as is clear from many of your works, set apart from all other nations by the situation of your country as well as by your Catholic faith and the honor, which you render to the Holy Church: to you our discourse is addressed, and for you our exhortations are intended. We wish you to know what a grievous cause has led us to your country, for it is the imminent peril threatening you and all the faithful, which has brought us hither."

This speech by Pope Urban II, a speech rich in racial intolerance, bigotry and religious prejudice will forever change mankind and the way he sees others. For this religious hatred will manifest itself in the 20th century in the deaths of millions of Jews and in the 21st century against the detestation of all who are non-Catholics, especially those of the Islamic Faith. Reciprocating itself in the deaths of innocent thousands in the September 11th destruction of the World Trade Center in New York City, in 2001.

"From the confines of Jerusalem and from the city of Constantinople a grievous report has gone forth and has repeatedly been brought to our ears; namely, that a race from the kingdom of the Persians, an accursed race, a race wholly alienated from God, 'a generation that set not their heart aright, and whose spirit was not steadfast with God,' has violently invaded the lands of those Christians and has depopulated them by pillage and fire. They have led away a part of the captives into their own country, and a part they have killed by cruel tortures. They have either destroyed the churches of God or appropriated them for the ties of their own religion. They destroy the altars, after having defiled them with their uncleanness... The kingdom of the Greeks is now dismembered by them and has been deprived of territory so vast in extent that it could not be traversed in two months' time."

This speech is primarily directed against the Muslims, however, this did not stop the obedient Christians from venting their anger and vengeance against the Jews along the way to Jerusalem.

"On whom, therefore, is the labor of avenging these wrongs and of recovering this territory incumbent, if not upon you, you, upon whom, above all other nations, God has conferred remarkable glory in arms, great courage, bodily activity, and strength to humble the heads of those who resist you. Let the deeds of your ancestors encourage you and incite your minds to manly achievements: the glory and greatness of King Charlemagne, and of his son Louis, and of your other monarchs, who have destroyed the kingdoms of the Turks and have extended the sway of the Holy Church over lands previously Pagan. Let the holy Sepulcher of our Lord and Savior, which is possessed by the unclean nations, especially arouse you, and the Holy places which are now treated with ignominy and irreverently polluted with the filth of the unclean. Oh, most valiant soldiers and descendants of invincible ancestors, do not degenerate, but recall the valor of your progenitors."

"But if you are hindered by love of children, parents, or wife, remember what the Lord says in the Gospel, He that loveth father or mother more than me is not worthy of me."

The Pope is not beyond corrupting the Biblical Scriptures for the spread of the Faith. 'Every one that hath forsaken houses, or brethren, or sisters, or father, or mother, or wife, or children, or lands, for my name's sake, shall receive an hundredfold, and shall inherit everlasting life.' Let none of your possessions retain you, nor solicitude for your family affairs. For this land which you inhabit, shut in on all sides by the seas and surrounded by the mountain peaks, is too narrow for your large population; nor does it abound in wealth; and it furnishes scarcely food enough for its cultivators. Hence it is that you murder and devour one another, that you wage war, and that very many among you perish in intestine strife."

It is ironic, that here, the Vicar of Christ is calling upon the Catholics of the world to unite under one standard to murder those who differ with the Catholic Church, and further declares, "Let hatred therefore depart from among you, let your quarrels end, let wars cease, and let all dissensions and controversies slumber. Enter upon the road to the Holy Sepulcher; wrest that land from the wicked race, and subject it to yourselves. That land which, as the Scripture says, 'floweth with milk and honey' was given by God into the power of the children of Israel. Jerusalem is the center of the earth; the land is fruitful above all others, like another paradise of delights. This spot the Redeemer of mankind has made illustrious by his advent, has beautified by his sojourn, has consecrated by his passion, has redeemed by his death, has glorified by his burial."

"This royal city, however, situated at the center of the earth, is now held captive by the enemies of Christ and is subjected, by those who do not know God, to the worship of the heathen. She seeks, therefore, and desires to be liberated and ceases not to implore you to come to her aid. From you especially she asks succor, because, as we have already said, God has conferred upon you above all other nations great glory in arms. Accordingly, undertake this journey eagerly for the remission of your sins, with the assurance of the reward of imperishable glory in the Kingdom of Heaven."

When the impudent impetuosity of Pope Urban II, 1088-1099, gently says these and many similar things, he so centered on one purpose, the desires of all who were present, that all cried out, "It is the will of God! It is the will of God!"

So begins centuries of devastating bloodshed, mayhem, and religious persecution all across Europe and the Middle East in the name of God. Then the revered Roman Pontiff having heard that, lifted up his eyes to heaven, giving thanks to God and, commanding silence with his hand, will proclaim Scripture is justification for the mass murders of all who will not succumb to the will and authority of the Church, "Most beloved brethren, today is manifest in you what the Lord says in the Gospel, 'Where two or three are gathered together In My Name, there am I in the midst of them; 'for unless God had been present in your spirits, all of you would not have uttered the same cry; since, although the cry issued from numerous mouths, yet the origin of the cry was one. Therefore I say to you that God, who implanted this in your breasts, has drawn it forth from you. Let that then be your war cry in combats, because it is given to you by God. When an armed attack is made upon the enemy, let this one cry be raised by all the soldiers of God: 'It is the will of God! It is the will of God!'"

Are the Christians any different from the religious Muslim fanatics they claim to hate? "And we neither command nor advise that the old or feeble, or those incapable of bearing arms, undertake this journey. Nor ought women to set out at all without their husbands, or brothers, or legal guardians. For such are more of a hindrance than aid, more of a burden than an advantage. Let the rich aid the needy; and according to their wealth let them take with them experienced soldiers. The priests and other clerks, whether secular or regular, are not to go without the consent of their bishop; for this journey would profit them nothing if they went without permission. Also, it is not fitting that laymen should enter upon the pilgrimage without the blessing of their priests."

"Do we not see with how great a booty of gold and silver and garments Cyprian, doctor suavissimus, came forth out of Egypt, and likewise Lactantius, Victorinus, [Saint] Optatus, [Saint] Hilary?" ~Saint Augustine, De Doctrina Christ., xl.

*"Whoever, therefore, shall determine upon this Holy pilgrimage, and shall make his vow to God to that effect, and shall offer himself to him for sacrifice, as a living victim, holy and acceptable to God, shall wear the sign of the cross of the Lord on his forehead or on his breast. When, indeed, he shall return from his journey, having fulfilled his vow, let him place the cross on his back between his shoulders. Thus shall ye, indeed, by this twofold action, fulfill the precept of the Lord, as he commands in the Gospel, 'He that taketh not his cross, and followeth after me, is not worthy of me.'" ~Source: Robinson, James, ed. Readings in European History. Boston & New York: Ginn & Co., 1904, Pope Urban's Clermont Address, Microsoft Encarta Encyclopedia, 1998 Edition.*

The Pope asks European Monarchs to provide Financial Aid as well as soldiers in the freeing of the Holy Lands. It is said that the Crusades were a covert act for the suppression of Scriptures said to be in the hands of the Moslems.

The Church does not intend to save these works, but to destroy them, for the foundations of these early writings are in direct conflict with the decided interpretations and declared edicts of Church doctrine. It can be shown that Pope Clement I [88-97] in his Letters to Theodore, is not only prepared to lie regarding certain Gospels but also advises others to deny their existence.

The Gospels as presented by the New Christians is hypocrisy elevated to the highest level by rewriting history, destroying history, and using verbal skills heretofore unmatched in the obfuscation of the True Teachings of their alleged Messiah.

A Messiah was expected every 600 years, and Jesus appeared on the scene at the time when one was expected. This was a great inducement to the Jews to accept Jesus, if he could but show proofs of his divine mission, which he was unable to do at the time.

The Christians were to the Essenes what the Essenes were to their predecessors, the Buddhists of Egypt and the Jews, and what these were to the Brahmins, Egyptians, Babylonians, and Akkadians. As each Messiah was accepted, the old legends were repeated with slight alterations, and so became part of the new revelation. The Essenes had a full hierarchy, similar to that of the present Catholic Church, Bishops, Priests, Deacons, etc., and they continued to worship Serapis, a Sun God, long after they became followers of Jesus.

The Emperor Hadrian, in a letter to the Consul Servanus, writes: "There are there [in Egypt] Christians who worship Serapis and devoted to Serapis are those who call themselves 'Bishops of the Christ.'" ~From: Scriptores Historiae Augustae.

In contrast to the great antiquity of the sacred books and theologies of Paganism, we have the Gospels, which, were not written by the persons whose names they bear, being written many years after the lifetime of the reputed writers, and rendered almost undecipherable by the numerous additions and erasures by alleged God fearing men.

In Florence, vendors often sold beautifully garnished religious books, "The prices offered were sufficient to stimulate the search and zeal for them. We learn that in the year 1400, 'On the square of the duoma a spacciatore was established whose business was to sell manuscripts, often full of mistakes and blunders.' Pope Nicholas V, before he became Pope, was nicknamed 'Tommaso the Copyist.' He is said to have presented to the Vatican library as a gift five thousand volumes of his own creation [Is one to assume accurate copies? How many were interpolations? How many were Forgeries [of part, or entire texts]? Etc.]" ~Statistical Method Proves Cicero Work Is A Forgery, <http://www.tcnj.edu/~colrel/releases/1999/cicero.html>

"It is certain that the New Testament was not written either by Christ or his Apostles, but a long time after them, by some unknown persons... Besides these Gospels, there were many more which were subsequently deemed Apocryphal." ~Bishop Faustus.

Yet the kind Bishop is content to take these writings as inspired, palming them off to the unsuspecting Christians as true, though they were not written by the persons whose names were attached to them, and therefore are admitted forgeries! The prevaricating Eusebius relates the story of King Abgarus writing a letter to Jesus, and of Jesus' response, in writing [Letters of Jesus].

This letter, attributed to the Lord, Jesus Christ, is documented in records that in his day a copy of the letter was to be found among the archives of Edessa. Abgarus, King of Osroene, which was a small country in Mesopotamia, who writes from Edessa, the capital, to our Lord, asking for healing and offering Him protection. Our Lord sends back a short letter saying that He cannot leave Palestine, but that, after His ascension, a messenger will come and heal Abgarus. The letters are obviously spurious. Osroene was actually Christianized about the beginning of the 3rd century, and the legend took shape and received official sanction in order to show that the country had received the Gospel at a much earlier date. ~Eusebius, Historia Ecclesiastica, vol. I, pg. 13, Apocryphal Epistles by John Macartney Wilson, International Standard Bible Encyclopaedia.

"The Eusebians... Sometimes named the very time when, the place where, and the person by whom they [the forms of doxology: liturgical expressions to describe God] were first introduced... Thus Philoflogius, a writer of that very age, assures us in 'Photius' Extracts,' that in 348 C.E., or thereabouts, Flavianus, Patriarch of Antioch, got a multitude of monks together, and did there first use this public doxology, 'Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Spirit. And regarding the alteration of the Bible based on liturgical use, There are two or three insertions in the New Testament, which have been supposed to have their origin in ecclesiastical usage. The words in question, being familiarly known in a particular connection, were perhaps noted in the margin of some copy, and thence became incorporated by the next transcriber; or a transcriber's own familiarity with the words may have led to his inserting them.' ~Whiston, Second Letter Concerning the Primitive Doxologies, 1719, page 17, and Hammond, Textual Criticism Applied to the New Testament, 1890, page 23. In addition, we have how the Empress Helena, Constantine's mother, went to Jerusalem to find the cross of Christ. She is said not only to have found the cross, but the nails with which Christ was attached. "Besides forging, lying, and deceiving for the cause of Jesus, the Christian Fathers destroyed all evidence against themselves and their theology, which they came across. Gibbon tells us that, in book VIII, Ch. 21, Bishop Eusebius says that he has related what might redound to the glory, and that he has suppressed all that could tend to the disgrace, of religion." ~Bank of Wisdom, Box 926, Louisville, KY 40201.

The Church in the 21st century will set about to ask forgiveness and redirect its teachings to its congregation [see Pope John Paul II AD 2000] Women are relegated to second class citizens by religious institutions taken over by misogynist men who know full well the import role women played not only in the life of Jesus and the early Church but also through participation, at one time becoming priests and Bishops. ~See When Women Were Priests by Karen Jo Torjesen, 1993.

"No gown worse becomes a woman than the desire to be wise." ~Martin Luther, 1521.

The Gnostic Gospels list five initiatory sacraments:

- † Baptism-where previous sins are forgiven
- † Chrism-the anointing of initiates
- † Eucharist-union of Christ with his disciples [bread & wine/body & blood]
- † Redemption-deliverance from sin
- † The Bridal Chamber-Union of God's Creations to obtain Knowledge of the Divine.

The matrimonial union and the reproductive powers is referred to in Psalm 89: 49, originally [literally]: "O my Adonis, where are thy endearments of old, which thou swearest for the sake of love, by the phallus, O Ammon?"

This had reference to the violent death of Adonis, who, at the autumnal equinox, is attacked by a wild boar, which tears away his membrum virile, and renders him impotent, until he is born again, when he acquires fresh powers, and grows in beauty and stature, ready to reunite with Venus at the vernal equinox.

Being "Born Again" is an ancient Mithraic rite, "At Rome, the 'New Birth' and the remission of sins by the shedding of bull's blood appear to have been carried out above all at the sanctuary of the Phrygian Goddess [Cybele] on the Vatican Hill, at or near the spot where the great basilica of Saint Peter's now stands; for many inscriptions relating to the rites were found when the Church was being enlarged in 1608 or 1609. From the Vatican as a center, this barbarous system of superstition seems to have spread to other parts of the Roman Empire. Inscriptions found in Gaul and Germany prove that provincial sanctuaries modeled their ritual on that of the Vatican." ~Dr. James Frazer, pg 230.

In ancient Rome and throughout Italy, people revered Egyptian deities such as Isis, Serapis, and the Anatolian Cybele. In the provinces some Roman soldiers and even tribunes revered the Iranian Mithra or local Gods, and only municipal dignitaries had, at fixed feasts, to honor the official Olympian Gods and the deified emperor, excluding those murdered for glaring crimes and vices as Caligula or dethroned as Nero.

~To The Path Breaker J.W. Ross, 1878, The Annals of Poggio Bruciolini and Other Forgers, by the Florintine forger Louis Paret, 1423-1429.

The two sexual powers of nature were symbolized respectively by an upright and an oval, sometimes a crescent or circle emblem, the letters T and O; the Phallus, Ashera, Priapus of the Jews, the Hebrew letter for which was a cross, or Linga, of the Hindus; and the Hindu Yoni or Unit, the Vulva or Pudendum femine, sometimes represented as the mountain of Venus, mons veneris.

The former was a representation of the Sun God in his majesty and glory, the restorer of the powers of nature after the long sleep or death of winter; and the latter, a representation of the earth, who yields her fruit under the fertilizing power and warmth of the sun, and when placed upon the Tau, T, or Phallus, formed the "Crux Ansata," or conjunction of the sun and earth, male and female.

The Phallus placed erect as a tree, cross, or pole, above a crescent or on a mons veneris, set forth "The marriage of Heaven and earth;" and, in the form of a serpent, represented "Life and healing," and was so worshipped by the Egyptians and Jews.

The two emblems of the cross and serpent, the 'Quiescent and energizing Phallus,' are united in the brazen serpent of "The Pentateuch" The conjunction of the two sexual emblems was represented in the Temple by the circular altar of Baal-Peor, on which stood the "Ashera," and for which the Jewish women wove hangings; and under whose protective influence Jacob, on his journey to Laban, slept.

It is naively reproduced in our modern "May Pole," around which maidens dance, as maidens did of yore. The Catholic priest little dreams that he wears a Phallic vestment at Mass, for upon his vestment is the Crux Ansata, ansalus = handle, his head passing through the oval or yoni, and the Tau, or cross, falling from the chest in front. The surplice, a figment of woman's dress, was used as a Phallic or Yonijic vestment. The word Ashera literally rendered, is pole, stem of tree, or Phallus.

The Jewish women made silver and golden Phalli. ~see Ezekiel 16:17.

The "Tree of the knowledge of good and evil," in Genesis, is actually the "Tree of life," or "Phallic pole," denoting the knowledge which dawns on the mind with the first consciousness of the difference in the sexes. The symbol of life, in cuneiform writing, was the conjoined emblem, the "Crux Ansata."

In ancient Rome, people still believed that phallic charms and ornaments offered proof against the 'Evil eye,' and such a charm was called 'Fascinum' in Latin, from the verb fascinare [the origin of the English word To fascinate], "To cast a spell," such as that of the 'Evil eye.'

Amongst the Romans, and their cultural descendants, in the Mediterranean nations, those who are not fortified with phallic charms had to make use of sexual gestures to avoid the 'Evil Eye.'

This is one of the uses of the mano cornuto [A fist with the index and little finger extended, the heavy metal or Hook 'em Horns gesture, which, today, is used by a famous Southern college football team] and the mano fico [a fist with the thumb pressed between the index and middle fingers, representing the phallus within the vagina]. ~Evil Eye From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia.

In 1946, the American magician Henri Gamache published a text called Terrors of the Evil Eye Exposed! [later reprinted as Protection against Evil], which offered directions to defend oneself against the evil eye. Many of the Egyptian gods are represented with this cross hanging from the hand, which is passed through the oval. It was customary to set up a stone, or "Hermes."

Hermes, or Mercury, is an ancient heathen deity, the symbol of Phallus, on the road-side, and each traveler as he passed paid his homage to the deity by either throwing a stone on the heap, or by anointing the upright stone with oil. Jacob "Rose up early in the morning, and took the stone that he had for a pillow, and set it up for a pillar, and poured oil upon the top of it."

In addition, there is scarcely a nation of antiquity, which did not set up these stones, as emblems of the reproductive power of nature, and worship them. The custom is found among the ancient Druids of Britain. The Greek historian, Pausanias, says: "The Hermiac statue, which they Venerate in Cyllene above other symbols, is an erect Phallus on a pedestal." ~Bank of Wisdom, Box 926, Louisville, KY 40201.

The discrepancies throughout the centuries of interpretations of Biblical lore stems from the Church acquiescing to its oligarchy, which seeks to protect the status quo over truth. In question are: "The Book of the Covenant" mentioned in Exodus 24:7, "Book of the Law," declared in Deuteronomy 31:9, "The Book of the Wars of the Lord," referred to in Numbers 21:14, and alleged to be also known as "The Book of Judges."

In "The Secret Book of James" the brother of Jesus, James, is the first Bishop of Jerusalem. We have Jesus speaking to his followers, "Pay attention to the 'Word.' Understand knowledge. Love life, and no one will persecute you, nor will any one oppress you, other than yourselves."

The Protevangelium of James is another highly Catholicized version of the Infancy Gospel, which may perhaps have preserved a small amount of of the original Nazorean tradition, but overall has little value in recovering the actual or historical Yeshu. In it the mother of John the Baptist is said to hide her son from Herod in a mountain cave.

The Protevangelium of James also speaks of the perpetual virginity of the mother of Yeshu and James. This is of course a Catholic gloss and has nothing at all to do with the facts. Its mentioning in this 2nd century text is its first known occurrence in writing. The Protevangelium Jacobi was. "An Apocryphal work by a fanciful fabulist, unhampered by knowledge of Jewish affairs, composed before the end of the 2nd century with a view to removing the glaring contradictions between Matthew and Mark," regarding the birth and life of Jesus Christ. ~Encyclopedia Britannica, vol. iii, 3343.

Yet even at the end of this century Catholic writers, such as Tertullian, 160-221 C.E., are still writing that Mary had her children normally, and that the brothers of Yeshu are his real and full biological brothers. Does this include the Church? Throughout the next fifteen hundred years we will find the Church as the major oppressor of mankind. In Acts we have missing "The Book of Samuel the Seer," "The Book of Nathan the Prophet," "The Book of Abijah the Shulamite," and "The Book of Shemaiah the Prophet." "The Book of Asmoneans" handed down from the Ptolemy Pharaoh, who gathered together all the Jewish Books of Law and of Chronicles that he may become wiser, nine hundred sixty-five books are brought to the king, "The Book of Jehu," "The Levitikon" a Gnostic version of John's Gospel [11th century] claim of Original Christians and secret teachings of Jesus, Yeshu the Anointed, to an inner circle of disciples. The "Two Books of Esdras" are included in the first Latin translation of the Bible and purged in later editions. Jesus is portrayed as a man and not the Son of God. His birth is claimed as illegitimate, and "The Two Books of Esdras," all systematically purged if not obliterated by destruction for not agreeing with Church Doctrine. "Wine is strong, a king is stronger, women are even stronger, but truth will conquer all." Is this referring to Mary Magdalene, known as the Apostle of the Apostles, and do women possess a power stronger than man does?

We also have missing from Biblical Scripture, "Assumption of Moses" and "Song of Deborah" from the Old Testament, "The Book of Enoch" what the world was like before creation. Enoch is alleged to have written three hundred and sixty-six books. This ancient mystical work is written in Aramaic, the language spoken by Jesus, around one hundred and fifty two years before his birth [160 B.C.E].

The Ethiopian version is known as I Enoch, and the Slavic version as II Enoch. "The Book of the Maccabees," a philosophical book of courage written a century before the advent of Christianity, The Bogie Man of modern nursery rhymes is identical with the Slavonic Bog, Bag-a-boo, or Bug-Bear; and the Buga of the cuneiform inscriptions, names of the supreme power. The "Rock of Behistan," "The sculptured chronicle of the glories of Darius, King of Persia," situated on the western frontier of Media, on the high road from Babylon to the eastward, was used as a "Holy of Holies."

It was named Bagistane, the place of the Baga, referring to Ormuzd, chief or the Bagas, the old Aryan Bhaga of the Rig Veda (Buddhist scriptures), "The Lord of Life," the "Giver of Bread," and the "Bringer of Happiness."

"Thus the same name which, to the Vedic poet, to the Persian of the time of Xerxes, and to the modern Russian, suggests the supreme majesty of deity, is in English associated with an ugly and ludicrous Fiend."

~from Doane, Bible Myths.

"The Book of Jasher," "Brontologion" "Testament to Levi" "and" "Acts of Manaseh." "The Book of the Generations of Adam" on the origins of man, believed to be a translation from the Babylonian poetic version of the creation of man. We also have missing: "The First Book of Adam & Eve" where the first recording of the killing of man is blamed on a quarrel between Cain and Able over their twin sisters [the birth of Cain & Luluwa and then another set of twins, Abel & Aklemia].

"This is the account of Adam and Eve. After they went forth out of paradise, Adam took Eve his wife, and went up into the east. And he remained there eighteen years and two months; and Eve conceived and brought forth two sons, Diaphotus called Cain, and Amilabes, called Abel." ~Ante-Nicene Fathers/Volume VIII/Apocrypha of the New Testament/Revelation of Moses From Wikisource, as translated by Alexander Walker.

"Others again declare that Cain derived his being from the Power above, and acknowledge that Esau, Korah, the Sodomites, and all such persons, are related to themselves [via incestuous relationships]. On this account, they add, they have been assailed by the Creator, yet no one of them has suffered injury. For Sophia was in the habit of carrying off that which belonged to her from them to herself. They declare that Judas the traitor was thoroughly acquainted with these things, and that he alone, knowing the truth as no others did, accomplished the mystery of the betrayal; by him all things, both earthly and heavenly, were thus thrown into confusion. They produce a fictitious history of this kind, which they style the Gospel of Judas." ~H. C. Puech and Beate Blatz, New Testament Apocrypha, vol. 1, p. 387.

The existence of a Gospel of Judas, which was originally written in Greek, was outlined by a Bishop, Saint Irenee [Irenaeus] when he censured the non-Cnonical text as heretical, "It's the only clear source that allows us to know that such a Gospel did exist...." ~Mario Jean Roberty, Bishop Irenaeus, Adversus Haeresis, written in Lyon, about 180 CE.

"In sum, in addition to the four Canonical Gospels, we have four complete non-Canonicals, seven fragmentary, four known from quotations and two hypothetically recovered for a total of 21 Gospels from the first two centuries, and we know that others existed in the early period. I am confident more of them will be found. For example, I have seen photos of several pages from a Coptic text entitled 'The Gospel of Judas' that recently surfaced on the antiquities market." ~Charles W. Hedrick, Bible Review, The 34 Gospels: Diversity and Division Among the Earliest Christian.

"And Eve was twelve years old when the Demon deceived her, and gave her evil desires. For night and day he ceased not to bear hatred against them, because he himself was formerly in Paradise; and therefore he supplanted them, because he could not bear to see them in Paradise." ~Ms. B. insert. "The Penitence of Adam and Eve" has been published in Latin by W. Meyer in the "Treatises of the Royal Bavarian Academy of Sciences," XIV, 3 (Munich, 1879). To these are added "The Books of the Daughters of Adam", mentioned in the catalogue of Pope Saint Gelasius in 495-496, who identifies it with the "Book of Jubilees", or "Little Genesis," which contains the law for celebration of the jubilee year, and also the "Book of Henoch." "... Bid the children of Israel that they must keep the year according to this number: 36 days, and it is a full year, and they shall not shorten its time." ~Jubilee 6, 29-32.

A Book written by Saint Matthew himself is, "The Gospel of the Birth of Mary," authenticated by various early religious Christian groups and forgotten by many. Saint Jerome, 4th century Father of the Church, had a copy of The Gospel of the Birth of Mary and so did the Bishop of Salamis, Bishop of Riez, and Austin [many letters written by these men often quote passages from the long forgotten Books]. Mary's father Joachim and her mother, Anna, are childless after twenty years, and are judged unworthy and cursed for having no children.

The high-priest Isachar of Jerusalem minces no words in his condemnation. Some religious leaders believe that this document may be a forgery in that in Verse 15 it states that Mary brought forth the 'Lord Jesus Christ who with the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost lives and reigns to everlasting ages.'

The Church's position is that of having to declare this book not canonical. In "The Gospel According to Thomas" discovered in 1947, amongst Nag Hammadi manuscripts found in Egypt, that sheds light on the early Christians, we have, "Gospel of Thomas."

The existence of the Gospel of Thomas has been known to scholars since the origins of early Christianity, but no [known] copies have survived any of the Christian puritanical purges, but the work is mentioned by early church fathers, and almost at all times in a negative context. Hippolytus mentions a "Gospel of Thomas" in his report on the Naassenes and quotes saying 4.2. ~Refutation, 223-235 CE.

Jesus says, "The man aged in days will not hesitate to ask a little child seven days old about the place of life, and that man shall live; for many of the first will be last, and they will become a single one." ~Gospel of Thomas 2 saying 4.

"The disciples said to Jesus, 'We know that you will depart from us. Who is to be our leader?' Jesus said to them, 'Wherever you are, you are to go to James the Righteous, for whose sake Heaven and earth came into being.'" ~Gospel of Thomas.

Of course, even Emperor Constantine will reject the "Gospel of Thomas," for it does not conform to what he as a Pagan believes to be to his benefit, nor does it conform to what he as the leader of the Christian Ecumenical Council have already accepted as the truth.

"I know of a certain Gospel, which is called 'The Gospel According to Thomas' and a 'Gospel According to Matthias', and many others we have read, lest we should in any way be considered ignorant because of those who imagine that they possess some knowledge of these." ~Saint Jerome's Latin translation. Note: Thomas is Aramaic for 'Twin.'

The Romish Church through Saint Thomas will again declare sex as sinful [II-II, q. cxlvii, art. 1], declaring

"The ardor of lust is dampened by abstinence from food and drink."

I believe they were just trying to impose upon the general population what they themselves underwent within the clergy [abstinence] and had nothing to do with religion per se. The official Bible is declared as the teachings of Peter and not James [J'acov], also called Barabbas [meaning, son of God] is the brother of Jesus, and his views differ from the other Apostles.

Earthen jars are discovered by a shepherd boy in a cave near Qumran containing documents that are believed to date back as early as 68 C.E. The Jewish revolt occurred in AD 66 and again in AD 114 and it is thought that the early followers of Christianity hid their sacred manuscripts in anticipation of being implicated in the revolt and having their history destroyed. The works are probably of the Essene [same religious sect as Joseph, father of Jesus]

Josephus says that at that time a terrible commotion was stirred up throughout all Syria in consequence of the revolt of the Jews, and that everywhere the latter were destroyed without mercy, like enemies, by the inhabitants of the cities, "So that one could see cities filled with unburied corpses, and the dead bodies of the aged scattered about with the bodies of infants, and women without even a covering for their nakedness, and the whole province full of indescribable calamities, while the dread of those things that were threatened was greater than the sufferings themselves which they anywhere endured." -Prolegomena: The Life and Writings of Eusebius of Caesarea: Testimonies of the Ancients Against Eusebius, Chapter XXVI, The Jews, Afflicted with Immense Evils, Commenced the Last War Against the Romans.

The Tenth Roman Legion is stationed in the area at this period of time and is ruthless in dealing with the zealots [Jews] for revolting against the Roman Empire. In the documents found we have the Chrēstos [one who aspires to divine truth] is separate and distinct from Christos [the anointed one who filled with is filled with the specter of truth]. Both words are derived from the ancient Greek language.

"The Great Questions of Mary" is purported to be the inner mystery of the Jesus movement and their sensual natures. "The Testaments of the Twelve Patriarchs." "Thomas's Gospel of the Infancy of Jesus Christ," is translated and published in 1697 by professor Henry Sike, Professor of Oriental Languages at Cambridge. It is read and distributed by the Gnostics at the turn of the 2nd century. Condemned in 1599 by a synod at Angamala in Malabar. Jesus is circumcised at eight days of age, as is Jewish custom.

The Magi are said to have been given the swaddling cloth of the baby Jesus and upon their return they have a feast whereupon the swaddling cloth becomes consumed from a nearby fire, but miraculously it is not damaged.

The child Jesus is portrayed as a frolicsome, lively, and sometimes mischievous child as any other child except that he has healing capabilities. Missing: "The Gospel of Barnabas," which is accepted by both Origen and Saint Jerome, ancient Fathers of the Church as being authentic but later denied by the Holy Mother the Church.

Origen, 185-254 C.E., speaks of having read a writing of James, perhaps the Protevangelium of James, for Origen declares that Yeshu was not a man, but something Divine. He also says that the brothers of Jesus were the sons of Joseph from another wife whom he had married before Mary.

"Thou shall not make to thyself any image of those things which are in heaven nor of those things which are under the Heaven..." ~The Gospel of Barnabas, Verse 33.

Many of the so-called Gnostic Books are denied by the Roman Church due to their inflammatory nature or denial of existing Doctrines. The Gospel of Barnabas reiterates the making of idols [a lucrative business for the Church, image worshiping is accepted because many pagan religions in their conversion to Christianity had idols which were worshiped and the replacement of these idols with Christian replacements makes it easier to accept the new faith] and the creation of God in the image of man.

We also have the claim from Jesus himself that, "... The promise was made in Ishmael, not in Isaac." Remember, Ishmael is already seven years old when God asks Abraham, who is neither Jewish nor Christian, to make the ultimate sacrifice, his first-born son. Was this choice of first born later changed later by Church doctrine? Satan judges man to be more despicable and lowly than himself and rebels against God for treating man so just.

are witness... Cursed be every one who shall insert into my sayings that I am the Son of God."

~The Gospel of Barnabas.

The Catholic encyclopedia imputes several of their early Christian Fathers as liars, and a robust misgiving suggested as to Paul's 'Inspired Epistle' to the Hebrews, which modern historian also attribute as another forgery, along with the admission of a forged Epistle of their Saintly Barnabas. In the Gospel of Barnabas we also have Jesus saying, "And ye; what say ye that I am?" and Peter answers, "Thou art Christ, Son of God." And Jesus is angered and with this and rebukes him.

"The Protevangelion," original translation in Hebrew, an historical account of the birth of Jesus and the Virgin Mary, said to have been written by Saint James the Lesser. The Fathers of the Church allude to it in their early correspondences. Joseph, father of Christ, is said to be a widower with children. In the Christian version, Matthews 13:55-65, we have the names of Jesus' five stepbrothers, but not the name of his sister[s].

In Mark 6:3, however, we have the names of James, Joseph, Judas, and Simon as being the brothers of Jesus, which some allege to be in name only as in a brotherhood. As Mark also claims the sisters of Jesus are also with him. "The Epistle of Paul the Apostle to the Laodiceans" is highly respected by learned men of many denominations, and Paul asks that the converts to the new faith attain a perfect knowledge of [his] truth. In "The Essene Gospel of John," Jesus says, "So I tell you truly, suffer the angel of water to baptize you also within, that you may become free from all your past sins..."

"Be gone and depart from me, because thou art the devil and seekest to cause me offense." "Woe to you if ye believe this, for I have won from God a great curse against those who believe this." "As God liveth, I am not able to forgive sins, nor is any man, but God alone forgiveth... And he will execute vengeance against those who shall say that I am more than man." ~Jesus, The Gospel of Barnabas.

"The payment of debts is the casting from you of devils and diseases, and the healing of your body." "Happy are those that persevere to the end, for the devils of Satan write all your evil deeds in a book, in the book of your body and your spirit."

The Church, borrowing the Baptism from Pagan religions, does so for the sole purpose of facilitating conversion and assimilation of the heathens into the new Paganism called Christianity. "The priest recites another exorcism, and at the end of it touches the ear and nostrils of the person to be baptized with a little spittle, saying, Ephpheta, that is, Be thou opened into an odour of sweetness; but be thou put to flight, O Devil, for the judgment of God will be at hand." ~Bishop Hay.

"... Those who name themselves Bishop and Deacon and act as if they had received Authority from God are in reality waterless canals... They boast that the Mystery of Truth belongs to them alone. They have misinterpreted that Apostle's teaching and have set up an imitation church in place of the true Christian Brotherhood." ~The Apocalypse of Peter.

Who is Peter speaking of, Barnabas, James, Paul, or his own brotherhood of followers? Can the Church claim authority from Peter when he himself denies it exists? "The Last Gospel of Peter" and "The Psalms of Solomon" widely circulated by the church during the 1st century and then lost. "The Odes of Solomon" traditionally said to have been written by Solomon in praise of the Queen of Sheba and her charming demeanor. "The First Gospel of the Infancy of Jesus Christ," "The Wisdom of Jesus," "The Apocryphon of John," "The Lost Book of John" also known as the "Liber Secretum," "The Book of Gad," "The Secret Gospel of Mark."

In the "Acts of John" we have John spoken to by Jesus, "... I was afraid and cried out, and he, turning about, appeared as a man of small stature, and caught hold on my beard and pulled it and said to me: 'John, be not faithless but believing, and not curious.'" This lends credence to, "And he sought to see Jesus who he was; and he could not for the crowd, because he was low of stature."

For centuries theologians were perplexed as to who was short, Jesus or Zaccheus. ~Luke 19:3

"The Gospel of Philip" whereby Philip speaking of the relationship of Jesus and Mary Magdalene says, "... Christ loved her more than all the disciples and used to kiss her often on the mouth. The rest of the disciples were offended by it and expressed their disapproval. They said to him 'Why do you love her more than all of us?' The Savior answered and said to them, 'Why do I not love you as I love her?' Philip mentions this relationship on more than one occasion, "... The companion of the Savior is Mary Magdalene." "There were three who always walked with the Lord: Mary, his mother, and her sister, and Magdalene, the one who was called his companion. His sister and his mother and his companion were each a Mary." ~Gospel of Mary Magdalen.

Emperor Constantine adopted Christianity, as the official religion of his Empire, in order to gain a stronger control over the masses, "The name and significance of Jesus Christ carries great metaphysical power because of the importance of the message of 'Love' carried by this Master Teacher. People who are not practicing discernment and still viewing life from a black and white perspective, often resonate with the Truth of Love symbolized by Jesus and don't know how to separate the feeling of connection and Love associated with Christ Consciousness from the distortions and lies that became a part of Christianity because it was a state religion being used by governments, beginning with Rome, to control and manipulate the masses." ~Codependency Recovery: Wounded Souls Dancing in the Light, Chapter 14 Spiritual Manifesto.

The original Greek meaning is of a sexual nature of which many Christians find abominable that Jesus would associate with much less take up with this "Fallen Woman," which is a stigma created by the Church Fathers.

"Those who say they will die first and then rise are in error, they must receive the Resurrection while they live." ~The Gospel of Philip.

A fact long suppressed by the early Church Fathers. The Living Resurrection clearly refers to a Secret Truth or Mystery that is not revealed except to a chosen few, mysteries, which are kept from the flock. In the town of Saint Maximin in Provence, France, Mary Magdalene Day is celebrated every July 22nd. It is said that Mary Magdalene marries Jesus and travels to Gaul [now France] and resides with him in the countryside and they have children, their first child being a girl.

Needless to say, the Church as heretical also denounces "The Gospel of Philip" The term Christ is applied to all initiates of the new faith and the term being used in its time being equivalent to a sign of respect or "Sir." In the, "Gospel of Nicodemus," which is also known as, "The Acts of Pontius Pilate" is alleged to be a forgery created at the turn of the 4th century. The political ramifications of the Gnostics versus the Pauline Christians is an issue that causes some to resort to any means necessary to gain converts to their cause. In this book Jesus is confronted by Pilate and is accused of being a conjurer and putting a spell on Pilate's wife. Jesus replies by stating that his wife was born through fornication and because of her children were put to death in Bethlehem. "Favorite Pauline phrases and words are totally wanting... The extent and significance of this change in vocabulary cannot adequately be explained even when one assigns the fullest possible weight to such factors as change of amanuensis [copyist or secretary], situation or topic, lapse of time, literary fertility, or senile weakness." ~Moffatt, Ency. Bib., IV.

Evidently Jesus does not seem concerned about influencing people nor gaining favors, even upon the event of his being tried for crimes of suspicious nature. Christians, during this period are zealous in their efforts to confirm all non-believers of their faith and the truth of their religious beliefs with such frauds being of common practice during the first three centuries. Jesus is ultimately ordered to be whipped and crucified between Dimas on his right and Gestas on his left.

Many of these Lost Books of the Bible [and there are many more, however we may never know of many of them due to the Church's policy of Search and Burn and of destroying all documents in contradiction to what the self proclaimed leaders say is the truth] tell of a slightly different version than that of the Church as to what happened two thousand years ago.

Does the Church deny the authenticity of any of these extra-canonical documents? Pope Clement of Alexandria, who studied philosophy, before his conversion, in writing to Theodore of the Secret Gospel of Mark, states that Mark had traveled to Alexandria and while there added to his Gospel, "... Things suitable to whatever makes for progress toward Gnosis."

Pope Clement not only mentions the Secret Gospel of Mark, but also quotes certain passages. The writings of Mark [original manuscript] exist today, being made available only to those few who are initiated into the Great Mysteries at the church in Alexandria. "The sanctuary you expect is here, although you cannot recognize it." Clement believed that "Yahweh" and the God of the Greeks were the same and calls Plato

the "Attic Moses."

Jesus and Saint Paul would surely have been astounded by this theology. The word Crusades means, "Going to the Cross." In 1096 the first detachment, consisting of three hundred thousand men, headed by Peter the Hermit, an undisciplined motley group, ridden with criminals of all types commences their journey, which is met with outrage by the inhabitants they encounter along the way.

Contrary to what is portrayed in the movies, this group of misfits plundered and destroyed the lands all along the way to Jerusalem. Rumor had it that the Muslims swallowed their gold and other jewelry in times of calamity to hide it from their enemies and the Crusaders would tear open the stomachs of their enemies to examine the intestines for valuables. Unfortunately, this diverse group in their eagerness to free Jerusalem for their Christ also slaughters thousands of Jews.

The Roman Catholic Church has not been very patient with dissidents. The Jewish people having suffered immensely under the Church. Historically, the Jews have been subject to discrimination, stashed away in ghettos, deported, tortured, denied religious freedom, denied due process, and often times they were killed. Under these circumstances, the Catholic Church reaching out to the nations of the world and telling them that the Jewish religion is a fraud, was for the Jews tantamount to suicide.

The Jews worshiped God the Father, while their Christian counterparts worshipped God the Son, this slight difference is enough to justify killing the Jews on the way to Jerusalem. When the second Crusading group in 1099, one hundred thousand strong, is dispatched, the Crusaders are of more genteel upbringing, and accomplished in warfare such as knights and barons than the previous expeditions, and it is this noble group that finally captures Jerusalem after a siege of five weeks. However, they heap a vengeance upon their captives that is Un-Christian like in butchering the inhabitants.

To the Crusaders, Muslims and Jews are all enemies of God and the Jews die along with the rest on their way to "Save" Jerusalem. With the butchered bodies widespread in the streets Raymond of Aguiler, one of the Christian Crusaders, proclaims, "This is the day that God has made; we will be joyful and rejoice in it." ~Psalms 118:24.

The history of the Roman Church has been glorified in mysticism and fantasized heroes for centuries by Christian writers who amiably created their own history of what the Church should be. "Christianity, especially in Italy, where the spectacle of the Holy See inspired disgust, had been prostituted to the vilest service by the Church. Faith was associated with folly, superstition, ignorance, intolerance and cruelty. The manners of the clergy were in flagrant discord with the Gospels, and Antichrist found fitter incarnation in Roderigo Borgia than in Nero. The corruption of the Church and the political degeneracy of the commonwealths had quite as much to do with it as the return of heathen standards. Nor could the Renaissance have been the great world-historical era it truly was, if such demoralization had been a part and parcel of its essence. Crimes and vice are not the hotbed of arts and literature; lustful priests and cruel despots were not necessary to the painting of Raphael or the poetry of Ariosto." ~John Addington Symonds, quoted in Shadow of the Third Century: A Reevaluation of Christianity by Alvin Boyd Kuhn, PH. D.

AD 1096- The "Deicide charge" underlies the violent slaughter of the Jews in the name of Pope Urban's Holy Crusade. As the Crusaders marched into the Holy Land to liberate it from Moslem "Infidels," they also felt free to massacre the Jewish "Infidels" strewn in their path who "Obstinately refused to be Baptized in the name of Jesus Christ," and thousands of Jews are brutally massacred in Germany and France.

The Peasant's Crusade, under Peter the Hermit, departs for the Holy Lands, and on their way, they robbed and pillaged throughout their journey in Hungary, persecuting and murdering Jews wherever they found them loving each other and is instrumental in the beliefs of Bernard of Clairvaux, patron of Templars. Edgar, son of Malcolm, is seated on the throne of Scotland by Edgar Atheling with the assistance of an English army.

Pope Urban II holds a council at Bari to condemn the doctrines of the Greek Church.

AD 1099-15th of July, Friday, upon reclaiming Jerusalem, the Crusaders, kill every man, woman, and child in the name of God. One should remember that there were also some Christians living in this city. Financed by the monarchs of Europe, the Crusades are seen merely as another means to increase their personal treasuries and stay in the good graces of the Pope. Under Pope Alexander III, Canonization is reserved as a Papal exclusive right [the granting of sainthood].

The Jews, considered heathens, non-Catholics, and infidels, are slain on the way to Jerusalem. The Church justifying it by: in Luke Jesus says, "But those mine enemies, which would not that I should reign over them, bring hither, and slay them before me." ~ Luke 19:27.

And, John 15:6: "If a man abide not in me, he is cast forth as a branch, and is withered, and man gather them together and cast them into the fire, and they are burned." This statement is used by the Catholic Church to justify their appalling practice of burning Jews alive at the stake in the name of their benevolent and forgiving Jesus, the Christ.

Writers, more often than not, leave out the brutalities of the Christian Crusadees, "Piles of heads, hands, and feet were to be seen in the streets of the city. It was necessary to pick one's way over the bodies of men and horses. But these were small matters compared to what happened at the Temple of Solomon, a place where religious ceremonies were ordinarily chanted. What happened there? If I tell the truth, it will exceed your powers of belief. So let it suffice to say this much, at least, that in the Temple and porch of Solomon, men rode in blood up to their knees and bridle-reins. Indeed, it was a just and splendid judgment of God that this place should be filled with the blood of unbelievers, since it had suffered so long from their blasphemies. The city was filled with corpses and blood." ~Raymond d'Aguliers, chaplain to Raymond de Saint-Gilles, Count of Toulouse: Edward Peters, The First Crusade: The chronicle of Fulcher of Chartres and other source materials, p. 214.

The Catholic murderers see themselves as doing God's work [much the way Hitler defended his massacres in the 20th century], and best of all, all their past sins are to be forgiven by Pope Urban II, "Wonderful things were to be seen. Numbers of the Saracens were beheaded ... Others were shot with arrows, or forced to jump from the towers; others were tortured for several days, then burned with flames. In the streets were seen piles of heads and hands and feet. One rode about everywhere amid the corpses of men and horses. In the temple of Solomon, the horses waded in the blood up to their knees, nay, up to the bridle. It was a just and marvelous 'Judgement of God,' that this place should be filled with the blood of unbelievers." ~Raymond of Aguliers, describing the actions of the Christian Crusaders against Muslims and Jews in Jerusalem, 1099, from the works of Paul Halsall, 1999. The Church for centuries has perverted the words and teachings of the Jewish people. In tractate Sanhedrin 13 of the Talmud it is stated: "The righteous of all nations have a share in the world to come." The Rabbis saw God's love as available to all people, not only to Jews, but, according to the New Testament, Jesus says, the 'Dogs,' the non-Jews, must be satisfied with the crumbs that fall of the table.

Now compare this narrow minded view with the opinion of the Rabbis who Jesus hated so much and cursed so many times: Talmud Gittin 61a: "We are obligated to feed the non-Jewish poor in exactly the same way as we feed the Jewish poor."

It is also written at least three times in the Talmud, Baba Kama 38a, Avoda Zorah 3, and in Sanhedrin 59, that a non-Jew who studies Torah [the passages that apply to him] is equal to a high priest. ~From the works of Elyahu Silver & Rabbi Yitschak Goldstein of Jerusalem.

AD 1100-1159- Adrian IV, Pope 1154-59, is the only Englishman to ascend to the Papacy. He is born Nicholas Breakspear near St. Albans, Hertfordshire, and enters the monastery of Saint Rufus near Avignon, France.

The world is at its beck and call, and with its self-proclaimed power [via the forged Donation of Constantine], all non-Christian lands are susceptible to its power. Pope Adrian IV gives Ireland to the English in the middle of the 12th century, and Pope Clement VI ceded the Canary Islands to Spain in the 14th, and generous contributions by Pope Martin V and Pope Eugenius IV in the 15th century entitled Portugal to vast African lands.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

Adrian is appointed Abbot of the monastery in 1137, Cardinal Bishop of Albano 1150, and Papal Legate to Scandinavia 1152-54. He is unanimously elected Pope upon the death of Pope Anastasius IV [1153-54].

Pope Adrian confronts Arnold of Brescia, the Italian Monk and reformer who opposes the temporal power of the Papacy. King Frederick I seizes Arnold [with the Pope's approval], and turns him over to the Roman Curia for trial as a political rebel. Upon Arnold's execution in 1155, Pope Adrian IV crowns Frederick Holy Roman Emperor.

King Henry II of England asks Pope Adrian to grant him permission for the subjugation of Ireland. Because the previous Popes had claimed the "Islands of the Sea" by virtue of the forged "Donation of Constantine," Adrian denies Henry absolute possession, but permits him to occupy the island as a Papal Fief [the land is to be granted under the condition of paying homage and service to the Pope], which infuriates the King for it challenges his authority of "Divine Right."

But, the Papal Bull dealing with this matter, "Laudabiliter," and attributed to Pope Adrian, may have been a forgery, and the term "Vicar of Christ" is now used to describe the Pope during Adrian's pontificate. Pope Adrian IV says that a war commenced under the auspices of religion cannot but be fortunate.

AD 1100-1155- New anti-Popes arise on the death of Guibert [Pope Clement III], one of who assumes the name of Pope Sylvester IV.

William Rufus is accidentally slain; King Henry I becomes king of England; he renews the laws of Edward the Confessor and unites the Saxon and Norman races by his marriage with Matilda, granddaughter of Edmund "Ironside."

Arnold of Brescia, Italian religious and political reformer, philosopher, and Monk. Studied theology in Paris, where he was influenced by the French philosopher and theologian Peter Abelard. Returning to Brescia, Italy, where he preaches against the corruption and greed of the Roman Catholic Priests. He is opposed to the ownership of land by the church and leads the citizens of Brescia in an uprising against the authority of Pope Innocent II [1130-43], for which he is exiled to France in 1139.

Accused by Saint Bernard of Clairvaux of being a follower of Abelard [French philosopher and theologian], Arnold is condemned by the Council of Sens in 1140 and forced into exile in Zürich. He is forced to leave Zürich, Germany, in 1145 due to further political pressures and accusations against him by Saint Bernard.

In Rome 'Satan's Seat,' Arnold receives assistance in exiling Pope Eugene III. Under the protection of the dissatisfied nobility, Arnold assists in reorganizing the government of 'The City of God' for which Pope Lucius II excommunicates him.

"The Christian glories in the death of a Pagan because thereby Christ himself is glorified." ~Saint Bernard, Richard the Lionheart, J. Gillingham; 1989, quoted from Encarta Book of Quotations.

Arnold maintains his popularity with the masses and avoids additional reprisals. In 1155, following the Interdict placed on the city by Pope Adrian IV, Arnold flees Rome. He is ordered arrested by Frederick I, the Holy Roman Emperor, who returns to Rome and Arnold is condemned to death, and hanged.

AD 1101- The death of Prince Vseslav of Polock, an alleged Ukrainian werewolf.

AD 1102- Pope Paschal II obtains from Matilda a deed of gift of all her states to the Church.

AD 1105- 1181-Pope Alexander III forces King Henry II of England to do public penance for his alleged masterminding of the murder of Archbishop of Canterbury, Thomas à Becket, by four of Henry II's knights.

AD 1113- Pope Paschal II officially recognizes the Order of Knights of Saint John of Jerusalem.

AD 1116- In Europe, the Cronicum Scotorum records a famine in the spring so terrible that, "Aman would sell his son and his daughter for food and men would even eat one another, and dogs. All Laigin was almost emptied, and scattered throughout Ireland on account of the famine."

First Crusade: Christian Crusaders ruthlessly massacre all the inhabitants of Muslim Jerusalem.

AD 1118- The Bogomils are persecuted by the Roman Catholic Church, which persecutes the fundamentalists who preach against image worshiping and reject sacraments. Their leader is ordered executed by Emperor Alexius I Comnenus.

Icons and images are a financial blessing for the Catholic Church that earlier even allowed the sale and wearing of amulets and then reversed itself in 721 by no longer sanctioning the wearing of such items with priests under the penalty of excommunication and now sells religious idols on the Church steps. Religious statues and paintings are approved with restrictions.

AD 1118-Order of Knights Templar [The Order of the Poor Knights of the Temple of Solomon] established by Hugh de Payens [who is married to Catherine de St. Clair, a Scottish woman] Godfrey de St. Aldemar and André de Montbard [St. Bernard's uncle] Payen de Montdidier, Achambaud de St. Lamand, Gondemare, Rosal, Godefroy, Geoffroy Bisol, and later Fulk of Anjou and Hugh of Champagne.

Different from the Orders that are to follow them in history, the Knights Templar is a secret society with secret doctrines and initiation ceremonies.

All initiates must turn over all their possessions and properties to the "Order" upon acceptance. The never-ending quest of mystics; the Knights Templar, the Bogomils, and the Cathars infinite search for absolute knowledge is relegated by today's skeptics to a Quixotic fancy, having little to do with history, yet everything to do with an untold history, a history kept from public eyes, a history that is continually being written by the Church, the history of the eternal soul.

It is the thread, which the Vatican armies attempt to destroy, the Order of the Ancient Mysteries dating beyond the existence of a consciousness of the soul, Egypt and its Underworld, Babylonia with its God Creator, and the secret societies with their progeny, the Medieval Knights Templar.

Originally, the Knights Templar allowed women to join and become members, however the Church, through the Inquisition papers, has suppressed all information regarding this matter. Documents found have shown the names of many women initiates into the Templars during the first one hundred years of their existence [the rules regarding this Order are later changed].

A Rule is officially granted to the Knights on 31 January 1128, when the Council of Troyes is convened, presided over by the Cardinal of Albano [including Bernard] The Knights swear Alle giance only to the Pope and swear to conquer the foes of Christendom. Initially organized to protect pilgrims traveling to the Holy Land, Jerusalem [This characteristic of oath taking in secrecy is later to be their undoing]. An Order whose members were originally made up of poor knights who often had to ride two to a horse, they soon became rich after King Alfonso of Aragon, Spain, bequeathed them wealth.

By the end of the 12th century the Knights Templar numbering in excess of 30,000, are accused of heresy under Pope Clement V and of denying the Virgin Mary, Christ, and the Saints [except for Saint John the Baptist & Mary Magdalene]

Due to their encounters with various cultures and their worldliness the Knights may have adopted and practiced a Gnostic philosophy that the Church is always eager to destroy. With the financial wealth of the Templars comes a power that which rivals kings, queens, and the Church.

AD 1119-Upon the death of Pope Gelasius II, who reigned from 1118-19, Callistus II is elected his successor. He calls a Council at Reims in that same year 1119, whereby the lay investiture is condemned [there is considerable dispute as to who has the right to promote the clergy and make assignments] and King Henry and the Antipope Gregory VIII, who reigned from 1118-21, are both excommunicated [supposedly a fate worse than death].

Pope Callistus II has strong public opinion on his side and has the Antipope, Gregory VIII, imprisoned. A truce is reached with King Henry V; on September 23, 1122, whereby he signs the famous "Concordat of Worms," thus ending the investiture controversy and promising the church full freedom in its elections. 1123, Pope Callistus II calls the first Ecumenical Council of the West, known as the First Lateran Council. A page of medieval history, which still lingers in memoirs tells how, when a certain Pope was threatened, for the thousandth time, a corpulent Archbishop hastened to see him and assure him that his, the Archbishop's, five sons would fight and defend him.

AD 1123-Celibacy, The First Lateran Council under Pope Callistus II "Forbids any further marriage of clergy," Decree No. 1139. This decree does little to stop fornication within the Church and the Popes fathering children. Graft and corruption is the primary target of this Decree, but it has little effect upon those who deem their power irrevocable. The Council proclaims the Annulment of ordinances of antipope Gregory VIII [1118-21].

The Church abhors marriage and sex as an inherent weakness in man. A young Roman girl made a pilgrimage from Italy to Alexandria, to look at the face and obtain the prayers of Saint Arsenius, into whose presence she forced herself. Quailing beneath his rebuff, she flung herself at his feet, imploring him with tears to grant her only request, which was to remember her and to pray for her. "Remember you!" cried the indignant Saint. "It shall be the prayer of my life that I may forget you!"

The Abbé Isaac, seeing a footprint of a woman on the road, became terribly agitated until he destroyed it for fear that, "... If a brother seeth it, he may fall." ~See The Ten Commandments by Joseph Lewis.

AD1123-1190-Frederick I, Holy Roman Emperor & King of Germany, and of Italy believes that he was granted his title by God [Divine Right], is crowned Holy Roman Emperor by Pope Adrian IV [who had been previously reinstated to that position by Frederick prior to the coronation].

Frederick I creates a series of Antipopes to oppose the powers of the mighty Roman Catholic Church, but is defeated in 1176 and in 1177 he signs the Peace of Constance.

AD1123-Due to the massive corruption in the Church, Pope Calixtus II orders all marriages to priests to be broken hoping that this will alleviate one of the problems pervading the institute by removing the greed of the spouses.

AD 1124-30-Pope Honorius II gains the controlling bloc in eliminating the Monarch's appointment of clergy to Church positions. The Church is regaining its power and the pendulum is swinging in their favor. Pope Honorius II will send Cardinal John of Crema to England to see that his decree against marriage for clergy is carried out.

The Cardinal gathered the senior clerics and chided them vigorously for their evil ways, declaring that, "It was a horrible crime to rise from the side of a harlot, and then to handle the consecrated body of Christ." The clergy whom he had lectured, however, surprised him in his room later that night in bed with one of the local prostitutes. -De Rosa, p. 444.

AD1125-Abraham ben David of Posquières is a renowned scholar and Astrologer who debated the issues of free will and determinism.

AD 1126-98-Averroës; Abu al-Walid Muhammad ibn Ahmad ibn Muhammad ibn Rashd, is a Spanish-Arab whose beliefs and teachings are interpreted by medieval European cultures as metaphysical truths: God has no beginning, God is the Prime Move of the universe, and the soul emanates from a single Universal Soul. Islamic religious views are penetrating the Catholic faith and the Church is pressured to respond to the new philosophical and rational interpretations.

Averroës held that metaphysical [the study of existence and of knowledge] can be expressed in two ways: through philosophy, as represented in the interpretations of the Greek, Aristotle; and through religion, which is truth presented in a form that the commonplace person can understand. Averroës did not advocate the existence of two kinds of truth, philosophical and religious, his views, however, are interpreted that way by Christian thinkers, who call his teachings, "The Theory of Double Truth."

Averroës rejects the concept of a creation of the world in the history of time; the world, he maintains, has no beginning as God has no beginning [it always was and always will exist]. God is seen as the "Prime mover," the self-moving force that stimulates all motion and who converts the potential into the actual. The individual "Human Soul" stems from the "One universal soul." Averroës' annotations on the works of Aristotle are translated into Latin and Hebrew and greatly influenced the Scholastic school of philosophy in medieval Europe and the medieval Jewish philosophy.

His main independent work is, "Tahafut al-Tahafut," or the "Incoherence of the Incoherence," a rebuttal on the attack of Neoplatonic and Aristotelian philosophy by the Islamic theologian al-Ghazali. A genius, probably next to that of Aristotle, the fanatical Christian Spaniards burned all of his works, though Saint Aquinas was quite impressed by them, and Dante, in Canto IV, hails him as one of the greatest figures of his age.

Partly because the Italian poet, Dante, depicts him in Hell, Pope Clement V is the first Pope of the so-called 'Babylonian Captivity,' also known as the 'Avignon Exile' because the seat of the Papacy is set in the luxurious, but lascivious, Avignon, France, instead of Rome, but the Bishops love the socially decadent milieu and refuse to return to Rome.

Owing to the loss of his works and his need to avoid rousing the Moslem fanatics, who at one time also got him degraded and imprisoned, it is difficult to determine his precise position, but experts agree that he substituted a vague Pantheism or World Soul for Aristotle's impersonal God and he did not believe in personal immortality.

The Office of Peter will see its salvation through the condemnation of all who refuse her offer of conversion to the Universal Church.

From the Church that professes worldwide peace, "The custom of burning heretics is really not a question of justice, but a question of civilization." ~Saint Aquinas

"In order that nothing may be wanting to the felicity of the blessed spirits in heaven, a perfect view is granted to them of the tortures of the damned." ~Pope Saint Gregory the Great.

Lea, "Had argued that the bliss of the elect in heaven would not be perfect unless they were able to look across the abyss and enjoy the agonies of their brethren in eternal fire."

The Old Testament is replete with passages, which gave the Christians their sanction for every form of cruelty known to man.

"And if a man take a wife and her mother it is wickedness; they shall be burnt with fire....And the daughter of any priest, if she profane herself by playing the whore...shall be burnt with fire...." ~Old Testament. cf. Genesis 38:24.

Emperor Constantine, the first declared Christian Emperor, decreed that a slave who had intercourse with a free woman should be burnt alive. "It is not Christianity that has civilized Europe, but Europe--the complex of political and cultural forces--that has civilized Christianity." ~Robertson.

The translation of some of his works into Latin by Michael Scotus, for Emperor Frederic II, presented a great deal of influence in the cities of North Italy, and unknowingly was an important factor in the spread of 'Skepticism,' particularly as regards immortality, in them. ~See Renan, Averroes et l'Averroisme, 1852, and J. McCabe, Rationalists Encyclopaedia.

AD 1130-1143-Pope Innocent II declares that all marriages to priests shall become invalid. The Church's position is: "Illicit sex does not transgress the laws of celibacy, only marriage can do that." ~From Pg 149 of Explanations of Catholic Morals.

Evidently the Church has forgotten that Saint Peter was a married man and found no crime between his religion and marriage. ~1 Timothy 3:2, 4:1-3, Matthew 8:14, and Corinthians 9:5.

AD 1130-38- Pope Anacletus II had before his election supported the Popes in their fifty years' war for reform. Religious historians tell how he disgraced his office by gross immorality and by his greed in the accumulation of wealth.

There can be no doubt that he determined to buy and force his way into the Papal Chair. "On the death of Pope Honorius, two Popes, Anacletus II and Innocent II are elected and consecrated on the same day, by the opposing factions in the Sacred College. When Anacletus died, another Anti-Pope, Victor IV, is elected by one faction." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 1, 447, Forgery in Christianity by Joseph Wheless

AD 1135-1204-Moses ben Maimon, Cordoba, Spain, scholar, linguist, Jewish philosopher, speaks of Kabbalists concealing their works in "Secret code" and revealing Scripture through esoteric means influences such thinkers as Saint Thomas Aquinas and Saint Albertus Magnus. Maimon believed that the power of prophecy would return to Israel in 1210.

"For all these Albertus Magnus had opened the door to the rich treasure-house of Greek and Arabian learning." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 1, 449, 450.

The principal product of Christian erudition up to these times was the ludicrous lies, legends, saints and martyr tales. The voice of the Catholic Church admitting, "Needless to say that they do not embody any real historical information, and their chief utility is to afford an example of the pious popular credulity of the times." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 1, 131.

"Why an Encyclopedia in English should not say Albert the Great is not explained; possibly the epithet is less offensive to the eye in Latin, and this article is condensed (as the whole new edition of encyclopedias have to be) in a peculiarly clerical manner. The original writer had never properly informed the reader that Albert was so much indebted to Aristotle for his 'Science' that he was known to Catholic contemporaries as 'The Ape of Aristotle' and that he was apt to be so inaccurate that he described Plato (Who lived a century before the Stoic school was founded) as a Stoic. These things are sacrificed in the sacred cause of abbreviation but new compliments, such as that Bacon called Albert 'The most noted of Christian philosophers' are inserted to fill the gaps." ~From Joseph McCabe, Rationalist Encyclopedia.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

"Blessed Albertus Magnus," the contemporary of Roger Bacon, is "Accused of magic and of neglecting the sacred sciences... Albert respected authority and traditions, was prudent in proposing the results of his investigations... sometimes he hesitates and does not express his own opinion, probably because he feared that his theories, which were 'Advanced' for those times [when Church was far from hindering the pursuit of the sciences], would excite surprise and occasion unfavorable comment.' Among the products of his 'Magic,' lessed Albert 'Gives an elaborate demonstration of the sphericity of the earth... More important than Albert's development of the physical sciences was his influence on the study of philosophy and theology. 'All inferior [i.e. natural] setences should be servants [ancellas] of Theology, which is superior and the mistress' (Aquinas)." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 1, 265-6.

"Thus the Church thwarted and prevented what would have been the much earlier "Triumph of scientific discovery, with which, as a rule, ... The seats of academic authority had too little sympathy." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 13, 549.

Abbot Joachim of Fiore, 1135-1202, has an Apolyptic vision in which he compares Christendom to Babylon because everyone wants money, power, and worldly fame. Shortly after 1200, he speculated, two anti-Christian forces, possibly Muslims and heretics, would attack, defeat, and severely persecute Christians.

"The history of Spain, I think, is the darkest page in the history of the world. It would be simply infamous to hand those people back to the brutality of Spain, Spain has been Christianizing them for about four hundred years. The first thing the poor devils did was to sign a petition asking for the expulsion of the priests. That was their idea of the commencement of liberty." ~From the book, Our New Possessions, by Robert Green Ingersoll, Bank of Wisdom, Box 926, Louisville, KY 40201.

AD 1138-93-Saladin: Muslim leader, warrior, re-captures Jerusalem in 1187. Saladin is a soldier who is fierce in battle but respected by both Christians and Muslims for his honesty and bravery. Saladin and Richard I [Richard the Lion Hearted] call a truce to hostilities in 1192.

The coastal regions are given to the Christians and the interior lands to the Muslims. Christian Pilgrims are allowed to enter the Holy Land [Jerusalem] for worship.

AD 1139-The proclaimed "Official Catholic Celibacy Law" by Pope Innocent II. The Church claims that before this period the children of the Popes are not illegitimate, as it had not formalized its celibacy laws [one that I know of is proclaimed a Saint-Saint Silvirius, 536].

The Church's thinking is that Celibate priests would have no sons to inherit their property, so all properties and inheritances would revert back to the materialistic Church, ignoring the fact that many of the later Popes were not officially married when they fathered children.

However, the Church claims its right to deny marriage to the clergy is based on the Bible. If this is so, then this is just another claim to show how [again] the Church has re-interpreted the Bible throughout the centuries.

In addition, once the law came into affect, it was still ignored by their leaders. Decree of Celibacy by Lateran Council- Celibacy is first introduced to historians via Saint Clement I [Pope AD 92-101] who is credited with "The Second Epistle of Clement" known as "Two Epistles to Virgins" regarding Celibacy in the Church; it is considered a "State of Greater Perfection."

The issue of celibacy is mentioned by Paul the apostle in I Corinthians 7:8 "Now I say to the unmarried people, and the widows, it is well for them that they remain even as I am. But if they do not have self-control, let them marry, for it is better to marry than to be inflamed in passion." This is also the basis for the Church's stand against divorce. ~I Corinthians 7:10-17.

"To the married people, I give thee instructions, yet not I but the Lord, that a wife should not depart from her husband; but, if she should depart from him, let her remain unmarried or else make up again with her husband; and a husband should not leave his wife."

AD 1139-1173- Pope Eugenius III and Saint Bernard preach the Second Crusade.

Eleanor Plantagenet, daughter of Henry II, marries Alfonso VII of Castile.

AD 1141-All Christians are to believe in devils, witches and evil magic: Hugh of St. Victor writes to Didascalicon, which includes a strong denunciation of using or studying magic: "Magic was not accepted as part of philosophy, but stands with a false claim outside it; the mistress of every form of iniquity and malice, lying about the truth and truly infecting men's minds, it seduces them from divine religion, prompts them from the cult of demons, fosters corruption of morals, and impels the minds of its devotees to every wicked and criminal indulgence... Sorcerers were those who, with demonic incantations or amulets or any other execrable types of remedies, by the cooperation of the devils or by evil instinct, perform wicked things."

AD1143-Legend has it that Saint Malachy prophesied that there would only be 112 more Popes before the End of the World occurs. Pope John Paul II is the 110th, meaning that the world will end in the early 21st century according to Malachy. The last Pope will be called "Peter of Rome." ~from Skinner p.74-75. You may read more on this on the Internet at: www.newadvent.org/cathen/1227b.htm.

Pope John Paul II recently informed the world that Purgatory is still there waiting for us and he's made arrangements with the powers that may be to let us out early when we die. He claims that stopping smoking or drinking here in this world, even for one day, will allow us to smoke less when we die. Purgatory is allegedly located close to Hell, but no one knows where Hell is.

By believing in Catholicism and following the Pope's advice, we can get out of Purgatory sooner. The more you smoke in this world, the more you will smoke in the next, he claims. Judaism, Islam, and most of Christendom reject the concept of Purgatory. The Episcopal Book of Common Prayer condemns it as "Vainly invented" and "...Repugnant to the Word of God."

"Without fear of a Devil, does man still need a God?" ~E. Christopher Reyes.

AD 1144- The Second Crusade. The "Blood libel" myth for Christians theoretically begins with ritual murder charges in England in 1144; the myth harbors that anything related to the design that Jews murdered Christians, and used and/or drank their blood for various nefarious ritual purposes.

Christian crusaders were being brutally defeated upon the field of battle by the Muslims, armies in Edessa. European rulers began conceiving of a gigantic hoax upon which they could ever recover from their financial losses. Rumors are spread of a Christian King, of great wealth, who ruled in the East, and willing to come to the aid of the Crusaders; his name was Prester John.

The European monarchs deduced that if this Prester John did in fact exist, then he could help shift the tide of the wars in the Holy Lands in their favor, but twenty years passed without any sign of Prester John, and then, a letter allegedly appeared, addressed to the Byzantine Emperor Manuel Comnenus, which confirms that Prester John did actually exist! In this forged letter, Prester John describes his immense kingdom, which he states stretched from India to the land where the sun rises.

He writes of fantastic creatures inhabiting his land, creatures such as seven-horned bulls, birds so large that they could lift and kill an armored man, and horned men with three eyes in the back of their heads. Lastly, the letter claims that there was a fountain in his kingdom whose waters allowed men to stay perpetually young [Fountain of Youth]. The unknown author of the Prester John letter remains unidentified, though he was most likely a cleric who constructed its fantasies out of old legends [such as Alexander the Great's fabulous adventures in the East].

The letter was intended to offer hope to the Christian armies fighting the Crusades, and in this respect it succeeded, for even though the hope of winning was a false one, the hoax inspired a legend of Prester John, which lay like a heavy, inescapable darkness over the next four centuries of European exploration, and the quest for a mythical Christian kingdom tormented European explorers for centuries [e.g. Ponce de Leon's quest for the Fountain of Youth in the New World: America].

AD 1146-Bernard of Clairvaux, Saint Bernard, born in Fontaines near Dijon, France, a stronghold of the Cathars, begins preaching to gather recruits for the next Crusade [not everyone liked him, Bamber Gascoigne in his work The Christians pages 78-79, wrote of him, "He was aggressive, he was abusive...he was a devious politician who was quite unscrupulous in the methods he used to bring down his enemies."] Bernard receives such enthusiasm after his charismatic speeches that he writes the Pope, "...The countryside seemed deserted."

When heresy conflicted with "Roman Catholic Scripture," she obliterated not only the infidels, but also their written testimony. Even the Encyclopedias today, written after centuries of genocides against non-Christians, reflect mainly the Catholic version of the accounts of the Cathars and the Church's geocentricism, that all revolves around Rome.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

Promoted by King Louis VII the Second Crusade is launched. The exact number is unknown, but has been estimated as high as one million participants.

Led by Emperor Conrad III of Germany and King Louis VII of France, their efforts prove futile in their attempts to strengthen the garrison in Jerusalem. After delivering horrendous penalties and atrocities upon the former citizens of Jerusalem, Catholics neglect to mention the atrocities they committed against the Moslems before these brave converts of Islam finally fought back. The Moslems now fight with a unified resurgence that is unequaled in history.

"It was a commonplace of the jongleurs that the Crusader, if he escaped the perils of sea and land, was tolerably sure to return home a lawless bandit." ~Lea AD1147-1241-Ugolino de Segni, Italian, Pope Gregory IX [1227-1241] is the founder of the Inquisition. Inquisition; from the Latin inquirere, means to look at.

In 1231 Pope Gregory issues the constitution "Excommunicamus," which places all heretics [all non-Christians] under Papal Law.

The Church claims a right to protect its religious opinion [accepted doctrine] that is accepted as a gift from God, free from private judgment, and to be maintained at any cost.

End of the World: Gerard of Poehlde decides that the millennium started in 306 C.E. during Emperor Constantine's reign, thus, the world end should happen in 1306 C.E.

AD 1148-Second Crusade is a disaster. King Louis VII of France persuades St. Bernard to join the Crusades. Bernard urges the Crusaders to show their love for Christ by killing the infidels and rescuing the Holy Land. Compassion and forgiveness for his fellow man seems to have all but disappeared.

AD1151- The confessional is an invention of the Church that dates back only to the Middle Ages. Much of the outpourings to which a priest must listen to in his box are of the sexual type; of which, the Church, in fact, has created almost 100 different species of sexual sins.

The spectacle of a sex-starved or desexualized youngsters [young priests] absolving more or less worldly sinners from "Sins" that he cannot understand is at once humorous and pathetic. . . The chief purpose of the confessional is to enslave the believer to the clergy. ~Fifty Years on the Rationalist Front by Isaac Goldberg, 1936, Haldeman-Julius Company.

The confessional became at least as absolute and complete as was ever possessed by the Babylonian priests over those initiated into the 'Ancient Mysteries.' The clerical power of the Roman priesthood culminated in the erection of the confessional, which was itself borrowed from pagan Babylonia. The confession required of the votaries of Rome is unlike the confession prescribed in the Word of God. The dictate of Scripture in regards to the 'Confession' is, "Confess your faults one to another." ~James 5:16.

This implies that the priest should confess to the people, as well as the people to the priest, if either should sin against the other. This would never serve any purpose of 'Spiritual Despotism,' therefore, Rome, leaving the Word of God, had recourse to the Babylonian system. In that system, secret confession to the priest, according to a prescribed form, were required of all who were admitted to the "Mysteries," and till such confession had been made, no complete initiation could take place.

The 'Confession' was observed in Greece, in rites that can be clearly traced to a Babylonian origin: the Greeks, from Delphi to Thermopylae, being initiated into the 'Mysteries of the Temple of Delphi.' Their silence in regard to everything they were commanded to keep secret was secured both by the fear of the penalties threatened to a perjured revelation, and by the general Confession exacted of the aspirants after initiation, a confession which caused them greater dread of the indiscretion of the priest, than have him reason to dread their indiscretion.

The 'Confession' is also referred to by Potter, in his "Greek Antiquities," though it has often been disregarded. In his account of the 'Eleusinian Mysteries,' after describing the preliminary ceremonies and instructions before the admission of the candidates for initiation into the immediate presence of the divinities, Potter states, "Then the priest that initiated them called "Hierophantes" [the Hierophant], proposed certain questions, as, whether they were fasting, etc., to which they returned answers in a set form."

Questioning included, "Are you free from every violation of chastity?" and that not merely in the sense of moral impurity, but in that factitious sense of chastity which Paganism always cherishes.

"Are you free from the guilt of murder?" For no one guilty of slaughter, even accidentally, could be admitted till he was purged from blood, and there were certain priests, called Koes, who "Heard confessions" in such cases, and purged the guilt away.

The strictness of the inquiries in the Pagan confessional is implied in certain licentious poems of Propertius, Tibullus, and Juvenal. Wilkinson, in his chapter on "Private Fast and Penance," which, he says, "Were strictly enforced," in connection with "Certain regulations at fixed periods," has several classical quotations, which clearly prove whence the Church derived the kind of questions which have stamped that character of obscenity on its confessional, as exhibited in the notorious pages of Peter Dens.

The pretence under which this auricular confession was required, was, that the solemnities to which the initiated were to be admitted were so high, so heavenly, so holy, that no man with guilt lying on his conscience, and sin un-purged, could lawfully be admitted to them.

For the safety, therefore, of those who were to be initiated, it was held to be indispensable that the officiating priest should thoroughly probe their consciences, lest coming without due purgation from previous guilt contracted, the wrath of the Gods should be provoked against the profane intruders. This was the pretence; but when we know the essentially unholy nature, both of the gods and their worship, who can fail to see that this was nothing more than a pretence; that the grand object in requiring the candidates for initiation to make confession to the priest of all their secret faults and shortcomings and sins, was a ruse to place man entirely in the power of those to whom the inmost feelings of their souls and their most important secrets were confided.

Now, for the very same purposes, has Rome erected the Confessional. Instead of requiring priests and people alike, as the Scripture does, to "Confess their faults one to another," when either have offended the other, it commands all, on pain of perdition, to Confess to the priest, whether they have transgressed against him or no, while the priest is under no obligation to confess to the people at all.

And, without such a confession, in the Church of Rome, there can be no admission to the Sacraments, any more than in the days of Paganism there could be admission without confession to the benefit of the 'Mysteries.' Now, this 'Confession' is made by every individual, in secrecy and in solitude, to the priest sitting in the name and clothed with the alleged authority of God, vested with the power to examine one's conscience, to judge the life, to absolve or condemn according to his arbitrary will and pleasure.

This is the grand pivot on which the whole "Mystery of Iniquity," as embodied in the Papacy, and their erotic vagrancies, has turned; and wherever it is submitted to, admirably does it serve the design of binding men in abject subjection to the priesthood and the almighty Church, as the clergy, claim to be the sole depositaries of the true faith of Christianity, just as the Chaldean priests were believed alone to possess the key to the understanding of the 'Mythology of Babylon.' ~The Ultimate Deception-The Two Babylons or The Papal Worship Proved To Be The Worship of Nimrod and His Wife, By The Late Rev. Alexander Hislop.

The Law of the Seal of Confession:

"In the 'Decretum' of the Gratian who compiled the edicts of previous councils and the principles of Church law, which he published about 1151, we find (secunda pars, dist. VI, c. II) the following declaration of the law as to the seal of confession: 'Deponatur sacerdos qui peccata penitentis publicare præsumit,' i.e., 'Let the priest who dares to make known the sins of his penitent be deposed,' and he goes on to say that the violator of this law should be made a life-long, ignominious wanderer. Canon 21 of the Fourth Lateran Council [1215], binding on the whole Church, lays down the obligation of secrecy in the following words: 'Let the priest absolutely beware that he does not by word or sign or by any manner whatever in any way betray the sinner: but if he should happen to need wiser counsel let him cautiously seek the same without any mention of person. For whoever shall dare to reveal a sin disclosed to him in the tribunal of penance we decree that he shall be not only deposed from the priestly office but that he shall also be sent into the confinement of a monastery to do perpetual penance.' [see Hefele-Leclercq, 'Hist. des Conciles' at the year 1215; also Mansi or Harduin, 'Coll. Conciliorum.'] It is to be noted that neither this Canon nor the Law of the 'Decretum' purports to enact for the first time the Secrecy of Confession. In a context cited further on the great fifteenth-century English canonist, Lyndwood, speaks of two reasons why a priest is bound to keep secret a confession, the first being on account of the sacrament because it is almost [quasi] of the essence of the Sacrament to keep Secret the Confession." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. XIII, Cf. also Jos. Mascaridus, De probationibus, Frankfort, 1703, arg. 378.

Men and women burned alive under the rule of the 45 Inquisitor-Generals, 35,534; burned in effigy, 18,637; condemned to other punishments, 293,533. Total sacrificed to maintain the blessings of Christianity, 347,704. In other words, these worthy followers of 'The Lamb,' the zealous imitators of him who 'came not to send peace, but a sword;' to 'send fire on the earth' and 'not peace, but rather division,' burned no less than 35,534 men and women. ~Saladin, Women, vol. II.

Priestly sins have existed since the conception of the Church, founded upon corrupted and perverted Rome, "Rapidly the Christian priesthood converted the convents into brothels; and, not content with debauching the 'Brides of Christ,' they converted into harlots the wives of men; and, by means of the machinery of the confessional, they destroyed the chastity of the wives of the laity, and rendered all marriage simply poly-androus... The priests had harlots, concubines, and mistresses in every town; and the Church, recognizing these illicit connections, allowed the Bishops to extract money from the priests in the shape of a tax on their concubines." ~From the works of H. Middleton.

"Even the mild Erasmus declared that the licentiousness of the 'Clergy has debauched and turned into poor profligates 100,000 women in England ... Yet who is he, though he be never so much aggrieved, who dare lay to their charge, by any action at law, even the leading astray of a wife or a daughter? ... If he do, he is by-and-bye accused of heresy." ~See Saladin's citation of Erasmus in The Confessional.

"As confession and penance are easier than the extirpation of sin and the abandonment of vice, many ceased contending against the lusts of the flesh, and preferred gratifying them at the expense of a few mortifications."

"The penitential works, thus substituted for the salvation of God, were multiplied in the Church from Tertullian down to the 13th century. Men were required to fast, to go barefoot, to wear no linen, etc.; to quit their homes and their native land for distant countries; or to renounce the world and embrace a monastic life." ~D' Aubigne.

"In the 11th century voluntary flagellations were super added to these practices; somewhat later they become quite a mania in Italy, which was then in a very disturbed state. Nobles and peasants, old and young, even children of five years of age, whose only covering was a cloth tied round the middle, went in pairs, by hundreds, thousands, and tens of thousands, through the towns and villages, visiting the churches in the depth of winter. Armed with scourges, they flogged each other without pity, and the streets resounded with cries and groans that drew tears from all who heard them." ~D' Aubigne.

AD 1155-The wrath of the Church falls on the popular and earnest preacher, Arnold of Brescia in Italy. Arnold preached against the corruptions, immoralities, and luxuries of the clergy. He is seized and hanged, and then his dead body is burned and the ashes are thrown into the river Tiber, so that people might not keep them as relics! To the last Arnold was faithful and calm. ~see Jawaharlal Nehru on Christianity, page 229.

The 12th century Kingdom of Castile and Leon, with its warriors ravaging Moorish Spain, needed sacred relics to heighten religious tension against the Moors, and the Archbishop Pelayo Meléndez, "The chronicler," came up with an ingenious plan, "Relics from the Holy City of Jerusalem," including a blood stained rag said to be the face cloth of one dead Jesus [referred to in John 20:7], which is still a prized tourist attraction in the Cathedral. "Only lies have our fathers handed down to us, emptiness in which there is nothing of any avail!" ~Jeremiah 16:19.

AD 1156-Frederick I is angered by Pope Adrian IV when, in a letter, the Pope implies that he holds possession of lands in fief from the Pope [only through the grace and authority of the Church can he lay claim to lands.] This leads to further disputes over the sovereignty of the Emperor versus the sovereignty of the Church.

Who is to have the ultimate decision over the lands and its people? The pendulum of power will now begin to swing the other way in favor of the monarchs.

AD 1157-1199-King Richard I, named "Coeur de Lion," or Lion-Hearted, King of England, 1189-99, third son of King Henry II and Eleanor of Aquitaine. In 1189 he became king of England and shortly thereafter set out on the Third Crusade along with King Philip II, king of France, son of Louis VII.

"The English people at large complained of the enormous revenue which the Pope and the Italians drew from their country, ... the financial demands of the Curia." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 7, 38.

“The Christian religious ideal was to a great extent lost sight of; higher intellectual culture, previously confined in great measure to the clergy, but now common among the laity, assumed a secular character. ... Only a faint interest in the supernatural life survived.” ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 12, 703.

The Crusade proved a failure due to the lack of harmony between the two kings. King Henry II's son, Richard Coeur de Leon, was most likely an honorary Templar, keeping company with the knights, residing in their preceptories, sailing in their ships, and selling the island of Cyprus to them, which became the Order's official headquarters for a time. Richard's brother and archrival, King John, had his trusted advisor, Aymeric de St. Maur, Master of the Order in England. Due to Aymeric's persuasion, King John, reluctantly signed the Magna Carta in 1215. ~From Secret History By David Lewis.

Military service in the countryside was basic to feudalism, but it was a far cry from all that the vassal owed to his lord and owner. When the lord had a castle, he might require his vassals to defend it, a service called castle-guard.

Many vassals being obligated for only forty days a year and during the crusades, the vassals would often leave the field when their term expired. They are therefore given a share of the booty from the battle for their staying. If the lord had need of money, he would expect his vassals to give him financial aid.

“The rich they pray for pounds, and the poor they pray for pence.” ~John Duffy

AD 1160-1560-The Waldensians, which dwelt in the Italian Alps are visited with 36 different fierce persecutions by the Roman Catholic Church that spares neither age nor sex in the attempt to eradicate the Christian sect. ~Thomas Armitage, A History of the Baptists, Post-Apostolic Times-The Waldensians, 1890.

The plan of extermination is almost successful as an innocent Christian people and most of their literary record is erased from the face of the earth by the new disciples of the Prince of peace, Jesus Christ, the Lord and Savior.

AD 1167-68-Frederick I invests Anti-Pope Paschall III thereby denying power and authority to the Roman Catholic Church [Monies collected go to the Anti-Pope]

AD 1170-Leader of Yemen, Shiite Mahdi demands all Jews to convert or face death. He fears rumors of the Jewish Messiah to come, prophesized to be in 1210.

AD 1170-1221-Dominic, Saint Dominic, Spanish theologian; struggles with the abuses within the Church and encounters the Albigensians who practice a doctrine contrary to Catholic teachings [heresy].

Saint Dominic is quick to notice that this religious sect is well educated and well structured to spread their dogma. He therefore becomes determined to organize a similar group for the Roman Catholic Faith that would be well educated and organized to fight these heretics.

To be anything but a Catholic can be detrimental to one's health. “For professing faith contrary to the teachings of the Church of Rome, history records the martyrdom of more than one hundred million people. A million Waldenses and Albigenses [Swiss and French Protestants] perished during a Crusade proclaimed by Pope Innocent III in 1208. Beginning from the establishment of the Jesuits in 1540 to 1580, nine hundred thousand were destroyed. One hundred and fifty thousand perished by the Inquisition in thirty years. Within the space of thirty-eight years after the edict of [Catholic Emperor] Charles V against the Protestants, fifty thousand persons were hanged, beheaded, or burned alive for heresy. Eighteen thousand more perished during the administration of the Duke of Alva in five and a half years.” ~Brief Bible Readings, p. 16. John B. Wilder, The Shadow of Rome, Zondervan Publishing Co., 1960, page 87.

The Albigenses believe that God created as his firstborn, Lucifer. Lucifer escapes from a band of fallen angels and creates the world [and all of its inhabitants]. Jesus Christ is God's second son, sent here to re-establish spiritual order in this wicked world.

The group's adoption of Gnostic views and the equality of women is abominable to the Church, which sees this as a threat by women to their masculine authority [Women during the first few centuries were allowed into the priesthood of Christianity, even becoming Bishops. However, this changed, and the Church has gone to extremes to eradicate all mention of this from their historical records. This is the basis of women's rights groups today asking for equality via historical precedence].

✠ “But I suffer not a woman to teach, nor to usurp authority over the man, but to be in silence.”

~1 Timothy 2:12.

To Pope Pius XII, “I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians.” ~Mahatma Gandhi

Yet, in the Epistle to the Romans, a woman is given the title of deacon. ~Epistle to the Romans 16:1. Early Christians were also quite aware of women wanting equally rights, which is reflected in Jesus allegedly saying, "Nothing existed except Him-who-is. He is unnameable and ineffable. I myself am also unnameable, from Him-who-is, just as I have been given a number of names; two from Him-who-is. And I, I am before you. Since you have asked concerning femaleness, femaleness existed, but femaleness was not first. And it prepared for itself powers and Gods. But it did not exist when I came forth, since I am an image of Him-who-is. But I have brought forth the image of him so that the sons of Him-who-is might know what things are theirs and what things are alien [to them]. Behold, I shall reveal to you everything of this Mystery. For they will seize me the day after tomorrow. But my redemption will be near." ~The Nag Hammadi Library, The (First) Apocalypse of James Translated by William R. Schoedel, The Gnostic Society Library.

Women have few rights in Scripture, "If a man dies and leaves no son, turn his inheritance over to his daughter." ~Numbers 27:8.

But, alas, they are fighting an uphill battle as the 13th century Saint Thomas Aquinas suggests that God had made a mistake in creating woman: "Nothing [deficient] or defective should have been produced in the first establishment of things; so woman ought not to have been produced then."

Women were just as free and honored in ancient Egypt as in ancient Babylon and in ancient Crete. During the whole of the three millennia before Christ woman was free and equal to man in all the great civilizations. Nowhere, until we come to Greece and Rome, do we find anything remotely approaching the long subjection of women under Christianity or the least need for any kind of woman movement. Women were as free as men in ancient Egypt, and had their own property. "She will be doubly attached if the chain is sweet to her." ~Woman in Political Evolution.

Saint Dominic organizes a group whose sole purpose is to kill the Albigenses, a heretical group existing primarily in France, and has his order officially sanctioned by Pope Honorius III on December 22, 1216. The Albigenses are all but exterminated by the year 1330. In just one Catholic Crusade alone, two million Albigenses are brutally killed in the Church's efforts to exterminate them.

History books are remiss in informing us of how many must there have been altogether, and how many millions more must have been killed during the entire Middle Ages! Another source writes, "The Catholic Crusade against the Albigenses in Southern France, from 1209-1229, under Popes Innocent III, Honorius III and Gregory IX, was one of the bloodiest tragedies in human history. ... The number of Albigenses that perished in the twenty years' war is estimated at from one to two millions." ~Cushing B. Hassell, History of the Church of God, Chapter XIV.

The Black Friars under Saint Dominic are often portrayed in paintings burning books dealing with heresy. We now know they also burned old Bibles, which also contradicted the new, revised, teachings of the Church.

The practice of the Rosary is credited to Saint Dominic, but there is no substantial proof in this regard. ~The Doxology [Glory be] is referred to in Biblical passages: Romans 16:27, Ephesians 3:21, Jude 25, and Luke 2:14.

The rosary was used as a sacred instrument among the ancient Mexicans, and is commonly employed among the Brahmins of Hindustan; and in the Hindu sacred books reference is made to it again and again. Thus, in an account of the death of Sati, the wife of Shiva, we find the rosary introduced: "On hearing of this event, Shiva fainted from grief; then, having recovered, he hastened to the banks of the river of heaven, where he beheld lying the body of his beloved Sati, arrayed in white garments, holding a rosary in her hand, and glowing with splendour, bright as burnished gold."

In Thibet it has been used from time immemorial, and among all the millions in the East that adhere to the Buddhist faith.

Sir John F. Davis tells of how it is engaged in China: "From the Tartar religion of the Lamas, the rosary of 108 beads has become a part of the ceremonial dress attached to the nine grades of official rank. It consists of a necklace of stones and coral, nearly as large as a pigeon's egg, descending to the waist, and distinguished by various beads, according to the quality of the wearer. There is a small rosary of eighteen beads, of inferior size, with which the bronze count their prayers and ejaculations exactly as in the Romish ritual. The laity in China sometimes wear this at the wrist, performed with musk, and give it the name of Heang-choo, or fragrant beads."

The "Sacred Heart" was also one of the sacred symbols of Osiris when he was 'Born Again,' and appeared as Harpocrates, or the 'Infant Divinity,' borne in the arms of his mother Isis. Therefore, the fruit of the Egyptian Persea was peculiarly sacred to him, from its resemblance to the "Human Heart."

The ancient statues of Cupid portrayed "A fair, full, fleshy, round boy, in fine and sportive action, tossing back a heart."

Thus the 'Boy-God' came to be regarded as the "God of the Heart," in other words, as Cupid, or the 'God of Love.' To identify this infant divinity, with his father "The mighty hunter" he was equipped with "Bow and arrows," and in the hands of the poets, for the amusement of the profanely vulgar uninitiated, this sportive boy-god was celebrated as taking aim with his gold-tipped shafts at the hearts of mankind.

Historically, however, he was the 'Woman's seed,' of Venus, her son being Cupid, then, there were none other than the Madonna and the child. The poet, Virgil, puts into the mouth of Venus, when addressing the youthful Cupid, "My son, my strength, whose mighty power alone controls the thunderer on his awful throne, to thee thy much afflicted mother flies, and on thy succour and thy faith relies."

Bel, however, is also alleged to have born again as a child, he was also represented as an incarnation of Nimrod or Bel. When Bel, however, was born again as a child, he was, as an incarnation of the sun. Therefore, to indicate his connection with the fiery and burning sun, the "Sacred Heart" was frequently represented as a "Heart of Flame." ~See Isaiah 46:1, Jeremiah 50:2, 51:44.

Today, canonization cannot take place without a dispensation until more than fifty years shall have elapsed since the death of the servant of God, but during earlier Christian periods, canonization often occurred very near the time of death.

AD 1173-Not all saints were truly saints, and after reprimanding certain Bishops for having permitted honors to be paid to a man who was far from being a saint, Pope Alexander III states, "You shall not therefore presume to honor him in the future; for, even if miracles were worked through him, it is not lawful for you to venerate him as a saint without the authority of the Roman Church." ~Pope Alexander III, 1173.

AD 1177-Frederick I loses to Lombard armies and forced to recognize the sovereignty of the Church through Alexander III. The Emperor Frederick II, son of Henry IV, and grandson of Frederick Barbarossa I, who, succeeding to the Empire, inherited the hatred of the Roman Pontiffs. ~See Carlyle, in his History of Frederick II of Prussia, called Frederick the Great.

Hell hath no fury as a scorned Pope, a Pope who declares power over the world, which includes all monarchs, a Pope who curses [of anathema] upon all who dare go against his will and declarations, "... We [Pope Innocent IV] therefore, after careful discussion with our brother Cardinals and the sacred council [Lyons, 1245 A.D.] on his [Emperor Frederick II] wicked transgressions already mentioned and many more besides, since though unworthy we hold on earth the place of Jesus Christ, and to us in the person of the blessed Apostle Peter has been said, 'Whatever you bind on earth etc.,' denounce the said Prince, who has made himself so unworthy of the Empire and Kingdoms and every honor and dignity and who also, because of his crimes, has been cast out by God from Kingdom and Empire; we mark him out as bound by his sins, an outcast and deprived by our Lord of every honor and dignity; and we deprive him of them by our sentence. We absolve from their oath for ever all those who are bound to him by an oath of loyalty, firmly forbidding by our Apostolic Authority anyone in the future to obey or heed him as Emperor or King, and decreeing that anyone who henceforth offers advice, help or favor to him as to an Emperor or King, automatically incurs excommunication. Let those whose task it is to choose an Emperor in the same Empire, freely choose a successor to him. With regard to the aforesaid Kingdom of Sicily, we shall take care to provide, with the counsel of our brother Cardinals, as we see to be expedient." ~Bull of Pope Innocent IV deposing Emperor Frederick II, given at Lyons, July 17, 1245.

With pride and utter arrogance the indifferent Pope Alexander III. places his foot on the neck of Kaiser Frederick Barbarossa II, who came to him to bring a claim for peace. Few did not know the evil that the Holy See did to his son King Henry VI., against whom his own wife took up arms at the persuasion of the Pope.

At length, Frederick II, uniting in himself all the resolution which was wanting in his father and grandfather, saw the purpose of Pope Gregory IX., who seemed to have marshaled on his side all the hatred of Pope Alexander, Pope Innocent II, and Pope Honorius II against his Imperial Majesty. One brought the steel of persecution, and the other the lightning bolt of excommunication, and wrathfully they vied with each other in circulating infamous libels against him. The Emperor became incensed against the Catholic religion due to the vices of its Vicar, and proclaimed by the ' Doctissimus Vir,' which is mentioned by Frederick in a letter as having composed this treatise, and which consequently owes its existence not so much to a search for truth, as to a spirit of hatred and implacable animosity. ~ People's Edition, Boston, 1885, Vol. 1, p.92. This conjecture may be further confirmed by mentioning that this book was never referred to again after the regime of that Emperor, and even during his reign it was attributed to him, since Pierre des Vignes, his secretary, endeavored to cast this false impression on the enemies of his master, saying that they circulated it to render him odious.

"There is no such thing as a religion called 'Christianity,' there never has been such a religion. There is and always has been the Church." ~Hilaire Belloc, The Great Heresies, p. 246.

The book "Les Trois imposteurs," attributed to Frederick II, is a work on the three alleged imposters of history, God, Jesus, and Mohammad. The basis of the Popes' anger. ~ De Tribus Impostoribus et dissertation sur le livre des Trois Imposteurs, sm. 4to. Saec. XVIII.

AD 1179-Third Lateran Council: called by Alexander III, whereby Pope Alexander III establishes the procedure for the election of future Popes. Truce of God is extended throughout Western Christian World [restriction of private warfare] The Truce is an effort to limit the abuses of the monarchies across Europe. End of the World: John of Toledo predicts the End of the World during 1186, which estimate is based on the alignment of the planets.

Third Lateran Council, 1179, prohibited certain medical care to be provided by Christians to the Jews.

AD 1182-1183 Giraldus claims to have discovered an Irish werewolf couple.

AD 1182-126-Giovanni Francesco Bernardone, Saint Francis of Assisi, preacher, Italian mystic, disinherited by his family for performing charity work amongst the lepers.

Heard a calling during mass in 1208 and followed the practice of poverty [Matthew 10:5-24] Influenced by erudition of the troubadours [universal affection towards all living things] that was been banned by the Church. His Order did not come into conflict with the high officials of the Church until after his death. Perhaps the Catholic Church officials did not fancy this stress on their private lives by introducing poverty, for they felt they had outgrown this primitive Christian Doctrine.

Books [Learning' Knowledge] are a threath to the Church and Christianity: "Books are a temptation; the brethren who cannot read shall not seek to learn." ~Saint Francis of Assisi.

AD 1186-The End of the World: The "Letter of Toledo" warns everyone to hide in caves and mountains for the world is about to be destroyed with only a few good Christians to be spared. When the letter reached the Archbishop of Canterbury in England it prompted him to order a 3-day fast. September 1186 came and went, and the World didn't End. But this didn't deter the letter's true believers. They kept circulating the letter for several more centuries, after changing the doomsday date and a few other minor details.

King Henry II, of England, when he asks the rest of the country to pay a tithe for the Crusade against Saladin in 1186, demands a quarter of the Jewish chattels. The tithe was reckoned at £70,000, the quarter at £60,000.

For centuries, the Christian faith, through its priesthood, has stolen from the coffers of the poor, "If they deny that their prophets have received gifts, let them acknowledge this: that if they are convicted of receiving them, they are not prophets. And we will bring a multitude of proofs of this. But it is necessary that all the fruits of a prophet should be examined. Tell me, does a prophet dye his hair? Does a prophet stain his eyelids? Does a prophet delight in adornment? Does a prophet play with tables and dice? Does a prophet lend on usury? Let them confess whether these things are lawful or not; but I will show that they have been done by them." ~ Prolegomena: The Life and Writings of Eusebius of Caesarea: Testimonies of the Ancients Against Eusebius.

AD 1187-Saracen, Sal-lah-ud-deen succeeds in retaking Jerusalem on October 2nd. The Muslims take possession of Jerusalem after eighty-eight years. A fierce warrior, but a fair and just leader; Saladin is respected by both Moslems and Christians alike, and he allows the Crusaders to leave Jerusalem under a flag of truce after he defeats them.

Pope Gregory VIII, 1187, is so hated for his vicious and heinous crimes of blinding his opponents [such as was Pope Adrian III, 884-85] that the locals tie him up backwards on a camel and parade him through the streets of Rome, screaming vulgarities at him and pelting him with rocks until he is killed. ~ Diderot's Encyclopedie.

AD1189-A force of one hundred thousand crusaders from Italy, France, and England and led by Guy de Lusignan prepare to take Jerusalem.

Sept. 3, 1189, a number of the principal Jews of England present themselves to do homage at Westminster; but there appears to have been a superstition against Hebrews being admitted to such a holy ceremony, and they are repulsed during the banquet, which followed the coronation. King Richard I is enraged at the insult to his royal dignity, but takes no actions to punish the offenders.

An insult, once made, can never be made good by an apology as Cain tried it, and got nowhere. ~Genesis 4:13.

AD1190- "Le Conte del Graal" the first of many books written about the "Holy Grail," this incomplete story is of a platter [not a cup] being published by Chrétien de Troyes.

The seafaring population of England rises against the Jews, firing their homes, and putting the Jews to the sword, as well as at Stamford fair, on March 7, 1190, where many are slain, and on March 18 fifty-seven are ruthlessly slaughtered at Bury Saint Edmunds, while the Jews of Lincoln save themselves only by taking refuge in a castle.

The county militia and a number of York nobles, headed by Richard Malebys, who is deeply in debt to the Jews, besiege Clifford Tower, and the rage of the mob is kept alive by the exhortation of a Premonstrant monk, who celebrates mass every morning in his white robe before the walls of the tower till, by accident or design, he is struck by a stone as he approaches too near and is crushed. The loss of the monk enrages the mob, and the imprisoned Jews see no hopes of escaping death by hunger except by baptism.

They Jews are not heretics, since their right to exist is recognized by the Catholic Church, but, although the Papacy will issue various directives towards their protection throughout history, little or nothing is ever done to enforce their protection against Christians who see them as killers of Christ. Witness Hitler and his Final Solution, and his heroic spiritual adviser, Martin Luther. "Whoever would like to cherish such adders and puny devils; who are the worst enemies of Christ and us all, to befriend them and to do them honor simply in order to be cheated, plundered, robbed, disgraced, and forced to howl and curse and suffer every kind of evil, to him I would commend the Jews. And if this is not enough, let him tell the Jews to use his mouth as a privy, or else crawl into the Jew's hind parts, and there worship the Holy thing, so as afterwards to be able to boast of having been merciful, and of having helped the Devil and his progeny to blaspheme our dear Lord." ~Martin Luther, 1521, Hitler's Spiritual Ancestor by Peter F. Weiner, 1985, Gustav Broukal Press.

AD 1191-The Muslim coastal stronghold at Acre falls to the Crusader armies under Richard the Lionhearted and Philip II Augustus of France; Richard orders the massacre of his Muslim hostages after prisoner exchange negotiations bog down. Richard didn't want the responsibility of having to feed his prisoners.

AD1192-Third Crusade ends in a compromise between King Richard "The Lion Hearted" and the Muslim Leader Saladin.

AD1194-1250-Emperor Frederick II, King of Sicily, employs both Muslim and Jewish Astrologers from Spain and a Scottish occultist, Michael Scot. Frederick II attains his position only through the assistance of the Roman Catholic Church and makes many promises to retain his crown. He is excommunicated three times in his lifetime. He is crowned King of Sicily at age four upon the death of his father, Frederick I, and is placed under the guardianship of Pope Innocent III.

In 1227, Emperor Frederick annuls the Treaty of Constance, infuriating the Pope who has him excommunicated [Pope Gregory IX]. King Frederick II in 1228, leads the 5th Crusade [after previously refusing to do so and being excommunicated] and is crowned King of Jerusalem in 1229.

Frederick II is excommunicated in 1239 by Pope Gregory IX, and again, in 1245, by Pope Innocent IV. Emperor Frederick, who is fondly known as "The Wonder of the World," is the last great ruler of the Hohenstaufen dynasty. His family opposes the Catholic army of Pope Innocent IV, and Frederick and later his son Conrad spend their lives locked in fierce battles with Papal troops.

Emperor Frederick II complains that the Pope, "Pope Alexander IV, 1254-61, ... Was easily led astray by the whisperings of flatterers, and inclined to listen to the wicked suggestions of avaricious persons... He continued Pope Innocent IV's policy of a war of extermination against the progeny of [Emperor] Frederick II... And the people rose against the Holy See... The unity of Christendom was a thing of the past." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. i, pp. 287-288.

fighters against the attempted Papal takeover of his vast estates.

AD 1195-1231-Saint Anthony of Padua, Franciscan monk, born in Lisbon, became an Augustinian monk at the age of 15 and ten years later joined the Franciscan order, becoming a provincial, or administrator of a group of monasteries, for that order in 1227. Anthony taught theology in the large cities of Italy and France and preached in those areas, especially in the vicinity of Padua, Italy. In 1230 he resigned his provincialship to devote more time to preaching.

Saint Anthony is flogged [whipped] for protesting against the corruption that gnawed at his monastery. Against invading doubts, Brother Anthony prays to the Holy Mother, Mary, seeking a miracle, to re-establish his waning faith, and places a glass of water on the ledge. Of his small cell, and sinking to his knees, he begs God to turn the water into wine, and when nothing happens, unselfishly he drinks the water.

The year after his death he is canonized by Pope Gregory IX; in 1946 he is named a Doctor of the Church. Anthony is the patron saint of Padua and of Portugal and the Saint invokes for the finding of lost articles.

AD 1198-Pope Innocent III writes to all the Christian princes, including Richard of England, calling upon the Jews to compel the remission of all usury demands by Jews from Christians. Pope Innocent III writes a revealing work called Registro, in which he deals expansively with the power of the Catholic Church to punish sins and sinners, and within it, he includes vivid illustrations of the punishments awaiting for sinners, illustrations which show a wolf in friar's clothing with a pronged weapon demanding alms from a cloven-footed creature with a curled tail.

A doe-eyed amalgamated animal satirically represents believers in Jesus Christ whom the general populace calls "Pigs with crosses." ~From Ibn Jubayr, The Travels of Ibn Jubayr; Archivio Segreto, Vatican.

AD 1199-Pope Innocent III again stigmatizes those who have the audacity to translate the Bible from God's language, Latin. In effect, the Holy Bible is banned by the Church, for if man has access to the works of God, then it will be more difficult for the Church to change what God says and harder yet for priests to misinterpret. The Church is definitely not pleased with the spread of the word in written format to the masses [a fact that throughout history the Church is angered whenever someone translates the Bible into the language of the people].

Pope Innocent III suppresses the obligation of meatless Fridays when Christmas falls on a Friday. Pope Innocent III Crusades against the Cathari, in France, who are Christian heretics and whose basic tenets included Manichaeism.

The struggle to free Jerusalem from the bonds of the Muslims is never their goal. Enemies of the Church are considered enemies of Christ. The Cathari revolt against Rome and the corrupt Popes and their cause spreads across Northern Italy, France, and Germany, after the reawakening of the minds of Europe.

Evangelical Christians of strict life, the Cathari, Greek word for "Pure," are a select ascetic group whose name is wrongly extended to the Albigensians and other rebels. Basically, their name meant Christians who abhor corruption of the Church and its perversion of the teaching of the Gospels. They were, for the most part annihilated, in the aggressive persecutions inaugurated by Pope Innocent III.

"...To be reprov'd are those who translate into French the Gospels, the letters of Paul, the Psalter, etc. They are moved by a certain love of Scripture in order to explain them clandestinely and to preach them to one another. The Mysteries of the faith are not to be explained rashly to anyone. Usually in fact they cannot be understood by everyone, but only by those who are qualified to understand them with informed intelligence. The depth of the Divine Scriptures is such that not only the illiterate and uninitiated have difficulty understanding them, but also the educated and the gifted." ~from Denzinger-Schönmetzer, Enchiridion Symbolorum 770-771.

AD 1200-1280-Albertus Magnus, Saint; known as "Albert the Great" and as a "Doctor Universalis" for his varied interests in the natural sciences. Especially noted for his introduction and assimilation of Greek and Arabic science and philosophy to the less progressive medieval European civilization. He sustained that human reason could not contradict revelation, but he defended Aristotle's right to investigate the "Divine Mysteries." At the University of Paris, he became a Master of Theology, 1245, and subsequently held one of the Dominican chairs of theology.

Thomas Aquinas was one of his students at the University. In his now famous, "Summa Theologiae," 1270, Saint Albertus attempted to reconcile the new flood of Greek philosophy [Aristotelianism], which was quite different from the accepted theological schooling and the accepted Christian teachings. Albert died at Cologne, Germany, on November 15, 1280, and was beatified in 1622, declared a saint by Pope Pius XI in 1931 [He was also acclaimed an official Doctor of the Church]. In 1941 Pope Pius XII made him the patron of all who study the natural sciences.

End of the World: Joachim of Fiore, 1135-1202, a Catholic Abbot, does not believe in the literal Second Coming, but rather in a new stage of material influence on earth by the Church, which will come after the three and a half year rule of the anticipated Anti-Christ.

Joachim of Fiore announce to Richard the Lionhearted, in 1191, that the Anti-Christ has already been born, and declares the End of the Current Age will be somewhere between 1200 and 1260, with the rule of the Anti-Christ to immediately following. A devastating famine occurs throughout Europe, in 1258, and a plague in 1259, leading to the rise of the "Flagellants," men who beat themselves in a form of public atonement, believers in Joachim's prediction regarding the Last Days to be 1260. ~The Last Days are Here Again, TLD, pp 50-51.

The Catholic Church theologian, Saint Thomas Aquinas, writes in 1200 C.E., that masturbation is a worse sin than sex with your mother [or if you were a girl sex with your father]; it is considered worse than rape and worse than adultery. ~Note: By the 1600's both the Roman Catholic Church and the newly founded Protestants are so obsessed with the invented sin of masturbation that it is not uncommon for boys to be sent to bed wearing a steel box [similar to cricketer's box] with spikes inside it to dishearten any erections and prevent the boy from masturbating.

"Because of its Divine institution for the propagation of man, the seed is not to be vainly ejaculated, nor is it to be damaged, nor is it to be wasted." ~Clement of Alexandria, The Instructor of Children, 2:10:91.2, 191 C.E.

Sex is for procreation, not recreation, "To have coitus other than to procreate children is to do injury to nature." ~Clement of Alexandria, The Instructor of Children, 2:10:95.3.

AD 1204-The Fourth Crusade leads to the sacking of Constantinople, once the bastion of Christianity, whereby all the inhabitants are massacred, regardless of religion, sex, or age. The destruction of Constantinople by the Crusaders, the wanton destruction, and looting of the city further widens the schism between the two Christian Faiths [Catholic and Eastern Orthodox]

The Church has no shortage of Anti-Semitic writers, "The Jews should not be allowed to keep what they have obtained from others by usury; it were best that they were compelled so that they could earn their living instead of doing nothing but becoming avaricious." ~Saint Thomas Aquinas, 13th century, philosopher, On the Governance of the Jews.

There is no true Christian faith, only that of the Pagans, and Greeks; a rewritten history to deceive the masses, "It was the Alexandrian school of Christian philosophy, of which the most famous doctors were the same Clemens and Origen, which laid the first foundations of General Christian theology; and that school owed its evolution to its contact with Grecian thought." ~G.S.R. Mead.

The Crusaders still believe that they are the "New Chosen People of God." However, the Fourth Crusade ends with the Crusaders never lifting a sword to liberate Jerusalem [the proclaimed reason for the Crusades] and the Holy Sepulcher. The Venetians receive half of the plunder from the city for their assistance, and the remainder of the spoils are divided up amongst the clergy, knights, and soldiers.

The Churches of the West receive magnificent icons and other valuable treasures from the pilfered churches in Constantinople.

The Roman Catholic institution is a monarchical rule of the Church by Popes. In Latin, as in English, a word for "Father" is taken from the easy labial muttering, pa-pa, of the infant, and in the early Church this was applied to the superintendents, or "Overseers," Episcopi, or Bishops, of each small community who were presumably selected from the older men.

As long as all Bishops were Popes, Papae, as they still are in the East, there was no Papacy, Papatus, correctly rendered in English, "Popery;" but the disuse of Greek, which was the official language of the Roman Church during the first two or three centuries, but the growing claim to power without justification of supreme power by the Bishop of Rome restricted the title to him in the West and helped established the institution of the Papacy.

In a famous sentence Hobbes, Leviathan, Ch. 47, describes it as "The ghost of the deceased Roman Empire sitting crowned upon the grave thereof." The description, though often regarded as flippant by historians who have not made a critical study of Papal history, is nearer to the truth than Hobbes knew. Since the Papacy does not mean the rule of the Roman diocese by its Bishops, but the rule of the entire Catholic Church, it emphatically insists on its right to rule even the Greek and Oriental Churches, that did not exist until after the fall of Rome, and its establishment was in the highest degree facilitated by the general ignorance and demoralization which followed the collapse of the Empire.

Evidence is misrepresented by Catholic apologists with the kind of audacity, which one is compelled to regard as deception. We have then to inquire how, between 400 and 1300, the Popes constructed a power which is unique in the history of religion, and to examine the character of the men who exercised this power and claimed so close a relation to God that they bore the title of "His Holiness," the nature and range of their influence on civilization, and the means by which a power based upon admitted forgeries and false historical statements is maintained, and to what extent it is maintained, in this modern world to perpetuate their control.

Forging of vast religious manuscripts was as early as the birth of Christianity, "According to Galen, 129-199 C.E., the learned physician of the 2nd century C.E., literary forgeries were first multiplied in numbers when the kings of Egypt and of Pergamum sought to outdo each other in their efforts to increase the holdings in their respective libraries. Monetary rewards were offered to those who would provide a copy of some ancient author, and, in consequence, many imitations of ancient works were composed and palmed off as genuine." ~Bruce M. Metzger, Brill, New Testament Studies, Philological, Versional, and Patristic, 1980.

In the most pretentious and most authoritative presentment of the Catholic position, the important article on the Popes is written by an English Jesuit, and he summarizes the first four centuries in these words, "History bears complete testimony that from the earliest times the Roman Church has never claimed the supreme leadership, and that that leadership has been freely acknowledged by the Universal Church."

Under pressure, the Jesuit, and the hierarchy which sponsors the Encyclopaedia, might plead the vagueness of the word "Leadership," instead of power, but the character of the statement may be judged from the fact that from the time when Rome, in the last decade of the 2nd century, first asserted its authority over other Churches until the fall of the Empire, the claim was in every single case repudiated, generally with scorn, and no division of the Eastern half of the "Universal Church" has ever admitted it. ~Catholic Encyclopedia, article, English Jesuit, Father Joyce.

In Catholic theory the claim is based upon the alleged founding of the Roman Bishopric by Saint Peter. Under that title it will be shown that Peter, assuming him to have been an historical character, never reached Rome. The tradition was fabricated in Rome in the second half of the 2nd century. At the end of the 1st century the Roman community had, as it states in its Letter to the Corinthians, a Bishop and Deacons. That the Bishop was named Clement, and that he wrote the letter; but the letter is a democratic admonition from one small community to another, and not in any sense a Papal document.

The Roman Church remained very obscure and unimportant until the time of Pope Victor, 189-98, who claimed a right to dictate to the Churches of all Asia Minor. By this time the curious pun about Peter and the rock had been successfully interpolated in Matthew 16:18, and the Bishop of Rome, Victor, had the new and peculiar distinction of being a friend of the most important person in the Imperial Palace, the Emperor's very wanton mistress, Marcia.

The Asiatic Bishops rejected his claim and "Bitterly reproached Victor," says Bishop Eusebius. Tertullian, in Africa, apparently refers to this when in his treatise "On Chastity," (c. 1) he refers, with heavy irony, to the Pope as claiming to be "The Supreme Pontiff, that is to say the Bishop of Bishops."

It was not until more than fifty years later that Pope Cornelius, 251-3, and Pope Stephen, 254-7, ventured out to reassert their claim. They attempted to dictate to the Bishops of the African province, which was then next in importance to the Roman. Here the attitude of the apologists is amazing.

They quote Cyprian, the head of the African Church and the most saintly Bishop of that age, as one who recognized Papal supremacy because, before the quarrel began, they speak of the Roman Church as "The Principal Church" and "The source of sacerdotal unity:" an expression of its importance as being in the imperial city and as the center from which Africa had been Christianized. "Anyone who asserted wrong teachings, anyone serving the devil or his demons, earned instead an equally remarkable antagonism. In their official high meetings together, Christians thus could not keep their own disagreements within the bounds of civil language; their continual quarrels required the intervention of the civil authorities; and all this was well known and noted by friends and foes alike." ~Ramsay MacMullen, Christianizing the Roman Empire, p.92.

While every Catholic writer on the subject quotes this and represents it as a recognition of the Papal claim, none of them tells how, when the Popes made their claim, Cyprians repudiated it with anger and scorn in his letters, especially LIV, LXVII, and LXXII.

In the last of these he writes in the name of the eighty African Bishops, and says in plain and very ironical Latin: "None of us regards himself as the Bishop of Bishops or seeks by tyrannical threats to compel his colleagues to obey him." ~cf. Luke 14:23.

Yet the Bishop of Bishops, Pope John Paul II, will declare in the commencement of the 21st century that all men must yield to his authority by right of the 'Documents of Jesus,' another blatant forgery by a long expired Christian extremist.

Pope John Paul II will apologize for the atrocities of Christian zealots but not for the horrendous atrocities committed by the Church, "Lord, God of all men and women, in certain periods of history. Christians have at times given in to [forms of] intolerance and have not been faithful to the great Commandment of love, sulling in this way the face of the Church, your Spouse. Have mercy on your sinful children and accept our resolve to seek and promote truth in the gentleness of charity, in the firm knowledge that truth can prevail only in virtue of truth itself. We ask this through Christ Our Lord." ~Pope John Paul II, From the Vatican, Prayer for Forgiveness, Day of Pardon, 12 March, II; ORE, 22 March 2000.

Pope Julius, in 340, attempts to give orders to the Eastern Bishops, and their reply, says the ecclesiastical historian Sozomen, was "Full of irony and not devoid of serious threats." "Ecclesiastical History," III,8). Pope Damasus repeats the attempt in 382, and the reply is equally contemptuous. ~See Theodoret, Ecclesiastical History, V,9.

Born of a virgin or a lie? "Theodoret describes two groups of Ebionites on the basis of their view of the Virgin Birth. Those who deny the Virgin Birth use the Gospel of the Hebrews; those who accept it use the Gospel of Matthew." ~Edwin K. Broadhead, Jewish Ways of Following Jesus: Redrawing the Religious Map of Antiquity, 2010, p209.

"Gospel of the Hebrews" spoke of Jesus, of Nazareth, as being the son of Joseph and Mary, according to the flesh, and taught nothing about his miracles, his Resurrection from the dead, and other such prodigies. That was the last word of the Greek Church on the matter, and the Popes had to be content to assert themselves in the West, only. Catholic writer quotes Saint Augustine as admitting the claim and closing a controversy with the words "Rome has spoken."

These writers must know that what Augustine actually said was that the case was closed because the African and the Roman Churches had jointly reached the same conclusion, and that Augustine and his African Bishops repudiated the Pope's claim of authority as scornfully as Cyprian and the Greeks had done [Augustine was dark complexioned and born in Africa]. ~Labbé, Collectio Conciliorum, 419 and 424.

Finally, Pope Leo I, in 445, the African Church being now in ruins under the Vandals, tries to assert the claim in the one comparatively free western province outside Italy, Southern Gaul [France], and its great leader, Hilary, replied to him, the Pope says (Letters, X, 3), in "Language, which no layman even should dare to use and no priest to hear."

Pope Leo got the last miserable representative of the Emperors to declare that the Pope had this authority, but the Empire fell, and there was no prelate left outside Rome of sufficient strength or ability to resist. Until Western Christian control was shattered, in the 5th century, every single Papal assertion of supremacy is heatedly repudiated and rebuked by the Orthodox Church and its leaders.

Gaul [France] now passed under the Frank barbarians, Spain under the Visigoths, and Africa under the Vandals, while the Greek Church finally turned away from Rome. The population of Europe was reduced to less than a tenth of what it had been, the school system is totally destroyed, and the Popes ruled a field of ruins. Hence the profound historical truth of the saying of Hobbes.

In such a situation, with a beggared and densely ignorant people looking to distant Rome, which few now visited, as the "See of Peter" and the source of bogus relics and spurious lives of the martyrs, every strong, able, or covetous Pope began to seek an enlargement of his authority. Pope Leo I, under whom the forgery of Canons of earlier Councils began, and Pope Innocent I were such men, but there was little opportunity until the time of Pope Gregory I, 590-604, who was, though the most saintly man who had yet worn the tiara, content to make the Papacy the richest owner of land and slaves in Europe.

The Lombards annexed a large part of the Papal estates, and by another series of forgeries which would have been possible only in an age of the densest ignorance the Popes of the eighth century got them restored and enormously enlarged by the Franks. The “Temporal power,” the possessions, of the Papacy here reached its zenith, and its further history is one of incessant and ruthless bloody conflict.

Though married men in those early days were allowed to enter the priesthood, they were still mandated to live celibate lives and Pope Leo I decreed that married clergy were to treat their wives “As sisters,” but few, if any Catholics, realize that as late as the reign of Pope Gregory VII, 1073-85, that it was still accepted for priests to be married and supposedly live in celibacy with their wives.

Pope Saint Nicholas I, 858-867, tries to use a similar collection of forgeries, the “Forged Decretals,” to enhance the spiritual or ecclesiastical power of the Papacy, and from the great French prelate, Archbishop Hincmar, meets a scornful resistance similar to the earlier claims.

But the era was one of deepening gloom and barbaric violence, and the death of Pope Saint Nicholas, in 867, is followed by ghastly outrages in Rome which inaugurated the Rule of the Whores in the Vatican antechambers and a century and a half of unparalleled corruption. Thirty Popes occupied the sodden “Throne of Peter” in a single century, coming to power via deception, bribes, murder, and corruption, and the theory of a Leadership of the World is soon forgotten under the malfescance of those who proclaim to represent God.

In the end, a body of reformed monks persuade the Roman, German, Emperors to intervene, with the vices of the Emperors themselves they did not interfere, and one of these, Hildebrand, becomes Pope Gregory VII, 1073, and gives the Papal theory of power its greatest extension. The Pope is the absolute ruler of the world, in secular as well as religious matters.

However, Pope Gregory's reckless use of armies, armed mobs, and forged documents also provoke a reaction and a contempt of the Papal anathemas. Also suppressed by catholic media is the fact that the Roman citizens themselves, angered by the corrupt Vatican, drive Pope Gregory into exile, and the chief authority on the period, Gregorovius, describes how, three years later, his successor, Pope Urban II, sits lonely and abandoned.

“Seated in the deserted Lateran surrounded by rude partisans and no less rude Bishops, gazing on the ruins of churches and streets, memories of Pope Gregory VII, and on a city silent as death, squalid, and inhabited by a tattered, murderous, and miserable population, presents a gloomy picture of the decadence of the Papacy.” ~from the History of the City of Rome, IV, 277.

Europe is now rising from these dark, diabolical, and sinister days [the Dark Age] is over, but the city of the Popes continues to present a spectacle of barbaric violence and corruption, until the so called greatest of the Popes, Innocent III, 1198, acceded. He completes Hildebrand's scheme of supreme power; but by what means he attained it and how he used it are yet to be revealed by the Church. And by so scheming, “They render the Pope a service, but not Christendom.” ~Guignebert.

We do not doubt that men like Gregory and Innocent fabricated this power, however unscrupulous the means they employed, in the belief that an omnipotent Pope would make the world virtuous; but the historians who accuse freethinkers of overlooking this themselves forget two crucial facts.

First, in the belief of such Popes the first virtue to secure was rigid orthodoxy and submission, since it was not sound social conduct in this world, but Salvation in the next that they sought for men; so they inevitably destroyed freedom, consecrated violence, and tried to arrest or pervert the new intellectual development. Secondly, the vast new power created was no more used to promote virtue by the successors of Pope Innocent than it had been by the successors of Pope Gregory. The thirteenth century, which Innocent inaugurated, is one of the loosest, decadent, and morally deprived in history, and it reeks with cruelty and human injustice, especially in Rome.

Its Papal history ended in the extraordinary scandals of the Pontificate of Boniface VIII, 1294, and is followed by the gross depravity of the Papal Court at Avignon, France, 1309-77.

The Pope is as God on earth, “The Ppapal Theory made the Pope alone God's representative on earth and maintained that the Emperor received his right to rule from Saint Peter's successor. For historical proof of the genuineness of this position attention was called to the Power of the Keys [Keys to Heaven], the Donation of Constantine, the coronation of Pepin, the restoration of the Empire in the West... It was upheld by Popes Nicholas I, Hildebrand, Alexander III, Innocent III, and culminated with Boniface VIII at the jubilee of 1300 when, seated on the throne of Constantine, girded with the imperial sword, wearing a crown, and waving a scepter, he shouted to the throng of loyal pilgrims, "I am Caesar—I am Emperor."

~The arrogant Pope Boniface VIII, Alexander Clarence Flick, The Rise of the Mediaeval Church, 1909, published in New York: by Burt Franklin, 514 West 113th Street, p. 413.

The disgusting and disreputable Popes of the Great Schism continues, 1378-1414, under whom even the best Catholic historian, Pastor, says, "... The prevailing immorality exceeded anything that had been witnessed since the 10th century." ~From History of the Popes, I, 97.

Pope Boniface VIII is the first to lay down that the vow of chastity taken at ordination invalidates a marriage, and the Popes of the Renaissance Era, 1450-1650, when, considering the new enlightenment of Europe, the Papacy declined to a still lower depth than ever and, except for a few short periods, remained in its corruption longer than ever. The only category in which they have excelled is deception.

Originally the word, renaissance, "Rebirth," means the revival of the classical Greco and Roman architectural ideals as opposed to the European Gothic, and was also applied to the recovery of classical literature. In what sense the monks preserved the classics may be gathered from the fact that it took Italian scholars 150 years, beginning with the activity of Petrarch and Boccaccio, about the middle of the 14th century, to recover the Latin classics from the dust and debris of the monastic libraries, and many of them, and almost all the Greek classics, had to be obtained from the East, where they were preserved by the Muslims who were partial to the preservation of knowledge from all cultures.

The Catholic charge that the Renaissance was responsible for the admitted grossness of morals in Italy is immensely preposterous. In the Vatican, sexual license was accompanied by fiendish cruelty and treachery, and these were certainly not learned from any classical literature. The word "Renaissance" is now taken in a broader sense as meaning the recovery of civilization in Europe.

This began in France and Italy, and was late in reaching England and Germany, and still later in Spain. Modern American writers betray their Catholic influence and deny that there was a Dark Age, which ended in a Renaissance say that if we use the latter word at all we must speak of a Carolingian Renaissance in the eighth century and an Ottoman in the tenth.

"The historical literature of the Middle Ages may be classed under three general heads: chronicles, annals, and lives of saints... As a matter of fact, profane history, as dealt with by Pagan historians, no longer appealed to Christian writers. History, as viewed from the Christian standpoint, took into account only the Kingdom of God, and to the new generation [of Christians] the center of such history was the narration of the misfortunes undergone by the Jewish nation, a subject ignored by the Roman historians. Christians had need of a new general history in sympathy with their ideal... Under Charlemagne... The great internal misfortunes and dissensions of the kingdom are carefully ignored, so as not to cast discredit on the reigning princes."

"The majority of these local chronicles reproduce the traditions, popular or local, of the monastery, which they concern and confine themselves to recording gossip and various kinds of information,... Without asking themselves whether the version of these sources had been tainted with legends, and they did not take the trouble to examine the origin and value of their information... The authors were bounded by a limited horizon, often equipped with merely a rudimentary training. Such chronicles, moreover, were often written with the same purpose as the lives of the Saints. Those, having a general tendency to enhance as much as possible the glory of their hero, were nothing more than panegyric. Monastic chronicles and annals were not free from this tendency, and often begin with an account of the life of the Saint who founded the abbey, concerning themselves more with skepticism than with historical facts and events, which would be of much value to us today. In conclusion, the first part of these chronicles, written for the most part since the 11th century, almost always recount legends, often based on oral tradition, but sometimes invented for the purpose of embellishing the early history of the monastery, and of thus increasing the devotion of the faithful... Chronology especially was often treated carelessly." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 1 531-536, passim.

To claim a restoration of civilization in the days of Charlemagne is not a discovery, but a reversion to an uncritical earlier history, and the revival of art and, in a much more restricted degree, culture in Saxony under Otto, chiefly owing to a marriage with the very corrupt Byzantine Court, was not much greater and lasted very little longer.

These writers seem to be ignorant of the fact, which Catholics do not want obtruded because it discredits the Papacy, that culture had never been quite extinguished in the Lombard cities of North Italy. Even in the Iron Age, when Rome was barbaric, these cities retained many elegant writers of Latin and were refined, even in their vices or immorality and lesser self indulgences.

The contemporary Bishop Retherius of Verona, for instance, in an indignant page, "Praeloquia," V, 71, on the corruption of the higher clergy, 910-20, when the highest "Noble" ladies in Rome could not even write their names, speaks of their hunting in gorgeous clothes, with gold belts and golden bridles to their horses, massive golden wine vessels at their luxurious banquets, and beds inlaid with gold and silver, and with silk coverlets, to which the nobles would retire with the ladies to indulge their vices.

This may be vice, but is it not also civilization? Civilization of the most corrupt type? The splendid art of the period was not more characteristic of it than its vices; a license of morals that is not surpassed, particularly in regard to sodomy, in history, a proneness to appalling cruelty in all classes, from nobles who invented the "Forty Days' Torture," or flung delinquent servants on the hall-fire, to the worker who killed a neighbor's boy and got the unsuspecting father to eat a joint of the body, and a treachery and dishonoring of engagements which would have astounded the Greeks and Romans.

Here the Catholic historian Pastor agrees with the authorities, and it is surprising to find Positivist and other non-Christian writers, who regard integrity of character as the first mark of civilization, praising the Middle Ages and its Church. -J. A. Symonds, The Renaissance in Italy, 7 vols. 1875-86, and J. Burckhardt, The Civilization of the Period of the Renaissance in Italy, Engl. Trans., 15th ed., 2 vols. 1937. Of small recent works, Prof. W. H. Hudson's Story of the Renaissance, 1924, is the only commendable study. Prof. H. S. Lucas's book The Renaissance and the Reformation, 1934, is defective by uncritical reliance on Catholic works. Sidney Daik's Story of the Renaissance is more Catholic rhetoric, see also the works of J. McCabe, Rationalists Encyclopedia

"Rhetors are allowed to lie in historical texts." ~Cicero, Brutus 11:42.

The phrases "Holy See" and "His Holiness," which Catholic pressure or intrigue now compels even the daily papers to use, represent a third aspect of what one is tempted to call the great imposture of Catholic literature on the Papacy and the population.

The faithful, who are graciously permitted to know that there were A few bad Popes," are reconciled to this on the singular ground that the Church never claimed "Impeccability" for its Popes. It is one of the peculiar growths of the semi-Fascist atmosphere of the Church, with its prohibition to read critics under pain of eternal damnation, that a Catholic regards each Pope as "The Vicar of Christ," elected by the Holy Ghost and in intimate relation with the Deity, yet considers the inclusion in the series of a number of corrupt men as a matter of little or no consequence.

This can be effected only by representing the vicious Popes as very rare occurrences in a unique succession of wise and saintly men. The very reason the Church elects elderly men in this modern era to dispense with criticism of the aged and infirmed. Would Christ have chosen such desecrated men to lead his flock?

Historical facts will bear out that no other religion of which we have adequate knowledge, Brahmanism, Buddhism, Taoism, Zoroastrianism, or Islam, presents such a manifestation of corruption in its higher spiritual authorities and their elections to office, as does the history of the Catholic Popes. No one questions that many of them were able men, or, on the Catholic standard, Holy Men, but concealed Catholic accounts of them are monstrous.

The Church gives the title of "Martyr" to nearly every Pope to the year 310; while even Catholic historians like Duchesne admit that at the most only two out of thirty were martyrs. Of the ninety Popes, to the year 870, the great majority are of unknown character, and a number of the remainder, who are "prominent" in history, not the official Pontifical Book, which makes martyrs with such fluency and canonizes recognizable bad characters, are there any accounts of their vices or crimes, Symmachus, Vigilius, Pelagius, Stephen II, Stephen IV, and Paschal I.

Then comes the Rule of the Whores, within the hollowed walls of the sacred Vatican, and the Iron Age, with nearly two centuries of chronic, incredible, and implausible degradation of the Papal Court, during which the vilest manner of men, Pope John XI; Pope John XII; and Pope John XIV; etc., became "Vicars of Christ."

Other "Monsters of vice," as the contemporary documents call them, are Pope Boniface VIII and Pope John XXIII, and these are merely the worst of the worst. We may sum up the biography of the Popes, and the "Holiness" of the Papacy, by saying that, of the 260 Popes one-fourth are of unknown character and of the remainder, half of these had momentous deficiencies of moral character. At least thirty were sexually loose men, in half a dozen cases, paederasts [a fondness for youngsters], and another dozen are credibly charged with murder and mutilation.

Obedience to the Pope is declared absolutely necessary for Salvation, and all disobedience, a short trip to Hell, "We, moreover, proclaim, declare and pronounce that it is altogether necessary to Salvation for every human being to be subject to the Roman Pontiff." ~Pope Boniface VIII, Bull Unam Sanctam [The Holy Church], promulgated November 18, 1302, in Translations and Reprints From the Original Sources of European History, Vol. 3, Philadelphia: University of Pennsylvania Press, 189, No. 6, pp. 20–23, from Latin text of Mury, Revue des Questions Historiques, Vol. 46, pp. 225, 256, based on the facsimile from the Papal Regesta.

In other words, "The decision of the Pope and the decision of God constitute one decision."

If we judge them from the Catholic perspective, more than one half of the two hundred Popes, from the years 300 to 1650, were notoriously known for their avarice, and being guilty of vices that are held to be worse than sexual irregularities including: simony, pedophilia, womanizing, nepotism, and protecting the corruption of the Papal Court and the clergy.

The Catholic historian Hayward says, among other painful admissions, that by 1650, "...The Papacy began to abandon the guidance of the world" and "Its prestige had sunk so low that nobody took any notice of it."

~see History of the Popes, English translation, 1931.

This was after the Council of Trent and the Counter Reformation were supposed to have purified it and strengthened the Church. In the Columbia Encyclopedia we read, "The central feature of the Catholic reform was the Council of Trent" and the Popes of the Council were Pope Paul III, who resisted the Emperor's demand for a council, as he was too busy enriching his four children, and Pope Julius II, one of the most repulsive Popes of that lascivious century.

As a matter of historical fact, the Council did not begin its debates until 1562, when the Reformation had swept over half of Europe; but, of course, it is "Pejorative" to say that the reformation provoked it. The reign of Paul IV (died 1559) was, the writer says, "Devoted to the purge of the papal court," and from Paul's time dated the "Quasi-monastic air that has ever since characterized the Vatican." ~From the works of J. McCabe, Rationalist Encyclopedia.

"The evil elements at once awakened once more." ~Pastor, History of the Popes upon the election of Pope Pius IV, English translation, 1931.

AD 1205-Pope Innocent III proclaims it is a crime for any legal assistance to be rendered to heretics being tried before the Inquisition [Again, the Church attempts to absolve itself of any crimes pertaining to the Inquisition, which it deems a necessity in the furtherance of pure faith and even goes so far as to claim that it was common in these times...in other words, the monarchs indulged in deprivation of civil rights so they also could deny these basic rights to the individual in furthering their personal goals and the Church is likewise obligated to protect its interests. It is also interesting to note that the Church never excommunicated anyone for killing a heretic or a witch].

"With the self-declared power of life or death in their grasp, the Church still lacks the power to bring back those whom they have viciously murdered." ~E. Christopher Reyes.

"The Medieval Church was surrounded and harassed on all sides by all kinds of adversaries absorbed in this interest. The belief in the reality of occult forces, in the value of astrology, in the power of sorcery, was a bequest from antiquity; its adepts were to be found in all the nations; folklore helped to keep it alive with its innumerable legends, and it seemed to be confirmed by a mass of those hearsay experiences, which strengthen in the simple-minded and the illiterate a dogmatic faith in the absurd... The conquest of the Western world by Christianity had not destroyed these older heterogeneous layers of varied superstitions."

~Guinebert, Triumph of Christianity.

On July 15, 1205, Pope Innocent III lays down the principle that Jews are doomed to perpetual servitude because they crucified Jesus Christ the Savior.

End of the World: Joachim of Fiore predicts in 1190 that the Anti-Christ is already in this world, and that King Richard of England will defeat him, which means that the Millennium would then begin, sometime before 1205.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

AD 1206-The Rosary is reportedly given to Saint Dominic by an apparition of Saint Mary.

AD 1207-Pope Innocent III excommunicates Raymond VI, Count of Toulouse for failing to take action against the Cathars.

AD 1208-The Dominican Order is founded by Saint Francis of Assisi who has its members take an oath of celibacy and poverty; the Order is officially recognized in 1216 by Pope Honorius III. Saint Francis of Assisi, devoted himself to imitating Christ in all manners, and although said to have been wild and adventurous in his youth, experienced 'Stigmata,' apparently inflicting himself with wounds and perpetuating the first stigmatic fraud.

"There have been several hundred others since, including Magdalena de la Cruz, 1487-1560, of Spain, who admitted her fraud when she became seriously ill, and Therese Neumann of Bavaria, 1898-1962. The latter reportedly survived for 35 years eating only the "bread" of the Holy Eucharist at mass each morning. One of the more recent stigmatists is Fr. James Bruce who claimed not only to have Christ's wounds but also that religious statues wept in his presence in Washington D.C., in 1992. Father Bruce now runs a parish in rural Virginia where the miracles have ceased. Self-inflicted wounds are common among people with certain kinds of brain disorders, but claiming that the wounds are miraculous is rare and is more likely due to excessive religiosity than to a diseased brain, though both could be at work in some cases. The likelihood that the wounds are psychosomatic, psychogenic purpuras, manifested by tortured souls, seems less likely than hoaxing in most cases." ~From 'Stigmata' by Robert Todd Carroll, read also The Bleeding Mind: An Investigation into the Mysterious Phenomenon of Stigmata, London: Weidenfeld and Nicholson, 1998.

Pope Innocent III declares a Holy Crusade to annihilate the independent minded Christian Albigenses in France. When the City of Beziers falls, the Pope commands of the survivors, "Kill them all. God will know His own," as thousands of men, women, and children; some Jews, some Catholics, all are ruthlessly slaughtered.

An interesting note: throughout history the so-called religious orders, which are based on celibacy and poverty deny themselves of neither. In 1224 the "Holy Night," is alleged to have been established by Saint Francis who places a small stable in the corner of a church with people and animals representing the Nativity Scene.

AD 1208-1276-King James I, of Aragon, Spain, issues an order that all Jewish books to be destroyed because they differ with the Christian versions.

Who gave Spain the right to take someone's land, to deny people spiritual and economic freedom? "The right of Spain to the occupation and afterwards the domination of the Philippines was a Divine and Natural Right..." ~Member of Order of Jesuits.

"This framework established a cosmic compadrazgo, and an utang na loob to Christ, for his sacrifice transcended any possible repayment... To the devout Filipino, Christ died to save him; there could be no limit to an individual's thanksgiving." ~scholar David J. Steinberg.

The Vatican is saddened when the Constitution of the Philippines begins its Preamble by, "...Imploring the aid of Almighty God," [not Jesus Christ] as so does the oath of office of the President of the Philippines and other public officials. Other religious holidays, both Christian and Muslim, are recognized as legal holidays. The NEW versions added by the Catholic Church include: The Book of Daniel, The Song of the Three Holy Children, Book of Esdras, Ecclesiastical, Baruch, Judith, Tobit, Prayer of Manasseh, Maccabees, History of Susannah, Wisdom, and Bel and the Dragon [not necessarily in this order] Alexandrian Origen in the 3rd century realizes that the most accurate versions of Old Testament are the Jewish version.

Christianity is continually reinventing itself in order to keep abreast of its detractors, and Origen eventually falls victim to his leadership, and a shifting faith, "Now, Christianity in its popular origins had entirely entangled itself with the popular Jewish tradition of religion, a tradition that was innocent of all philosophic or kabalistic mysticism... As time went on, however, and either men of greater education joined their ranks, or in their propaganda they were forced to study themselves to meet the objections of educated opponents, wider and more liberal views obtained among a number of Christians, and the other great religious traditions and philosophies contacted the popular stream. All such views, however, were looked upon with great suspicion by the 'Orthodox,' or rather that view, which finally became Orthodox. And so as time went on, even the very moderate liberalism of Clemens and Origen was regarded as a grave danger; and with the triumph of the narrow Orthodoxy and the condemnation of learning, Origen was himself at last anathematized.” ~G.S.R. Mead.

In the 4th century, Cyril of Jerusalem, now declares these Added versions to the Old Testament prohibited reading in public as well as private. As a matter of inquisitiveness, what happened to the inerrancy of the Church? “I will speak the words too of offense. Of His own Flesh was the Lord Christ discoursing to them; Except ye eat, He says, the Flesh of the Son of Man and drink His Blood, ye have no Life in you: the hearers endured not the loftiness of what was said, they imagined of their unlearning that He was bringing in cannibalism.” ~Blasphemies and Heresies of Nestorius according to Saint Cyril: An examination of the five books composed in 429 C.E., by the Orthodox tax-exempt murderer, and Christian Bishop of Alexandria Cyril, against the Blasphemies and Heresies of Nestorius. Quoted in Three New Ideas In the Field of Ancient History, 2011, <http://www.mountainman.com.au/essenet/>

In 1208, when the Inquisition was established, it was only seven years afterward, that the Fourth Council of the Lateran enjoined all kings and rulers to swear an oath that they would help with the extermination of heretics from their domains. The sword of the Catholic Church is unsheathed, and the world is soon at the mercy of ignorant and infuriated priests, whose eyes feasted upon the agonies they inflicted. The Inquisition will fail in crushing the Divine spirit in man. Since even its haunting savageries are being condoned and often times even denied, “Pronouncing secretly and without right of appeal the most terrible penalties, it constitutes one of the most horrible inventions ever conceived by fanaticism in any age.” ~Guignebert, Triumph of Christianity, p. 316.

Acting, as they believed, or pretended to believe, under the command of God; stimulated by the hope of infinite reward in this world as well as the next, hating heretics with a passion, with every drop of their sordid blood; savage beyond description; merciless beyond conception, these infamous priests, in a kind of frenzied joy, leaped upon the helpless victims of their rage.

In the name of their all forgiving God, to the full glory of Jesus, innocent victim's bones are crushed in iron boots; quivering flesh is torn away from bone and ligaments with iron hooks and pincers; they cut off lips and eyelids; they pull out nails, and into the bleeding quick thrust needles; they tear out the tongues to silence the victims; they extinguish the eyes of the infidels so they will no longer see the Glory of God and his earthly representatives; they stretch and pulled ligaments from the skeleton upon racks; they flayed the victims alive, remove their skin inch by inch, in honor to their God; they crucify the infidels with their heads downward; they bound them and exposed them to wild beasts; they burned them alive at the stake; they mocked their cries and groans; they sealed them up in spiked coffins: they burned their feet off while others watched: they robbed their children, and then they piously prayed to God to finish their Holy work in Hell, these emissaries of Christ, these self proclaimed “Vicars of Christ.”

The saddest religious characteristic of the Crusades is not the horrific violence they fostered throughout Europe toward the Jews and Muslims but the manner in which they distorted the fundamental components of Christian faith, for which “The Jerusalem above” ought to have been the only Jerusalem that matters. ~see Galatians 4:26; Hebrews 12:22.

AD 1209-The Roman Catholic Church, in its endeavors to protect its continually changing Doctrines regarding Scripture, takes it upon itself to declare what is true and what is apocrypha [myth or legend]. Greek ceases to be the “Lingua franca” in the West during the 4th century; instead the Romanesque Latin is adopted. Eastern Byzantine countries continue to use and write in the Greek and we have a preponderance of Byzantine Greek manuscripts today by virtue of all the copying done.

From the ancient Greek manuscripts evidence [evidence from earlier translations], and the Church Fathers [who reluctantly admit], it is discovered that the “Trinitarian” text is not an original or genuine part of 1 John.

Theologians declare that there is no legitimate place in the text of the New Testament for the “Trinity” [Martin Luther did not include the passage in his own German translation].

Even the Torah the Jewish God is one, as it is written; “Hear Israel, Y-H-W-H is our God, .Y-H-W-H is one.”

In Deuteronomy 6:4, of the The King James Bible, the translator renders this as: “Hear Israel, the LORD our God is one LORD.” The [Catholic] Church has modified the Torah to denounce Jewish ancestry and history, whenever possible, while also circumambulating about the perception that Jesus was a Jew [and a Rabbi at that] A most difficult position, undoubtedly, but successful nevertheless to most naive followers, thus necessitating the Forbidden Index to maintain their Purity of Faith Doctrine by denouncing any literature contrary to their so called creation.

To Pope Pius XII, “I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians.” ~Mahatma Gandhi

"Textus Receptus" is the preferred version by the King James translators, rather than the older texts such as the "Codex Alexandrinus," "Codex Sinaiticus," or the "Vatican Manuscript." Scholars recognize manuscripts falling into groups that are known as "Text-Types" or "Families."

"The [Codex] Sinaiticus is a manuscript that was found in 1844 in a trash pile in Saint Catherine's Monastery near Mt. Sinai, by a man named Mr Tischendorf. It contains nearly all of the New Testament plus it adds the 'Shepherd of Hermes' and the 'Epistle of Barnabas' to the New Testament. The Sinaiticus is extremely unreliable, proven by examining the manuscript itself. John Burgon spent years examining every available manuscript of the New Testament. He writes about Sinaiticus... 'On many occasions 10, 20, 30, 40 words are dropped through very carelessness. Letters, words or even whole sentences are frequently written twice over, or begun and immediately cancelled; while that gross blunder, whereby a clause is omitted because it happens to end in the same words as the clause preceding, occurs no less than 115 times in the New Testament.'" ~Let's Weigh the Evidence, Barry Burton writing of the Codex Sinaiticus. Note: The Codex Sinaiticus appears to have been created in the 4th century.

When a new God was fashioned, the scribes assisted in creating a God of miracles, "It is strange and amazing history that I have to tell, but it is true... Every word of the charge, which I make. It is an account of the deliberate and malicious corruption of the most ancient and honorable religion in the world. It involves the interpolation and destruction of a vast literature, and finally the ruin of one of the greatest civilizations ever known, to cover up the crime. And so successfully was this work of interpolation and destruction brought about that few people of the present even suspect the colossal humbug that was played upon the world... The accusation, which I make is that those religious beliefs constituting what is known today as the Christian religion do not owe their origin to the teachings and practices of a Jewish itinerant named Jesus Christ, but came into being in quite another manner, and actually existed before the time he is supposed to have lived. Indeed it is a matter of grave doubt among profound scholars whether any such person ever lived, or as to whom he may have been if he did live." ~J.R.L. Morrell, Spiritism and the Beginnings of Christianity, Foreword.

The families derived from a particular original of the texts that showed a specific preference in interpretations due to geographical and ethnic affiliations or patterns. The four main text-types recognized being: The Alexandrian text-type, named because it is associated with the Church at Alexandria, Egypt. Most of the papyri manuscripts, and the uncial, all capital letters, manuscripts are indicative of this Alexandrian text-type. The manuscripts reflective of this text-type are known as the "Codex Sinaiticus," Aleph," and "Codex Vaticanus, B." The Western text-type, named due to its text-type prevalent in the Western Church [Catholic].

It is found in the Greek manuscripts and also in the Latin translations used by the Western church. The Byzantine text-type, named for of its association with the Byzantine Empire. Often referred to as the "Majority Text" because the preponderance of surviving manuscripts of this type. The Caesarean text-type is associated with the Church at Caesarea. It is represented by what is known as "Family 1" and "Papyrus 45."

Francis of Assisi issues first rules of his brotherhood [the Franciscan Order]

AD 1209-Pope Innocent III is unable to convert the Albigenses, who believed in a dualistic struggle of a God of Evil and a God of Good [Dualism, also practiced by the Cathari].

In 1205 Dominic Guzman is sent by Pope Innocent III to try and convert the Albigenses heretics. After much effort and little success the Pope approves of more serious measures to exterminate this group [1209-1229]. Pope Innocent III approves of the Albigensian Crusade that proceeds to kill the Albigensians and the Cathars [vegetarians and fish-eaters], who believed in equality of the sexes, and lived in France.

Christianity would not have spread as quickly, or at all, if the Romans had to become vegetarians, "And when he had been brought to Archelaus and the doctors of the Law had assembled, they asked him who he is and where he has been until then. And to this he made answer and spake, 'I am pure; [for] the Spirit of God hath led me on, and [I live on] cane and roots and tree food.'" ~G.R.S. Mead, Gnostic John the Baptist: Selections from the Mandæan John-Book. Forgotten Books, p. 104. 2007.

"Probably the most interesting of the changes from the familiar New Testament accounts of Jesus comes in the Gospel of the Ebionites description of John the Baptist, who, evidently, like his successor Jesus, maintained a strictly vegetarian cuisine." ~Bart D. Ehrman, Lost Christianities: The Battles for Scripture and the Faiths We Never Knew, 2003, Oxford University Press, pp. 102, 103. ISBN 0-19-514183-0. p.102.

“That there were two different views among the Ebionites as to the birth of Christ is stated frequently by Origen [cf. e.g. Contra Celsum V. 61], but there was unanimity in the denial of His [Jesus] pre-existence and essential Divinity, and this constituted the essence of the heresy in the eyes of the Fathers from Irenæus on.” ~Schaff, A select library of Nicene and Post-Nicene Fathers of the Christian Church, 1904, footnote 828.

The Cathars do not believe in practicing their religion in huge Cathedrals but met in open air or in small houses. Did Pope Innocent III plan to eradicate this group merely because they had sacrilegious Gnostic manuscripts that told of the relationship between Jesus and Mary Magdalene, or because they did not accept Catholic Doctrine, refusing to recognize Jesus and the symbol of the cross, or just refused to accept the authority of the Pope? Regardless, the outcome is yet another dark page in Catholic History. The Crusaders are ordered to take the town of Beziers and massacre all the inhabitants [men, women, and children], including the Roman Catholics who resided there.

Gnostics aggressively opposed the Roman Catholic Church, which had not yet developed all of its doctrines, believing that the Catholics did not actually serve the true God but only the Evil creator, the Demiurge; a subordinate deity who is the creator of the world. When a form of Gnosticism appeared in France in the 13th century, the so-called Albigensian, or Catharist's heresy, the Catholic Church launched the first Inquisition to exterminate it, and about half of France while they were at it.

When the papal legate is questioned as to how to distinguish between those loyal to the Catholic Church and the Cathars, because the Crusaders are hesitant to kill their fellow Christians and Pope Innocent III ruthlessly replies, “Kill them all! God will look after his own.”

In 1213 a Catholic Monk writing of the account, states that this town was inhabited by only two hundred or so of the Cathars, and when the Crusaders demanded that the Cathars be surrendered to them, the townspeople, mostly Catholics, defiantly refused, even on penalty of excommunication, preferring to die as heretics rather than to live as Catholics.

It is estimated that on 22 July, Mary Magdalene's Feast Day, that between fifteen to twenty thousand [15,000-20,000] Catholic inhabitants are slain along with the two hundred [200] Catharis. The last Cathar stronghold is the fortress Montsegur that falls in March of 1244.

What the Church does not reveal, is that some of the besieging soldiers, accepting the beliefs of the Cathars, actually joined them knowing they would meet a similar fate. After a ten-month siege two hundred Cathar men and women surrender, they are given a fifteen day extension, perhaps to perform some religious functions, and then walk gloriously, down the mountain, into huge burning fires awaiting them.

The Cathars, worshippers of Mary Magdalene and John the Baptist, believed that redemption came from leading a good life and that earth and man were created by the devil. Salvation is reached by knowing and renouncing Satan's evil world and the evils of the flesh [They also believed in reincarnation]. “Know ye not that ye are Gods?”

This Gnostic revelation [exposed in the Dead Sea Scrolls] pertains to interpretations not available to the Catholic counterparts due to suppression of Freedom of the Press that endures even in the 21st century. If man is made in the image of God, then does God not live in all men? The Gnostic response is an equivocal, “Yes!” But is most assuredly denounced as heretic by the Church due to the ramifications that in essence, we are all Gods and it would negate Original Sin, as God cannot sin.

Why were the Gnostics persecuted? Because they professed, “Seek not the Law in your Scriptures, for the Law is life, whereas the Scripture is dead. I tell you truly, Moses received not his Laws from God in writing, but through the living Word. The Law is living Word of living God to living prophets for living men. In everything that is life is the Law written. You find it in the grass, in the tree, in the river, in the mountain, in the birds of Heaven, in the fishes of the sea; but seek it chiefly in yourselves. For I tell you truly, all living things are nearer to God than the Scripture, which is without life. God so made life and all living things that they might by the everlasting Word teach the Laws of the true God to man. God wrote not the Laws in the pages of books, but in your heart and in your spirit. They are in your breath, your blood, your bone; in your flesh, your bowels, your eyes, your ears, and in every little part of your body. They are present in the air, in the water, in the earth, in the plants, in the sunbeams, in the depths and in the heights. They all speak to you that you may understand the tongue and the will of the living God. But you shut your eyes that you may not see, and you shut your ears that you may not hear. I tell you truly, that the Scripture is the work of man, but life and all its hosts are the work of our God. Wherefore do you not listen to the Words of God, which are written in His works? And wherefore do you study the dead Scriptures, which are the work of the hands of men? ” ~The Nazarene Way of Essenic Studies: The Essene Gospels of Peace, The Original Hebrew and Aramaic Texts Translated and edited by Edmond Bordeaux Szekely.

To Pope Pius XII. “I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians.” ~Mahatma Gandhi

This disclosure reaches further back into history than suspected, to the ancient Greeks and even Egyptians, the Greek healing gods Asklepios, and the Egyptian god Imhotep [Remember the Egyptian high-priest made into a god in 2686 B.C.E? The first recorded deification of a human being?] This entourage includes Isis [female god], Osiris, and Thoth.

A collection of letters from the Church Fathers reveal the mystery tradition under another guise for the Church cannot admit to have adopted and practiced Egyptian mythology and lore.

AD 1210- The Council of Paris declares sodomy to be a capital offense, which marks the start of a militant anti-sodomy campaign by the Catholic Church.

AD 1211- 1215-The Albigensians, Massacre: historical truths of great religious importance are suppressed by the Catholic Church as is illustrated by the fact that there is not a single work available in the English language on the most shameful chapter of the history of the Middle Ages. Painfully evaded in English and American historical literature, and the incredible callousness with which Catholic writers defend this subject is finding its way into standard works of reference.

Was it not the Americans, and their liberalism, that convinced the world that killing a man for his religious convictions was wrong, much to the chagrin of the Catholic Church? Ordered and directed by the no less than Pope Innocent III, at least 100,000 men, women, and children [and perhaps as many as a quarter of a million or more], who defied Rome are brutally slaughtered, hunted down and killed for their religious beliefs, which the Roman Catholic Church deemed a potential threat to its hierarchy [Purity of Faith]

Known as the Albigensians, people of Albi, is misleading, for Albi and its region were only the central part of the principality of Toulouse, France. The influence of the talented culture of the Spanish Arabs had, through the liberal Christians of Barcelona, Spain, extended to the south of France in the 11th century, while the predominant culture of Europe was still almost entirely squalid and ignorant, suffering under the tyrannical rule of the corrupt and lascivious Popes.

With the Papal Legates complaining that 1,000 cities and towns were lost to Rome [collection of taxes by the Church was a priority], Pope Innocent III embarks upon a Crusade to “Free” these lands from the heretics and declares in one of his letters, Luchaire, p. 146, that his “Crusaders” have captured 500 towns and castles. While his 220,000 soldiers took several years to exterminate the heretics, the number of victims fighting for their religious freedom can only be vaguely appreciated. The Catholic plea, which the Protestant historian H. C. Lea, “History of the Inquisition,” 1906, Ch. III, has singularly admitted, is that the doctrines of the Albigensians would, if accepted, have ruined the structure of civilization.

The Encyclopaedia Britannica, and the Encyclopaedia Americana, in paltry notices of the historic outrage, have made the shameful inaccuracy that the Albigensian clergy released their followers from all moral obligations. This is, presumably, what would, in their view, have led to moral ruin. The province, instead of facing social or moral ruin, was admittedly the most prosperous in Christian Europe and Pope Innocent III said nothing about moral license or social interests; and that according to authorities the Albigensians were the sternest critics of the vices of the Christian clergy.

The most serious attempt made to understand the ideas and conduct of the heretics in “Les Idées Morales Chez les Hétérodoxes Latins au Début du XIII^e Siècle,” 1903, in Vol. XVI of the “Bibliothèque des Hautes Études,” shows that the conduct of the initiated or esoteric members, Perfecti, of the sect was “Ascetic to the point of cruelty,” and that they permitted the great body of their adherents to live ordinary, decent, human lives.

It is ironic that the code of the initiated heretics, which is now assailed by the Church is just that which in Christendom made saints of the few monks and nuns who observed it, strict celibacy, deprivation of luxury, fasting, etc., and in the case of the Albigensians it was convincingly based upon a belief, borrowed from ancient Persia through the Manicheans, that the devil [Lucifer] had created the body and all matter, including man.

Thus, by rejecting the Old Testament, Genesis creation theory, and the Incarnation, which gave Jesus a material body, they condemned themselves to persecution from their Catholic contemporaries. They had Bishops, churches, and nuns, and the Pope's legates reported to Rome that the Church was in danger of perishing, so widely had their heresy spread. The hundreds of thousands of ordinary members seem to have known little about the esoteric doctrines of "The perfect" and to have been alienated from the Roman Church due to its corruption and carnal vices.

No one denounces this comprehensive corruption more strongly than the Pope himself, but, as today, they did little to control it, the authority on contemporary France, Prof. Luchaire, gives us an appalling picture of morals during this period in his "Social France at the Time of Philip Augustus." ~Engl. Trans. 1912.

The Church sends the Dominicans [founded by Saint Francis, 1208] to convert these heretics and having failed to make any impression in Provence, France, Pope Innocent then calls for what he describes as a Crusade [remember the purpose of the Crusades was supposedly to free Jerusalem].

However, the greed for plunder and other treasures is the primary impetus, although many encyclopedias and research books do not claim it, 20,000 knights and 200,000 footmen march south under Simon de Montfort, a poor noble who coveted, and eventually received, the principality as a token of gratitude from the Pope for murdering men, women, and children.

In an extant letter, XI, 232, the Pope instructs his Legates to disarm the Count of Toulouse by lying, and to this end he treated the prince with the gravest injustice. As the "Crusaders" slaughter 20,000, including babes in arms, in the first city they took, it is here that the Monk, Legate, is reported to have said, "Slay all, the Lord will know his own," which is what they did, and the carnage continues for three years, including the minority Catholic population, which the Church claims to protect. ~See H. C. Lea's account, History of the Inquisition, Chs. III and IV, the only attempt to give an account of the monstrous rampant killings.

In the "Encyclopaedia of Religion and Ethics," we find that a full and accurate study is sorely needed, for the Catholics again rewrite history to lessen the reporting of brutal carnage perpetrated upon the poor souls of man for their devious ends. ~Prof. Luchaire's Innocent III, Vol. 3 [of 6 vols.], 1904-8, is closest to a true account of the murderous sins of the Church in the name of God and also the works of J. McCabe, in the Rationalists Encyclopaedia, which gives a brutally frank account of the Catholic Church throughout history.

AD 1212-Fifth Crusade ends in disaster [Two Children's Crusades] Thousands of children end up being sold into slavery, hence the name, "Children's Crusade." Stephen of France leads one contingency of over 30,000 children.

AD 1213-Pope Innocent proclaims a Crusade against the Prussian pagans and John Lackland of England King John is forced to surrender his French possession to King Philip II of France in 1206, and refuses to accept Stephen Langton as the new Archbishop of Cantbury in 1207, is eventually excommunicated in 1209 by Pope Innocent III. Pope Innocent issues an interdict halting all public church services in England and plans an invasion with the assistance of King Philip II. King John reluctantly surrenders to the authority of the Pope and receives his lands back under a feudal fief.

Innocent's tyrannical rule is abruptly ended in 1215, June 15th, when he is further subjected to signing the Magna Charta, which delineates the rights and privileges of men in his kingdom. The Church does not accept this document claiming human basic rights and yet, today, claims to be the champion of said rights throughout history. Marriage for noble and refined women is frequently a business deal with love between the partners seen as unimportant: marriage is made to forge territorial alliances, maintain peace amongst the nobility, or enrich a family's fortunes. Before the Magna Carta puts a stop to it, the king has the right to sell off widowed noble women to the highest bidder, and there are even cases of kidnappings so that the king can collect his customary fee.

To formally and lawfully take the Crown from the royal monarchs of England by an act of declaration, on August 24, 1215, Pope Innocent III annuls the Magna Carta; later in the same year, he places an Interdict [prohibition] on the whole British Empire, and from that time until today, the English monarchy and the entire British Crown [in principle] belongs to the Universal Roman Catholic Pope.

By swearing to the 1213 Charter, in fealty, King John declares that the British-English Crown, and all of its possessions, including all future possessions, estates, trusts, charters, letters patent, and land, are forever bound to the Pope and the Roman Catholic Church, as the recognized landlord. Five hundred years later, the New England Colonies in America become a part of the Crown as a possession and trust named the "United States."

The charters under which most of the colonies in America are settled, are given by the King of England, and incorporated certain persons, with powers to hold the lands granted, to establish a government, and make laws for their own regulation. These are called Charter-Governments.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

By agreeing to the Magna Carta, King John had broken the agreement terms of his fealty with Rome and the Catholic Pope, which means that he lost all rights to the kingdom, and the royal English Crown is theoretically turned over by default to the Pope and the Roman Church. On America's one dollar $1 private Federal Reserve System [a Crown banking franchise] Debt Note one will notice in the base of the pyramid the Roman date MDCCLXXVI, which is written in Roman numerals for the year 1776.

The words Annuit Coeptus Novus Ordo Seclorum are Roman Latin for Announcing The birth Of The New Order Of The World. ~The Real American History Not Taught In Schools on the 227th Anniversary of the First 4th Of July 1776.

The year, 1776, signifies the birth of the New World Order under the Crown Temple when the American Crown Colonies became the Chartered Government called the United States, in recognition to the Declaration of Independence, and since that date, the United Nations [another legal Crown Temple by charter] rose up and refers to every nation as a State member.

The Jews are accused of kidnapping Christian children and cannot escape kidnapping charges as Pope Gregory X defends the Jews, "It happens sometimes that Christians lose their children and that the enemies of the Jews accuse them of having kidnapped and killed these children in order to offer sacrifices with their heart and blood, and it also happens that the parents themselves, or other Christians who are enemies to the Jews, hide the children and attack the Jews, demanding of them, as ransom, a certain sum of money, on the entirely false pretext that these children had been kidnapped and killed by the Jews."

AD 1214-Dominican Order is founded. Formally recognized in 1216 by Pope Honorius III. Founded, originally, on the principles of chastity and poverty to do the Lord's work, this order will later have its original teachings changed by Church authorities to allow ownership and possessions.

During their quest to spread Christianity they will also spread corruption within the New World. This is not to say that all were corrupt. However, the legacy of Christianity is plainly visible today in the governments of most third world countries. You decide if there was more harm than good.

AD 1214-1298-Roger Bacon became a Franciscan friar at the tender age of 33, after teaching and doing private research on languages, experimental science, and astronomical tables at Oxford. Bacon is considered one of the fathers of modern experimental science.

A realist at heart, Bacon makes the bold claim that all of education needs to be revised, and that the revisions could be found in his work. The early Christians and their superstitious ignorance in interpreting Scriptures held nations at bay in their efforts to progress in the realm of science, even declaring the non-existence of alien beings.

This opinion of Saint Augustine is still held by fundamentalist groups, which is commonly held to stifle the progress of science due to Biblical interpretation. At the request of Pope Clement IV, Bacon writes his "Opus Majus" [Major Work]. Pope Clement IV having demanded to see the documents, which Bacon claimed had been misunderstood: what he meant was that he could write such material, not that he already had written it. Bound by a Papal oath of secrecy, he composed, without the knowledge of his superiors, a three volume encyclopedia on the sciences. Jerome of Ascoli, the Minister General of the Franciscans, condemned his work due to the "Suspect novelties" they contained.

Bacon, in his appeal to the Pope, lost, serving two years in prison for his writings. Bacon, disenchanted by the corruptness of the system, thereupon began work on his final publication: a scathing criticism of Christianity, published the year of his death.

The "Opus Majus" is an encyclopedia of all the sciences, with the implementation of grammar, logic, mathematics, physics, moral philosophy, and experimental research.

Bacon's groundbreaking ideas about the study of science are cause for his condemnation by the Franciscan Order for his heretical views, he challenges what the Church accepts as truth and how it goes about proving what is truth. In 1278, the general of the Franciscan Order, Girolamo Masci [later to become Pope Nicholas IV], forbids the reading of Bacon's books and issues instructions for the arrest of Bacon. "Ten days after the death of Nicholas IV, 1292, the twelve cardinals assembled in Rome but two years and three months were to pass before they gave the Church a Pope." ~The Popes: A Concise Biographical History, op. cit., p. 19.

"For Scripture, which confirms the truth of its historical statements by the accomplishment of its prophecies, teaches no falsehood; and it is too absurd to say... 'There is a race of human beings not descended from that one first man.'" ~Saint Augustine, De Civitate Dei, xvi, 9.

Upon spending ten years in prison, Bacon returns to Oxford, where he writes the "Compendium Studii Theologiae," [A Compendium of the Study of Theology] in 1292, shortly before his death. Due to his extensive knowledge of the sciences he is known as "Doctor Admirabilis." Six of his works are printed, between 1485 and 1614, and the "Opus Majus" is edited and published in 1733. He presents the necessity of changes necessary in the learning of the sciences by way of different methods of studying languages and nature.

The Holy Mother proclaims advancement of the sciences, but in practice, stifles all scientific advancements. Roger Bacon, "Doctor Mirabilis," whose "Attempts to develop the natural sciences" were so drastically suppressed, was the genius of the dawning "Revival of Learning," later to be known as the Renaissance. He wrote over eighty books, the most essential in a secret cryptogram for fear of the ecclesiastical consequences, which he finally suffered.

"It is in these treatises that Bacon speaks of the reflection of light, mirages, burning-mirrors, of the diameters of the celestial bodies and their distances from one another, of their conjunction and eclipses; that he explains the laws of ebb and flow, proves the Julian calendar to be wrong; he explains the composition and effects of gunpowder, discusses and affirms the possibility of steam-vessels and aerostats, of microscopes and telescopes, and some other inventions made many centuries later. ... 'Pope Nicholas IV, on the advice of many brethren condemned and rejected the doctrine of the English brother Roger Bacon, Doctor of Divinity, which contains many suspect innovations, by reason of which Roger was imprisoned' 12 or 14 years." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 13 112.

AD 1215-Fourth Lateran Council by Pope Innocent III, 1200 Bishops attend and the pronouncement is made to condemn the free thinking Cathari and Waldensis.

The dogma of "Transubstantia" is declared [the changing of bread and wine into the body and blood of Jesus Christ, and the binding of all Catholics to attend confession at least once a year].

It was not by chance that, in that same year 1198, Pope Innocent III, 1198-1216, suppressed all of the earlier records of earlier Church history by establishing the Secret Archives. ~Catholic Encyclopedia, Farley ed, vol. xv, p. 287.

Freedom of speech is not within the realm of the Catholic Church, "Use against heretics the spixcommunication, and if this does not prove effective, use the material sword." ~Pope Innocent III, 1215.

Regarding Confession, the Pope declares all are sinners [Christian and non-Christian alike].

Pope Innocent censures the Magna Charta, which guarantees minimum universal rights to the poor, and the bill of rights for the poor and mankind [Although the Church claims to have always represented the poor, centuries later the Popes will also condemn the American Declaration of Independence and human rights]

The Fourth Lateran Council commands that all Jews, in Catholic lands, must now wear distinguishing labels or garments, and Vatican orders further confine Jews to walled off ghettos, which will set a precedence for their Catholic Hitler to follow in the 20th century.

"Let that be deemed a proper Eucharist, which is administered either by the Bishop, or by one to whom he has entrusted it." ~Saint Ignatius of Antioch in The Epistle to the Samaritans, 105 A.D.

Pope Innocent III urges celibacy among the cleric. Confession serves more than one purpose for some priests, Hilario Caone, of Besançon, an uncurbed profligate who confessed that he had solicited with success some forty women while performing his duties in the Church of San Francisco de Paula of Seville. Fernando de Valdes confessed having solicited with successful results seven single and three married women and one pregnant woman while in confession!

He openly boasted of his sexual conquests and made no secret of his illicit affairs with his female penitents while dispensing absolution! ~Read The Ten Commandments by Joseph Lewis

Pope Innocent III also withholds the appointment to Bishop from Cardinal Hugh until he can show proficiency in Theology [the Bishop could neither read or write]. Many of the Cardinals and Bishops are illiterate and cause embarrassment to the Church when they preach and practice different Doctrines than that established in Rome [Quum Pateretur in Littoratura Defectum, 1219] Another Bishop is removed from the ranks due to illiteracy in 1221.

"...All have sinned and need the grace of God, and that the Eucharist may be approached with greater reverence; and lastly, that parish priests may know their flock, lest a wolf may hide therein." ~Romans 3:23, and Catholic Encyclopedia.

In the neighborhood of Narbonne two monks were employed, Peter de Chateauneuf, and Dominic. Chateauneuf is murdered, most likely by Raymond, the Count of Toulouse, for Chateauneuf refusing to remove the Excommunication he had pronounced against the prince.

Saint Dominic protected the Waldensian subjects, he, having witnessed the purity of their lives and manners, and having heard with indignation the calumnies with which they were aspersed by their adversaries, who proclaimed to the world their own hypocrisy, avarice and ambition. He was incensed at the wickedness practiced on the uncorrupted subjects, and indignant at his own unmerited disgrace.

The event is disastrous with Pope Innocent obtaining what he wished, a decent appearing pretense for his horrible and most iniquitous persecution; and thousands of the sincerely devout are erroneously accused of horrendous charges, or as accessories to crimes, and persecuted.

Pope Innocent III issues a decree that all of the Jews must wear special marks on their dress to distinguish them more clearly from the Christians. The Church wants to deter Jewish business with Christians who may unknowingly associate with Jews. The embarrassing discriminating Catholic imposed dress insignias will differ from place to place: sometimes Jews have to wear a yellow, or a red badge on their attire, while at other times a ridiculous pointed hat, the so-called "Jew hat."

Humiliation is used to separate the Jews from Christians; the Jews are then mandated to live together in isolation, in deprived ghettos, closed off by distinctive walls. They will also need permits to live and work, considered a "Privilege" for which they must pay a fee to the prince, Bishop or town magistrate. This so-called privilege of the Jews of Rome is reaffirmed by Catholic Emperor Henry VII.

AD1215-Nobility and the clergy are the same regarding the corruption of institutions. The Pheasants unite and force King John of England to sign a document guaranteeing them basic rights as people, the Magna Charta [June 15, 1215]. These basic rights and liberties for the common man are the basis of civil liberties laws today. Even the King is obliged to obey the law. ~See Maitland, Canon Law in England, pp. 158-179.

Pope Innocent III dislikes the Magna Charta, giving basic human rights for the poor, and has this document declared annulled. Church Authorities feel it is a threat to their power and enforcement of Church Doctrine. So much for the Church's claim to representing the poor for centuries.

Pope Innocent III instigates the Lateran Council to pass the law enforcing the wearing of a distinctive Badge upon the Jews; and in 1218 Stephen Langton, Archbishop of Canterbury, brings it into operation in England, the Badge taking the form of an oblong white patch of two finger-lengths by four, which is seized upon by Hitler, in the 20th century, to identify Christ killers in his Final Solution.

AD1217-The Fifth Crusade ends up in Egypt. The Saracens offer Jerusalem to the Christians if they will leave Egypt. The Crusaders push on only to lose decisive battles and end up returning to Europe in 1229 without accomplishing their task of freeing Jerusalem.

AD1220-The Dominican Order is founded. The backbone of the future heinous Inquisition established by the Church to curb Protestantism, heathens, skeptics, and Jews.

AD1222-Synod of Oxford, which forbids the building of new Jewish Synagogues, and denies to Jews entrance into Christian churches.

AD1225-1274(?)-Saint Thomas Aquinas, Dominican Order, 1244, ordains 1250; accepts and is rebuffed by the Pope. Throughout the years the Church has been methodically removing all mention of Astrology from the Bible. ~Note: Astrology is still mentioned in Matthew 2:2, 2:16, Ezekiel 14:6, Daniel 2:27, & Exodus 40:38.

Saint Thomas says, "The cause of idolatry is twofold: dispositive on the part of man; consummative on the part of the demons. Men were led to idolatry first by disordered affections, inasmuch as they bestowed divine honors upon someone whom they loved or venerated beyond measure. This cause is indicated in Wisdom, xiv, 15: 'For a father being afflicted by bitter grief, made to himself the image of his son who was quickly taken away; and him who then had died as a man, he began now to worship as a god . . .'; and xiv, 21: 'Men serving either their affection or their king, gave the incommunicable name to stones and wood'. Second: By their natural love for artistic representations: uncultured men, seeing statues cunningly reproducing the figure of man, worshiped them as Gods"

"Hence we read in Wisdom, xiii, 11 sq., 'An artist, a carpenter, has cut down a tree proper for his use in the wood...and by the skill of his art fashions it and makes it like the image of a man...and then makes prayers to it, inquiring concerning his substance and his children or his marriage'.

Third: By their ignorance of the true God: man, not considering the excellence of God, attributed divine worship to certain creatures excelling in beauty or virtue: Wisdom, xiii, 1-2: '... Neither by attending to the works have [men] acknowledged who was the work man, but have imagined either the fire, or the wind, or the swift air, or the circle of the stars, or the great water, or the sun and moon, to be the Gods that rule the world'. The consummative cause of idolatry was the influence of the Demons who offered themselves to the worship of erring men, giving answers from idols or doing things, which to men seemed marvelous, whence the Psalmist says [Psalms. 95:5]: 'All the Gods of the gentiles are Devils.' ~Excerpts from The Catholic Encyclopedia.

Saint Thomas Aquinas accepts Astrology as a science and in his writings gives approval to this alleged pseudo-science undertaking but stops short of saying Astrology can forecast the future with a certain amount of credibility from the stars. Aquinas is rebuked by the Church Authorities for this is heresy, which is classified as prophesying by demons.

Thomas promotes the art of memory as a religious observance that one can use to meditate. He believes that by focusing on images one can connect with God. His "Ars Memoria" is unwittingly used later on in history by others to meditate upon magical symbols and to justify the use of Tarot Cards in prediction of future events, as many of the Knights Templar could neither read nor write, and it is said that Tarot Cards, or a facsimile, were used as a mnemonic device to teach them the secrets of their Order. Close inspection of a deck of Tarot Cards will show a strong resemblance to an Order of Knights and their protective powers. Picture cards have been used from the 8th century by the Saracens.

In the Middle Ages, Christian theology developed a hierarchy of "Angels," who helped mankind and were associated with God. The "Fallen angels," or "Demons," are led by Satan, who is considered the "Original fallen angel."

In English versions of the Bible, the term "Demon" is translated as "Devil," and in the New Testament, demon is associated with an "Evil spirit," [Incubus, the male demon, often portrayed as a black raven, and Succubus, the female demon]. ~See Genesis 6:4.

Christian concepts regarding demons originated from references to evil creatures or "Unclean spirits" mentioned in the Old Testament of the Bible. Incubus, is a "Male demon" that is believed to seek sexual intercourse with sleeping women [found in Medieval Catholic literature].

Legend has it that the incubus, and his female counterpart, the "Succubus," were fallen Angels, and union with an incubus was thought to produce demons, witches, or deformed children. King Arthur's legendary wizard, Merlin, is said to have been the offspring of an Incubus [The word Incubus is Latin for "Nightmare"].

"Clearly the person who accepts the Church as an infallible guide will believe whatever the Church teaches." ~Saint Thomas Aquinas, 1225-1274, Summa Theologica.

If we examine church history, it is hard for us to see God's inspiration at work, as there is God, and then there are the churches, composed of ordinary fallible human beings set upon being infallible. "Church history will be now be established... We shall seek to print our own account." ~Pope Sixtus V, 1585-1590, Encyclopédie, Diderot, 1759.

Aquinas turns to philosophy and how Christianity is the "Chosen Faith" of God and the gratitude of the Church is shown by sainthood. Thomas, the Chief theologian and philosopher of the Roman Catholic Church, is heavily influenced by "Celestial Hierarchies," and in his treatise "Summa Theologica," describes angelic beings and their realms.

Thomas believes that the Eucharistic bread and wine undergoes a metamorphosis and actually changes into the body and blood of Christ just before consumption [Transubstantiation].

Aquinas believed in pantheism, which is the belief in the freedom to worship and toleration of worship of all gods.

Albert the Great, Dominican monk and instructor to Aquinas proclaimed that each of the nine choirs of angels had 66,666 legions of which each contained 6,666 angels for a total of slightly less than four billion. Others have estimated the number of angels at 301,655,722 with 133,306,668 making up the ranks of the fallen angels.

Saint Thomas Aquinas later declares the bodies of Saints as vessels of the Holy Spirit and worthy of veneration [rejected by the Protestant Reformists].

“Sex, the Church decreed, was for procreation only [not recreation], claiming that a woman could not conceive if she enjoyed the sexual act and that a man who tried to give pleasure to a woman whilst copulating was ‘Loving Satan.’” ~Sex and Superstition by G.L. Simons.

Using philosophical rhetoric, Saint Thomas Aquinas came up with the generally accepted thinking:

- ✠ God Exists
- ✠ There is Retribution After Death
- ✠ There is Life After Death

That God exists is based on the fact that if there is Law and Order in the Universe, then there must a Universal Law Giver [or Creator], if God is just, then there also follows that there must be a reward and punishment. That there is life after death then there must be a higher order to judge who is to receive or be denied. Many faiths believe in a hereafter. However, they differ in the interpretations of how rewards and punishments are to be dispensed [if at all].

Who is to say who is right or who is wrong? Will we receive our just reward in the hereafter, the kingdom of God? Will we come back into this world to try again, and again, until we succeed in living a better life [reaching karma]? Poets have argued this point for centuries.

Pope Honorius at the Council of Sens orders the “De Divisione Naturae” by the Irishman John Erigena [born 815] condemned and burned as heresy. Erigena had refused to tender his works to censorship by the Church prior to publishing and his radical ideas of the universe not being created from nothing but was the manifestation of God’s will angered the Church Authorities. Pope Nicholas I also condemned his works, “De Divina Praedestinatione,” dealing with predestination and the will of man.

“If any one still harbors the traditional prejudice that the early Protestants were more liberal, he must be undeceived. Save for a few splendid sayings of Luther, confined to the early years when he was powerless, there is hardly anything to be found among the leading reformers in favor of freedom of conscience. As soon as they had the power to persecute they did.” ~Preserved Smith, From The Protestant Inquisition, Reformation Intolerance and Persecution, by Dave Armstrong

AD 1226-King Louis VIII of France declares that all persons excommunicated by the Diocesan Bishop under Pope Honorius III shall “meet punishment.” Excommunication is seen as a religious/political means of removing one’s enemies... permanently [although the Church still denies complicity]. The Church does not condone this edict but neither does it make any conscientious effort to stop the king’s orders from being enforced.

AD 1229-From the Council of Toulouse, we have Canon 14 “We prohibit the permission of the books of the Old and New Testament to laymen, except perhaps they might desire to have the Psalter, or some Breviary for the divine service, or the Hours of the blessed Virgin in Mary, for devotion; expressly forbidding their having the other parts of the Bible translated into the vulgar tongue.” ~From Pierre Allix, Ecclesiastical History of Ancient Churches of the Albigenses, published in Oxford at the Clarendon Press in 1821, reprinted in USA in 1989 by Church History Research & Archives, P.O. Box 38, Dayton Ohio, 45449, p. 213.

Again, the Church does not want the lay person to read the Bible for fear of their gaining knowledge and bans the Bible to all lay people.

AD 1231-Pope Gregory IX formally sanctions the “Office of the Inquisitor” to be headed by Franciscan and Dominican Orders to punish heretics [Remember, heresy is any thought or action which differs from the views of the ruling oligarchy... The Almighty Church]. And so, the Medieval Inquisition begins, for the better glory of God(?)

The Roman Church has always had murderous inclinations, “If forgers and malefactors are put to death by the secular power, there is much more reason for excommunicating and even putting to death one convicted of heresy.” ~Saint Thomas Aquinas, 1225-1274, Summa Theologica.

This Judicial Institution (?) is tasked with quelling all challenges to the proclaimed supreme power of the Roman Catholic Papacy. The Dominican Inquisitor, Tomas de Torquemada, is personally credited with 2,000 stake burnings. The Church downplays situations such as this as being isolated and caused by over exuberant enthusiasts.

Excommunication: "It would seem that an excommunication, which is pronounced unjustly has no effect at all. Because excommunication deprives a man of the protection and grace of God, which cannot be forfeited unjustly. Therefore excommunication has no effect if it be unjustly pronounced." ~Catholic Encyclopedia. This is the interpretation of the church regarding falsely administered excommunication, however it doesn't address the taking of a life unjustly due to someone's false application or interpretation, nor the recompense of one's family for the loss of a wage earner. "Excommunication is separation from the communion of the Church, as to fruit and general suffrages." "If, however, he [the accused] were to condemn the sentence, he would 'Ipso facto' sin mortally."

What the church authorities are trying to say here is do not question their authority [right or wrong]. One is supposed to accept his or her sentence with grace.

"The sentence of the pastor is to be feared whether it be just or unjust." ~According to Pope Gregory, Hom. xxvi in Evang., and Catholic Encyclopedia.

"Pope Gregory IX (1227-41), Book V, tit. xxxix, ch. lix, Si quem, distinguishes minor excommunication, or that implying exclusion only from the Sacraments, from major excommunication, implying exclusion from the society of the faithful. He declares that it is major excommunication that is meant in all texts in which mention is made of excommunication. Since that time there has been no difference between major excommunication and anathema, except the greater or less degree of ceremony in pronouncing the sentence of excommunication." ~The Catholic Encyclopedia, 1999.

This cognitive dissonance does not right the wrongs of the Church, or justify the persecution of those holding other beliefs. Ipso Facto [after the fact] the church attempts legalize in order to justify their actions. If sin is sin and there is no question in the minds of the clergy [the Church], then why do the Church authorities have a distinguishable problem with right is right and wrong is wrong?

Conrad of Marburg is appointed as the first Inquisitor of Germany, setting a pattern of persecution. In his reign of terror, he claims to have uncovered many nests of "Devil worshippers" and willingly adopts the motto of: "We would gladly burn a hundred if just one of them was guilty."

The Catholic Church on the civil rights of heretics, "When you arrive in a city, summon the Bishops, clergy and people, and preach a solemn sermon on faith; then select certain men of good repute to help you in trying the heretics and suspects denounced before your tribunal. All who on examination are found guilty or suspected of heresy must promise to absolutely obey the commands of the Church. If they refuse, you must prosecute them." ~[Saint] Pope Gregory I, order to the Dominicans on their duties in the Inquisition, 1231.

AD 1232-1316-Ramon Lull, visionary and occultist, a former adherent to the Knights Templar, writes of the dangers revealed after submitting many of the Knights to torture, that the future of the Church is in peril due to the revelations.

Pope John Paul II in the 20th century begins to divulge some of the secrets of the Church in AD 1994, that Jesus was not born on December 25th, and on March 12th 2000, asking for forgiveness of the sins of the Church. What is he preparing for? Is there a looming danger foretold by another visionary over 750 years ago?

Many of the Templars were supporters of the Cathars, coming from the same regions as the Templars, and the Church, fully aware of this through the Inquisition dug up the bodies of Cathars buried on Templar lands, burned their remains in the hope that the families of the Cathars would change their ways and accept all of the beliefs of the church as presented by their administrators.

The Templar Absolution from the book by Birks and Gilbert, "The Treasure of Montségur," Chapter 8, states, "I pray God that he will pardon you your sins as he pardoned them to Saint Mary Magdalene and the thief who was put on the cross."

Heretical thought, to say the least, but where did the Templars obtain this knowledge and why did they believe it? In the Spanish domain of Aragon, the Roussillon Templars were arrested and tried [tortured], but found innocent. Pope Clement V disbands the Order of the Templars anyway.

Pope Gregory IX initiates the Roman Inquisition and sets up the Spanish Inquisition in 1232, but the people and most of the rulers [even most of the Bishops], resent it, and in the beginning, do little until the monks persuade the fanatical Queen Isabella, of Spain, to restore it. And, the Church and Spain will get rich off of the blood and wealth of the deposed Jews as well as the inhabitants of the soon to be conquered countries.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

AD 1233-Pope Gregory IX formally establishes the Papal Inquisition and sends Dominican friars to South France, and Northern Italy, to conduct inquests. The Dominican Order set as one of their goals the conversion of Jews to Christianity. This aim, backed by the power of the Inquisition, brings on a wave of religious persecutions.

AD 1234-The Council of Tarragona, again, clarifies the sanctimonious church's position regarding the lay and possession of Bibles, which it continues to modify with each generation's contemporary interpretation of Scripture.

The Church is against all but their ministry from reading the Bible.

"No one may possess the books of the Old and New Testaments in the Romance language, and if anyone possesses them he must turn them over to the local Bishop within eight days after promulgation of this decree, so that they may be burned lest, be he a cleric or a layman, he be suspected until he is cleared of all suspicion." ~Council of Tarragona, 1234 C.E.

AD 1234-Pope Gregory IX, eager to increase the recognition of the Papacy, by a bull directs all Christian men to assume the cross, and to proceed to the Holy Land. To this he says, "The service to which they are now invited is an Effectual Atonement for the miscarriages of a negligent life. The Holy War is a compendious method of discharging men from guilt, and restoring them to the Divine favor. Even if they die on their march, the intention will be taken for the deed, and many may in this way be crowned without fighting."

By this bull, Pope Gregory, in effect, opposes the Doctrine of the Atonement of Christ, and in contempt of it, is telling Christians to expect justification from God, on the merit of their military service, rendered at the command of his self proclaimed sovereignty. In this manner, the human mind is removed from a faith in Christ, and men are taught to rely on pardon from the sovereign pontiff, and are led to absorb the fatal doctrines that wickedness might be committed, with the flattering prospect of gaining Divine favor, without an improvement of heart and lifestyle.

The power of the Pope was then but a structure of wickedness which encouraged men with the hopes of heaven, while remaining in superstition and the indulgence of sinful living.

AD 1235-1303-Pope Boniface VIII persuades Pope Celestine V to resign after five months in office for incompetence while in position. He writes many letters to the Pope telling of the corruption amongst the Frank clergy, claiming some clerics had four or five concubines in their beds and were also guilty of drunkenness, lasciviousness, loose morality, and corruption.

Pope Celestine is described as a man of "Limited learning and completely lacking in experience of the world." ~The Popes: A Concise Biographical History, p. 238.

The Cardinals realize that their Pope is "Of disastrous simplicity," and are also moved to demand his resignation. ~The Papacy, George Weidenfeld & Nicolson Ltd, London, 1964, p. 87.

Chief among those who pressed Pope Celestine V to abdicate is Benedetto Gaetani [Caetani], 1234-1303, a wealthy and robust prelate of great ambition whom it is widely believed had a speaking tube put through the walls of the Pope's room, and a "Voice from Heaven" bade the Pope to resign. Pope Celestine V, a simple man, is soon convinced that "God had spoken to him," and he abdicates.

In February 1296, Gaetani purchases the highly sought Papacy from the cardinals for 7,000 gold florins and becomes Pope Boniface VIII, 1294-1303. Pope Celestine is then immediately imprisoned in a gloomy castle and is so brutally treated that he soon dies. Pope Boniface VIII enriches his family, the Gaetani, especially Pietro, a son of very dubious character, and the Pope soon enters into a bitter quarrel with the Colonna, an influential and powerful family responsible for relentlessly driving the corrupt Popes from Rome. Under the deceitful leadership of one of his Cardinals, Boniface's army destroy the property of the Colonnas and scatter the family members all across Europe.

The letters of Pope Boniface VIII also make known the English nuns murdering their babies. "Mirror of Saxon Laws" accepts as law the accepted custom of execution of non-believers by burning at the stake. The Church will claim non-involvement by looking the other way so as to deny any association in the crimes of the monarchies and suppression of clerical sins. "Avarice, lofty claims and frequent exhibitions of arrogance made him many foes he [Pope Boniface VIII] was believed by many to be in league with the Devil." ~Encyclopaedia Britannica, 3rd ed., 1797.

The Church protects itself: After the publication of the 11th edition, in 1898, the Catholic Church purchases the Encyclopaedia Britannica and in a few short years new editions are soon devoid of any "Offending" materials superseding earlier versions that are now ordered destroyed. ~History in the Encyclopedia, D. H. Gordon and N. L. Torrey, New York, 1947; also, The Good News of the Kingdoms, Norman Segal, Australia, 1995.

The world is no fooled by the moral invasions of the Papacy, "Antiquity reports that laymen are exceedingly hostile to the Papacy, and our experience certainly shows this to be true at present." Distaste for the Popes reflect a secret doubt as to their claim of a Divine Origin to their religion. ~ Clericis laicos, 1296.

The Church, through its secular arm, the Inquisition, will work hand in hand with royalty in eliminating their enemies [religious abuse by proclaiming the need to perpetuate the faith]. The reign of Pope Boniface VIII is a period of one of the most scandalous in the long gallery of "Bad Popes."

Apart from a very serious but un-provable charge that he had his predecessor, Saint Celestine V, murdered, Pope Boniface did take the Papacy from him by fraud and later also imprisoned him. Boniface's successor, Pope Clement V had, as part of his own corrupt bargain for acquiring the Papal chair, convened a Council of the French Church in 1312 to try the dead Pope Boniface, and, at this trial, voluntary Roman witnesses, chiefly priests and lawyers, accused the deceased Pope Boniface of blasphemy, cynical skepticism, denial of immortality, defense of adultery, and mockery of all religion, ethics, and morals.

The statement of the Catholic Encyclopedia that the prelates acquitted the Pope of the charges is false. They were afraid to make any pronouncement on the evidence, which was endorsed by the greatest lawyers of France. Gregorovius, the Papal historian, tries to relieve the Pope of the charge of vice on the grounds that he was eighty years old, however, the Catholic Encyclopedia makes him only sixty-eight years old when he died, or less than sixty at his accession.

The severe strictures on him in Prof. Rockwell's article in the "Encyclopedia Britannica," have been deleted out of the article in one edition, but one historical tome, which reflects the general opinion of historians, states that the Popes were not all that pious.

"The evidence seems conclusive that he [the Pope] was doctrinally a skeptic" and, "It is probable that for him, as well as for Pope Alexander VI, the moral code had little meaning." ~Cambridge Mediaeval History, vo. VII, 5.

"Nothing impure can enter into the Kingdom of God." ~Revelations 21:27.

Does this include the Popes? The Church, and its leaders, will say anything to convert, corrupt, and gain financial rewards from its followers, "Churchmen in high places were constantly unmindful of truth, justice, purity, self-denial; many had lost all sense of Christian ideals; not a few were deeply stained by Pagan vices... The earlier years of Aeneas Sylvius [Pope Pius II, 1458-64], the whole career of Rodrigo Borgia [Alexander VI], the life of Farnese, afterwards Pope Paul III, until he was compelled to reform himself as well as the Curia, ... All with disregard for the most elementary virtues. Pope Julius II fought and intrigued like a mere secular prince; Pope Leo X, although certainly not an unbeliever [it was His Holiness who framed the famous clever epigram, 'What profit has not that Fable of Christ brought us.']" ~Encyclopedia Britannica, 14th Ed, vol. 19, 217.

Pope Alexander VI's illegitimate son, Giovanni, is appointed Duke of Gandia, while his other bastard son, Cesare, is appointed Archbishop of Valencia at age 17, but Cesare later resigns to head the Papal Armies that will subdue all those who refuse to acquiesce to the supremacy of his father, the lascivious and murderous Pope in Rome.

The great poet Dante voices the contemporary opinion in Italy when he places the Pope deep in hell in his famous poem, "The Divine Comedy." Dante's famous poem is often described as the most intensely Christian work ever written when in fact, the first portion, and supposedly best part of it, "Hell," is hideously pagan and heterodox. ~Canto XIX, 52-7. -from J. McCabe, Rationalists Encyclopaedia.

"Without Hell Christianity isn't worth a damn!" ~Forgery in Christianity by Joseph Wheless.

Dante [author of The Divine Comedy, known as Dante's Inferno] calls him the "Prince of the New Pharisees."

L.C. Jane says that he aimed "To free the Church from all obligations to the State," that ultimately the Pope fell victim to the hostility of a single Roman family, the Colonna; and that "His death in a frenzy of impotent rage and cursing marks the fall of the universal dominion of the Papacy." ~The Interpretation of History, p. 103.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

He died in 1303, having for two days refused food, through fear of poison. His last days are described by Gregorovius as "Beyond measure terrible." Feelings of fear, suspicion, revenge and loneliness tortured his spirit.

It was reported that he shut himself up in his room, "Beat his head in frenzy against the wall, and was at last found dead in his bed." ~Rome in the Middle Ages, vol. V. 595.

AD 1238-The Sixth Crusade led by the French, and Jerusalem is eventually captured in 1240. Fortifications are resumed but the Knights Templar are diverted from their endeavors by the Huns along the eastern frontier, the new enemy of Christendom.

AD 1239-Robert le Bougre, Bulgarian, of the Dominican Order, commands one hundred-eighty [180] victims to be burned at the stake for heresy. After numerous complaints regarding his conduct and his speedy trials, he is removed from his position of authority. The Church will claim this as an isolated incidence and that the Inquisitors are honorable men placed in a stressful situation. ~John 15:6 is the Scripture used by the Church to justify punishment of heretics via burning.

AD 1240-1291-The Spanish, Jewish Mystic, Abraham ben Samuel Abulafia believes he is the Messiah of both the Christians and the Jews. Some stories say that in 1280 he is appointed Jewish ambassador and visits the Pope Nicholas III.

Another story says that Pope Nicholas II upon hearing of the proposed visit of Abulafia issued an order that he heretic would be burned to death if he dared to set foot in Rome.

The heretic, Abulafia, arrives and is immediately arrested and incarcerated for a month before being set free. Abulafia is very outspoken in his criticism of Christianity but appreciated the similarities between the Kabalistic God and the Trinity. His published works are "The Book of the Righteous" and "The Book of Life."

AD 1242-Jerusalem is lost to Turkmenian horsemen with the help of Egyptian priests. The Turkmenians are descendents of the Scythians warriors who lived along the Ukraine and Asian Steppes of Russia and were known for their tenacity and ruthlessness in battle.

AD 1242-The early Christians have inserted their own interpretations into the Jewish Scriptures and now claim that the Jews have adulterated the word of God [The Talmud is declared as superstitious writings] and have deleted some of the ancient works. Jewish synagogues are looted and their religious artifacts burned in Paris, France. The continuance of rewriting history in the alleged efforts of religious purity continues.

AD 1245-Seventh Crusade, England and France begin a new Crusade to free Jerusalem from the so-called infidels. King Louis IX, with a force of fifty thousand men, and William Lansford leading the English military embark upon their quest to kill all Non-Catholics with the approval of the Pope and in the name of God.

AD 1246-The Council of Béziers, in 1246, and the Council of Alby, in 1254, prohibited all Catholics from resorting to the services of any Israelite physicians.

In France, in 1301, in return, a Decree was issued prohibiting a believer in the Hebrew religion from practicing medicine on a person of the Catholic faith. ~From The Ten Commandments by Joseph Lewis.

"Name me one science that has not been a rebel! Every new one has been Satan... The Church has declared accursed, the vast edifice of the sciences and of modern institutions which she has excommunicated stone by stone... Is there one science you can name that was not originally a revolt against authority?... Medicine above all was truly and indeed Satanic, a revolt against disease, the merited scourge of an offended God... It is expressly forbidden to invent, to create." ~Michélet.

AD 1250-Seventh Crusade ends in defeat with King Louis IX being taken prisoner and eventually ransomed for release.

AD 1252-King Alphonso X of Castile, Spain, and León gathers together fifty Astronomers and puts together the "Alphonsine Tables" used by astrologers, astronomers, and navigators for the next three hundred years.

Pope Innocent IV authorizes all types of torture during the Holy Inquisition to further stamp out heresy. Pope Innocent IV also officially sanctions Torture as a means of extracting confessions from suspects accused of crimes against the Church. But, Inquisitors can only mete out life imprisonment to those who are found guilty.

However, if the victims are turned over to the civil authorities, the authorities can dole out execution by burning at the stake, which will absolve the Church of any direct implication of killing their detractors. "But the ecclesiastical powers were fully complicit with the civil powers in carrying it out. It was first authorized by Pope Sixtus IV, and directed and carried out by Torquemada, a Dominican monk appointed by Pope Sixtus IV. And it was approved and expanded by Pope Innocent VIII." ~New Advent (Roman) Catholic Encyclopedia.

The Catholic Faith will flourish on ignorance and credulity, which the Church diligently fosters and exploits for its unholy purposes of wealth and power, of Rule by Ruin, as none but priests could read and write, while many kings and public men were mere soldiers and illiterates, and public business was carried on through written documents, and the public offices of State, from the King's chancellor and ambassadors to the lowliest clerks, were priests, and thus the Priests and Church increased their sinister and diabolical power of dominance and wealth.

Pope Innocent IV, is forced to leave Rome by Emperor Frederick II, takes refuge, along with his corrupt Curia, in Lyons, France. Upon the Pope's return to Rome after Frederick's death, Cardinal Hugo writes a letter thanking the people of Lyons reminding them that they also owed a debt to the Pope and his court. His remarks provide a peek of the shameless depravity of the Papal court: "During our residence in your city, we [the Roman Curia] have been of very charitable assistance to you. On our arrival, we found scarcely three or four purchasable sisters of love, whilst at our departure we leave you, so to say, one brothel that extends from the Western to the Eastern gate." ~De Rosa, p. 119.

"God loves all his children, by gum. That don't mean he won't incinerate some. Can't you feel those hot flames licking you..." ~Austin Lounge Lizards, Jesus Loves Me.

"For six or seven centuries after the overthrow of the Roman government in the West, very few outside of the clergy ever dreamed of studying, or even of learning to read and write. Even in the 13th Century an offender who wished to prove that he belonged to the clergy in order that he might be tried by a Church court, had only to show that he could read a single line; for it was assumed by the judges that no one unconnected with the Church could read at all. It was therefore inevitable that all the teachers were clergymen, that almost all the books were written by priests and monks, and that the clergy was the ruling power in all intellectual, artistic, and literary matters, the chief guardians and promoters of civilization. Moreover, the civil government was forced to rely upon churchmen to write out the public documents and proclamations. The priests and monks held the pen for the king. Representatives of the clergy sat in the king's councils and acted as his ministers; in fact, the conduct of government largely devolved upon them." ~Dr. James Harvey Robinson, The Ordeal of Civilization, pp. 157-8.

The Roman Catholic Church has a long tradition of supposedly policing its own, however slovenly it may have done the job, however inadequately it continues to perform this function, the religious hierarchy has fought hard and long for this privilege, exerting its powers as soon as Christianity was first legalized by the Roman Empire, and it has guarded it jealously ever since, with harsh measures being meted out to those who dare challenge her, right or wrong. "As long as there are solemn Christian believers in this world, they will always aspire to convert or castigate those opinions of unbelievers, even if their opinion tells them it is unwise, or their conscience, that it is wrong." ~E. Christopher Reyes, cf. John 7:49.

This mendaciousness perpetrated upon by the saintly clergy to the detriment of the innocent [on the part of the membership] will continue until the late 20th century when the more independent thinking Catholics of America will finally claim that enough is enough and dare to take the child molesters of Christ to court in litigations filed across the country.

During the Middle Ages, in most countries, clerics were tried in ecclesiastical courts, and if found guilty, sent to ecclesiastical prisons. This is the origin of the phrase "Benefit of Clergy," as decisions were often rendered, not for the good of other prisoners, but for the benefit of any priest or monk apprehended for wrongdoings by the constabulary.

From priests to Popes, their sins have been forgiven by the Holy Mother, the Church; from adultery, rape, plunder, sodomy, incest, theft, murder and some say, even bestiality. A system of indulgences is incorporated by the Great Mother, the Holy Church of Rome, whereby acceptance of a system of exchange allowed the priests to employ their exceptional rapport with God to perform certain religious acts for laymen, and for a price, the clergy would pray, fast, and read Scripture for a particular person [In other words, priestly services were bought]. This was later developed into the buying up of time one might have to spend in purgatory.

"Incest, if not detected, was to cost five groats; and six, if it was known. There was a stated price for murder, infanticide, adultery, perjury, burglary, etc. 'O disgrace of Rome!' exclaims Claude d'Espence, a Roman divine: and we may add, O disgrace of human nature! for we can utter no reproach against Rome that does not recoil on man himself. Rome is human nature exalted in some of its worst propensities."
~D' Aubigne.

Benefit of Clergy: "The exemption from the jurisdiction of the secular courts, which... Was accorded to clergymen. ... When a clerk was brought before a court, he proved his claim to benefit of clergy by reading, and he was turned over to the Ecclesiastical court, as only the clergy were generally able to read. This gave rise to the extension of the benefit of clergy to all who could read. The privilege of benefit of clergy was entirely abolished in England in 1827. In the Colonies it had been recognized, but by Act of Congress of 30, April, 1790, it was taken away in the Federal courts of the United States. Traces of it are found in some courts of different States, but it has been practically outlawed by statutes or by adjudication." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 2, 446-7.

Saint Thomas Aquinas begins his theological teachings and declares that God created sex organs exclusively for reproduction, sex... If one is married is alright, but not if you enjoy it, and homosexual acts are "Unnatural," and heretical.

AD 1254-1324-Marco Polo: writer, traveler, emissary who experienced first hand the many revelations of a new culture, the Mongols and the Chinese. During his travels he encountered cannibalism in parts of Tibet and Sumatra. Christianity ruled supreme across Europe, however, the Mongols were regarded with suspicion in the West.

Westerners dreaded the Mongols and the Crusaders hoped to use them in their fight against the Muslims making continuous attempts to negotiate an alliance with them for this specific function. Friars John of Carpini and William of Rubruck were sent to establish negotiations with the Mongol ruler, Kublai Khan and eventually the War Lords of Asia are granted a vast amount of tribute from the Vatican coffers to turn their attentions in another direction, thus saving the Holy See from vast destruction.

"A confessor of the Roman church, who wears the 'Crux ansata,' the Egyptian symbol of life... It is remarkable that a Christian church should have adopted so many Pagan symbols as Rome has done."

~Inman.

AD 1256-Jews assemble at Lincoln to celebrate the marriage of a daughter of Berechiah de Nicole are seized on a charge of having murdered a boy named Hugh in 1256. Ninety-one are sent to London to the Tower, for incarceration, eighteen are executed for refusal to plead, and the rest are kept in prison till the expiry of King Richard's control over their property

AD 1258-Pope Alexander IV institutes the Papal Inquisition to address witchcraft and those cases in which there is some clear presumption of heretical belief [manifeste haeresim saparent]. The Cathari have religious rituals similar to the Catholic brethren [consolamentum], and are not spared from charges of heresy and witchcraft.

Those practicing "Manichaeism" are not spared either as their dualism is often interpreted as reverence to the powers of darkness. The Christian Inquisition flourished and today, a great deal of the details remains unknown, due to so much secrecy.

However, it may give some idea of the horrors of this institution if we state that, when the French took the city of Arragon, the Inquisition was broken into, and its sequestered inhabitants released. In addition, today, the Catholic Church is still trying to convince the world that the Inquisition was not all that bad. The Catholic Church found fault with women on all manner of accounts as an historian notes that 13th century priests "...Denounced women on the one hand for... Te 'Lascivious and carnal provocation' of their garments, and on the other hand for being over-industrious, too occupied with children and housekeeping,

“No fewer than 400 prisoners were set at liberty, among who were 60 young girls, who composed the Seraglio [harem] of the three principal Inquisitors.” ~Saladin, Women, vol. II

According to a Dominican of the same period, woman is “...The confusion of man, an insatiable beast, a continuous anxiety, an incessant warfare, a daily ruin, a house of tempest... A hindrance to devotion.”

~From The Witch Hunts: The End of Magic and Miracles 1450-1750 C.E. by Helen Ellerbe from The Dark Side of Christian History.

“Pope Alexander IV was easily led away by the whisperings of flatterers, and inclined to listen to the wicked suggestions of avaricious persons. He continued Pope Innocent IV's policy of a war of extermination against the progeny of Frederick II... The pecuniary assistance these measures brought him was dearly bought by the embitterment of the English clergy and people against the Holy See... The unity of Christendom was a thing of the past.” ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 1, 288.

AD 1259-Pope Clement V allows King Louis IX, of France, to tax the Catholic Church for the first time, and with this money, King Louis IX is able to launch the seventh Crusade. The son of Louis IX is Philip III, who also tried to launch another Crusade, called the Aragonese Crusade, but is a complete disaster. Philip III dies, and the Crusade costs France 1,229,000 Pounds. In those days the Crown collected taxes of 656,000 Pounds per year throughout France, and spent 652,000 Pounds annually to sustain the country, hence the total expenditure for this Crusade is equal to spending the entire country's funds on nothing else but the Christian Crusade for two years! ~A Portrait of King Philip IV (Philip The Fair) By H.Meij, Venerable Master, Tokyo Lodge of Perfection

AD 1260- Long before Hitler, the Council of Arles ordered Jews to wear a round patch, but [graciously] not when traveling.

The date, which a 1988 Vatican sponsored scientific study places the origin of the Shroud of Turin.

Christian Punishment for Lesbianism: The Legal School of Orleans orders that women who are found guilty of Lesbian acts will have their clitoris removed for the first offense; further mutilated for a second offense; and burned at the stake for a third offense. Saint Thomas Aquinas will expand the definition of sodomy to include lesbian sex and any sexual act where the woman is not in the bottom submissive position [missionary position].

The burning of heretics is officially decreed in the 11th century.

AD 1263-With the outbreak of the Barons' War, violent measures are adopted to remove all traces of Jewish indebtedness either to the British King or to the higher barons. The Jewries of London, Canterbury, Northampton, Winchester, Cambridge, Worcester, and Lincoln are looted [1263-65].

AD 1265-1268-Pope Clement IV, fathers two illegitimate daughters, celibacy being officially sanctioned by the Church in 1022 and again in 1123.

AD 1265-1321-Duranto Alighieri, better known as Dante, is poet to the Pope. Dante falls in love with Beatrice Portinari and proclaims, “Behold, a god more powerful than I who comes to rule over me.”

In addition, in her premature death is inspired to write and publish his poem, “The Divine Comedy,” in Italian, the language of the people, NOT the Latin used by the Church authorities. Many have never heard of this poem but will remember it if I mention, “Danté's Inferno,” where Dante describes the Deity [God] as, “He that with turning compass drew the world's confines.”

Lucifer is portrayed as an icy monster amongst followers, cold and without feelings. Danté is threatened with excommunication for publishing his work with illustrations [pictures] portraying the Pope and his entourage burning in Hell.

Philip, the Friar, is identified as the new Pilate for his actions against the Templars in this work. What is it that Dante knows that causes him to place the Pope and most of the clergy of the Vatican in Hell? It is at this time in history that “Hell” is officially portrayed as a burning inferno. “Hell” is translated from the Greek, “Hades,” which means dead or place of the dead [grave]. Dante also uses Gnostic and Hermetic themes in his writings [Hellenistic and Egyptian].

The Jews, realizing the futility of their belief that Jahveh rewarded the good and punished the wicked in this life, adopted the other worldly scheme, their religious leaders restoring confidence in Jahveh by promising a spiritual and eternal reward for their sufferings in their national disasters.

To Pope Pius XII, “I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians.” ~Mahatma Gandhi

The founders of Christianity accepted the barbaric side of this doctrine "The fire that is not extinguished" as fully as the attractive side, while other movements of the time, the Eleusinian Mysteries, Mithraism, Manichaeism, etc., accepted the Greek and Roman prospect; and the Buddhists of the Middle Ages emulated Christianity by adding their own horrors to the repulsive 'Doctrine of Hell'. ~See Mrs. Braddugh-Bonner, The Christian Hell, 1913.

The better educated divines in all Churches except the Roman, which still permits no departure from the medieval idea, and the Fundamentalist now acknowledge with a shudder that the whole postmortem scheme is an error and the doctrine of hell repulsive; though this does not prevent them from retaining the dogma that a Holy Spirit has guided the Church for the last 1,900 years. ~from The local Heaven and Hell of Medieval fancy has passed away: Bishop Barnes in Should Such a Faith Offend, 1927, p. 179.

Hell, as an eternal burning conflagration is from the zealot imaginations of early Christians to strike fear in the people to convert, "The Jewish Gehenna, which became the medieval Hell, is untrue." ~says Bishop Masteman in The Christianity of Tomorrow, 1929, p. 58.

Less responsible Christian writers than Bishops use more explosive language, but they almost invariably avoid the fact that Jesus and Paul and all the Fathers, scholars, divines, and mystics of all branches of the Christian Church accepted, until the last century, what they call the repulsive medieval doctrine of hell. Most Christian scholars now leave the complexion of the next world open, and many now begin to question immortality. ~J. McCabe, Rationalists Encyclopaedia.

Danté, a troubadour, and also alleged to have been a member of the secret Templar Order called La Fede Santa, in his "Paradiso" describes the heavenly steps [from ancient Gnostic teachings] assembled on the petals of an elaborate rose. Gathering under the "Rose" signifying a secret convene. Its sexual connotations are known to but a few.

It is ironic that the secret societies, which the Church rebukes, are within the very passageways that they hold so sacred. Even this vast hierarchy with all its powers and forces cannot quell the teachings of scholars throughout the centuries nor the artists from portraying double meaning artistry onto the walls of the massive cathedrals that inundate the European countryside.

Danté refers to the Virgin Mary in his writings, "Here is the Rose, Wherein the Word Divine was made incarnate." The rose is used by secret societies to portray the sexual nature of female gods by a virtual play on letters [Rose/Eros] giving womanhood Divine Wisdom. Dante matriculated in the guild of physicians and apothecaries.

On 6 July, 1295, Dante speaks to the General Council of the Commune in favor of some modification in the "Ordinances of Justice" after which his name is found recorded as speaking or voting in the various councils of the republic, the commencement of his political career. Dante wrote his first book, the "Vita Nuova," or "New Life," of lyrical verse and poetic prose, telling the story of his love for Beatrice, whom he had first seen at the end of his ninth year.

Beatrice, daughter of Folco Portinari, and wife of Simone de' Bardi, died in June, 1290 [when Dante was twenty-five years of age] Dante wrote the "Vita Nuova" about the year 1294. Dante's love for his lost love, Beatrice, is purely spiritual and mystical, the "Amor amicitiae" defined by Saint Thomas Aquinas: "That, which is loved in love of friendship is loved simply and for its own sake."

Its resemblance to the chivalrous worship that the troubadours offered to married women is merely superficial. The book is dedicated to the Florentine poet, Guido Cavalcanti, whom Dante calls "The first of my friends," and ends with the promise of writing concerning Beatrice "What has never before been written of any woman."

At the beginning of 1300 the Papal Jubilee is proclaimed by Boniface VIII. It is doubtful whether Dante was among the pilgrims who flocked to Rome. Florence was in a disastrous condition, the ruling Guelph party having split into two factions, known as Bianchi and Neri, "Whites" and "Blacks," which were led by Vieri de' Cerchi and Corso Donati, respectively. Roughly speaking, the Bianchi were the constitutional party, supporting the burgher government and the Ordinances of Justice; the Neri, at once more turbulent and more aristocratic, relied on the support of the populace, and were strengthened by the favor of the pope, who disliked and mistrusted the recent developments of the democratic policy of the republic.

The discovery of a plot on the part of certain Florentines in the Papal service [18 April] and a collision between the two factions, in which blood was shed (1 May), brought things to a crisis. On 7 May Dante was sent on an unimportant embassy to San Gimignano. Shortly after his return he was elected one of the six priors who for two months, together with the gonfaloniere, formed the Signoria, the chief magistracy of the republic.

His term of office was from 15 June to 15 August. Together with his colleagues, he confirmed the anti-Papal measures of his predecessors, banished the leaders of both factions, and offered such opposition to the papal legate, Cardinal Matteo d'Acquasparta that the latter returned to Rome and laid Florence under an interdict. Guido Cavalcanti had been among the exiled Bianchi; having contracted a fatal illness at Sarzana, he was allowed, together with the rest of his faction, to return to Florence, where he died at the end of August. This, however, was after Dante's term of office had ended. Enraged at this partial treatment, Corso Donati, in understanding with his adherents in Florence, appealed to the pope, who decided to send a French prince, Charles of Valois, with an armed force, as peacemaker. "The [Biblical] 'Peacemakers' here does not mean pacifists of any kind, it refers to those who were working for 'Shalom', the state of peace, prosperity and general well-being that would arrive when the pillars of 'Tsedeq' and 'Mishpat' were finally put in place... The reference applies solely to the Qumran Community." ~Christopher Knight & Robert Lomas, The Hiram Key: Pharaohs, Freemasons and the Discovery of the Secret Scrolls of Jesus.

We find the famous poet, Dante, in 1301, prominent among the ruling Bianchi in Florence. On 19 June, in the Council of the Hundred, he returned his famous answer, "Nihil Fiat," to the proposed grant of soldiers to the Pope, which the Cardinal of Acquasparta had demanded by letter. After 28 September he is lost sight of and is said to have been sent on a mission by the Pope at the beginning of October, but this is disputed. On 1 November Charles of Valois entered Florence with his troops, and restored the Neri to power. Corso Donati and his friends returned in triumph, and were fully revenged on their opponents.

On the 27th of January 1302, Dante is charged with hostility to the Church and of corrupt practices and is sentenced [on 27 January, 1302, along with four others, to a heavy fine and perpetual exclusion from political office.

On March 10th, together with fifteen others, he is further condemned, as contumacious, to be burned to death, should he ever come into the power of the Commune [return to Rome]. A few years before his exile Dante had married Gemma di Manetto Donati, by whom he had four children. Eventually Dante withdraws from active participation in politics. He proceeds to prove that a single supreme temporal monarchy such as an empire is necessary for the well being of the world, that the Roman people acquired universal sovereign persuasion by Divine Right, and that the authority of the emperor is not dependent upon the Pope. ~From the works of Tomas Hancil.

Dante, under the protection of Ugucione della Faggiuola, a Ghibelline soldier who had for now made himself lord of that city. The Florentines renew the sentence of death against the poet on 6 Nov. 1315, his two sons being included in the condemnation. In 1316 several decrees of amnesty are passed, and it appears that Dante was excluded. The poet's answer was his famous letter to a friend (Epist. ix), absolutely refusing to return to his country under shameful conditions. In 1319 the "Inferno" and "Purgatorio" were already known while the "Paradiso" was unfinished, sent in installments to Can Grande, and completed [1319 to 1321].

The "Divina Commedia" is an allegory on human life, in the form of a apparition of the world beyond the grave, written with the purpose of converting a corrupt society to righteousness, "To remove those living in this life from the state of misery, and lead them to the state of felicity." Dante's strong denunciation of the ecclesiastical corruption of his times, and his condemnation of the contemporary Popes, including Pope Clement V, in hell has led to some suspicions as to the poet's demeanor towards the Church.

In the 14th century attempts are made to find heresy in the "Divina Commedia," and the "De Monarchia," is burned at Bologna by order of a papal legate. Dante has been hailed at times as the precursor to the Reformation. ~From the works of Edmund G. Gardner.

The ambition of the Vatican was to appear learned in the eyes of the senseless multitude. The Dominicans and Franciscans were the only orders, which devoted themselves to study. The Popes built ample buildings and many princely houses. They attended the deathbeds of the rich and famous, and urged them to bequeath immense legacies to their respective orders. Persecution of so-called heretics, consumed a significant amount of their time and employment.

While the other orders had, by their immoralities reduced themselves to contempt; the Dominicans and Franciscans, having the semblance of worth, not the substance, revived the authority of the Roman Church, supporting and strengthening every semblance of authority and practiced superstition, and by hypocrisy, induced numbers to enrich both the Papacy and monarchical establishments. These two orders, having seized without justification a controlling interest in England, arrogated to themselves great power.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

“The Church deliberately inculcated further ignorance of great portions of human life... A modern antiquary has unearthed documentary evidence for 86 cases of animal excommunication... The medieval custom of condemning and executing criminal beasts, the sow, which has devoured a child, or the ox, which has gored a man.” ~Coulton.

England then continued to sink, appears, from a commission which Innocent IV gave to John the Franciscan, in 1247, as follows: “We charge you, that, if the major part of the English prelates should make answer, then, by Ecclesiastical censures, to withdraw their appeals, any privilege or indulgence notwithstanding.” So shameless are the Popes, in their exactions and so perfect is their assumed dominion over all of mankind, that they grossly duped the Franciscans themselves, and are not afraid of the consequences.

AD 1266-1308- John Duns Scotus, Scottish theologian, philosopher, and founder of a school of Scholasticism known as “Scotism.” Born in Duns, Scotland, he enters the Franciscan Order and studies at both the universities of Oxford and Paris.

Scotus later lectured at both universities on the “Sentences,” which is the basic theological textbook written by the Italian theologian Peter Lombard. Exiled in 1303 from Paris for refusing to support Philip IV, king of France, in his quarrel with Pope Boniface VIII over the taxation of church property, Duns Scotus returns to Paris, where he lectures until 1307. He is transferred to Cologne, Germany, where he lectures until his death on November 8, 1308. His important writings consist of two sets of “Commentaries on the Sentences” and the treatises “Quodlibetic Questions, Questions on Metaphysics,” and “On the First Principle.”

Due to his elaborate and skillful analysis, particularly in his defense of the doctrine of the “Immaculate Conception,” he is known as “Doctor Subtilis,” Latin for, “The Subtle Doctor.” In his philosophical system, Duns Scotus closely analyzes the concepts of causality and possibility in an attempt to establish a meticulous proof for the existence of God [primary and infinite being]. ~Cf. Romans 3:22-24

“In order to know the truth in all its fullness and to fulfill one's eternal destiny, a person must not only make use of the insights afforded by natural knowledge or philosophy but must also be taught by divine revelation. Revelation supplements and perfects natural knowledge, and, in consequence, no contradiction can exist between them.”

“For Duns Scotus, theology and philosophy were distinct and separate disciplines; they were, however, complementary, because theology uses philosophy as a tool. In his view, the primary concern of theology is God, considered from the standpoint of his own nature, whereas philosophy properly treats of God only insofar as he is the first cause of things. With regard to the nature of theology as a science, however, Duns Scotus departed sharply from his Dominican forerunner, Thomas Aquinas”

“Whereas Aquinas defined theology as primarily a speculative discipline, Duns Scotus saw theology as primarily a practical science, concerned with theoretical issues only insofar as they are ordered toward the goal of saving souls through Revelation. He argued that through faith a person may know with absolute certainty that the human soul is incorruptible and immortal; reason plausibly may argue the existence of such qualities of the soul, but it cannot strictly prove that they exist.” ~Encarta Deluxe Encyclopedia, 1998.

“The scientific and ascetic training of the clergy left much to be desired, the moral standard of many being very low, and the practice of celibacy not everywhere observed. Not less serious was the condition of many monasteries of men, and even of Women... The members of the clergy were in many places regarded with scorn... As to the Christian people itself, in numerous districts ignorance, superstition, religious indifference, and immorality were rife... Worldly ideas, luxury and immorality rapidly gained ground at the center of ecclesiastical life. When ecclesiastical authority grew weak at the fountain-head, it necessarily decayed elsewhere... In proportion as the Papal Authority lost the respect of many, resentment grew against both the Curia and the Papacy... This vast Ecclesiastical wealth, ... Such riches in the hands of the clergy... Higher intellectual culture was confined in a great measure to the higher clergy... The parochial clergy were to a great extent ignorant and indifferent.” ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 12, 700-703, passim.

"The authority claims of Roman Catholicism ultimately devolve upon the institution of the Papacy.

The Papacy is the center and source from which all authority flows for Roman Catholicism. Rome has long claimed that this institution was established by Christ and has been in force in the Church from the very beginning. But the historical record gives a very different picture. This institution was promoted primarily through the falsification of historical fact through the extensive use of forgeries as [Saint] Thomas Aquinas' apologetic for the Papacy demonstrates. Forgery is its foundation." ~William Webster, The Church of Rome at the Bar of History.

"It was not, as is sometimes asserted, universally accepted in the Middle-Ages." ~Columbia Encyclopedia.

Scotus was a realist in his philosophical approach, like Saint Aquinas, but differs from Aquinas on basic issues such as their views of perception. Duns Scotus held that an uninterrupted, innate grasp of particular things, is obtained through understanding [rationalism and coherency] and the senses. Aquinas maintained that intellect does not directly know the material things but only the universal natures that are abstracted from sense perceptions [generalities versus specifics, as one does not have to see God to know that he exists; only as man is able to understand the nature of things and not necessarily God's intended understanding of the nature of the universe].

Duns Scotus believed "Universals" as such do not exist separately from the mind of man, but that each entity or "Singular" thing possesses a formally distinct nature that it shares in commonality with other matter of the same kind. This, he taught, provides the unbiased basis of our knowledge of essential truths. Following the Franciscan tradition established by the Italian theologian Saint Bonaventure, Duns Scotus stresses individual freedoms and the primacy of human will and acts of love over the intellect [Perhaps it is this primacy of the individual over the institutional rights of the Church that gains their indignation].

He avoids an arbitrary or preferred view of God's acts, although he points out that the actual existence of matter depends on a free decision made by God, and he argues that our moral obligations depend on God's will. That will, he taught, is absolutely free [free will versus predestination] and not shaped or determined by particular motives. God commands an action not, as Aquinas asserts, because he sees it to be good, but because he makes it good by commanding it.

Duns Scotus is one of the most insightful and diplomatic of the medieval theologians and philosophers known as "Schoolmen." Scotists, who engage in controversy with the adherents of Aquinas, are called "Thomists."

Duns Scotus was a strong supporter of the "Doctrine of the Immaculate Conception," which Pope Pius IX, in 1854 declares as dogma of the Roman Catholic Church. Pope Pius IX will be the last of the Popes to enact the 'Death penalty.' Among Catholics today, it is a little known fact that as late as the 19th century many Roman Catholic Bishops still understood the jurisdiction of the Pope in the same manner as did the early Church members, and when Pope Pius IX sought the mantle of Infallible Supremacy at the First Vatican Council in 1870, Bishop Joseph Georg Strossmayer of Diakovar, of Croatia, rose and spoke these words, "I do not find one single chapter, or one little verse of scripture in which Jesus Christ gives to Saint Peter the mastery over the Apostles, his fellow-workers... The Apostle Paul makes no mention of the primacy of Peter in any of his letters directed to the various churches... What has surprised me most, and what moreover is capable of demonstration, is the silence of Saint Peter himself!" ~Abbd Guelt6e, The Papacy: Its Historic Origin and Primitive Relations with the Eastern Churches, 1866. Cf. Romans 3:22-24

"The Councils of the first four centuries, while they recognized the high position which the Bishop of Rome occupied in the Church on amount of Rome, only accorded to him a preeminence of honor, never of power or of jurisdiction. In the passage, Thou art Peter and on this rock I will build My Church, the Holy Fathers never understood that the Church was built on Peter, super Petrum, but on the rock, super petram, of the Apostle's confession of faith," in the Divinity of Jesus Christ. ~Bishop Joseph Georg Strossmayer of Diakovar, of Croatia.

Pope Clement IV instructs the Franciscans and Dominicans to deal with the "New Christians" who have reverted to their Judaism.

AD 1268-The fall of Antioch, capital of Syria, whereby forty thousand Christians are slain, and another one hundred thousand are sold as slaves by their captors, the Muslims.

The Catholic, "Warrior Monks" catapult Muslim heads into the besieged city of Antioch to strike fear into their enemy, and, hopefully, to bring disease upon the populace therein. ~See Illumination from Les Histoires d'Outremer

Christian Punishment: Frederick of Baden, Duke of Austria, willingly joins his condemned lover, who is sixteen years old, Conradin of Sicily, and the last legitimate Hohenstaufen [Born March 24, 1252], as they are buried alive together.

AD 1268-1314-What Love Does: King Philip the Fair: King of France, at the age of sixteen, is jealous of the Knights Templar, a French speaking order responsible to only the Pope, which has grown powerful, and to whom he is heavily indebted, Philip schemes to destroy them.

Even the poor would bequeath their worldly possessions [what little land or jewels they might have] to the Knights Templar upon their death.

AD 1269- King Richard could give, as a true son of the Christian Church, to the Jewish demands: "If the Jews were not to have intercourse with their fellow citizens as artisans, merchants, or farmers, and were not to be allowed to take usury, the only alternative was for them to leave the country." ~London, Jewish Encyclopaedia.

Saint Thomas Aquinas writes that the Jews sin more in their unbelief than do Pagans because they have abandoned the way of justice "After knowing it in some way."

After 1270 it was considered heretical by the Catholic Church not to believe in the existence of werewolves. Thus, many Europeans still believe in werewolves

AD 1271-Due to inter-rivalries, the Knights Templar and Hospitalers have significantly weakened each other's forces. Both Orders had continually abused the Truce agreed to with the Muslims and in retaliation for this the Sultan of Egypt decided to rid himself of the "Faithless Franks."

Sixty thousand Christian lives are sacrificed before the Orders of the Knights Templar. Hospitallers [later to become the Knights of Malta], and the Teutonic Knights [of German origin] eventually flee to Cyprus. Jews are almost routinely prevented from obtaining new business; and as soon as the enactment of 1271 is passed, Henry III, or Edward acting in his name, sold the whole revenue of the Jewry to Richard of Cornwall for as small a sum as 2,000 marks. ~Rymer, Foedera, vol. i. 489.

AD 1271-The Pope is elected via a Conclave of Cardinals. The amusing meaning of this Conclave is: "Shut in with a key." The history of Papal elections for the last sixteen centuries, or since the Papacy became rich, beats the history of presidential elections to a frazzle for bribery, intrigue, and aggressive political struggles.

In 1271 the Cardinals who were assembled for an election in the Italian provincial town of Viterbo, so disgusted the towns folk by wrangling for three years, that the civic authorities locked them in a room and saw to it that none of them left it, or were plotted with outsiders until they elected a Pope.

From that date Conclaves began, though it must be confessed that the new institution by no means put an end to the bribery, intrigue, and assassinations, which continued. ~More information regarding the election of the Popes may be obtained from, Petrucelli della Gattina's Histoire Diplomatique des Conclaves (4 vols, 1864-6), in French, though you will find a good deal of the material in Miss V. Pirie's Triple Crown (1935).

Even in the days when the briberies ran to millions of dollars and the murders to 200, and then there are grave deliberations, and the Cardinals visit each other in their cells, the cubicles. After each vote the papers are burned and the smoke is conducted out by a pipe so that the Italian citizenry and the world may see.

We thus know that there were three "Scrutinies," or examinations of votes, so that it took a considerable time for Pacelli, Pope Pius XII, 1939-1958, to get the necessary two-thirds of the votes.

In other words, although he appeared to be the ablest candidate, the best expert on international affairs, and the best linguist, more than half the Cardinals were at first opposed to him. We can only speculate on their reasons, but we receive with skepticism the report that German and Italian Cardinals tried to prevent his election at the bidding of Hitler and Mussolini. Pacelli, as Secretary of State, had induced Pope Pius XI, to sign an accord with them. Had he not done enough for them? The best authority, the Pope's biographer Rankin, says that the non-Italian Cardinals carried the day for him.

AD 1274-1329-Robert de Bruce, in 1306, proclaims his right to the throne, and on March 27, is crowned King at Scone. Bruce is deposed in 1307 by Edward II's army and forced to flee. All of his estates are confiscated and he, along with his followers, is excommunicated. However, two years later, he challenges the King of England and regains nearly all of Scotland from English rule.

Bruce again defeats the English in 1314 in the Battle of Bannockburn, and twice invades England. How is this all possible? The Knights Templar! The Pope's personal militia, condemned by Pope Clement V, are now forced to live dishonored in exile. The Order's entire fleet of ships, along with their vast fortunes [having established themselves second only to the Roman Catholic Church in wealth, power and prestige], escapes the clutches of King Philip of France and the Pope.

Now refugees, many Templars find sanctuary in Scotland, where Templar graves bear witness to their having lived and died in the 14th century.

King Robert the Bruce, aware that Pope Clement V was persecuting the Knights Templar, and in spite of a Papal Bull ordering him to arrest and detain, to the contrary, takes advantage of the valiant Knights Templar's renegade status, offering them asylum if they will help him fight for freedom against England. The bravery of the Knights, unsurpassed in history, has already made them a feared and respected warrior group throughout Europe, gaining the claim of even the Infidel Muslims, and in 1323 concludes with King Edward II signing a truce, after many humiliating defeats at their hands, for 13 years.

Following the accession of King Edward III in 1327, war breaks again and the Scots, forced to defend themselves against the English, once more have the support of the famous Knights Templar. In 1328 a treaty recognizing the independence of Scotland and the right of Bruce to the throne is signed. ~from Secret History by David Lewis

AD 1274-It was decided at the Council of Lyons, that the Holy Ghost proceeded not only from the Father, but from the Son as well.

King Edward issues a proclamation declaring any Jew found guilty of blasphemy is to be liable to the death penalty.

AD 1275-At Toulouse, France, a witch is burned at the stake after a judicial sentence by her Catholic Inquisitor, Hugues de Baniol. The woman, after being interrogated, "Confesses" to having brought forth a monster after having intercourse with an evil spirit and to having nourished the monster with babies' flesh, which she obtained in her nighttime expeditions.

The belief in such carnal intercourse between human beings and demons was accepted by many, including Saint Thomas Aquinas and Saint Bonaventure. Some Christians held the belief that women rode about at night, hobgoblins, werewolves, and other heathen impostures, as being one of the greatest of sins.

AD 1275-The Cabbalist text "The Zohar" [Book of Splendor] is published by Moses of Leon whose belief is that God gives each individual a unique and personal revelation.

AD 1277-Saint Thomas Aquinas, three years after his death, on the 7th of March, 1277, by the Bishop of Paris, and on the 18th of March, 1277, by the Archbishop of Canterbury, Robert Kilwardby, a Dominican, is condemned for supporting Aristotelian philosophy. Aristotle's works are accepted, then condemned; a vasilation which will continue throughout Catholic history. The canonization of Saint Thomas will cause the withdrawal of the condemnations of Paris, February 14, 1325.

AD 1278- The whole English Jewry is imprisoned; and no less than 293 Jews are executed at London.

AD 1279-Statues of Mortmain greatly reduce the Church's powers to appoint officials to various offices and positions. This marks the end of absolute rule by the Roman Catholic Church in England. Those who seek a higher standard attack the sale of indulgences, forced pilgrimages, excessive veneration of saints, promiscuity, loose moral characters, and the low intellectual standards of the Church.

AD 1280-1290-The Zohar, Sepher Ha-Zohar and, "The Book of Splendor or Light," The principle work of the Kabbalah alleged to have been written by Moses de Leon, Spanish mystic. Traditionally it is attributed to Rabbi Simeon ben Yohai in his 2nd century school.

The Bible is sometimes interpreted symbolically and not literally in its referrals to miracles and happenings. It also offers insight into the Torah, Song of Songs, and the Seven Heavenly Halls of God's Chariot-Throne.

"When pious Christians are arrived at this pitch of Credulity, as to believe that evil spirits or evil men can work real miracles, in defiance and opposition to the authority of the Gospels, their very piety will oblige them to admit as miraculous whatever is wrought in the defense of it, and so of course make them the implicit dupes of their wonder-workers." ~Middleton, A Free Inquiry, p. 71.

God as he is in himself, the unknowable, immutable En Sof [Infinite]. The Roman Church is not beyond admitting the ignorance and superstitions of their flock and their preemptive nature to accept anything out of the ordinary as a miracle.

“There are few religions in which recourse is not had to supernatural aid for miraculous cures. The testimony of reliable witnesses and the numerous ex-votos that have come down to us from antiquity leave no doubt as to the reality of these cures. It was natural that they should have been viewed as miraculous in an age when the remarkable power of suggestion to effect cures was not understood. Modern science recognizes that strong mental impressions can powerfully influence the nervous system and through it the bodily organs, leading in some instances to sudden illness or death, in others to remarkable cures. Such is the so-called mind cure or cure by suggestion. It explains naturally many extraordinary cures recorded in the annals of many religions. Still it has its recognized limits. It cannot restore of a sudden a half-decayed organ, or heal instantly a gaping wound caused by a cancer.” ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 12, 743.

AD1281-1285-His Holiness Pope Martin IV, “Embroided the Papacy in a disastrous twenty-year-long war over Sicily; at one point, he excommunicated the whole island of Sicily, en masse.”

AD 1282- John of Peckham, Archbishop of Canterbury, orders closed all the Jewish Synagogues in his diocese in 1282, and King Edward I issues a writ instructing his officials to assist the Dominican Order by forcing the Jews to listen to Christian conversion sermons.

AD 1284-End of the World: Pope Innocent III computes this date by adding 666 years onto the date that Islam was founded.

The Crusades are declared to be undertaken as a means of fulfilling a vow to deliver the Holy Lands from Islamic Rulers. However, this is later extended to include Mohammedans, heretics, Pagans and anyone under the ban of excommunication. Its primary political motive is to unite all people [the world] and all monarchies under the authority of one absolute ruler, the Popes in Rome.

The 1st Crusade is 1095-1101, 2nd from 1145-47, 3rd is from AD 1188-92, the 4th 1204, the 5th 1217, the 6th 1228-1229, the 7th 1249-52, and the 8th in 1270. Lesser Crusades take place without pontifical authorization in 1571, 1664, and 1669.

The Roman Catholic Church's intent is to rule the world, but their only major obstacle remains, the monarchs, who still maintain their right to rule under Divine Right [birth].

The Council of Albi orders Jews to wear a round patch to mark them as Jews. Perhaps this is where Hitler got the idea to identify the Jews and cause them embarrassment and humiliation.

AD 1284-The beginning dates of English Gothic cathedrals are Canterbury, 1174; Lincoln, 1192; York Minster, 1261; and Exeter, 1280. The collapse of the Beauvais choir in 1284, however, indicated that structural limits had been reached. The transverse span of the nave vaults of these cathedrals was in the range of 9 to 15 m (30 to 50 ft), but the rebuilt Beauvais choir attained a height of 47 m (154 ft). ~Architecture, Microsoft Encarta 98 Encyclopedia. © 1993-1997 Microsoft Corporation.

The Knights Templar played a significant role in the designing and building of the great Gothic cathedrals of Europe, a role not often credited to them, which testifies to an esoteric knowledge of architecture that transcends anything known in Western civilization at that time.

The Gothic cathedrals have baffled historians, rising out of nothingness in terms of any technical precedent during the Middle Ages. Gothic architecture sprang from the Templars devotion to the sciences and their dedication to sacred geometry, the mystical science of numbers, and proportions frequently identified with the Egyptian pyramids and the Temple of Solomon. ~Secret History by David Lewis.

The Christian Gothic cathedrals often took centuries to build and were erected in a time of religious revival, but in most cases the reluctant masses complained bitterly of the sacrifices which the clergy imposed upon them, or the civic authorities candidly boasted, as did those of Florence in 1294, that they just wanted to outshine other cities. Recent authorities insist that this mediaeval art is “Civic art” or “The art of the new communes.”

However, the decisive reply is found in the genuine moral and social history of the Middle Ages. The Cathedral Age coincides with the legendary Age of Chivalry, which is one of the most openly licentious in history. The Age of Chivalry is a time when knights, little more than thieving scoundrels, ran rampant across the country-side stealing and causing mayhem in order to get the poor to side with the lord, who lived in his mighty castle estate. The Age of Chivalry is when the Church recognized these ruffians and decided to send them overseas to deal with the Church's enemies, the infidels of the Islamic Faith, who refused to accept Jesus as their Lord and only considered him a prophet.

Loitering at the doorstep of religious conviction, the great Catholic cathedrals [prostitutes] themselves were not only used on certain days during the whole period for blasphemous and indecent parodies of the Mass, but were also profanely abused every day with frivolity, selling of promotional material, and being used as rendezvous points for soliciting; in Germany the prostitutes were called Cathedral Girls.

Many poor illiterate women have no option but to turn to prostitution, and officially sanctioned brothels [called stews] existed in places such as Sandwich in Kent, Southwark across the Thames from the City of London and the aptly named Cock Lane at Smithfield in London. In Southwark, prostitutes are referred to as 'Winchester Geese' because the brothels are situated in the London See of the Bishop of Winchester, and the Church profits by regularly collecting rents from them.

The rules also state that the stew-holders must be men, that the women must stay with a client all night in order to avoid 'Night-walking,' and that they must not lodge at the brothel. Illegal stews also exist, but are often run by women. The uncouth gargoyles on the facades of many cathedrals reflect the temper of the age as faithfully as do the statues of the saints. Morals, particularly concerning sex, were as low as in any period of history. ~On the artistic side see E. Faure, History of Art (Engl. trans., 4 vols., 1921), Moore's Gothic Architecture (1899), and Leader Scott's Cathedral Builders (1899). The Council of Nîmes orders Jews to wear a round patch for identification.

AD 1285-1347-William of Ockham, a Doctor of the Church who lived in England as a Franciscan theologian and writer developed a distinguishing and controversial philosophy which condensed much from Aristotle's system of the world. These radical beliefs, however, made an enemy of John Lutterell, the Chancellor of Oxford at the time.

Lutterell sends a document to Pope John XII criticizing Ockham's work, and although Ockham is not officially condemned by the Papal Office at this juncture, Ockham attacked Pope John XII for errors in some of his Papal Bulls, going so far as to call him a heretic.

Along with two other friars, he fled to Italy as at this time the Papacy was in Avignon, France, and the group was excommunicated from the Church, Ockham being persecuted, imprisoned, and eventually excommunicated during his lifetime, eventually rose to such high regard in the Church as to be deemed a Doctor. Change within the church is slow, and it is ironic how often the ideas initially rejected by the Church may be gradually incorporated into its theological tradition.

AD 1286- Pope Honorius IV addresses a special rescript to the Arch-Bishops of York and Canterbury, pointing out the evil effects on the religious life of England of free intercourse with the perfidious Jews, who study their Holy Talmud, along with its abominations, enticing the faithful Christians to apostasy, and causing their Christian servants to work on Sundays and holidays, and generally bringing the Christian faith into disrepute.

AD 1289- The Christian Council of Vienna orders Jews to wear a round patch for identification.

AD 1290- King Richard, England, July 18, 1290, issues writs to the sheriffs of all the English counties ordering them to enforce a decree that all Jews should leave England before All Saints' Day of that year.

AD 1292-King Philip IV, of France, orders the Jews to be specially taxed between 1292-1303. The Jews are allowed to carry only their portable property; but their houses escheated [confiscated] to the king, except in the case of a few favored persons who are allowed to sell their homes before they leave.

The Church does not allow the Jews to become an integral part of the English nation, and therefore they have to leave the country, forfeiting their lands and most if not all, of their possessions.

Europe's first known execution for sodomy takes place in Ghent.

AD 1293- Destruction of most Jewish communities in the Kingdom of Naples, Italy, the cradle of Ashkenazi culture in Southern Italy, accompanied by forced conversions of Jews.

Marco Polo stays on the Coromandel Coast, describing the tomb of Saint Thomas as a place of pilgrimage, and visits Christians and Jews in Quilon.

AD 1294-1303-In November 1302, Pope Boniface VIII issues the Bull "Unam Sanctum," "Our Holy" to become one of the most widely known of all papal documents, which claims that all human beings are the object of "Papal plenitude of power, submission to which is said to be necessary for salvation."

This is the basis of the Church's proclaimed right to world conquest and extermination of all indigenous peoples who are not Catholic. Pope Boniface will also incarcerated the unwell Pope Celestine V, in the castle of Fumone, until his death and brought false charges against a southern French Bishop, Bernard Saisset of Pamiers, for not siding with him, claiming, ". . . He was impulsive to the point of imprudence and short-tempered to the point of un-charitableness," the Bishop dies in prison from physical and mental deterioration.

Pope Boniface VIII also has a colorful history of sexual adventures and is known for his exploitive nature.

"The Pope was bisexual, and certainly Catholic in his sexual tastes, having kept a married woman and her daughter as his bedfellows, as well as attempting to seduce a number of handsome young men, apparently with a good measure of success. He was quoted as saying that the sex act was 'no more a sin than to rub your hands together.'" ~The former Priest, Father Joseph McCabe, Rationalist Encyclopedia.

The exhausted cardinals agree to make Pietro di Morrone, 1215-1296, the new Pope, calling him Pope Celestine V, but before and during the time of his pontificate, Celestine lived a hermit's life in a cave in the wild mountains of Abruzzi, just south of Rome, a fact that has proved complex for many of the modern-day Church to dismiss, as Celestine, a humble monk, orders the Cardinals to come to his cave, which they went and there they consecrated him as Pope.

Pope Clement V [1304], had, as part of his own corrupt bargain for the Papal seat, to convene a Council of the French Church in 1312 to try the dead Pope Boniface, and, at this, voluntary Roman witnesses, chiefly priests and lawyers, accused Boniface of blasphemy, cynical skepticism, denial of immortality, defense of adultery, and sexual immorality having stated that sex was "No more harm in it than rubbing your hands together," and in making a mockery of all religion and morals.

The statement of the Catholic Encyclopedia that the prelates acquitted him of the charges is entirely false. Being good Catholics as they are, they were afraid to make any pronouncement on the evidence, which was endorsed by the greatest lawyers in France.

Gregorovius, the Papal historian, tries to relieve him of the charge of vice on the ground that he was eighty years old, but even the Catholic Encyclopedia makes him only sixty-eight years old when he died [less than sixty at his accession]. The severe strictures on him in Prof. Rockwell's article in the Encyclopedia Britannica have been cut out of the article in their latest edition, but the Cambridge Mediaeval History, which reflects the general opinion of historians, says that, "The evidence seems conclusive that he was doctrinally a skeptic," and "It is probable that for him, as later for Alexander VI, the moral code had little meaning." ~VII, 5, Dante voices the contemporary opinion in Italy when he places the Pope deep in hell, Canto XIX, 52-7, and is himself threatened by the Pope.

Dante is also threatened with excommunication if he does not publish his poem "The Divine Comedy," without the Papal court in a burning inferno. ~From J. McCabe, Rationalists Encyclopedia.

The Church makes a feeble attempt to justify the necessity of an Inquisition and downplays the number of lives terminated through the abuses of the Inquisition [Many records regarding the torturing, crippling, and killing of their victims have mysteriously disappeared]. The account of how a young girl, to whom one of the Inquisitors had taken a fancy, was taken from her home in the dead of the night and handed over to the Inquisitors' officers by the terror stricken father, is also graphically given in records discovered. ~Saladin, Women, vol. II

Pope Boniface VIII now requires full disclosure of the accusers to the Inquisition proceedings [Prior to this the names of the accusers were kept a secret from the accused], but the Inquisitors, by and large, will continue as before in trying citizens more for their political affiliations, or lack of, than their heretical beliefs.

"There is absolutely no reason to look on the medieval Ecclesiastical judge as intellectually and morally inferior to the modern judge. No one would deny that the judges of today, despite occasional harsh decisions and the errors of a few, pursue a highly honorable profession. Similarly, the medieval inquisitors should be judged as a whole. Moreover, history does not justify the hypothesis that the medieval heretics were prodigies of virtue, deserving our sympathy in advance." ~Catholic Encyclopedia.

The fact remains that individual rights did not exist [except on paper, so the Church Authorities can deny any complicity in this matter for one would have to be a lawyer to see through the legalese perpetrated upon the Catholics in defense of their religion and religious doctrines].

There were four primary means of extracting a confession from the victim:

- ✠ Fear of death, i.e. by giving the accused to understand that the stake awaited him if he would not confess.
- ✠ More or less close confinement, possibly emphasized by curtailment of food.
- ✠ Visits of tried men, who would attempt to induce free confession through friendly persuasion.
- ✠ Torture [non-negotiable force].

Unfortunately, what appears to have been forgotten here is that the victims were denied free will, the right to choose their faith, and they were denied the respect for their own basic beliefs, a fact often overlooked in the rewording of history by the Catholic Church. It is too often assumed, or accepted from unscrupulous Catholic propagandists that few of the laity know the law of their own Church, that the Roman Church has, like all others, abandoned the principle that heretics must be put to death.

The Catholic apologist now commonly asserts that in the Middle Ages, when the community is supposed to have been solidly and deeply pious, "Princes and peoples" urged the Church to protect them by executing heretics.

"The idealism of medieval theological beliefs led to the founding of orphan asylums and hospitals. But the impracticability and 'other-worldliness' of the Middle Ages prevented effective treatment of the diseases of the inmates. Such hospitals were merely dark, crowded, and unsanitary places of refuge for the needy and sick, who received no rational medical attention... The Middle Ages, which some profess to admire, were in reality times of low civilization." ~For a most shocking account of the hospitals, lying-in dens and insane pens of medieval Christian idealism, reference must be made to Dr. Henry W. Haggards Devils, Drugs and Doctors; cf. Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 7, pg. 492, and vol. 10, 125, and Forgery in Christianity by Joseph Wheless.

Murder Statistics: That the Inquisition is not used to do the bidding of political aspirants and monarchs as well as the fanatical Church is a particularly mean untruth, and the inference that is suggested, that the great diversity of opinions in a modern State has entailed a change of attitude, is false. Statistics: "Let us look for a moment at the number of victims sacrificed on the altars of the Christian Moloch: 1,000,000 perished during the early Arian schism; 1,000,000 during the Carthaginian struggle; 7,000,000 during the Saracen slaughters. In Spain 5,000,000 perished during the eight Crusades; 2,000,000 of Saxons and Scandinavians lost their lives in opposing the introduction of the blessings of Christianity. 1,000,000 were destroyed in the Holy(?) Wars against the Netherlands, Albigenses, Waldenses, and Huguenots. 30,000,000 Mexicans and Peruvians were slaughtered ere they could be convinced of the beauties(?) of the Christian creed. 9,000,000 were burned for witchcraft. Total, 56,000,000."

"Or, let us look at the matter in another light. Let us contemplate how the 'Holy Inquisition' treated their victims Men and women burned alive under the rule of the 45 Inquisitor-Generals, 35,534; burned in effigy, 18,637; condemned to other punishments, 293,533. Total sacrificed to maintain the blessings of Christianity, 347,704. In other words, these worthy followers of 'The Lamb,' the zealous imitators of him who 'Came not to send Peace, but a sword;' to 'Send fire on the earth' and 'Not peace, but rather division,' burned no less than 35,534 men and women..."

"Rapidly the Christian priesthood converted the convents into brothels; and, not content with debauching the 'brides of Christ,' they converted into harlots the wives of men; and, by means of the machinery of the confessional, they destroyed the chastity of the wives of the laity, and rendered all marriage simply poly-androus..."

"The priests had harlots, concubines, and mistresses in every town; and the Church, recognizing these illicit connections, allowed the Bishops to extract money from the priests in the shape of a tax on their concubines." ~H. Middleton.

In many places the people were actually delighted at seeing a priest keep a mistress, for meant that the married women might be safer from his seductions.

"In many places the priest paid the Bishop a regular tax for the women with whom he lived, and for each child he had by her. A German Bishop said publicly one day, at a great entertainment, that, 'In one year eleven thousand priests had presented themselves before him for that purpose. It is Erasmus who relates this. ” ~D' Aubigne. But, even the mildly moderate Erasmus declared that the licentiousness of the clergy in promoting prostitution had gone too far.

It is equally deceitful to point out that in the English translation, published in America, of the Canon Law, the death sentence is not found. As explained in the article Canon Law, this edition contains only the Domestic Law of the Church, and in any case it expressly states that it does not abrogate any law that is of “Divine Right,” as the law of the death sentence is claimed to be. “If there were an element of conscious deceit connected with the writing, it must have laid principally in the manner in which the Epistle was introduced into the Church.” ~James, brother of Jesus, and first Bishop of Jerusalem, James 34.

This part of Canon Law is still under the veil of a dead language [Latin], but it is by no means left in mediaeval tomes. It is continually reprinted, and is still emphatically taught in the Gregorian, Papal University at Rome and in all colleges for advanced clerical pupils.

Fr. Marianus de Luca, the author of the Latin version of the ‘Domestic Law,’ published by the Vatican Press in two stout volumes in 1901, with a letter of approval from the Pope, was professor of the subject in the Gregorian University.

In several passages and at great length he censures liberal Catholics who say that the Church has surrendered “The right of the sword,” and argues that the Church has the right and the duty to put heretics, by which Catholic law means apostates, to death. ~Canon Law, Vol. I, pp. 132 and 270.

“Clergy has debauched and turned into poor profligates 100,000 women in England ... Yet who is he, though he be never so much aggrieved, who dare lay to their charge, by any action at law, even the leading astray of a wife or a daughter? ... If he do, he is by-and-bye accused of heresy.” ~Saladin's Citation of Erasmus in The Confessional.

This is the most authoritative exposition of Church Law as it is today. The second most authoritative work of the 20th century is that of Cardinal L. Picier, who agrees. After proving that apostates “May justly be put to death,” p. 194, he completes the repulsive teaching by claiming that they are all in “Bad faith,” since “No one can lose the faith except by the very gravest sin.” ~Cardinal Picier, De Stabilitate et Progressu Dogmatis, 1910, p. 201. Yet, while this manual is in actual service in Canadian and American seminaries, the Catholic apologists in America deny the fact, and an association, the Calvert Associates, which goes beyond all others in mendacity [falsehood], and says that it was just “Unscrupulous politicians” who, during the Reformation struggle, were responsible for past executions. ~The Calvert Handbook of Catholic Facts, 1926, p. 66, is sponsored by Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, President of Columbia University.

It is a milder untruth to say that the Church merely judges a man heretical and the State imposes the lethal punishment. Fr. de Luca insists that the Church itself has “The right of the sword,” and, lest an opponent of the Church who has not been Baptized in it should think himself safe, he explains that in a Catholic country, such as the Philippines, Italy or Spain today, unbelievers may be “Compelled to accept the faith,” when they at once come under the savage law, which is why the Inquisition has never been done away with and remains a part of the Catholic Church today under the name, “Congregation of the Holy Office,” sometimes referred to as “Shared Congregation of the Roman and Universal Inquisition.” Originally, “Secretariat of the Congregation of the Holy Office of the Inquisition.”

Only the fear of the consequences from independent thinking Protestants in Great Britain and America restrains the present Pope from enforcing this law in Spain and other Catholic countries, but the end is still attained by charging the culprits [non-believers] with Bolshevism, radicalism, Communist insurgency, fanaticism, lunacy, extremism, etc.

“They are called Fathers, and they often are!” ~Erasmus on the priests fathering children without benefit of marriage.

Spain slew more unarmed democrats to protect its own corruption than the Catholic Church in the 19th Century, except Naples, and with a ferocity that Naples did not surpass.

This “a Nation chosen by God,” presents today the most sordid spectacle in the world, apart from countries overrun by the Axis troops (the Pope's allies), of injustice and brutal intolerance. Anyone “Suspected of Communism,” that means anybody but a loyal Spanish Catholic, are treated in the jails, British and American Protestants also are vilely treated. The American Protestant Defense League has issued a bulletin on the subject.

It says that 30 Protestant ministers have been expelled and will probably be executed if they return; that two-thirds of the workers of the Spanish Gospel Mission have been either executed, exiled, or imprisoned; that four-fifths of the Protestant churches and schools have been closed; and that no Spaniard who does not attend mass can get employment. ~From the works of J. McCabe, Rationalists Encyclopedia. See also Paul Courcoural's work, La fin de la Querelle, 1929, is a bitter attack on the Vatican, and he quotes several other Catholic critics. One of the points made by these Catholic critics was that the Vatican displayed grave incompetence in allowing itself to be duped by governments.

The Church leaped to arms to violently suppress any type of reform from the degrading conditions to which 'Her Holy Guidance' had brought Christendom, and fervently defended her atrocities upon the ignorant masses for over a century, until the Religious Peace of 1648. With the sanctified stake of fire and sword She made Europe a slaughtering pen in Her desperate effort to suppress the Protestant revolt and force its own insincere faith and its fallacious creed of so-called love and morals.

AD 1296-Monarchism vs. Catholicism: King Philip IV attempts to levy taxes against the Catholic clergy and Pope Boniface VIII retaliates by issuing a Papal Bull, "Clericis Laicos" forbidding clergy to pay the taxes to the monarchy in France [the spiritual is stronger than the temporal] Philip replies by forbidding the export of coins.

The Papacy is thereby denied tribute from France. King Philip, in order to assert his monarchial right, arrests the Papal Legate in 1301. Pope Boniface retaliates with the Papal Bull, "Unam Sanctam" in 1302 declaring Papal Supremacy over the King. Philip declares that Pope Boniface is guilty of blasphemy, heresy, sodomy, and murder.

King Philip declares that Pope Boniface also has a secret sexual love with a Demon that lives inside the ring of the Pope. In order to accomplish his plan of dominance Philip would need great financial resources [which the Templars possessed] and a weak and subservient Papal Throne. King Philip is well known for his battles with Pope Boniface VIII, and at one point Philip publicly burns Pope Boniface VIII's Bull Unam Sanctam, which gave the Pope Absolute Supremacy over everyone.

The Pope appears to get angered over the accusations of King Philip and excommunicates him. The Papal Bull, "Unam Sanctam" declaring that all human beings are subject to the laws of the Pope and must appear if so ordered [It is a well known fact that Pope Boniface VIII, as a Cardinal, had many lovers and Nogaret, whose parents were burned at the stake as heretics, knew of these exploits, also that the Pope was bisexual and entertained men as well as women within the Vatican. Pope Boniface as regards the matters of his own sexual indulgences is quoted, "...No more a sin than to rub your hands together."] ~Sex Lives of the Popes by N. Cawthome.

King Philip IV of France commands the arrest of all members of the Knights Templar, and in the following years hundreds of Templars are imprisoned, tortured, and/or burned because of their supposed toleration as sinless of "Acts Against Nature."

"Those foul offenses, that are against nature, should be everywhere and at all times detested and punished, such as were those of the people of Sodom, which should all nations commit, they should all stand guilty of the same crime, by the law of God which hath not so made men that they should so abuse one another. For even that very intercourse, which should be between God and us is violated, when that same nature, of which He is the Author, is polluted by the perversity of lust." ~Saint Augustine, 4th century, Confessions, iii, 8.

The King gains supporters and the Pope places France in a state of Interdiction. No one can be baptized or attend communion in France [or given a full Christian burial] Philip retaliates by sending a few of his friends to persuade the Pope. On the 8th of September 1303, Guillaume de Nogaret and his select few enter the palace at Anagni and explain their position to the Pope, in no uncertain terms, perhaps with some physical authoritativeness.

Unable to kidnap the Pope, Philip's men leave after the Pope receives a few well-chosen words from them. The Pope is so upset and distraught that he dies just five weeks after the event. The new Pope, Benedict XI tries to make amends but is rebuked by King Philip, and publicly accuses Philip of conspiring to kill Pope Boniface VIII. Pope Benedict has a short term.

The Pope is alleged to have been poisoned, and then Philip proceeds to elect Bernard de Goth, Archbishop of Bordeaux [Clement V]. With the help of the new Pope he levies a 10% tax on the gross revenues of the French clergy to raise additional money for the king's coffers.

Pope Alexander VI, in 1492, gives Inquisitors the authority to absolve each other of any irregularities encountered while torturing their victims [a sort of I'll forgive you if you forgive me mentality which pervades the church well into the 20th century in looking the other way as to their sins and transgressions against the flock]. Torture, the means of torture, and the equipment used to torture are seldom, if ever, mentioned in any Church documents.

The Church having gone to extraordinary measures to destroy many documents [which the Church will claim local actions is out of their hands]. If the victim was not tortured by the Inquisition to obtain a confession, he or she could still have been tortured by lay authorities [civil] who would do the bidding of the Inquisition to gain favors.

Witnesses appearing before the Inquisition had their name withheld from the accused and the prosecuted are also denied the right to cross-examine anyone in their defense [legalized under Popes Gregory IX, Innocent IV, and Alexander VI, this makes for faster trials and quicker confessions]

Later, Pope Boniface VIII, 1294-1303, in his Papal Bull declares that witnesses must now be named. Witnesses for the defense are still virtually non-existent for fear of being incriminated in the case and witnesses cannot be cross-examined by the victim. The victim is also expected to accept "With Good Grace" their sentence from the Inquisition, whether or not they are guilty of the crimes brought against them.

No one truly knows how many innocents were killed during the Inquisition, but in the Medieval Inquisition, Bernard Gui was one of the most notorious of the medieval inquisitors; so much so that modern pornography industry has actually turned him into a hero. Bernard Gui, personally, tried 930 people out of which 42 were executed [4.5%]. Another famous Inquisitor was Jacques Fournier tried 114 cases of which 5 were executed [4.3%].

During this despicable period of Christian history, also occurred the Great Crusades against the Albigenses for heresy, wherein some hundreds of thousands were killed on both sides; the Crusades against the Waldenses for rejecting the Papal claims and denouncing the ignorance and corruption of the clergy, wherein an enormous number were tortured and massacred; the eight wars against the Huguenots, and the well known massacre of Saint Bartholomew's Day, in which 30,000 were slaughtered a 'Te Deum' being afterwards sung at Saint Peter's, Rome, and a year of jubilee proclaimed in honor of it.

The Gospel of Bartholomew appears to be a contemporary reworking of the Apocryphal Gospel of Saint Bartholomew, which contains some elements in harmony with the original Nazoreanism, such as the co-Messiahship of Mary Magdalene, but it also contains elements that conflict with Yeshu's teachings. The early Nazoreans used the Date Palm tree as a symbol of the male [phallus] and the Well-spring as a symbol of the female, which are explained quite candidly in their most secret scrolls, "Explanation of the cosmic pair is confined to the secret scrolls. The Diwan Malkuta 'laila explains bluntly that the Date-palm is a phallic symbol, and sexual metaphors and images employed by initiates are protected by special oaths of silence." ~Drower, The Secret Adam, p. 10.

Various texts cite different statistics regarding the ruthlessness of the Catholic Church in exterminating its victims due to the predisposition of Christian writers to document the callousness of their faith in maltreatment of the dissenting masses, "There perished under Pope Julian 200,000 Christians, and by the French massacre, on a moderate calculation, in 3 months, 100,000. Of the Waldenses there perished 150,000; of the Albigenses, 150,000. There perished by the Jesuits in 30 years only 900,000. The Duke of Alva destroyed by the common hangman alone, 36,000 persons; the amount murdered by him is set down by Grotius at 100,000! There perished by the fire, and tortures of the Inquisition in Spain, Italy, and France 150,000 ... In the Irish massacres there perished 150,000 Protestants! To sum up the whole, the Roman Catholic church has caused the ruin, and destruction of a million and a half of Moors in Spain; nearly two millions of Jews South America in Europe. In Mexico, and, including the islands of Cuba and St. Domingo, fifteen millions of Indians, in 40 years, fell victims to Popery. And in Europe, and the East Indies, and in America, 50 millions of Protestants, at least, have been murdered by it!" ~W. C. Brownlee, Letters in the Roman Catholic controversy, 1834.

Moors and Jews are forced to deny their faith and covert to Christianity under penalty of death, "These Forced Baptisms, and the consequent claims, which the Pope set up over 'His slaves,' caused the death of one million five hundred thousand Moors, and on the most moderate calculation, that of two millions of Jews!" ~See Dr. M. Geddes's Tractson Popery, vol. i., W. C. Brownlee, Popery the Enemy of Civil and Religious Liberty, J. S. Taylor, New York, 1836, p. 88.

This period of history, when the Church of Jesus was enjoying its triumphant ascendancy, has been described by a writer as being “One of the most terrible periods in human history...” and the soil of Europe was sodden with human gore, and that chiefly by the Western or Roman Catholic Church. ~from the works of W. Oxley.

And then, we have some historians who marginalize the horrors of the past, “In its entirety, the 13th and 14th century Inquisition put very few people to death and sent few people to prison; 90 percent of its sentences were canonical penances.” ~Steven Katz, The Holocaust in Historical Context, 1994.

AD1298-The names of witnesses are withheld from the accused during the Inquisition hearings [legalized under Popes Gregory IX, Innocent IX, and Alexander VI] The abuse of the Inquisition by both the Church Authorities and the Monarchies results in Pope Boniface VIII, 1294-1303, issuing a Papal Bull requiring that witnesses must be at hand.

Witnesses are reluctant to become involved and there are reported cases where they [the witnesses] are also tortured. To break the supremacy of the Italian princes and appropriate their possessions for the benefit of his own children, Pope Alexander VI employs the usual weapons of his time: perjury, poison and the silent dagger.

Saint Bonaventure, cardinal and general of the Franciscans said that Rome was just like the harlot of the Apocalypse, exactly as John foresaw [and as Martin Luther would see to his sorrow three centuries later]. Pope Boniface VIII, 1294-1303, did not waiver in indulging himself by having both a mother and daughter as his mistresses together.

AD1300-1349-William of Shoreham, a hermit and mystic, contemporary of Rolle, translates Psalms into English language proper [common everyday spoken day English of the time]. One must understand that English is a changing language. We no longer speak English as spoken in the times of Shakespeare and it is this translation of Scripture into a language that the people can read and understand that frightens the Church authorities [Knowledge revealed is power lost].

AD 1300-The Jubilee: Pope Boniface VIII institutes “The Holy Year” [drawn from Leviticus 25, Year of Remission]. In 1470, the interval is fixed at twenty-five years by Pope Paul II. Extraordinary Holy Years are set at fifty-year intervals.

Making corrections to Scripture in an attempt to foretell the future is not unknown in Biblical times. John the Baptist [BC 21] believed that a catastrophe was in store in the immediate future due to the prophecies of the Temple Scrolls not being fulfilled. The Scrolls could not be in error therefore the method of counting had to be wrong.

By permitting a Zero Jubilee the millennium could be extended to AD 29 [$BC\ 21 + AD\ 29 = 50\ years$] In that year the True King over the World Kingdom of Jews would be declared Acts 1:18, John 2:20, 4:9, Luke 4:16-21, Matthew 2:7-16, 28:2. Later in history, Pope Boniface and King Philip will endure a strained relationship in the struggle over supremacy of the Pope versus the Monarchy of the King. Philip will bring charges of heresy against Boniface and try him in absentia.

In 1302, Philip's supporters thereby negating his excommunication because he was not formally presented with it burn the Papal Bull, excommunicating Philip. Philip then seizes the lands of supporters of Pope Boniface VIII and Boniface in turn offers the crown of France to Emperor Albert of Austria.

In 1304 Pope Benedict XI takes office, but soon dies, allegedly by being poisoned, after ten months of office [some say that it was by the approval of King Philip]

1302-Protestants, Lutherans, Baptists, Mormons, Presbyterians, Muslims; all are declared unable to offer salvation... According to the Universal Roman Catholic Church, “We declare, say, define, and pronounce that it is absolutely necessary for the Salvation of every human creature to be subject to the Roman Pontiff.” ~Pope Boniface VIII, Bull Unun Sanctum.

January 27, Dante Alighieri is fined and exiled from Florence by the Catholic Church for his work, The Divine Comedy, aka Dante's Inferno, for including the Popes and some of the Cardinals in Hell.

Pope Boniface VIII will strike fear into the hearts and minds of the ignorant by claiming both religious and political power, something, which does not sit well with other rulers in Europe, and in 1302 Boniface will issue the Papal Bull Unam Sanctam [One Holy], which will be one of the most audacious statements of Papal Supremacy over the world, claiming: “By our faith we are compelled to believe and sustain on Holy Catholic and Apostolic Church. This we firmly believe, and we make simple confession that outside the [Roman Catholic] Church there is no salvation or remission of sins... Therefore, We declare, affirm and define as a truth necessary for salvation that every human being is subject to the Roman Pontiff."

This includes Jews, Muslims, heathens, skeptics, and infidels as well, which is further reiterated by Pope John Paul II prior to his death in the 21st century.

AD 1305- Philip cuts a deal with Bertrand de Gotte, Archbishop of Bordeaux in exchange for six favors. The Archbishop in exchange is soon granted the Papacy [with the approval and support of the king], becoming Pope Clement V. Philip IV connives and having helped Clement V [a corrupt fellow Frenchman and an easily influenced individual] get elected Pope. Then, Philip orders the Pope and future Popes to reside in France under his control [1309-1377].

Pope Clement V is first Pope to threaten Jews with an economic boycott in an attempt to force them to stop charging Christians interest on loans.

Pope Clement V moves the Papacy to Avignon where he and his successors live in luxurious palatial splendor for the next 71 years under the watchful eye of the French monarchies. The Templar estates are not taxed nor the Knights under the tutelage of the local reigning monarchies. With the approval of the Pope, Philip then taxes the churches, later the Jews, and eventually confiscates the properties of the Templars, followed by those of the Jews that are exiled.

AD 1305- Robert the Bruce, later crowned King of Scotland by the Countess of Buchan in 1306 with the support of the Celtic kings is excommunicated, Pope John XXII lifts the excommunication in AD 1328.

AD 1306- King Philip of France on the 22nd of July orders the arrest of all Jews, later confiscating their properties and possessions. With a need to continue living in a lavish style Philip requires still more monies to be collected. He is also the first to implement a devaluation of the currency, by recalling all coins, melting them down, and re-issuing them with less precious metal content in them.

AD 1307- King Philip IV, grandson of Louis IX, who the Templars were reluctant to pay his ransom when captured by the Muslims in a previous Crusade, borrows heavily from businessmen to pay for his portion of the Crusades.

Unable to repay these gentlemen, many of whom belong to the Masonic Order of Knights Templar, he devises a plan whereby he notifies Pope Clement V of the Knights practicing witchcraft and other heresies against the Church. If the Church condemns the Templars, and their properties confiscated [by the king], he will no longer be in their debt and be even richer. The Knights Templar due to their acquisitions of large amounts of money and property [by way of donations, loans, good banking principles and trust] have now become a threat to the state and the Church [Money is Power].

King Philip IV has a maniacal need to spend money and therefore an insatiable need for more money, states that theirs is a secret order that allegedly prays outside the confines of the Church, practices Satanism, and makes secret oaths.

With the denunciation of the Order by the Pope, King Philip hopes to be absolved of his indebtedness to the Knights Templar, he will in effect become even richer by seizing all their financial holdings as well as their estates when the Pope cooperates with him in declaring the Templars heretics. Friday the 13th of October 1307, Philip IV, of France, commences to persecute the members of the Knights Templar by throwing them into dungeons and torturing them until they renounce their affiliations. A month later, Pope Clement V gives all nobles the authority to arrest the Templars and confiscate their properties.

Many of the Knights spoke Arabic and had adapted the wearing of beards [As was the Arab fashion]. Some historians say this assimilation may have contributed to their downfall by being associated with Muslim [heathen] ways. This is to be the beginning of the condemnation of the Order and innocents into the twentieth century.

Pope Clement V of Rome, under pressure from King Philip IV of France, issues an order to have all who belong to the Order to be immediately arrested, and their properties confiscated. It is not until 12 March 2000 that Pope John Paul II will ask forgiveness for the Sins of the Church after 688 years of condemnation of a group of men whose order was for the benefit of mankind and the preservation of Christianity.

The first Crusade was made up of Masons belonging to Knights of the Hospital of Saint John of Jerusalem and later on the Knights of Malta and the Teutonic Knights. It was during the Middle Ages that the guilds [the first unions] of builder-masons existed.

They were free to travel from town to town [unlike the serfs who were tied to the land and needed permission from the sheriff and their monarch to travel], the Masons worked on the massive cathedrals and castles throughout Europe as well as on the bridges, which connected commerce between villages. Being neither merchant, nor fixed to the soil, but a traveling fraternity of skilled workers, they clung to their special skills by organizing into a secret fraternal order that would protect them from the outside world [non-skilled workers].

By the 14th century, the stonemasons had already organized into companies or lodges. The craftsmen, being respected for their skills, were in demand by monarchs to build the large edifices needed for the protection of the kings as well as to build the large cathedrals necessary to hold the populace in awe of the Church and God. It was the Mason who was the skilled contractor, architect of a building project, and worker who brought the other trades together to accomplish the feats at hand.

The Church did everything it could to suppress the first unions [guilds], a further tribute to their claim to being representatives of the poor throughout the ages. Writers on the guilds [guilds], such as Gross, Walford, etc., fail to remind the readers that in the towns, even the prostitutes had guilds and walked in the sacred religious processions, and the agricultural workers, who were at least four-fifths of the workers of Europe, had no representation or any other kind of protection.

Men are perplexed as the Church teaches that women's sexuality is demeaning to mankind, morally inferior, and exceptionally dangerous as they are perceived by the Christian Fathers as the, "The gateway to Hell," yet contradictory reams of chivalrous poetry continue to point out that women are supposed to be respected and admired for their beauty and gentleness.

In the 13th Century, "Feudalism" appears to take a brutal delight in seeing flames consume a burgher's house's and the villains [peasant workers] who lived in them that the knight or noble "Was almost everywhere a brutal and pillaging soldier;" and that, "The noble had an un-tamable antipathy to and a profound contempt of the villain: that is, for the serf, peasant, laborer, citizen, or burgher." ~Professor A. Luchaire, Social France at the Time of Philippe Auguste.

The Church represented the moneyed classes, and still does, and the establishment. It would be up to the Protestants of England who would set up a system of Poor Relief which, crude as it was then, did not discriminate to some extent between "Sturdy beggars" and the real needy or religious classes.

AD 1309-1377-Under the Papacy of Pope Clement V, 1305-14; Bertrand de Got, 1264-1314, the Romans convey so much displeasure at papal wrongdoings that the whole Christian bureaucracy is physically evicted from Rome to the city of Avignon, in southern France.

The Popes at Avignon, France: Catholic historians claim that the 13th century is the greatest in history fail to explain why it closed with and was followed by a long period of degradation of the Papacy and near ruin of the Vatican City in Rome. Petrarch describes the papal court at Avignon as "Boiling, seething, obscene, terrible... A fountain of dolour where Jesus Christ is mocked, where sesterce [money] is adored, where honesty is called foolishness and cunning called wisdom... All this you may see heaped up there." ~Francesco Petrarch, 1304-1374, Letter Var. VII.

Petrarch gives details of the obscene gaiety of life in the papal court that "Raged like a moral pestilence... A school of falsity, and a temple of heresy." ~Petrarch, Letter Misc. XVIII.

"... Swept along in a flood of the most obscene pleasure, an incredible storm of debauch, the most horrible and unprecedented shipwreck of chastity. The attachment of the Popes to Avignon is due to the fact that they have built there, as it were, a Paradise of Pleasure, a celestial habitation in which they dwell without a God as if they were to continue to dwell there forever." ~Petrarch quoting his friend, Colonna, Letter VIII.

Pope Boniface VIII, 1294-1303, one of the most depraved, morally debauched, and skeptical of the Popes, was soon followed by Clement V, 1304-1314, who secured the tiara by a corrupt deal with King Philip of France, and was obliged to transfer his Court to that country as part of the deal. In order to evade paying the price he had promised, public exposure of the vices of Boniface VIII and of the Knights Templars, Clement V fled to Avignon.

The principality of Avignon had until that time belonged to the Queen of Naples, but the Pope bought it from her for the ridiculously low sum of £40,000. It contained several towns besides the rich city of Avignon and the real price was actually a promise of absolution for the Queen's notorious crimes and personal vices.

The sojourn of the Popes in the city for more than sixty years is called by the older Catholic historians "The Babylonian Captivity," though it was voluntary, and they admit that it was one of the very corrupt periods of Papal history. The famous Italian scholar Petrarch, one of the most respected men of the age, then lived in exile near Avignon, and he has left us a shuddering indictment of its vices, natural and unnatural, in his Latin "Letters Without a Title."

This is one of the hundreds of documents of great interest, which tell the true character of the Middle Ages that have never been translated into English. Few pictures in the history of morals are more repellent. Even when fairly respectable Popes were on the throne the Papal Court remained sordid and contemptuous to the people of Italy. ~See also Les Papes d'Avignon (1914), by O. Mollat (Catholic), and La Prostitution du XIII au XVII Siècle, 1908, by Dr. L. Le Pileur [who has reproduced some amazing documents from the city archives].

It is a Catholic fable that the prayers of Saint Catherine of Siena drew the Popes back to Italy. Rome, stung by the progress and prosperity of North Italy while it remained on the level of a village, threatened again to reject their authority if they did not return. -from J. McCabe, Rationalists Encyclopaedia.

AD 1310- The Knights Templar are put on trial for heresy in France. Most recant their confessions made under torture, expecting a full pardon from Pope Clement V, which is not granted. The French crown, and the Catholic Church, thus gain full control of the Order's great wealth.

Fifty-four Knights Templar are tortured and burned at the stake for alleged heresy by the Inquisition. The king, as well as the Church will profit from this, as the Church will use the lands and fortunes to dole out favors to those who helped the cause of the Church, and the king will have more money to splurge on his many vices.

"When the Church was at the height of its power [11th-14th centuries] very few witches died. Persecutions did not reach epidemic levels until after the Reformation, when the Catholic Church had lost its position as Europe's indisputable moral authority." ~Jenny Dobbins, Burning Times.

AD 1310-1370, Pope Urban V, a Benedictine monk and professor of canon law, is politically influenced as well as motivated on the 14th of September, 1366, informs the King of France of his intentions of moving the Papacy back to Rome. The French Cardinals, of hearing this threaten to desert the Pope. They are living in palatial splendor [supported by the King of France], and do not wish to move back to Rome.

AD 1311- The Beguines (q.v.) and Beghards are both condemned by the Council of Vienne [1311-12] who follow the precepts that: "...Man in the present life can attain such a degree of perfection as to become utterly impeccable; that the 'Perfect' have no need to fast or pray, but may freely grant the body whatsoever it craves; that they are not subject to any human authority or bound by the precepts of the Church" ~see Denzinger-Bannwart, 471 sqq.

These hedonists are a threat to the Church, not for their practices, as the Church authorities already engage in such immoral practices, but for their outspokenness of such acts, which is an embarrassment to the written practices of authority.

"Similar exaggerations on the part of the Fraticelli (q.v.) led to their condemnation by Pope John XXII in 1317 (Denzinger-Bannwart, 484 sqq.). The same Pope in 1329 proscribed among the errors of Meister Eckhart (q.v.) the assertions that (prop. 10) we are totally transformed into God just as in the sacrament the bread is changed into the Body of Christ; that (14) since God wills that I should have sinned I do not wish that I had not sinned; that (18) we should bring forth the fruit, not of external actions, which do not make us good, but of internal actions which are wrought by the Father abiding within us" ~Denzinger-Bannwart, 501, sqq., from the Catholic Encyclopedia, 1999.

AD 1312- The persecution of the Knights Templar continues, although Pope Clement V openly admits that the Church lacks any evidence to prove heresy, and orders the Order of the Knights Templar dissolved. The Pope is influenced by King Philip and is hoping for further future concessions from the king. Pope Clement V, indecisive and feeling harassed, finally adopts a middle course: he decrees the dissolution, not the condemnation of the order, and not by penal sentence, but by an Apostolic Decree, a Bull of 22 March, 1312. September 7th as to the properties and dissolution of the Order. 1307, Philip orders the arrest of all Knights Templar.

Pope Clement reconsiders and suspends the powers of the Inquisition in France, but this does not stop the Inquisition and its persecutions of the Knights Templar. Fearing loss of Church control, the Pope orders the arrest of all Knights Templar everywhere. A dozen knights of the 231 questioned admit to worshipping Baphomet [which may be a corruption of Mahomet or Mohammed]. Pope Clement, with King Philip at his side, issues a Papal Bull [1312] condemning the Order on April 3rd. On December 22nd, 1313 the Pope commissions a group of judges to determine the fate of the Knights. March 11th, 1314, seated in a pulpit in front of the Cathedral of Notre Dame, the commissioners proclaim the destiny of the Knights.

The last Grand Master of the Order, Jacques de Molay [who can neither read nor write], is arrested and tortured by the French Grand Inquisitor Guillaume Imbert.

Upon admission of guilt [torture] he is released, temporarily. He is later re-arrested and sentenced to life imprisonment, but embarrasses the Church officials when he states publicly that his Order is innocent.

The King as well as the Church are mortified by this proclamation and documents are fabricated by the King Philip's men as well as fabricated by Church officials to further condemn de Molay. In response to public embarrassment, Church officials still resort to public condemnation, denial, and fabrication of stories in order to deny all allegations. This is carried on today in many third world countries as well as Western bloc countries, its purpose being solely to protect those in power and not for justice.

King Philip upon hearing this retraction, ignores due process of law for de Molay, and orders him burned at the stake that very evening. For his dastardly act of impudence against the Church Jacques de Molay is consumed by a slow, smokeless fire [no smoke means he will not pass out and a slow fire insures that he will bear the full brunt of a fire burning his feet, legs, and genitalia before being consumed by the flame.

Joan of Arc was burned in an intense fire with lots of smoke created by the tossing in of green branches to lessen her suffering] and de Molay issues forth a curse to both Pope Clement V and King Philip IV of France, summoning them to a final judgment before God. "Let evil swiftly befall those who have wrongly condemned us; God will avenge our deaths."

History will show both the Pope and the King die within a few months, Pope Clement V [29 October 1314] whose body lays unburied for a while [the church in which his remains placed is struck by lightning and the church and the body are burnt to ashes] the Pope is abandoned by his fellow churchmen and friends who do nothing.

King Philip IV falls off his horse [on 29 November 1314] and dies also within three months as Jacques de Molay had allegedly prophesied. Norgaret, the man responsible for the crucifixion of de Molay, is also dead within a week. The encouragement of equal tolerance for all religions, tends to somewhat lessen dogmatic allegiance to any specific creed, cult, sect, or religious group. Those that insist upon fervent acceptance of their dogma and renunciation of all others as atheistic errors, see Masonry as inimitable to their faith, a constant threat that must be dealt with harshly regardless of the truth.

Oaths of secrecy, clandestine handshakes, and code words known but to themselves, all of these make for a society of covert gentlemen much feared by outsiders, especially those of a religious order. It is ironic that the Church also conceals, yet holds itself above reproach.

AD1314-The "Battle of Bannockburn," the basis for the movie "Braveheart" starring Mel Gibson, occurs on Saint John's Day, June 24, a day of particular importance to the Knights Templar, the inscrutable warrior-monks of the middle ages.

A motley force of only 8,000 Scotsmen challenge a contingency of 100,000 well-trained English soldiers, proven in battle and known to give no quarter when ordered to do so [shown no mercy to their vanquished], a clear twelve to one advantage.

The Scottish army, consisting mainly of pike-men, with relatively few horsemen, will dare challenge this bravura of fighting men. The foot soldiers should have been no match for King Edward II's heavily armored knights, yet the Scottish victory rests on an inexplicable event occurring during the battle, with the Scottish units spread between Bannockburn and the River Forth.

A fierce charge ensues with banners waving in the wind amid voices screaming from the Scottish rear. Historians will describe the charge as consisting mainly of camp followers [children and other non-combatants], whom the English somehow mistook for the main fighting force. The charge arose impulsively from the camp followers, who, having made banners from bed sheets and gathered weapons from the already dead and wounded, somehow inspired fear among the armored English knights who although mounted, fled en masse with un-mounted peasants running helter skelter driving off a battle tried English army. Surely, this tempts one's common sense.

King Edward II and five hundred of his battle proven knights fleeing the battlefield followed by his unmounted disciplined soldiers. In the novel, "The Temple and the Lodge," by Michael Baigent and Richard Leigh, the authors direct the individual to the mysterious attackers at Bannockburn as having been the Knights Templar, easily recognized by their banners and splayed crosses [red on white field].

The only fighting force during this period that was known for its ferocity and willingness to fight to the death rather than surrender. The only fighting force known for bravery on the battlefield that even the followers of Muhammad recognized and respected.

Only the Templars could have inspired such terror and chaos among well trained military troops who outnumbered their enemy twelve to one. The authors demonstrate that many Templars had fled to Scotland when the Inquisition [Catholic forces], hunted them down all across Europe. Unwilling to fight against their Christian brothers, they fled. At Bannockburn, where a mounted Scottish charge occurs, the victorious Scots marched behind an Ark known as the "Monymusk Reliquary," a replica of the "Temple of Solomon," which figures prominently in the Knights Templar ritual.

The bravery of the King's men, tried and tested in many battles, heretofore never found lacking, had been tested by the Scots and their newly found allies and embarrassed by the awesome Knights Templar. ~From Secret History by David Lewis.

AD1316-1341-Pope John XXII objects to the crowning of King Louis IV due to his meddling in the affairs of Church powers and has Louis IV's title declared invalid and King Louis excommunicated. King Louis IV then convenes a church council of his own and appoints Pope Nicholas V [Anti-Pope] Pope John XXII declares the Fraticelli [Little Brothers] as heretics.

The Fraticelli declare themselves as the only true followers of the Franciscan Order. God ordained [Divine Right] versus the rights of the Church through Peter. Pope John XXII and later Pope Benedict XII, 1334-1342, make feeble attempts to defer or prevent the imposition of the death penalty in cases of reputed witchcraft, insisting that these things are diabolical illusions, "Quellen und Untersuchungen."

Perhaps it is due to this unremitting feuding over rights that monarchies and governments now grant the Church a tax exempt status in the hopes that they, the Church, will not meddle in the affairs of state.

Pope John XXII, is now the world's richest man and first Pontiff to openly promote the theory of witchcraft, sanctions a bull allowing heresy charges to be brought against dead people.

AD1320-Anti-Semitism does not wane. The "Shepherds' Crusade." A Christian chronicler records: "The shepherds laid siege to all the Jews who had come from all sides to take refuge... The Jews defended themselves heroically... But their resistance served no purpose, for the shepherds slaughtered a great number of the besieged Jews by smoke and by fire... The Jews, realizing that they would not escape alive, preferred to kill themselves... They chose one of their number [and] this man put some five hundred of them to death, with their consent. He then descended from the castle tower with the few Jewish children who still remained alive... They killed him by quartering. They spared the children, whom they made Catholics by baptism."

Pope John XXII instructs the French Inquisition to confiscate all property belonging to blasphemers or dabblers in the black arts.

AD1321-The Divine Comedy, written in the vernacular [Italian for the common folks] instead of Latin by Dante Alighieri portrays the Popes, as well as the Bishops in Hell.

AD1323-One of the earliest recorded trials for sodomy; Arnold of Verniole is found guilty of Unnatural Acts [Acts Against Nature] and is sentenced to life imprisonment with a diet of bread and water. Despite stiff Church prohibitions against sodomy, the trial record shows that Arnold had little trouble finding sexual cohorts.

Note: Christians consider one of the most grievous sins is the sin of bestiality, because use of the due species is not observed.

Hence:

- † "He accused his brethren of a most wicked crime," says that, "They copulated with cattle." ~Genesis 37:2.
- † "Whoever lies with an animal shall surely be put to death." ~ Exodus 22:19.
- † "Also you shall not have intercourse with any animal to be defiled with it, nor shall any woman stand before an animal to mate with it; it is a perversion." ~ Leviticus 18:23.
- † "If there is a woman who approaches any animal to mate with it, you shall kill the woman and the animal; they shall surely be put to death. Their blood guiltiness is upon them." ~ Leviticus 20:16.
- † "Cursed is he who lies with any animal. And all the people shall say, 'Amen'." ~ Deuteronomy 27:21.

AD1324-Petronilla de Midia is burned at the stake at Kilkenny, Ireland, at the charge of Richard, Bishop of Ossory.

AD 1324-Richard de Landrede, Bishop of Ossory, Ireland, is resolute in stamping out witchcraft to earn the favor of Pope Nicholas V. Dame Alice Kyteler is accused of witchcraft and the practice of demonology along with the observance of fertility rituals with Sir Arnold le Poer, a relative of her husband. Dame Alice escapes to Dublin but her unfortunate servant Petronilla de Meath is charged with crimes of witchcraft and subsequently thrown into the dungeon and afterward burned alive at the stake.

AD 1326-Papal Decree XXXVII, columns 763-4, vol. 25 of the "Concilium Avenionense," pertains to "Secret Societies," and although not a Masonic reference, the Church attacks these secret societies, describing them with such expressions as: fraternal assistance, signs, tokens, obligations and election of Masters.

Masons, for centuries, have battled against ignorance by imparting knowledge, superstition by a faith in God, and tyranny by sustaining the causes of freedom, and for these reasons, wherever tyranny raises its ugly head, either by way of religion or secular, it is one of the first institutions to encounter fatalities, as in Germany during the Nazi era and the fervent communist era in Russia.

Christain Pain: Hugh le Despenser the younger, the second lover of King Edward II of England, is hung, after his genitals are cut off and burned before his eyes, upon the order of King Edward's wife, Isabella, and her lover, Roger Mortimer.

AD 1327-Cecco d'Ascoli is put to death by Church Authorities for his Astrological beliefs in Florence, Italy. His pupil, Guido Bonatti, however, becomes famous all over Europe by foretelling the most advantageous time to engage in battle with one's enemies to the dukes, barons, and monarchs.

Robert Bruce of Scotland launches an invasion of England to try and force recognition of Scotland's independence.

Christian Pain: 21 September, King Edward II is murdered at Berkely Castle. Queen Isabella and Roger Mortimer order that he should be put to death leaving no external markings on his body. The only way this can be accomplished is by disemboweling by a red hot poker inserted into his rectum, the conventional method of executing homosexuals at the time.

AD 1329-A peace treaty is imposed upon the Republic of Pisa by the Guelph League of Tuscany, which forbids her to continue trading in etrogim, a fragrant oblong fruit purchased by the Jews for a considerable amount of money during the Festival of Booths [Sukkot].

Florence merchants apparently intend to monopolize this trade in Germany, Poland, and Austria [Leviticus 23:40] The etrog tree is said by the Aggadists to have been the "Tree of knowledge of good and evil" described in the Bible [Genesis 3:6] Both the tree and bark are edible.

The numerical value of the Hebrew spelling of "Fruit of a goodly tree" is the same as those in the word etrogim. Others believe the tree described in Genesis is the Cedrus Deodara or giant cedar, once used in Assyrian rituals and considered a holy tree in India.

Betrothals are still arranged by the parents, which regularly occur during infancy. King Edward II's daughter Joan is married to Prince David of Scotland in 1328 when she is seven and he is a mere four years of age. Princess Isabella of France will marry Richard II in 1396 when she is only seven, although she will have the opportunity to change her mind later.

Lady Margaret Beaufort is 13 when she gives birth to the future King Henry VII in 1457. But in 1414, a Welsh couple is sent to King Henry V as a 'Marvel' because they have had a baby: allegedly, she is seven and he is nine.

Among the general population, however, marriages usually take place when the couples are in their late 20's, after the man has secured an income. Parental consent is usually sought but isn't essential.

AD 1330-1384-John Wycliffe, Protestant Reformist, gets into a dispute with king Edward III over Papal Tributes [monies taxed from the poor and sent to Rome] Wycliffe also believes in reincarnation of the soul and Eternal Salvation. ~Matthew 11:14, 14:13.

Wycliffe believes that the Catholic Church should be poor, as in the days of Jesus' apostles, for which Wycliffe is forced to appear before the Catholic Bishops in the first half of the year 1377 to give an account of his abominable doctrine. The Bishops then appeal to Pope Gregory XI, and he issues five papal edicts against Wycliffe in May 1377, but Wycliffe is protected in England by powerful individuals, the Duke of Lancaster and Queen Joan, the wife of Edward III. In 1401 England's Parliament institutes death by fire for heretics, and in 1407 English language Bibles are banned. Followers of Wycliffe are ordered arrested, and imprisoned, especially those followers who had been associated with Oxford University. Pope Alexander V issues a papal edict that moves the Church against the threat to Church authority by any Scripture not in Latin, the language special to the priesthood, and the all the English translations of Wycliffe's Bible are ordered, by the Church, to be burned.

The late John Wycliffe is tried a second time by the Council of Constance, and this time condemning, and ordering Wycliffe's body disinterred and burned. The deed was carried out in 1428, forty-four years after Wycliffe's death.

"Soon after the dawn of Christianity, they assert, their ancestors embraced the faith of Saint Paul, and practiced the simple rites and usages described by Justin, or Tertullian. The Scriptures became their only guide; the same belief, the same sacraments they maintain today they held in the age of Constantine and Sylvester. They relate that, as the Romish Church grew in power and pride, their ancestors repelled its assumptions and refused to submit to its authority; that when, in the 9th century, the use of images was enforced by superstitious Popes, they, at least, never consented to become idolaters; that they never worshiped the Virgin, nor bowed at an idolatrous Mass. When, in the 11th century, Rome asserted its supremacy over kings and princes, the Vaudois were its bitterest foes. The three valleys formed the theological school of Europe. The Vaudois missionaries traveled into Hungary and Bohemia, France, England, even Scotland, and aroused the people to a sense of the fearful corruption of the church. They pointed to Rome as the Antichrist, the center of every abomination. They taught, in the place of Romish innovations, the pure faith of the apostolic age. Lollard, who led the way to the reforms of Wycliffe, was a preacher from the valleys; the Albigenses of Provence, in the twelfth century, were the fruits of the Vaudois missions; Germany and Bohemia were reformed by the teachers of Piedmont; Huss and Jerome did little more than proclaim the Vaudois faith; and Luther and Calvin were only the necessary offspring of the apostolic churches of the Alps." ~Eugene Lawrence, Historical Studies, pgs. 200, 201.

Wycliff is tried for heresy by Pope Gregory XI on 22 May 1377. Forty-four [44] years after his death [1428] the Roman Catholic Church digs up the remains of Wycliffe, and burns his bones scattering the ashes in a river. Pope Martin V personally confirmed the order. It must be remembered that cremation during this period is no longer approved by Christian Authorities, and the burning of the body supposedly relegates one's soul to eternal wandering in hell. ~For more Papal indiscretions, read, Chronicle of the Popes, By P. G. Maxwell-Stuart.

The world is its oyster, and the Pontiff rules, "The Roman Pontiff, successor of the blessed Peter, and the Vicar of Jesus Christ, keeper of the Keys of the Heavenly Kingdom, of all regions of the world, and of all of the nations and those who dwell in them ..." ~Pope Martin V claims worldwide authority, 4 April 1417.

From 1400 B.C.E. to 200 C.E., cremation is an accepted practice by the Romans, and an accepted custom of the Greeks from 1000 B.C.E., and also the Egyptians adapting the practice from cross-cultures seeing it as a means of liberating the ka [spirit] of the deceased.

The Church deviated from these common cultural practices by declaring them against the laws of God [Believing that the body could not be Resurrected if destroyed, which is also an acceptance of ancient Egyptian practices] Therefore Wycliffe's spirit is condemned to roam incessantly forever and eternity by the actions of the religious order that claims forgiveness for one's sins.

The Church did not want the common people to read the Bible and yet we have in Mark 13:14, "Let him that readeth understand," an apparent contradiction in the Church, again, of their Spiritual Scripture versus their spiritual teaching. The Lollards are an offshoot of the teachings of John Wycliffe and followed the doctrines he preached.

Lollards, unlike their catholic brethren, held that the Bible is the only authentic rule of faith, exhorting the clergy to return to the simple life of the early church; and opposed war, the use of images in worship, the doctrine of transubstantiation, and confession as a means of forgiveness of sins.

In the 14th century, the Lollards were numerous, their number decreasing during the reign of King Henry IV due to his vigorous persecution by the English prelate Thomas Arundel. The Lollards remained a formidable group at the succession to the throne of King Henry V. King Henry IV of France was assassinated by the Jesuit Revaillac for granting liberty to his people.

The most prominent supporter at that time being the English martyr Sir John Oldcastle, who is executed under the 1417 statute, 'De Haeretico Comburendo' [On the Burning of the Heretic].

During the initial years of the reign of King Henry VI, the Lollards are persecuted in London, and some members of the sect are burned at the stake.

The persecution continues after the accession to the throne of King Henry VII, but during the reign of King Henry VIII, the Lollards began to merge with the rising forces of Protestantism. After the invention of the printing press the Bible was almost exclusively printed in Latin, so that it could not be read or understood by the layman, only by the clergy.

Until the invention of the printing press, no one outside of the Catholic Church was allowed to even own or have in their possession a Bible, or to read or study from it. The 14th century was the Golden Age of spurious [false, manufactured, forged, creative] religious manuscripts, with monastic monks being paid to "Discover" new and ancient writings, the Church was not disappointed, this epoch being more productive than any other period for Codices, "I will tell you only here in general, that very able critics have believed Greek MSS. to be twelve hundred years old, which were nevertheless quite new." ~Father R. Simon, in his select Letters, tom. i., p. 218.

In the whole of Greece this side of Byzantium, except perchance on Mount Athos, where the number of books in existence is unknown, you can hardly infer with certainty from Dom Bernard de Montfaucon's, 1655-1741, description that there were one hundred Greek MS. books. Of the rest of the East we have no information. But in the West, that is, in France, Italy, England, Germany, Holland, he says on p. 21, that the number hardly reached twenty thousand. How many more than in the East! The reason is that in the West all were first written by the forgers. More has been adduced on this head in my work On Greek MSS. ~Fake? The Art of Deception, Edited by Mark Jones, with Paul Craddock and Nicolas Barker, 1990.

The Roman Catholic Church did not want the Bible to be available to the common people, because they were afraid that when the people could read the Bible themselves, they would realize how they were cheated, and stray away from the mother-church. This was a justified fear, because as soon as the Bible became available to the masses, a major Christian reform movement arose, the Protestants.

Hence the church used all means available to prevent Bible translations from reaching the common people.

AD 1330-Were the Cathars exterminated by the specific order of Pope Innocent III in 1244? A tract is published called Schwester Katrei [Sister Catherine] claiming "God is the Universal Mother..." and Mary Magdalene is depicted as being the superior of Saint Peter. It also contains information which we had no knowledge of regarding the Gnostics, until the discovery of the Nag Hammadi Gospels in the 19th century. Where did this document come from?

Who wrote it? What is their purpose? It is alleged that the Templars may have been disbanded but continued to meet in secret and were responsible for the Peasants' Revolt of 1381 that attacked Church property as well as properties belonging to the Knights Hospitallers [arch rivals of the Templars].

When the Templars were rounded up, they had a fleet of ships which mysteriously disappeared. The fleet inexplicably shows up in Scotland, where we later have the formation of the Scottish Knights Templar. This reappearance may have been the cause of Pope Urban VI threatening to launch a crusade against Scotland.

Upon his election, Pope Urban VI hires a troop of ferocious mercenary soldiers, who are then quite commonplace, and drives his adversaries out of the city, and into the country. Before setting out to recover the Papal properties in the South, he sells the sacred vessels of the Roman Churches, which he promised to his sons and daughters. Pope Urban VI reaps a rich yield by confiscating properties of the wealthy nobles and by creating salable offices for an additional thirty-seven Bishops. Charles III, the King of Naples, is disgusted with Pope Urban and sends an army to attack him, but Pope Urban escapes by going over the rear wall of his Papal Palace.

AD 1334-1342-The "Prince of Carnal Life," His Holiness (Sanctitas) Pope Benedict XII lusted after the sister of the great scholar, Petrarch, who rejected his offer of a Cardinal's appointment. The Pope still took advantage of the young woman by bribing her brother, Gerardo to help him in his evil deed.

The scholar, Petrarch, describes the lascivious priest-craft [anonymously, since he did not want to be burned at the stake], the pious Papal court as "...The shame of mankind, a sink of vice, a sewer where is gathered all the filth of the world. There, God is held in contempt, money alone is worshipped and the laws of God and men are trampled under foot, Everything there breathes a lie: the air, the earth,

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

AD 1334-Toulouse, France, sixty-three persons are accused of the offence of witchcraft; eight are handed over to the secular arm to be burned and the rest are imprisoned for life or for a long period of years. Two of the condemned women, after repeated torture, confess that assisted at “Witches' Sabbaths.”

Under the penalty of torture, they also admitted they had worshipped the Devil, had been guilty of having sex with him, and with the other persons present, and that they had eaten the flesh of infants whom they had stolen by night from their nurses

AD 1335-Confessions of Witchcraft are obtained from sixty-three unfortunate souls in Toulouse, France. Anne-Marie de Georget speaks up for herself and the others as well to no avail. She believes that the world is conceived of good and evil forces in constant conflict with each other, which is a form of Gnosticism and supported by the Cathari, denied by Catholic Authorities.

AD 1340-1393-Saint John of Nepomuk, the patron Saint of Bohemia, which is now part of the Czech Republic, in 1380, became pastor and later cathedral canon and vicar-general to the Archbishop of Prague. According to tradition, he was appointed confessor to Queen Joanna, wife of Wenceslas, king of Bohemia and Germany and Holy Roman Emperor.

The king had John tortured and put to death for his refusal to divulge the Queen's confessions and for his defense of ecclesiastical rights. This story, however, has since been proven false, as John was murdered for his resistance to the king's efforts to change an abbey into a cathedral and so create a new see for one of the king's favorite courtesans. ~From Microsoft Encarta Encyclopedia, 1998.

Another Queen Joanna, establishes a brothel called the “Abbey,” which was instituted in the papal city of Avignon under the patronage of Queen Joanna of Naples. It was regulated by strict rules after the model of religious houses, and none but good Christians were admitted. Jews and Infidels were not permitted to enter; so sacred an institution was not to be “Corrupted” or “Contaminated.”

To maintain its strictly religious air, it was closed on Good Friday and Easter. Its women were housed in cloister-like buildings, adjoining the churches, which are still commonly spoken of as “Abbeys.”

What a commentary on religion as a means of moral uplift, when the prostitute can ply her trade but not when it interferes with her religious duties!

Pope Julius II instituted a similar brothel in Rome, and the foundation prospered under the patronage of Pope Leo X and Pope Clement VII. Part of the proceeds were devoted to providing for the comfort of the ‘Holy Sisters of the Order of Saint Mary Magdalene.’

Pope Clement VII, elected in 1342, had a knack for making his cronies happy, especially his cardinals, so that, “They could afford the handsomest little boys if they were so inclined, or the most beautiful ladies-in-waiting.” ~Dr. Joseph McCabe, Rationalists Encyclopaedia.

By the time of the Reformation it was estimated that there were more than 100,000 prostitutes in London, mainly supported by ecclesiastics.

When brothels were forbidden in the City of London, prostitution was carried on close to the palaces of the High Bishops, who not only had jurisdiction over but “Profited substantially” from their services. So notorious were these enterprises that the women inmates were called “Winchester Geese.”

In Shakespeare's Henry VI, Humphrey, Duke of Gloster, reproaches the Bishop of Winchester with “Thou that giv'st whores indulgences to sin.” ~cf. Genesis 38:24.

In 1321, King Edward II approved the sale of a lupinar to a Cardinal who evidently considered it a profitable investment for sacerdotal funds. In Antwerp, even today, it is stated, on excellent authority, the prostitutes of the regular brothels proceed in a body on certain feast days to the churches, carrying candles which they dedicate to the Holy Virgin, fervently praying to her for the success of their affairs.

Religious prostitutes were called “Servants of God,” and even as late as the second century sacred prostitution was still an honorable practice for women of good birth who felt the “Call” to live the “Divine life under the influence of Divine Inspiration.”

Cutting off the hair of young girls who become nuns may have had its origin in the custom, which prevailed in Byblos, in the ancient city of Aphrodite in Syria, where the surrender of a woman's virginity to a “Stranger” could be atoned for by shaving off her hair. When girls become Catholic nuns, they are mystically married to the “Divine Bridegroom.” ~See The Ten Commandments by Joseph Lewis

AD 1341-Barlaam the Calabrian is condemned by a Council of the Orthodox Church for being influenced by the teachings of Aquinas and teaching that God is Unknowable and remote from this world.

AD 1342-1420-Julian of Norwich; Benedictine Nun who professes that God is a manifest in this world through love, life, and light. May of 1373 she experiences visions of Christ followed by God's goodness and opposition to the Devil of which she writes about in “The Revelation of Divine Love.”

AD 1344- A wolf child of Hesse is said to have been discovered.

AD 1346-End of the World: The Black Plague spreads unmercifully across Europe killing rich and poor, Christians and heretics alike; one third of the population disappears across Europe. This is seen as the introduction to an immediate End of the World.

Christianity contributes to the Black Plague: Regrettably, the Christians had previously killed many of the cats, fearing that they might be familiars of evil spirits [Witches], and the fewer the cats, the more the rats, which are infested with fleas that spread the Black Plague.

AD 1347-1351-A plague [with a 60% mortality rate] erupts in the Gobi Desert and spreads across Asia from China in 1320. The Kipchaks, a nomadic group of Euro-Asian extraction, laying siege to a small outpost in Crimea, catapult dead corpses over the walls of their enemies, the bodies being previously infected with the plague.

The inhabitants of the small Genoese outpost become infected and the disease spreads from there throughout the known world. There will be several eruptions of plague occurring throughout Europe, which will effect the religious as well as the irreligious, many believing it is a curse from God for the sinfulness of man and punishment for not following God's laws.

The superstitious hierarchy of the Roman Church and their hostility to medicine allows the plague to decimate Europe. The burning of the Jews of Cologne is blamed by Christians for the Black Death [Liber Chronicarum Mundi] The “Great Morality,” later to be known as “The Black Death,” eventually spreads across Europe killing thousands in each town and village.

As the Black Death sweeps across Europe, killing one-third of the population, “Jews were burnt all the way from the Mediterranean into Germany... Under torture confessing to have spread the plague by poisoning wells... The poison made from the skin of a basilisk (a kind of mythical serpent)...” ~ N. Cantor, In the Wake of the Plague.

Within a four year period one-third of the civilization in Europe will die from this disease as their prayers go unanswered, embarrassing the Church, which can do nothing to help and the pleas from the masses seem all but ignored. Many people feel that this is God's wrath upon man for his sinful conduct. In 1345, Rome, a strong flood caused extensive damage followed by a revolution, then a devastating earthquake that severely damaged three famous Catholic basilicas.

The plague of 1349 is seen as God's response to the sinfulness of man and his revenge for the ill treatment of the Knights Templar who were quite popular with the people. The plague kills one of every three people, spreading from China in 1320 to Norway and Sweden in 1350.

Twenty-five million people die in the first wave alone [the plague returns again in 1361-63, 1369-71, 1374-75, 1390, and 1400, vermin and fleas being the carriers, it is ironic that cats for years were killed due to superstitious beliefs, and this in turn created a large rodent problem which in turn helped spread the disease]

The Church is not spared, the plague kills many of the clergy helping those who are infected and God's disciples are held responsible by some for this incursion.

Believing that God is punishing them and has sent an omen [a comet believed to be Haley's Comet] as the messenger of God's wrath to warn them, a new religious sect emerges called “The Flagellants,” pious Christians who walked the streets carrying crucifixes and whipping themselves in an effort to punish themselves and appease God. And on these laborious walks, they massacred the Jews and displayed their feelings toward the Christian clergy by robbing the Church of its opulent possessions and abused their possessors.

AD 1347-1380-Catherine of Siena is an Italian mystic who joins the Dominican Order at age sixteen and eventually becomes a Church reformer. In 1375 she receives the stigmata [marks of Christ's wounds on her body]

She helps to reconcile the Florentines and persuades Pope Gregory XI to return to Rome from Avignon, France [where the Pope and his court are living in palatial splendor supported by the King of France] in 1376, and becomes famous for her work known as the "Dialogue of St. Catherine of Siena." God is alleged to have given Saint Paul the pain of the stigmata. ~Galatians 6:17.

Saint Francis of Assisi, 1182-1226, was devoted to imitate Christ in all mannerisms, apparently inflicted himself with wounds and perpetuated the first stigmatic fraud. There have been several hundred others since, including Magdalena de la Cruz, 1487-1560, of Spain, who admitted her fraud when she became seriously ill, and Therese Neumann of Bavaria, 1898-1962.

The latter reportedly survived for 35 years eating only the "Bread" of the Holy Eucharist at mass each morning. One of the more recent stigmatists is Fr. James Bruce who claimed not only to have Christ's wounds but also that religious statues wept in his presence in Washington D.C., in 1992. Father Bruce now runs a parish in rural Virginia where the miracles have ceased.

Self-inflicted wounds are common among people with certain kinds of brain disorders, but claiming that the wounds are miraculous is rare and is more likely due to excessive religiosity than to a diseased brain, though both could be at work in some cases. The likelihood that the wounds are psychosomatic, psychogenic purpuras, manifested by tortured souls, seems less likely than hoaxing in most cases.

There are two main reasons for believing the stigmata are usually self-inflicted, rather than psychosomatic or miraculous. No stigmatic ever manifests these wounds from start to finish in the presence of others. Only when they are unwatched do they start to bleed [There has been no documented exception to the rule] And two, Hume's rule in "Of Miracles" is that when an alleged miracle occurs we ask ourselves which would be more miraculous, the alleged miracle or that we are being hoaxed?

Reasonableness requires us to go with the lesser of two miracles, the least improbable, and conclude that we are witnessing not miracles but pious frauds.

All 32 or so recorded cases of stigmata have been Roman Catholics and all but four of those cases were women. No case of stigmata is known to have occurred before the thirteenth century, when the crucified Jesus became an accepted icon of Christianity in the west. Reasonableness seems to require the non-miraculous explanation.

Although she could not write, Catherine dictates numerous letters and inspirational works and is canonized by the Roman Catholic Church in 1461 for her assistance in spreading the beliefs of the superstitious orientated Christianity. ~From Stigmata by Robert Todd Carroll, further information regarding stigmata may be obtained by reading, Pope Running Saint Factory? John Paul beatifies Monk Accused of Mental Illness, Fraud, Philandering by James Randi on the Fox Farce, a most unflattering portrayal of the Church, Joe Nickell, Looking For A Miracle: Weeping Icons, Relics, Stigmata, Visions, and Healing Cures. by Prometheus Books: Buffalo New York, 1993, Miraculous Phenomena, by Joe Nickell, in the Encyclopedia of the paranormal, edited by Gordon Stein, Buffalo, New York, Prometheus Books, 1996, and Ian Wilson, The Bleeding Mind: An Investigation into the Mysterious Phenomenon of Stigmata, London: Weidenfeld and Nicholson, 1998.

AD 1348- Anti-Semitism: The Jews are blamed for the Black Death [the horrific Plague] and are systematically persecuted. Pope Clement VI futilely tries to protect them by his July 6, 1348 Papal Bull, with another paper effort in a 1348 bull, but several months later, 900 Jews are still burned in Strasbourg, where the plague hasn't even affected the city. Pope Clement VI ineffectively tries to protect the Jews with the July 6, 1348 papal bull and another 1348 bull, but several months later, 900 Jews are still burned in Strasbourg, where the plague hadn't yet affected the city. ~Stéphane Barry and Norbert Gualde, La plus grande épidémie de l'histoire: The greatest epidemics in history, in L'Histoire magazine, n°310, June 2006, p.47, French, p. 17.

Although the Church, via Pope Clement VI publicly condemns the violence and says that those who blamed the Black Plague on the Jews [among whom are the fanatical flagellants] who have been "Seduced by that liar, the Devil," nothing is done. On September 21, 1348, the Jews of Zurich, Switzerland are accused of poisoning the wells and put to death.

During the devastating great plague of Europe, 1348-1352, religious prophets said the End of the World is at hand and that Christ would appear within 10 years. Petrarch speaks of the inordinate amount of time and effort Pope Clement VI spent preparing for his parades, and "On his horse he was in constant fear lest the wind should disarrange his perfumed garb." ~Petrarch, Letter Var. XV.

AD 1349- Christians erroneously conclude that the bubonic plague is caused by Jews poisoning wells, and 6,000 Jews are killed in one day at Mainz, Germany.

AD 1350-Renaissance Era: A rebirth or rediscovery of old manuscripts, books, and other literature comprising of poems, legends, myths, traditions, and texts long thought to have been destroyed by the Church or forgotten in time. Because of the corruption in the Church, traditional teachings will be challenged and the birth of new religions will emerge from the long forgotten teachings of ancient prophets and manuscripts brought forward that were long thought purged from this world.

Catholics claim that their Christian Church promoted the recovery of Europe, history records, however will disprove that, showing the Papacy was merely an idle spectator of the recovery; and when at a late hour it began to co-operate by patronizing art and letters, the Papal Court, most of the Popes, and the majority of the Italian Bishops, also adopted the characteristic vices of the era. In the earlier part of the period the Popes lived in a luxurious lethargy in their "Babylonian Captivity" at Avignon, France, 1309-77, in a palace and city which Petrarch, who lived near, describes as a sink of iniquity, in exchange for doing the bidding of the King. From this they passed into the futile days of the Great Schism, 1378-1414, when their vile greed excited the disgust of Christendom.

About 1450 they began, on a modest scale, the secular rehabilitation of Rome, so modest, indeed, that cattle still browsed in the streets, and as late as 1484 the Vatican Library, which Catholic writers call "The most important library in the West in the 15th century," had only 2,000 manuscripts [The Alexandrian and Cordovan libraries had over half a million volumes]. Every source of tainted wealth, sale of offices and indulgences, dispensations, etc., was exploited, and the more powerful of the Roman families, who fought like brigands, dominated as Cardinals or Popes and corrupted the Papal Court.

One out of twenty-nine Emperors was said to be a good man, and these ruled for 245 years, while the eight disreputable Emperors held the throne for only seventy-five years. But, in the 250 years of Papal history [both real or fanciful], ten out of twenty-four Popes, omitting Pontiffs who lasted only a few months, were or had been notoriously men of immoral life, and these ruled for 100 years: only three, who ruled for fifteen years, even attempted to reform the Church; all except these three permitted an extraordinary corruption in the Papal Court; and even the three reformers did not suppress the flagrant simony, graft, and judicial corruption.

Pope Nicholas V, 1447-55, whom Pastor, admitted that, "The reforming zeal of his early days cooled down," praises as the restorer of culture, included in his Vatican patronage the most obscene writers of the age.

Pope Calixtus III, 1455-8, introduced the Borgia family and, blind to their vices, raised them to the highest offices. Pope Pius II, 1458-64, a defiant apologist for his vices in his youth, made no effort to check the growing license. Pope Paul II, 1464-71, was "Wholly given over to sensual pleasure." ~from the works of Bishop Creighton.

Debauchery was rampant within the clerical walls and it is no wonder Pope Pius II said Rome was "The only city run by bastards." Pope Sixtus IV, AD 1471-84, a friar, promoted his grossly immoral friar nephews of the Rovere family, permitting his Court to be thoroughly wicked, and conspired the murder of a Medici prince in Church during solemn mass.

The Papacy is now so rich that the Colonna, Borgia, Orsini, and the Rovere families fight over it with colossal briberies and murder, and in the impasse they had to let the tiara go to Pope Innocent VIII, 1484-92, whose bastard children moved in the highest society in the city and the Vatican.

Inconceivable pictures of clerical corruption are to be found even in Pastor's "History of the Popes," while some of the scenes in the Vatican itself, are described in the private diary of the head of the Court, Burchard, are so vicious that the publisher would only strike a discreet version of them in the works of Joseph McCabe, former priest and historical novelist in his work, "The Pope's Favorite," 1917. ~Read what the Bible says of illegitimate children, Deuteronomy 23:2.

The next thirty years are covered by the Pontificates of Alexander VI, Julius II, and Leo X; two sodomists and one satyr and murderer. Pope Clement VII, 1523-34, an illegitimate son of the Medici House, and Pope Paul III, 1534-49, father of four illegitimate but well-known children, next sustained the gaiety and revelry of the Court. Celibacy laws were passed in 1022 and again in 1123.

"If perchance you ask why Pope Leo could not receive the sacraments in his final hour—it is because he had sold them." ~John Bale, quoting Sannazaro, Acta Romanorum Pontificum, 1558.

Rome has been terribly ravaged and impoverished by the sack of the city in 1527, and massacre of the Romans, by the Catholic Emperor, which threw into the shade the work of Goths and Vandals; but the gaiety of the prelates ran on, with fifteen years of partial reform, for another century and a quarter.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

Pope Clement VII drew on himself the contempt as well as hatred of all who had dealings with him, by his crooked ways and cowardly subterfuges which led to the taking and pillage of Rome. Pope Julius III, 1550-5, was shoddier than Pope Leo X, and Pastor can plead only that it is not proved that a sordid youth whom he favored was either his son or his mignon [lover].

Under Pope Pius IV, 1559-1565, "The evil elements immediately awakened once more into activity," Pastor, after one of the three short spells of partial reform by a Pope, Pope Paul IV, who loved strong wine and good cheer and was a scandalous nepotist, and after another short spell of reform, Pope Gregory XIII, 1572-85, notorious for his earlier moral looseness, let the Court and city return to such license that one courtesan, chiefly ministering to prelates, made a fortune of £150,000. ~Rodocanachi, Courtisanes et Buffons, 1894.

Under Pope Pius IV, 1559-65, "The evil elements immediately awakened once more into activity [Pastor] after one of the three short spells of reform [by a Pope, Paul IV, who loved strong wine and good cheer and was a scandalous nepotist], and after another short spell of reform, Gregory XIII, 1572-85, notorious for his earlier [moral] looseness, let the Court and city return to such license that one courtesan, chiefly ministering to prelates, made a fortune of £150,000 [Rodocanachi, Courtisanes et buffoons, 1894]. A few colorless Popes followed the third and last short spasm of reform, and this extraordinary series of Holy Fathers closed with the scandalous Pontificates of Urban VIII and Innocent X." -Joseph McCabe, Rationalists Encyclopaedia.

Pope Pius VI, fathers three sons [Ask your local priest what year celibacy was initiated by the Church] Priestly solicitation in the confessional becomes so brazen and shameless that Pope Pius IV issues a Bull in 1561 to investigate and punish all confessors guilty of soliciting women during the act of confession.

A few colorless Popes followed the third and last short spasm of reform, and this extraordinary series of Holy Fathers closed with the scandalous Pontificates of Pope Urban VIII and Pope Innocent X. ~from the works of J. McCabe, Rationalists Encyclopaedia.

The Vicars of Christ collected funds for years preparing their 'War Chest' for the extinction of Protestantism, which was instigated by the Jesuits through their royal and military pupils who moved freely in the imperialist camps; and the Papacy subsidized it all until, near the culmination, when Pope Urban VIII allowed his greedy relatives to appropriate the whole of the War Fund, thereby causing great consternation among the Bishops and Cardinals.

The political antagonism began the quarrel, which exists today, worldwide, with Catholics fighting Protestants, leaving neither woman nor new born child immune from the horrors of war; bombings and indiscriminate shootings show no favoritism. No one has ever disputed that this is overwhelmingly a religious war, and a war of the most barbarous description, with the Church refusing to accept defeat.

AD 1352-European countries are employed to extort as much money from the Jews as possible. Popular and peasant riots similarly constitute unique occasions for getting lush payments from the Jews, who have acquired great wealth and high positions in government; extortion payments for the protection that is granted them.

The growth of the power of the cities augment their power over the Jews, reducing the Jew to mere chattel, and according to an authorization by the Emperor to the city of Speyer, "... The Jews inhabiting our city will belong to us exclusively, will be our property in body and goods." ~The Jewish Question: From antiquity to the Carolingian epoch: The period of commercial prosperity of the Jews by Abram Leon.

AD 1354-The earliest extant documentation stating the existence of the Shroud of Turin.

AD 1365 (?) -First Tarot Cards make their appearance across Europe. It is said that the Knights Templar initiated this unique type of card playing as a mnemonic [teaching] device in order to learn secret ways of wisdom not offered to non-initiates. The Holy See finds the pictures on the cards objectionable in that they appear to portray mystical qualities.

AD 1369-Card playing is mentioned in a decree by Charles VI of France and is banned by authorities that believe cards and card playing are the work of the Devil. Superstitions live on.

AD 1370-When the Crusades had ceased, the papal curia, now growing ever more exacting in collections of taxes, fees, and tithes, began to draw all manner of yearly dues from churchmen throughout its jurisdiction; whereas in the 13th century it had only one auditor camera, in 1370 the Pope had more than twenty, and every Cardinal had a number in addition, they living like their superior by traffic in privileges. Under Pope Gregory XI, 1370-78, seven Bishops are excommunicated by one order for failure to pay their share of dues. ~Christmas Star Cover-Up by Marcus Chown, New Scientist, 22/29 December 2001.

Jean de Roquetaillade, a pro-French Franciscan, wrote from prison that a true millennium would begin about 1370, when “Popular justice” would overturn the corrupt social order. Itinerant English cleric John Ball preached Edenic equity, and prophesied that God was ready to overthrow inequality and private property. Peasants who joined Ball in the Peasants' Revolt of 1381 were responding to such millennial dreams.

AD 1373- Birth of the immoral painter Caravaggio, whose short, violent life encompassed drinking, brawling, murder & sodomy.

AD 1375-Under the Feudal System, men are not allowed to travel freely. As serfs the people were bound to the land they tilled and lived on. Only with permission from the Lord or overseer could they travel and then, they were required to register in the towns in which they stayed.

Records were kept as to who was a foreigner to the town, whence they came, how long they were staying, who they are visiting, and their next destination.

Freemasons were the exception. Handcrafters of the great cathedrals of Europe they were allowed to travel without hindrance. Freemasonry appears in the city records of London, England, as early as 1375.

The Roman Catholic Church will continually renounce this renegade secret society not merely for its indifference to Church Authorities but also for its obstinacy in its refusal to recognize declare Jesus Christ our Lord as the Divine Savior.

The doctrine and discipline of the Papacy was never derived from the Bible, and the fact is that wherever it has been allocated the power, it lays the reading of the Bible under its ban, and either consigns that choicest gift of heavenly love [life] to the flames, tortures it into submission, or shuts it up under heavy lock and key, proving this of itself, ‘Don’t challenge that, which the Church and its priestcraft have created.’

AD 1376-Card games are banned in Florence, Italy [Tarot Cards] Shortly thereafter card games spread to Switzerland, Belgium, Germany, France, Spain, and other portions of Italy. Many high-ranking families in Italy have cards designed by appointment for their amusement.

AD 1377- “Tractus Moribus,” old texts referring to Tarot Cards as a means of divination and prediction and also used as a past time for entertainment. The German monk, Johannes describes a game of cards called “Ludas Cartarum.” Church Authorities do not approve.

AD 1378-Pope Urban VI is elected as the new Pope and his election is declared invalid by the Cardinals who elect him due to his strange behavior. Clement VII is elected the new Pope. Urban VI retaliates by excommunicating Clement VII and all his supporters.

Pope Urban VI, as head of the Roman Catholic Church, “... Made a solemn and general declaration against keeping faith with heretics.”

In 1569, the Spanish Bishop Simancas once more asserted the Catholic principle that faith is not to be kept with heretics “... For if with tyrants, pirates and other robbers, who kill the body, faith is not to be kept, far less with confirmed heretics who kill souls.” ~From The Ten Commandments by Joseph Lewis

“A God who kept tinkering with the universe was absurd; a God who interfered with human freedom and creativity was tyrant. If God is seen as a self in a world of his own, an ego that relates to a thought, a cause separate from its effect. 'He' becomes a being, not Being itself. An omnipotent, all-knowing tyrant is not so different from earthly dictators who make everything and everybody mere cogs in the machine which they controlled. An atheism that rejects such a God is amply justified.” ~Karen Armstrong A History of God, pg. 383, speaking of the evangelist Paul Tillich.

In other words, the Church feels it is okay to break a covenant with heretics. ~See Leviticus 25, verses 44-46. Principles in the Decretals, part of the Canon Law of the Church, specifically state that “On oath disadvantageous to the Church is not binding.”

Eschatological enthusiasm bubbles over, spilling into the some of the great literature of the day. Virgil tells Dante, in the first canto of the Divine Comedy, that no one could ascend the hill past the ‘Beast’ until a hound came, “Who would eat wisdom, love, and virtue, not land and money.”

“Intellectual veracity, sincerity in matters of thought and faith, consistency in thinking, is not one of the virtues encouraged by the Church.” ~Professor Friedrich Paulsen, whose partiality to religion is unmistakable.

AD 1378-1458-Alfonso Borja [later his name is changed to Borgia, his mother's maiden name] of the infamous Borja family of Italy is elected as Pope Calixtus III. He appoints his nephew, Rodrigo, to

To Pope Pius XII. “I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians.” ~Mahatma Gandhi

Archbishop at age 25. After his father "Uncle's" election as Pope Callixtus III, 1455-1458, Roderic [Rodrigo] is made a Cardinal and vice-chancellor of the Catholic Church at the age of just 24.

Rodrigo later becomes Pope Alexander VI [Roderic Llançol, who appoints his children to high positions]. The Borja family uses the Papacy to increase their family wealth by lies, deceit, trickery, and evil deeds. It is from the diary of the German chaplain, Johann Burchard, Pope Alexander VI's master of ceremonies, that we learn the true character of the Borgia Pope. Burchard personally witnessed Pope Alexander's debauchery and wrote the famous comment, "The Pope's Christianity was a pretence."

With his 12 bastard children [Collins Dictionary], including Cesare, Giovanni [Juan], Lucrezia and Jofre, plus his other numerous mistresses, the "Vatican was again a brothel," per the Records of Rome, 1868, British Library, and his debauched Papal Court is boldly compared to the ancient "Fleshpots" of Caesarea in which Saint Augustine [430 C.E.] revelled.

Pope Alexander VI is nothing less than a sexual pervert, and lurid narratives are cited about by the lascivious intellectual underworld of Rome. Pope Alexander VI uses his seat to empower his three sons to higher positions within the Church and marries off his daughter to a prominent family.

Throughout the history of the Church one will find that saintly behavior is not a requirement for sainthood or promotion, perpetuation of the Catholic faith is. To the Church, history is, "To us the greater part of this material is not in any proper sense historical at all; but for the early Israelite as for the early Greek historian it was otherwise; our distinctions between authentic history, legendary history, pure legend, and myth, he made as little as he recognized our distinction of natural and supernatural. It was all history to him; and if one part of it had a better attestation than another, it was certainly the sacred history as it was told at the ancient sanctuaries of the land. The early Hebrew historians did not affix their names to their works; they had, indeed, no idea of authorship. The traditions and legends, which they collected were common property, and did not cease to be so when they were committed to writing; the written book was in every sense the property of the scribe or the possessor of the roll. Only a part of the great volume of tradition was included in the first books." ~Forgery In Christianity: Hebrew Holy Forgeries by Joseph Wheless.

"Borgia's enjoyment of the flesh was enhanced when the woman beneath him was married, particularly if he had presided at her wedding. Breaking any commandment excited him, but he was partial to the seventh. As priest he married Rosa to two men." She may have actually slept with her husbands from time to time, since Borgia always kept a stable of women, she was allowed an occasional night off to indulge her own sexual preferences, but her duties lay in his eminence's bed. "Then, at the age of fifty-nine, he yearns for a more nubile partner. His parting with Rosa was affectionate. Later he gave her a little gift, he made her brother a Cardinal." ~William Manchester's A World Lit Only by Fire: The Medieval Mind and The Renaissance, Little, Brown & Company, 1992.

Venetian Senator Sanuto writes that the then Cardinal Borgia fancied Rosa Vannozza dei Cattanei, the beautiful young married daughter of his chamberlain, whom Borgia then pays to arrange a series of secret daytime liaisons with her. As a result of this affair, Cesare Borgia, 1475-1507, is born, and the birth certificate acknowledges this relationship.

In his teens, a bitter son, Cesare, in his father's presence, will stab the chamberlain, decapitating him and ruthlessly piercing his head on a pole with an attached inscription saying, "This is the head of my grandfather who prostituted his daughter to the Pope." ~A History of the Popes, op. cit., Pope Alexander VI chapter.

Once elected to the papal throne, Alexander VI concentrated on further enriching himself and his family, being consumed with an uncontrollable passion for gold and bold women. The brazen and immoral Pope was never discreet, and Alexander VI admitted that he could be bought - provided that the price was right, and always in gold. "Almighty God! How long will this superstitious sect of Christians, and this upstart invention, endure?" ~Confirmed in Diderot's Encyclopedie, what Pope Alexander VI really thought of Christianity.

There were numerous critics of the corruption in the Catholic Church, but they invariably met grisly deaths. Girolamo Savonarola, 1452-1498, gave marathon sermons denouncing the church's hypocrisy saying, "The Papal Palace had literally become a house of prostitution where harlots sit upon the throne of Solomon and signal to the passersby. Whoever can pay enters and does what he wishes."

At last, "The Pope condemned him as a heretic, sentenced him to torture, and finally had him hanged and burned in the Plaza della Signoria."

Pope Alexander used the nefarious sums he raised to finance his son's military career and his daughter's marital ardors. Pope Alexander VI explained it succinctly: "Everything has a price." He was determined to learn the price of every mortal on earth so that he could buy, control, and utilize them. The Catholic historian and Archbishop of New York, John Cardinal Farley [d. c. 1916], subtly admitted this statement, "Old legends of their dissolute lives may be partly true... That they didn't sternly insist upon sexual virtue and injustice was a general license of the Papal Court, but it is probable that moral improvement was at the vanguard of their thinking." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, Pecci ed., 1897, vol. iii, p. 207.

There were numerous critics of the corruption in the Catholic Church, but they invariably met grisly deaths. Girolamo Savonarola, 1452-1498, gave marathon sermons denouncing the church's hypocrisy saying, "The Papal Palace had literally become a house of prostitution where harlots sit upon the throne of Solomon and signal to the passersby. Whoever can pay enters and does what he wishes."

Alexander VI rejected early admonishments as a priest, and cardinal, as well as fatherly advice, and as Pope, on 30 October 1501, defiantly dined with fifty prostitutes, as he required the prostitutes to dance naked before him and his Court of Saint Peter, dispensing rewards for the most gross sexual licentiousness and ingenious sexual adventures, with smaller purses being presented for tales of conquest that were substantiated by "Truthful witnesses."

Alexander was soon disappointed in his son Ippolito whom he made Cardinal [Ippolito was known as the "Petticoat Cardinal"... Il Cardinale della genella, due to his constant whoring after women and other lecherous traits], Pope Alexander VI doted on his son Cesare, making his other son, when he was only eighteen years old, Bishop of several Sees, including the lucrative See of Valencia, and a year later, 1493, along with Alessandro Farnese, the brother of Giulia, his current mistress, a Cardinal.

His love for Cesare was unique and more on the order of fast friends and compatriots than father and son. Not only did they drink and fight together, but they bedded down with whores in the same room. Cesare was Alexander's life. Fittingly, they allegedly died together, being tricked to drink from a common cup of poison.

Cardinalates were for sale, and Pope Alexander VI had no hesitancy in raising the least worthy for a million or more dollars, at the current rate of exchange, for a pretty face or a little fancy. Thus he made the dissolute fifteen-year-old Ippolito d'Este a Cardinal, and later he would give him his daughter, whom both the Pope and his sons shared, Lucretia.

"His daughter [Lucretia] had just turned seventeen and was at the height of her beauty. We now know that he [Pope Alexander VI] was, in fact, her lover... Here, however, the tale darkens as the Romans had scarcely absorbed the news that the father lusted for his daughter when they learned even more diabolical facts. Lucrezia was said to be unavailable to her father because she was already deeply involved in another incestuous relationship, or relationships, an intriguing triangular entanglement with both her handsome brothers. The difficulty, it was whispered, was that although she enjoyed coupling with both of them, each, jealous of the other, wanted his sister for himself." ~William Manchester's A World Lit Only by Fire: The Medieval Mind and The Renaissance. Little, Brown & Company, 1992.

Alexander's passion for nudity and sex knew no bounds, and at the wedding of the gentle and cultured Elisabetta Gonzaga and the Duke of Urbino, a knight was stripped nude to the waist and locked in a cage with a female cat which was prodded into an anger and fear. The cat lashed out at the youth. Scratched deeply, his eyes covered with blood, the knight was ordered to kill the cat, but not with his hands or teeth. Before the cat was finally frantically dispatched, the knight was so badly mauled he could barely move. He had to be pensioned for two years following "The Pope's entertainment."

Afraid that his own daughter was not sufficiently delectated, Alexander quickly arranged for her the rape of her mares by his stallions and vowed that if his horses did not do the job, his own men would complete the assault. Pope Alexander had seven children that we know of, and is said to have died from poisoning when Cardinal Corneto switched a poisoned chalice, which was intended for Corneto.

"Once he became Pope Alexander VI, Vatican parties, already wild, grew wilder. They were costly, but he could afford the lifestyle of a Renaissance prince; as vice chancellor of the Roman Church, he had amassed enormous wealth. As guests approached the papal palace, they were excited by the spectacle of living statues: naked, gilded young men and women in erotic poses. Flags bore the Borgia arms, which, appropriately, portrayed a red bull rampant on a field of gold. Every fete had a theme. One, known to Romans as the Ballet of the Chestnuts, was held on October 30, 1501. The indefatigable Burchard describes it in his 'Diarium.' After the banquet dishes had been cleared away, the city's fifty most beautiful whores danced with the guests, 'First clothed, then naked.' The dancing over, the 'Ballet' began, with the Pope and two of his children in the best seats." ~William Manchester's A World Lit Only by Fire- The Medieval Mind and The Renaissance. Little, Brown & Company, 1992.

Candelabra were set up on the floor, scattered among them were chestnuts, 'Which,' Burchard writes, "The courtesans had to pick up, crawling between the candles."

Then the serious sex started as guests were stripped and ran out onto the floor, where they mounted, or were mounted by, the prostitutes. "The coupling took place," according to Burchard, "In front of everyone present." Servants kept score of each man's orgasms, for the Pope greatly admired virility, and measured a man's machismo by his ejaculative capacity, and after everyone was exhausted, His Holiness distributed prizes- cloaks, boots, caps, and fine silken tunics. The winners, the diarist wrote, "Were those who made love with the courtesans the greatest number of times."

The gross depravities of the Catholic Church bred rebellion, and the Protestants, along with the invention of mass printing during the same time brought a dawn of knowledge, a re-nascence of thinking that had been suppressed 1000 years before. The Protestants stripped the oligarchical Christian philosophy of all of the colorful Catholic trappings, bringing the sanitized, cinderblock Baptist church of today, more prudish, still scorning intellect and learning.

AD 1380-John Wycliff, scholar and lecturer at Oxford, is immersed in his translating from Latin into English [Midland Dialect] the Old Testament. John Wycliffe, an eminent theologian at Oxford, makes the New Testament and Old Testament [with the assistance of Nicholas of Hereford, 1382] translations in English, first complete translation to English, included Deuterocanonical Books, preached against abuses, express unorthodox views of the sacraments [Penance and the Eucharist], the use of relics, and against celibacy of the clergy 1384, however, John Purvey, a follower of John Wycliffe, revises Wycliffe's translation.

This translation of the Old Testament into English greatly infuriates Pope Clement VII and Pope John XXIII.

"Pope John XXIII, ruled 1410-15, A brutal Neapolitan adventurer, said by some of the best contemporary writers to have been a pirate in his youth, who won his way to the Cardinalate by ferocity in leading the Papal troops and raising large sums for the Popes by an infamous traffic in sacred offices. The German-Roman lawyer Dietrich von Neheim (De Schismate), the best-informed and most conscientious writer of the time, says that Cardinal Cossa, as he then was, corrupted 200 girls while he was Papal Legate at Bologna, and levied commissions on the gamblers and prostitutes of the city. He was elected Pope by a majority of the Cardinals, but was deposed by the Council of Constance under pressure from the Emperor Sigismund [who certainly corrupted as many girls as the Pope]. The indictment of his character, which the great gathering of more than 400 Cardinals and prelates drew up, while 1,000 prostitutes enlivened the city, runs to seventy-two articles, and includes every known crime and vice. Pope John was sent into a comfortable retirement, and John Hus was burned. The Dark Age had ended two centuries earlier." ~Joseph McCabe, Rationalists Encyclopaedia.

John Hus was summoned to Council of Constance in 1414, John Hus was promised safe conduct by Pope John XXIII, but arrested and burned alive at the stake instead, 1415 [Pope John said that one needn't keep one's word to a heretic].

In 1382, the entire Bible is translated into English, much to the dismay of the Church that feels the Bible is theirs and does not wish to have translations in the hands of the common people [see remarks of Pope John XXIII in 1412]

The Church will claim that their efforts are only for Purity of Translation to Preserve the Faith and will continue to use this dictum well into the 20th century. It is merely another attempt at mind control of their members by limiting the knowledge of their members thereby limiting the ability of the members in contradicting anything the Church Authorities say is true regarding interpretation of Scripture.

In the 1380 Wyclif Edition in English, the Gospel by John 19:19, reads "Ihesus of Nazareth king of the iewes."

In 1384, the Common Council of London states that any prostitute found guilty of living outside of the designated area of Cock Lane will be publicly embarrassed by being taken from prison in a striped hood, carry a white wand, and be accompanied by minstrels to a pillory at Aldgate, where her offence will be publicly proclaimed. She will then be escorted back through the city to Cock Lane.

Men found guilty of procuring a prostitute are given a haircut [In a time when beards were fashionable], have their beards shaved off, and are made to stand in a public pillory until the mayor of the town says they can go home.

AD 1382-Wycliffe completes his first Bible translation at Oxford University.

AD 1389-A resurgence in the interest regarding the Shroud of Turin has the Bishop d'Arcis write a letter Pope Clement VII. After diligent inquiries and investigations he states he has discovered fraud and reveal the source of the Shroud who is a master craftsman. Bishop d'Arcis is apprehensive about the scandal that will befall upon the Church if the true source is not revealed.

On the 6th of January 1390, Pope Clement VII sends a letter to his step-cousin, Geoffrey de Charney regarding the conditions for displaying the Shroud. The Church lawyer, d'Arcis knows who the man accountable for the Shroud is, but can't divulge this information due to the Vatican's new position and its fear of embarrassment.

The creator [the French Inquisitor Imbert] must remain a secret to avoid mortification to the Church. The report of Pierre d'Arcis to Pope Clement VII is now protected in the Bibliotheque Nationale in Paris. ~See Collection de Champagne v154, folio 138.

AD 1390-Regius Poem, one of the oldest surviving documents pertaining to the Masonic Order.

AD 1397-Tarot Cards are forbidden by ordinance, January 22, by the Prevot of Paris, France. The uncanny association of Tarot Cards to the Knights Templar is an embarrassment to the Vatican that sees the symbology as a pictorial relationship to religion [Tarot Cards such as the Pope and Empress] and also as a means of potential prophesizing.

AD 1400- The first edition of the Wycliffe's Bible appears with a revised second edition appearing shortly thereafter. John Wycliffe, a 14th-century reformer, says that the Catholic mass is Daniel's abomination of desolation.

Pope Boniface IX announces a Jubilee, and pilgrims are heedful of the recent horrors of the plague, Black Death, know that journey is fraught with danger, make their way to Rome in the course of the year. Conditions in Rome itself are bad, and the piteously impoverished inhabitants are soon making the most of their opportunities to rape, murder and rob the devout pilgrims. Pope Boniface IX is succeeded in 1404 by the "Gentle and virtuous" Pope Innocent VII, Cosmo Migliorati, 1336-1406. ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. vii, 1910, p. 19.

The following statement concerning England in about the year 1400 gives us a clearer insight into the extent of the Catholic persecutions of non-believers, "By this it was enacted that any one whom an ecclesiastical court should have declared to be guilty, or strongly suspected, of heresy, should, on being made over to the sheriff with a certificate to that effect, be publicly burnt." ~Bourne, George, The American Textbook of Popery, Griffith & Simon, Philadelphia, 1846, footnote, page 298.

AD 1401-March 28, Julian; April 7, Gregorian, De Heretico Comburendo, the first law is passed condemning to death all those who read Wycliffe's Unauthorized version of the Bible. The word of God in English greatly angered the Catholic Church leaders, hence the Archbishop of Canterbury, Thomas Arundel, persuades King Henry IV to pass the law.

AD 1404-1440-Gilles de Rais, who fought alongside the Maid of Orleans, Joan of Arc, in France, becomes involved in demonic rituals where he is accused in murdering one hundred and forty children whose hands, eyes, and hearts and blood are used for the ceremonies & sacrifices he is accused of participating in. Gilles is tried by the Bishop of Nance and sentenced to death by hanging.

In 1409-A meeting of Cardinals and Bishops to resolve the issue of two Popes at one time terminates in another Pope being elected thereby creating three Popes who are serving concurrently Pope Urban VI, Pope Clement VII, and Pope Alexander V.

The making of gold and silver [Alchemy] is a felony under an act of 1404 in Great Britain.

AD 1406-1457-Valla, Lorenzo, Italian Humanist. A priest, son of a Roman lawyer, who became a skeptic and one of the most learned and brilliant critical writers of the Renaissance. The King of Naples appointed him secretary and in that protected capacity he exposed the fraud of the Donation of Constantine on which the Papacy based its claim of secular sovereignty, and other forged documents [which today the Church suppresses] From a work he wrote, "On Pleasure," in Latin.

An atheist and a follower of Epicurus, the Papacy did not mind what it called obscene literature, which was then abundant, but it first threatened and then bought off with high honors his attacks on the Catholic Church.

AD 1407- Werewolves are mentioned during witchcraft trial at Basel.

AD 1408-The Council of Oxford forbids any translations of the Scriptures into the vernacular [language of the commoners] unless and until they are fully approved by Church authority, sparked by this unapproved Wycliffe Bible, Sir Thomas More says, “It neither for biddith the translations to be read that were already well done of old before Wycliffe's days, nor dammeth his because it was new but because it was naught; nor prohibiteth new to be made but provideth that they shall not be read if they be made amiss till they be by good examination amended.” ~A Dialogue against Heresies, quoted in Chronology of Events by Fr. Johnson Puchakonam.

On 21 May 1408, King Charles VI of France, 1368-1422, publishes a decree causing the withdrawal of the French Catholic Church and all French citizens from obedience to Pope Benedict XIII. King Charles nullifies his country's support for Christianity and declares France religiously neutral, a decision that is upheld until a Frenchman is elected Pope years later.

At this time, Popes Benedict XIII and Gregory XII are two legal but conflicting Popes in a war of ambitions, and each believes that he alone should be the “Only Pope.”

AD 1409-1410-Under Pope Alexander V we have the first Great Divide in Christianity.

“The Great Schism [1378-1417] rent the Church. As Cardinal he had sanctioned the agreement of the rival Colleges of Cardinals to join in a common effort for unity. He thus incurred the displeasure of Pope Gregory XII [who deposed him]. At the Council of Pisa [1409] he preached the opening sermon, a scathing condemnation of the rival Popes, and presided at the deliberations of the theologians who declared those popes heretics and schismatics... In the riven Catholic world... His legitimacy was soon questioned, and the world was chagrined to find that instead of two Popes it now had three. ... Whether or not Alexander was a true Pope is a question still discussed.” ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 1, 288-9.

AD 1410-1425-Anti-Pope, Pope John XXIII, neither believed in the “Immortality of the Soul,” or the “Resurrection of the Dead.”

Pope John was a former ruthless pirate, who poisoned a Pope [Filargi], a mass-murderer, a mass-fornicator [with a preference for nuns], an adulterer par excellence, and indulger in simony, a blackmailer, pimp, and a master at dirty tricks.

Pope Alexander V dies suddenly, of suspected poisoning in 1410, and the Italian Cardinals elect the Pisan Baldassare Cossa, 1370-1419, to replace him. He calls himself Pope John XXIII, 1410-1415 [not to be confused with Pope John XXIII, 1958-63], and to date he is the most corrupt man to have ever worn the sacred tiara of Popedom.

Pope John XXIII wins his way to the Cardinalate by his ferocity in leading the Papal troops and raising large sums for the Popes by an infamous trafficking in selling of sacred offices. Dietrich adds that, as Papal Legate at Bologna, Cossa exacted a personal commission from both gamblers and prostitutes.

The German Roman lawyer Dietrich von Neheim, “De Schismate,” the most conscientious writer of his time, says that Cardinal Cossa, as he then was, corrupted 200 girls while he was Papal Legate at Bologna, and levied commissions on the gamblers and prostitutes of the city. He is elected Pope by a majority of the Cardinals, but was deposed by the Council of Constance under pressure from the Emperor Sigismund, 1411, who is also known to have had his way with as many girls as the Pope.

The indictment of his character which the great gathering of more than 400 Cardinals and prelates drew up, while 1,000 prostitutes cheered up the city, runs to seventy-two articles, and includes every known crime and vice. Pope John was sent into a comfortable retirement, and John Hus is burned at the stake after being promised immunity and the opportunity to defend his beliefs. ~ See F. J. Kitto, Open John the Twenty-Third and Master John Hus of Bohemia, 1910.

AD 1410-1425-Cooke Manuscript, the “Old Charges” are manuscripts setting out regulations for the operative mason's trade and read at their meetings.

AD 1411- The Dominican Vincente Ferrer revives anti-Jewish hysteria in Spain as: “Cohorts of the Devil and Anti-Christ, clever, warped and doomed.”

AD 1412-Archbishop Arundel to Pope John XXIII declares, “...That wretched and pestilent fellow of dammable memory, the very herald and child of Anti-Christ, who crowned his wickedness by translating the scriptures into the mother tongue." [Referring to Wycliff's translation of the Bible into common English, which was considered by Church officials as vulgar]

The Church cannot continually change its interpretations of the Bible if the populace has a copy or versions of their own to compare with. A common Bible also gives the masses time to read and contemplate the Church's Scriptural interpretations, which is what happens later on in the renaissance period of Europe.

AD 1412-31-Maid of Orleans, Joan of Arc, and Frenchwoman who wore men's clothing and armor into battle: believes she hears the Archangel Michael speak to her at age 13 and takes up the sword to defend the cause of Christianity. "The woman shall not wear that, which pertaineth to a man, neither shall a man put on a woman's garment: for all that do so are abomination unto the Lord thy God." ~Deuteronomy 22:5.

The Ecclesiastical Court at Rouen later tries her for heresy for believing that she is Responsible to God and only God and not to the Roman Catholic Church.

As stated previously, the Church cannot be left out of the loop [communication process with God] for to admit such would negate the necessity for a church in the first place.

Burned at the stake on 30 May 1431 for heresy, Joan of Arc's torturers, in sympathy and respect for her, stack green branches amongst the dried ones so that she may be overcome with smoke and not feel the stinging pains of the flames. On 6 Aug. 1456 [twenty-five years after her execution] her case is reopened, and Pope Callistus III declares her innocent of the charges [What happened to the inerrancy of the Papal seat?] Pope Benedict XV canonizes her in 1920 [489 years later].

The Papacy has hidden for centuries, since Joan became a Saint, the true reasons for her martyrdom, which are suspicion of witchcraft and having allegiance to a witch cult. The Columbia Encyclopedia's article on Satanism brings to light a purely Catholic perversion of the facts, which apart from witchcraft, was a formal religion or cult of Satan, the Black Mass being either a hypocritical exploitation of the rich by priests, as it was in the time of the French King, Louis XIV, or, as regards recent times, a fiction of novelists, created to endear the fears of man in an illusory Prince of Darkness whose only desire is to capture the souls of man, thereby necessitating 'Saving' by who else, the Church.

AD 1414-1415-Council of Constance convened by Antipope John XXIII per request of Emperor Sigismund, Holy Roman Emperor, to discuss Papal succession and the Supremacy of the General Council over the Pope. Council of Constance; declares its powers immediately from Christ [Sacrosancta] over ruling the Papal dignity itself. The powers of the Pope now come under this body of authority

AD 1415-John Huss, Bohemian, under protection of Emperor Sigismund, agrees to appear before the Council of Constance, called by Anti-Pope John XXIII. Huss is tricked into appearing by being assured of his safety. The Religious Council, however, does not support his views, and the Council decides to have Huss ordered to be burned at the stake, much to the dismay of the peasants who revolt after hearing of this betrayal, a double cross which assists in the proliferation of Protestantism.

Pope Gregory XII is deposed: "The most scandalous charges were suppressed; the Vicar of Christ was only accused of piracy, murder, rape, sodomy and incest." ~Gibbon, Decline & Fall.

The Council of Florence condemns all of Wycliffe's works, but the actual Bibles continue to be used after having the heretical prologue removed, and are possessed by both religious houses and those of the nobility and tacitly accepted by Catholics.

AD 1417- The Council of Constance, which elected a Pope who was accepted by all rival Catholic Churches, now considers itself Universal with sole authority on God's Word and Salvation, with one Pope recognized as the 'Vicar of Christ'. God's incarnate [in the flesh] representative on earth.

AD 1420-Pope Martin V declares a Crusade against the Hussites [Bohemians] The Taborites are a group of Bohemians predominantly of the poor and uneducated classes. The Utraquists are mainly of the nobility. First, led by John Zizka, a Taborite, and later by Procopius the Great, a priest, they defeat four Catholic Crusades against them [1421, 1426, 1427, and 1431]

AD 1421-The Jews, in the increased anti-Semitism that is rampant across Europe, are expelled from Vienna and Austria, by their Christian rulers. Their properties may be confiscated and given to Christian supporters.

AD 1424-Pope Clement VIII condemns the Jewish genocidal writings.

AD 1424-The Jews are expelled from Cologne, Germany by their Christian rivals. Again, the Church

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi shares in their removal.

AD 1424-1425-The “Dance of Death,” is a mythological theme in art, literature, and music, which is based on the belief, fostered by the devastating plagues that wiped out so much of the populations across Europe and the wars of the 14th and 15th centuries.

The dead [represented as skeletons], rose from their graves and tempted the living, of all ages and ranks, to join them in a dance that would eventually bring them to their death. The “Dance of Death,” or “Danse Macabre,” also known as “Totentanz,” was first personified in murals and a poem in the “Church of the Holy Innocents,” in Paris. The dance of death was thereafter painted on many church walls [which inspired Fifty-one drawings to be produced from 1523 to 1535].

In these plays Death appeared not as the destroyer, but as the messenger of God inviting mankind to the world beyond the grave, a representation familiar both to the Holy Bible and to the ancient poets. The purpose of these plays was to teach all men that they must die and they should prepare themselves to appear before their Judge, the Almighty One.

The first victim in these skits is usually the Pope or the Emperor, for death knows no rank. The oldest traces of these plays are found in a Spanish text for a similar thespian performance dating back to the year 1360, “La Danza General de la Muerte.”

Similar representations have been performed in Bruges before the Duke of Burgundy, Philip the Good, in 1449. In 1453 at Besançon, and in France in the Cimetière des Innocents near Paris in 1424. Traces of this creation may be found in Dante and Petrarch. In Florence 1559, the “Triumph of Death” formed a part of the carnival celebration. ~From the works of Charles G. Herbermann & George Charles as transcribed by Rick McCarty.

AD 1425-Permission to own property by certain houses of the Dominican Order is granted by Pope Martin V, and an extension to the whole order is granted by Pope Sixtus IV in 1477. Many religious orders founded upon chastity and poverty will also later obtain permission to own land and other properties.

His Holiness Sixtus IV drained the religious coffers to give to those whom he favored irrespective of his holy teachings.

“Abbes and Bishops in consequence became suzerains, temporal lords, having numerous vassals ready to take up arms for their cause, counts of justice; in fact all the prerogatives exercised by the great landlords... This Ecclesiastical feudalism was so extensive, so powerful, that in France and England it possessed during the Middle Ages more than a fifth of all the land; in Germany nearly a third.” ~Williams, Henry Smith, The Historian's History of the World, vol. 8, p. 487.

“His dominating passion was nepotism, heaping riches and favors upon his unworthy relatives. His nephew, the Cardinal Rafael Riario, plotted to overthrow the Medici; the Pope was cognizant of the plot, though probably not of the intention to assassinate, and even laid Florence under an interdict because it rose in fury against the conspirators and brutal murderers of Giuliano dei Medici. Henceforth, until the Reformation, the secular interests of the papacy were of paramount importance. The attitude of Sixtus towards the conspiracy of the Pazzi, his wars and treachery, his promotion to the highest offices in the Church of such men as... Are blots upon his career. Nevertheless, there is a praiseworthy side to his Pontificate. He took measures to suppress abuses in the Inquisition, vigorously opposed the Waldenses, and annulled the decrees of the Council of Constance Under him Rome became once more habitable, and he did much to improve the sanitary conditions of the city.” ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 14, 32, 33.

Ironical as it may be, the encyclopedia of Christianity professes that the Pope opposed the Waldenses, but neglects to state the horrors inflicted upon them by Catholics with the full sanctions of the Office of Peter. The Protestants were not much better in religious tolerance than the ‘Evil Empire’ they wished to reform, “The principle which the Reformation had upheld in the youth of its rebellion - the right of private judgment was as completely rejected by the Protestant leaders as by the Catholics... Toleration was now definitely less after the Reformation than before it.” ~Will Durant.

AD 1427(?)-1445 (?)-“Book of Constitutions” oldest surviving written English transcripts based on manuscripts pertaining to Masonry [Freemasonry]. The first Masonic “Book of Constitutions” allowed the members of any religion to become Masons, “Leaving their particular opinions [regarding God] to themselves....”

The “Old Charges” were composed in some 115 documents outlining the nature, organization and functions of the Masonic Craft. A 1425 manuscript traces the origins of Masonry to the ancient Greek mathematician, Euclid, and further, through the construction of the Tower of Babel and Solomon's Temple. The Charges established symbolic principals and ethical standards to govern members of the new guild. Secrecy was extremely common in many of the medieval craft-guilds, and Masonry was no exception. This mystification served to control the knowledge of the craft and to keep in check renegade serfs who would leave the land unlawfully and thus cause undue political as well as religious burdens upon the craft for their leaving the "Feudal bondage" and joining the free traveling trade of masonry. Scottish Masons soon developed "Passwords" and "Secret handshakes" by the early 17th century, most likely from their travels and encounters with the Moors during the Crusades, a ritual which spread throughout the other European lodges.

AD1430-1505-Heinrich Kramer, Dominican Inquisitor, along with Jacobus Sprenger, Inquisitor, and co-author of one of the most diabolical books ever written, "Malleus Maleficarum-Hammer of the Witches" a work published in 1486 that is to provoke and invigorate the Catholic Church's opposition to heresy and witchcraft. Women are often seen as impediments to true spirituality in a context where God reigns strictly from heaven and demands a renunciation of physical pleasure. "It is a good thing for a man to have nothing to do with a woman." ~As I Corinthians 7:1 so states.

It is none other than the Inquisitors who will write the 'Malleus Maleficarum,' known as "The Hammer of the Witches," explained that women are more likely to become witches than men: "Because the female sex is more concerned with things of the flesh than men; Because being formed from a man's rib, they are 'Only imperfect animals' and 'crooked' whereas man belongs to a privileged sex from whose midst Christ emerged." ~Note: Anatomically, men and women have the same number of ribs, that is 24, and when this fact was noted by the Flemish anatomist, Vesalius, in 1524, it touched off a wave of controversy, as it appeared to contradict Scripture [Genesis 2:21].

The book further states, "A belief that there are such things as witches is so essential a part of Catholic faith that obstinately to maintain the opposite opinion savors of heresy.' Passages in the Bible such as 'Thou shalt not suffer a witch to live,' were cited to justify the persecution of witches. Both Calvin and Knox believed that to deny witchcraft was to deny the authority of the Bible. The 18th century founder of Methodism, John Wesley, declared to those skeptical of witchcraft, 'The giving up of witchcraft is in effect the giving up of the Bible.' And an eminent English lawyer wrote, 'To deny the possibility, nay, actual existence of Witchcraft and Sorcery, is at once flatly to contradict the revealed Word of God in various passages both of the Old and New Testament.'"

The book contains, in detail, spells, chants, and tortures. The witch hunts also demonstrated great fear of female sexuality. In the Malleus Maleficarum, the priests describe how witches were known to "Collect male organs in great numbers, as many as twenty or thirty members together, and put them in a bird's nest..." The manual recounts a story of a man who, having lost his penis, went to a witch to have it restored, "She told the afflicted man to climb a certain tree, and that he might take which he liked out of a nest in which there were several members. And when he tried to take a big one, the witch said: You must not take that one; adding, because it belonged to a parish priest." ~cf. Deuteronomy 23:1.

A man in 1621 lamented, "Of women's unnatural, unsatiable lust... What country, what village doth not complain." ~Read The Witch Hunts: The End of Magic and Miracles 1450-1750 C.E. by Helen Ellerbe from The Dark Side of Christian History.

In 1928, Reverend Montague Summers publishes an English version of this manuscript. Kramer, with the support of Archduke Sigismund, arouses terror and conflict in the Austrian region of Tyrol. "...It is a tale, told by an idiot, full of sound and fury, signifying nothing!" ~Read Macbeth, by Shakespeare.

AD 1431-Pope Eugene IV calls the Council of Basel to obtain aid in the struggle against the Ottoman Turks. The Council dissolves prematurely due to the outbreak of the Black Plague all across Europe. The birth of Joan of Arc, at Rouen, France who will lead the French armies against the British invaders and win battle after battle is with the alleged consent of God. Then she is captured by the British in Normandy and condemned to be burned at the stake because she refuses to stop wearing men's clothing [cross dressing, which is against Scripture]. Joan is abandoned by most of the French, her friend Gilles de Rais endeavors to rescue her but is too late, the Catholic authorities have already burned her alive at the stake.

Council of Basel, 1431-1443, forbade Jews to attend any universities, or from acting as agents in the conclusion of contracts between Christians, and required that they attend Church sermons.

AD 1431-1503-Pope Alexander VI is known for his corruption, immorality, and sexual exploits, fathers four illegitimate children by Lady Vanozza Catani.

As a Cardinal he issues a scathing letter from Pope Pius II for misconduct. Celibacy laws having been passed in 1022 and confirmed again in 1123. The reader has no idea that even as a Cardinal, soon to be Pope Alexander VI, was brazen in his conduct, and at the actual time of his election to the Ecclesiastical Chair of Peter continued entertaining his mistress, whose image he had painted on one of the walls of the Vatican Palace as the 'Virgin Mary,' along with the images of his children in the "Sacred Palace" showing the general disgusting corruption of the Church.

"[Pope] Alexander sells the Keys, the Altars and Christ; As he bought them first, he had a right to sell them." ~Disraeli, Curiosities of Literature, 1st Series, Art. Pasquin and Marforio.

"A characteristic instance of the corruption of the Papal court is the fact that Borgia's daughter, Lucrezia, lived with another one of his mistress' Giulia, who bore him [The Pope] a daughter, Laura, in 1492 [the year of his consecration as Pope]." ~From the former Benedictine Monk, J. McCabe.

Sexual looseness was the least pernicious of Borgia's vices, but where the Encyclopedia Britannica noticed that his foreign policy appears inspired only by concern to enrich his children and "...For this object he was ready to commit any crime and to plunge all Italy into war," this Catholic stickler for accuracy [embarrassment] has been removed from most encyclopedias.

A tall, well-proportioned man with a genial personality he finds ways of getting around restrictions imposed upon him. He bribes his way to a 2/3 vote to gain the papacy, and in 1493 he sends the first missionaries to the New World [America]. He uses his power to improve the status of three of his children [What happened to the Papal Decree of Celibacy in 1123 and 1139? Is this part of the inerrancy of the Papal Office?].

Pope Alexander VI's son, Giovanni, is appointed Duke of Gandia, Cesare is appointed Archbishop of Valencia at age 17 but later resigns to head the Papal Armies that subdue all those who refuse to acquiesce to the supremacy of the Pope. The Great Leonardo de Vinci is retained to map and plot the defenses of their adversaries [retained as a cartographer and engineer for defenses], the Pope's daughter, Lucrezia, is married off to the Pope's allies to enhance his power [She is married three times].

Many Catholic apologists claim gross exaggerations regarding the crimes of the Popes alleging that the corruption of the Papacy is exaggerated by the Rationalists of this last century. The Borgia Pope does not fall into this category. Official Church documents have established the birth of six of his children and were published from the archives of the Duke of Ossuna, after which the Vatican reluctantly admitted that it had copies of the same documents, birth certificates, etc., so that even Catholic writers were finally forced to yield, yet still claim that he wasn't all that bad. ~The documents are published in an appendix to Thuasne's Edition of Burchard's Diarium, and also in Vol. V, pp. 363-5, of the History of the Popes of L. Pastor, by a Catholic priest and professor, 29 vols., AD 1891-1938.

Both authorities reluctantly admit that Pope Alexander was absolutely, without mental reservation, or equivocation, the most licentious Pope.

From his youth, in killing a playmate [suppressed by the Church], obtaining the Papacy by heavy bribery [apologists claiming it was standard practice therefore no big thing], and during his Papacy, he most assuredly had children by a mistress, Ms. Giulia Farnese, and is documented in having raped innumerable nuns. Thuasne gives contemporary evidence, in support of Burchard, that many bizarre orgies were also held in the Vatican during his Pontificate.

Most of the charges against the Pope for poisoning are probably exaggerated, however, it appears to be true in two specific cases [suppressed by the Vatican authorities]. Pope Alexander is not considered exceptional in continuing his licentiousness while occupying the Papal throne as the corruptness of the Papal Court, as well as the Chair of Peter, was the acknowledged rule rather than the exception from approximately 1450 to 1650. ~For a Protestant account see Bishop A. H. Mathew's Life and Times of Rodrigo Borgia, 1912. Bishop Creighton's History of the Papacy, is highly inaccurate and much too lenient in forgiving the sins of the Popes, as are most Catholic apologists. McCabe's Crises in the History of the Papacy AD 1916, Ch. XII. Pastor calls Catholic apologies for Pope Alexander VI, "Aperversion of the truth." ~from J. McCabe, Rationalists Encyclopedia. The Catholic Encyclopedia is good for little more than names, dates, and birthdays, having purged history of most negative attributes to Catholicism.

During his pontificate Savonarola, who had urged his deposition, was burned, and the censorship of books was introduced. According to one account he died by partaking accidentally of poisoned wine, intended for ten cardinals, his guests. Another story relates that he died of fever.

But the circumstance that his son, Caesar, was simultaneously attacked with the like symptoms, and "The aspect of the body, which was hideously disfigured," serve to confirm the suspicion of poison. ~Gregorovius, History of the City of Rome in the Middle Ages, vol. VII, p. 516-521.

AD 1433-The Council of Basel-The Catholic Church Authorities and the Bohemians agree to end hostilities and sign a truce.

AD 1433-1499-Marsilio Ficino, a Florentine mystic and philosopher believes that one can commune with celestial influences by way of meditation on the symbols of the planets. Marsilio translated the works of Plato, Plotinus and Proclus along with the tracts of Hermes Trismegistus. His published works include "Theologica Platonica de Immortalitate Animarum" and "Libri de Vita."

AD 1438-45-Council of Ferrara-Florence attempts to reunite the Eastern Orthodox and Western Christian Churches. The primary obstacle is the Trinity, created and adopted by the Western Christian Church after much debate [see AD 250, 292, 325, & 329].

AD 1439-Council of Florence renders no decision regarding 'Purgatory' as to whether or not suffering is by fire or tribulation or hardship. It is exceedingly difficult to render a decision as to what is alleged, as Scripture, if Purgatory is not included in Scripture. Purgatory was a manifestation of Dante { 1265-1321 } in his poetic political/religious discourse of journeying through a fabled realm in the mind of man.

The issue of man's nature is discussed along with Dante's interpretations of salvation for the souls who try to do good, punishment for those who err and rewards or heavenly bliss for the souls who attain a perfection of the soul through good thoughts and deeds.

The Catholic Catechism of the Catholic Church [CCC] regarding Purgatory, states: 1030: All who die in God's grace and friendship, but still imperfectly purified, are indeed assured eternal salvation; but after death they undergo purification, so as to achieve holiness necessary to enter the joy of heaven. 1031: The Purgatory decreed: Church gives the name 'Purgatory' to this final purification of the elect, which is entirely different from the punishment of the damned...~See 3 Maccabees 12, 1 Corinthians 3:1-15, and Matthew 12:32.

AD 1439-No time to wait for the Catholic Hitler, the Jews are expelled from Augsburg, Germany by their bigoted Christian rulers.

Doctrine of Seven Sacraments acknowledged

AD 1439-Last meeting between Eastern and Western Christians until Pope Paul VI in 1964 meets with Ecumenical Patriarch Athenagoras I in 1965 where the Anathemas' are lifted by both sides [Great religious leaders on both sides invoking the name of God in the condemnation of the other].

AD 1439-1449-Anti-Pope Felix V, fathers an illegitimate son. Pope Felix V is elected by the Council of Basel; in 1449 however, he resigns. Duke Louis of Savoy, son of Pope Felix V, in 1453 buys the Shroud of Turin for the sum of two castles [Celibacy had been approved by the Popes in 1022 and 1123].

AD 1440-Oct 26th : The strong Christian, Gilles de Rais, Joan of Arc's best friend, is executed in Nantes, France, for the torture and murder of hundreds of children.

Pope Nicholas empowers the unspeakable Spanish Inquisition to investigate and punish homosexuals.

AD 1441- The beginning of European slave trade in Africa with the first shipment of African slaves sent directly from Africa to Portugal; all with the complicity and blessings of the Catholic Church

AD 1443-Pope Eugenius authorizes a crusade to liberate Constantinople, which fails. The Church continues its anti-Semitic doctrines, but seldom are these words published, "We decree and order that from now on, and for all time, Christians shall not eat or drink with Jews, nor admit them to feasts, nor cohabit with them, nor bathe with them. Christians shall not allow Jews to hold civil honor over Christians, or to exercise public offices over them." ~Pope Eugenius IV, Decree of 1442.

Many Christians believe that, "The Jews, because of their stiff-necked rejection of the Christ, have in turn been rejected by God. The mantle has passed from Jew to Christian. Christians are the new 'Chosen People.' The Church is the New Israel." ~Persecution of the Jews in Europe by Ted Thomson

AD 1443-1513-Pope Julius II, born Giuliano Della Rovere, nephew of Pope Sixtus IV, and father of three illegitimate daughters while still a Cardinal [Pope Innocent II, 1216-1217 had already issued an edict regarding celibacy in 1022 and 1123]. Pope Julius II, Giuliano della Rovere, one of the peasant nephews, and a Franciscan friar, of whom Pope Sixtus IV, considered one of the "Good Popes," brought from their monasteries to share his recent wealth in Rome.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

The nephew, Pietro Riario, ends up committing suicide after a few years of scandalous extravagance and immoral and exotic vices. Giuliano, who is raised to the Cardinalate, preferred military service and hunting, and leads the Papal armies. He is known to be notoriously immoral, and no one questions that he had acknowledged fathering three illegitimate daughters, gambled heavily, and swore and drank like any other soldier; however, Catholic historians refuse to admit the charge of one of the leading nobles of the time, that he was addicted to unnatural vices. From 1484 onward he maintained a murderous and corrupt rivalry with the Cardinal Borgia [one day to become Pope Alexander VI who will have sexual relations with his children, which of course the Church denies] for the Papacy, which he secured in 1503 by elegant promises to the Cardinal electors whom he repudiated after he received the tiara, Papal Crown.

Pope Julius raised funds by even worse simony than his predecessors had practiced and adorned Rome with magnificent edifices as a monument to his reign, and it is this artistic splendor, which is now used by apologists in an effort to overshadow the grave defects of his moral character as Pope.

He is a thoroughly corrupt secular monarch, "As revolting as the frank unscrupulousness of Pope Alexander VI," states the lenient Bishop Creighton, continually trying to win back the Papal States, drinking heavily and cursing deeply, beside a lifetime of fighting. His rage and intemperance were notorious to the end. -The best biography is M. Brosch's, Papist Julius II, AD 1878, but a summary, with contemporary authorities can be found in McCabé's Crises in the History of the Papacy, 1916, Ch XIII.

Nepotism is rampant in the Church, and Giuliano is appointed Cardinal at age 28. In 1492, he flees to France when Pope Alexander VI plots his assassination. He returns in 1503, upon the death of Pope Alexander VI, and is appointed Pope after the short tenure of Pope Pius III.

Pope Julius, who disliked the Borgia family [of whom Alexander VI was a member] orders Cesare Borgia [son of Pope Alexander VI] to surrender the fortified castles given to him while his father was in power. In 1511, while deathly ill, Emperor Maximilian plans to unite the powers of the Papacy with those of the Emperor.

AD 1445-Cardinal Ascanio Maria Sforza retains a set of Tarot Cards, which later authorities claim were not for playing but merely kept as a pictorial representation of the times.

AD 1446-Rosslyn Chapel, Edinburgh, Scotland is founded by Sir William St. Clair, Third Earl of Orkney and Lord of Rosslyn, Grand Master of Masons in Scotland in 1441.

The Knights Templar would attend services for spiritual union, sleep fully clothed to avoid sinfulness, pray daily, and have their swords blessed by the clergy prior to doing battle for the Lord. All sins committed in the name of Our Lord are forgiven by Church Authorities.

AD 1448-Which Bible is the true word of God? "Vaticanus Codex," said to be the oldest existing vellum manuscript [along the "Codex Sinaiticus," are the two oldest uncial manuscripts].

Written in the 4th century, the "Vaticanus" was introduced to the Vatican Library at Rome by Pope Nicolas V, in 1448. Prior history of this manuscript is unknown. "From one end to the other, the whole manuscript [Codex Vaticanus] has been traveled over by the pen of some... Scribe of about the 10th century. If Vaticanus was considered a trustworthy text originally, the mass of corrections and scribal changes obviously render its testimony highly suspicious and questionable." ~Dr. J. Smythe.

The "Sinaiticus Manuscript" also has a dubious history, being allegedly found in a convent, St. Catherine, in 1859 [the monks of "Saint Catherine's Monastery were actually trying to burn it when it was found by Tischendorf]. Sixty-eight years before the "Vaticanus" was discovered, John Wycliffe had translated the first complete Bible into English [1380].

annot, overlook these facts. How did these MSS. come into being? How did it happen that they should be beautiful to the eye, yet within contain such vile and devastating corruption? It seems that these uncial MSS. along with the papyrus MSS. included in this category all resulted from a revision of the true, or Universal Text. This revision was enacted in Egypt by Egyptian scribes!" ~ Codex Vaticanus, Samuel Gipp, Ref: B6.

The miraculous appearance of these Greek "Vaticanus Manuscripts" therefore causes some question as to their origin and validity and the Catholic Church does not allow the use of this manuscript for evidential purposes until the 20th century [A reproduction was not allowed to be made of it until 1889].

If there is a Catholic conspiracy, then it was to suppress this manuscript. The disappearance of the "Comma Johanneum Manuscript" lead to further conjecture as to the intentions of the Church in producing "Authentic Documents," the faithful of the Church being forbidden by Papal Decree to doubt the "Comma Johanneum Manuscript" [1897]. "Secretariat of the Congregation of the Holy Office of the Inquisition. Concerning the authenticity of the text of 1 John 5: 7., Wednesday, Jan. 12, 1897."

"*Whether we may safely deny, or even treat as a matter of doubt, the authenticity of that text [1 John V. 7] . . . 'All things having been most diligently examined and weighed, and the opinion of the Lords Consultors having been taken, the aforesaid Most Eminent Cardinals gave out 'the answer is in the negative.' On Friday the 15th of the aforesaid month and year, in the usual audience granted to reverend father the lord Assessor of the Holy Office, after that he had made an exact report of the aforesaid proceedings to our Most Holy Lord Pope Leo XIII, His Holiness approved and confirmed the resolution of these Most Eminent Fathers . . . AD1448- "Die Kunst Ciromantia" is published by Hartlieb, a renowned palmist. The Orthodox Church of Russia declares its independence from Constantinople in 1448, and in 1589 the Patriarchate of Moscow is established and is formally recognized by the Patriarch Jeremias II of Constantinople. For the Russian Church and the czars, Moscow had become the "Third Rome," the heir to the imperial supremacy of ancient Rome and Byzantium.

Except for the brief reign of Patriarch Nikon in the mid-17th century, the patriarchs of Moscow and the Russian Church were entirely subordinate to the czars of Russia. In 1721, Czar Peter the Great abolishes the patriarchate altogether, and thereafter the church is governed through imperial administration. Orthodox canonical legislation admits married men to the priesthood.

Bishops, however, are elected from among celibate or widowed clergy. God is believed to be invisible and indescribable in his essence, but when the 'Son of God' became a man, he voluntarily assumed all the characteristics of created nature, including describability, and consequently, images of Christ, as man, affirm the truth of God's real incarnation. —From the Microsoft Encarta Encyclopedia, 1998 Edition.

Catharine II, head of the Orthodox Church, assassinated her husband and stepped upon his already dead corpse, then she boldly mounted the throne. She was the murderess of Prince Ivan, grand nephew of 'Peter the Great,' who was imprisoned for eighteen years, and who during all that period saw the sky but once. Catharine was probably one of the most intellectual beasts that ever wore a crown in Imperial Russia.

AD1449-1492-Lorenzi Medici, Lorenzo the Magnificent, of the powerful Medici family is a marked man for contradicting the ruling political party which is very close to the Pope. Pope Sixtus IV and the Archbishop of Pisa plot Lorenzi Medici's assassination. After the elimination of his brother, Giuliano Medici during High Mass, the Archbishop of Pisa is found hanged shortly thereafter from a window in Florence, Italy.

A close friend of the painter, Michelangelo, and politically well connected, Lorenzo Medici has his son Giovanni, appointed Cardinal at the age of 13 years of age [later to become Pope Leo X, 1513-21] His cousin Giulio also becomes a Pope [Pope Clement III, 1523-34]

The great grand-daughter, Catherine de Medici marries King Henri II of France and is held responsible for the Saint Bartholomew Day Massacre.

AD1450-The Counter-Reformation: Modern Catholic writers, being no longer able to deny, entirely, the corruption of the Church which led to the Reformation, claim that the Popes detected such evil as there was and effected a complete internal reform independently of any pressure of Protestantism. It consisted of fourteen or fifteen years' temporary suppression of certain vices and ended in futility.

Dr. L. Pastor, tries feebly to vindicate the myth in his earlier volumes of "History of the Popes," 29 vols., 1891-1938, but the names of the small minority of strict prelates which he quotes are unknown in history, and they had little or no influence. The facts he gives show that these few men began to draw up lists of the necessary reforms in 1497, but the Court of Cardinals refused to elect a reform-Pope until 1555, when half of Europe was in rebellion against the Papacy, and Rome itself had been fearfully ravaged and impoverished by the armies of the Catholic Emperor, 1527.

The Popes were actually vicious or had merely outlived their notorious vices, and the Court and the body of the clergy remained extraordinarily corrupt. A strict, if rather bibulous [alcoholic] Pope Paul IV, then ruled for four years, to be followed by a man of so low a character, Pius IV, that, Pastor says, "The evil elements immediately awakened once more."

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

The next Pope was a Grand Inquisitor, and ordered the Catholics to kill 1,000 Waldensian Protestants, and after becoming Pope Pius V, he sent Catholic troops to kill the Huguenot Protestants in France, and ordered the commander to execute every prisoner taken, and was personally responsible for launching the final Crusade to slaughter thousands in the Battle of Lepanto [1575].

After six years of this, Rome endured for five years the vitriolic puritanism of Pope Saint Pius V, and, after his death, vice had again thirteen years of license, 1572-85, under Gregory XIII. Sixtus V next imposed five years of rigor upon Rome, which cursed his nepotism and his cruelty, and the Counter-Reformation was then over. Too much of Europe was now anti-Papal to permit the flaunting license of the golden days, and the treasury had sunk by three-fourths or more, but the city and Italy again became very corrupt. ~See McCabe's History of the Popes, 1939, pp. 421-31.

Witch hunts dominate the European landscape, and Else of Meerburg is accused of riding a wolf.

Vatican library is founded.

AD 1450-1455-The first moveable type Bible is published. The Gutenberg Bible will be instrumental in Reformation Movements throughout Europe, for now books can be printed quickly, in quantity and economically. New religious groups will claim the Bible and not the Church is the source of Religious Authority.

A passage from the customary, or house rules during the printing of the Gutenberg Bible, which reflects the significance they placed on scriptorium work [but even this did not stop the Church from altering Scriptures, nor the various Christian sects since], "Concerning the work of copying, note that you should order the work of your hands to the end that it may lead you to purity of heart, because you are weak and cannot be always at Spiritual exercises and for this reason was handiwork instituted. Wherefore you ought to attend in your copying to three things, to wit, that you make the letters properly and perfectly, that you copy without error, that you understand the sense of what you are copying, and that you concentrate your wandering mind on the task." ~The Essene Brotherhood By Joshua David Stone.

Pope benedict, in his Bull on the Jewish problem [1450] declares, "The heresies, vanities and errors of the Talmud prevent their knowing the truth."

The Church can no longer make arbitrary changes to Scripture without the full knowledge of the populace. Knowledge of Scripture will enhance the public's repudiation of Church Doctrine not based on Scripture. Knowledge of the Bible will free the people from fear of the Church and its Administrators. Knowledge of the Book will give the masses liberty in practicing their religion without fear.

AD 1450-1700-Fear of Witchcraft and Satanism spreads throughout Europe and even to the New World [America]. The Church capitalizes on this to eliminate a lot of their rivals. It is ironic, that the early voyagers to the New World did so to avoid persecution for their beliefs [contrary to the Roman Catholic Church] and yet were adamant in their own preservation of Protestant beliefs with violators incurring severe punishments. Both Christian groups believed whatever they bound on earth is so ordained in Heaven, and the Death Penalty is universal for all free thinkers.

AD 1451-1506-Christopher Columbus, Italian navigator and explorer, unable to obtain funding for his expeditions to a new route to India obtains help from King Ferdinand and Queen Isabella of Spain, and in exchange for three small caravels, small sailing crafts that can sail against prevailing winds, Columbus agrees to keep only 10% of any of the riches he discovers and promises to use the treasures he finds to liberate Jerusalem from the Muslims and build a shrine there in honor of the Christian King and Queen of Spain. It is written that Columbus lasciviously abducted 12 young Indian women on his first voyage without making the slightest reference to the children he then left motherless. In Columbus' journal, he focuses on whether or not the women were strikingly attractive, or lighter or darker than the Guanches of the Canary Islands, and whether they covered their shame [privates].

The Spaniards did not always find it necessary to use force. The acquiescent Taino and Siboney Indians surrendered their women willingly. For the majority of the conquistadors who followed in the wake of Columbus, the Indian women had been created to service them and give them limitless sex, and the Indian males reinforced this shameful attitude by giving the Spaniards their young daughters, sisters, and even their own wives to pacify the blood-thirsty conquistadors. They gave Cortés 20 women, among them Malintzin, the famous Malinche, who is later Christened "Marina," who after being passed down through other men, acted as his interpreter and eventual lover.

It was likely that the Conquistadors of Mexico came to feel more comfortable with native women than white ones. It has long been thought that his legitimate wife, Catalina Suárez, known as la Marcaide, died under strange circumstances shortly after arriving in Mexico to be reunited with her husband. Sometimes the callous Spaniards would tire of these sexual gifts and expressed their contempt by hanging a pair of the unfortunate Indian women at the camp entrance. Notwithstanding, the Spanish liked to believe the women preferred them, but this was most likely it was a banal delusion, as the terrified, the Indian women merely sought safety. The native women recognized that having a child by a Spaniard might allow them certain privileges, which sometimes tended to soften the malevolent men. The Spaniards occasionally lost track of the offspring they created, engaging in a furious procreation [genital feats] that after several generations, eventually changed the ethnic composition of the New World. ~Twisted Roots; A Look at the Historical and Cultural Influences that Shaped Latin America Into the Most Impoverished, Unstable, and Backward Region of the Western World by Carlos Alberto Montaner. Bartolomé Conejo, a Spanish colonizer of Puerto Rico, boldly asked for license to install a brothel, of course, he was guided by the most Christian of principles: to channel the Spaniards' lust and safeguard the honor and virginity of white women, not the natives. The priests who accompanied the conquistadors were dismayed by the uncontainable desires of their Catholic soldiers, and warned that it was doubly sinful to mate with non-Christians [Pagans]. As a solution, the priests even resorted to baptizing the Indian women hurriedly, and in groups, so that the sinful couplings could continue at a brisk pace. The good Catholic Spaniards did denounce frequent cases of homosexuality in almost all the cultures they came upon and brutally subjugated.

End of the World: This Portuguese navigator, Christopher Columbus, appears to have been motivated by a belief that he considered necessary to facilitate bringing about the great Christian conversion of the people of the New World before the End of the World. Predictions of disaster and catastrophe were usually done with no intention to deceive.

Persecutions continue until very recent times, as illustrated by the following quotation, "I beg to direct you to the history of Spain, which, at length, is beginning to raise her head from the dust; and of Austria, Italy, and Naples. There everything is exclusive and sanguinary. Utter a word against the priest, or his senseless mummery, or refuse to fall down before the Wafer God, and the dagger is plunged into your heart!" ~ from W. C. Brownlee, Papery the Enemy of Civil and Religious Liberty, J. S. Taylor, New York, 1836, page 124.

Columbus' brother Bartholomew is a cartographer and it is believed that he may have had access to old Arab maps [ancient maps from Alexandria were considered destroyed in 642] showing uncharted lands, the roundness of the world, and a possible new route to India. It is said that the ancient map maker Piri Reis, son of Hadji Mehmet made maps portraying Antarctica as a land mass and not a frozen wasteland.

This would place his sources at 11,000 years of age or at the end of the last ice age. Christian literature portrays Columbus' native clientele as savages, a people who shared happily in all they possessed, yet, "The people of this island and of all other islands, which I have found and seen... All... Are so artless and free with all they possess, that no one would believe it without having seen it. Of anything they have, if you ask them for it, they never say no; rather they invite the person to share it, and show as much love as if they were giving their hearts..." ~Partial History of Christian Missionary Atrocities.

Columbus did not set out to liberate or to convert the native clientele solely for the benefit of the Universal Roman Catholic Church, but to enslave them and reap the financial benefits for the Church, and himself, "[W]e bestow suitable favors and special graces on those Catholic Kings and Princes... Athletes and intrepid champions of the Christian faith... To invade, search out, capture, vanquish, and subdue all Saracens and Pagans whatsoever, and other enemies of Christ whosesoever placed, and... To reduce their persons to perpetual slavery, and to apply and appropriate... Possessions, and goods, and to convert them to ... their use and profit..." ~Christopher Columbus: Two Kinds of Being: The Doctrine of Discovery And Its Implications for Yesterday and Today by Robert Francis.

Christopher Columbus, a former trader of African slaves, is best known as the 'So-called' discoverer of America, and in his personal log, Columbus writes that, his main purpose in seeking undiscovered worlds is, "To bring the Gospel of Jesus Christ to the heathens." ~Christopher Columbus' Book of Prophecies

Christian explorers follow their faith as throughout their travels they remember the words of Augustine, "The first cause of slavery, then is sin. That one man should be put in bonds by another, this happens only by the judgment of God, in whose eyes it is no crime." ~Saint Augustine, City of God.

The Christian: Christopher Columbus: Authorized to either exterminate the native clientele and replace their culture, as the natives are either killed or enslaved. The good Catholic thinking Columbus commented in this regard, that the natives "Ought to be good servants... And would easily be made Christians."

God's Will(?): because Columbus saw his affairs as the "Fulfillment of prophecies in Isaiah." To any objections from the natives, Columbus responded with, "... With the help of God, we shall ... Make war against you in all ways and manners that we can, and shall subject you to the yoke and obedience of the Church and of Their Highness. We shall take you and your wives, and your children, and shall make slaves of them."

Eyewitnesses recall, "Once the Indians were in the woods, the next step was to form squadrons and pursue them, and whenever the Spaniards found them, they pitilessly slaughtered everyone like sheep... So they would cut an Indian's hands and leave them dangling... Some Christians encounter an Indian women, and since the dog they had with them was hungry, they tore the child from the mother's arms and flung it still living to the dog..." "After all, the Indians were only infidels." ~Christopher Columbus, Excerpt of the Requerimiento.

"The crew was afraid that Columbus' stupidity would get them killed. They were reluctant to sign on only until a local patron, Martin Pinzon, signed up to captain one of the ships, then there was no problem at all getting a crew." ~Creationist Lies by Kent Hovind.

Columbus encounters the Sargasso Sea. A sea that stretches for miles comprised of seaweed, which could ensnare a ship in its tangled mass. Later stories would relate this incident and the mysterious waters to the "Bermuda Triangle" that extends from Florida and Puerto Rico to Bermuda. Columbus lands on the island of Guanahani and renames it San Salvador.

Columbus fools the Native American people into thinking that he was a god, and upon his return he applies to the Papacy in Rome [Pope Alexander VI for control of the new lands he found on behalf of the King and Queen, which is basically a license to steal anything that is not owned by a Christian nation or people] His request is granted and the King and Queen of Spain are given permission to spread Christianity amongst the natives. He made a total of four trips to the New World and attempted to convert the natives to Christianity, but the brutal treatment by the Europeans did not go well with the natives. One does not read of "... Papal Rome has shed the blood of sixty-eight millions of the human race in order to establish her unfounded claims to religious dominion." ~The Glorious Reformation by S. S. Schmucker, D. D., Discourse in Commemoration of the Glorious Reformation of the Sixteenth Century; delivered before the Evangelical Lutheran Synod of West Pennsylvania, by the Rev. S. S. Schmucker, D.D., Professor of Theology in the Theological Seminary at Gettysburg. Published by Gould and Newman, 1838, citing Dr. Brownlee's Papery An Enemy To Civil Liberty, p. 105.

The rapid depopulation of the Americas as a result of the exposure of the native Americans to European diseases, against which the indigenous natives possessed no natural immunities, was often interpreted as yet another sign of Divine Providence preparing the New World for European occupation. ~James Axtell, The European and the Indian, 1981.

In the 20th century many Christian groups will still use threats in order to convert people to Christianity, many proclaiming to be the one and only true church of Jesus Christ our Lord [Civil rights, freedom of religion, freedom of expression, freedom of the press and human rights preventing them from forcing their will upon the masses].

A dispute over ownership of the new lands between Spain and Portugal is settled by Pope Alexander VI who draws an imaginary line to separate the possessions in the New World [Line of Demarcation, 1493] Beginning with Columbus (a former slave trader and would-be Holy Crusader) the conquest of the New World began, as usual understood as a means to propagate Christianity. Within hours of landfall on the first inhabited island he encountered in the Caribbean, Columbus seized and carried off six native people who, he said, "Ought to be good servants ... [and] would easily be made Christians, because it seemed to me that they belonged to no religion." ~D. Stannard, American Holocaust, 200.

While Columbus described the Indians as "Idolators" and "Slaves, as many as [the Crown] shall order," his companion Michele de Cuneo, an Italian nobleman, referred to the natives as "Beasts" because, "They eat when they are hungry," and made love, "Openly whenever they feel like it." ~D. Stannard, American Holocaust, 204-205.

The surviving Indians fell victim to rape, murder, enslavement and continuous, and vicious Spanish raids. As one of the culprits wrote: "So many Indians died that they could not be counted, all through the land the Indians lay dead everywhere. The stench was very great and pestiferous.” ~ D. Stannard, American Holocaust, 69.

The Indian chief Hatuey fled with his people but was captured and burned alive. As, “They were tying him to the stake a Franciscan friar urged him to take Jesus to his heart so that his soul might go to Heaven, rather than descend into hell. Hatuey replied that if heaven was where the Christians went, he would rather go to hell.” ~ D. Stannard, American Holocaust, 70.

What happened to his people was described by an eyewitness: “The Spaniards found pleasure in inventing all kinds of odd cruelties... They built a long gibbet, long enough for the toes to touch the ground to prevent strangling, and hanged thirteen [natives] at a time in honor of Christ Our Savior and the twelve Apostles... then, straw was wrapped around their torn bodies and they were burned alive.” ~ D. Stannard, American Holocaust, 72.

Or, on another occasion: “The Spaniards cut off the arm of one, the leg or hip of another, and from some their heads at one stroke, like butchers cutting up beef and mutton for market. Six hundred, including the cacique, were thus slain like brute beasts... Vasco [de Balboa] ordered forty of them to be torn to pieces by [the Spanish Mastiff] dogs.” ~ D. Stannard, American Holocaust, 83.

American history books [often written by Christians], are replete with the conversion of the natives and their blissful acceptance of Christianity. Shaped by a superstitious medieval imagination of witchcraft and sorcery, the indigenous religious practices are judged as perverted, brutal, and evil in the radiance of Christian Orthodoxy, which negates the horrors of their Inquisition.

Some of the conquistadors would hunt and kill the native Indians in their spare time; Hernando de Soto, governor of Cuba, and his associates, Joan Ruíz Lobillo and Vasco Porcallo de Figueroa, were in fact instituting a visual documentation of horror and revulsion that surely should have been assiduously considered brutal in the Old World. What happened to the Christian tenets of forgiveness, acceptance and toleration of one's fellow man?

Since the Garden of Eden was not discovered in the Indies, nor the Fountain of Youth, these simple undemanding natives were considered by the Spaniards as prime constituents for emasculation, or better still, consider them as simple objects of fair trade and potential [non-white/non-Christian] slaves, to be subjects to the Catholic King of Spain and submissive, compliant and obedient to the Pope in Rome. Fernández de Oviedo's epic encyclopedic of Christian European curiosity plays a fundamental role in not only conveying merely the goodness of nature, but also in dismissing all the horrors, tortures, cold blooded cruelties, and evils witnessed and disseminated by the Spaniards.

What you won't read is, “Vasco Nunez de Balboa discovered that the village of Quarequa was stained by the foulest vice. The king's brother and a number of other courtiers were dressed as women, and according to the accounts of the neighbors shared the same passion. Vasco ordered forty of them to be torn to pieces by [Bull Mastiff] dogs. The Spaniards commonly used their dogs in fighting against these naked people, and the dogs threw themselves upon them as though they were wild boars on timid deer.” ~ Delaware Review of Latin American Studies, Of Nature and Man: Wonder and Exoticism in Gonzalo Fernández de Oviedo y Valdés, 1478-1557.

The, “Island's population of about eight million people at the time of Columbus's arrival in 1492 already had declined by a third to a half before the year 1496 was out.” Eventually all the island's natives were exterminated, so the Spaniards were “Forced” to import slaves from other Caribbean Islands, who soon suffered the same fate. Thus, “The Caribbean's millions of native people [were] thereby effectively liquidated in barely a quarter of a century.” ~ D. Stannard, American Holocaust, 72-73

“In less than the normal lifetime of a single human being, an entire culture of millions of people, thousands of years resident in their homeland, had been exterminated.” ~ D. Stannard, American Holocaust, 75.

“And then the Spanish turned their attention to the mainland of Mexico and Central America. The slaughter had barely begun. The exquisite city of Tenochtitlán [Mexico City] was next.” ~ D. Stannard, American Holocaust, 75.

On every island he set foot on, Columbus planted a cross, “Making the declarations that are required,” the requerimiento, to claim the ownership for his Catholic patrons in Spain. And “Nobody objected.”

If the Indians refused or delayed their acceptance [or understanding], the requerimiento continued: “I certify to you that, with the help of God, we shall powerfully enter in your country and shall make war against you ... and shall subject you to the yoke and obedience of the Church ... and shall do you all mischief that we can, as to vassals who do not obey and refuse to receive their lord and resist and contradict him." ~ D. Stannard, American Holocaust, 66.

Neither country is contented with this truce and in 1529 "The Treaty of Tordesillas" moves this imaginary line. The continuation of this line is the basis for Spain's later claim to the Philippine Islands. However, France, England and the Netherlands do not recognize this treaty knowing that neither Spain nor Portugal had the military or naval power to make obligatory their rights and also lay claim to the newly discovered lands.

In 1501 Christopher Columbus, now a lonely man, declares himself the Messiah as prophesied by Joachim. He believed the Italian Calabrian Abbot, Joachim, in that he, Columbus, was selected for a providential destination. During his travels to the New World, Columbus encountered the practice of cannibalism by Central and South American natives. Columbus wrote of the Carib Natives and their cannibalism in his journal. "The country of origin of the majority and most important of the so-called magic, i.e. hallucinogenic drugs [often used in religious ceremonies], is Central America. Magic drugs were already of great importance in the old Indian cultures of Mexico. The Spanish chroniclers and naturalists who came to the country soon after the conquest of Mexico by Cortez mentioned in their writings a great number of plants with intoxicating, stimulating, or narcotic effects; these plants were unknown in the Old World and were used by the Indians both in their medical practices and in their religious ceremonies."

AD 1452-1519-Leonardo de Vinci, painter, sculptor, inventor, scientist, mathematician, engineer. Best remembered works are "The Last Supper" and "Mona Lisa." It is said that when he was painting the Last Supper that he would prepare himself by prayer and meditation, raising his brush to give illustration to his spiritual thoughts and that his hand trembled. Leonardo de Vinci believed that 'True Knowledge' is derived from knowing how to see and not from philosophical speculations. Some believe he is the perpetrator and creator of the Shroud of Turin. Leonardo may have harbored latent homosexual tendencies. At the age of twenty-four he is arrested and charged with sodomy [the penalty is death] but the charges are dropped as one of the men involved is of an influential family in Florence.

Thereafter Leonardo becomes obsessed with his privacy and secrecy of his works. Leonardo becomes enthralled with mysticism and the occult hiding many mystical symbolisms in his works. His painting of the Last Supper has one of the apostles dressed in apparel similar to his with the colors opposite to what Jesus is wearing. The figure next to Jesus has feminine hands, and appears to be a woman. Some say this figure is Mary Magdalene, a consort of Jesus. It has long been purported that Mary Magdalene was the favorite apostle, and not Peter. This revelation has been secreted away by Church Authorities who have for centuries hidden, altered, or destroyed all reference to this detail.

Few Christians have ever bothered to speculate as to why Leonardo de Vinci painted only one cup [chalice] during a meal in which there are twelve apostles.

AD 1452-The Inquisition supervises the condemnation of books with a proclamation being issued on the 12th of July 1543 [under Pope Paul III] and again on the 30th of December 1558 [under the reign of Pope Paul IV. See also Index Tridentinus 1564] Banished are all books written by heretics [including all translations from the Latin published without authorization. The Church is to have the last word on any translation of Biblical works.]

AD 1452-1498-Savonarola Girolamo, Dominican Monk who claims that God gave him the gift of prophesy. The Italian preacher attempts to purge the Church of corruption, moral in turpitude and indecent acts. By attacking the famous family clans he gains the wrath of Pope Alexander VI who orders him to stop preaching.

He does not cease and desist and is excommunicated in 1497. For failure to stop preaching as ordered he is eventually hanged in 1498 as a heretic of the Church and his body burned to prevent his soul from finding eternal peace in the hereafter. The Church professes forgiveness only when it suits their purpose and the victims renounce their contradictory claims.

AD 1455-1458-Pope Calixtus III became famous for his nepotism, appointing two of his nephews to Cardinal, one of whom dragged the Papacy into the lower abyss when he later came to the throne as Pope Alexander VI, who proclaimed Christianity throughout the Philippines and South America by 'Book or by Sword, ' stealing the ancestral lands of the indigenous peoples, with the help of the Catholic friars and the turning of the other cheek as to the injustices suffered by the poor.

"Martín Fernández de Enciso, a geographer who had been among the founders of the colony at Darien, expounded the thesis that the Indies had been given to Spain... Just as Canaan had been given to the Jews. The Spaniards, he insisted, could, therefore, treat the Indians as Joshua treated the citizens of Jericho."

~See Joshua 6:20, and Judaism and Jewish Apologetics, by Guido G. B. Deimed, 1997.

Not only did they [the Spaniards] bring a superstitious religion to the Philippines, they also brought various forms of corruption, "I discovered that everyone in my poor country lives in hope of sucking the blood of the Filipino, friars as well as administrators. There may be exceptions, as they claim, but few and far between. This is the source of great evils and of enmities among those who quarrel over the booty." ~Jose Rizal, Free thinker, revolutionist, ordered murdered by the Catholic Church

AD 1457-The sixth commandment, in the town of Bourgogne, a mother pig and six little pigs are tried for murder. The mother pig is found guilty and sentenced to death by hanging. The sentence is duly executed, but the six little pigs are acquitted. The sympathy of the court was with them, because they would have to bear for the rest of their lives the shame of being the offspring of a criminal mother!

A Greek writer recounts how a bronze statue was found guilty of murder for killing a man by falling upon him. The statue was duly tried in court, found guilty of the murder, and cast into the sea. Another instance is recorded of a small boy who, while playing under a bronze ox, struck his head against it, cracked his skull, and died from the injury. The proper procedure was to bring the statue into court for trial; but, since it was guilty of only involuntary homicide, a ceremony of purification was carried on at the statue. ~From The Ten Commandments by Joseph Lewis.

AD 1458-64-Pope Pius II, issues a contemptuous letter against then Bishop Rodrigo Borgia [later to become Pope Alexander VI] for his lascivious life style.

It is ironic that this man, from a family of eighteen children, who led such a lascivious lifestyle himself, would condemn another [he fathered an illegitimate child during his tenure in Scotland and another in Strasburg, celibacy having already been officially approved in 1022 and 1123]

He supported the Anti-Pope Felix V and profited from this relationship. Nepotism continued during his reign. His literary genius, however, found favor with the Monarchy and he is Crowned Imperial Poet by Emperor Frederick III and he later reconciles with Pope Eugene IV in 1445.

History is what is written, not what is truth, "That the History of Europe, especially Ecclesiastical History, is founded largely upon assumption as well as upon tradition, legend, and error, the biographies of real persons being idealized. That the Hebrew and Christian Scriptures are proleptic [based upon an assumption of fact] in character. That there was no constituted Christian Church before the 11th Century of our Era, eight hundred years ago. That the larger part of the so-called 'Middle Ages' is an imaginary or non-existent period; the Modern Period beginning soon after the breaking up of the old Roman Empire. We are therefore not so far removed in time from the Greeks and Romans as our Chronological table teaches."

AD 1460-The "Corpus Hermeticum" is first translated by Marsilio Ficino, and is thought to contain ancient Egyptian wisdom far older than Moses is actually a product of late Alexandrian Gnosticism. Mankind is portrayed as a microcosm mirroring the Universe, diminished but in essence equally Divine, a noble concept that released the minds of Renaissance man from the chains of medieval scholasticism that stressed the depravity and powerlessness of humans.

This intoxicating vision of rights and liberty led to the figure of the Renaissance magician, to Dr. Faustus as well as Shakespeare's Prospero. It replaced the image of the priest as the mediator with cosmic reality. Ultimately it pointed to the idea of the scientist of today, mad or otherwise, who remakes nature in his own image through his knowledge of its secrets. For better or worse, modern society owes an incalculable debt to this vision.

The Magical Reformation met with some limited success. Popes Leo X and Paul III supported Astrology, while Pope Urban VIII used astral magic to try to blunt the dire effects of a solar eclipse. However, in the end the cause fails. However much magicians like Bruno or Cornelius Agrippa might disdain the hierarchy, which alienated the Catholics, their reliance on ritual made the Protestants equally uneasy.

Ultimately, their quest for cosmic power raised the difficult question that if effects like the miracles of Christ could be achieved by magic, did that not imply that Christ himself was a magician? This was something neither Christian faction would tolerate. It was with Giordano Bruno, who boldly took up Hermeticism as the basis of his new, "Egyptian Counter-Reformation," that all these issues come to a head.

"Without a single exception, the Fathers maintained the reality of the Pagan miracles as fully as their own. The oracles had been ridiculed and rejected by numbers of the philosophers, but the Christians unanimously admitted their reality. They appealed to a long series of Oracles as predictions of their faith; not until 1696 was there a denial of their supernatural character, when a Dutch Anabaptist minister, Van Dale, in a remarkable book, 'De Origine Progressu Idolatriae,' asserted in opposition to the unanimous voice of Ecclesiastical authority, that they were simple impostures." ~Lecky, History of European Morals, vol. 1, 374-375, et seq.; see pp. 378-381, et seq.

Against the pedantry and bigotry, the intolerant dogmas and persecution on all sides, he set up the unifying love of the world-conquering magician. Bruno felt that his mystical experiences empowered him to cross any and all religious barriers in pursuit of his mission, and in the end, that is what caused his doom. For no good reason, perhaps merely out of homesickness and weariness of his wanderings, "The Nolan" [as he sometimes called himself] was persuaded at last to return to Italy. Before his arrest Bruno may have actually been preparing to try to convert the Pope to Hermeticism through magic.

The Vicars of God will abuse their self-proclaimed Divine Powers, powers, to this day, are asserted via succession from Saint Peter, "Let us keep a sense of proportion. The record of Christianity from the days when it first claimed to have obtained the power to persecute is one of the most ghastly in all of history. The total number of Manichaeans, Arians, Priscillianists, Paulicians, Bogomiles, Cathari, Waldensians, Albigensians, witches, Lollards, Hussites, Jews and Protestants killed because of their rebellion against Rome clearly runs to many millions; and beyond these actual executions or massacres is the enormously larger number of those who were tortured, imprisoned, or beggared. I am concerned rather with the positive historical aspect of this. In almost every century a large part of the race has endeavored to reject the Christian religion, and, if in those centuries there had been the same freedom as we enjoy, Roman Catholicism would, in spite of the universal ignorance, have shrunk long ago into a sect. The religious history of Europe has never yet been written." ~Bunch, Taylor, Studies in the Revelation, 1933?, p. 105. Note: The Arians, Paulicians, and Goths did not believe that Jesus died on the cross accepting Jesus as a prophet thereby denying the Trinity.

The Church is brutal in its dealings with skeptics, heretics, infidels, and Jews, "One thousand years covers the crest of the persecutions when from 50,000,000 to 150,000,000 martyrs died of the sword, at the stake, in dungeons, and of starvation because of the confiscation of their earthly possessions." ~Bunch, Taylor, The Book of Daniel, 1950, p. 185.

The Christian Churches like to dole out their services so that the masses will be more grateful when they receive anything, "For every morsel of bread given to a stranger in need, hundreds have died from diseases whose cures were thwarted by organized religion's traditional opposition to science. For every word soothing the tempers of men, there have been calls to arms resulting in the death and maiming of thousands. The United Nation's Children's Emergency Fund estimates that forty thousand children die each day even as religious organizations obstruct the distribution of birth control devices in poor countries. The resultant daily pain and torturous deaths by starvation far outstrip the alms giving and generosity religion has always claimed to espouse. Whatever percentage of this toll is attributable to church practices, surely it has added up to far more accrued pain and death over the centuries than the atrocities of Stalin and Hitler combined." ~Charles W. Sutherland.

But there, in 1591, he was betrayed to the Venetian Inquisition and two years later returned to Rome, where he was imprisoned and interrogated for six years more before his final condemnation. His cosmological theories, hard for his contemporaries to understand, are almost incomprehensible today. They embraced ancient Hermetic wisdom as well as the most recent discoveries of science.

Long before Galileo, Father Bruno outspokenly supported the Copernican theory of the Earth's motion around the Sun. He is chiefly remembered today for his belief, so prophetically far ahead of his time, of the infinite number of living and populated worlds. "I think that in the discussion of natural problems we ought to begin not with the Scriptures, but with experiments, and demonstrations." ~Galileo Galilei, Free Thinker, The Authority of Scripture in Philosophical Controversies.

In addition, it was probably the example of his horrible fate that wisely persuaded Galileo more than anything else to recant the pernicious error of heliocentrism. "What, more than all, raised alarm, was anxiety for the credit of Holy Scripture, the letter of which was then universally believed to be the supreme authority in matters of Science, as in all others.” ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 6, 344.

The Church made grotesque efforts in order to stifle all new thought and to murder change in the name of their God, which is being imposed upon all mankind.

“We know from the calendar of saints and other sources how much had been done to cheek the wild license of thought and speech in the Peninsula. Giordano Bruno, renegade and pantheist, was burned in 1600; Campanella spent [27] long years in prison. The different measures meted out to Copernicus by Clement VII, and to Galileo, by Paul V need no comment [its shame in the eyes of the enlightened world gags the Church]! The Papacy aimed henceforth at becoming an ideal government under spiritual and converted men.” ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 12, 768.

Though Pope John Paul II has formally removed the taint of heresy from the great astronomer, Galileo, there has been no indication that the Catholic monk, Bruno, could ever be rehabilitated, even during the Pope's recent so-called “Apology” for the sins of the Church.

Curiously, the exact reasons for Bruno's burning remain secret to this day. However, during the last century a statue of Bruno was placed by Italian patriots at the site of his martyrdom in Rome for freedom of thought, where it still stands. “You will see, in mixed confusion, snatches of cutpurses, wiles of cheats, enterprises of rogues; also delicious repulsiveness, bitter sweets, foolish decisions, mistaken faith and crippled hopes, niggard charities, judges noble and serious for other men's affairs with little truth in their own; virile women, effeminate men and voices of craft and not of mercy so that he who believes most is most fooled, and everywhere the love of gold.” ~ Giordano Bruno, in The Torch-Bearer, speaking of the conditions in the Church. It has often been maintained that Bruno was executed because of his Copernicanism and his belief in the infinity of inhabited worlds. In fact, we do not know the exact grounds on which he was declared a heretic because his file is missing from the Catholic Church records.

AD 1460- 1521-Ponce de León, Juan, Spanish explorer seeking “Fountain of Youth,” in 1493 he accompanied Christopher Columbus in his second voyage to America. Ponce de León was to conquer Borinquen, Puerto Rico, for Spain and appointed its governor from 1510 to 1512.

He heard tales of an island called Bimini, located near Cuba, which reputedly contained the legendary “Fountain of Youth,” a spring whose waters had the power to rejuvenate and restore youth. Believing these tales, Ponce de León in 1512 obtained permission from the King of Spain to seek, conquer, and colonize this island. Ponce de León sailed from Puerto Rico on an exploratory expedition, on March 27th.

Ponce de León sighted what is now part of the State of Florida, which he believed to be the island of Bimini, on April 2nd and named the region Florida because he sighted it on Easter Sunday. Returning to Puerto Rico he engaged the rebellious natives of that island and in 1521 he set out to colonize Florida, still believing it was Bimini and in search of the fabled springs, where his expedition was attacked by Indians [Native Americans.] Ponce de León, severely wounded in the engagement, withdrew and sailed to Cuba, where he died shortly after landing. He never found the “Fabled Fountain of Youth.”

AD 1462- 1516-Johannas Trithemius, Abbot of Sponheim, becomes skillful in the use of cryptography. Using codes and symbols for discretionary purposes [concealing works from the seditious authorities] and for other secret writings. A plethora of documents containing information contrary to Church Doctrine are encrypted to preserve them in the event of their falling into the hands of Church Authorities.

AD 1463- 94-Pico Della Mirandola, occultist, Italian philosopher, introduces cabalistic mysteries into Florence, Italy, under the sponsorship of the infamous Medici family. Mirandola posted 900 theses in Rome, offering to defend his position on any of the arguments stated. The Pope Innocent VIII believes that Mirandola's ideas are heretical and forbids him from discussion and his works are listed in the Index of Forbidden Books.

Pope Alexander VI [of the Borgia family] absolves Pico Della Mirandola, the Italian occultist, of imputations of heresy in 1493 and even writes him a letter supporting him in his beliefs. Pope Alexander VI [unknown to the 15th century Catholics] is a great believer in Egyptology and Egyptian themes, even exhibiting many Egyptian murals [including the goddess Isis] in his private Vatican apartment [Perhaps it is the similarities between the Egyptian religious beliefs and the teachings of Jesus that attract him].

AD 1464- Pope Paul II is elected to office, and like Pope John XII he also dies while engaging in sexual activity, but the cause of his death is strangulation [allegedly by the woman's husband].

AD 1465-1519-Johann Tetzel is chastised by the German Papal Legate 31, October, for using objectionable language and for his improper procedure in the rebuke of Martin Luther's Theses. Protestantism, due to graft and corruption in the clergy, is taking hold and the Church finds itself almost powerless to stop it.

Their power being eroded, the Church resorts to defamation of character and the spreading of vicious lies about those who dare challenge its authority [A lesson for politicians, which continues into the 21st century]. Martin Luther, the Catholic monk, translates the Bible into German and is excommunicated by the Catholic Church, a punishment that carried the death penalty, but he died a natural death before the church could get its hands on him. Luther rebelled from his earlier peace loving sermons and now defies the nobility. ~An den christlichen Adel deutscher Nation.

Luther now encouraged the capricious killing of all Jews. ~Von den Juden und jren Lügen.

Luther's sermons now give a reason to a future tyrant, and oppressor, Adolf Hitler to exterminate more than six million Jews and millions of other people, such as Jehovah's Witnesses, gypsies, elderly, cripples, and the infirmed. Luther had become a bellicose unpredictable madman whose inhuman songs were now hate-adorned battle-cries to kill for "Ein feste Burg ist unser Gott." ~cf. Psalm 46. Cf. cf. Luke 14:26, Revelation 2:6

Luther had now become convinced that the End Time would be during his lifetime. ~Martin Luther, The Sermon of Martin Luther, Volume 1, Grand Rapids: Baker Book House, 1996, 62.

Martin Luther did not believe in the sacredness of the Sabbath day and after church he enjoyed himself by playing games, and sought after others to do the same. Even the austere John Calvin, whose view had been blurred by the "Five Points," allowed the people to enjoy themselves on Sunday afternoon.

Religious relics were created at whim, so much so that, John Calvin believed the veneration of relics to be a form of false worship, commented that if all the relics were brought together in one place "It would be made manifest that every Apostle has more than four bodies, and every Saint two or three." ~Medieval Relic Trade

In Scotland the Jewish idea was adopted to the fullest extent, and the breaking of the Sabbath was one of the blackest and one of the most terrible crimes a person could commit. Nothing was considered quite as sacred as the Sabbath. The Scotsman went so far as to take the position that it was wrong to save people who were drowning on Sunday, the drowning being a punishment inflicted by God. Upon the question of keeping the Sabbath most of the Scottish people believed they would become insane.

Nearly three years after Martin Luther brought forth his 95 theses, he is delivered, the papal bull of Pope Leo X, ordering him, on October 10, 1520, to submit within sixty days under threat of excommunication. However, at the end of those sixty days, on December 10, Luther defiantly burns both the bull and a copy of the Canon Law for which he is brought before a hearing, the Diet of Worms, in the spring of 1521.

AD 1466-What happened and when? Disputes will continue so long as men endeavor to be superior to other men. On July 1466, it should be noted that in practical terms there is no such day, for, in the 13th century, Roger Bacon brought to the attention of Pope Clement IV, that the calendar year is about 11 minutes longer than the actual solar year, therefore the true date is about 9 days different from the actual date that is used, which means March would be in the dead of winter and August in the spring, and eventually, Easter is not Easter because Easter is calculated from the spring equinox [after an anti-Semitic movement swept the church and eliminated the usual calculations], which was from a Jewish observance. The spring equinox was a set on a fixed day, March 21, but Bacon's opinion is ignored when Pope Clement unexpectedly dies, and the calendar is not fixed until 1582 by Pope Gregory XIII [hence, the Gregorian calendar].

The main heads of Catholic offenses struck with excommunication in the Bull [14th century Bulla Cœnæ] are as follows:

- † Apostasy, heresy, and schism.
- † Appeals from the Pope to a general council.
- † Piracy in the papal seas.
- † Plundering shipwrecked vessels, and seizure of flotsam and jetsam.
- † The imposition of new tolls and taxes, or the increase of old ones in cases where such was not allowed by law or by permission of the Holy See.
- † The falsification of Apostolic Briefs and Bulls.

- † The supply of arms, ammunition or War-material to Saracens, Turks, or other enemies of Christendom.
- † The hindering of the exportation of food and other commodities to the seat of the Roman court.
- † Violence done to travelers on their way to and from the Roman court.
- † Violence done to cardinals.
- † Violence done to legates, nuncios, etc.
- † Violence done to those who were treating matters with the Roman court.
- † Appeals from ecclesiastical to secular courts.
- † The avocation of spiritual causes from ecclesiastical to lay courts.
- † The subjection of ecclesiastics to lay courts.
- † The molestation of ecclesiastical judges.
- † The usurpation of Church goods, or the sequestration of the same without leave of the proper ecclesiastical authorities.
- † The imposition of tithes and taxes on ecclesiastics without special leave of the Pope.
- † The interference of lay judges in capital or criminal causes of ecclesiastics.
- † The invasion, occupation, or usurpation of any part of the Pontifical States. ~ Catholic Encyclopedia, 1913, In Cœna Domini.

AD1469-1527-Machiavelli, Niccolò of Florence writes "The Prince," an historical book on statecraft in which "The End Justifies the Means" a philosophical satire on the government and religious beliefs of the time.

Machiavelli uses philosophical rhetoric, sophism, pontification, and pedantics to twist the language, as do the politicians and clergy to justify right is wrong and wrong is right in defense of their coarse actions. His other works are "Discourses on Livy" and "The Mandrake."

Pope Leo X and Pope Clement VII seek after his advice on many matters. His work, "Storie Florentine" is dedicated to Pope Clement VII. The awesome volumes of patristical palaver and pious drivel is evidenced by the "Migne Collection," of their writings, which comprises 222 ponderous tomes written in Latin and 161 in Greek, most in their original translations so that the common man cannot dispute what he does not know. ~See Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 6, pg. 16.

Machiavelli's work, "Principe" exhorts the Medici family to bring about the unity of Italy. His examples are taken from the life of Caesar Borgia [Illegitimate son of Pope Alexander VI]. This last work is later placed on the Vatican's 'Forbidden Index' in 1559.

Even Machiavelli writes negatively regarding Church matters and especially the policies of Pope Julius II in his works, "Mandragola" and "Clizia," as he sees Christianity as a weakness that exalts humility and meekness, and which he believes, is bad for the country [The meek and the mild being contradictory to his belief in a strong and unified Italy]. His other work, "Discorsi" pertains to military matters within the state. The problem of banned books was never a terribly serious one as the vast majority of the members of the Church were illiterate anyway.

AD1471-1484-Pope Sixtus IV, Francesco della Rovere, loved to spend money, extravagant almost to the point of almost bankrupting the Church. He used nepotism to place his grossly immoral, generally lecherous, and as you might expect incompetent relatives in high Church positions, bringing further dishonor and decadence to the Papacy. His sovereignty is purchased by his lover Pietro Riario who runs the church [including the Spanish Inquisition], until his death in 1474.

Afterward, Pope Sixtus entertains himself by having muscular young men strip naked and fight to the death, the survivor becoming his bed partner. When Pope Sixtus is ill his physicians prescribe mother's milk, but the sick Pope suggests that the juice of young men would suit him far better.

But the Christian also believes that illness is due to Devils, "Our bodies are always exposed to Satan. The maladies I suffer are not natural, but Devil's spells." ~Martin Luther, 1521.

"The Pope and His Prostitution Tax" enabled the Roman Church to collect taxes from the prostitutes who cloistered about the cathedrals plying their trade. E.J. Burford, whom he quotes as follows: "Pope Sixtus IV [1471] who allegedly caught Syphilis from one of his mistresses became the first Pope to issue licenses to prostitutes and to levy a tax on their earnings, augmenting vastly the papal revenues in the process." ~E.J.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

Burford.

The Church of Rome also sold "Sin licenses" so that the Church could collect revenues from permits "Sold to priests who wanted sexual pleasures." The bisexual Pope Sixtus IV, though suffering from syphilis, manages to father children from his older sister.

AD 1472-Bessarion, 1472, and Marsilio Ficino, 1499, use Saint Augustine's name for the purpose of enthroning the famous Greek philosopher, Plato in the Church, and now excluding Aristotle.

AD 1473-1543-Nicolas Copernicus, a Polish Astronomer and physician, challenges the teachings of the Roman Catholic Church by asserting that the earth is round and revolves around the sun [Heliocentric Theory] His book "De Revolutionibus Orbium Coelestium" is condemned by the Church Authorities as heretical and is published after his death.

Niklas Copernigh [in Latin Copernicus], was not "A devout Polish priest," but a loose living Prussian medical man whose Bishop uncle made him titular canon, Copernicus was never a priest, in order to give him a steady income.

Copernicus spent some years in the universities of North Italy, but did not lecture in Rome. In Northern Italy he picked up the ancient Greek concept that the earth circled round the sun, and after his return to Poland verified it with instruments of Arab origin; but the scheme of the solar system which he toiled upon was entirely wrong. The hostility of the clergy, the Church, forced him to put off the writing and publication of his famous book until the end of his life, and even then he had to represent it only as an hypothesis.

It is not until Galileo, armed with a telescope, proves that it is a fact that the earth revolves around the sun and is so indiscreet as to mention Joshua he is, in 1615 summoned by the Inquisition, headed by Cardinal Bellarmine, and his theory of the central position of the sun was condemned as "Formally [explicitly] heretical." And Catholics cannot deny that the now famous works of Copernicus were not placed upon the Forbidden Index List, being banned by all from reading or citing as truth and the teaching of his system was forbidden in all Catholic colleges well into the 19th century.

Cardinal Robert Bellarmine, 1542-1621, a Doctor of the Church, in his Disputationes de controversiis christianae fidei, Adversus hujus temporis Haereticos [Debates on the Christian Controversies of Faith Against Contemporary Heresy], "... Claimed that all the names that Scripture applies to Christ are also to be applied to the Pope." ~In Volume 2, Liber Secundus, De Conciliorum auctoritate,

AD 1474-A Rooster is burned at the stake for "The heinous and unnatural crime of laying an egg."

AD 1475-1564-Michelangelo, the gay sculptor, painter, architect, confirmed bachelor, painted the ceiling of Saint Peter's Basilica in Rome designed by Donato Bramante. An admirer of Dante [the Divine Comedy] who was the known poet to the Pope, Michelangelo drew many of the pictures in the first publication, unfortunately for the Pope, Michelangelo was a fiercely independent soul, and portrayed the Pope and most of his entourage in Hell in the first releases of the Divine Comedy.

The Church [via the Catholic Encyclopedia] claims the drawings are lost, however there remains a few published manuscripts that survived in spite of many of the Pope's efforts to suppress them. Few people today would recognize the Pope in the 15th century drawings as portrayed by Michelangelo, however, his views and those of Dante only add credence to the corruptibility and extensive moral laxness of the clergy then and even today.

Michelangelo casts a bronze statue of Pope Julius II, 1503-13, but this statue is destroyed in the riots of 1511 against Pope Julius [see AD 1443] Julius was the foe to the de Medici family which had a strong hand in the Papacy.

Pope Sixtus IV authorizes the Spanish Inquisition to aid King Ferdinand and Queen Isabella, his Catholic rulers, to control [eradicate] the Jews, skeptics, heathens, infidels, and anyone else that challenges either the Church or the state.

The birth of Michelangelo Buonarroti [death 1564], the famous Italian sculptor, painter, and poet. A Gay/homosexual, and where would the art world be without his celebrated David to become, among other things, FeBe's logo, and his tenacious wrestlers encumbered in a 69 of testicular agony!

AD 1476- Johann Böhm, gathers a crowd of peasants, numbering as many as 30,000, at Nikiashausen in Franconia, and he professed to have had revelations from the Blessed Virgin, declaring war upon all recognition of priestly authority, upon the payment of tithes and upon all property. He was captured by the Bishop of Wurzburg and burned.

AD 1476-1507-Cesar Borgia, illegitimate son of Rodrigo Borgia, later to become Pope Alexander VI, is made Cardinal at the age of 18. The Borgia family, like the Medici family, is closely tied into the politics and church of the country. Cesar Borgia is known for his violent temper and unrestrained sexual appetite. Corruption and nepotism is widespread in the Vatican and while many who feel there is little they can do about it frown upon corruption [nepotism, however, is not seen as a crime]. Cesar's father, Pope Alexander VI dies mysteriously in 1503 [poisoned?] and Guiliano della Rovere, archrival of the Borgia family, who is self exiled in France returns.

The new Pope, Pius III, nephew of Pope Pius II, serves less than one year [1503] and is replaced by Guiliano, nephew of Pope Sixtus IV, who becomes Pope Julius II [1503] Intrigue surrounds the Papacy in that espionage, assassinations, poisonings, intrigue, murders, and other evil deeds are not beyond the sphere of those seeking the highest position in the world as regards power.

Enlistment in the Church is one of the fastest means for a poor man to attain wealth, power, supremacy and legitimacy. For the ruling families of Italy it is a means to maintain their wealth, and also to attain more wealth for their family and heirs.

AD 1478-The Spanish Inquisition is established primarily to seek out heretics but is also used to cast out the Muslims and Jews from Spain. King Ferdinand and Queen Isabella of Spain are given authority under the authority of the Roman Catholic Church [via Pope Sixtus IV] to appoint three inquisitors, which they do to perform their own personal cleansing of political enemies as well as the Church's. Unlike the Medieval Inquisition, the Spanish Inquisition, established in 1478 by King Ferdinand and Queen Isabella with the approval of Pope Sixtus IV.

The Roman Church's only hold over the Spanish Inquisition was the appointment of the Inquisitor General, the first of which was the depraved Tomas de Torquemada. The Popes are said to have never fully reconciled themselves to the practices of that Inquisition, but the riches they enjoyed surely influenced their lackadaisical attitude. Feeble attempts by Pope Sixtus IV to interfere with one Inquisition that had become too severe were thwarted by the Catholic Ferdinand and Isabella who now had a potent tool to subvert their enemies throughout the population of Spain.

The European Monarchies also use the Inquisitions to eliminate their adversaries in conjunction with the requests of the Church. Pope Sixtus attempted to establish harmony between the Inquisitors and the ordinaries, but was unable to maintain control of the monarchial desires of King Ferdinand V and Queen Isabella.

AD 1479-Pope Sixtus IV on the 18th of March grants full powers of censorship to the University of Cologne. Universities are to maintain a list of books and to submit such a list to the Holy See for review.

AD 1480-Pico of Mirandola in "Against the Astrologists," portrays a male acquaintance who is sexually animated by being whipped before sex, which is the first known case history of masochistic inclinations.

AD 1482-The Babylonian Talmud is printed in Venice. The Jewish Rabbis glean ancient manuscripts and sacred works in order to obtain the most accurate translation possible of their Talmud [this is contrary to their Christian counterparts who do not seek accuracy, but concealment]

AD 1483-1553- Francois Rabelais, freethinker, known as the "Grand Jester of France," He joined the Roman Catholic Church and became a monk, but his heretical humor got him into trouble, and he was once rescued by a military friend from the In Pace, 'a form of burying alive, by his Christian brethren.

He dreaded the idea of being burnt alive "Like a herring," seeing that he was "Dry enough already by nature." On one occasion he printed 'Ane' [Soul] as 'Dne' [jackass] several times, and said it was most likely merely a printer's blunder. "Rabelais, had no mode of speaking the truth in those days but in such a form as this," his buffoonery was "An amulet against the monks and bigots, the morality of the work is of the most refined and exalted kind." ~Coleridge, Table Talk, Bohn, p. 97.

Elsewhere the same great poet and critic said, "I could write a treatise in proof and praise of the morality and moral elevation of Rabelais' work, which would make the Church stare and the conventicle groan." ~Miscellanies, Aesthetic and Literary, Bohn, p. 127.

Coleridge classed Rabelais "With the great creative minds of the world," along with Shakespeare, Dante and Cervantes. "Attempts have been made," says Mr. Walter Besant, "To prove that Rabelais was a Christian. To suppose this is, in my mind, not only seriously to misunderstand the spirit of his book, but that of his time.” ~Rabelais by Walter Besant, p. 186.

The cure of Meudon saps the comatose Church with satire from within. But on February 19, 1552, he resigned his living at Meudon and Le Malis. Mr. Besant concludes that, “The old man, now that life was drawing to its close, now that his friends were dead, dispersed, and in exile, discerned at last the wickedness of continuing to say masses, which were to him empty forms, in the cause of a Church which was full of absurdities and corruptions.” ~Miscellanies, Aesthetic and Literary by Bohn, p. 46.

“When he had received the extreme unction, he said aloud that they had greased his boots for the great journey. When the priest in attendance asked if he believed in the real presence of Jesus Christ in the holy wafer, he replied meekly, “I believe in it, and I rejoice therein; for I think I see my God as he was when he entered Jerusalem triumphant and seated on an ass.””

Towards the end they put on his Benedictine robe; whereupon he punned upon a Psalm, “Beati qui moriuntur in Domino ... Blessed are they who die in the Lord.”

A messenger from Cardinal du Bellay being brought to the bedside, he said in a feeble voice, “Tell monseigneur I am going to seek the great Perhaps.” Gathering his strength for a last effort, he cried out in a burst of laughter, “Draw the curtain, the farce is over.” ~Infidel Death-Beds by G.W. Foote and A.D. McLaren.

AD 1483-1546-Martin Luther, a Catholic German religious reformer, is ordained into the Catholic priesthood in 1507. In November of 1510, Luther visits Rome and is appalled at the unrestricted sexual exploits and decadent morals of the Christian Church priesthood. Martin Luther, believes that the Catholic Church's final conflict with evil [End of the World] will pit it against the Turks and the Catholic Pope. Martin Luther, leader of new Protestant reformation, preaches that only faith leads to Salvation without mediation of clergy or good works, and verbally attacks the self-proclaimed authority of the Pope, rejecting priestly celibacy, and recommends individual study of the Bible

Martin Luther challenges the authority of the Church and on October 31st of 1517 Luther publishes his Ninety Five Theses in which he condemns the practices of the clergy and Church for selling of indulgences [forgiveness of sins by means of financial contributions] and other practices which he felt are not worthy of men who profess to be honorable. He allegedly nails these complaints to the doors of Castle Church in Wittenberg, Germany. He refuses to recant unless proven wrong.

Martin Luther is brought before the Diet and given an opportunity to repudiate his heretic and blasphemous religious books. Had he disclaimed the one on the sacraments, the other points might have been negotiated. He acknowledged them all. Would he then disclaim some of their teaching? Who was he to reject the teaching of the ages?

Let him give an answer without horns, to which he replied: “I will answer without horns and without teeth. Unless I am convicted by Scripture and plain reason, I do not accept the authority of Popes and councils, for they have contradicted each other, my conscience is captive to the Word of God, I cannot and I will not recant anything, for to go against conscience is neither right nor safe. God help me. Amen...” ~Encyclopædia Britannica, Protestantism, history of: Diet of Worms.

Martin Luther is excommunicated on January of 1521 by the church hierarchy [Pope Leo X] and also summoned to appear before Charles V at the Diet of Worms in April of that year. For ignoring a papal bull to renounce his beliefs Luther is expelled from the priesthood on 8 May 1521.

Interesting note: When Charles V of Spain married Isabel of Braganza, he had to provide the “Proofs,” of her Virginity, which were seriously exhibited for inspection to the assembled grandees. “... In the spring of 1521 the imperial Diet, before which Martin Luther had to defend his theses, assembled at Worms. The reformer's appearance represented a first challenge to Charles, who had his own Confession of Faith, beginning with a sweeping invocation of his Catholic ancestors, read out to the Diet. Rejecting Luther's doctrines in the Edict of Worms, Charles declared war on Protestantism.” ~1994-2000 Encyclopædia Britannica, Inc., Charles V.

Luther will later marries a former nun, Katherine Von Bera. Martin Luther had discovered what Saint Jerome [Vulgate Bible] had known all along, that the Scriptures had been written in Ancient Hebrew and Koine Greek and not the Latin that the Church professed to be the original word of God [The ancient Hebrew being more accurate in their translations. However, in its efforts to separate Jesus from his religion, which is Jewish, the Church had declared the Torah or Hebrew Holy Book as apocrypha or fairy tales. Knowledge is an anathema to the Church Authorities].

Luther, regards the demands of the peasants for equality baseless as he deemed some men to be greater than others.

“This article would make all men equal and so change the spiritual Kingdom of Christ into an external worldly one! An earthly kingdom cannot exist without inequality of persons. Some must be free, other serfs, some rulers, other subjects.” ~Martin Luther.

He curses the peasants and irreverently calls for their destruction. There is strong suspicion to believe that Martin Luther may have joined a secret society known as the Rosicrucian. A rose symbol [logo of the Rosicrucian's] appears on the title page of many of his early writings.

Shortly after Luther's death a tract is published. On the title page is a rose, heart, and cross-supported by a duet of angels. In his German translation of the Bible, Martin Luther omits “The Book of Revelation.” He championed advancement of all branches of learning and supported human rights, except for Jews, [this is the basis of the Mother Church declaring many as heretics, the fact that one cannot have individual rights that are primary over the rights and decisions of the Church].

A quick look at Angels:

- ✠ “For in the Resurrection they neither marry, nor are given in marriage, but are like Angels in Heaven.” ~ Matthew 22:30.
- ✠ “The sons of this age marry and are given in marriage, but those who are considered worthy to attain to that age and the resurrection from the dead, neither marry, nor are given in marriage; for neither can they die anymore, for they are like Angels, and are ‘Sons of God,’ being sons of the Resurrection.” ~ Luke 20:34-36.
- ✠ “Now it came about, when men began to multiply on the face of the land, and daughters were born to them, that the Sons of God saw that the daughters of men were beautiful; and they took wives for themselves, whomever they chose. Then the Lord said, ‘My Spirit shall not strive with man forever, because he also is flesh; nevertheless his days shall be one hundred and twenty years.’ The Nephilim were on the earth in those days, and also afterward, when the Sons of God came in to the daughters of men, and they bore children to them. Those were the mighty men who were of old, men of renown.” ~ Genesis 6:1-4.
- ✠ Some say that Shemhazai, and Azael [Sons of God], two of the Angels in God's confidence, asked, “Lord of the Universe, did we not warn You on the Day of Creation that man would prove unworthy of Your world?” And God replied, “But if I destroy man, what will become of My world?” To which they answered, “We shall inhabit it [earth].” And God answered, “Yet upon descending to earth, will you not sin even worse than man?” They pleaded, “Let us dwell there awhile, and we will sanctify Your name!” And God allowed the Angels to descend, but they were at once overcome by lust for Eve's beautiful daughters, Shemhazai begetting on them two monstrous sons named Hiwa and Hiya, each of whom daily ate a thousand camels, a thousand horses and a thousand oxen. ~The Sons of God and the Daughters of Men: Notes from the Books of Ysrael. From Hebrew Myths: The Book of Genesis By Robert Graves and Raphael Patai, <http://www.piney.com/index.html>, Chapter 18 p. 100-107. cf. Genesis 6:1-7.
- ✠ The Bible tells us that people have entertained Angels without even knowing it. ~Hebrews 13:2.
Note: Angels can take on human appearances.

Martin Luther is a Catholic, but also an extremist in his views towards the Jews. Luther believed that Germany should rid itself of the Jews, their temples destroyed, and their wealth should be confiscated. ~Rise and Fall of the Third Reich, by William Shriver.

Hitler loved rephrasing Biblical phrases, to show the German people his belief in God, and Jesus Christ, as the Savior of the Third Reich, a warrior, “Their sword will become our plow, and from the tears of war, the daily bread of future generations will grow.” ~Adolf Hitler, Mein Kampf, Volume 1, Chapter 1, In the House of My Parents, cf. Micah 4:3, and Joel 3:9-10. cf. Exodus 15:3

A venomous hatred runs through the teachings of Martin Luther, “My advice... is: First, that their synagogues be burned down, and that all who are able toss sulfur and pitch; it would be good if someone could also throw in some hellfire...” ~Martin Luther, On the Jews and Their Lies, 1543.

Four hundred and fifty years later, Adolph Hitler, raised on Catholic and Lutheran hatred of the Jews, would have the support of the German army composed of Christians [72% : composed of 38% Protestant and 32% Catholics] who did little or nothing to protect the Jews. Hitler, a Roman Catholic, is never excommunicated for causing the death of millions; whereas Martin Luther was excommunicated for translating the Bible into German!

The frequent conflicts of Hitler and the Catholic Church, the disintegration of that Church in Germany during the Reich years, and the fact that Hitler was a renegade from it and would have liked to see its prouder features destroyed by an amalgamation with Lutheranism in a Positive, nonsectarian, Christianity, disposes many to listen to the Catholic claim that the Church was the resolute opponent of Nazi brutality. "Never forget that everything Hitler did in Germany was legal." ~Martin Luther King, Jr., American dissident.

The broad fact is that neither the Vatican prelates nor the Germans ever condemned the tainted principles and practices of the Nazi Government. Its interference with Church authority and organization only accelerated Pope Pius' support of Hitler to attain power and make repeated and unceasing efforts to contract an alliance with him, with the facts behind the Roman Church's covert support and Hitler's success at the election of March 1933 being suppressed, for obvious reasons. ~See Von Papen's mediation between Hitler and the Vatican after the preceding election, when his Party was in despair, Annual Register, 1932, p. 167, is told by himself in the published speech Der 12 November, 1933.

Hitler promises the Pope a favorable Concordat, and Pope Pius XI then ordered German Catholics to desist from opposing him. ~see Annual Register, 1933, p. 169, and a Catholic attitude in the Revue des Deux Mondes, January 15, 1935.

No Catholic leader in Germany or in Rome ever denounced the treachery and the horrors that followed the Nazi success at the polls; the sermons of Cardinal Faulhaber on the Jews, "Judaism, Christianity, and Germany," 1934, being doctrinal in nature and not a condemnation of the outrages. No utterance came from the Vatican even when the infamous Blood Purge, in which several Catholic leaders were murdered, occurred in June 1934.

"National Socialism neither opposes the [Catholic] Church nor is it anti-religious, but on the contrary it stands on the ground of a real Christianity... For their interests cannot fail to coincide with ours alike in our fight against the symptoms of degeneracy in the world of to-day, in our fight against a Bolshevist culture, against atheistic movement, against criminality, and in our struggle for a consciousness of a community in our national life... These are not anti-Christian, these are Christian principles!" ~Adolph Hitler, a Catholic, August 26, 1934.

Although Hitler had refused to pay the price he had offered for Papal support, as was his custom, the Vatican still hoped to persuade him to do so and refrained from denouncing his crimes, and in 1936, when the appalling exposure of monastic vice began, Pope Pius XI made a desperate effort to get an alliance with Hitler, allegedly for the good of Christianity.

The Nazi organ, the National Zeitung, published on September 12th, as the London Press reported, a letter, which was read on the following day from all Catholic pulpits, signed by the German Bishops and begging Hitler to accept their cooperation in crushing Bolshevism "In Spain, Russia, and Mexico."

Mussolini is persuaded by the Vatican to support the appeal, Times, November 4th, 1936, and Hitler receives Cardinal Faulhaber on the subject, Times, November 13, 1936, but refused to make any concession. Pope Pius XI wants exclusive privileges for Catholic schools and organizations, and perhaps a cessation of the arrests of priests and monks for sodomy, in return for his full support of Hitler. Pope Pius XII, as Secretary of State under the late Pope controlled the policy throughout at the time and initiated a new approach in 1940 according to the London Press.

"Therefore let all who are able hew them down, slaughter and stab them, openly or in secret, and remember that there is nothing more poisonous, noxious and utterly diabolical than a rebel. You must kill him as you would a mad dog." ~Martin Luther, former ordained Catholic priest, on the rights requested by the poor.

Seldes, in his book, The Vatican, (p. 247), mentions the rather dishonest and certainly obtuse complaint of Cardinal Vaughan: "The robber's refused to take over the burdens with the stolen provinces."

The provinces being the lands, which eagerly joined the new kingdom of Italy: the debts were on the security of the provinces but not for, use in them: and the robbers offered such compensation or price for the provinces that the accumulated interest in 1929, which was handed over to the Papacy, amounted to more than $90,000,000!

This vast sum, which was really the price of the Pope's silence when Mussolini thought fit to begin his brutal aggressions, ought to be today one of the chief sources of the Vatican's income. Nearly half of it was given in bonds of the Italian, State, and though the Italians themselves lose a colossal sum by their loans to the practically bankrupt state, one suspects that Mussolini finds it prudent to pay the Pope's share of the interest. It certainly gives the Papacy a very acute interest in the maintenance of Fascism, for if Socialists obtained power they would assuredly repudiate the dishonorable bargain.

The remainder of the bribe was paid in cash. Part of these moneys are still in bullion, held in the Vatican treasury, and a very large part was invested by the Papacy in French and Hungarian railways: which gave the Papacy a stake in the stability of those countries or a lively concern to see them paralyze Socialism and Communism. ~From the works of J. McCabe.

Even the savage treatment of the Poles, who stormed Rome with entreaties and are, for the most part, Catholic in all of Europe, extracted only a tempered and restricted protest. The Vatican was eager, for an alliance with Hitler at any time, which, in view of its alliance with Fascism and its acceptance of £19,000,000 from Mussolini, should surprise no one.

Hitler's views on religion has nothing to do with the situation, for he had abandoned the Catholic faith, although publicly he still pronounced its Doctrines, so that on the Canon Law no Catholic ought to have negotiated with him, but he was a Theist, which he repeatedly stated this in public speeches, and yet and claimed to be a Christian. ~J. McCabe, Rationalists Encyclopedia.

In George Orwell's, "1984," he states, "Who controls the past controls the future, who controls the present controls the past."

Who controls the present? History is replete with distorted versions of what happened long ago and many preachers and politicians upon the unknowing public perpetuate this rewritten historical account. Hitler is inculcated with this history as a communicant and an altar boy in his youth, and was later confirmed as a "Soldier of Christ" in that great church of superstition and intolerance.

The blood of an innocent hundred million martyrs cries out for justice to the Church, which claims to speak out for the One who says, "Vengeance is mine; I will repay saith the Lord." ~Romans 12:19.

The horrible doctrines of that church never left him as he was steeped in its liturgy, containing such statements as the, "Perfidious Jew."

This hateful statement was not removed until 1961 [Perfidy meaning treacherous, deceitful, and lying]. Hatred of the Jews was prevalent throughout Europe in his days. The manifest hatred is proliferated by the two major religions of Germany, Catholicism and Lutheranism [Protestantism]. Adolf Hitler [Adolph Hitler] was later to admire Martin Luther, who openly hated the Jews. ~ Cf. cf. Luke 14:26, Revelation 2:6

Luther openly condemned the Catholic Church for its pretensions and corruption, but he supported the centuries of Papal pogroms against the Jews, Luther saying, "The Jews deserve to be hanged on gallows seven times higher than ordinary thieves," and "We ought to take revenge on the Jews and kill them," referring to the centuries old belief that the Jews were responsible for the killing of Jesus.

"Ungodly wretches" is what Luther calls the Jews in his widely read "Table Talk." It is this manifestation of the Germans being Christians and the Japanese being non-Christians that creates the hatred in WWII against the Japanese [the Japanese being a bad race and the Germans having a bad leader].

Lord Brougham affirmed that Martin Luther's "Table Talk" was so obscene that no respectable English publisher would soil paper with a translation.

AD1484-92-Pope Innocent VIII, fathers many illegitimate children [celibacy being approved in 1022 and again in 1123] Pope Innocent VIII issues the Bull, "Summis Desiderantes Affectibus," its direct purport is allegedly to avoid discrimination in crimes and to ratify the powers already conferred upon the Inquisitors, Henry Institoris and James Sprenger.

It also attempts to deal with persons of every class and with every form of crime as it called upon the Bishop of Strasburg to lend the Inquisitors all possible support. Pope Innocent VIII issues a bull declaring the reality of witches and initiates the brutalities of the accusation, torture, and execution of "Witches" all over Europe. All costs of investigation, trial, and execution of witches were borne by the accused or her relatives, including per diems for private detectives, torturers and tar. The members of the tribunal for each witch burned received a bonus, and remaining property was divided between Church and State.

AD 1484-1492-Pope Innocent VIII has a son and daughter who live with him in the Vatican.

AD1484-1531-Zwingli Ulrich, Swiss Theologian; discovers the writings of Desiderius Erasmos who had translated the Scriptures from Greek into Latin. While at Einsiedeln, Zwingli begins to entertain doubts about certain church practices, in 1516 reading a Latin translation of the Greek New Testament published by the Dutch humanist Desiderius Erasmus, he later transcribes the works into notebooks and memorizes them verbatim.

Zwingli later charges, in sermons, that the Church teachings and practices have departed widely from the Christianity of the Holy Writ. Cited by Zwingli as unscriptural [not in the Bible] are the adoration of saints and relics, promises of miracles and cures, and church's abuse of the indulgence system. Ulrich, challenges the teachings of the Roman Catholic Church pertaining to the adoration of saints and religious objects and pronounces Scriptural Authority supersedes Church Authority. Pope Adrian VI has him tried on charges of heresy. The Zurich Council upholds his beliefs in not preaching anything that is not founded on Scripture. The Church is again frustrated in its efforts to proclaim itself as the Supreme Authority over the Bible and Scripture.

On January 1, 1519, he is appointed priest at the Gross Münster [the German, Great Cathedral]. Zwingli reads the writings of Martin Luther, and inspired by Luther's stand against the German hierarchy, Zwingli in 1520 persuades the Zürich Council to prohibit all religious teachings that are without foundation in the Scriptures. Among these teachings are the Church's restrictions on eating meat during Lent.

In 1522, a group of his followers deliberately challenge this rule and are arrested. Zwingli defends them and they are released with a token punishment. Pope Adrian VI, is infuriated by Zwingli's behavior and forbids him the pulpit and asks the Zürich Council to renounce him as a heretic.

In 1523, Zwingli appears before the Council to defend himself and asserts the supremacy of the "Holy Writ" over Church Dogma attacking the worshipping of images, relics, and saints, and denouncing the Sacramental view of the Eucharist and forced celibacy.

Upon deliberation, the Council upholds Zwingli position by withdrawing the Zürich Canton from the jurisdiction of the Bishop of Constance, It also affirms its previous ban against preaching not founded in the Scriptures. The Council, unconsciously, officially adopts the standpoint of the Reformationists.

The Roman Catholic Church has yet to recover from its encounter with Zwingli, an ordained priest with radical ideas.

In 1524, Zwingli marries Anna Reinhard, a widow, with whom he had an open relationship. Zwingli taught that Christians have need of neither Pope nor the Church. In Zurich, from 1524-25, the reformation adherents cause the indulgences and pilgrimages to be abolished, the Sacraments of Penance and Extreme Unction rejected, religious pictures destroyed, statues overturned, saintly relics removed and demolished, church altars smashed, and organs rendered useless, regardless of their artistic value.

Sacred vessels of great value, such as chalices and monstrances, are melted into coin and the Catholic Church properties are seized by the State, which also gains the suppression of the monasteries. Fraumünster Abbey, founded in 853, is surrendered to the secular authorities and celibacy is cast aside as contrary to "Holy Writ," and monks and nuns are married. Zwingli, in 1522, along with ten other ecclesiastics, had assembled at Einsiedeln and addressed a petition to the Bishop of Constance requesting that priests be allowed to marry. "Your honorable wisdom," they declared, "Has already witnessed the disgraceful and shameful life we have unfortunately hitherto led with women, thereby giving grievous scandal to everyone."

The act of celibacy was not being adhered to by the clergy or enforced by the Church causing much scandal and moral laxity was the rule rather than the exception in Rome itself. Martin Luther and Zwingli arrange a meeting to discuss their religious differences over doctrinal and political matters that had developed between the two Protestant leaders. The meeting is held in Marburg Colloquy where Luther and Zwingli will clash over the issues of consubstantiation versus transubstantiation. The poor could no longer find any reason to cling to the Bible, Reformists had cluttered religious tenets with all types of denunciations of Church and Scripture.

The peasants denied their sole principle of faith by denying their lords' taxes, tithes, and rent, and they refusing any longer to do so. Political and religious unrest prevailed everywhere, and was only quelled after negotiations and concessions by the Government. The Anabaptists are not so easily silenced regarding their tenets and interpretations of the Bible, which Zwingli had placed in their hands. The new doctrines espoused by them were more radical than Zwingli's and questioned even the authority of the state.

Zwingli persecuted them ruthlessly with imprisonment, torture, banishment and death. The Anabaptist leader Felix Manz is drowned.

Zwingli initiated a "Christian Civic Rights," legislation agreed upon by the town of Zurich 1527, to compel the Catholic Cantons to accept the new doctrines he espoused. He incited the populace to declare civil war, drew up a military campaign plan, and eventually persuaded Zurich to declare war against the Catholic territories. To quash the radical religious philosopher, a treaty of peace was arranged, which was unfavorable for the Catholic Church.

Pope Innocent VIII issues a bull declaring the reality of witches and initiates brutalities of the accusation, torture, and execution of "Witches" all across Europe, the costs of said witch investigations, trials, and execution of witches are to be borne by the accused or their relatives, including per diems for private detectives, torturers, tar, kindling, and watchers, who will dispense water upon the burning stake and victims to prolong their agony. The members of the witch tribunal for each witch burning receive a bonus, and the remaining property of the victim is divided between the Church and State, which makes witch burning a profitable endeavor.

AD1486-1535-Heinrich von Nettesheim Cornelius Agrippa, a German physician, practices Astrology and studies the mysticism of the Kabala. He draws the indignation of the Inquisition for defending a woman accused of witchcraft [and wins] Studied mysticism and Rosicrucians while attending Paris University. Published "De Occulta Philosophia" in 1531 that reveals the nature of man [spirit] being released into a higher plane through the ardor of love.

It is alleged by some during this period that he had a Magic Mirror by which he could see future events. In 1529 he publishes "On the Nobility and Superiority of the Female Sex," advocating the equality of women and of their ordination within the Church. Women used to be ordained within the Church, having risen to Bishopric positions, but this fact has been hidden or suppressed by Church Authorities in their efforts to contain the promotion of women within the Roman Catholic Religion, which is man's last bastion or reserve. The truth of the efforts and relationship of Mary Magdalene and Jesus have also been suppressed by the Church.

A True Religion is proclaimed as existing since the time of Adam by Saint Augustine. It is an indulgence in superfluous extravagant fancy for the Church to assert that it is world-shaking in its religious Savior connotations, "That, which is known as the Christian religion existed among the ancients, and never did not exist; from the very beginning of the human race until the time when Christ came in the flesh, at which time the true religion, which already existed, began to be called Christianity." ~Saint Augustine, Retract., I, xiii., 4th century C.E.

The Malleus Maleficarum is published, which will have full support of Roman Catholic Church in the persecution of witches, werewolves, and all other types of devilry. "The Devil can so completely assume the human form, when he wants to deceive us, that we may well lie with what seems to be a woman, of real flesh and blood, and yet all the while 'Tis only the Devil in the shape of a woman. 'Tis the same with women, who may think that a man is in bed with them, yet 'Tis only the Devil, and... The result of this connection is oftentimes an imp of darkness, half mortal, half devil..." ~Martin Luther, 1521.

AD1487-1560-Magdalena de la Cruz, a Franciscan nun of Cordova, honored as a Saint, believed to have the stigmata and to take no other food than the "Holy Eucharist." The Blessed Sacrament was said to fly to her tongue from the hand of the priest who was giving Holy Communion, and it appeared at such moments that she was raised from the ground and at which time also she was radiant with supernatural light.

Ladies of the high rank, when about to give birth, sent her the cradles or garments prepared for the expected child, that she might bless them [done also by the Empress Isabel, in 1527, before the birth of Philip II]. In 1543, Magdalena confessed to hypocrisy, crediting most of the marvels to the action of demons by which she was possessed while maintaining their reality.

Magdalena is sentenced by the Inquisition, in an "Auto-da-fé" at Cordova, in 1546, to perpetual imprisonment in a convent of her order, and there she is believed to have ended her days most piously amid marks of the sincerest repentance. ~see Görres, Mystik, V, 168-174; Lea, Religious History of Spain, pgs. 330-335.

The insidious practices of the Inquisition have been well concealed from the year 1206, when it was first established to wreak havoc among helpless Christians, which was so great, that many French Bishops, in 1228, desired the monks of the Inquisition to defer a little of their work of imprisonment till the Pope could be made aware of the great numbers apprehended; numbers so great that it was impossible to defray the costs of their subsistence, and even to provide stone and mortar to build prisons for them.

That the blood of the martyrs is the seed of the church, in the year 1539 there were in Europe above eight hundred thousand who professed the religion of the Waldenses, and when the Waldenses, sometimes called Lollards, discovered that the proclaimed intentions of the Pope was to gain the reputation of having used gentle and reasonable methods of persuasion, they agreed among themselves, to undertake the open defense of their principles.

They then approached the Catholic Bishops to understand, that their pastors, or some of them in the name of the rest, were ready to prove their religion to be truly Scriptural, in an open conference, provided it might be conducted with propriety, and by desiring that there be moderators on both sides, who would be vested with full authority to prevent tumult and violence; that the conference should be held at some place, to which all parties might have free and safe access; and that one subject would be chosen, with the common consent of the disputants, which would be put on trial, till it was fully discussed and determined; and that he who could not maintain it by the Word of God, the only decisive rule of Christians, should own himself confuted. This was entirely equitable and judicious, and the Bishop could not without decorum refuse to accept the terms.

The place of discussion agreed on was Montreal, Carcassone, in the year 1206. The umpires were the Catholic Bishops of Villencuse and Auxere, and on the other side, R. de Bot, and Anthony Riviere, with the points undertaken to be proved were, that the mass and transubstantiation were idolatrous, and unscriptural; that the Church of Rome was not the spouse of Christ, and that its polity was bad and unholy. The propositions were sent to the Bishop, who requested fifteen days to respond, which were granted. At the day appointed, the Bishop appeared bringing with him a large manuscript, which was read in the conference. What they said on this occasion we are not informed; but the cause of the abrupt conclusion of the conference showed which party had the advantage.

While the two delegates were disputing with the Waldenses, Arnold, the Bishop of Villeneuve, the umpire of the Papal party, declared, that nothing could be determined because of the coming of the Crusaders.

What he asserted was true; the Papal Armies were advancing, and by sword or by fire would soon decide all controversies. The recourse of the popish party to arms, in this room of sober reasoning, was to pour contempt on the Word of God, and to confess that its light was intolerably offensive to them.

The approach of Crusaders putting an end to the conference, was no accident; for Pope Innocent III, never intended to decide the controversy by a legitimate debate.

The murder of the monk, Chateaneuf, had dispatched preachers throughout Europe, to collect all, who were willing to revenge the innocent blood of the monk; promising Paradise to those, who would bear arms for forty days, and bestowing on them the same indulgence as was given to those who undertook to conquer the Holy Land. But, the promise of Paradise is not unique to Christianity as archeologists and historians can testify, "The nostalgia for Paradise is among the powerful nostalgias that seem to haunt human beings. It may be the most powerful and persistent of all. A certain longing for Paradise is evidenced at every level of religious life." ~The Encyclopedia of Religion.

Christianity is in no sense, even when it had viciously conquered all its rivals, which is believed to have been the end of Paganism, which is universally believed, it still remained composed of nothing that Paganism had not already provided, except an infinitely more impossible miscomprehension of Paganism's substance, which it fallaciously appropriated and built upon. It was nothing but Paganism, nothing more than a reformulation of Paganism's principles never hitherto brought forward to rationalize, rather to derationalize, its tenets. It was Paganism refurbished with a succulent religious lying gloss. It was Pagan philosophy, misappropriated, misconceived, and dreadfully misapplied.

Pope Innocent III, in his infamous bull, promises to all those who shall take up arms to revenge the said murder, a Christian pardon and remission of their sins. And since we are not to keep faith with those, who do not keep it with God, we would have all to understand, that every person who is bound to the said Earl Raymond by oath of allegiance, or by any other way, is absolved by Apostolic Authority from such obligations; and it is now lawful for any Roman Catholic, to pursue the said Earl, and to seize upon his country, etc. "The fable of a united Christendom, obeying with devoted faith a Pope at Rome, had no credence in the period to which it is commonly assigned; and from the reign of Pope Innocent III to the Council of Constance [1200-1414] the Roman Church was engaged in a constant and often doubtful contest with the widely diffused fragments of apostolic Christianity... The Popes had succeeded in subjecting Kings and Emperors; they now employed them in crushing the people. Innocent III excited Philip of France to a fierce crusade against the Albigenses of the south; amidst a general massacre of men, women, and children, the gentle sect sunk, never to appear again. Dominic invented, or enlarged, the Inquisition; and soon in every land the spectacle of blazing heretics and tortured saints delighted the eyes of the Romish clergy. Over the rebellious kings the popes had held the menace of interdict, excommunication, deposition; to the people they offered only submission or death. The Inquisition was their remedy for the Apostolic heresies of Germany, England, Spain; a simple cure for dissent or reform. It seemed effectual. The Albigenses were perfectly extirpated. In the cities of Italy the Waldenses ceased to be known. Lollardism concealed itself in England; the scriptural Christians of every land who refused to worship images or adore the Virgin disappeared from sight; the supremacy of Rome was assured over all Western Europe." ~Eugene Lawrence, Historical Studies.

The tyrannical Pope proceeds in his bull, "We exhort you, persecute them with a strong hand: deprive them of their lands, and put Roman Catholics in their room." The Popes then proceeded in punishing an entire people for a single murder committed by Raymond, the Count of Toulouse.

The French Barons, incited by their desires of greed, which Pope Innocent incited, undertook the whole work with vigor. The Waldensian Christians then had no other alternative, after having performed the duty of faithful subjects and soldiers, but to suffer with patience the oppressions of the Anti-Christ. Three hundred thousand men, induced by desire and superstition, filled the country, for several years with carnage and confusion.

The scenes of baseness, perfidies, barbarity, indecency and hypocrisy, over which Pope Innocent presided, can scarcely be conceived, as these were conducted, partly by his legates, and partly by the infamous Earl Simon of Monfort. The castle of Menerbe, Spain, for lack of water, was reduced to the necessity of surrendering to the Pope's emissaries.

An Abbott undertook to preach to those who were found in the castle, and exhort them to acknowledge the Pope. However, they interrupted his discourse, declaring his labor was to no purpose, and Earl Simon and the legate then created a great fire, and burned 140 persons of both sexes.

These martyrs died in triumph, praising God that he had counted them worthy to suffer for the sake of Christ. They opposed the legate to his face and told Simon, that on the last day when the books would be opened, he would meet with the just judgment for all his cruelties. Several monks entreated them to have pity on themselves, and promised them their lives, if they would but submit to the Papacy, and only three women recanted.

Another castle, Thermes, Spain, was seized by Simon in 1210, and of which Simon stated is, of all others the most detestable, because no mass had been sung in it for nearly 30 years, however, the inhabitants made their escape by night, and avoided the cruel and unmerciful hands of Simon. Simon is slain in battle in 1218, and the Earl Raymond, dies of sickness in the year 1222, in a state of peace and prosperity, after his victory over Simon, no man ever having been treated with more injustice by the Papacy. The famous Dominic dies in 1220.

AD 1487-Pope Innocent VIII organizes a Crusade against the Waldensians, followers of Peter Waldo of Lyon, also known as the "Poor Man of Lyon." On the 17th of November, Pope Innocent VIII prescribes the Universal Censorship of all books not approved by the Vicar of Christ.

The Holy See declares its authority to prescribe to the world what it can or cannot read. In the 21st century the Pope will declare Freedom of the Press, yet the Church still maintains its Forbidden Index for its Purity of the Faith.

The Pontiffs are troubled with the true believers, known as Waldenses, Albigenses, etc. In some countries these Followers of the Lamb were called "Paulicians" and "Puritans." Severe persecutions were raised against them in European countries controlled by the Roman Pontiff, yet these people prevailed as a distinctive people, and became known as "Puritans," even until after their settlements in America.

The Paulicians emigrated "From Bulgaria, who, after leaving their native land," Orchard says, "... Spread themselves throughout various provinces. Many of them, while doing good to others, and propagating the Gospel, were put to death with the most unrelenting cruelty. Their accessions, from different sources, made the Puritan or Paterine Churches very considerable, and to their enemies very formidable, even before the name of Waldo of Lyons was known. Besides these foreign accessions, some books had been written and circulated by the Puritans while several reformers appeared in different kingdoms, all advocating the same doctrines and practice; so that the clergy and Pontiff were aroused to vigorous opposition." ~Orchard, Baptist History, pg. 153, 154.

The Church of God continued to grow in numbers and Everinus states, "Those of them who have returned to our church tell us that they had great numbers of their persuasion scattered almost everywhere." ~Jones, Church History, pg. 210, 211.

"In the 13th Century, in the year 1215, Pope Innocent III, of bloody celebrity, held a Council at the Lateran and announced anathemas against heretics of every description. By his power over the ruling prince, Frederick II, Pope Honorius extended his sanguinary measures to the Kingdom of Italy, and the people of God began to flee, and, according to Mosheim, they passed out of Italy, and spread like an inundation throughout the European provinces, but Germany in particular afforded an asylum where they were called Gazari instead of Cathari [Puritans]." ~Mosheim, Ecclesiastical History, v. 2, pp. 426, 430, and Orchard, Baptist History, p. 155. Emperor Frederick II, of the Romans, from Padua, in the year 1224, promulgated four edicts against the heretics.

"We condemn to perpetual infamy, withdraw our protection from, and put under our ban, the Puritans, Paterines, Leonists, Arnoldists, Josephines, Albigenses, Waldenses, etc., and all other heretics, of both sexes, and of whatever name." ~The Roman Emperor Frederick II, see Jones, Church History, p. 270.

Frederick, in his proclamation against the heretics, uses the term, "The Church of God," referring to the one and only recognized Church of all mankind. ~from the book, Holy Roman Empire, in the Public Library of London.

"The Council of Toulouse established the Inquisition to complete the work of heresy; and in the year 1229, first forbade the use of the Scriptures in the vulgar tongue." ~ Orchard, History Of Bap., p. 224.

It is ironic, for in this same city of Toulouse was formed the first society in France for circulating the Bible in the vernacular tongue [common language of the masses].

One historian says, "Rome saw that she was making no progress in the extermination of a heresy, which had found a seat amid these hills, as firm as it was ancient. The numbers of the Waldenses were not thinned; their constancy was not shaken, they still refused to enter the Roman Church, and they met all the edicts and inquisitors, all the torturings and burnings of their great persecutor, with a resistance as unyielding as that offered by their rocks to the tempests and hail and snow, which the whirlwinds of winter hurled against them." ~Wylie, History of the Waldenses, p. 31.

The history of these people is continuous persecution, and it is regrettable, that while there are large and distinct details of the cruelties they endured, there are scanty accounts of the spirit with which they suffered, and still less of their internal exercises of Holiness, which are known only to the people of God. Horrible tortures raged against them in the name of God by way of the Holy See, which is an assemblage of everything cruel, immoral, perfidious, indecent, and detestable.

The royal monarchs, as well as the most cruel of people, are enslaved to the Pontiffs, and are easily led to persecute the world's children of God with the most savage of barbarities. "It is strange that all great people, children of God, men of God are born more in the West than in the East. They have been born in countries where there is a lot of affluence and they do not have so much poverty and troubles. And these are the very people who are lost for the modern concept of life is to make something that can be demolished very easily. We should realize that the reason for this is that our foundations have been made very weak by the 'Satanic Forces' and they have built it since long. That is why our ideas are very weak. In the West if you observe the behavior and life-style of the Kings and the Queens, and the kind of life the people lived was so debased and horrifying. Even what the so-called religious people and the Catholic Churches did was so horrid that these very foundations were shaken." ~Shri Kalya Shri Nirmala Devi, London, U.K. - May 24, 1981.

In 1179, some, under the pretext of their having embraced heretical opinions, were examined by the Bishops and condemned, accused of having received only the New Testament, and rejecting the Old, except in the testimonies quoted by the Lord and the Apostles [The charges are refuted by their original writings]. They were also accused of asserting the Manichean Doctrine and of many other things, and all with a most evident design to persecute them to death; because they stood opposed to the errors and abominations of the Catholic Church.

“Rainerious,” Pope Paschal II, 1050-1118, and Pope, 1099-1118, was a bigoted Papist, deciding that the Waldenses were the most formidable enemies of the Church of Rome and therefore must be exterminated. The Waldenses spoke of the many crimes of the Church against the people in the name of God and its corrupt hierarchy which offended the shameless priests of the time.

“They have a great appearance of Godliness; because they live righteously before men, believe rightly in God in all things, and hold all the articles of the Creed; yet they hate and revile the Church of Rome, and, in their accusations they are easily believed by the people.” ~Pope Paschal II.

Nevertheless, it was Pope Innocent III, for whom no Pope possessed more ambition, to institute the Inquisition; and the Waldenses were the first objects of his cruelty. He authorized monks to frame the process of that court, and to deliver the supposed heretics to the secular power.

The beginning of the 13th century saw thousands of persons hanged or burned by diabolical devices, whose sole crime was, that they trusted in Jesus Christ for salvation, and renounced all the vain hopes of self-righteousness, idolatry and superstition, which the Catholic Church so strongly adhered to.

AD 1488-1568-Miles Coverdale revises the Tyndale version with Latin text with additional versions of scripture to draw from. Miles Coverdale, an Augustinian friar who left the Order, repudiated Catholicism, first Protestant Bishop of Exeter 1490-3, persons from Malankara set forth to meet the Caldeah Patriarch Mar Shemavu. Two of them received priest hood Fr. Joseph and Fr. Geevarghese.

“Come vnto me all ye that labour and are laden and I wylle ease you. Take my yooke on you and lerne of me for y am meke and lowly in herte: and ye shall fynde ease vnto youre soules for my yooke ys easy and my burthen ys lyght.” ~Tyndale Bible, Matthew 11:28-30, 1526.

In the Tyndale Edition of the New Testament, in English, published in 1525 Jesus is described as one of the “Jewes.” The word “Jew” does not come into common use until the 18th century. In the Coverdale Edition published in 1535, Jesus is described as one of the “Jewes.” Christians have been wont to question why Jesus, a Jew, preached profoundly from the Jewish Torah, while the Book of John heartily condemns the Jews, containing many passages in which the authors condemn “The Jews” as sons of Satan and accuses them of murdering the Savor, Jesus. The Gospel of John 19:19 reads, “Jesus the Nazareth, kyng of the Jewes.” ~Both Tyndale and Coverdale indicate that they thought some Scriptural words suspect.

The angered Bishop of London seized as many copies of the Tyndale Bible as could be found and had them burned them at St. Paul's Cross in October 1526. The Bishop also bought all the remaining copies possessed by the printer. But Tyndale had already secretly approved the purchase in order to finance the publishing of a second edition and translation of the Old Testament in continental Europe. Hence, the Bishop had Tyndale kidnapped from his home in the free city of Antwerp, tried as a heretic, found guilty, and strangled, released prior to death, and burned at the stake in October 1536. Just before his death, Tyndale cried out, “Lord, open the King of England's eyes.”

Even Erasmus rejected 1 John 5:7 as not being an original part of 1 John. “Greek New Testament” editions agree, including The Greek New Testament “Through his misreading of the Gospels still more bluntly than Justin held the Jews responsible for the death of Jesus...” ~Milito of Sardis, circa 160 C.E.

According to the Majority Text of Hodges and Farstad. Erasmus also surmised that the doxology to the Lord's Prayer in Matt. 6:13, “For thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory forever, amen,” was a later liturgical [Catholic] addition to Matthew, and formed no original part of that Gospel. ~Bainton, p. 137. Erasmus doubted the Gospels of Mark 16:9-20 and John 7:53-8:11 formed any original component of the Bible. ~Bainton, p. 136.

Early Christians now believe in “Supercessionism: a.k.a. Replacement Theology,” in which they deem that God has rejected the Jews, unilaterally canceling His covenants with them, and now favoring the Christians as the “New Chosen People.”

In Codex Vaticanus we have a blank space or rather column after Mark 16:8, indicating that the ancient scribe knew he was omitting verses. The “Lord's Prayer” is merely a reiteration of similar prayers presented in the Jewish Talmud, and the conversation between Jesus and Nicodemus echoes the teaching of Krishna in the Hindu poem of the Bhagavat-Gita. The doctrine of the water that removes thirst forever also has its parallel in Hindu mythology.

"Now on the last, the great day of the feast, Jesus stood forth, and cried, saying, 'If any man is athirst, let him come to me, and let him drink, him who believes in me, According as Scripture has spoken, Rivers of living water shall flow out of his belly.'" ~cf. Zechariah 13:1; 14: 8.

"So we see that once a pure copy of the Universal Text [Textus Receptus] had been carried down into Egypt, it was re-copied. During the process of this recopying, it was revised by men who did not revere it as truly the 'Word of God.' This text was examined by the critical eye of Greek philosophy and Egyptian morals. These men saw nothing wrong with putting the Book in subjection to their opinion instead of their opinion being in subjection to the book. This process produced a text, which was local to the educational center of Alexandria, Egypt. This text went no further than Southern Italy where the Roman Catholic Church found its unstable character perfect for overthrowing the true 'Word of God,' which was being used Universally by the true Christians." ~Rev. Samuel Gipp, Codex Vaticanus, Ref: B7.

Philo, the Greek philosopher, 100 B.C.E., had already taught it as follows, "The Word [Logos] is the fountain of life... It is of the greatest consequence to every person to strive without remission to approach the Divine Word of God above, who is the fountain of all wisdom, that, by drinking largely of that sacred spring, instead of death, he may be rewarded with everlasting life."

Erasmus believed, "The only way to determine the true text is to examine the early codices." ~Bainton, p. 135.

Erasmus wrote to Martin Luther over a dispute concerning the freedom of the human will, and in favor of his opinion, Erasmus cited a passage from Sirach [also called Ecclesiasticus], a book of the Apocrypha. "I think no one should detract from the authority of this book because Saint Jerome indicated it did not belong to the Hebrew canon," wrote Erasmus, "Since the Christians received it into their canon, and I cannot see why the Hebrews excluded it when they included the Parables of Solomon [presumably Ecclesiastes rather than Proverbs] and the amatory Canticles [Song of Solomon]."

Erasmus was trying to defend Sirach, rather than to reject Ecclesiastes and the Song of Songs. ~Bainton, Cambridge History of the Bible, v. 3, p. 6.

The so-called "Lord's Prayer" is merely a reiteration of similar prayers in the Jewish Talmud. The conversation between Jesus and Nicodemus repeats the teaching of Krishna in the Hindu poem of the Bhagavat-Gita. The Doctrine of the water that removes thirst forever also has its parallel in Hindu mythology.

Tyndale eloquently sums up the heart-cry of the reformers of his day with his well-known statement, "If God spare my life, I will, before many years have passed, cause the boy that driveth the plough to know more of the Scriptures than the priests do." ~see Wylie, citing Fox, Vol. v., p. 117.

Mother Shipton, 1488-1561, born in England, many considered her a witch; she gave some remarkable prophecies in poetic verse regarding man's inventions, but is discredited when she prophesized that the End of the World, would come in 1881.

AD 1489-The Jews are expelled from Milan, Italy by their Christian Church rulers.

AD 1490-1445-Albert of Brandenburg becomes Archbishop of Magdeburg. At twenty-eight he becomes a Cardinal [in 1518]. To pay for his expenses he is granted permission from Pope Leo X to sell indulgences. Among his agents in this endeavor is the German Monk Johann Tetzel, against whom the ninety-five theses of Martin Luther were directed.

A Dominican monk, Johann Tetzel, helped to expand the Papal coffers by selling indulgences 'souls freed from purgatory!' Martin Luther condemns this practice for it absolves the rich of their sins without them having to attend church or participate in religious functions.

Immorality, incestuousness, murder, villainy, all ran rampant within the hallowed halls of Saint Peter's. Pope John XII, who became Pope at sixteen was born from the incestuous relationship between Pope Sergio III and his thirteen year old daughter Marozie, was well connected within the Vatican circles. Pope John would later become his own mother's lover, and in fact Marozie was both her father's, Pope Sergio III, and her son's, Pope John XIII, mistress at the same time.

"Pope John XII, ruled 955-964, son of the brutal ruler of Rome, Alberic, a son of Marozia, who seized power from, and probably murdered, his mother and made his son Pope at the age of eighteen. John had been wildly corrupt from boyhood in his father's palace (and harem), and Bishop Liutp rand [De Rebus Gestis Othonis] and the monk annalist Benedict of Soracte describe him as a monster of vice in the Papal chair. He was denounced to the Emperor Otto for incest, rape, and turning the Papal Palace into a 'Brothel.' The Roman clergy who took oath on the charges [adding chronic drunkenness, unnatural vice, etc.] said that he castrated Cardinals and cut out the eyes of priests who protested. Bishop Liutprand was present at the trial. As it did not at the moment suit the Emperor's interests to condemn him, he said that John was 'Just a boy' and they must 'Let him sow his wild oats.' This is the period of the Ottonian Renaissance, which certain American historians have discovered, asking us to use the expression Dark Age no longer. After one of the longest reigns of the 10th century he was slain by the husband of a woman he had [apparently] raped." ~Joseph McCabe, Rationalists Encyclopaedia.

If anyone dared to criticize this religious immorality they were ceremoniously burnt at the stake under the accusation of witchcraft or heresy. Syphilis may have already existed in Europe, but when America was discovered, a new type was introduced whereby most of the Catholic clergy contracted this disease and eventually died of it. No clergymen were immune, for few, if any were celibate, including the Popes such as Julius II and Leo X who, as a bastard was favored at Saint Peter's and therefore became a Cardinal at fourteen and was elected Pope at thirty-five, after having contracted syphilis at twenty-five.

Pope Sixtus IV, who ordered the building of the Sistine chapel, had syphilis too, but this, certainly, did not stop him from having two children from his elder sister. He was bisexual and such a pederast and sodomite that, according to the writings of the chancellor D'Infessura, many clergymen actually became Cardinals in return for their sexual services.

The Church in a Holy Synod proclaims, "Whereas the power of conferring Indulgences was granted by Christ to the Church; and she has, even in the most ancient times, used the said power, delivered unto her of God; the Sacred Holy Synod teaches, and enjoins, that the use of Indulgences, for the Christian people most salutary, and approved of by the authority of Sacred Councils, is to be retained in the Church; and It condemns with anathema those who either assert, that they are useless; or who deny that there is in the Church the power of granting them." ~luttmer@hanover.edu.

Excuse me for my ignorance, but I have yet to discover the granting of indulgences by Jesus Christ to the Church or for that matter, to anyone, especially for the financial aggrandizement of any particular person, group, or religious sect. Jesus was a revisionist who was outspoken in his beliefs and practices, for which he may or may not have been condemned. If he proclaimed such indulgences I am sure he would have been straight and forthright in stating such.

In the consequent struggle between Catholics and Protestants, Albert Brandenburg adheres to the Catholic Church's principals, but acts as peacemaker between the two parties at the Imperial Diet at Augsburg in 1530. Although loyal to the Church, he grants religious considerations to his subjects [including the Protestants], on condition that they pay his debt of half a million florins which he incurred in expenses obtaining a high office in the Catholic Church.

AD1490-1541-The Swiss physician, Paracelsus teaches that a good physician is well versed in astronomy as well as astrology. He believed that the stars controlled the influence of diseases by penetrating the astral spirit.

"Pope Clement V, 1309, decreed that resisting Venetians should be sold into slavery, and Pope Gregory XI and Pope Sixtus IV [of blessed memory] decreed the same for the Florentines, and Pope Julius II for both Florence and Bologna. The Bull by which Pope Nicholas V, 1442, encouraged Portugal to what became the organized trade in negro slaves... In 1538, Pope Paul III decreed slavery against all Englishmen who should dare to support King Henry VIII against the Pope!" ~Encyclopedia Britannica vol. 19, pg. 35, 14th Edition.

AD1491-1547-King Henry VIII of England, founder of the Church of England. Henry VIII breaks with the Roman Catholic Church over its refusal to grant him an annulment from his wife Catherine of Aragon [Catholic]. Allowed a dispensation by the church to marry the widow of his brother, Henry claims the Church Contraverted Ecclesiastical Law, and therefore his marriage was invalid. If his marriage is declared null and void [which eventually it was], this made his daughter, Elizabeth, illegitimate, a fact which she vehemently challenged Henry's other daughter, Mary, Queen of Scots.

The old Christian marriage vows require the woman to solemnly swear to be "Bonair and Buxom [amiable] in bed and at board." ~Alison Weir, The Six Wives of Henry VIII, pg. 7.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

While motherhood is regarded as a woman's attractive beckoning, a most wonderful gift, young women are also encouraged by the Church to become nuns because virginity is seen as the ideal state, with marriage merely a poor distant second. A woman bearing ten children in these days could expect to see only half survive to adulthood, adultery was common, and men did not expect to be censured.

There is, also, the Act 37 Henry VIII, c. 17, which declares that "By the word of God" the king is "Supreme head in earth of the Church of England," having power and authority to exercise all manner of ecclesiastical jurisdiction.

Thus, in the reign of King Henry VIII, who is rumored to have suffered from a contagious bacterial infection [some say syphilis since he was a whoremonger, but it may have been diabetes], the whole basis of canon law, the jurisdiction of the Universal Church with the Pope for its head, is removed, and for such canon law and ecclesiastical jurisdiction as remained a new basis is constructed, viz, that of the consent of the English nation and the royal sufferance. ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. XIII.

King Henry VIII, known for his many wives, sent Cardinal Wolsey to meet with Pope Clement VII, hoping the Pontiff would grant the ruler an annulment of his marriage to Catherine of Aragon. When the Pope extended his bare toe to be kissed [as was the custom] by Wolsey, the Cardinal's dog, Urian, sprang forward and bit the pope. Pope Clement flew into a rage, the divorce was off and Henry to ensure the annulment the Catholic Church refused to grant, later established the Church of England. ~Ten Dogs That Changed the World By E. Bougerol.

The monks were seen as a threat to King Henry VIII and he felt that he needed to close the monasteries to get his hands on the land and wealth of the Roman Catholic church in England and Wales. King Henry sent out 'investigators' to report on the monks who were behaving badly, and there were plenty of examples of Monks disobeying their vows including pregnant nuns, gambling and even highway robbery! However Monasteries had played a big part in some areas as schools, hospitals and places of prayer and retreat. By closing the monasteries King Henry had to fill the gap he left, one of the ways he tried to do this was by starting our school in 1542.

Sex outside of marriage is deemed grossly and manifestly sinful by the Catholic Church, but it continues on all the same as the Lords of the manor will use the physical attraction between men and women to make a profit from it by imposing heavy fines on the village women for fornication, and for bearing illegitimate children; while at Wakefield manor, in 1316, seven female villains are fined for 'Lechery.'

The Catholic writers boast of Pope Clement VII's heroic spiritual firmness in refusing to grant Henry VIII a divorce from Catherine and ascribe the English Reformation to this frustration of the King's "Lust."

The Catholic historian Lord Acton showed long ago, in his "Historical Essays and Studies," 1907, Ch. I, that this is a gross misrepresentation. Lord Acton, a famous British Catholic of the 19th century, was almost excommunicated for publishing statements regarding Papal infallibility.

"It not only promotes, it inculcates distinct mendacity and deceitfulness. In certain cases it is made a duty to lie." ~Historical Essays and Studies, 1907, Ch. I, Lord Acton.

Pope Clement VII privately assures King Henry of his willingness to annul the king's marriage, but he was restrained by fear of his nephew, the Emperor. Rome had for centuries found pretexts to annul royal and noble, wealthy, marriages almost whenever it was asked or paid to do so, and the refusal in this and a few other cases was purely political. Pope Clement had already, 1525, granted a scandalous divorce to Henry's licentious sister Margaret. ~See also Froude's History of England, 1, 139-47. In the reign of Henry VIII, that pious and moral founder of the apostolic Episcopal Church, there was passed by the Parliament of England an act entitled, "An Act for Abolishing of Diversity of Opinion," which speaks little of abolishing anything, and more of implementing.

This act was set forth what a good Christian was obliged to believe and the violations were quite uncomplicated to comprehend:

- ‡ That in the sacrament was the real body and blood of Jesus Christ. Violation-Death by Fire.
- ‡ That the body and blood of Jesus Christ was in the bread, and the blood and body of Jesus Christ was in the wine. Violation-Death.
- ‡ That priests should not marry. Violation-Imprisonment.

- ✠ That vows of chastity were of perpetual obligation. Violation-Imprisonment.
- ✠ That private masses ought to be continued. Violation-Imprisonment.
- ✠ That auricular confession to a priest must be maintained. Violation-Imprisonment.

This creed was made by law, in order that all men might know just what to believe by simply reading the statute. The church despised people thinking upon religious subjects. It was thought far better that a creed should be made by Parliament, so that whatever might be lacking in evidence might be made up in force. ~Heretics And Heretics, 1874, by Robert Green Ingersoll.

Six Carthusian monks, a Bridgettine monk, are hanged, and the Bishop of Rochester, Saint John Fisher, a Bishop, is beheaded.

Others are disemboweled, their intestines drawn from their bodies, while others are ordered drawn and quartered, their limbs ripped from their torsos, in May and June, 1535; all for denying that King Henry VIII was the "Supreme Head," the self-proclaimed descendent of God on earth, of the Church of England. Henry will use the Pope's powers [Julius II] to grant him dispensation to marry his brother's widow, and then quote Leviticus to have the Pope [Clement] grant him a divorce [called the Great Matter] after his children are still born and commencing flirtations with a fourteen year old. ~Note: Deuteronomy encourages marriage of a brother's widow.

On February 7, 1531, King Henry will stand before Parliament and demand that the Church of England recognize him from that point on as "The sole Protector and Supreme Head," which makes him both king and Pope in his domain, and on January 1531, Pope Clement issues a brief ordering Henry to "Put away one Anne, whom he kept about him."

"Hugh Latimer, an English 'Reformer,' tarnished his eloquent career by approving the burning of Anabaptists and obstinate Franciscans under King Henry VIII." ~Will Durant.

It is said of Henry VIII, who founded Anglicanism, "... The murderer of two wives ... And the executioner of many of the noblest Englishmen of the time, who had the conscience and the courage to oppose him. Among these were the venerable Bishop Fisher ... And Sir Thomas More, one of the most distinguished men of his century... When Henry began his persecution, there were about 1,000 Dominican monks in Ireland, only four of whom survived when Queen Elizabeth came to the throne thirty years later..." ~John Stoddard.

"Executions speedily began... At one time... About 800 a year. Hallam [a Protestant]. Says that the revolting tortures and executions of Jesuit priests in the reign of Elizabeth were characterized by a 'savageness and bigotry, which I am very sure no scribe of the Inquisition could have surpassed'... The details of these atrocities... Would form very unpleasant reading for Protestants, accustomed as they are to think that all religious persecution has been done by Catholics... It is pleasanter [for them] to declaim against persecution, and to call the Inquisition a Hell, than to consider their own devices and the work of their own hands." ~Newman, From The Protestant Inquisition, Reformation Intolerance and Persecution, by Dave Armstrong.

Linacer, a distinguished physician, and bigoted Romanist, in the reign of King Henry VIII., fell in with the New Testament followers, but after reading it for a while, tosses it aside with impatience and a great oath, exclaiming, "Either this book is not true, or we are not Christians."

By 1540, the Kings men are destroying monastic buildings, and Catholic churches; destroying images of the Madonna and saints; taking axes to elegant stained glass windows, carrying away holy vestments and altar plates of the Church, all the time levying heavy taxes upon the masses to finance the programme of ecclesiastical reforms. King Henry now dons the "Great Ruby," upon his thumb, a Christian religious symbol since the 12th century, which had once adorned the shrine of Becket of Canterbury, for upon his orders, the saint's body had been unceremoniously exhumed and brusquely thrown on a dungheap. Church lands are now redistributed to those who support the King.

Anti-Semitic writings abound, "There is already something like a Jewish monopoly in high finance... There is the same element of Jewish monopoly in the silver trade, and in the control of various other metals, notably lead, nickel, quicksilver. What is most disquieting of all, this tendency to monopoly is spreading like a disease." ~Hilaire Belloc, The Jews, p. 9.

AD 1491-1556-Saint Ignatius of Loyola, founder of the Order of Jesuits who served in the court of King Ferdinand V, of Castile, Spain, performed military duties under the Duke of Najora, during which period he was wounded in 1521, took to reading books about the saints during his recuperation period.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

At the age of 35 in 1534 he began his formal education by attending the University of Alcala and later the University of Paris in 1528. Pope Paul III gives his official approval of the Order of Jesuits in 1540. Saint Ignatius is known for his writing of "Spiritual Exercises" from which we receive: Rule Thirteen, Black is White. Absolutely no-one is to question the authority of the Church.

Rule Thirteen: "To be Right in Everything, we should always hold that the White, which you see, is Black, if the Hierarchical Church so decides it, believing that between Christ our Lord, the Bridegroom, and the Church, His Bride, there is the same Spirit which governs and directs us for the salvation of our souls. By the same Spirit and our Lord who gave the Ten Commandments, our Holy Mother the Church is directed and governed." ~Saint Ignatius of Loyola.

To believe in a religion is one thing, to follow blindly...another. St. Ignatius would have one follow the Church no matter what without question. This, I find difficult to believe much less follow knowing the many untruths produced by this famous body for its own furtherment and sometimes to the detriment of its followers and its contemptuous immoralities.

AD1491-The Decree on Censorship, the infamous 'Forbidden Index' is moderated to include religious and theological books only [Perhaps the Church can explain why the works of the famous American, Mark Twain, are now included]

AD 1492-1503-Pope Sanctitas Alexander VI, also known as Rodrigo Borgia, at the tender age of twelve tasted blood when he put to death a fellow playmate by repeatedly plunging a dagger into his stomach. Another fact covered up by the Church. The Pope, in his commissioning of Cardinals, "Chief of Father," asks for handsome fees [This was a standard Papal practice in his time]. His other peculiar habit was of calling the newly appointed Cardinals over for sumptuous meals and poisoning them with arsenic to increase turnover. Blind obedience is the watchword for the followers of Christianity.

Pope Alexander VI is so brazen in his erotic vagrance that, at the actual time of his Papal Election, he openly entertains his beautiful, and young, mistress, whose image he has painted on one of the walls of the Vatican Palace as representing the Perpetual Virgin Mary; in a fresco by Pinturicchio, a skeptical, self-indulgent artist, the Pope's children also have their images placed unorthodoxly in this "Sacred Palace." Pope Alexander contributes to the massive organized corruption in the Philippines via the Catholic friars who arrive with Legazpi, claiming the islands as the property of Spain [the Catholic religious leader is Father Andres de Urdaneta] promising the poor ignorant natives Salvation while enslaving these people to work the silver and gold mines as well as the fields.

First, the Augustinian, then the Franciscan orders, followed by the politically motivated Jesuits [who will be expelled in 1768], the Dominicans, the Recollects, and the Benedictines. All of these Christian groups will facilitate the spread of racial bigotry and religious intolerance among the Catholics and the ignorant masses to the betterment of the Church.

Erasmus, Desiderius, 1466-1536, a Dutch writer, religious scholar, humanist, and the illegitimate son of a priest and a physician's daughter, states that he was an Augustinian friar, ordained a priest, and granted a dispensation by Pope Leo X himself to live in this world. Pope Paul III wished to make him a Cardinal, which may have accounted for his refusal to leave the Church of Rome.

Of the clerics within the Church he says, "I use no makeup, I don't wear one expression on my face and hide another in my heart. I'm always exactly like myself, so that even those who most aspire to the name and reputation of wisdom cannot hide my presence even though they strut about like apes in scarlet robes or asses in lions' skins."

'However carefully they disguise themselves, somehow those protruding asses' ears will give away the Midas in them. An ungrateful lot of men, these rascals, who though they're entirely of my faction, yet in public are so ashamed of my proper name that they hurl it against others as a term of ultimate insult. Don't you think we could best call these people, who are actually 'Superfools' but want to look like wise men, by the title of 'Foolosophers'?'" ~Excerpts from The Praise of Folly, Microsoft Encarta 98 Encyclopedia, 1993-1997, Microsoft Corporation.

It being unproblematic to fool the illiterate early Christians the invasion of false Scriptures increased appreciably, "The perpetrators of such frauds were often priests, partly because it was they who had the learning and skills needed for the forgery of ancient documents and partly because religious foundations, being well endowed, needed to protect their endowment. Their motives were sometimes worthy: knowing that a property belonged to his monastery, but not having the documentation to prove it, a monk might feel it his duty to provide what was lacking. They might be playful, as with the invention of eyewitnesses to the Trojan War, or of a benign character for the notorious tyrant of Tarentum, but they could be far from insignificant in their effect. The Donation of Constantine was the documentary foundation of the temporal power of the Papacy... ~Fake? The Art of Deception, Edited by Mark Jones, with Paul Craddock and Nicolas Barker, 1990.

Pope Alexander VI, is known to have fathered four illegitimate children [some say six], of which two grandchildren became Cardinals.

"...He thought nothing of stealing a man's wife, raping her and tossing her in to the "Tiber River."

~On Pope Alexander VI, from the Rationalist Encyclopedia by the former Benedictine monk, J. McCabe.

When one of his bastard sons "Was fished out of the Tiber with his throat cut ..." he felt that it was a warning from Heaven to repent. Documents are now coming to light which purport that Alexander's son was killed by his other son, fighting over their sister Lucrecia, of whom they had an incestuous relationship, which included the Pope also.

Catholic scholars will have one believe that no one felt more keenly than the Pope himself regarding attrition and penitence as he now spoke of resigning to his court and proclaiming his determination to set about that reform of the Church 'In Head and members' for which the world had so long been clamoring, but his grief was assuaged by the attentions of his lady loves, notably the beautiful young Guilia Farnese, niece of the Cardinal, and whose picture as an angel now adorns one of the great frescos of the Vatican. The second habit was in the commissioning of Cardinals, "Chief of Father," for a substantial fee, which was an accepted Papal practice. Afterwards, he would recall them for a sumptuous meal and poison them with arsenic.

The Catholic Church continually denies persecuting women and children, yet, even in the conquests of its Christian explorers, deplorable, and heinous crimes continue to be committed in the name of Jesus, "Other infants they put to the sword, along with their mothers and anyone else who happened to be nearby... They made some low wide gallows on which the hanged victim's feet almost touched the ground, stringing up their victims in lots of thirteen, in memory of 'Our Redeemer,' and 'His twelve Apostles,' then set burning wood at their feet and thus burned them alive... To others they attached straw or wrapped their whole bodies in straw and set them afire..." ~Bartolome de las Casas, who traveled with Christopher Columbus, General History of the Indies, published in the 1540's.

Columbus set out to conquer and subjugate, not so much as to enlighten, than to enslave, all in the name of Catholic King Ferdinand and Queen Isabella, and the notorious Playboy of Rome, Pope Alexander VI, "On the island Hispanola was where the Spaniards first landed. Here those Christians perpetrated their first ravages and oppressions against the native peoples. This was the first land in the New World to be destroyed and depopulated by the Christians, and here they began their subjection of the women and children, taking them away from the Indians to use them and ill use them, 'And they committed other acts of force and violence and oppression, which made the Indians realize that these men had not come from Heaven. And some of the Indians concealed their foods while others concealed their wives and children and still others fled to the mountains to avoid the terrible transactions of the Christians.'" ~Bartolome de las Casas' General History of the Indies, published in the 1540's

Columbus left his mark on the New World; wherever he went, his men raped, pillaged, and massacred the indigenous people, "The island of Cuba is now almost completely depopulated... San Juan and Jamaica are deserted and devastated... On the northern side of Cuba and Hispanola lie the neighboring Lucayos, comprising more than sixty islands, some small, some large. They have the healthiest islands in the world, where lived more than five hundred thousand souls; they are now deserted, inhabited by not a single living creature." ~Ibid

Persecution is begun against the Jews, of whom 500,000 are expelled from Spain and the Jewish wealth confiscated and placed in the custody of the King and Papacy. In seventy years the population of Spain is reduced from 10,000,000 to 6,000,000 by the banishment of Jews, Moors and Morescoes [Christianized Moors], the nation's most wealthy and intelligent of the inhabitants of the country. ~Cushing B. Hassell, History of the Church of God, Chapter XV.

The Church is want to tell the truth of their Catholic voyager/conqueror, "And Spaniards have behaved in no other way during the past forty years, down to the present time, for they are still acting like ravening

beasts, killing, terrorizing, afflicting, torturing, and destroying the native peoples, doing all this with the strangest and most varied methods of cruelty, never seen or heard of before, and to such a degree that this island of Hispanola, once so populous, having a population that I estimate to have been more than three millions, has now a population of barely two hundred persons.” ~Ibid

Christopher Columbus retains an excellent standing in the Italian Christian communities, “And the Christians attacked them [indigenous natives] with buffets [a blow with the hand] and beatings, until they finally laid hands on the nobles of the villages. Then they behaved with such temerity and shamelessness that the most powerful ruler of the islands had to see his own wife raped by a Christian officer... And the Christians, with their horses and swords and pikes [and large Mastiff dogs] began to carry out massacres and strange cruelties against them. They attacked the towns and spared neither the children nor the aged nor pregnant women nor women in childbed, not only stabbing them and dismembering them, but cutting them to pieces as if dealing with sheep in the slaughter house. They laid bets, as to who, with one stroke of the sword, could split a man in two or could cut off his head or spill out his entrails with a single stroke of the pike.” ~Bartolome de las Casas' General History of the Indies, published in the 1540's.

Luckily this brutal Christian story has a beautiful ending, for the survivors, “A man from Liguria who landed, under the auspices of God in the New World and who returned thousands and thousands of mortals to the common society of the human race [baptized as Christians], led from their barbarous life to peacefulness and civilization and, which is of much more importance, recalled from perdition to eternal life by the bestowal of gifts, which Jesus Christ brought the world.” ~Ibid.

“And I saw three unclean spirits [Nephilim] like frogs [alien beings perhaps] out of the mouth of the dragon [Satan], and out of the mouth of the beast [Catholic Church?], and out of the mouth of the false prophet [Pope?], ...which go forth unto the kings of the earth and of the whole world, to gather them to the battle of that great day of God Almighty.” ~Revelation 16:13-14. cf. Romans 16:17; II Peter 2:1.

Space Aliens(?) On October 11, 1492, from Christopher Columbus' Journal Logs, just 5 hours before the discovery of the New World, while patrolling the deck of the Santa Maria at about 10:00 PM, Columbus thought he saw “A light glimmering at a great distance.”

Columbus hurriedly summons Pedro Gutierrez, “A gentleman of the king's bedchamber,” who also witnesses the strange light, and after a short time it vanishes, only to reappear several times during the night, each time dancing up and down “In sudden and passing gleams, like the flickering wick of a candle. The light, first seen four hours before land is sighted, was never explained.” ~Unidentified Flying Objects: Do You Believe? By S.G.H.A.P.I., <http://www.nhaunted.com/UFO.html>

AD 1493-1541-Paracelsus, Philippus Augeolus Theophrastus Bombastus von Hohenheim, Swiss alchemist, physician, who studied under Trimethius of Spanheim. Paracelsus believed that we are mirrors of the universe. Said to have received the secret of the Philosopher's Stone [Prime substance from which all other metals are derived from and used to change other base metals from to gold or silver and is also associated with the Elixir of Life] from Solomon of Trismosin in 1521. Contends to have created an artificial human being [homunculus] see “The Hermetic” “The Archidaxes of Magic” and “Alchemical Writings of Paracelsus”

AD 1494-March, the Christian Monarchs expel all Jews from Spain who refuse baptism. Many Jews flee to North Africa and the Balkans while others remain and practice their faith in secret. The Muslims had allowed the Jews to practice their faith without fear.

The 150,000 Jews who refuse baptism under Christian rule are forcibly deported and their properties confiscated. The Jews are also expelled from Tuscany when the Medici family loses Papal election, Italy, due to their non-Christian beliefs and their properties confiscated. Upon the return of the Medici, the Jews will return in 1515.

“The Roman Catholics were accustomed to holding 'Councils' for the purpose of discussing and deciding questions of faith, points of order, etc. There was such a council held in Ravenna, Italy, in 1311 A.D., which is famous in history on account of its authorizing the substitution of sprinkling and pouring for immersion. This was done by making them equally valid along with immersion. Up to this time the general rule of the Church had been immersion, the exceptions being, as a rule, clinic baptism; but in 1311 A.D., by the authority of the Roman Catholic Council, which met in Ravenna, Italy, sprinkling and pouring became legal baptism.” ~Leslie G. Thomas, The Church, The Falling Away, and the Restoration, p. 36.

The Church has already declared their Holy Torah false and heretical, changed the name of Yehoshua to Jesus, and have rewritten Scripture to conform to their interpretation of the Bible.

Christopher Columbus' personal physician, on Columbus' second voyage to the New World, writes that the behavior of the natives was, "Detestable! Nauseating! Disgusting!" It was common practice among the Carib tribes to castrate boys captured from their enemy villages and keep them as lovers until they were eighteen, then they were killed and eaten.

"Substitution of false documents and tampering with genuine ones was quite a trade in the Middle Ages. Pope Innocent III [1198] points out nine species of forgery [of Ecclesiastical records] which had come under his notice." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. vi, 136.

The French cross the Alps to attack Rome and the Vatican under Pope Alexander VI. The local barons have abandoned the Pope in their support of him [as does the commander of his Vatican Forces, Virginio Orsini]. This withdrawal of support shall not be forgotten.

Pope Alexander stands firm and King Charles of France at the last moment has second thoughts as to his actions and capitulates, recognizing the Holy See as the authority and as the primary law of the lands.

The Florentine friar, Della Rolere, and his cardinals, had hoped for the downfall of Alexander under the French threat and on the 25th of January, 1497, Pope Alexander VI's son, Juan, commanding the Pontifical Troops [authorized by his father] having laid siege to one of the many Orsini family castles, and unable to storm its walls, finally acquiesces to a peace settlement.

The Pope however, is not finished with the Orsini family, yet. Cardinal Piccolomini objects strongly to the Pope's military conquests against those who betrayed him and is found floating in the Tiber River with his throat slit [amongst other numerous wounds which is referred to, sarcastically, as a Warning from Heaven]. It is during the Middle Ages that the Church reinforces the belief in evil spirits: Incubus [male] and Succubus [female] which it attributes to stealing the souls of those who do not follow strong Catholic precepts. In all honesty, I believe the Incubus myth is used to make exacerbate the thoughts of the nuns who are raped by the priests, and led to believe that their pregnancies were caused by the Incubus who visited them in their dreams [nightmares].

The Incubus is responsible for the birth of demons, witches, and deformed children, which may explain the numerous fetus' discovered on the grounds of convents and monasteries in later years. The Incubus was sometimes portrayed as a special priest [which may have been more accurate than realized] and is portrayed as far back as the Egyptian temples of Imhotep.

In Christianity 'Incubation' became known as 'Watching' or 'Keeping the vigil.' In times of stress it was common to 'watch and pray' in church all night that one might gain soulful guidance. In succeeding years the Incubus becomes diabolized, no longer perceived as a guiding seraph or angel, whose fall from grace is due to its sexual transgressions, becoming spirits of lust, which are seen as the weakness in man, and still later, is thought to produce children through the demonic account of a virgin birth.

Saint Thomas Aquinas is resolute in his belief that the Incubus demons are sterile and could impregnate a woman only through the semen from a Succubus, sometimes depicted as a white wolf, who in turn had received it from a man.

Some believed that the evil spirits could change their sex at will, Saint Aquinas asserting that a demon could use the semen of a man lost during a nocturnal emission so that a man could be 'at one and the same time a virgin and a father.' Aquinas contradicts Saint Augustine's interpretation of Biblical Scripture in attempting to prove that fallen angels could beget children of mortal women. ~See Genesis 6:4.

Pope Benedict XIV will proclaim, "This passage has reference to devils known as Incubi and Succubi." In 1275, in Carcassone, a woman is burned at the stake for bearing a child to the devil [Incubi]. The Church will attribute demonic powers to such historical legends as Robert of Normandy, Alexander the Great, Scipio Africanus, Plato, the Huns, and all of the Cyprits.

Needless to say, this outlook is due to their proclaimed attitude towards sex, as the Church views all sexual activity as sinful, which is disparate from the views held by their pagan relationships who held sex as natural and not sinful. All persons begotten from this immoral relationship with evil spirits are therefore considered evil.

The Greek version of a god/human relationship is Hercules, who is born of a god and mortal woman and is looked upon as a deity with mystical powers.

“One early priest, Father Ludovico Sinistrari, thought the Incubus, when having intercourse with a woman, begot the fetus from his own seed. He added the ‘Holy Mother the Church’ could correct him since this was his personal opinion. Sinistrari called ‘That Damnable Heresiarch, ‘Martin Luther,’ a well known example of a devil begotten man. Luther seemed no more charitable since he had that all odd looking children should be destroyed at birth, for they were clearly th offspring of demons.” ~From the Internet, www.themystica.com/mystica/articles/i/incubus.html.

The Succubus is a medieval concept of a lascivious demon who copulates with men in their dreams causing them to have nocturnal emissions [depleting their semen thereby forming a new spirit]

AD1494-1536-William Tyndale, ordained priest and Greek Scholar, due to persecution in his own country travels to Germany to translate the Bible from the Latin and Greek versions into English. For centuries the Majestic Cathedrals would chain the Bible to the pulpits, clergy believing the Bible belonged to the Church and not the masses.

The efforts of Tyndale to make the Bible available to all and his condemnation by the Catholic authorities clearly shows their concerns on making the Bible accessible to the common man is not their intention. He uses the Greek Text of Erasmus and other Biblical writings. Tyndale is tried and found by the Roman Catholic Authorities in Belgium as a heretic for translating the Bible for the common man. On the sixth of October 1536, Tyndale is strangled to death by the followers of the forgiving Jesus, the Roman Catholic Church, and afterwards burned at the stake in Vilvorde near Brussels.

AD1495-1553?-Rabelais, Francois: A Franciscan, then Benedictine monk, who proved himself a practical freethinker by dropping the monastic robes without any license, and taking up medicine and writing, illustrating the moral condition of the Papacy that when he was at last condemned the Pope is induced to overlook his terrible crimes on the basis of what are now said to be the most obscene books in European literature, and on condition that he promise to return to the monastery, which he never did.

The Christian authorities then state that his works should not be regarded as obscene because he merely wished to laugh the world out of its murderous passions. As if he could not get men to laugh at less gross jokes! Rabelais did not care a about religion and its moral code; and the priests, who burned the austere ex-monk Giordano Bruno at the stake and threatened Galileo, did not even put the vulgar literature of Pantagruel on the Forbidden Index. ~From the works of J. McCabe.

A Middle-Ages joke, “One skull of John the Baptist was much smaller than another. The small one must have been John when he was a young boy. Contrast between Peter and the Pope Peter was married.” ~cf. Mark. 1:30.

Will the early Christian accept a married priesthood? “Or will they,” says Saint Clement, “Reject even the apostles? For Peter and Philip begat children; and Philip also gave his daughters in marriage. And Paul does not hesitate, in one of his epistles, to greet his wife, whom he did not take about with him, that he might not be inconvenienced in his ministry.”

And since we have mentioned this subject it is not improper to subjoin another account, which is given by the same author and, which is worth reading. In the seventh book of his Stromata he writes as follows, “They say, accordingly, that when the blessed Peter saw his own wife led out to die, he rejoiced because of her summons and her return home, and called to her very encouragingly and comfortingly, addressing her by name, and saying, ‘Oh thou, remember the Lord.’ Such was the marriage of the blessed, and their perfect disposition toward those dearest to them.” ~Prolegomena: The Life and Writings of Eusebius of Caesarea: Testimonies of the Ancients Against Eusebius, Chapter XXX, The Apostles that Were Married.

AD1496-1565-Menno Simons, Catholic priest who later turns radical reformer, founder of the group to be later known as the Mennonites. Surrendered his ministry and aligned himself with the Anabaptist movement in 1536.

“Without constraint,” he wrote, “I renounced all my worldly reputation, name and fame, my unchristian abominations, my masses, my infant baptism, and my easy life, and I willingly submitted to distress and poverty under the heavy cross of Christ.”

His writings include, The Spiritual Resurrection (1536), Meditation on the Twenty-Fifth Psalm (1537), The New Birth (1537), Christian Baptism (1539), and his most influential work, Foundation of the Christian Doctrine (1539-40).

In 1542 a reward of 500 guilders is offered for the capture of Menno by Dutch Authorities. Preaching a Doctrine of Adult Baptism that was at odds with the accepted Church position he remained a hunted man for over two decades for his heretical views. "They verily are not the true congregation of Christ who merely boast of his name," Menno wrote, "But they are the true congregation of Christ who are truly converted, who are born from above of God, who are of a regenerate mind by the operation of the Holy Spirit through the hearing of the Divine Word, and have become children of God, have entered into obedience to him, and live unblamably in His Holy Commandments."

Menno believed it would not profit the Christian "... To boast of the Lord's blood, death, merits, grace or Gospel if the believer is not truly converted from his sinful life." ~Catholic Encyclopedia.

With both the Pagans and Christians, Baptism gave full expiation from original sin, restoring one instantly to original purity. Infant baptism was practiced by Buddhists. In Mongolia and Tibet candles burn, incense is offered, and the child is dipped three times in water, accompanied by prayers, and named. Adult Baptism was practiced by the Brahmans, the Zoroastrians and Mithraists of Persia, the Persians making the sign of the cross on the forehead; by the Egyptians, the Essenes, ascetics, of Buddhist origin, and by the Greeks and Romans.

The Goddess Nundina took her name from the ninth day, on which all male children were sprinkled with Holy water, as females were on the eighth, named, and a certificate given of "Regeneration." Adults, initiated in the sacred rites of Bacchus, were regenerated by Baptism. ~See also Psalms 51:3-5.

Fire was also used in many instances as well as water, the Romans using both; and Baptism by fire is still practiced. This is what is alluded to in Matthew 3: 11, which John says: "I baptize you with water; but he shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost [breath] and with fire."

The ancients believed that breath, or spiritus in Latin, was the vivifying force that differentiated a living body from a dead body. Moreover, since spiritus is a physical entity, it can exist outside the body, at least momentarily, and the inspiration came that spirits can exist outside the body. However, it is a misunderstanding, and breath is not the vivifying principle.

The Greeks used the word pneuma in the New Testament, to define this life breath, and we have the "Holy breath," and still later, hagion pneuma, the "Holy ghost." Since spiritus is a physical entity, the concept developed that spirits can exist outside the body, and we have spirit possession. In the vast majority of cases, words that mean 'Ghost' or 'spirit,' and even 'Mind,' originally meant 'Breeze' or 'Breath.'

We find that ruach in the Hebrew Old Testament, and nephesh, in their primal sense meant 'breath' or 'Breeze.' Anima in Latin, also, had this same element. An animal was thought to be alive because it had anima, or breath.

Plants are not thought to be capable of breathing [alive]; therefore, Noah did not have to take them in the ark to save them. The Sioux Indians use the word qua-neegee, which means 'Ghost' in their language, which has nothing to do with breath, however, they believe in animal spirits.

End of the World: Approximately 1500 years after the birth of Jesus. Mystics, in the 15th century, predict that the millennium will begin during this year.

AD1497-Pope Alexander VI [Rodrigo Borgia, nephew of Pope Calixtus III, Alfonso Borgia] on June 1st, issues a Papal Bull for the propagation of the Christian faith and support of the Spanish monarchy in its expeditions to exploit new territories and people outside the realm of Europe. Christian clerics are to travel throughout the world spreading the word of God and the corruption of the Church. 1501 Pope Alexander issues a Papal Bull continuing and clarifying the issue of Papal censorship.

Pope Alexander VI is succeeded by Pope Pius III who serves only three weeks [22 September 1503 to 18 October 1503] who may have been poisoned. With all the corruption and moral degradation, which surrounded Popes Sixtus IV and Alexander VI this man, remained uncorrupted.

The Church truly lost a much needed great spiritual leader. Magellan taking with him seven chaplains who are led by Fr. Pedro de Valderama discovers a land that he names after the King of Spain, the Philippines [1521]. Legazpi does likewise in his conquest and colonization of Cebu [also in the Philippines] in 1565. If the Catholic Church represents the poor, as they claim, then why does the Church refuse to open up its archives to reveal the multitude of forged documents used to steal the ancestral lands of the indigenous poor world-wide?

Proud of the achievements of the early Christians, many of the poor ignorant masses are not aware of the racial intolerance perpetrated upon them for the benefits of the Europeans. The vanguard of bigotry beginning with the Augustinians, then the Franciscans, Jesuits, Dominicans, Recollects, and Benedictines. The first university being the University of San Ignacio, founded by the Jesuits in 1589, closed in 1768 when the Jesuits are expelled.

“All it requires for the forces of evil, bigotry, superstition and ignorance to keep their grip on the minds of the people is that good men and women continue to do nothing.” ~The Scientific Proof of Survival After Death By Michael Roll

It will not be for another 274 years before the Christian racists will allow a Filipino to enter their revered Catholic institutions when an End to School Discrimination in the Philippines is issued by Pope Pius IX, in 1863, or a total of 352 years of Spanish domination after which the sacrosanct [discriminatory] Catholic schools are finally declared open to the indigenous native clientele in the Philippines. The Dominicans will found the College of Our Lady of the Rosary, of which it will take 252 years before they allow a Filipino to enter their hallowed halls. ~Note: The Rosary is an imitation of Pagan prayer beads of the Buddhist faith.

The name was later changed to College of Santo Tomas, and later still to the University of Santo Tomas, which offered the same courses as those given at the European Universities, but again denied to the Filipinos. Such was the racial intolerance and bigotry preached by the Church.

By the 'Plenipotentiary Credentials' and self proclaimed 'Divine Powers' of public prosecutor, his Most Holy Imminence, the Pope, grants to Spain all the new lands discovered and to be discovered west of a line, dictated to him by the 'Holy Ghost,' drawn one hundred leagues west of the Azores and Cape Verde Islands, for a promise to share the wealth.

But Portugal angrily protests and makes threats, basing its protests and claims not upon the geographical 'Certain knowledge' of the 'Holy Ghost,' but upon an assortment of human discoveries in world geography, which demonstrate such a line to be impossible, as there are about ten degrees of longitude difference between the two groups of islands. ~From Bible Theology and Modern Truth by Joseph Wheelless.

So the two rival powers, by the Treaty of Tordesillas, amended the 'Inspired' but impossible geography of the 'Holy Ghost,' and establish the 'Line of Demarcation,' at 370 leagues west of the Cape Verde Islands, a line corresponding to the 50th degree of longitude west of Greenwich, and striking the mainland of South America across the mouth of the Amazon River; thus making Brazil, Portuguese, while the remaining half of the continent, west of 'The Line' became Spanish, and Portugal and Spain are given free license by the Pope to enslave, in the name of Jesus Christ, their Lord, and to pilfer from all non-Christian countries.

AD 1499-End of the World: The Taborites of Bohemia predict that Christ will return to earth in February 1420. But once again, believers in the prophecy waited as the highly anticipated month came and went and nothing happened. But the anticlimax doesn't deter the devout Taborites of Bohemia, and they soon announce that Christ actually had returned, though he had decided to remain hidden. Bolstered by this conviction, they launched into thirty-two years of civil war against those who denied their claims.

The Christian ministry is in its glory when it proclaims the fulfillment of Prophecies in their Bible brazenly diverting their followers from the truth, "An ancient version of one book has an extra phrase. Another appears to have been vised to retroactively insert a prophecy after the events happened." ~Bible Project, Hebrew University in Jerusalem.

In 1499 the astrologer Johann Stöfler predicts that catastrophe would rain down on Europe in February 1524.

In 1499 the astrologer Johann Stöfler predicts that a catastrophe will rain down on Europe in February 1524, and as 1524 approaches, mass hysteria engulfs Europe. Anticipating that the catastrophe will take the form of a giant devastating flood, many people build boats or move to higher ground.

The philosopher Niccolo Machiavelli responds to the ridiculous warning by sardonically urging the women of Florence to run away to the hills and to live with the hermits.

Elena de Cespedes, a Spanish woman lived as a man and married a woman, upon being discovered she is immolated [killed].

The Jews are stigmatized, "Jewish usurers bleed the poor to death and grow fat on their substance, and I who live on alms, who feed on the bread of the poor, shall I then be mute before outraged charity? Dogs bark to protect those who feed them, and I, who am feed by the poor, shall I see them robbed of what belongs to them and keep silent?" ~Bernardo of Feltre, 15th century Italian Catholic priest, quoted by E. Flomoy, Le Bienheureux Bernardin the Feltre.

AD 1501- Burning of books is against the authority of the Church. So ordered by Papal Bull Erasmus: "Enchiridion Militis Christiani."

Pope Alexander VI and his son, Bishop Cesare Borgia, begin a systematic destruction of the Great Roman families in order to acquire their lands using assassination to achieve their ends. Bishop Cesare Borgia is a vindictive commander in the Vatican army, and many of the families believe that Pope Alexander VI used an ancient family poison to dispose of his other adversaries.

AD 1502- The German peasantry rise up in the southwest demanding that corrupt priests be driven out, deeming that life under the old 'Divine Law' where men are equal must be restored, but troops put down the rebellion, which will rise again in 1517, and even larger.

The Church has long been involved in politics if it benefits the Church. The Catholic King Ferdinand, 1479-1516, of Spain, forms an alliance with King Louis XII, 1498-1515, of France to expel the King Federigo of Naples, Italy. The Spanish-French army then marches into Rome and Pope Alexander VI declares King Federigo deposed, thereby investing Kings Ferdinand and King Louis with the Kingdom. The French take Capua and the Spanish Taranto. France and Spain will eventually go to war over the spoils.

What does Scripture say of bloodshed?

✠ "The blood-shedder must not die." ~Genesis 4:15.

✠ But also, "Killing commanded." ~Exodus 32:27.

✠ "Killing forbidden." ~Exodus 20:13.

✠ "The blood-shedder must die." ~Genesis 9:5-6.

Christian leaders can quote what suits their situation and still be correct as Scripture does not curtail them from murdering thousands of innocents.

AD 1503- Pope Alexander, and his son, Bishop Cesare Borgia, are believed to be victims of poisoning intended for a Cardinal who was their host at dinner; the poison being mistakenly given to themselves. Cesare survives, but his father, the Pope dies.

Upon the death of Pope Alexander VI [of the Borgia family]; Election of Giuliano della Rovere as Pope Julius II. Leonardo da Vinci paints the famous Mona Lisa. Pope Pius III, alias Francesco Todeschini, 1503-1503, a nephew of Pope Pius II is elected Pope and dies ten days later.

Leonard da Vince knew of the Cathars, and even refers to the Cathars' doctrine, Interrogatio Johannis, commonly known as "The Secret Supper," which is reflected by Da Vinci's Cathar convictions in the famous illustrative comparisons with his masterpiece, "This is the first time an artist depicts Jesus and His Disciples without their Halos ... The Cathars did not worship the Saints and considered Jesus a human, not the son of God."

Pope Julius II, alias Giuliano della Rovere, 1503-1513, nephew of Pope Sixtus IV, with the facilitation of lavish promises and numerous bribes is unanimously elected Pope. Pope, Pius III, nephew of Pope Pius II, serves less than one year, and is replaced by Giuliano, nephew of Pope Sixtus IV. Pope Pius III who serves only three weeks [22 September 1503 to 18 October 1503] may have been poisoned, which is quite common within the Vatican oligarchy.

As a Cardinal he fathers three daughters and is nicknamed "Il Terribile." The Pope orders the burning at the stake of a Monk who makes the prophecy that the Roman Catholic Church will begin to collapse.

Admiring visitors to the fabulous Sistine Chapel are seldom aware that the world's greatest work of art was commissioned by Pope Julius II who bought the Papacy with a small fortune and did not even pretend to be religious, much less a pious Christian. Pope Julius II continues the practice of nepotism, which is quite rampant in the Church, and Giuliano [Julius II], appointed Cardinal at age 28, in 1492, flees to France when Pope Alexander VI plots his assassination, but returns in 1503, upon the death of Pope Alexander VI, and is eventually appointed Pope after the brief tenure of Pope Pius III.

A notorious womanizer, he sired a number of bastards, and Pope Julius became so infected with syphilis that he couldn't even expose his foot in public to be kissed, as was the papal custom at the time. The Sistine Chapel thus stands as one of Rome's many monuments to the fact that the church, which owns and proudly displays it is, as Saint John foresaw, the 'Mother of Harlots.'

Pope Julius II, in his lust for power holds eight Bishoprics in four different countries, besides various abbeys, becoming Pope Julius II, and is named the warrior-diplomat-Pope.

"The Holy Roman Empire is neither Holy, nor Roman, nor an Empire." ~Voltaire, French philosopher.

It is a confused, corrupt conglomerate containing more than 2,000 immoral knights who owe allegiance to none. Pope Julius, the nephew, Pietro Riario, ends up committing suicide after a few years of scandalous extravagance as well as immoral and exotic vices [using, of course, Church moneys to support his vices]. Giuliano, is raised to the Cardinalate, preferring military service and hunting, and leads the Papal armies to new conquests of poor ignorant masses.

Julius is known to be notoriously immoral, and no one questions that he had acknowledged fathering three illegitimate daughters, gambled heavily, and swore and drank like any other soldier; however, Catholic historians refuse to admit the charge of one of the leading nobles of the time, that he was also addicted to other 'Unnatural' vices.

Pope Julius II is quite prone to prevarication, fathering three illegitimate daughters, is one of the peasant nephews, and a Franciscan friar, whom Pope Sixtus IV, considers one of the "Good Popes," is brought from the monastery to share his recent wealth in Rome [What happened to the edicts on celibacy in 1022 and 1123 against marriage and for celibacy?]

From 1484 onward he maintains a murderous and corrupt rivalry with the Cardinal Borgia for the Papacy, which he secured in 1503 by elegant promises to the Cardinal electors whom he repudiated after he received the tiara [Papal Crown].

Pope Julius raised funds by even worse simony than his predecessors had practiced and adorned Rome with magnificent edifices as a monument to his reign, and it is this artistic splendor, which is now used to overshadow the grave defects of his character as Pope.

He was a thoroughly corrupt secular monarch, "As revolting as the frank unscrupulousness of Pope Alexander VI," stated the lenient Bishop Creighton, continually trying to win back the Papal States, drinking heavily and cursing deeply, beside a lifetime of fighting. His rage and intemperance were notorious to the end. Roman Papal corruption continued for more than a century. ~The best biography is M. Brosch's, Papist Julius II, 1878, but a summary, with contemporary authorities will be found in McCabe's Crises in the History of the Papacy (1916) Ch XIII-from J. Michel de Nostradamus, 1503-1566, the great prophet of Jewish and Christian ancestry is born in Provence, France where Christianity is forced upon the family by the edict of September 26, 1501 that compels all Jews to convert to Christian within three months, or leave the Provence.

On October 30, 1503: Queen Isabella of Spain bans violence against Indians but few listen, and the Queen does nothing to enforce her ban on discrimination.

AD 1503-1566-Nostradamus, Michel de Nostredame, Jewish, French Prophet, Catherine de Medici's chosen Astrologer, predicts the End of the World in the year 3797 in his published work, "Centuries" published in 1555 [prophecies in Centuries appear in four-line rhyming verses called quatrains]. Many of his works were written in old Latin as well as French.

He studied medicine at Montpellier University. 1503-1566-Nostradamus: completes a total of 942 quatrains, organized into centuries [A quatrain being composed of a poem with 4 lines].

In his gloomy predictions of the coming of the "Third Anti-Christ," in July 1999, Nostradamus foresees the coming of the Millennium and the coming of the third Anti-Christ from the East [some believe this to be China].

In the 16th century the Spanish conquistadors first came into contact with vampire bats and documented the similarity between the feeding habits of the bats and those of their legendary vampire superstitions. ~John 6:54. cf. Vlad the Impaler [Dracula].

Some believe the following quatrain of Nostradamus to be referring to the Kennedy assassination:

"The ancient work will be accomplished,

And from the roof evil ruin will fall on the great man:

They will accuse an innocent, being dead, of the deed:

The guilty one is hidden in the misty copse [clump of trees].” ~Century 6, Quatrain 37.

“The great man will be struck down in the day by a thunderbolt,

The evil deed predicted by the bearer of a petition:

According to the prediction another falls at night,

Conflict in Reims, London, and pestilence in Tuscany.” ~Century 1, Quatrain 27.

Some believe the following quatrain to be referring to Hitler:

“From the deepest part of Western Europe

Into a cage of iron will the great one be drawn,

When the child of Germany observes nothing.

(A young child will be born to poor people

Who will by his speech seduce a great multitude,

His reputation will increase in the Kingdom of the East.” ~Century 3, Quatrain 35.

“Beasts ferocious with hunger will cross the rivers,

The greater part of the battlefield will be against Hister.” ~Century 2, Quatrain 24.

AD 1504- 1575-Bullinger, Heinrich: Swiss theologian and religious reformer, born in Bremgarten, in the canton [a territorial division in Switzerland] of Aargau, educated at the University of Cologne. Acquainted with the writings of Martin Luther and becomes a Protestant before he accepts his degree in 1520. He marries a former nun, Anna Adlischwyler, in 1529, who bears him 11 children.

He succeeds his father as pastor at Bremgarten. In a compelling sermon, he encourages his congregation to burn the images in the church and to pass reform laws. He succeeds Huldreich Zwingli as head of the Swiss Reformed congregation in Zürich in 1531.

Heinrich uses his influence to exert great pressure on the Church of England by giving shelter and counsel to the English Protestants exiled during the reign of Queen Mary I, of England. In the controversy over the Eucharist and the Anabaptists, Bullinger distinguishes himself by his veracity and moderation giving refuge to many German theologians. He shared in the First Helvetic Confession, 1536, and is the sole author of the “Second Helvetic Confession,” 1566.

AD 1505- Pope Julius II issues a bull declaring Papal elections nullified by simony, which effectively nullifies his own election, thereby making him an anti-Pope.

Early 16th century Dominicans, in Bern, adorned a statue of the Virgin Mary with drops of varnish, to show that the statue wept and thus possessed miraculous powers; they even spoke through her lips, inserting a speaking tube to utter supposedly Divine prophecies and commands.

AD 1506- Francis Xavier, 1506-1552, as a knight of Spanish-Rome evangelizes India and Japan. The anti-Pope Julius II, in full protective armor leads his troops to conquer Perugia and Bologna.

“[Saint Xavier] Set up as a kind of tribunal, the Inquisition, which was headed up by a judge dispatched from Portugal... The palace in which these Holy Terrorists ensconced themselves was known locally as 'Vodlem Gor,' the 'Big House.' It became a symbol of fear. Children were flogged and slowly dismembered in front of their parents, whose eyelids had been sliced off to make sure they missed nothing. Extremities were amputated carefully, so that a person could remain conscious even when all that remained was a torso and head. Male genitals were removed and burned in front of wives, breasts hacked off and vaginas penetrated by swords while husbands were forced to watch.” ~The Empire of the Soul by Paul William Roberts, Harper Collins, 1999.

Would mankind kill for something if he did not believe in it? The answer is an unequivocal, ‘Yes!’ Claiming to believe in God, terrorists, throughout history have answered this question, be they Christian radicals, Islamic Fundamentalists, or any other religious sect. “Faith is powerful enough to immunize people against all appeals to pity, to forgiveness, to decent human feelings. It even immunizes them against fear, if they honestly believe that a martyr's death will send them straight to Heaven. What a weapon! Religious faith deserves a chapter to itself in the annals of war technology, on an even footing with the AD 1509- 1564 John Calvin, Jean Cauvin, 1509-1564, is born in Noyon, Northern France. He will witness the excommunication of his father and brother for allegedly flirting with forbidden ideas; ideas banned by the Church. John Calvin, the first Fundamentalist, French reformer and theologian, advocates the Absolute Authority of the Bible [and not the Church]. He believes that the State must be subject to the Church, and other Biblical doctrinal beliefs [one must remember that when the Church reigned supreme over the State, those years were known as the Dark Ages].

John Chauvin, who afterwards would become famous as John Calvin, the founder of the Presbyterian Church, forged five restraints for the minds of his fellow man. These fetters he called points: predestination, particular redemption, total depravity, irresistible grace, and the perseverance of the saints. About the neck of each follower he put a collar bristling with these live iron points, which the presence of all these points on the collar is still the test of orthodoxy in the church he founded.

John Calvin, in the flush of his youth, is elected to the office of preacher in Geneva, where he at once, in union with Farel, draws up a condensed statement of the Presbyterian Doctrine, and all the citizens of Geneva, on pain of banishment, are compelled to take an oath that they believed the statement.

Of this proceeding Calvin very innocently remarked that it produced great satisfaction. A man named Caroli had the audacity to dispute Calvin's doctrines, and for this outrage he was banished.

Such mundane issues as to whether the sacramental bread should be leavened or unleavened occupied the mind of Calvin who drew up laws regulating the cut of the citizens' clothes, and prescribing their diet, and all those whose garments were not in the Calvin fashion were refused the Holy Sacrament. Eventually, the people becoming tired of this petty theological tyranny and banished Calvin. In a few years, however, he was recalled and received with great enthusiasm.

After this he is supreme, and the will of Calvin becomes the law of Geneva. Famous for his work, “Institutes of the Christian Religion” at the age of 26 years of age. He refers to the Deity as “The Architect of the Universe.” John Calvin reluctantly admits he, “Saw an exact conformity between Popery and Paganism.” ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 12, 393.

Which further establishes that the early Christians not only borrowed or stole from the pagan faiths, but admitted such, although to this date, they do not advertise it. In a letter to his friend Henry Bullinger regarding a strong rebuttal issued by Martin Luther, who was known for his fiery temper, Calvin says, “I hear that Luther has at length published an atrocious invective, not so much against you as against us all. In these circumstances I can scarcely venture to ask for your silence; since it is unjust that the innocent should be thus attacked without having an opportunity to clear themselves; although it is at the same time difficult to decide whether that would be expedient.”

“But I hope you will remember in the first place how great a man Luther is, and in how many excellent endowments he excels; with what fortitude and constancy, with what dexterity and efficacious learning, he has hitherto applied himself, both to overthrow the Kingdom of Anti-Christ, and to spread the Doctrine of Salvation. It is a frequent saying with me that, if Luther should even call me a devil, my veneration for him is notwithstanding so great that I shall ever acknowledge him to be an illustrious servant of God, who, though he abounds in extraordinary virtues, yet labors under great imperfections. I wish he would endeavor to restrain the violence with which he boils over on all occasions; and that he would always direct the vehemence that is natural to him against the enemies of truth, and not brandish it also against the servants of the Lord. I should be glad if he took more pains in searching out his own defects. Flatterers have done him much harm, especially as he is by nature too much inclined to self-indulgence; but it is our duty, whilst we reprehend what is bad in him, to make due allowance for his excellent qualities.”

“I beg therefore of you and your colleagues, in the first place to consider that you have to deal with a distinguished servant of Christ, to whom we are all much indebted; and in the next, that all you will obtain by a conflict will be to afford sport to the ungodly, and a triumph over ourselves as well as over the gospel; for if we indulge in mutual abuse, they will be but too ready to believe both sides.”

Martin Luther was a great writer as well as great orator and in defending the Bible against the inconsistencies, vices, and moral laxities of the Catholic Church leaders it does not do the Church well to condemn him so harshly.

In Calvin's letter to the King of France, regarding his disagreement with the priesthood he writes, "...Look now to our adversaries, (I mean the priesthood, at whose beck and pleasure others ply their enmity against us,) and consider with me for a little by what zeal they are actuated. The true religion which is delivered in the Scriptures, and which all ought to hold, they readily permit both themselves and others to be ignorant of, to neglect and despise; and they deem it of little moment what each man believes concerning God and Christ, or disbelieves, provided he submits to the judgment of the Church with what they call implicit faith; nor are they greatly concerned though they should see the glory of God dishonored by open blasphemies, provided not a finger is raised against the primacy of the Apostolic See and the authority of Holy Mother Church." ~John Calvin.

"Why, then, do they war for the mass, purgatory, pilgrimage, and similar follies, with such fierceness and acerbity, that though they cannot prove one of them from the word of God, they deny godliness can be safe without faith in these things - faith drawn out, if I may so express it, to its utmost stretch? Why? Just because their belly is their God, and their kitchen their religion; and they believe, that if these were away they would not only not be Christians, but not even men..."

"In demanding miracles from us, they act dishonestly; for we have not coined some new Gospel, but retain the very one the truth of which is confirmed by all the miracles which Christ and the apostles ever wrought. But they have a peculiarity that we have not - they can confirm their faith by constant miracles down to the present day! Nay rather, they allege miracles which might produce wavering in minds otherwise well disposed; they are so frivolous and ridiculous, so vain and false..."

The Church was constantly creating new documents [and it still is, but now its more to protect its pedophile priests] or statements asserting whatever it felt prudent at the time to defend its actions against all manner of beings. To this resolve the Church was quite often found guilty of crimes that it would continue to deny, even against overwhelming evidence. Followers are not supposed to contradict the Church.

Personally, I feel that Calvin addresses only some of the sins of the Church in that the Church has not always acted honestly, faithfully truthfully, nor religiously, therefore how could one let the Church rule supreme if she continually changes the rules for the benefit of the Church and not the principles of God and his creations?

A driven man who is sometimes difficult to understand, Calvin, nevertheless, had the good intentions of furthering the word of God in all that he endeavored to produce. A tireless man, he wrote many letters and treatises on the Bible. It would not do to have the common people understand that a man can deny the Bible, refuse to look at the cross, contend that Christ is only a man, and yet die as calmly as Calvin did after he had murdered Servetus, although still a nominal Catholic, Servetus described his heretical opposition to the concept of the Trinity and requested permission to visit the theocratic city of Geneva, Switzerland.

Miguel Serveto, 1511-53, Spanish physician and theologian, was executed for his beliefs by the Calvinist government of Geneva. He was arrested while attending church in Geneva, convicted of heresy and blasphemy against Christianity, and burned at the stake on October 27, 1553 for among other things, in his edition of Ptolemy's "Geography," he spoke of the Holy Land as not a "Land flowing with milk and honey," but mainly barren and inhospitable; Calvin declared that such language "Necessarily inculpated Moses, and grievously outraged the Holy Ghost!" ~Is It God's Word? By Joseph Wheless.

"While he did not directly recommend the use of the death penalty for blasphemy, he defended its use among the Jews." ~From The Protestant Inquisition, Reformation Intolerance and Persecution, by Dave Armstrong.

The Catholic Church institutes slavery in America via Bartolome de Las Casas who is the Roman Catholic Bishop at Chiapas; Catholic Spain proposes that each Spanish settler to America should bring a certain number of slaves. This proposal marks the start of the infamous African/American slave trade.

AD 1510-1579-Bishop Francis David preaches against the Trinity. The dawn of the Trinity is founded upon the Church's inability to explain its version of Jesus being the Son of God.

This led to the Spirit of Jesus that further led to God the Father and the inability of the Church to convince its followers of God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Spirit. Millions of Orthodox Christians today do not believe in the Trinity, which is established within the Catholic Doctrines.

ANCIENT CHRISTIAN TEACHINGS

- ✠ The Church taught that the sins of a person could be transferred to an animal, even to a goat.
- ✠ The Church makes maternity an offence for which a sin offering have to be made.
- ✠ The Church taught that it was wicked to give birth to a boy, and twice as wicked to give birth to a girl.
- ✠ The Church taught that to make hair oil like that used by the priests was an offence punishable with death.
- ✠ The Church taught that the blood of a bird killed over running water to be regarded as medicine. ~About the Holy Bible By Robert G. Ingersoll, 1894.
- ✠ God punishes the evil and wicked by plaguing them with disease or illness. -Comte 1978: 124.
- ✠ These belief and others such as the touch of a royal person restoring the afflicted to health means that medicine did not have a practical base in the lay person's thinking. ~Rooke, 1984:36.

CATHOLIC MYTH OF EDUCATION

The myth that Christianity "Gave the world schools," is still repeated by many Catholic apologists, who consider themselves above the popular class, is, like similar claims in regard to slavery, philanthropy, purity, etc., the exact opposite of the historical facts as they are recorded in every manual of the history of education published since the middle of the last century.

Indeed, the Roman system of free education had been described repeatedly since the classical revival of the 15th century, and even in Christian circles every biography of Augustine of Hippo had described how he found free Pagan schools, primary and secondary, even in the smaller towns of Africa. In earlier civilizations a good deal of schooling had been provided for boys, and occasionally girls, of the middle class, as we find in Egyptian and Babylonian remains, but they all, including Greece, regarded the education of the workers, or poor, as superfluous.

Under the influence of the Stoic-Epicureans, long before Bishops had the least influence, the Roman Emperors created a system of schools, maintained by the municipalities, for all freeborn children.

By the 4th century the "Ladder of education," free to all, stretched, to all parts of the Empire, from the simple primary school, often in the open air, through secondary schools to a sort of university at Rome, and in a few other cities. ~See Laurie's Historical Survey of Pre-Christian Education, 1900.

These schools taught from textbooks, which contained Pagan literature, thought to be offensive and dangerous to the Church, and in cities such as Alexandria the Christians opened a few small schools. The Fathers were overwhelmingly opposed to education, in general, and expressed an open contempt for this profane knowledge. "After Jesus Christ," said Tertullian, "all curiosity is superfluous."

In the last century, a French priest, the Abbé Gaume, contending that the classics ought to be excluded from every Catholic college, quoted a long series of such sentiments from the works of the Fathers. ~Le VerRongeur des Sociétés Modernes, 1851.

Even the renowned Saint Augustine joined in the chorus, and the murder of Princess Hypatia and the closing of the great school at Alexandria, including the burning of the great library there, followed later by the closing of the schools at Athens by Justinian, are well-known facts. After the fall of the Empire it was economically impossible to maintain the vast system of schools and Christian writers give their readers the curious impression that it was just at this time that schools began to multiply. It is a commonplace of historical manuals that the Roman schools perished almost without trace, "With few exceptions they had disappeared by the 6th century." ~See Dr. W. Boyd, in his History of Western Education, 1921, pg. 100.

Dr. Boyd thinks that schools survived best in Christian Gaul [France], but Denk, who made a special study of schools in this region in his "Geschichte des Gallo-Frankischen Unterrichts," but the year 1892, shows that you could count them on your fingers. The Ostrogothic monarch, Theodoric and his daughter Amalasantha had made a noble effort to save civilization by restoring education, but the Popes intrigued with their enemies, ruined it. Pope Saint Gregory I, "The Great" rebuked a French Bishop for the 'horrible crime' of opening a school. ~See Ep. LIV, Migne Collection.

Instead of this the Chief Papal historian of this period, Mgr. Mann, quotes a work of Saint Pope Gregory, 590-604 C.E., supporting education, which the Benedictine editors themselves declare a forgery. The Roman workers, excluding slaves, all had free education, but in the impoverished new Europe, in which 90 to 95 per cent. were now serfs, almost none, apart from priests and monks, had education; and many priests could not read the Mass, while the bulk of the monks were illiterate and sensual idlers.

Here and there, at one period or another, a Bishop like Isidore of Seville gave his clergy some culture. Since most of the world was illiterate at the time the Church was imposing its sanctions upon those who were financially influential in the community and educated.

Here and there, an Abbot feebly illumined his district for a time. However, the much-vaunted zeal of the British and Irish monks in the 1st century, The Apostolic Age, of their Christian fervor, Prof. Boyd observes that, "In pre-Christian times education flourished in Ireland and other Catholic countries," so that the apostles of Christianity were compelled to adopt "The cultural interests and educational work of the Druids."

He would, of course, not question that this early Celtic zeal did much work for a time in Britain and France, but this work is often wrongly represented as a broad educational development. Little was taught except theology, and the pupils were nearly all, to some extent sons of the nobles [including the monks and clerics].

The work of Charlemagne, is now recognized as of very little significance. Stimulated during his first visit to Italy by the high culture of the anti-Papal Lombards, he ordered all his Bishops and Abbots to open schools for theological purposes. Few did, and the scheme was abandoned as soon as he died. Rome itself remained so backward that we have legal documents of the tenth century, which ladies of the highest noble family have signed with a mark because they could not write their names. ~Gregorovius, History of the City of Rome, III, 258.

The myth of the monks and classical literature has been exposed elsewhere, and just as, or even more, reckless is the Catholic boast, based upon the egregious work of Montalembert, of the libraries of the monks. On dubious evidence, they claim that there were monasteries in the later Middle Ages with 6,000 or 7,000 volumes.

We know that in the 13th century the library at Canterbury, presumably one of the best in England, had only 1,800, "Catholic Encyclopedia," whereas by the ninth century the Spanish Arabs had myriads of libraries of beautifully bound books, superbly housed, rising to the royal library of at least 400,000.

It is a matter of history that this school-movement, which is considered one of the glories of the Middle Ages, was at first very largely independent of the Church, and as broad in its curriculum as the state of learning permitted; and that the Church suppressed the free colleges.

The Church was instrumental in forcing the schools to eliminate the teaching of science, and turned most of the universities into the logical cockpits for crowds of monks and clerics. Filipinos are proud of their universities, yet seldom do they mention the creation of the institutes for the ruling elite and not the peasants. Jesuits on the other hand, gave a great impetus to education. Both sides concentrated on the religious issue, the Jesuit education in particular being a narrow and poisonous system for making sons of the wealthy and the nobles hate Protestantism. ~Cf. Luke 14:26, Revelation 2:6

The figures of illiteracy in the various countries of Europe at the beginning of the 19th century make a mockery of all educational claims for earlier dates. The French Revolution had directed Talleyrand to draft a fine scheme, which we have, of universal free education, and the idea was passed on to Switzerland, Spain, Italy, and incorporated into the American system.

"We are living next to an inferno that could burn everything, destroy religion and the sovereignty of the King as well as the very existence of the monarchy itself and the classes that compose it." ~1792, Charles IV's most notable minister, Floridablanca on the French Revolution.

Napoleon had here in part maintained the revolutionary ideal; but, after his fall, Catholic countries, and again the Pope's dominions were the worst, sank back into a lamentable condition, while Rationalists like Pestalozzi, Froebel, Robert Owen, and Bentham worked for universal education. In the Philippines the various religious Christian societies opened schools for the poor, yes, however, the colleges, again, were reserved for the aristocracy, or Spanish families. "Religion is what keeps the poor from murdering the rich." ~General Napoleon Bonaparte.

Thinkers do not reconcile with the teachings of the Church, thinkers are therefore to be censured, "Catholicism cannot be reconciled with naturalism or rationalism." ~Pope Lo XIII, Immortal Dei.

"One and all had emanated from the same source, and their varieties from the same false imaginations of our early ancestors." ~Robert Owen.

Rizal tells in his books of the discriminatory practices when he attended these privileged Christian schools. The demands of the humanitarians opened the eyes of all to the disgraceful situation, and a Quaker, Lancaster, supported by the Atheists Owen, Place, and Bentham, founded a system of undenominational schools; to which the Church of England, in its own interests, reacted by opening a large number of very primitive schools of its own for the children of the workers. But, the Bishops fiercely resisted for thirty years the grant of any national subsidy, and for forty further years thereafter, obstructed the demand for a national system. ~From Holman's English National Education, 1898.

At the beginning of the 19th century 90 per cent of the people were still illiterate in England, which fully discredits all pre-Reformation or post-Reformation claims. Fifty per cent were still illiterate when Parliament was permitted to make an annual grant of £20,000, and £70,000 for the royal stables, in 1833. The Bishops walked in procession from the House to the Palace to protest against the establishment of a national system, and their hostility was not broken until 1870.

The same fierce struggle against the clergy had to be waged in nearly every country before the modern system, which we now regard as indispensable to civilization, could be established.

VICARS OF CHRIST:

"The long line of Popes who were libertines before and sometimes after ascending the Throne of Peter suggests that celibacy was not honored by the rank and file of the clergy, either...A list of Popes who misbehaved would include, among others, Pope Benedict V, Pope Sergius III, Pope John X, Pope John XII, Pope Benedict VII, Pope Benedict IX, Pope Clement V, Pope Clement VI, Pope John XXIII, Pope Sixtus IV, Pope Pius II, Pope Innocent VIII, Pope Alexander VI, Pope Julius II, Pope Paul III, Pope Julius III, Pope Gregory XIII, Pope Gregory XV, Pope Urban VIII, Pope Innocent X, and Pope Alexander VII amongst others. When Popes had mistresses of fifteen years of age, were guilty of incest and sexual perversions of every sort, had innumerable children, and were murdered in the very act of adultery, there can be no doubt that celibacy among the clergy as a whole was more honored in the breach than in the observance." ~Encyclopedia of Education, 5 vols., 1912, issued by Columbia University. A Student's History of Education, by Pres. Graves, 1936. J. McCabe, Rationalists Encyclopedia.

Graft, Corruption, theft, nepotism, murder, simony, rape, lying, cheating, adultery, and falsification of numerous documents, all are overlooked when committed by the Pope or his henchmen. Was the denial of marriage via celibacy of the clergy being a last resort of punishment or a means to curb this misbehavior? Regardless, little has changed in almost two thousand years regarding the crimes of the Church with continuous concealment of wrongs perpetrated against the public as well as Catholics.

ASTROLOGY

A number of Catholic Popes were intimately familiar with astrology: Sixtus IV was the first Pope to draw and interpret a horoscope, Pope Julius II chose his coronation date astrologically, and Pope Leo X and Pope Paul III relied heavily on astrologers for advice. Astrology was first for kings and courtiers. By the fourteenth century popes, bishops, and all the Courts of Europe all had their official astrologers.

The first popular horoscopes for the masses were published in 1493 as an almanac, the "Kalendar and Compost of Shepards." Newspaper daily horoscopes were created 70 years ago for the express purpose of selling newspapers: In 1930, the London "Sunday Express," published an astrological article on the birth of Princess Margaret.

"In the Old Catholic phrase, "Why be Holier than the Pope?" "Catholic Christianity begun with the Satanic alliance between the barbaric, concubine-sired Emperor Constantine and Pope Sylvester, Bishop of Rome. Constantine had by then already murdered Crispus, his son by his first wife, in 326 CE, drowned his second wife in the bath, killed his eleven-year-old nephew, and then his brother-in-law. Both benefited enormously from this 'Unholy Alliance' between 'Altar and Throne,' the power of the Pulpit aligning with the terror of the 'Sword,' a formidable foe that crushed all opposition." ~From Peter de Rosa's, Vicars of Christ: The Dark Side of the Papacy.

The public response was enormous, leading to a commission for astrologer R.H. Naylor to write a series. Circulation soared and newspapers in England, France, Germany, and America began publishing columns of astrological predictions. Benjamin Franklin was a dedicated astrologer, publishing a series of almanacs under the pseudonym "Richard Saunders."

The Christmas "Star of Bethlehem" is likely to have been a conjunction of the planets Venus and Jupiter in 2 AD. The magi, which means astrologer in Arabic, supposedly pursued this alignment across the sky toward Bethlehem. In Franklin's almanac for 1732 he predicts the death of his friend, Titan Leeds: "He dies by my calculation made at his request on October 17, 1733 at 3:29 PM at the conjunction of the Sun and Mercury." Whether Leeds obliged is unknown.

During World War II, Winston Churchill and the British High Command employed Louis De Wohl as a one-man astrological agency, giving him a commission with the rank of Captain. Throughout WWII De Wohl attempted to advise the High Command on the moves Hitler might make according to astrological interpretation, based on the rumor that Hitler was using Swiss astrologer, K. E. Kraft to help him plot his military strategy. ~from the works of Barbara Scherner. astrologyalive.com

VATICAN BANKING CONSPIRACIES

Catholic Conspiracy Theory: At one time the Popes were the owners of three major banks in the United States of America located in New York, Chicago, and San Francisco. In New York, St. Peter's banker Michael Sindona, ran the Franklin National Bank as a huge gambling device and money laundry.

The bank eventually collapses in 1974 and was taken over by a group of European bankers with the Vatican Bank losing its controlling interest. Sindona was caught doing improper banking practices and sent to an American prison for fraudulent banking. Later, he was extradited to Italy on more charges.

He began revealing names and talking too much.

It is alleged that Pope Paul VI silenced Sindona in an Italian jail [had him murdered with a poisoned cup of coffee]. ~See: St. Peter's Banker by Luigi Di Fonzo.

A similar method was used to murder Chicago's first black Mayor, Harold Washington, 1987 and the Mayor is replaced with the Vatican's "Man of Trust," Richie Daley, son of late Richard J. Daley who had been mayor for some 21 years.

Harold when re-elected in 1987 said he was going to take over Commonwealth Edison, the local electric monopoly whose primary ownership is the Vatican, and runs it as a municipal electricity at a very cheap price to Chicago residents. That is one of several alleged motives to poison Harold Washington. Sindona and his confederates also operated, for the Pope, the Continental Bank of Chicago [about 1996, it merged with the Pope's Bank of America].

It is alleged that all the Catholic Churches of the Western Hemisphere ran their money through this bank, and in the 21st century, the lies and deception continue. The Archbishop of Chicago is also the Treasurer, for the Church [North America, Central America, and South America]. In the early 1980s, Continental Bank, through their holding company owed some 20 Billion Dollars to the Japanese [including their mafia, the Yakuza], who had put in Flight Capital [hot money].

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

Continental could not repay, and the Japanese in May of 1984, started a run on the bank and its holding company, Continental Illinois. The Result? A consortium of banks, headed by J.P. Morgan and Company, took over, with the Pope losing part but not all of his control.

The Morgan banks are the front for British Royalty and the Queen, who for over 100 prior years always had a director sitting to supervise Continental. Through Continental Bank, however, the Vatican continued to oversee Panama's General Noriega, and his joint secret business deals with George Herbert Walker Bush.

So, when the U.S. invaded Panama, 1989, Noriega naturally sought refuge in the Vatican papal office and branch of the Vatican Bank in Panama. The U.S. Military used psychological warfare, including super hard-rock music, to drive Noriega out. In his book entitled "In God's Name", David Yallop tells how Italian newspaper editors criticized the Pope for doing nothing about Continental Bank and the Vatican's links to the corrupt mafia and money laundering. Mr. Yallop documents how the previous Pontiff, Pope John Paul I, opposing the mafia, was allegedly murdered after only 33 days in office.

The Justice Department's record-grabbers have descended on Continental Bank, seeking to destroy incriminating records that would put President Bush in the same jail cell with his CIA business partner, General Noriega. By the way, Panama, under General Noriega, was the only country in the Western Hemisphere run by a dark-skinned person. Noriega was popular with the bulk of those in Panama, who are people of color. It was only the small, white aristocracy; light skinned Spanish blood and foreigners, there that wanted him removed. They used the branches of worldwide banks there to skim-off loot from dope and gun running.

Noriega was really just a small-time, semi-independent tyrant [his relatives were involved in drug smuggling and money laundering]. Helping supervise Continental Bank has been the Vatican's "Man of Trust" [trusted to keep their business secrets], Chicago Federal Appeals Judge Walter J. Cummings, Jr. [he died about 1999].

What does Scripture say about drugs and the deifying of drug addiction?

For many years Cummings was chief judge of that Court made up primarily of banker-judges. Judge Cummings steered cases on to his fellow banker-judges who do NOT disqualify themselves in cases involving their financial interests. Guess who wins in their crooked court? [Cummings is replaced as Chief Judge by Richard A. Posner]. ~See Chief Crook Enters Microsoft Mess.

"A tyrant must put on the appearance of uncommon devotion to religion. Subjects are less apprehensive of illegal treatment from a ruler whom they consider god-fearing and pious. On the other hand, they do less easily move against him, believing that he has the gods on his side." ~Aristotle, ancient philosopher.

For many years the major owners of Bank of America and their holding company, Bank America, are the Jesuits and the Vatican, and their long-time cronies, the Rothschilds. Like Continental Bank up to 1984, they owed tens of Billions of Dollars to the Japanese mafia, the Yakuza who own most of the other sizeable banks in California. In the late 1980s, Bank of America was faced with a run, so they have quietly given over most of the control to the Japanese Yakuza.

Although the Pope has lost much control over the three banks in America, the Pontiff continues as the major owner in nuclear power utility firms in the U.S., including Commonwealth Edison and Florida Power [Through a Dutch front for the Vatican, called Robeco].

Under the Atomic Energy Act, it is illegal for a foreign entity, such as the Vatican, to own nuclear facilities in America. Yet, the law is not enforced. ~from The Electric Scandal by Sherman Skolnick.

CHRISTIAN MARRIAGES AND DIVORCE

Marriage, divorce, and the Catholic Church: Prof. Westermarck's "History of Human Marriage," 1891, describes the early aspects of the Roman social order that is later transformed by the Christians. Under the Republic the Romans had an admirable ideal of marriage and the family existed, but this is corrupted in the decline of the Republic, and the corruption continues under the Empire until the new religion saves this social institution by making marriage a sacred entity.

After the fall of Rome, the Church alleges to have made marriage a Sacrament [which was not actually accomplished until 1,000 years later]. In the Roman Empire, a man, married or unmarried, had no obligation of chastity, and the manner of marriage, confarreatio, etc., placed a wife on the same scale as the slaves or children [chattel]. She could acquire no property, and the husband could have her put to death for various offenses.

Greek influences slowly change the Roman's legal perception and allowed less rigid forms of marriage to be permitted. This change led to an improvement in human rights freedoms. Lecky says, "... There is probably no period in which examples of conjugal heroism and fidelity appear more frequently than in this very age." ~History of European Morals, II, 303.

The Empress, Livia, is as puritanical as Queen Victoria, and the Emperor is sent into an austere exile for life his beloved daughter Julia for loose morals. ~ Sir S. Dill, Roman Society from Nero to Marcus Aurelius, 1904, and Roman Society in the Last Centuries of the Western Empire, 1899.

Saint Paul and Saint Augustine, regarded sexual intercourse in itself as repulsive and both spoke out against adultery, but it is only among the early Christians that they find acceptance and denounce it. Chrysostom says in one sermon that there are 100,000 Christians at Antioch, out of 500,000 people, but he doubts if 100 of them will escape Hell, and, Saints Jerome, Cyprian, Augustine, etc., concur. History has painted a persecuted Church, one in which its members suffered graciously for their Savior, but hidden in the recesses of this history, "The story of the iniquities with which Saint Chrysostom had to grapple... Is one of the saddest and most deplorable among the many sad and deplorable narratives, which deface the Ecclesiastical history of the 4th century. It exhibits the prevalence among Bishops and clergy of an almost inconceivable amount of greed, worldliness and disorder." ~ Farrar, Lives of the Fathers, Vol. II, 674.

Married people are considered weaklings who had to be indulged in this "Decorous sort of adultery," as Athenagoras calls it in his Apology (c. 33), Lecky quotes from the Fathers, from the 2nd to the 5th century, a list of similar sentiments.

Augustine would not refuse a Christian a concubine if his wife is childless, "De 'Bono Conjugali'" c. 15, and the first Synod of Toledo, permits a man, Canon 17, to have a concubine [a woman cohabitating without the benefit of marriage] instead of a wife. ~ Mansi's collection of Councils, III, 1001.

Divorce in the Church continues to be allowed on from four to six cases, and the Church fails to obtain control over marriage agreements. The few points on which the Roman Bishops persuade the Emperors to interfere with, legislatively, form, as says Muirhead, "A miserable chapter in the history of law." ~ Historical Introduction to the Private Law of Rome, 1899, p. 356.

"Conjugal morals returned to brutality," says Legouvé, of the Dark Ages, and in the 11th century the transforming Papacy began its fight to suppress divorce, enforce sacerdotal celibacy, and bring the marriages of the laity under control, relying principally on Scriptural forgeries to subjugate their Catholic following. ~ S. B. Kitchin's History of Divorce, 1912, Howard's History of Matrimonial Institutions, 2 vols., 1904, and Prof E. Fahrner's, Geschichte des Unauflöslichkeits Prinzip, 1903.

The vow of celibacy, for the cleric, is not taken until the ordination of the subdiaconate. The candidate is dressed in albs, stands facing the Bishop, at the entrance to the sanctuary, at which time he makes his solemn oath.

"All who have been twice married by human law, are sinners in the eyes of our Master." ~ Saint Justin

The discriminatory practice against women is evident in, "A wife must not depart from her husband. Or, if she should depart, she must remain unmarried." ~Saint Cyprian of Carthage, Testimonies, 250 A.D.

"Man enjoys the great advantage of having a God endorse the code he writes, and since man exercises a sovereign authority over women it is especially fortunate that this authority has been vested in him by the Supreme Being. For the Jews, Mohammedans and Christians among others, man is master by Divine Right; the fear of God will therefore repress any impulse towards revolt in the downtrodden female."

~Simone de Beauvoir, The Second Sex, 1949; see also I Corinthians 11:3-12, I Corinthians 14:34-36, I Peter 3:1-7, Ephesians 5:22-24, Colossians 3:18-19.

The early Church Father, Saint Cyprian of Carthage, who is regarded as a saint even by the Roman Catholic Church, and himself a Bishop, spoke about the authority of Bishops in the following manner, "Let each one give his opinion without judging any one and without separating from the communion of those who are not of his opinion; for none of us sets himself up for a Bishop of Bishops, nor compels his brethren to obey him by means of tyrannical terror, every Bishop having full liberty and complete power; as he cannot be judged by another, neither can he judge another. Let us all wait the judgment of our Lord Jesus Christ, Who alone has the power to appoint us to the government of His Church and to judge our conduct."

~Saint Cyprian, 250 C.E.

Catholic authorities invent the myth of "The Hot Blood of the Latins" to explain the state of conjugal morals in Italy, Spain, Portugal, France, and South America, while they boast of Irish chastity [which has been questioned]. ~Father J. McCabe

Protestantism failed to correct what Doctor Howard calls the shameful abuses, which disgrace the record of ecclesiastical judicature previous to the Council of Trent, and child-marriages continue. King Henry VIII, 1509-1547, himself married six times, lamenting "The terrible confusion of marriages in England" and the findings of a Royal Commission in the 18th century that at least a third of the marriages in the country were suspect.

For a predicament had developed in England in the 17th century which made the Church of England's stern guardianship of marriage as entertaining as the loose morals of Catholic countries made the claim of their Church. "Free Parsons," technically not under the Bishop, proliferated, many of them being in jail, could and did marry anybody who applied, without any conditions beyond the fee.

The "Free" incumbent of St. James's in the West End performed 40,000 marriages in twenty-seven years. A Parson [rector] in the Fleet Prison for debtors performed 36,000 in thirty-one years.

Adventurers brought young eloping heiresses, whores dragged drunken sailors who had just been paid their several years salaries in lump sum, etc.. The Parsons had spies on Fleet Street. ~From Bum's Fleet Registers, 1833, and J. C. Jeafferson's, Brides and Bridals, 1872.

It isn't until the 19th century that humanitarian Protestant England began to reform marriage and divorce, as in other Protestant countries, and to reduce the sufferings of women and children. The Church of Rome, with its law of indissoluble marriage, still dissolves it for the rich and famous [a double standard few can deny].

In 1924 Countess Marconi, nee Ms. O'Brien, had her marriage declared null from the first, which meant nineteen years earlier, because of lack of real consent. Lady Vanderbilt, married to the Duke of Marlborough, received a similar decree from the Church. ~See G. Seldes, The Catholic Crisis

The Church flouts civil law and the social interest by declaring a secret Catholic marriage valid, or a marriage with a non-Catholic without a priest's permission invalid at its discretion. ~From Father Joseph McCabe, Influence of the Church on Marriage and Divorce, 1916.

"You sniveling priest, you are imposing delusions upon society for your own aggrandizement."

~Voltaire, French philosopher, rationalist.

Can the Church and State ever have true separation or is intermediation permissible or necessary? Even the American Catholic of today cannot pretend that any adjustment is possible between the American and the Catholic position, due to the existence of clauses on marriage. The condemnation of these propositions is a declaration by the Church that marriage by civil contract only is Invalid.

It leaves no room to say that the Pope means that the clauses are for Catholics only. American law, like the law of every fully civilized country today, has the function of declaring when the marriage of Catholics, as well as other citizens of other religious sects, is valid or invalid. It strictly holds that a Catholic pair are validly married and would prosecute them for bigamy if they dared to marry again without divorce, if they go through the civil ceremony without going to church for what the church calls the sacrament.

The Church may say, from its perspective, the couple committed a sin, but it merely defies the civil laws of the land when it refuses to admit that "There can be true marriage for Christians on the strength of the civil contract only" or that "By natural law the bond of matrimony is not indissoluble and on various grounds the civil authority may grant a divorce."

Most European couples got married in June because they took their annual bath in May and were beginning to smell pretty ripe, reeking of odors by June, which is why brides would carry a bouquet of flowers, to conceal the body odors. Baths consisted of a large tub filled with hot water, and the man of the house had the privilege of the first bath, using nice clean water; then all the other sons and men, finally, the women and next to last, the children and last of all the babies, which by then, the same water, having been used over and over again, was so filthy one could actually lose someone in it. Hence, the saying, "Don't throw the baby out with the bath water."

The Catholic believes that those things, which are assigned to nature in its beginning belong to the law of nature, and the indissolubility of marriage is one of those things according to Matthew 19:4, 6, therefore it is of natural law, and man should not oppose himself to God. Yet man will oppose himself to God if he were to sunder, "What God hath joined together." ~See Saint Thomas Aquinas, Summa Theologica, 13th century.

"And it hath been said, Whosoever shall put away his wife, let him give her a bill of divorce. But I say to you, that whosoever shall put away his wife, excepting for the cause of fornication, maketh her to commit adultery: and he that shall marry her that is put away, committeth adultery." ~Matthew 5:31-32

"But to them that are married, not I but the Lord commandeth, that the wife depart not from her husband. And if she depart, that she remain unmarried, or be reconciled to her husband. And let not the husband put away his wife." ~1 Corinthians 7:10-11. cf. Deuteronomy 22:22, 22:24.

"A woman is bound by the law as long as her husband liveth; but if her husband die, she is at liberty: let her marry to whom she will; only in the Lord." ~1 Corinthians 7:39

"Every one that putteth away his wife, and marrieth another, committeth adultery: and he that marrieth her that is put away from her husband, committeth adultery." ~Luke 16:18, see also Matthew 19:3-9, Mark 10:2-12.

What the Catechism of the Catholic Church says on "Divorce:"

1614. "In his preaching Jesus unequivocally taught the original meaning of the union of man and woman as the Creator willed it from the beginning permission given by Moses to divorce one's wife was a concession to the hardness of hearts. [Cf. Matthew 19:8.] The matrimonial union of man and woman is indissoluble: God himself has determined it 'What therefore God has joined together, let no man put asunder.'" ~Matthew 19:6.

However, as the duly appointed self-proclaimed spokesperson of God on earth, the Pope can, through his appointees, grant a dissolution of marriage.

1650. "Today there are numerous Catholics in many countries who have recourse to civil divorce and contract new civil unions. In fidelity to the words of Jesus Christ - 'Whoever divorces his wife and marries another, commits adultery against her; and if she divorces her husband and marries another, she commits adultery.'" ~Mark 10:11-12; cf. Deuteronomy 22:22-24.

"The Church maintains that a new union cannot be recognized as valid, if the first marriage was. If the divorced are remarried civilly, they find themselves in a situation that objectively contravenes God's law. Consequently, they cannot receive Eucharistic communion as long as this situation persists. For the same reason, they cannot exercise certain ecclesial responsibilities. Reconciliation through the sacrament of Penance can be granted only to those who have repented for having violated the sign of the covenant and of fidelity to Christ, and who are committed to living in complete continence."

2383. "The separation of spouses while maintaining the marriage bond can be legitimate in certain cases provided for by canon law. [Cf. CIC, canon 1151-1155.] If civil divorce remains the only possible way of ensuring certain legal rights, the care of the children, or the protection of inheritance, it can be tolerated and does not constitute a moral offense."

2384. "Divorce is a grave offense against the natural law. It claims to break the contract, to which the spouses freely consented, to live with each other till death. Divorce does injury to the covenant of salvation, of which sacramental marriage is the sign. Contracting a new union, even if it is recognized by civil law, adds to the gravity of the rupture: the remarried spouse is then in a situation of public and permanent adultery: If a husband, separated from his wife, approaches another woman, he is an adulterer because he makes that woman commit adultery, and the woman who lives with him is an adulteress, because she has drawn another's husband to herself." ~Saint Basil, Moralia 73, 1: PG31, 849-852.

2385. "Divorce is immoral also because it introduces disorder into the family and into society. This disorder brings grave harm to the deserted spouse, to children traumatized by the separation of their parents and often torn between them, and because of its contagious effect which makes it truly a plague on society."

2386. "It can happen that one of the spouses is the innocent victim of a divorce decreed by civil law; this spouse therefore has not contravened the moral law. There is a considerable difference between a spouse who has sincerely tried to be faithful to the sacrament of marriage and is unjustly abandoned, and one who through his own grave fault destroys a canonically valid marriage." ~Cf. FC84.

2400. "Adultery, divorce, polygamy, and free union are grave offenses against the dignity of marriage." Unless, of course, you are a high standing member of the 'Noble class' of clergy, in which case they forgive each other for their immoral indiscretions.

THE CRUSADES

The expeditions of the Christian knights and soldiers for the delivery of Palestine, the "Holy Land," from the Muslims were called the "Crusades," "Campaigns of the Cross," because the soldiers marked themselves as soldiers of Jesus with a cross.

The concept, financially, proved so constructive to the Popes that they began to call for Crusades against the peaceful and wealthy Moslem cities in Spain, against bodies of heretics [Albigensians], and eventually, against any Christian monarchs who dared to defy the Papacy. This gross abuse closes when Pope Gregory IX demands a Crusade against the kingdom of Emperor Frederic II, against the very laws laid down by the Popes themselves, while Frederick II was absent on a Crusade. All because Frederick negotiated favorable terms for the Christians from the Sultan by peaceful terms instead of by an unnecessary war; the Pope wishing to augment the Vatican treasury.

The romanticized versions of the Crusades in Palestine are still found in school manuals and religious writers are heavily discredited by modern historical studies, which are based upon contemporary documents showing extreme favoritism towards the Roman Catholics. There is a general agreement that, while some soldiers were prompted by religious fervor, the primary impulses of the immense majority both of leaders and soldiers were love of fighting and richness of loot and prizes of war in the opulent East; that the Papacy and local Churches sought and gained an enormous accession of wealth and power by organizing the Crusades; and though hundreds of thousands of lives were sacrificed, many ended in complete futility.

"The Cambridge Mediaeval History," by no means an anti-clerical summary of modern scholarship, observes that genuine religious zeal was almost confined to the lower rank and file, while the leaders, including those heroes of the romanticized versions Godfrey of Bouillon and Raymond of Toulouse, were "Intent solely on their private interest, that of carving out principalities for themselves."

The Crusaders reached Palestine under a Norman, Godfrey of Bouillon, and Jerusalem fell to them. The "Carnage lasted for a week," at the hands of the Catholic warriors. There was a terrible massacre as witnessed by a Frenchman who said, "Under the portico of the Mosque the blood was knee-deep and reached the horse's bridles." ~Godfrey, who became King of Jerusalem.

Archer and Kingsford's lenient work, "The Crusades," Story of the Nations Series, 1894, says that, "Only of a few of the Crusaders can we predicate absolute purity of motive," pg. 446.

Other writers point out that the common soldiers themselves had only material motives. "Famine and pestilence at home drove men to emigrate hopefully to the Golden East," says Prof. E. Barker in the "Encyclopedia Britannica," under "Crusades," and even the most resolute American Catholic propagandist, Dr. Walsh, is entrusted with the corresponding article in the new "Encyclopedia Americana," admits that, "For the lower classes in the West life had become almost intolerable because of the oppression of the nobles, the frequent wars, and the almost (!) servile duties that feudalism enjoined."

Yet not one of those writers ever mentions the fact that Pope Urban II, who is usually described as summoning the First Crusade in a mood of pure religious fervor, whose own moral conduct in Italy was already corrupted, and lifestyle being so vile, that it shocked Christendom, openly appealed to the avarice of the knights and princes.

"The wealth of our enemies," Pope Urban said in his famous address to them, Migne, CLI, Col. 586, "will be yours, and you will despoil them of their treasures;" riches and glory and not Jesus was the Pope's chief appeal, and to secure the submission of the Greek Church to the Vatican. ~Cambridge Mediaeval History, vol. iv, 599. Rich plunder had already attracted the French knights to join the Spaniards in ravaging the Arab/Spanish cities, as a large portion had already been sent to Rome; nor do they tell how, as we read in the contemporary monk chronicler "Ordericus Vitalis, History Eccles.," when the news of the splendid abundance of loot secured by the first Crusaders reached Europe, the Duke of Aquitaine, the most licentious and irreligious prince in all of France, the Duke of Bavaria, and other nobles, with more than 100,000 men and "A plethora of girls," which one monk claims lightheartedly, "A great crowd of pilgrims," set out jubilantly to join them, and all but a few score perished on the way.

Historians agree that the traditional practice of blaming the Greek, Orthodox, Christians, who were alienated by the looting even of the followers of Peter the Hermit, for the failure is unjust, and that the horrendous losses were due primarily to the incompetence of the leaders. They were mighty in single combat, but ignorant in directing campaigns, many leaders being illiterate.

The Syrian Moslem princes from the beginning being tolerant and skeptical, like those of Spain, but in the 10th century Egypt and Palestine fell under the power of the poorly informed and fanatical Fatimite Caliphs, and pilgrims are now vilely treated; and this continued when, in 1073, Palestine passed to the Turks in their zeal for Islam. Peter the Hermit then began to inflame crowds and the horde which followed him and perished was a disorderly rabble known to be, "... The dregs and refuse of Christendom."

The Second Crusade, 1147, was of the same disposition, and was, although some claim that it numbered over a million strong, lacked leadership, and it was a complete failure.

The Third, 1189-92, against Saladin, who had captured Jerusalem, obtained generous terms from that prince, whose moral character and uprightness put to shame his licentious and decadent Christian counterparts. Romantic versions of this Crusade under Richard the Lion Heart are the most numerous of all. In sober history Richard, a Frenchman who knew hardly a word of English and actually despised the English [the film "Crusade" was in this and other respects ludicrously false], was "Asplendid savage" and "A man of brutal violence and callous indifference to honor." ~Dictionary of National Biography, the contemporary documents collected and translated in T. S. Archer's Third Crusade, 1888, throws a brash light upon the body of knights and men of this Crusade. The Fourth Crusade, 1203, was not needed and was just part of the power policy of Pope Innocent III; and to his intense anger the Crusaders appropriated, with every circumstance of barbarity, all the wealth of Christian Constantinople and then refused to go to Palestine.

The Fifth Crusade, was that of Emperor Frederic II, who received generous terms for treatment of the pilgrims by friendly negotiations and was Excommunicated by the Pope for not warring on the despicable infidels. Europe was now itself getting rich from these excursions.

The Sixth Crusade, under St. Louis, and the Seventh Crusade also failed.

By 1291, the Moslems had regained the whole of Palestine, and the Christian princes and knights refused to be roused. They were now comparatively rich, and there was now a widespread contempt of the clergy and the Pope. As some compensation for stripping the Crusades of their glamour, modern historians strain the facts to prove that they had beneficial consequences:

- † The first claim, that it was this cultural contact with a superior civilization, which roused Europe from the Dark Ages, seems a dubious compliment to Christendom, yet it must be corrected.
- † The awakening of Europe, which was due to friendly contact with the Arabs of Spain, not to brutal clashes, from which, indeed, few returned, in the East, had proceeded far into Southern France before the First Crusade was launched.
- † The second claim, that the passage and transport of the soldiers promoted the revival of trade in Italy, is just; and it is equally true to say that the need of the nobles to raise money for the venture enabled many towns to purchase charters of freedom, and bodies of serfs to win or buy their emancipation in order to battle for the good of their God.

It should be noted that it was one of the greatest benefits of the Crusades that the common people of Europe received, for a time, considerable relief from the brutality of the knights, princes, kings, and other so-called nobles. Against these services we must put the enrichment of the Papacy, the Bishoprics, and the Abbeys which hastened their mediaeval degradation; the debilitation of the Eastern Empire and eventual sacrifice of it to the Turks; the encouragement of a pious violence, which soon showed itself in the massacre of the Albigensians and the founding of the Inquisition; the growth of such abuses as the sale of indulgences on the plea that to pay to the Church the price of the voyage to Palestine earned as many indulgences as actual participation; and the general imposition, by Pope Innocent III, of tithes, which had hitherto been local and sporadic. ~The Cambridge Mediaeval History, Vols. IV and V, generally endorses these criticisms, though the writers of the various chapters are unequal in candor and often contradict each other. ~from: G. A. Campbell's The Crusaders, 1935, for the brutality of the Crusaders and greed of the Roman Catholic Church, see Harold Lamb's Iron Men and Saints, 1930, and The Flame of Islam, 1931 are vigorous but not consistently critical. A. Jamieson's Holy Wars in the Light of To-day, 1918, E. R. Pike's Story of the Crusades, 1927, and the works of J. McCabe.

An Apologist perspective on the Crusades: According to Italian Catholic writer Vittorio Messori, the Enlightenment cast a "Black legend" shadow on the Crusades, and used it as a weapon in its psychological war against the Roman Catholic Church.

† In an article in "Corriere Della Sera," Italy's most important newspaper, Messori wrote, "In order to complete the work of the Reformation, it was 18th century Europe that began the chain of 'Roman infamies' that have become dogma." "In connection with the Crusades, it was anti-Catholic propaganda that invented the name, just as it invented the term Middle Ages, chosen by 'enlightened' historiography to describe the parenthesis of darkness and fanaticism between the splendors of Antiquity and the Renaissance."

"It goes without saying that those who attacked Jerusalem 900 years ago would have been surprised had they been told that they were engaged in what eventually would be known as the 'first Crusade.' For them it was an itinerary, a 'pilgrimage,' a route, a passage. Those same 'armed pilgrims' would have been even more surprised had they foreseen the accusations to be leveled against them for trying to convert the 'infidels,' of securing commercial routes to the West, or of creating European 'Colonies' in the Middle East.."

"The dark invention of the 'Crusade' has ended by instilling a feeling of guilt upon the West, including among some members of the Church, who are ignorant of what really happened." ~Messori

† In addition, "In the East, the legend has turned against the entire West: we all pay...and will continue to pay, the consequences of the Islamic masses' desire for revenge, of their call for vengeance against the 'Great Satan,' which, by the way, is not just the United States, but the whole of Christianity, who were responsible for the 'Crusades.' After all, is it not Westerners themselves who insist on saying that it was a terrible, unforgivable aggression against the pious, devout and meek followers of the Koran?"

† Who was the victim and who was the aggressor? When Caliph Omar conquered Jerusalem in 638, the city had been Christianized for over three centuries. Soon after, the Prophet's disciples invaded and destroyed the glorious churches of Egypt, first, and then of North Africa, causing the extinction of Christianity in places that had had Bishops like Saint Augustine. Later it was the turn of Spain, Sicily and Greece, and the land that would eventually become Turkey, where the communities founded by Saint Paul himself were turned into ruins.

† In 1453, after seven centuries of siege, Constantinople, the second Rome, capitulated and became Islamic. The Islamic threat reached the Balkans but, miraculously, the onslaught was stopped and forced to turn back at Vienna's walls.

† If the Jerusalem massacre of 1099 is execrated, Mohammed II's action in Otranto, Italy, in 1480 must not be forgotten, a raw example of a bloody funeral procession of sufferings. Messori concluded by asking a number of questions: "At present, what Moslem country respects the civil rights and freedom of worship of any other than their own? Who is angered by the genocide of Armenians in the past, and of Sudanese Christians at present? According to the devotees of the Koran, is the world not divided between the 'Islamic territory' and the 'War territory'—all those areas that must be converted to Islam, whether they like it or not?" ~Zenit, "Crusades: Truth and Black

THE AFRICAN POPES [Well kept surreptitious moments in Catholic history]

The New Testament speaks of a “Simon from Cyrene,” which is located in Africa, carrying the cross of Jesus [Luke: 23:26]. Acts: 8 refers to a man from Ethiopia [Ethiopia is also referred to in 2 Kings 19:9, Isaiah 20:5, and Esther 1:1], who was converted to the new religion [Jesus], at the preaching of the Apostle Phillip. Many people are unaware that there existed a black Christianity and church-life in North Africa in the 2nd and 3rd centuries.

Ethiopia became a Christianized along with Nubia, south of Egypt, and with the establishment of Christianity, these Christian churches gave birth to black Christians, many of whom became martyred for their beliefs [Moses the Black, Cyril of Alexandria, John of Egypt, Perpetus, Benedict the Black, Felicity, and Saint Augustine along with his mother Saint Monica].

“Religion being the best of things, its corruptions are likely to be the worst” ~by Jonathan Swift

In 189 C.E., we have the first black Pope, Saint Victor I, followed by Saint Miltiades in 311 and Saint Gelasius in 492. The black Christians became divided over Doctrinal Issues, as elsewhere in the world, each region had its own interpretations, and since few could read, this further contributed to the division within the Catholic Church until the 13th century.

The African Christians are almost exterminated with the advent of Islam, which sweeps thru Africa in the 7th and 8th centuries, but, black African Christianity continued on, as evidenced from the slavery era which permeated the middle ages [And denied by the Church]. The Church does not like to make public their black Popes for fear of losing its moneyed White Converts.

Although it does not like to articulate the fact that its parishioners still harbor hatred, not only against the Jews, but also other minority groups [as well as Protestants]. ~From Cyprian Davis, History of Black Catholics in the United States, by Crossroads 1992.

“By this time the whole world should know that the real Bible has not yet been written, but is being written, and that it will never be finished until the race begins its downward march, or ceases to exist.”

~Joseph Lewis

THE TEN COMMANDMENTS: From Exodus Chapter 20, verses 1 to 17

1. And God spake all these words, saying,
2. I am the Lord thy God, which have brought thee out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage.
3. Thou shalt have no other gods before me.
4. Thou shalt not make unto thee any graven image, or any likeness of any thing that is in Heaven above, or that is in the earth beneath, or that is in the water under the earth:
5. Thou shalt not bow down thyself to them, nor serve them: for I the Lord thy God am a jealous God, visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation of them that hate me;
6. And shewing mercy unto thousands of them that love me, and keep my commandments.
7. Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain: for the Lord will not hold him guiltless that taketh his name in vain.
8. Remember the sabbath day, to keep it holy.
9. Six days shalt thou labour, and do all thy work:
10. But the seventh day is the sabbath of the Lord thy God: in it thou shalt not do any work, thou, nor thy son, nor thy daughter, thy manservant, nor thy maidservant, nor thy cattle, nor thy stranger that is within thy gates:
11. For in six days the Lord made Heaven and earth, the sea, and all that in them is, and rested the seventh day: wherefore the Lord blessed the sabbath day, and hallowed it.
12. Honor thy father and thy mother: that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee.
13. Thou shalt not kill [murder].

To Pope Pius XII, “I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians.” ~Mahatma Gandhi

14. Thou shalt not commit adultery.
15. Thou shalt not steal.
16. Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor.
17. Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's house, thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's wife, nor his manservant, nor his maidservant, nor his ox, nor his ass, nor any thing that is thy neighbor's.

And from these seventeen many religions have condensed to ten commandments. ~From The Ten Commandments by Joseph Lewis, an in depth documentary of the history of man's beliefs.

TEN COMMANDMENTS REVISED:

In the Old Testament, Leviticus 19:3-4, 11-13; Psalm 15:2-5, 24:4; Jeremiah 7:9; Hosea 4:2, Exodus 20:1-17, and Deuteronomy 5:6-21

1. Thou shalt have no other Gods before me. Under the ancient penalty of death, what other choice did one have? One was required to accept the God of one's father, which was different in each household. The instrument of fear is instigated to compel mankind to recognize different classes of men, some having more rights than others. Some having the power to subject others to death, therefore of having the power of life over the whole [The power of the priesthood].
2. Thou shalt not make unto thee any graven image, or any likeness of any thing that is in Heaven above, or that is in the earth beneath, or that is in the water under the earth. Thou shalt not bow down thyself to them, nor serve them, for I the Lord thy God am a jealous God, visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation of them that hate me. The God of the Israelis demands continual supplication and adulation and failing to receive this worship threatens mankind with vengeance and punishment? ~It is not until later centuries that the Catholic Church will soften this stand with a more forgiving God. Exodus, Chapter 34, verse 14: Deuteronomy, Chapter 4, verses 23 and 24: Deuteronomy, Chapter 6, verses 13 to 15.
3. The Biblical Hebrews were forbidden to draw pictures representing any living creature, including the sun, moon and the stars, even avoiding mention of the word "Image." "The 'God of Day,' or the 'God Sun,' was the great god of the ancient world, and has been worshipped by every people on the globe; we shall find that it prevailed in both continents—the old as well as the new world, and was personified in all the sacred allegories, and poetically described as suffering the destiny of mortals; everywhere we read of the birth, death, and Resurrection of the 'Sun;' he had his cradle and his tomb, whether called Adonis, Osiris, Hercules, Bacchus, Atys, Chrishna, Mithra, or Chirst!" ~See A History of Freethought in the Nineteenth Century, J.M. Robertson, vol. 1, 76.
4. Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain; for the Lord will not hold him guiltless that taketh his name in vain. This commandment shows the vindictiveness of the priests and magicians who pose as god's representatives as exemplified by the Hebrew deity. A child did not have a soul until after receiving his or her name and attacking their name was equivalent to attacking the person. In many cultures the person is given a name known to all that their true name be concealed and protected. Today, the Jews will give a new name to a person who is very ill, so that the Angel of Death will not be able to recognize the one he is seeking. See John 1:1.
5. Remember the Sabbath Day, to keep it Holy. Six days shalt thou labor, and do all thy work. The seventh day is the sabbath of the Lord thy God: in it thou shalt not do any work, thou, nor thy son, nor thy daughter, thy manservant, nor thy maidservant, nor thy cattle, nor thy stranger that is within thy gates, for in six days the Lord made Heaven and earth, the sea, and all that in them is, and rested the seventh day: wherefore the Lord blessed the Sabbath Day, and hallowed it. Saint Augustine: "Although the world has been made of some material, that very same material must have been made out of nothing."

Upon the fundamental question of the six days required by God to accomplish his task, Augustine further enlightens us, "There are three classes of numbers, the more than perfect, the perfect, and the less than perfect, according as the sum of them is greater than, equal to, or less than the original number. Six is the perfect number, wherefore we must not say that six is a perfect number because God finished all his work in six days, but God finished all of his work in six days because six is the perfect number."

Confusion as to the official Sabbath resulted in Istanbul, formerly Constantinople, observing Friday for the Mohammedans, Saturday for the Hebrews, Sunday for the Christians – and the entire city observed all three! The derivation of the word "Sabbath" is from the Babylonian "Shabattum," meaning the day of the full moon, and the designation of the seventh day by the Hebrews is attributed to the Babylonian. ~For violation of the Sabbath, read Nehemiah, Chapter 13, verses 18 to 22.

One's wife is not included among the persons particularly and specifically mentioned as those who should not labor on the Sabbath!: ~Read The Ten Commandments by Joseph Lewis.

6. Honor thy father and thy mother, that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth to thee. Parents had the right to put to death those children who were not obedient. ~Leviticus, Chapter 19, verse 32, Leviticus, Ephesians, Chapter 6, verses 1 to 3 Chapter 19, verse 3, Deuteronomy, Chapter 13, verses 6 to 11, Deuteronomy, Chapter 11, verses 26 to 29, Deuteronomy, Chapter 29, verses 18 to 29. Belief in the God of the parents is the most important duty of the child.
7. Thou shalt not murder. Derived from the fear of shedding blood [blood pollution] due to ancient tribal taboos. Blood is life and the spirit of the slain will return and seek revenge. ~See Numbers, Chapter 35:33 and 34, Genesis, Chapter 4:8 to 13, Deuteronomy, Chapter 12:23, Deuteronomy, Chapter 19, verses 1 to 10, Deuteronomy, Chapter 21, verses 1 to 9, Genesis, Chapter 9:5 and 6, Genesis, Chapter 37:21 and 22, Psalms 51, verse 14, Leviticus, Chapter 4:1 to 12, Samuel I, Chapter 14, verses 31 to 33, I Chronicles, Chapter 28, verses 2 and 3. The Lord encourages killing-Deuteronomy, Chapter 20, verses 10 to 18, Numbers, Chapter 31, verses 1 to 16, Numbers, Chapter 31, verses 17 and 19, Exodus, Chapter 21, verses 20 and 21. Killing is sanctioned if one cleanses/purifies oneself: Numbers, Chapter 19, verses 11 to 13. Christians generally interpret this commandment as Thou Shalt Not Kill [Murder] [which does not exclude animals].
8. Thou shalt not commit adultery. The forbidden Commandment, due to its sexual nature. For inadvertently omitting the word 'Not' from this Commandment, a London publisher by the name of Moore was imprisoned for two years. In the Bible's eleven hundred pages, the words "Adultery," "Fornication," "Whore" and "Whoredom" are mentioned more than 500 times, while the word "Morality" is not mentioned once! ~cf. Deuteronomy 22:22-24.

The Kamchadal bridegroom who finds his wife a virgin is greatly annoyed. He fears to be the first to have intercourse with her because of the taboo against spilling blood, and secures the services of the priest to perform the act. In Guatemala, and among the Arawak natives, it was customary for the high priest to spend the first night with the bride. The Samorin must not cohabit with his bride until the chief priest has done so, because the "First fruits" of her nuptials must be a Holy oblation to the God she worships.

The priest acts as the god's representative. The kings of Uganda and of Calicut demanded virginity of their brides, but at their own request had them deflowered by proxy, for fear of the taboo of spilling blood. The first communion, now performed as a rite of the Catholic Church, is said to be a survival of the deflowering of a maiden by the priests in early times. In the Talmud also, we read that the virgin, before going to her husband, must sleep with the Taphsar. It was not until 1642, in Catalonia, that the privilege of the first night as belonging to the clergy was abolished.

Until that time the priest either enjoyed the first embrace or passed over the peasants in bed as a symbol of his right. The Bishop of Amiens, France, was prevailed on to abolish the custom of demanding a large sum from the bridegroom for the privilege of having conjugal relations with his wife for the first three nights.

How can this Commandment be construed as a prohibition against adultery in the modern sense of the word, when the Children of Israel practiced polygamy at the time this Commandment was formulated? It was the doctrine of the Roman jurists that adultery is a crime when committed by the wife, and the wife only, because of the danger of introducing strange children to the husband. ~From The Ten Commandments by Joseph Lewis.

9. Thou shalt not steal. The following Biblical text has been used often, not only to license unrestricted lying but also to place the stamp of approval on dishonest acts: Romans, 3:7, "For if the truth of God has more abounded through my lie unto his glory, why yet am I also judged as a sinner?" No form of dishonesty equals the lucrative spoils purloined "In the name and for the glory of God." From mass genocides committed during the Crusades, along with the acquisitions of wealth, to the genocides perpetrated in the name of God in the 20th century. One of the most outrageous thefts committed today is in the name of religion in charging the poor, deluded and distressed for prayers.

"No man ought to make a living by religion. It is dishonest so to do. Religion is not an act that can be performed by proxy." ~Thomas Paine, whom tele-evangelists claim as a Founding Father, was a Christian.

10. Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor. “Universal justice will never be achieved until all the peoples of the earth are governed by the same laws and enjoy the same privileges.

It will not matter then under what flag a man lives, so long as he enjoys liberty, and justice is administered impartially to all... This Commandment survives today, not because of any ethical value that it might possess, for it has none, but because it is associated with a religious taboo. It is but another striking example of the utter lack of moral value when conduct is predicated upon racial and religious edicts.” ~Read The Ten Commandments by Joseph Lewis.

Why stop at one's neighbors? Lying against anyone is wrong. The enemy of one's country were not considered a neighbor. See Leviticus, 19, verses 16-18, and Leviticus 25:44-46, appears to approve being a false witness against one of your clan.

11. Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's house, nor covet thy neighbor's wife, nor his manservant, nor his maidservant, nor his ox, nor his ass, nor any thing that is thy neighbor's. The authoritative Catholic Encyclopedia states, “Even when indulged, covetousness is not a grievous sin,” despite the fact that the Catholic Church's arrangement of the Decalogue makes coveting the basis of two Commandments instead of one! Can one be held accountable for a crime of merely thinking of sin?

The Church claims one can sin in his or her heart. ~See Book 1 of Samuel, Chapter 18, Verse 9, to understand the evil significance of this commandment and Micah, Chapter 2, Verse 1-3 for further enlightenment.

"Am I therefore become your enemy because I tell you the truth?" ~Galatians 4:16.

After assimilating the attributes of their pagan contemporaries and ancestry the new Paganized-Christians now deem themselves a universal religion acceptable to all, for having the attributes of all other faiths how can one deny them as the concluding faith of all mankind? In the year 2000 the Grand Chair of Peter, Pope John II will declare Catholicism as the benefactor of God's will and that all faiths must bow to his [Papal] will.

AD 1511-1553-Servetus, Michael martyr of Free thought. A Spaniard, properly named Miguel Servete, who settled in Switzerland. He rejected the Trinity and was forced to flee. "If he comes, provided my authority prevails I will not suffer him to return home alive." ~John Calvin.

Servetus had taken up medicine in France, and was a physician, but when he was passing through Switzerland, the good Christian Protestant Calvin had him arrested and burned at the stake. "The fact cannot be dodged that Calvin delivered Servetus to the Inquisition, and then tried either by a lie or a subterfuge to cover his part in the matter... Upon arriving at Geneva on August 13, 1553, he was detected almost immediately... Through Calvin's instigation he was arrested and put in prison. Calvin... Hoped for his execution." ~Daniel-Rops.

For all their piety and forgiveness preached the Protestants will fare no worse than their Catholic brethren in persecuting those who do not agree with them and their interpretations of Scripture.

The synod of Pisa suspends Pope Julius II. The Pope retaliates by forming a Holy Roman League of Venice, Spain and King Henry VIII, Defender of the Faith, of England, 1509-1547, against the French. Erasmus is nominated professor of Greek at Cambridge.

The Catholic Church anathematizes insects. In the 16th century, standard religious suits are also commenced against rats, and judgments rendered.

Christian brutality spreads to North America, "With what right and what justice do you maintain these Indians in such cruel and horrible servitude? With what authority have you waged such detestable wars against these people, who were tame and peaceful on their lands? ... How can you keep them so oppressed and fatigued, without giving them food to eat or curing them of their illnesses, which they incur with excessive labor and from which they die, or shall I say, you kill them to extract and acquire gold every day?" ~Montesinos, in Santo Domingo, discrediting the Spanish conquest in 1511.

An epidemic of sexually transmitted diseases all across Europe in the 16th century culminates in efforts to control prostitution. Brothels are closed throughout Western and Central Europe during parts of the 16th century, and stricter punishment is now meted out to those engaged in the prolific trade.

"I hope that [Pope] Servetus will be condemned to death, but I should like him to be spared the worst part of the punishment, meaning the fire." ~Daniel-Rops in a letter to his friend Farel.

And the good Christian, Calvin, declares, "He showed the dumb stupidity of a beast... He went on bellowing... In the Spanish fashion: 'Misericordias!'" ~John Calvin.

"Servetus, in fact, was burned not so much for his heresies, as for personal offense he had several years before given to Calvin... Which seems to have exasperated the great reformer's temper, so as to make him resolve on what he afterwards executed... Thus, in the second period of the Reformation, those ominous symptoms, which had appeared in its earliest stage, disunion, virulence, bigotry, intolerance... Grew more inveterate and incurable." ~Henry Hallam, Protestant Historian.

"Melancthon, in a letter to Calvin and Bullinger, gave 'Thanks to the Son of God'... And called the burning 'A pious and memorable example to all posterity.' Bucer declared from his pulpit in Strasbourg that Servetus had deserved to be disemboweled and torn to pieces. Bullinger, generally humane, agreed that civil magistrates must punish blasphemy with death.” ~From The Protestant Inquisition, Reformation, Intolerance and Persecution, by Dave Armstrong.

“Many people have accused me of such ferocious cruelty that [they allege] I would like to kill again the man I have destroyed. Not only am I indifferent to their comments, but I rejoice in the fact that they spit in my face.” ~John Calvin, in a 1554 Treatise Against the Errors of Servetus, in which he tries to justify his cruel actions.

AD 1512-Fifth Lateran Council, called by Julius II, fails to reform the Church, which continues in its lascivious and diabolical ways. Continued by Pope Leo X the printing of books without prior Roman Catholic Church approval is forbidden [the Church is against Freedom of the Press, especially if it does not further the cause of the Church].

Immortality of the Soul is pronounced as dogma by the Roman Catholic Church's Fifth Lateran Council. Martin Luther becomes a Doctor of Divinity.

Anti-Pope Julius II's Holy Roman League army is severely defeated at Ravenna but the late arrival of the Spanish and Swiss army forces the French to quit Italy. Parma, Piacenza, and Reggio Emilia are added to the Spanish Papal State. Spain now effectively controls all of Italy.

A Papal Bull is issued officially declaring King Jean D'Albert of Navarre [of Spain] deposed and grants the territories to the first who should occupy them.

King Ferdinand, 1479-1516, of Spain and his son-in-law, King VIII, ally to recover the former English possession of Gascony in southern France while King Ferdinand claims Navarre for Spain. Historians [most likely French] say there is nothing of the priest about the Pope except the dress and name.

Nicholas Copernicus, 1473-1513, a Polish astronomer, and mathematician, proposes that the sun is the center of the solar system, and not the earth.

Copernicus also proposes the orbits of the planets are irregular. The Catholic Church believes that angles caused planetary motion and irregularity is against Scriptural Divine Order. The church will ban Copernicus' work for the next two hundred years.

Gypsies are first recorded in Sweden on 29 September. A company of about 30 families are led by a “Count Anthonius” who arrives in Stockholm, claiming that they came from “Little Egypt.”

The Gypsies are welcomed by the city and given lodging and money for their stay. A few years later, King Gustav Vasa, 1521-1560, suspects that the Roma are spies and orders that they be driven out of the country. Michelangelo completes his paintings of naked figures on the Sistine Ceiling and defies three Popes, refusing to clothe his subjects, which compels the Church to have Raphael finish the frescoes in the Stanza della Segnatura [School of Athens] next door to the Sistine.

AD 1513-1521- Death of Pope Julius II.

Pope Leo X alias Giovanni de Medici, 1513-1521, is a commander in the Papal army, and is elected Pope; some say without the use of simony. His objective is to make Spanish-Italy and his own Florence free from foreign domination and to advance his family influence outside Florence.

Pope Leo X, is remembered for his statement: “Let us enjoy the Papacy since God has given it to us.” He is not counted as one of the “Bad Popes,” however, Giovanni [another member of the infamous De Medici family] known to us as Pope Leo X, was a scholar and liberally supported poets and artists.

Martin Luther is summoned by Cardinal Cajetan to the Diet of Augsburg, and refuses to recant his blasphemous thoughts.

Pope Leo X excommunicates Martin Luther for defying the Church, and confers upon King Henry VIII the title “Defender of the Faith.”

Pope Leo X is reported to have said, “Quantas divitias nobis dedit haec de Christo, fabula!” [What a lot of wealth this fable about Christ has brought us!]. He delighted in the corporeal things of sense, and to his contemporaries he appeared as one of the most magnificent of Popes. According to one unpublished report he was poisoned; according to another he contracted a loathsome social disease, a disease with which every “Class, married or unmarried, clergy or laity,” was then said to have been infected. ~J.W. Draper, History of the Intellectual Development of Europe, vol. ii. 232.

He was known as a vicious and unscrupulous man, and, in view of the position of the Church on the eve of the Reformation, one of the most scandalous Popes, “An incurable malady, exile, imprisonment, enemies, a conspiracy of cardinals, wars, lastly the loss of all his nearest relations and friends darkened the joyous days of the Pope.” ~Gregorovius.

The Pope's trusted friend and biographer, Bishop Giovio, discusses at length in ' Vita Leonis X, ' lib. IV, pp. 96-9, in the 1551 edition, the charge that Pope Leo was addicted to sodomy, and lamely concludes that it is difficult to be sure on such secret matters, and that in any case the Pope was no worse than any other Italian princes.

Son of Lorenzo de Medici, and profanely destined by that prince for a clerical career, he became a cleric at the age of seven and a Cardinal at the age of fourteen. Abnormally fat and unhealthy, as well as gravely ill with fistula [ulcers], in the Vatican election chamber he bribed his way to the Papal chair through friends, and settled down to a life of vulgar display of ostentatious lifestyle and sensuous immoral depravity and enjoyment.

His health compelled him to be temperate at the table, but he gathered about him a crowd of unscrupulous adventurers and professional buffoons who also enjoyed sitting at indecent comedies performed in the Vatican, some of which were composed by his favorite companion, Cardinal Bibiena, one of the most immoral men of the Papal Court.

Catholics boast that he was at least chaste, unlike his predecessors and successors, but they are somewhat untruthful regarding the evidence. As a Pope, he later 'peddled' Cardinalities, created new offices [which he sold to the highest bidders], and took the proceeds of the sale of indulgences to pay for his lavish excesses which almost bankrupted the Vatican. Guicciardini, the greatest historian of the Middle Ages and a Catholic, states that Pope Leo was not accused of vice before his election, but "He was afterwards found to be excessively devoted to pleasures, which cannot be called decent." ~ Storia d'Italia, Lib. XVI, C. V, p. 254, 1832 edition.

In diplomacy he was admittedly the most dishonest prince in Europe, and he used the most corrupt means of raising money [using and abusing Indulgences] at the very time when Martin Luther's revolt began.

He did nothing for literature and little for art as claimed by the Church, and as Pastor admits, yet he spent excessive amounts on expensive jewels, banquets, and his courtly favorites, at least 5,000,000 ducats, equal to £10,000,000 in modern money, in eight years, and left behind a Papal debt of nearly £1,000,000.

Most Encyclopedia articles on Pope Leo X, Giovanni de' Medici, are based upon Roscoe's "Life and Pontificate of Leo X," 4 Vols., 1805, which is wholly unreliable, however, Dr. Pastor, the chief modern Catholic historian, admits all the above facts, except the charge of sodomy. — See History of the Popes, Vol. VIII, and also H. M. Vaughan, The Medici Popes, 1908, and McCabe's Crises, 1916.

AD 1513-1521-The Roman Catholic Church, is like a priestly brotherhood, whether it cares to think of itself or not as an occult brotherhood of mystery similar to other fraternal organizations, remains to be seen. Its exclusive membership is limited to those who must pass certain obstacles, keep the secrets of this brotherhood, and not disclose they mysteries that could be of detriment to the Church or its closely held members of this sacred brotherhood.

In 1515, by Papal Bull, under Pope Leo X, the Church relaxes its sanctions on banned books to include books only of theological or religious nature. Excommunication is the punishment for anyone reading or having in his or her possession any book on the Forbidden Books Index. Printers and publishers are required to maintain a list of all books maintained in their stock. Permits are required to procure books. Bishops and Inquisitors are mandated to inspect and supervise printing establishments and bookstores.

Reading any banned book is declared a grievous sin and to be dealt with accordingly. These rules will remain in effect until January 25, 1897, when they will be superceded by a new list of banned literature by Pope Leo XIV. It is most likely that about this time the use of Altar Cards came into use to assist the clergy in the sermon [Tabella Secretarum]. Occasionally a leak or a disclosure of fact not available to its lay initiates becomes public, then the order is obligated to obfuscate this detail and circumambulate for self-preservation.

During the reign of Pope Leo X, the Pope himself announces, "It has served us well, this myth of Christ." This plain but simple Truth has been buried for centuries. The Church has had access to many documents which it secrets. The Church has had access to many documents that it denied. The Church, in this modern era of computers is being caught in its own prevarications through the Information Revolution. Will the Church attempt to bring forth more exposés in the 21st century?

Balboa, the famous explorer, while exploring what is now Panama describes homosexual activities among the natives he witnessed as "Abominable," and threw forty of the offenders to his large Mastiff dogs.

AD 1514- Pope Leo X, 1513-1521, renews the sale of indulgence for the reconstruction of Saint Peter's.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~ Mahatma Gandhi

April 16 Cardinal Thomas Bakocz publishes a Papal Bull calling for a Hungarian Crusade against the Turks. The Hungarian King who has already concluded peace with the Turks and the Hungarian lords sees no reason for the Pope to encourage the surfs to abandon their duties in the fields.

On May 23 the King orders the Crusade suspended and orders the surfs to return to the land. A peasant army of one hundred thousand refuses to disband and swarms across the country slaughtering the Lords. Janos Zapolya leads an army that crushes the peasant army leaving more than seventy thousand dead as a result of the Papal error.

King Ferdinand, 1479-1516, of Spain forbids the publication of any Papal Bull or rescript in Spain without preliminary examination by his Royal Council and without Royal approval. This order remains in force permanently and is enforced with the utmost vigor.

Selim I and his Turks defeats the Persians [Iran], and in 1515 conquers Armenia and Kurdistan.

Justification for stealing non-Christianized foreign lands: It is worthwhile to review a few paragraphs of the incredible document, which was spoken to the non-English, non-Spanish speaking Native Americans, which, in its modern translation, is easier to comprehend, "I require you to... Recognize the Church as the lady and mistress of the entire world; and the Supreme Pontiff, known as the Pope, in Her name; and the King and Queen, our Lords in her stead, masters, Lords and Rulers of these islands and firmland, by virtue of the given Word; and you will consent and give way to what the religious fathers shall declare and preach... If you do not do this... With God's help, I shall move forcefully against you and wage war in all areas and forms... And I will take your persons and your women and children and I shall make slaves of them, and, as such, I shall sell and dispose of them as His Highness commands, and I shall take your goods, as well, and inflict on you all the ills and harm that I can, like vassals who disobey or refuse to receive their Lord... The deaths and wounds... Will be your fault, and not that of his Highness, nor mine, nor of these gentlemen who came here with me; and what I say and require I ask that the present legal clerk give me as signed testament, and beg those present to be witnesses." ~First used in 1514 to justify stealing the lands of non-Christian. Quoted in Twisted Roots: A Look at the Historical and Cultural Influences that Shaped Latin America Into the Most Impoverished, Unstable, and Backward Region of the Western World by Carlos Alberto Montaner.

AD 1514-1564-Vesalius, Andraeas, famous Flemish anatomist. One of the chief founders of the field of science in Europe. There are no recorded statements of his about religion as he incurred the most bitter hostility of the clergy all his life and he died carrying out a sentence of the Spanish Inquisition, which sought eliminate him with extreme prejudice, to burn him at the stake.

Acknowledged to be the greatest surgeon of his age and physician to the King of Spain, the Inquisition at last closed in on him.

"His eagerness to learn went so far that he stole corpses from the gallows to work on at night in his room... The supreme service of Vesalius is that he for the first time [in 1500 years of alleged Church cherishing of Science], with information derived from the direct study of the dead body, attacked with keen criticism the hitherto unassailable Galen, and thus brought about its overthrow. Vesalius is the founder of scientific anatomy and of the technique of modern dissection. Unfortunately, he himself destroyed a part of his scripts on learning that his enemies intended to submit his work to ecclesiastical censure!" ~The Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 10, 23-130, passim.

He insistence on practicing human dissection, often stealing the bodies of criminals from the gallows, in defiance of the Church, and was chased from the country. ~See the Catholic Dr. Walsh's Popes and Science, and the account in White's, Warfare of Science with Theology, which is perfectly correct. Also the very just appreciation of him by the Vice-President of the Anatomical Society of Great Britain in the Encyclopedia Britannica has been expunged from the last, Catholic-revised edition, though he was one of the greatest scientists of the middle ages.

Vesalius went on to write an elaborate anatomical work, De Humani Corporis Fabrica, On the Structure of the Human Body, 7 vol., 1543, based on his own dissections of human cadavers.

"At that era a scholar ... who generally struck out so many new ideas in opposition to the commonly held opinion, could easily be accused of heresy. So many of his relations with Protestant scholars appeared suspicious. ... Personally he avoided expressing his opinion, in order not to fall under suspicion of heresy!" ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 15, 379.

"No man has seen Heaven, and come back to tell of it's glorious wonderment; nor has any man gone to this place called Hell to return and tell of its perfidious eternal pain and suffering." ~E. Christopher

In defiance of the ban of the Holy Ghost on dissection and anatomy, Vesalius continued dissecting the stolen corpses: his work disproved the 'Luz,' or "Resurrection Bone," the nucleus of the Heavenly restoration of the human body, and disclosed that Adam's missing rib, lost since Eve was carved from it some 4500 years previously, was still there.

These impious refutations of the Church's sacred science so enraged the clerical savants that it required all the efforts of the Emperor to save his great physician from the 'Dogs of the Lord,' and the Holy Inquisition. The Protestants had their own 'Inquisitions,' which few care to admit, and which committed such dastardly acts as would give even the appalling Roman Inquisitors great pride.

"The Protestant theologian Meyfart... Described the tortures which he had personally witnessed... The subtle Spaniard and the wily Italian have a horror of these bestialities and brutalities, and at Rome it is not customary to subject a murderer... An incestuous person, or an adulterer to torture for the space of more than an hour; but in Germany... Torture is kept up for a whole day, for a day and a night, for two days... Even also for four days... After which it begins again... There are stories extant so horrible and revolting that no true man can hear of them without a shudder... At Augsburg, in the first half of the year 1528, about 170 Anabaptists of both sexes were either imprisoned or expelled by order of the new-religionist Town Council. Some were... Burnt through the cheeks with hot irons; many were beheaded; some had their tongues cut out." ~Janssen.

Under the Catholic Mary Tudor, 277 persons were burned as heretics, among whom were five Bishops, twenty-one clergymen, eight lay gentlemen, eighty-four tradesmen, one hundred husbandmen, servants, and laborers; fifty-five women, and four children; besides many who were punished by imprisonment, fines, and confiscations.

Under Protestant Elizabeth the "Bright and Occidental Star" of the translators of King James's Bible, Vide "Dedicatory Epistle,"... More than 200 persons were destroyed, either by burning or hanging, drawing [dis-embowelling], and quartering; and a great number suffered from the penal laws against Catholics in this and the following reigns. All this slaughter for the "Greater Glory of God!" ~Bank of Wisdom, Box 926, Louisville, KY 40201. Green in his standard Short History of the English People, ch. viii, 83, says that, "No (other) woman who ever lived was so totally destitute of the sentiment of religion," and Professor Pollard says in his authoritative Political History of England, vol. Concordance between the King Francis I of France and Pope Leo X places the Roman Catholic Church under Royal Authority. The King is in effect the one who does the appointing of high-ranking church officials.

Nearly 400 years before Hitler, Venice forces the Jews to live only in one parish, called the "Ghetto Novo." AD1517-1648-For the next one hundred and thirty years the Church periodically makes attempts to clean up the corruption from within. This is known as the Reformation Era. Papal taxations, absolutions, and the tax-free possessions have done little but to infuriate the general public that sees the abuses in their daily lives.

The Inquisition continues to punish those alleged to have sinned against the Church. Some of the people sentenced to burning at the stake were first hanged or beheaded. Those who were burned alive at the stake are [sometimes] offered sacks of gunpowder, which, when placed around their heads, resulted in a quicker death [how generous].

Martin Luther [a Catholic monk] begins his vehement protests against the Church after discovering that the original Bible was not written in Latin, and boldly nails his 95 theses to the Wittenberg Cathedral door, challenging the Church to a debate on Scripture, which marks the beginning of the Protestant Reformation. Pope Leo on the 15th of March suppresses a book on humanism, "Epistle Obscororum Virorum." Luther places the Bible above both Church and Pope as highest authority on earth, and further decrees the right of individual interpretation of Holy Scripture. Luther rejects the Greek Old Testament and declares its books invalid.

In 1520 Reuchlin's "Augenspiegel" is censored. All of Martin Luther's works [both present and future writings] are censored. The Church in its attempts to assert power over the minds of man now justifies condemning writings before they are even written.

"A volume might be filled with indubitable facts to prove the intolerant spirit of Luther and of the various sects, which his rebellion originated. The quarrels, hostilities and jealousies that constantly arose among one and all made them a prey to the fiercest dissensions. They anathematized and persecuted each other... And indulged in the coarsest and vilest invective... The Lutherans... Denounced and excluded the reformed Calvinists from salvation. The Calvinists roused up the people against the Lutherans... Zwingli complained of Luther's intolerance when he was the victim... But he and his followers threw the poor Anabaptists into the Lake of Zurich, enclosed in sacks." ~Patrick O'Hare.

October 31 at the castle church of Wittenberg, Germany, Martin Luther, 1483-1546, a Saxon professor of divinity posts his ninety-five theses, or arguments calling for a disputation on the abuses of the traffic in indulgences.

It is noteworthy that Pope Julius II, 1503-1513, aka Giuliano de la Rovere, bastard son Pope Sixtus IV, 1471-1484, whose six other sons are appointed to Cardinals and Bishops, is anxious to rebuild Saint Peter's Cathedral in Rome and is selling indulgences that forgive the purchaser's sins and excuses the individuals from punishment. A deacon, guilty of murder, as an example, could be absolved for twenty crowns, an abbot, or Bishop, for assassinating a foe, three hundred livre, and to anyone else who cares to buy them, the same forgiveness is extended, for a price. Any civil magistrate who tries to stop them is to be excommunicated, losing all rights as a man or citizen. October 31, Martin Luther, 95 Theses; Beginning of Reformation as the Church threatens excommunication. Luther strongly protests the sale of Indulgences by the church for forgiveness of sins.

"The people were persuaded that if they bought these pardons [indulgences] they need not to seek any further for Salvation, and that no sin could be so horrible, but that by these indulgences it should be forgiven, and that the souls that lie tormented in Purgatory should fly into Heaven forthwith, as soon as the money received for these pardons at the charge of their friends should be put into the Pope's coffers.”

~John Bale in a letter responding to the theses of Martin Luther.

Coffee arrives in Europe for the first time, and is banned by the Catholic Church, because of its use by the infidel Muslims.

AD 1518-Swiss Pastor Huldreich Zwingli denounces the church's sale of indulgences. Martin Luther is summoned by Cardinal Cajetan to Diet of Augsburg at which he refuses to recant his beliefs. In 1519 the Papal Chamberlain, Karl von Miltz, advises Martin Luther to write a letter of submission to Pope Leo X, which Luther promises execute, but in his Leipzig Disputation with Johann Eck, Luther questions the infallibility of Papal decisions.

“After the survivor of the Spanish conquest has told his life's story he is convicted by the Inquisition: 'He posted no brief in defense or mitigation of his offenses, and when he was most solemnly advised by the Court President of the dire consequences he faced if found guilty, Juan Damasceno volunteered only one comment: 'It will mean I do not go to the Christian Heaven?' He was told that that would indeed be the worst of his punishments: that he would most assuredly not go to Heaven. At which, his smile sent a thrill of horror through every soul of the Court.” ~Gary Jennings, Aztec.

Emperor Charles V, Habsburg family, of Ghent, 1500-1558, a Flemish boy, King of Spain is elected Holy Roman Emperor on the death of his grandfather Maximilian. The Spanish people revolt against the Flemish rule and they're absent king. The revolt lasts three years [until 1522].

“Once it is admitted that Christ left the Church the power to forgive sins, the power of granting indulgences is logically inferred.” ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 1, p. 785.

Pope Leo X, aka Giovanni de Medici, condemns Martin Luther, the sacrilegious German monk for daring to say that burning heretics is against the will of God, amongst other things, unless he recants. Luther appeals to a General Council, and for 25 years, the Pope and Curia refuse the appeal to the only forum capable of settling the grave issues in the Church.

The Spanish came to America, not to convert, but to kill and pillage in the name of God. The Aztec Emperor, Montezuma II, is dead. The Spanish are considered the Bastille of Roman Christianity with a mandate to subject all the non-Christian Americans [men, women, and children] for Spain, the Papacy, and the Roman Catholic Church. It is noteworthy to remember that Southern Italy remains a possession of Spain. Their critics say they hunger like pigs for the gold, their bodies swelled with voracity, and their hunger is ravenous.

The Spanish are now considered freed from any sin against the American people by their heinous acts against humanity. They will now effectively and systematically destroy the Aztec Universities, Libraries, Astronomic structures, zoos and agricultural systems that are in many respects like the mathematics of advanced Europe, with a calendar hundreds of times more accurate. ~cf. Luke 19:12-27. The bestiality of the Spanish is the standard policy against heathens, but few Spanish speak out against the evil practices.

Magellan on his circumnavigation of globe passes through the Straits of Magellan and navigates his way into the Pacific Ocean on his way to declaring new lands in the name of the King, the Pope, and his Church. False Inferences: However, logically perfect inferences can readily be made from false premises; the premises must be true to yield valid and truthful "Inference" or conclusion. Not only were existent but false indulgences hawked throughout Christendom, resulting in immense revenues for individual unsavory priests and hierarchy, but abuses, for "One of the worst abuses that of inventing or falsifying grants of indulgence. Previous to the Reformation, such practices abounded." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, passim.

The Council of Trent sought to stop outside profits from this traffic, declaring it to be "A grievous abuse among Christian people, and of other disorders arising from superstition, (etc.) ... on account of the widespread corruption," though it seems that now "With the decline in the financial possibilities of the system, there is no danger of the recurrence of the old abuses." ~Catholic Encyclopedia p. 788.

But today, still they sell well and net fine revenues for the Church, as souvenirs now available even on the Internet, there being no Purgatory for unbelievers in the fiery close proximity of Hell.

The Protestants are not without their faults.

William Tyndale translates the New Testament into the vernacular, plain English so poor people can now read their Bible and form their own, independent religious views. Tyndale is condemned by the Church, captured, garroted, and burned at the stake by the Catholic Church, which preaches humility and forgiveness [All the original writers of the New Testament were Jewish].

"What shall we say of a church... That had as yet no services to show, no claims upon the gratitude of mankind... Which nevertheless suppressed by force a worship that multitudes deemed necessary to salvation? ... So strong and so general was its intolerance that for some time it may, I believe, be truly said that there were more instances of partial toleration being advocated by Roman Catholics than by orthodox Protestants." ~F. William Lecky.

AD1521-Diet of Worms, Charles V, Holy Roman Emperor, and German Princes attempt to force Martin Luther to recant his beliefs. An outspoken and religious man, Martin Luther is strong in his resolve. "The Reformers themselves ... e.g., Luther, Beza, and especially Calvin, were as intolerant to dissenters as the Roman Catholic Church." ~Oxford Dictionary of the Christian Church.

On 11 October, Pope Leo X invests King Henry VIII with the title 'Fidei Defensor': "Defender of the Faith," after the king publishes a pamphlet defending the Catholic Church. English monarchs have borne this title ever since, although though the faith of the Church of England is now Protestant. Evil is as evil does, and the Catholics attempt to justify their horrendous persecutions as being more defensible than that of the Protestants neglecting the fact that murder is murder, whether in God's name or anyone else's.

Abuse, on the part of officials of the Church, causes Pope Leo X, but only after numerous complaints, to reluctantly Excommunicate the Catholic Tribunal at Toledo, and to have the witnesses who appeared before its Inquisitorial trial arrested for perjury [lying]

“What makes, however, Protestant persecutions specially revolting is the fact that they were absolutely inconsistent with the primary doctrine of Protestantism, the right of private judgment in matters of religious belief! Nothing can be more illogical than at one moment to assert that one may interpret the Bible to suit himself, and at the next to torture and kill him for having done so... Nor should we ever forget that... The Protestants were the aggressors, the Catholics were the defenders. The Protestants were attempting to destroy the old, established Christian Church, which had existed 1500 years, and to replace it by something new, untried and revolutionary. The Catholics were upholding a Faith, hallowed by centuries of pious associations and sublime achievements; the Protestants, on the contrary, were fighting for a creed... Which already was beginning to disintegrate into hostile sects, each of which, if it gained the upper hand, commenced to persecute the rest... All religious persecution is bad; but in this case, of the two parties guilty of it, the Catholics certainly had the more defensible motives for their conduct.” ~John Stoddard.

Pope Leo X confers title of, “Defender of the Faith,” upon King Henry VIII for his “Assertio Septem Sacramentorum,” against Martin Luther. Luther is cross-examined before the Diet of Worms by Cardinal Alexander, the Papal Nuncio, and is banned from the Holy Roman Empire; while imprisoned in the Wartburg penal complex, he begins his German translation of the Holy Bible.

Luther spares no words in his venomous attack on the Jews, a fact which will not go unnoticed five centuries later, by another Jew hating Catholic, Hitler. “Besides, you also have many Jews living in the country, who do much harm... You should know the Jews blaspheme and violate the name of our Savior day for day... For that reason you, My Lords and men of authority, should not tolerate but expel them. They are our public enemies and incessantly blaspheme our Lord Jesus Christ, they call our Blessed Virgin Mary a harlot and her Holy Son a bastard and to us they give the epithet of changelings and abortions. Therefore deal with them harshly as they do nothing but excruciatingly blaspheme our Lord Jesus Christ, trying to rob us of our lives, our health, our honor and belongings.” ~Rev. Mart in Luther, in a sermon at Eisleben, a few days before his death, February, 1546

AD1521-March 17th, Hernao Magalhaes, Ferdinand Magellan, carries seven missionaries with him while looking for gold and spices claims the Philippines as a territory of Spain. “The Church says the earth is flat, but I know that it is round, for I have seen the shadow on the moon, and I have more faith in a shadow than in the Church.” ~Ferdinand Magellan.

Belgrade, Beograd, Yugoslavia falls to Turkey as the Ottoman Empire expands into Europe under command of Sultan Suleyman I the Magnificent, 1520-1566. Ferdinand Magellan, a Portuguese [as was Columbus], dies on April 27, 1521, he renounces his citizenship and joins the Spanish on March 16, 1521 he lands on an archipelago of San Lazaro, naming the Philippines after the Spanish King Feliae, and not the Portuguese King. Magellan attempts to subdue the Peoples of the Island of Mactan while waging war against Lapu Lapu, who kills him in a battle with a poisoned arrow. AD1522-Pope Hadrian VI, alias Adrian Florensz Dedal, 1522-1523, an inquisitor for Aragon and Navarre in 1516, inquisitor for Castile and Leon 1518 is elected Pope. The Pope is the old tutor of the Holy Emperor Charles I, 1500-1558, of Spain.

Pope Adrian VI reiterates the Church's stand on censorship and denial of freedom of the press. Pope Clement VII will likewise condescend again, on behalf of the Church, renounce all the works of Martin Luther in 1524. Martin Luther returns to Wittenberg, Germany, condemning Christian fanatics, and those who destroy religious images and works finishing his translation of the New Testament, having completed the Old Testament in 1534; the Wittenberg printer, Hans Lufft, produces 100,000 copies in the course of the next 40 years.

The Roman curia turns against him because he is reluctant to distribute lucrative benefices. He confesses to the Diet of Nuremberg that all evils in the Church proceeded from the Roman Curia. This is like the pot calling the stove black. He also states, in 1523, that many Roman Pontiffs are heretics, the last being Pope John XXII, 1316-1334, and that the Popes can err even in matters touching the faith.

Pope Adrian VI in 1523 says, “If by the Roman Church you mean its head or Pontiff, it is beyond question that he can err even in matters touching the faith. He does this when he teaches heresy by his own judgment or decretal. In truth, many Roman Pontiffs were heretics. The last of them was Pope John XXII [1316-1334].” ~Vicars of Christ, DeRosa, 204.

He acknowledged the Greed and excess of the Papal court under Pope Leo X, aka, Giovanni de' Medici, is an abbot at seven, cardinal at thirteen, and Pope at thirty-seven. Our Most Holy Lord Pope Leo X is said to be noticeably pious and has neither mistresses nor bastards, but he is a latent homosexual, and highly addicted to “Those pleasures which cannot, with decency, be mentioned.”

Pope Hadrian condemns Martin Luther as inquisitor in Spain and believes Luther should be punished for heresy and his teachings banned. As a result several German Imperial knights wage scattered raids on the Romanist monasteries, plundering abbeys and assaulting well-fortified ecclesiastical cities.

A few Princes crush their futile efforts, in 1523, but others join the Lutheranism resistance movement. Luther finishes his translation into German of the New Testament, Wittenberg printer Hans Lufft begins to print what will be 100,000 copies over the years. Other vernacular translations follow with the Church condemning them in turn.

The Island of Rhodes [Greece] falls to the Turkish advance.

England declares war on France and Scotland.

“Appalling tasks lay before him in this [again] darkest hour of the Papacy. To extirpate inveterate abuses; to reform a court, which thrived on corruption, and detested the very name of reform; to hold in leash the young and warlike princes, ready to bound at each other's throats, these were herculean labors... His nuncio to Germany, Chierigati, [made the exaggerated] acknowledgment, that the Roman Court had been the fountain-head of all the corruptions in the Church. Cardinal Adrian of Costello [in 1517] was implicated in a charge of conspiring with Cardinal Petrucci to poison the Pope Leo X, and confessed.” ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 1, 160.

“In Martin Luther's case it is impossible to speak of liberty of conscience or religious freedom... The death-penalty for heresy rested on the highest Lutheran authority... The views of the other reformers on the persecution and bringing to justice of heretics were merely the outgrowth of Luther's plan; they contributed nothing fresh.” ~B. Walther Kohler.

AD1523-1534-Pope Clement VII, an illegitimate child, has a son whom he attempts to make the Duke of Florence. “Under the direct orders of the Pope, Clement VII, Archbishop B. [in 1538] caused many [Protestants in Scotland] to... Be put to death. Modern humanity condemns the cruel manner of their execution; but such severities were the result of the spirit of the age.” ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 2, 374.

AD 1523-Lefevre d’Etaples translates the New Testament into French. Again, the Church does not celebrate in this jubilation, which brings the common people closer to God.

Interesting notes on the 1500’s: Lead cups were used to drink ale or whiskey. The combination would sometimes knock them out for a couple of days. Someone walking along the road would take them for dead and prepare them for burial. They were laid out on the kitchen table for a couple of days and the family would gather around and eat and drink and wait and see if they would wake up. Hence, the custom of holding a “Wake.”

England, being a small island, started out running out of places to bury people. So, after a while, they would dig up coffins and would take the bones to a “Bone-house” and reuse the grave. When reopening these coffins, 1 out of 25 coffins were found to have scratch marks on the inside, and they realized they had been burying people alive.

So they thought they would tie a string on the wrist of the corpse, lead it through the coffin and up through the ground and tie it to a bell. Someone would have to sit out in the grave yard all night long, hence, the “Graveyard shift,” to listen for the bell; thus, someone could be “Saved by the bell” or was considered a “Dead ringer.” ~Research courtesy of Hank Shiver on the Internet.

Martin Luther speaks out in defense of the Jews saying that, “Our Lord Jesus Christ was born a Jew.” Luther argues that the Letters of Saint James the Just, Brother of Jesus should not be included in the New Testament. ~Galatians 1:19, James is martyred in 62 C.E.

There is friction in the House of the Lord, “Eusebius reported that Clement of Alexandria wrote that, after the Ascension, Peter, James, and John, chose James the Just [biological brother of Jesus], as Bishop of Jerusalem, although another quotation in Eusebius implies James’ leadership from the time of the Resurrection. Eusebius subjects James to the authority of all the Apostles in a way that provides evidence of a struggle between the Great Church, represented here by the Apostles and the independent authority of James.” ~John Painter, Just James, 2005, p. 274.

Burning of heretics of the Christian Reformation takes place at Brussels this year under the reign of Pope Clement VII, 1523-1534. Francis I of France, 1515-1547, re-conquers Milan and Pope Clement VII aligns with France and Venice against Emperor Charles V, 1500-1558, of Spain.

Zurich: The rebel free-thinker, philosopher, Zwingli, abolishes the Roman Catholic Mass.

End of the World: As 1524 approaches, mass hysteria engulfs Europe, which anticipates that a dreadful catastrophe will take the form of a flood; many people build boats or move to higher ground, but this time, more people are growing more cynical of such diabolical predictions. The philosopher Niccolò Machiavelli responds to the warning by mockingly urging the women of Florence to run away to the hills and live with the hermits, but once again the catastrophe does not occur. ~See Matthew 25:13.

After 1524 apocalypticism wanes in Southern Europe, but in Northern Europe, such beliefs persist in remaining very prominent, first amongst the German Protestant reformers of the 16th century, and then amongst English Puritan reformers of the 17th century. The puritans will export their apocalypticism to America where predictions of imminent doom have tended to find willing audiences.

AD 1525-1565-L.F.M. Sozzini, native of Siena is influenced by Camillo, a Sicilian mystic, and challenges Calvin on the doctrine of the Trinity. 'Socinianism,' the 17th century Christian also rejects such traditional doctrines as the Trinity and Original Sin, the founder is Socinus, and his Latinized name of Lelio Francesco Maria Sozzini, 1525-1562, the Italian Protestant theologian. Sozzini accepts the doctrine of Arius, denying Original Sin, atonement, and the Divinity of Christ.

There is one and only one God. His nephew accepts the same tenets [F.P. Sozzini 1539-1604] and publishes a book denying the Divinity of Jesus. In 1578, F.P. Sozzini travels to Transylvania where Emperor Sigismund is a staunch supporter of Protestantism and against the acceptance of the Trinity.

"As you see, the Doctrine of a Triune Godhead is not only contrary to common sense, but is entirely unsupported by the Scriptures." ~ Johannes Greber, 1874, a former of Catholic priest, The Communication with the Spirit World of God, pg 371.

The heretic Tyndale's translation of the New Testament from Greek text of Erasmus, 1466, compared against the Latin Vulgate and the Pentateuch from the Hebrew, 1525, compared to the Catholic Vulgate and Luther's German version, 1530, first printed edition; used as a medium by Tyndale for further bitter attacks on the Church, reflects persuasion of Luther's New Testament of 1522 in rejecting "Priest" for "Elder," "Church" for "Congregation" in Scripture.

The Battle of Pavia proves a complete disaster for France as King Francis I is captured. Spain is now in complete control of Italy.

The hedonist, Martin Luther marries the former nun Katherine von Bora.

William Tyndale, (1494-1536, preferred to produce a new edition of the Bible in the English language of his day. An expert in seven languages, Tyndale translates his New Testament from the original Greek and Hebrew. His New Testament is the first English New Testament ever printed, and it is printed in Germany.

AD 1526-Diet of Speyer, Lutherans are declared free to practice their individual beliefs, but the persecution of Jews will continue in Hungary.

The New world: A Spanish historian writes that Carib men also had lovers that they did not intend to smother in butter and spices, and that these lovers were distinguished by wearing "Naguas" or short skirts and jewelry their lovers had given them.

"If we wish to find a scapegoat on whose shoulders we may lay the miseries which Germany has brought on the world, I am more and more convinced that the worst evil genius of that country, is not Hitler or Bismarck or Frederick the Great, but Martin Luther." ~ Anglican Dean Inge, Saint Paul's Cathedral, London.

AD 1527-The Antwerp edition of Tyndale's New Testament is burned at Saint Paul's Cross, London, and a little later, a mass burning of these works and the works of other translators begins. ~See the New Catholic Encyclopedia, by an editorial staff at the Catholic University of America, Washington, or through the Oxford Dictionary of the Christian Church, by Cross and Livingstone.

May 5: The sack of Rome as Imperial troops, loyal to King of Spain Charles, and Holy Roman Emperor, go berserk and loot the Holy City, murdering more than 4,000 innocent inhabitants, and stealing art treasures. The Pope hides in Castel Sant Angelo.

This time is usually cited as the End of the Renaissance.

AD 1528- King Henry VIII begins his proceedings: Requesting a "Divorce" [annulment] from the Catholic, Catherine of Aragon, which will also make his daughter illegitimate.

AD 1529-Henry VIII seeks independence from the Catholic Church due to its unwavering decision not to accept his annulment in "The Great Matter." AD 1536 will mark the beginning of the Anglican Church as a national church, independent of any Papal control.

King Henry VIII becomes irritated at the refusal of Pope Clement VII to annul his marriage to Catherine of Aragón, causes Parliament to enact a series of statutes denying the Pope any authority or jurisdiction over the Church of England. Thus, he reaffirms the ancient right of the Christian prince, or monarch, to exercise domination over the affairs of the church within the domain. He cites precedents in the relations between church and state in the Eastern Roman Empire from the 9th century under Charlemagne.

Henry VIII receives the support of the majority of Englishmen, clerical, and lay alike. The Catholic Church will now have its revenues reduced significantly from this action. During the reign of Queen Elizabeth I, the Puritans increase their power and become more adamant in their demands for further restructuring in the Church of England in the direction of the Protestantism of Geneva.

During the reign of Queen Elizabeth, Presbyterian dissenters were "Branded, . . . Imprisoned, banished, mutilated and even put to death," with a few Anabaptists and Unitarians being burned alive. ~John Stoddard. In 1529 a Swiss law is passed against the Anabaptists, who, regardless of sex or age are to be killed by the sword or fire or otherwise.

In 1662, King James II attempts to reintroduce the practice of Roman Catholicism in England. Unfortunately for King James, he loses his throne to William III and Mary II in the ensuing revolution of 1688.

"The proximate cause of that Great Revolution, which cost King James his crown, was the publication by the King of an edict of religious toleration! . . . The first and only time the Church of England has made war on the Crown, was when the Crown had declared its intention of tolerating . . . The rival religions of the country!" ~From The Protestant Inquisition, Reformation Intolerance and Persecution, by Dave Armstrong.

The primary differences between the Church of England and the Roman Catholic Church lie in denying the claims of the Papacy in jurisdiction over the church and to the infallibility as promulgator of Christian doctrinal and moral truth. The Church also rejects the Roman doctrines and discipline, and unlike the Roman Catholic Church, the Church of England allows women to become priests.

In view of the innumerable blunders of Popes since the 2nd century, some imagine that the Catholic Doctrine is that the Pope began to be infallible only when the Church officially declared this at the Vatican Council, 1870. On the contrary, that all Popes from the legendary days of Saint Peter, even Popes John XII, Boniface IX, John XXIII, Gregory VII, Innocent III, and Alexander VI, have been declared infallible.

"The very Apostolic designation, Peter, is from the [Pagan] Mysteries. The hierophant or Supreme Pontiff bore the Chaldean title Peter, or interpreter. The names Phtah, Peth 'r, the residence of Balaam, Patara, and Patras, the names of oracles-cities, Pateres or Pateras and, perhaps, Buddha, all come from the same root. . . No Apostle Peter was ever at Rome; but the Pope, seizing the scepter of the 'Pontifex Maximus', the Keys of Janus and Kubelé, and adorning his Christian head with the cap of the 'Magna Mater,' copied from that of the tiara of Brahmâtma, the Supreme Pontiff of the Initiates of old India, became the successor of the Pagan high priest, the real Peter-Roma, or Petroma [the tiara of the Pope is also a perfect copy of that of the Dalai-Lama of Thibet]." ~Isis Unveiled, Blavatsky, pg. 30.

It is a hopeless endeavor to argue with any Catholics regarding Papal infallibility, blunders and heresies. In 1870, there was still a formidable opposition among the Bishops and theologians. The Pope's determination to have the measure carried was realized only through bribery and intimidation and after a long and very heated struggle. Prelates present twenty years later stated that iced water was consumed in amazing quantities, and that Episcopal opponents angrily asked "If the Pope pretended to have the Holy Ghost in his inkpot."

The finest historical scholars of the Church, such as Hefele, who yielded and became a Bishop, and Doellinger, who left the Church and never rejoined it, had long lists of errors of Popes drawn up, and the wording of the definition of the Dogma was drafted by the Papal officials with this in view.

The Pope is declared to be Infallible only when he speaks Ex Cathedra: when he addresses a message on faith or morals in his official capacity to the Universal Church. With much sophistry and pedantic, earlier Papal blunders are then excluded.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

It is more piquant that the dogma was claimed to be necessary in view of the state of the modern world, so that Catholics at least would have a safe guide; yet no Pope since 1870 has ventured to speak in his infallible character, until Pope John Paul II in his address to the Orthodox Pope.

On March 12, 2000 Pope John Paul II attempts to purify the souls of the Catholic Church's members by apologizing for 2000 years of "Sins" committed by the church, twenty centuries of terrorism, extortion and murder, and yet, on September 2000, Pope John Paul II issues "Dominus Jesus (Lord Jesus)," reaffirming the Roman Church's religious intolerance: "Only one path to God – The Roman Catholic Church."

The letters and Encyclicals, which the Popes of the last 100 years, who blunder worse than ever, have issued may be disregarded and privately derided by any Catholic. It is still more amusing to hear Catholics, when they are forced to admit the crimes and vices of so many Popes, say complacently that they claim only Infallibility, not Impeccability, for the Popes.

On the theory the 'Holy Ghost' is indifferent to the character of the Pope elected, a notoriously immoral Cardinal Vannutelli, tried to succeed Pope Leo XIII in 1903 and received a number of votes, concerned only about pronouncements which he never makes. ~See Dr. G. G. Coulton's Papal Infallibility, 1922, and J. McCabe's, Rationalists Encyclopaedia, for an in depth history of the world from a religious perspective

The religious intolerance, for so long prosecuted upon the masses by the Catholic Church is now to be committed upon the Catholics by the Protestants who claim religious tolerance, yet "In 1522 a rabble forced its way into the church at Wittenberg, [the Palast Church] on the doors of which Luther had nailed his theses, destroyed all its altars and statues, and . . . Drove out the clergy. In Rotenburg also, in 1525, the figure of Christ was decapitated . . . On the 9th of February, 1529, everything previously revered in the fine old cathedral of Basle, Switzerland, was destroyed.. Such instances of brutality and fanaticism could be cited by scores." ~From The Protestant Inquisition, Reformation Intolerance and Persecution, by Dave Armstrong.

In 1529 the Council of Strasbourg will order the breaking into pieces all of the remaining Catholic altars, images and crosses, and several churches and convents will be destroyed in the process. Similar events will transpire in Frankfurt-am-Main, and at a religious convention at Hamburg in April, 1535 the Lutheran towns of Lubeck, Bremen, Hamburg, Luneburg, Stralsund, Rostock and Wismar will voted to hang Anabaptists and flog [whip] Catholics and Zwinglians before banishing them, and Martin Luther's home territory of Saxony will institute banishment for Catholics in 1527.

"It is . . . Forbidden to say Mass or to be present at Mass, with the punishment for a first offence of loss of all goods and a flogging; for the second offence, banishment; for the third, death." ~Legislation passed by John Knox, Scotland, 1527 on the Catholic Mass banishment.

Knox declaring, "That all which our adversaries do is diabolical." He rejoiced in that, "Perfect hatred which the Holy Ghost engenders in the hearts of God's elect against the condemners of His holy statutes." ~John Knox, History of the Reformation.

Martin Luther in his attacks against the corruption of the Roman Church, was venomous in his condemnations against a hypocritical priestcraft and religious oligarchy, "It is the duty of the authorities to resist and punish such public blasphemy... If the preacher does not make men pious, the goods are no longer his... Not only the spiritual but also the secular power must yield to the Evangel, whether cheerfully or otherwise... Men despise the Evangel and insist on being compelled by the law and the sword. Although we neither can nor should force anyone into the faith, yet the masses must be held and driven to it in order that they may know what is right or wrong... 'It is our custom to affright those who ... Fail to attend the preaching; and to threaten them with banishment and the law... In the event of their still proving contumacious, to excommunicate them... As if they were heathen... Although excommunication in Popedom has been shamefully abused... Yet we must not suffer it to fall, but make right use of it, as Christ commanded... The Pope and the Cardinals... Since they are blasphemers, their tongues ought to be torn out through the back of their necks, and nailed to the gallows!... It were better that every Bishop were murdered... Than that one soul should be destroyed... If they will not hear God's Word... What do they better deserve than a strong uprising, which will sweep them from the earth? And we would smile did it happen. All who contribute body, goods... That the rule of the Bishops may be destroyed are God's dear children and true Christians... If you understand the Gospel rightly, I beseech you not to believe that it can be carried on without tumult, scandal, sedition... The word of God is a sword, is war, is ruin, is scandalous...” ~Martin Luther.

Persecuted for decades, the Protestants venge their anger upon the Catholics, and of course, the people of all denomination in order to compel them to practice [declare] a Christian faith.

“The Protestant states did not question that teachers of disapproved doctrines should be prevented from preaching. Nor did they question that the state should use laws to encourage churchgoing. In Anglican England and Lutheran Germany, Reformed Holland . . . the citizens were alike liable to penalties if they failed for no good reason to attend the worship of their parish churches.” ~Owen Chadwick

AD1530-Augsburg Confession, Lutheran Church, 25 June, based on a statement of faith. ~Psalms 98:2, Isaiah 51:5, Galatians 2:16, and Romans 3:24.

The very articles questioned in the Catholic faith will now be incorporated in the Protestant, but Luther is vindictive also in his quest to destroy the Catholic Church.

In 1530, spurious Gospels inspired Erasmus' removal of the Comma Johanneum [I John 5:7], the most explicit Scriptural support for the Doctrine of the Trinity, from his first edition of the New Testament. His [Erasmus] distaste for a culture nurtured on literary deceit emerges from his life of Saint Jerome, with its trenchant attack on the Medieval legends of super-human cures and interventions that had distorted and disguised the facts. When Erasmus defended the arguments by which he, like Lorenzo Valla before him, had denounced the corpus of Dionysius the Areopagite, he made clear his opposition to all production of fraudulent works, even in support of desirable ends, “In those days even pious men thought it pleasing to God to use this deceit to inspire the people with eagerness to read.” ~Forgers and Critics, Creativity and Duplicity in Western Scholarship, Anthony Grafton, Princeton, 1990.

New World: In an Inca town in Northern Peru, shortly after being conquered by the Spanish, there were fifteen women for every man, and men had been burned for suspected homosexual activities, but by 1580 the area was still known for its homosexual activities.

“If we punish thieves with the gallows . . . why do we not still more attack with every kind of weapon . . . These Cardinals, these Popes, and that whole abomination of the Romish Sodom. . . Why do we not wash our hands in their blood?” ~Martin Luther.

“If I had all the Franciscan friars in one house, I would set fire to it . . . To the fire with them!” ~Martin Luther.
“No one . . . Will be so foolish to believe that it was really his intention to kill the Catholic clergy and monks. His bloodthirsty demands were but the violent outbursts of his own deep inward intolerance.” ~Hartmann Gisar.
Jesuit Lutheran Scholar in defense of Martin Luther's caustic statements against the Church and its clergy.

“You are frightening away from you your supporters by your constant reference to troops and arms. We can easily enough throw everything into confusion, but it will not be in our power, believe me, to restore things to peace and order.” ~Wolfgang Capito on December 4th, 1520 attempting to quell the anger of Martin Luther.

But, the defenders of Luther were cut of the same cloth as their adversary, that of hatred, and not of love for their fellow man, and instilled further in the masses a revolutionary tendency to destroy that, which had persecuted the thoughts of man for centuries, “But who was it who was responsible for having provoked the war? Occasional counsels to . . . Self-restraint . . . Were indeed given by Luther from time to time . . . But . . . They are drowned in the din of his controversial invective . . . If his reforms were rejected then it was to be wished that monasteries and foundations `Were all reduced to one great heap of ashes.’ A grand destruction of all the monasteries, etc., would be the best reformation . . . It is a duty to suppress the Pope by force . . . Some . . . Will not treat our Gospel rightly; but have we not gibbets, wheels, swords, and knives? Those who are obdurate can be brought to reason . . . The spiritual powers . . . Also the temporal ones, will have to succumb to the Gospel, either through love or through force, as is clearly proved by all Biblical history.” ~Hartmann Gisar.

The peasants' revolt and Luther advises the monarchs to kill the peasants in any fashion necessary, en masse, and it is estimated that there are 100,000 resultant deaths. This episode is acknowledged as a blot on Luther's career which had previously been accredited as representing the poor, but later denied them that he would gain esteem in the eyes of the ruling oligarchy.

“The peasants had a case against him. He had not only predicted social revolution, he had said he would not be displeased by it. . . Even if men washed their hands in Episcopal blood . . . He had made no . . .”
To Pope Pius XII, “I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians.” ~Mahatma Gandhi

protest against the secular appropriation of Ecclesiastical property ... The peasants felt that the new religion had sanctified their cause, had aroused them to hope and action, and had deserted them in the hour of decision ... Many of them, or their children ... Returned to the Catholic fold. ~Will Durant.

AD 1530-King Henry VIII declares Palmistry as a practice that is meant to deceive the people. A law is passed outlawing “Egyptians,” which is what the wandering Gypsies were called, giving them fifteen days to get out of the realm.

AD 1530-The early Spaniards in Mexico hear great stories about the wealth of the Seven Cities of Cibola. The Spaniards, eager to find this treasure, set forth on several expeditions, of which none of these attempts succeeded. Marcos de Niza, a Franciscan priest, becomes the first white person known to enter the Arizona region in what is now known as the southwest United States, traveling through the San Pedro Valley in 1539, on his quest for the seven cities. The following year, the Spanish explorer Francisco Vasquez de Coronado searches for the treasure in what is now Arizona and New Mexico [Coronado is later stripped of his governorship for his failure to convert the Indians who are constantly struggling to remain free].

The Anasazi Indians who resided in the area [5th to 14th Century] and whose territories stretch from Arizona to Utah carve ancient animals [petroglyphs] on stones depicting dinosaurs at Natural Bridges National Monument, Utah How did these Native Americans know what dinosaurs looked like? How the Anasazi came to depict reptiles thought extinct millions of years ago is a mystery that is still being investigated. We now have the bone samples of dinosaurs, but it has taken years to piece together the various species that are now depicted in the cave carvings. In the Vulgate Bible we have, “So God created the great Dragon.” ~Genesis 1:21, Job 40-41.

Man does not use the word dinosaur until the early 1800's when the word is used to describe a “Large Horned Serpent.” [Richard Owen, 1804-92, English anatomist and paleontologist, declared that the huge fossil bones found in southern England in the 19th century were not the remains of overgrown lizards or crocodiles, but those of an entirely different species of reptile. Owen named the animal, “Dinosaur,” Greek for Terrible lizard].

Dinosaurs lived during most of the Mesozoic Era, which lasted from about 240 million to 65 million years ago, called the “Age of Reptiles” or “Age of Dinosaurs.” ~See AD 1693 AD 1532.

“The fact of the matter is that the fossil record not only documents evolution, but that it was the fossil record itself, which forced natural scientists to abandon their idea of the fixity of species and look instead for a plausible mechanism of change, a mechanism of evolution. The fossil record not only demonstrates evolution in extravagant detail, but it dashes all claims of the scientific creationists concerning the origin of living organisms.” ~Kenneth R. Miller, Scientific Creationism versus Evolution, Science and Creationism, New York: Oxford University Press, 1984, p. 22.

“The Prince” written by Machiavelli, is translated in 1640. Machiavelli believes rulers are not bound by tradition, ethics or moral dogma. Power is their only concern. In this renown drama he uses trickery and philosophical deception in an attempt to lead the reader into accepting cruelty and deceit as an accepted norm, which some believe is a parody on the beliefs of the Roman Church in his era.

AD 1531- King Henry VIII is officially recognized: Supreme Head of the Church in England, which causes the Pope to eventually issue an excommunication against him.

AD1532-The Penal Code known as the “Carolina” decrees that sorcery throughout the German Empire shall be treated as a criminal offence, and if it purports to inflict injury upon any person the witch is to be burned at the stake.

“There are no witches. The witch text remains; only the practice has changed. Hell fire is gone, but the text remains. Infant damnation is gone, but the text remains. The English clergy submit to King Henry VIII, which means that Henry can now appoint the Bishops in his realm and not the Church

John Calvin leads the Reformation in France.

AD1533-1592-Montaigne, Mitchel Eyquem De, a French moralist and pioneer of modern freethinking or as it is known today, rationalism. He spoke Latin fluently, had a fairly good knowledge of Greek at the age of six, and he had a distinguished career in law.

It was after his retirement that he wrote the famous “Essays,” which opened the era of freethinking in France. He professed they were dangerous days to be a Catholic, but few Catholics are anxious to claim him; and his “Essays,” were put on the Catholic Forbidden Index in 1676.

“What do I know?” is a very common phrase in his work, but he warns the reader not to expect “Illegitimate and Punishable” views. In England, Thomas Cranmer becomes Archbishop of Canterbury proclaiming marriage of Henry VIII and Catherine null and void and proclaims marriage of Henry and Anne Boleyn lawful. The Pope excommunicates Henry for disobeying him. Anne is crowned as Queen of England. Birth of daughter Elizabeth to Henry and Anne.

In France, Pope Clement VII, of the Medici family, marries his relative Catherina de' Medici to the future King of France, Henry Valois. King Henry VIII's marriage to his Catholic wife, Catherine of Aaragon, is annulled by Archbishop Thomas Cranmer. King Henry VIII marries Anne Boleyn, the second of his six wives, in a secret ceremony, which is held at Whitehall Palace. Anne Boleyn is already pregnant [with the future Queen Elizabeth I] at the time.

On 7 September, the future Queen Elizabeth I is born at Greenwich Palace, the daughter of King Henry VIII and Anne Boleyn. King Henry VIII is excommunicated by an angry Pope, which causes him to consider forming his own Church, The Church of England.

The “Buggery” Law [Sodomy] is passed in England decreeing the death penalty, which is the first time this offense is covered under civil, rather than Church, law.

To Pope Pius XII, “I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians.” ~Mahatma Gandhi

End of the World: Melchior Hoffman predicts that Jesus' return will happen in 1533 and that the New Jerusalem will be established in Strasbourg, Germany. He is arrested and dies in a Strasbourg jail.

In one portion he states, "Man is certainly stark mad; he cannot make a flea yet he makes gods by the dozen." ~Michel Eyquem De Montaigne.

AD 1533-1603-Elizabeth I of England and Ireland: daughter of Henry VIII and his second wife Ann Boleyn. English Parliament, in 1536, declares his marriage to Ann invalid, that would allow him to marry his third wife Jane Seymour, but this deception will later create a doubt as to the legitimacy of his daughter, Elizabeth I.

In 1554 Elizabeth is forced to claim Catholicism as her religion in order to avoid imprisonment. She reverts to Protestantism in 1559 and has Parliament pass legislation that is later to become the basis of the doctrines establishing the Church of England.

Roman Catholics are persecuted throughout her reign. Doctor John Dee, occultist, astrologer, spy [his code name is 007] 1527-1608, is appointed the personal Court Astrologer to Queen Elizabeth I.

Dee calculates the most advantageous astrological date for the coronation of the Queen. Dr. Dee and Edward Kelley make wax tablets called almadels engraved with magic symbols as part of an assortment of apparatus to conjure a trance like state to summons angels. This Enochian Magic is later used by the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn to induce trance like states on an astral plane.

AD 1533-1592- Michel Eyquem de Montaigne, French writer who introduced the essay as a literary form. His essays, which range over a wide variety of topics, are characterized by a discursive style, a lively conversational tone, and the use of numerous quotations from classical writers. ~Microsoft Encarta Encyclopedia, 1998.

"Man is certainly stark mad: he cannot make a worm, yet he will make Gods by the dozen." ~Montaigne. Living in an era when heretics were burned alive, Montaigne eluded prosecution by the Roman Church. Others were not so fortunate, and in 1553, the physician Michael Servetus, who discovered the pulmonary circulation of blood, was burned alive in John Calvin's Geneva for doubting the Trinity. In one Unitarian Church, the youth group actually holds a yearly "Michael Servetus wiener roast" in his memory.

"It is indeed important that posterity should not know of our differences; for it is indescribably ridiculous that we, who are in opposition to the whole world, should be, at the very beginning of the Reformation, at issue among ourselves." ~John Calvin in a letter to Melancthon, Selected Works of John Calvin: Tracts and Letters: Letters, Part 2, 1545-1553, vol. 5 of 7; edited by Jules Bonnet, translated by David Constable; Grand Rapids: Baker Book House (a Protestant publisher), 1983, 454 pages; reproduction of Letters of John Calvin, vol. 2, Letter CCCV [305], Philadelphia: Presbyterian Board of Publication, 1858.

And Melancthon, seeing the death and misery brought on by the new religious leaders states, "All the waters of the Elbe would not yield me tears sufficient to weep for the miseries caused by the Reformation." ~Melancthon.

AD 1533-1584-William I, of Orange, called "The Silent Prince of Orange," led the fight for Dutch freedom. Born the son of William, count of Nassau, he was raised as a Lutheran during a time when Protestants were persecuted by the Inquisition.

William and other members of the Dutch nobility organized a strong movement against Spanish oppression, with the result that in 1564 Philip was forced to recall the hated Netherlands prime minister, Antoine Perrenot Cardinal de Granvelle. William of Orange was the father of religious liberty. William of Orange is the man who gave the Jews the freedom to come to Amsterdam. And the Jews called Amsterdam, "The new Jerusalem." ~cf. Revelation 2:6. Cf. cf. Luke 14:26.

William of Orange was a Catholic to begin with. Remember when he was in the forest, hunting with the king of France, and the king of France lay bare to him their plans to destroy all the Protestants in Holland, William kept silent. And, that is why he was called "William the Taciturn" or "William the Silent." William is a great inspiration to Holland delivering refuge from the fanatical Roman Catholic Spanish, which were lead by the Jesuits. "We Catholics may lie and say we are Protestants when we are among the Protestants or we may lie when we are among the Huguenots and say we are Huguenots, and if we wish we can stoop so low as to say we are Jews when we are among the Jews if our lying would benefit the Catholic Church." ~Jesuit Oath from the Congressional Record.

God helped him by sending a strong wind over the dikes, and flooding the whole area, thus drowning the Spanish soldiers. Afterwards, he sent another strong wind and blew the water back over the dikes. This is a historical fact!

"The Barons of the Campagna fought with each other and with the Pope and, issuing from their castles, raided the country in every direction, and even robbed the pilgrims on their way to the tombs of the Apostles. ... William I took captive many wealthy Greeks, the greater number of whom he sold into slavery." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 1, 157.

The Columbia Encyclopedia's article on slavery is a tour de force of misrepresentation, as slavery in the Roman Empire is discriminatorily described, and it is said that the introduction of Christianity "Mitigated" the condition of the slaves, when in fact, it was mitigated by the Stoic Epicurean lawyers and, especially, the great Epicurean Emperor Hadrian, and the great encyclopedia omits the many pagan condemnations of slavery as many speeches against it survived, such as by the friend of the Emperor, Dio Chrysostom. However, the Church, claiming to be friend of the poor and underprivileged has for its defense(?) two leading Catholic moralists, the Saints, Augustine and Aquinas, who remarkably defend slavery. Even the Scholastics, who are now proposed to us as moral guides, failed to condemn slavery or serfdom, and that no Pope condemned them until the French philosophers of the 18th century taught them justice. Slavery was introduced into America because it had never been fully abolished in Europe by the monarchs, nor by the Catholic Church.

The large use of slave eunuchs by the Muslims is heavily censured by the Columbia Encyclopedia, but it is not mentioned that the Spanish Arabs were furnished with castrated slave boys, which were apparently castrated by the Catholic monks, by Catholic France.

"[Saint] Augustine's works became the great source of justification for intolerance." ~Humphrey.

End of the World: An Anabaptist preacher of the early 1500's, Hoffman, declares that the events of The End of the World will begin in 1533, and that Strassburg will be the New Jerusalem. "... There the magistrates would set up the kingdom of righteousness, while the 144,000 would maintain the power of the City, and the true Gospel and the true Baptism [full adult immersion] would spread over the earth. No man would be able to withstand the power, signs and wonders of the saints; and with them would appear, like two mighty torches, Enoch and Elias, who would consume the earth with the fire proceeding from their mouths." ~Richard Heath quoted in WPF, p. 7.

AD 1534-1549-Pope Paul III, fathers three illegitimate/bastard sons and one illegitimate daughter. Pope Paul III makes his favorite bastard son, Pierluigi, Duke of Parma and Piacenza. Pope Paul approves of the Jesuit Order [his private army], and introduces the Index of Forbidden Books [denouncing freedom of the press]. Pope Paul III will bestow the rank of Cardinality upon two of his teenage grandsons. "The Roman Catholic Church, convinced that it is the only True Church, must demand the right to freedom for herself alone and the end of freedom for all others." ~Jesuit publication.

The Act of Supremacy is passed, establishing King Henry VIII as head of the Church of England; King Henry VIII, of England, now proclaims himself as head of his own English Reformed Church [Anglican international church=Episcopal in USA]. Thomas Cranmer becomes Archbishop of Canterbury.

Freedom of the press is not gained by way of the Protestant movement either, as, "Luther ... Set his pen in motion concerning this Catholic translation of the Bible. 'The freedom of the Word,' which he claimed for himself, was not to be accorded to his opponent Emser ... When ... He learnt that Emser's translation was to be printed ... At Rostock, he not only appealed himself to his follower, Duke Henry of Mecklenburg, with the request that 'For the Glory of the evangel of Christ and the Salvation of all souls' he would put a stop to this printing, but he also worked on the councilors of the Elector of Saxony to support this action. He denied the right and the power of the Catholic authorities to inhibit his books; on the other hand he invoked the arm of the Secular Authorities against all writings that were displeasing to him ... When the controversy on the Lord's Supper was started at Wittenberg, the utmost precautions were taken to suppress the writings of the Swiss Reformed theologians and of the German preachers who shared the latter's views."

Is it in the Bible? "The belief that the soul continues its existence after the dissolution of the body is a matter of philosophical or theological speculation rather than of simple faith, and is accordingly nowhere expressly taught in Holy Scripture." ~The Jewish Encyclopedia, 1910, Vol. VI, p. 564.

The death of Pope Clement VII, and the election of Alessandro Farnese as Pope Paul III.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

The Catholic Church will do all within its powers to curtail the rise of Protestantism, "At the instigation of Luther and Melanchthon there was issued, in 1528, by the Elector John of Saxony, an edict to the following effect: 'Books and pamphlets [of the Anabaptists, Sacramentarians, etc.] must not be allowed to be bought or sold or read. . . Also those who are aware of such breaches of the orders laid down herein, and do not give information, shall be punished by loss of life and property. Melanchthon demanded in the most severe and comprehensive manner the censure and suppression of all books that were hindering to Lutheran teaching. The writings of Zwingli and the Zwinglians were placed formally on the [Forbidden] Index at Wittenberg.'" ~Johannes Janssen, History of the German People From the Close of the Middle Ages, 16 vols., tr. A.M. Christie, St. Louis: B. Herder, 1910, orig. 1891.

"The Middle Ages reveled in cruelty to men and beasts... The [Catholic] Church was venal, sensual, gross and inhuman... To torture prisoners to slay women and children wholesale... was held by the Christian knight as lawful... Robert Fitzgerald, near Antioch, brought back into camp a hundred heads of Turks... Saracens' noses and ears were spitted on a lance as a trophy. A boat's load of Greek noses and thumbs were sent to Byzantium... Bohemund killed and roasted some prisoners as a jest... Some of the Christians [it is stated in their own chronicles] ate the flesh of Turks... Knights who on first catching sight of the Holy City... Slaughtered so vast a number of unbelievers in the Mosque of Omar that the reins of their horses were bathed in blood." ~Meller. Cf. Revelation 4:6-8, beasts in Heaven.

And the battle wages on in the academia world also, "Moreover, antagonism had also grown up among the Protestant universities, and one reproached the other with being the fosterer and begetter of false doctrine. . . Wittenberg itself, but lately regarded as the birthplace of a new revelation and of the newly awakened Church of Christ, in 1567 was declared to be a 'stinking cesspool of the devil... At Strassburg Catholic writings were suppressed as early as 1524... The Council at Frankfort-on-the-Main exercised... Strict censorship... At Rostock, in 1532, the printer of the Brethren of the Common Life was sent to prison, because he had used his printing press to the disadvantage of Protestantism... Wherever the prince, according to old Byzantine fashion, thought himself a theologian, he managed the censorship in person.'" ~Johannes Janssen.

A domestic servant, Elizabeth Barton, of Kent, England, is hanged for witchcraft and treason at Tarbon after predicting the death of Anne Boleyn [one of King Henry VIII's many wives].

AD 1534-Martin Luther does not believe the Books of the Apocrypha should be regarded as Holy Scripture. Coverdale in his 1835 translation [first English Bible] concurs with this thinking. The Roman Church declares, "They abound in historical and geographical inaccuracies and anachronisms.'" ~The problems of Tobit and Judith are summarized in Larue, Old Testament, ch. 28 and 29, and in Metzger, Apocrypha.

The Canonical Books also contain such inaccuracies and contradictions. For example, in Genesis 26, Ahimelech of Gerar is said to be a Philistine, but the story is set in the time of Abraham, several hundred years before the Philistines, confirming multiple authors in some works.

In Genesis 14:14, reference is made to an exploit of Abraham to the northern city of Dan, which is a city, named after Abraham's great grandson, and which city was not conquered and renamed by the Israelites until hundreds of years later. ~Judges 18:29.

The 'Chronicles,' the name usually given to the anonymous author of four Old Testament books, describes King David as collecting ten thousand 'Darics' for the construction of the Temple in Jerusalem. ~1 Chronicles 29:7.

The daric is a coin named after King Darius of Persia, who lived some five hundred years after David. ~Michael D. Coogan, Money, art. in Oxford Companion to the Bible.

Elizabeth Barton, "The Nun of Kent," b. 1506, English ecstatic opposed to matrimonial policy of Henry VIII, is executed at Tyburn.

AD 1534-Pope Paul III is elected on his promise of reform regarding the Church. Lutheranism and Protestantism are having their negative affect on patronage of this large Christian institution. Founding of "The Society of Jesus," by Saint Ignatius of Loyola [confirmed by Pope Paul III in 1540], and whose motto is, "Ad Majorem Dei Gloriam," "To the Greater Glory of God," known as Jesuits and taking vows of chastity, poverty, and obedience to none other than the Pope. Pope Paul III [1534-1549] is accused of killing his mother and a niece for inheritance and of poisoning two priests and a Bishop for disagreeing with him.

It is the altering of their original vow that causes them to be expelled from almost every major country of the world at one time or another and in 1773, Pope Clement XIV is finally persuaded to suppress the Jesuit Order, but the Jesuit Order is re-established in 1814 by Pope Pius VII. World leaders see the Jesuits as an extension of the Church meddling in private as well as political affairs of the state and one by one expel this Order from their lands. Russia is the only exception, having the support of the Russian Monarchs. The Jesuits are known to establish some of the best learning institutions wherever they are allowed to remain. Following the rules of their order [directions from the Pope] they are also eventually expelled from the Philippines, a predominantly Catholic country.

The Jesuits were originally formed to travel to the Holy Lands and convert Muslims to Christianity, but were diverted from this endeavor due to hostilities and other more pressing matters within the Church. St. Francis Xavier was a Jesuit who helped in the spread of Christianity to India and Japan. The Roman Catholic Church claims that the "Jesuit Oath," made public by Robert Ware is a falsehood as published in the work, "Blunders and Forgeries," by Bridget.

The Church does admit that the Jesuits are fallible, and submits the writings of nearly one hundred Jesuits that have been placed on the Roman "Forbidden Index." Also claiming the over exuberance of others for their narrowness of mind and clandestine actions, while in foreign countries, by overlooking the prevailing norms and customs indigenous to the people where they dwell.

Saint Ambrose says, "Vere frustra impugnata qui apud impios et infidos impietatis arcensitur cum fidei sit magister." [He in truth is accused in vain of impiety by the impious and the faithless, though he is a teacher of the faith].

The writers Hassenmueller and Hospinian, who collect and defend all the charges against the Jesuits, support the early persecutions of the Jesuit Order. Their prejudiced motif sets forth another writing of umbrage against the Order by Zahorowski's, "Monita Secreta Societatis Jesu," in Cracow, 1614, which is a satire on the rule of the order.

The Jesuit schools are not always tainted, as they were exceptionally successful at examinations for entrance as officers into the French Army, and whose members proved themselves among the bravest and most vigorous men of the nation. In a circumstance such as this [military like discipline], the proof that the Jesuit education fit its pupils for the "Battle of life" is found in the willingness of parents to entrust their children to the Jesuits. ~From Brou, op cit infra, II, 409; Tampe in Etudes, Paris, 1900, pp. 77, 749.

On 14 March, 1628, seven Jesuits are seized at St. John's Clerkenwell, with an abundant number of papers declaiming the monarchy. This does not help their cause in England. The "Oath of Allegiance" is revived with the "Oath of Abjuration," and the "Three questions" proposed by Fairfax on 1 August 1647.

Father Henry More is recalled by the Provincial, Fr. Silesdon, from England, a punishment that leads to his writing the history of the English Jesuits in the year 1635. Jesuits lose eight of their members to the scaffold [hanging] and thirteen in prison in five years, 1678-83 for their political defiance. Eugène Sue's, "Juif Errant," "Wandering Jew," published in 1844, becomes the most popular anti-Jesuit book ever printed with most of its proclaimed tenets being from the Masonic Order.

Future exposes about a "Black Pope" are also attributed to the Masons in retaliations for the perennial persecution by Vatican authorities. Saint Ignatius' system of demanding a "Blind obedience" has done as much to paralyze the spread of the Jesuit Order, as it has to help spread its doctrines. No singular person more loved liberty or the virtues of freedom more than Ignatius, his error being in the means, rather than its cause. "Theirs is not to reason why, theirs is but to do and die."

Pope Benedict XIV, in a letter dated 24 April, 1748, states that the Jesuits are one, "Whose religious are everywhere reputed to be in the good odor of Christ, chiefly because, in order to advance the young men who frequent their churches and schools in pursuit of liberal knowledge, leaning, and culture, as well as in deeds and habits of the Christian religion and piety, they zealously exert every effort greatly to the advantage of the young." ~The Columbia Encyclopedia states that by the 16th century, Protestants as well as the Catholics were punishing or executing men for heresy.

Some Catholics go so far as to insist that Catholics, having so exalted an opinion of their creed, were logical and consistent in doing so, while the Protestants, being free to read both sides and less peremptory, had no right to inflict such terminal penalties. To all such Sophistry spoken of by laymen the moderns must reply that the Vatican and the hierarchy were mainly defending their own proclaimed privileges by such outrages and mendacious attributes on the most precious of all freedoms, the right to form and assert one's own convictions, free will. And it is unjust to Protestants to suggest that as long as they had the power to do so they were equally guilty with the Catholics of torturing and murdering men who differed from them.

In most cases individuals were surely punished, but often given the right to leave the conclave rather than submit to death. Christian Apologists claim that the Catholic Church was the first to provide schools and colleges for the children of the working poor and has always been eager to provide education. The appalling Christian record has shown that acceptance of the Christian faith is most widespread in the now third world nations and least in the higher cultural strata. Witness the legacy of the Church in South America, Central America, and the Philippines.

World wide the Catholic Church initiated schools to promote their cause and cared little for the indigenous masses. Vague statements about the zeal of the Jesuits on the one hand, and the Reformers on the other, to found schools after the middle of the sixteenth century have no weight in face of the broad facts that at the time of the French Revolution 85% to 90% of the people of every country in Europe except Prussia, where the Rationalist Frederic the Great had inaugurated a school system, were primarily illiterate. Jesuit colleges had an exclusively limited scope, and the Protestants sought only to enable the young to read the Bible and religious literature and nothing else.

The Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge will open 2,000 schools in England in the 18th century, but they constrained their work to giving children only an elementary capacity in order to read and write. The Bishop of London, 1714, stated that the first care of the Society was "To fit the child for its inferior station."

Even the French masses, on the eve of the French Revolution, 90% were illiterate, and the most densely ignorant States, apart from the Greek Catholic Balkans and Russia, were Papal Italy, Spain, and Portugal. The struggle was led almost entirely by laymen, who were largely skeptics, but never Catholics, to secure a national system of schools, which Pagan Rome had initiated fifteen centuries. In more religious countries the proportion was much smaller, and the degree of illiteracy corresponded to the extent of clerical influence. "Only the clergy were generally able to read." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 2, pg. 446.

When the Papal States were taken over by the Italian Government, in 1870, 70% of the people over the age of seven were illiterate. The relative positions were much the same at the end of the century, according to statistics in the Encyclopedia of Education, published by Columbia University, and a report of the U.S. Commissioners of Education quoted by Webb for the year 1900.

The proportion of illiterates has been reduced to 0.11% in Germany, 0.30 in Switzerland, 3.57 in Scotland, 4.0 in Holland, 4.90 in France, and 5.80 in Great Britain, it was still 7.0 in Ireland, 23.80 in Austria, 28 in Hungary, 30 in Greece, 38 in Italy, 61 in Russia, 68 in Spain, 79 in Portugal, 86 in Serbia, and 89 in Rumania.

These statistics are furnished by a governmental agency in America and are publicly available, yet American Catholic apologists continued, like those of England, to boast of the Church's zeal for education in all ages. But the mere capacity to read and write is not enough. Progress depends on the matter taught in the schools and available for reading afterwards. Compare in this respect the fine system in Soviet Russia to-day highly praised by Prof. Dewey and other authorities, and that of Italy and Spain under Fascism, or the school-life of Mexico to-day and that of Fascist Peru or Brazil. ~from the works of J. McCabe, Rationalists Encyclopedia.

The Catholic Inquisition, in its endeavors to force Catholicism upon the natives wrought terrible harm to the families of heretics: and for various sordid reasons. "Of the fruit of the Tree of Knowledge thou shalt not eat," was literally enforced by the Priests by ecclesiastical censorship and the burning of books, and by the 'Inquisition of Faith,' the Forbidden Index, the rack, and the stake. In England, which never admitted the Inquisition but had a national law, the statute 'De Haeretico Comburendo,' condemning heretics to be burned alive, was abolished as early as 1678.

"What strikes us most in considering the medieval tortures is not so much their diabolical barbarity, which it is indeed impossible to exaggerate, as the extraordinary variety, and what may be termed the artistic skill, they displayed." ~Lecky.

No Protestant church has held that for more than 200 years. But the Catholic Church is bound to revert to this practice if ever a Catholic government feels itself strong enough to permit it. One may disregard any Catholic writers who say otherwise, as His Eminence the Pope, John Paul II, has re-instituted the Inquisition, under a new nom de plume as late as 1983.

Let those who will defend the Church quote a Papal Declaration that the law is not in abeyance, but is officially disowned and abolished, hopefully, forever.

“Extraordinary variety and elaborated with artistic skill by men who pondered long on the best methods of evoking the most intense and prolonged human suffering.” ~H.W. Smith

In France, torture or execution for heresy continued until the days of Voltaire; in Italy, Spain, Portugal, and Catholic Latin America it remained in effect until the 19th century, and yet no one notices the still more important fact that the Church of Rome still 'Officially' claims in its Canon Law, reaffirmed in this century, not only that it has the right but the duty to put heretics, by which it means all who were once baptized in it, even as infants, and have quit it, must be punished, and therefore to inflict on them any punishment short of death.

“It was not uncommon for the victim to be snatched from the flames after being thoroughly seared, left to suffer with his burns and then be returned to the flames.” ~Barnes

AD 1534-Henry VIII assumes authority over the English Church by way of the “Acts of Supremacy.” The split from the Roman Catholic Church is now official. King Henry VIII officially breaks England away from the domineering Catholic Church, and confiscates Her monastic property and monies [collections]; beginning of Episcopal Church with Henry as the leader.

AD 1534-1572-Isaac Luria, kabbalist, mystic, poet, studies with Moses Cordovero the texts of Zohar. Luria taught meditation and prayer based on the Sephiroth and the Kabbalah. He believed in the concept of God's self-limitation: God's rise to Light made the creation of the fixed universe and this light flowing from God would eventually return. Some light being diffused is the creation of evil and of the lower worlds.

AD 1535-King Henry VIII declares the King [himself] and his successor are Supreme Head of the Church of England and severs ties to the Pope's English revenues.

Sir Thomas More is executed for refusing to accept King Henry VIII's new position as the supreme head of the Church of England. Four centuries after his execution he is Canonized by Pope Pius XI.

The Myles Coverdale Bible is the first complete Bible ever printed in English. Coverdale's Bible appears just before Tyndale's death. Coverdale bases his translation on the Catholic Latin Vulgate, on Tyndale's work, and on Martin Luther's German Bible. Coverdale is the first to separate the Apocrypha, placing it as an appendix. His was also the first version to introduce chapter summaries distinct from the Vulgate's chapter headings. Coverdale revises his version of the Psalms for the Great Bible of 1539. His version of the Psalms is the version used in the Book of Common Prayer. The 1537 edition received royal license, but is later banned in 1546.

“Apocrypha; the bokes and treatises, which amonge the fathers of old are not rekened to be of like authorite with the other books of the byble, nether are they founde in the Canon of Hebrue.” ~Coverdale Bible, 1535.

The study of Canon Law is forbidden in Cambridge University.

AD 1536-39-English Monasteries are suppressed and King Henry VIII seizes Catholic Church properties, and an Act of Parliament declares the authority of the Pope void in England.

AD 1536-41-“The Last Judgment” is painted by Michelangelo Buonarroti on the altar wall of the Sistine Chapel. All the figures are painted as being naked [as was Michelangelo's tradition] the Pope is displeased, but the homosexual Michelangelo refuses to clothe the figures.

His work is unmatched in his time and even now and his talents are commissioned by the various Popes to paint, design, and sculpt for the Church. The Church places clothing on the figures ten years later [by other painters]. Michelangelo has a single minded independence, and is argumentative, quarreling with Popes Leo X, Clement VIII, and Pius III over his paintings and how figures and Biblical prophets are to be portrayed.

Evidence that the Catholic Church wrote its own history is found in Diderot's Encyclopédie, which reveals the reason why Pope Clement XIII, 1758-69, ordered all the Encyclopedie volumes be destroyed immediately after their publication in 1759.

To Pope Pius XII, “I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians.” ~Mahatma Gandhi

Popes Clement VIII and Paul V, declared that anyone should be delivered to the Inquisition who said that 'Kissing,' touching or embracing for sexual pleasure was not a grievous sin.

AD 1536-Assembly in Copenhagen, Denmark, abolishes the Authority of the Roman Catholic Church. Denmark and Sweden break away from the abusive Church authorities.

On 6 October, William Tyndale, translator of the New Testament into English, is burned at the stake for heresy by secular authorities [by order of the Catholic Church, which always has others do its dirty work]. Tyndale is put to death, but he left his Old Testament translation in manuscript form, to English ecclesiastical authorities who ordered his Bible burned because it was thought to be part of Lutheran reform.

AD 1536-John Calvin in his "Institutes Of The Christian Religion," which he wrote when he was only 27 years of age, dedicating his book to the King of France, the Jesuits so hated him for it that he was driven from France and forced to reside in Geneva. ~ Cf. cf. Luke 14:26, Revelation 2:6

"The Presbyterian Westminster Confession And Faith," 1648, is a continuation of Calvin's "Institutes," and is the basis for the Church of Scotland and the Covenanters when they resisted the monarchical powers of Rome and England.

The Pope is called "The Man of Sin," and that "Roman Anti-Christ," and it also denounces Anti-Christian tyranny. The Calvinists are responsible for the new generation of mankind believing in a fair and just system and what we now call "The Sword of the Spirit."

"There was little political liberty in Geneva under Calvin's regime, and still less of religious liberty. His practical influence was on the side of an autocratic state and complete conformity of the individual to the established powers." ~Georgia Harkness.

AD 1536- Loyola starts the Jesuit Order in 1536 and is arrested by his fellow Catholic brethren, the Inquisition, released, and goes to Pope Paul III; throwing himself at the feet of the Pope, promising to be completely at his service. The Pope charts him, creating the Jesuit Order; now he has Papal protection, and some believe this is the beginning of their awful history of deeds of blood. And war after war after war after war, they're all attributed to the Jesuit Order in some way, with Catholic nobles contributing money, donating castles and establishing schools and other financial support to the Jesuit Order.

Much of the poverty that pervaded Europe during this era is blamed on the Roman Church and, "There came round about 1536-40 - a change... The temptation to loot Church property and the habit of doing so had appeared and was growing; and this rapidly created a vested interest in promoting the change of religion. Those who attacked Catholic doctrine, as, for instance, in the matters of celibacy in the monastic orders... Opened the door for the seizure of the enormous clerical endowments... By the Princes... The property of convents and monasteries passed wholesale to the looters over great areas of Christendom: Scandinavia, the British Isles, the Northern Netherlands, much of the Germanies and many of the Swiss Cantons. The endowments of hospitals, colleges, schools, guilds, were largely though not wholly seized... Such an economic change in so short a time our civilization had never seen... The new adventurers and the older gentry who had so suddenly enriched themselves, saw, in the return of Catholicism, peril to their immense new fortunes." ~Hilaire Belloc.

Three hundred and seventy-six religious houses are dissolved in England by Royal Decree.

"The judge is always sure of doing justice; anyone brought before him is inevitably guilty, and if he defends himself, doubly guilty." ~Michel

"The cities found Protestantism profitable... For a slight alteration in their theological garb they escaped from Episcopal taxes and courts, and could appropriate pleasant parcels of ecclesiastical property... The princes... Could be spiritual as well as temporal lords, and all the wealth of the Church could be theirs... The Lutheran princes suppressed all monasteries in their territory except a few whose inmates had embraced the Protestant faith." ~Will Durant.

An Act of British Parliament declares the authority of the Pope void in England.

And the monarchies were not far behind in exploiting the wealth of the Church, "Right from the beginning, Luther's spiritual revolt had let loose material greed. The German rulers, the Scandinavian monarchs and Henry VIII of England had all taken advantage of the break from Papal tutelage to appropriate both the wealth and the control of their respective Churches." ~Henri Daniel-Rops.

"They do not care in the least about religion; they are only anxious to get dominion into their hands, to be free from the control of Bishops . . . Under cover of the Gospel, the princes were only intent on the plunder of the Churches." ~Melancthon.

"Passed up and down Bohemia, Moravia, and Silesia . . . Pillaging monasteries, massacring monks, and compelling the population to accept the Four Articles of Prague . . ." ~Will Durant.

Luther felt that the plundering was justified, "The abbey is as much your property as the game that runs on your lands. The monasteries . . . Are dens of iniquity, which you must root out, if you would have God bless you." ~Martin Luther.

"The great Scottish nobles . . . Supported the religious revolution because it gave them the power to loot the Church and the monarchy wholesale." ~Hilaire Belloc.

Of course, the Church protested bitterly over these confiscations, "This certainly is a fine turn of affairs, if property is wickedly taken away from priests so that soldiers may make use of it in worse fashion; and the latter squander their own wealth, and sometimes that of others, so that no one benefits." ~Bishop Erasmus.

AD 1537- A new Bible appears with the title affirmed as the work being done by Thomas Matthew, and which is called Matthew's Bible. The Matthew Bible, by John Rogers, 1500-1555, is based on Tyndale and Coverdale and receives royal license [but is not authorized for use in public worship], there have been numerous editions, but the 1551 edition contained numerous offensive notes [created by Tyndale].

Most authorities now attribute the work to John Rogers, a Tyndale associate. The 1540 and 1541 editions contain a preface by Archbishop Cranmer. These later editions are commonly known as the Cranmer Bible. Rogers was not proficient in biblical languages and relied on the work of others - two-thirds came from Tyndale and one-third came from Coverdale.

The later versions are the first to use the words "This is the Bible appointed to the use of the churches." John Rogers, under the pseudo name of Thomas Matthew revises the works of both Tyndale and Coverdale. Publishes the first complete version of the Bible in English now known as the Matthew's Bible. William Tyndale, the English reformer, is hunted down by the Church as ordered burned at the stake.

AD 1538- Destruction of religious relics and shrines in southern England, Thomas A. Becket's shrine at Canterbury.

On 17 December, Pope Paul III officially excommunicates King Henry VIII, once proclaimed Defender of the Faith by the Church. Pope Paul III declares a crusade against England in an unsuccessful attempt to make these subjects slaves of the Catholic Church.

By the middle of the 14th century, Genesis and Exodus have been translated into rhyming English verse.

AD 1539-The Great Bible based on translations of Matthew, Coverdale, and Tyndale becomes popular and is "Appointed to the use for the Churches."

For nearly thirty years it is the only Lawful Version of the Bible used in England. The King James Version derives from this translation as well as the Bishop's Bible.

Richard Taverner's [1505-1577] revisions of the Matthew Bible, mostly New Testament revisions since he couldn't read Hebrew, 1st edition is the most reliable.

AD 1539-Act of Six Articles, to prevent the spread of Lutheranism, King Henry VIII denies basic tenets of Roman Catholicism. The king claims Divine Right [from Droit de Seigneur, which is the belief that the first child is believed to be of god, [the king, who might have] impregnating the mother] to rule and not follow the dictates of the Church. Obedience to the Catholic Church is now declared a crime and Lutherans can be burned as heretics.

Another right of Kings is: "Jus Primae Noctis," a mediaeval Latin phrase meaning the right to the first night, that is to say, the right of the feudal lord to have the bride of one of his serfs to sleep with him on the wedding night.

The Church claims that the eagerness of many modern Christian historians to repeat this assertion is merely another wicked myth of the Rationalist historians of the last century in amusing others for profit, for the Church has adopted an entirely false estimate of medieval regard for chastity as many commentaries in this work prove contrary, and seem to be unaware that in some parts of the Catholic world today a husband considers it a praiseworthy act to lend his wife to a visiting traveler [still practiced by the Alaskan Eskimos], and was still quite common in the Middle Ages. In some European countries, when the king did not assert his right of Jus Primae Noctis, the local priest retained that privilege. "The question of the mythological and legendary character of the Gospels did not first arise in modern times. The historical reliability of the accounts of Jesus' life was already an issue for Christian thinkers in the 2nd century." ~Robert L. Wilken, The Christians As the Romans Saw Them, New Haven: Yale, 1984, p. 112.

Instead of being a Rationalist discovery the right was learnedly discussed early in the last century by none other than the zealous Catholic writer Louis Veuillot who, fully admitting it, traced it to the pious zeal of early Church Councils in ordering married couples to abstain on the "First night" or "Right of the Lord," Sunday.

When priests lost power over the people due to the decline of superstition, the secular rulers usurped, wherever possible, the privileges which the priests had enjoyed through fears and taboos. As a result of this, the deflowering of the bride by the lords of the manors continued for some time, although it occasionally met with serious opposition, and was one of the contributing causes of the downfall of medieval feudalism.

"... Religion is the oldest, largest, and least productive industry in all history." ~Heinlein.

Le droit du Seigneur existed in parts of France until the eve of the French Revolution. In ancient Ireland it was not only a king's right but his duty to deflower brides before they were handed over to their husbands; and King Conchobarn is praised in an ancient record for his punctilious devotion to duty in having destroyed the virginity of every maid in Ulster. Among the Guanches of the Canaries, it was a matter of considerable anxiety to the bridegroom that the services of a prince of royal blood should be obtained to deflower his bride, for unless a prince could be persuaded to bestow this favor on him, his children would be regarded as bastards and the marriage would be null and void.

If the woman became pregnant, her child was considered of noble heritage and the children born from conjugal relations with her husband were considered commoners. When one of the great lords of Goa married, it was the custom for him to take his bride to the sovereign and ask him to sleep with her the first three nights. ~Read The Ten Commandments by Joseph Lewis for a detailed analysis regarding this custom which was followed by priest and clergy as well as nobility.

In French historical literature the Le Droit du Seigneur is as commonly noted as any other right, and there are plenty of documents referring to the redemption of this and of equally indelicate rights. ~see Dufour's Histoire de la Prostitution, 6 vols., 1851-61.

The historian, Bede, tells how English nobles in his time took the serf-women whenever they pleased, and sold them when they became pregnant. Frazer's inquiry in his "Folk-Lore in the Old Testament," 1918, shows only that it was not stipulated in Scottish law, and Schmidt's, "Jus Primae Noctis," proves only that it was not universally recognized, but also during the greater part of the Feudal Age serfs are nothing less than virtual slaves and not protected by Law, and the noble or his chief officials took any woman that pleased them. ~J. McCabe, Rationalists Encyclopaedia

In Chapter 12, entitled "The Prelates of the Church," Eusebius wordily describes the pontification and arrogance, "The different heads of the churches, who from being shepherds of the reasonable flocks of Christ ... Were condemned by 'Divine Justice' as unworthy of such a charge; ... Moreover, the ambitious aspirings of many to office, and the injudicious and unlawful ordinations that took place, the divisions among the confessors themselves, the great schisms and difficulties industriously fomented by the factious, ... Heaping up affliction upon affliction: all this I have resolved to pass by,” as being too shameful to be preserved in detail for posterity and further embarrassment of the Holy Church.

The Great Bible is published, which is a revision of Matthew's Bible. Coverdale plays a great part in this revision. The Bible's pages measured 9” by 15,” with a text, which is 8.5” by 13” earns this Bible its name. This Bible is often chained to the lectern in the various outlying parish churches, carrying out a 1538 command that the Churches set up a Bible so that it could be read by the public.

The first edition of the Great Bible is published in 1539, with the second edition following in 1540.

The new Great Bible is altered to show preference to monarchical rule aka Divine Rule, so in 1546 King Henry VIII orders that no one is to have or use the Tyndale or Coverdale versions, but royal approval is officially given to the Great Bible, for the most part based on the two prior versions.

The Great Bible, by Thomas Cromwell, is the first English Bible to be authorized for public use in English churches, although defective in many places, it is based upon last Tyndale's New Testament of 1534-1535, corrected by a Latin version of the Hebrew Old Testament, Latin Bible of Erasmus, and Complutensian Polyglot, last edition

AD 1540- 1581-Saint Edmund Campion, English clergy, is ordained a priest in 1578 and returns to England in 1580 on a religious mission to re-establish Roman Catholicism in England. To avoid being captured by the government in this Protestant land, he rarely spent more than a day in any place. Persecuted for his stand he wrote a courageous condemnation on the Church of England, “Decem Rationes” [Ten Reasons], which is distributed, 1581, at the University of Oxford commencement in. Shortly thereafter he is captured by the Queen's men and brought before Queen Elizabeth, who offers him honors and prosperity if he will recant. He refuses the offer, is imprisoned, tortured, and hanged as a traitor on December 1, 1581.

Beatified in 1886 as one of the “Forty English Martyrs” canonized by Pope Paul VI in 1970.

AD 1540- First published versions of Copernicus' heliocentric theory, which is later condemned by the Church.

Establishment of the new order of the Jesuits as new troops in the Roman Catholic war with the Protestants. Ignatius Loyola is a Spanish soldier, who is wounded in a battle between the French and the Spanish, whereupon his leg is shattered. Because Loyola, a former ladies man, is brave in conflict, the French General, orders his own doctors to attend Loyola. They set the leg and send him back home to the Counsel of Loyola in Spain, in the area of the Basques. Loyola; desiring to regain use of his leg, for it had not healed properly, made a rack, which would stretch the leg, but would also cause severe pain. Ignatius endures this pain in attempting to stretch his leg to get it back to normal shape [He had it re-broken, again, a couple of times and it still did not heal properly, so he had a perpetual limp].

Due to a disfiguring disability, Saint Ignatius Loyola could no longer be the courtier among women, and as a result, he went into a depression, and there he had this vision of the saints, etc., etc., and he wrote his spiritual exercises. Loyola conceived of an army, the spiritual exercises would be basic training for all of his Jesuits. “Black is white and white is black,” quoting Ignatius Loyola, that's the way the Church thought, don't contradict it, for Loyola also had an indomitable will, and he set upon a journey to regain what the Papacy had lost to the Reformation. Freedom of thought is totally anathema to Catholicism.

“That he should learn to think for himself was of course out of the question. With such a training, the development of free personality was of course out of the question.” ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 5, 296.

This man was a soldier, a lawyer, and a strong willed Catholic who put together a legion of soldiers and warriors to get back, by force, what Christianity had lost, as well as to institute a World Government from Jerusalem, and with the aid of Pope Paul III in 1540, is formally accepted as the Jesuit Order.

Every country of Europe, even the “Most Christian,” where the Society of Jesus has grasped wealth and power, has been forced to expel the parasites; and to “Padlock” the vast establishments of this alleged sacrosanct religious order which answers directly to the Pope.

If one would take a census of illiteracy and poverty, just in those countries where the Church has had or yet has most power and wealth, the people are most ignorant and impoverished. It may be a “Coincidence,” but it is a very suspicious matter of fact. All these things are of the “Fruits,” without question, of moral and educational Christianity. ~Much of the information regarding the Jesuit Order was obtained from Rick Martin at email, m888@mindspring.com.

It is my sincere effort to attempt as many perspectives as possible. The purpose of the Jesuit Order, formally established by Pope Paul III, was believed by some, meant to destroy the Protestant Reformation. They called it the "Counter-Reformation."

Nicolini of Rome wrote: "The Jesuits, by their very calling, by the very essence of their institution, are bound to seek, by every means, right or wrong, the destruction of Protestantism. This is the condition of their existence, the duty they must fulfill, or cease to be Jesuits." ~from Footprints of the Jesuits, R. W. Thompson, 1894.

The Jesuits obligated themselves with an oath, part of which was published in 1899, and reads: "I do now renounce and disown my allegiance as due to any heretical King, Prince or State, named Protestant, or liberals, or obedience to any of their laws or magistrates or officers...I do further declare that the doctrine of the churches of England and Scotland, of the Calvinists, Huguenots, and other of the name Protestant or Liberals, to be damnable, and they themselves to be damned who will not forsake the same...I do further declare that I will help, assist and advise all or any of His Holiness' agents, in any place where I shall be, in Switzerland, Germany, Holland, Denmark, Sweden, Norway, England, Ireland or America, or in any other kingdom or territory I shall come to, and do my utmost to extirpate the heretical Protestant or liberal doctrines, and to destroy all their pretended powers, legal or otherwise." ~from Errors of the Roman Catholic Church, Fifteen Contributors, 1894.

The "Society of Jesus" is recognized as the chief opposing force of Protestantism. As the Order became dominant in determining the plans and policy of the Rowish Church the Order grew and flourished. Its power sprang from chapters in France, Italy and Spain, and hence to all civilized lands. Its solitary apostles were observed shadowing the thrones of Europe, giving support to those who supported their cause.

They sought, by any means possible, to establish and confirm the power and authority of Rome, and to undermine the rising core of Protestantism. The Jesuits are the authors of socialist communism and spread their disease to South America amongst the native Indians. The economic system of the Dark Ages was feudalism consisting of rich landowners and the poor peasants. It was a sinful for anyone to make a profit by anyone other than the feudal lords.

The Protestants claim belief in the rights of man versus the rights of the Church, at least in theory, if not in practice, and if the world is to be returned to the Dark Ages, the Protestant middle class must be destroyed. The great deception is that the Jews are the authors of communism [Many believe that Zionism is a form of Jewish communism].

The Protestants of Germany and England had exposed the comprehensive corruption of the monastic orders, and those who advocated reform in Rome itself wanted the suppression of all Orders rather than the establishment of any new ones. Ignatius had great difficulty in securing permission to found even a "Society," whose members should take the usual vows of poverty, chastity, and obedience and live in communities without being classed as monks.

Permission is granted after years of intrigue and deceit, the followers of Ignatius in Rome were directed ostentatiously to serve the sick poor and quietly secure rich youths and the support of rich women, which left a permanent mark on the body. It was characterized also from the start by the martial spirit of the ex-soldier Ignatius and by its special consecration in the Pope's service as a regiment to fight heresy.

Its activity was rightly called "Jesuitry" from the first. The vow of poverty, collective as well as individual, was prevented from interfering with the accumulation of wealth, which was a primary aim, by drawing a distinction between "Colleges" and "Houses of the professed," equal to monasteries, and claiming that the former could acquire unlimited property. From the first also the characteristic Jesuit practice of spying on each other and tale bearing was introduced and the vow of obedience was especially stressed.

Nicolini mistranslates the Constitutions when he says that the Jesuit is "Bound to obey an order to commit sin," but the document is written in such crude Latin that one might so interpret it; while in practice a Jesuit superior would always claim that it was his business to judge whether the act prescribed was sinful, and the appalling casuistry of the theologians of the Society would serve his purpose. The charge that they had in addition a secret Constitution, Monita Privata, is disputed.

The Jesuits contend that the Polish ex-Jesuit Zahorowski fabricated or falsified the document. He may have tampered with it, but so many copies of the document were found in Jesuit houses when the Society was suppressed in the eighteenth century that it is widely accepted as genuine. Modern Jesuits, on the other hand, try to convince the world of their high character by describing their "Spiritual Exercises."

One must judge the Society by its actual history and by the very grave charges against it, which the Pope fully endorsed in suppressing it. The Jesuits may never have laid it down in the public gaze that the end justifies the means, but it is a platitude of their history that they always went upon that axiom.

The special privileges, such as the right of their colleges to grant degrees, which they wheedled from favorable Popes, some Popes hated them as bitterly as most of the monks and clergy have always done, enabled them to capture the universities, and through these and their colleges, to which they drafted the sons of the rich and noble whom they particularly cultivated, they prepared Catholic lands for the horrifying Thirty Years War against Protestantism, in which groups of them followed the armies and hung about the camps. ~cf. Revelation 2:6

The Catholic system of education, for which their writers have secured a high and spurious reputation, was the narrowest and most vicious, especially concerning history, in Europe. Its singular aim was to inspire hatred of Protestantism in order to maintain their influence and in this respect they pressed their services as confessors of princes and nobles everywhere and connived at their vices.

In France, in the time of King Louis XIV, the King and all the leading ladies of the Court had Jesuit confessors, Louis had three in succession during the most corrupt seventeen years of his life, and there never was a more debased court. France had at first regarded them with just suspicion, but their leader, Father Manares, whom the Jesuits themselves had later to condemn for corrupt ways, wins the King over by "Discovering" a plot of the Huguenots [Protestants] and this prepares the way for the St. Bartholomew Massacre [a fabricated plot at most].

In non-Catholic lands their propensity for melodramatic secrecy and picturesque or murderous intrigue have full rein. In England, even under "Bloody Mary," they, as Burnet tells in his "History of the Reformation," II, 526, overreached themselves by trying to secure all the confiscated monastic property, and after Mary's death their intrigues in disguise and their inspiration of plots soured Elizabeth's policy of toleration [They boast of a hundred Jesuit martyrs in the period that followed]. In point of fact only five regularly admitted Jesuits were executed, for plots, and two saved their lives by turning over evidence as informers. They swelled their list of martyrs by getting priests in prison to "Join the Society," just before being executed.

In Scandinavia they strutted in court-dress as ambassadors, and even disguised doctrine, taught Lutheran theology in Protestant universities. In India some lived for years as mystics of the Hindu religion, and there, and in China, they made "Converts" by permitting, for which Popes repeatedly condemned them, a mixture of Hindu, or Confucian, and Christian ideas and practices, while they worked fraudulent miracles on the ignorant natives. In South America the Church is known to have made virtual slaves of and exploited their converts and raised great wealth by trade.

"Yet the soul is the witness of the soul and the refuge of the soul. The wicked may think no one sees them, but the gods see them distinctly. Those who commit violence are considered the worst offenders, and the king who pardons the perpetrators of violence incurs hatred and quickly perishes." ~ Laws of Manu.

The local Bishops whom they defied, and libeled, priests, and monks assailed Rome with complaints, and in 1656 Pope Alexander VII opened the attack on them in Europe by the scalding charges, especially of lax principles and leniency to spiritual vice, of his famous 'Provincial Letters.'

Popes repeatedly condemned their practices, AD 1710, 1715, 1742, and 1744, but dreaded their power and vindictiveness. More than one Pope is said to have been poisoned by them. Europe now begins to feel a power more subtle, yet more honest, than that of the "Society," that of Voltaire, and the great statesmen who were his pupils moved against them. The Marquis de Pombal got them expelled from Portugal in 1759.

Choiseul exposed their trickery and their vast wealth in France and secured their expulsion, 1764. Count D'Aranda had them suppressed in Spain, 1767, and Tannucci in the Kingdom of Naples. A tense and dramatic struggle now proceeded at Rome, the Jesuits using every device in their large repertory to avert the suppression, which the Catholic monarchs demanded. In 1773 Pope Clement XIV, in the Bull

"Dominus ac Redemptor Noster," abolishes the Society "Forever."

The charges against the Jesuits were in large part brought by Bishops or priests of high character, but the Jesuit writers airily dismiss them by giving the reader the impression that they were fabrications of wicked enemies of Christ.

It would be fatal to admit that the Pope endorsed the indictment, so the apologists uniformly say, in one of their most brazen perversions of facts, that in the Bull the Papacy has the audacity to claim no responsibility for themselves or the Church.

"No blame is laid by the Pope on the rules of the Order, or the present condition of its members, or the orthodoxy of their teaching." ~Pope Clement XIV, 1773, in 'Dominus Ad redemptor Noster.'

That is the language of the Catholic Encyclopaedia. The Pope is represented as being reluctantly forced by circumstances to suspend the Society for the time. The truth is that the Pope enumerates at length all the charges against the Jesuits and fully endorses them. He recalls that thirteen previous Popes have condemned their practices and their doctrines after full inquiry, but he says the remedies had "Neither efficacy nor strength to put an end to the trouble."

Therefore, "Recognizing that the Society of Jesus can no longer produce the abundant fruits and the considerable advantages for which it was created," he "Suppresses and abolishes the Society forever." ~Catholics grossly misrepresent the Pope's action, taking advantage of the fact that no English translation of the Bull is available, the last published being in The Jesuits, by R. Demaus, 1873.

The Society was restored, and in the sanguinary [bloodthirsty] reaction that followed the fall of Napoleon and the Jesuits returned to their pernicious intrigues. Today they are a body of very comfortable mediocrities confining their love of intrigue to the capture of rich Catholics for their own parishes for which most priests cordially detest them and angling for aristocratic or semi-aristocratic converts.

They have no distinction in learning or literature in spite of their wealth and leisure and they are superior to the other clergy only in their audacity in untruth and their solicitous ministrations to the wealthy. ~see McCabe's

Candid History of the Jesuits, 1913; F. A. Ridley's The Jesuits, 1938, is a sound, shorter, but broader study. A. Close's Jesuit Plots Against Great Britain (1935) is generally reliable. Of the works recommended in Robertson's Courses of Study, all of which are outdated, Nicolini's History of the Jesuits, 1853, is unreliable, and Créteineau-Joly's Histoire Religieuse, Politique, et Littéraire de la Compagnie de Jesus, Six Vols., 1845-6, which all encyclopedias recommend as the standard authority, is a monstrous piece of Jesuitry subsidized by the Jesuits themselves.

A conspiracy theory stating that the Jesuits used their Masonic Jews to introduce it in 1848 and again in 1917 with the Bolshevik Revolution [this is based on the notion of Lenin being part Jewish]. The Jesuit conspiracy states that their Shriner Freemason FDR [President Roosevelt] recognizes Russia's government in 1933, with the Jesuits financing Russian communism with their Knights of Malta of Wall Street.

This enabled Joseph Stalin to carry out his violent political purges of the Thirties, having deceived the world into believing communism was of Jewish origin, the Jesuits then used Hitler to implement the "Final Solution" to the Jewish issue, pursuant to the Jesuit Council of Trent, the result being the mass murder of European and Russian Jews by the Jesuit controlled SS, Gestapo, and Nazi factions.

AD 1540- Publishing of Copernicus' De Revolutionibus proposes that the sun is at the center of the Universe. The Church claims the earth is the center of the Universe.

Protestants fare no better in their struggle against the massive power of the Holy Mother the universal Roman Catholic Church; from the year 1540 to 1570 "It is proved by national authentic testimony, that nearly one million of Protestants were publicly put to death in various countries in Europe, besides all those who were privately destroyed, and of whom no human record exists." ~J.P. Callender, Illustrations of Popery, 1838, p. 400.

"The Inquisition alone, by tortures, starvation, or the fire, murdered more than 150,000 Protestants."

~Catholic historian Vergerius admits gleefully this tidbit of Catholicism during the glorious reign Pontificate of Pope Paul IV, 1555-1559.

AD 1541- Francisco Pizarro, Spanish conquistador, who after conquering the Incas [Inca: meaning Son of the Sun] in Peru, enslaves their ruler Atahualpa and ransoming him for a chamber eight feet in height with gold, and another with silver, is murdered by his men.

The Venetian Senate grants Levantine Jews permission to reside in Venice, as a result of the increased participation of Sephardic Jews in Balkan commerce; and is an attempt by Italian princes to fill their coffers at the expense of local interests [rights were granted for the financial benefit to Christian rulers, not to improve Jews' lot].

Latin translations, showing cross-cultural knowledge. Jews expelled from Naples; readmitted in 1735.

The Incas worship the Virgins of the Sun before a Golden Disc [similar to the Egyptian's Sun God Ra] and resist conversion to Christianity.

The similarities between Egyptian religious beliefs and the Incas has led some to believe that there may have been a trade route between these two civilizations long before the explorations of the Europeans. The similarities to Christianity surely taxed the minds of the early Friars. The Inca god, Viracocha, Lord of the World, after he created the world disappears into the sky, but he left instructions behind promising to return some day.

AD 1542-Bernardino Ochino, the head of the Capuchin Order, flees Italy and the corrupt Church, embracing Protestantism. Curione and Vermigi also left the church at this time. Ochino had been the most popular preacher in Italy at the time of his departure, and his flight caused much talk within the Church. As soon as he departed, the Swiss presses began printing and exporting editions of Ochino's works, many of which found their way back into Italy. Fearing that Ochino's words would cause more losses to Protestantism, Pope Paul III banned the works of all three authors from Italy.

"Martin Bucer ... Though anxious to be regarded as considerate and peaceable ... advocated quite openly the power of the authorities over consciences. He never rested until, in 1537 ... He brought about the entire suppression of the Mass at Augsburg. At his instigation, many fine paintings, monuments and ancient works of art in the churches were wantonly torn, broken and smashed. Whoever refused to submit and attend public worship was obliged within eight days to quit the city boundaries. Catholic citizens were forbidden under severe penalties to attend Catholic worship elsewhere ... In other ... Cities Bucer acted with no less violence and intolerance, for instance, at Ulm, where he supported Oecolampadius ... In 1531, and at Strasburg ... Here, in 1529, after the Town-Council had prohibited Catholic worship, the Councilors were requested by the preachers to help fill the empty churches by issuing regulations prescribing attendance at the sermons." ~From The Protestant Inquisition, Reformation Intolerance and Persecution, by Dave Armstrong.

The intolerance of the Catholics is replaced by the intolerance of the Protestants, "Protestant intolerance, despotism in an upstart sect, infallibility claimed by guides who acknowledge that they had passed the greater part of their lives in error ... These things could not long be borne ... It required no great sagacity to perceive the inconsistency and dishonesty of men who, dissenting from almost all Christendom, would suffer none to dissent from themselves, who demanded freedom of conscience, yet refused to grant it ... Who urged reason against the authority of one opponent, and authority against the reason of another." ~Thomas Babington Macaulay.

Conocation makes an unsuccessful attempt to correct the Great Bible against the Latin Vulgate.

Pope Paul III, 1542, established, and Pope Sixtus V helped to organize the Roman Congregation of the Inquisition, the Holy Office, as a regular court of justice for dealing with heresy and heretics. The Congregation of the Index, instituted by Saint Pius V, has for its prefecture the care of faith and morals in literature, and proceeds against all printed matter very much as the Holy Office [Inquisition] proceeds against persons [with extreme prejudice].

AD 1542-Pope Paul III initiates the Roman Inquisition that continues today [in modified form]; although the Church can no longer try and execute heretics it still uses other means, primarily propaganda and news media, to get its point across [Heresy means: Choice].

Officially sanctioned as the Congregation of the Holy Office, and also known as the Sacred Congregation of the Roman and Universal Inquisition, established by Pope Paul III, 1534-1549, who had obtained his promotion in the Church because his sister is the former mistress of Pope Alexander VI, a classic example of religion without conscience, who is already the acknowledged father of four illegitimate children. Contrary to the belief of most Catholics, the "Holy Office" has not been abolished, but is one of the "Congregations," of Cardinals and assistants, which constitute the Roman Curia.

In theory it merely awaits the return of the world to piety and virtue to resume its grisly functions. It continues in its falsification of historical works and procedures, which Catholic writers are now permitted to introduce into encyclopedias and other works of reference. The last distinguished Catholic historian in England, Lord Acton, pronounced it "Murderous" and "An abomination," and said that before he could accept this "Weapon of the Papacy" a man "Must have made terms with murder." ~from Letters to Mary Gladstone, 1913, p. 147.

Britannica, the Encyclopedia of Religion and Ethics, minimizing the atrocities perpetrated upon the world in the name of Jesus the Christ. Those unwilling to recognize the extent of this penetration of Catholic untruth into modern literature may ponder and deny this claim, which is characteristic of the Catholic apologists.

"The Inquisition," by Vacandard states, "From the 12th century onward the repression of heresy was the great business of Church and State. The distress caused, particularly in the north of Italy and the south of France, by the Cathari or Manichaeans, whose doctrine wrought destruction to society as well as to faith, appalled the leaders of Christianity. On several occasions, in various places, people and rulers at first sought justice in summary conviction and execution; culprits were either outlawed or put to death. The Church for a long time opposed these rigorous measures... The death-penalty was never included in any system of repression."

It would be difficult to compress more historical untruth in so few lines. We have seen in the article on the Albigensians how absurd it is to describe their beliefs and those of the Cathari as anti-social, and that the north of Italy and the south of France were, on the contrary, the most enlightened and incomparably the most prosperous regions of Europe. Neither there nor elsewhere did the secular authorities, though bribed with a large share of the wealth of victims, which is to be repeated again and again in the European history of the Inquisition and of the Church, proceed against heretics without pressure from the Church, which usually had to threaten them with dire penalties.

That the Church ever opposed proceedings against heretics and did not urge the death penalty, which is still emphatically claimed in its Canon Law today, is an amazingly bold untruth. It has been shown through historical documents that the Church of Peter began within twenty years of its own liberation from persecution to press for the suppression by force of all its rivals, and long before the end of the 4th century secured the death sentence, and other laws, against them.

Pope Leo I, 440-461, vigorously sought out heretics and insisted on their execution. These were chiefly Manichaeans, whose ideal ascetic conduct, even Saint Jerome says, shamed Christians, and whose ideas had an extra ordinary tenacity. They spread throughout the Greek world, as the corruption of Christianity increased, that in the ninth century 100,000 of them were executed and 200,000 exiled to other parts of Europe.

The heretics, this time, were Bogomils, Slav for "Friends of God," shows that they were not Satanists, but Christian Puritans, and it was their ideas, which spread over Europe, won large bodies of adherents in every country, and culminated in the appearance of the Albigensians and the Cathari, who were also hunted down and ruthlessly exterminated by the Catholics.

From the beginning of the 11th century we read of the burning of heretics in groups, at Orleans a group included thirteen canons and priests, and the spurring of the zeal of reluctant civic rulers by Popes and Councils. Scores of threats to "Peoples and princes" by Popes during four centuries, although in 1179 Alexander III bribed them by allotting them a large share in the property and treasures confiscated.

Few civic authorities ever moved without clerical pressure or approval. It was this clerical pressure and the "Inquisition," ordered by Lucius III in 1184, which the Church demanded that was disturbing the social order and not the other way around. But the heresy kept growing with extraordinary rapidity, and the clerical orders with their peaceful "Missions" failed, and the ill-tempered Pope Innocent III launched decree after decree demanding search, Inquisitio, and the death penalty and had hundreds of thousands of victims massacred. Pope Innocent's words urging the death penalty, "... If traitors to the State must die, how much more traitors to God?" is actually quoted by Vacandard himself; and he admits that Frederic II cited them in framing his law against heretics under Papal pressure. It was one of the conditions of the Pope's coronation of him.

Pope Gregory IX, 1227-1241, in turn demanded an "Inquisition" and executions at Rome, where heresy was rampant, as a condition of peace with the Romans, who had exiled him.

In 1231, Pope Gregory had a "Tribunal of Inquisition" set up in Rome, and it condemned and handed over to the secular arm, which was subject to the Popes authority, for execution a number of priests and citizens. Catholic writers repeatedly say that the Roman Inquisition never condemned heretics to death, yet these facts are given in the contemporary "Chronicle," of Richard of San Germano, in Muratori's "Rerum Italicarum Scriptores," VII, 1026, and even in the official life of Pope Gregory. Pope Gregory IX forbade professors and students to discuss Greek philosophy and especially Aristotle. Aristotle's contribution to the history of thought: "This core of truth in effect, was embroidered with myths for the benefit of the masses, for reasons of expediency, the preservation of social institutions. The negative work of philosophy was then to strip away these imaginative accretions. From the standpoint of popular belief this was its chief work, and it was a destructive one. The masses only felt that their religion was attacked. But the enduring contribution was positive." ~John Dewey, The Quest for Certainty, p. 15.

The Catholic historian Pastor further adds that when Pope Leo XIII, 1823-1829, professed to throw open the Secret Archives of the Vatican to scholars, he personally asked for the records of the Roman Inquisition, and he learned that they had already been removed. It was the local prelates, as well as the monarchs who refused to carry out the "Search" in the name of Jesus that Pope Gregory had to entrust it to the new Dominican friars [Hounds of Hell], and they spread a ghastly aura over Europe. One monk, elegantly called Robert le Bougre, boasted that he ordered 180 heretics burned in one small French town. ~from Prof. C. H. Haskins, Robert le Bougre and the Beginnings of the Inquisition in France, 1909.

Thousands, long after the Albigensian Massacre, were burned in France in a just a few short years. The Spanish Inquisition is the only branch of the organization about which we have complete and definite statistics. Llorente, its General Secretary and an important ecclesiastic at the time of the French Revolution, abandoned the Church when the French came to Spain, and used the Archives of the Inquisition to write an exhaustive history of it. ~see Historia Crítica de la Inquisición de España, 10 vols., 1822.

He gave the number of victims as 341,042, while hundreds of thousands of Jews and Moors were driven abroad or committed to death, their properties seized and the supporters of the Church sharing in the ill gotten wealth.

The Roman Church issued orders "For the reformation of the Moriscos" or Moors [Arabs], that neither themselves, their women, nor any other persons should be permitted to wash or bathe themselves either at home or in another place; and that all their bathing houses should be pulled down and destroyed.

The Inquisition is one of the chief factors in the cultural and economic fall of Spain, the rapidity of which has no parallel in history apart from devastating wars; yet Catholic apologists blandly affirm that it was in the social interest that the Church persecuted heretics.

While this collapse of Spain is the chief fact of its history from 1550 to 1650, Catholic apologists, carefully omitting to mention that he was a Canon of Toledo Cathedral and a Knight of the Caroline Order, describe Llorente as an unscrupulous and negligible skeptic whose figure they reduce by careful research to 4,000. As Vacandard admits that, "According to the most conservative estimate, Torquemada sent to the stake about 2,000 heretics in twelve years," the absurdity of this is at once apparent yet English and American Catholic writers continue to say that "Leading authorities" like Hefele and Gams, fail to mention that these are Catholic priests that have proved it.

"... Fray Tomás Torquemada... Was the true organizer of the Spanish Inquisition. At the solicitation of their Spanish Majesties ... Pope Sixtus IV bestowed on Torquemada the office of Grand Inquisitor, the institution of which indicates a decided advance in the development of the Spanish Inquisition. Pope Innocent VIII approved the act of his predecessor, and under date of 11 February, 1486, and 6 February, 1487, Torquemada was given dignity of Grand Inquisitor for the kingdoms of Castile, Leon, Aragon, Valencia, etc...." ~New Advent (Roman) Catholic Encyclopedia, Inquisition.

Equally monstrous is the Catholic claim that the Spanish Inquisition was political, and that Rome actually protested against its severity. This statement is so crude that when Bishop Hefele's "Life of Cardinal Ximenes," 1860, was translated into English, Canon Dalton refuted it in the Preface.

The same Pope Gregory IX who set up the Roman Inquisition set up the Spanish Inquisition, 1232, but the people and most of the rulers, even most of the Bishops, resented it, and did little until the monks persuaded the fanatical Queen Isabella to restore it. Spain is now rich from the lands stolen from the Jews it persecuted, and Rome made repeated efforts to gain control of the Inquisition and its spoils, but the Spaniards, including the Spanish Church, refused. ~See Sabatini's, Torquemada and the Spanish Inquisition, 1913, and, especially, Lea's monumental history.

The procedure of the Inquisition is just as falsely described by Catholic writers and is very seriously misrepresented in G. B. Shaw's, "Saint Joan." The Jesuit writer in the Catholic Encyclopedia in apologetic boldness says: "The Inquisition marks a substantial advance on the contemporary administration of justice and therefore in the general civilization of mankind."

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

What's a few hundred thousand deaths to the Holy Mother? Public embarrassment, mortification, torture, and death, "... The humiliations to which the penitents were subjected had exhibition at the first auto de fe held in Toledo, 1486, when 750 penitents of both sexes were obliged to march through the city carrying candles, and bare-headed; and, on entering the cathedral, were informed that one-fifth of their property had been confiscated, and that they were thenceforth incapacitated to hold public office. The first auto de fe was held in Seville, Feb. 6, 1481, six months after the appointment of the tribunal, when six men and women were cremated alive..."

"At Aracena, where the first holocaust included 23 men and women. According to a contemporary, by Nov. 4, 1491, 298 persons had been committed to the flames and 79 condemned to perpetual imprisonment. The tribunal established at Ciudad Real, 1483, burnt 52 heretics within two years, when it was removed, in 1485, to Toledo. In Avila, from 1490 - 1500, 75 were burnt alive, and 26 dead bodies exhumed and cast into the flames... The first burning in Saragossa took place, 1484, when two men were burnt alive and one woman in effigy, and at Barcelona in 1488, when four persons were consumed alive." ~History of the Christian Church, by Philip Schaff, Volume VI, Chapter 7, § 60.

Canon Vacandard, "Encyclopedia of Religion and Ethics," quotes another Jesuit writing that the Inquisition was "A sublime spectacle of social perfection," "Civilt' Cattolica," 1853, and adds on his own account that it "Conformed to a very high ideal of social justice," a strange contrast to the verdict of the learned and conscientious Catholic historian Lord Acton.

But Vacandard had previously written a book, "The Inquisition," English Translation 1908, in which he admitted (p. 135) that, "The criminal procedure of the Inquisition is markedly inferior to the criminal procedure of the Middle Ages."

Pope Gregory IX, "Did his utmost to enforce everywhere the death penalty for heretics," and the historian Canon Vacandard then, in negation, writes in another respected encyclopedia that, "The death-penalty was never included in any system of repression."

The procedure is fully described by Lea, who is, on the main points, supported by Prof. Turberville. The Inquisitors arriving at a town invited denunciation of heretics, and a few weeks later sat with a jury of picked local men to try the denounced. Neither the jury nor the accused heard the names of or ever saw the accusers, and the opportunities for political vengeance and spite can only be imagined. Few Christians have heard the remarks from one of their older Saints, "If any man smite me on one cheek, him do I smite promptly on both." ~Saint Joseph, XVI, 27. cf. Matthew 5:39.

Vacandard admits that if two witnesses, unlike civil law, the Inquisitors admitted the testimony of women, children, slaves, and convicted criminals, agreed in denouncing a man his fate was sealed. If he confessed that he was a heretic and named "Accomplices" he was punished comparatively lightly. Large numbers of innocent folk thus accused themselves and others to escape torture and death; the accused could bring no witnesses and hire no lawyer.

If he did not confess, he was taken to the torture room, with its rack, strappado, scourges, thumb-screws, charcoal braziers, etc. "On the whole the Inquisition was most humanely conducted," says the Jesuit in the Catholic Encyclopedia.

Is there such a thing as Humane Murder? Vacandard admits that, "The Church is responsible for having introduced torture into the proceedings of the Inquisition." Savonarola was tortured seven times, the witches of Arras forty times; thirty-six Knights Templars at Paris, and twenty-five at Sens, died under torture, etc. Pope Clement V, 1304-1314, benevolently ruled that Torture must be used only once: so the Inquisitors used to "Continue" the 'One' torture on the following and subsequent days.

If a man still refused to admit the charge, he was handed over to the secular arm, civil authorities [no separation of Church and state, as the state merely carried out the wishes of the Church] for execution or, if he now confessed, possibly for imprisonment for life. Witchcraft was seen as a cult of the devil, called the Spirit, on intelligible grounds, based upon the lines of the ancient Persian religion, which has at its chief root, God creating the Spirit only and the devil creating matter, including the body of man, if God put a harsh prohibition on sex, the devil must encourage what God had created, therefore man's supreme, friend was the devil and not the Christian God.

The sexual hypocrisy of nearly the whole of Christendom century after century discouraged this creed. The Albigensians frowned upon sex as the work of the devil, therefore not evil, as many of the Catholic Saints proclaimed, and honored Christ as a "Pure Spirit."

The witches respected Christ as the apostle of austerity and worshipped the devil, and they did not, as in the popular Christian conception, sell their souls to the devil in order to obtain powers existing outside of nature, knowing that after death they must join the devil in hell. They made no claim to unusual powers, and they rejected the repulsive Christian concept of the devil and hell. ~For facts regarding witchcraft see H.C. Lea in his posthumous Materials Toward a History of Witchcraft, 3 vols. 1939, the German expert Dr. W. G. Söldan, and especially Dr. Margaret Murray, of London University, Witchcraft in Western Europe, 1921.

The Church profited in murdering, alleged witches, as their property was confiscated and shared between the secular authorities, the Bishop, the accusers, the Inquisitors, and the Papacy. This is not the least repulsive aspect of the Inquisition. Even dead and buried men, if rich, were dug up and charged.

"The Inquisition was invented to rob the rich," a Catholic historian says; and Vacandard quotes the Inquisitor Eymeric lamenting: "In our days there are no more rich heretics... It is a pity that so salutary an institution as ours should be so uncertain of its future."

England never allowed Rome to set up the Inquisition, but had its own laws against heresy and blasphemy. Witches were heretics, and, when these are added, estimates of the number of victims in six centuries rise as high as 10,000,000. ~see H.C. Lea's History of the Inquisition of the Middle Ages, 3 vols., 1888, and History of the Inquisition of, 1906, and Sir A. Cardew's Short History of the Inquisition, 1933, is a superficial and undiscriminating gleaning from Lea. Prof. S. Turberville's Medieval Heresy and the Inquisition, 1920, and the works of J. McCabe, Rationalists Encyclopaedia.

The hapless victims were charged for the very ropes that bound them and the wood that burned them. Every procedure of torture carried with it a fee. After the execution of a prosperous witch, officials often felt compelled to treat themselves to a banquet at the expense of the victim's estate.

"Countless victims accused of heresy to enable the Church to confiscate their property; rapacious Cardinals attending the tortures and executions with troops and merrymaking prostitutes..." ~V. Robinson.

"It is proved beyond question that the Church, in the person of the Popes, used every means at her disposal, especially excommunication, to compel the State to enforce the infliction of the death penalty upon heretics." ~Abbe Vacandard

AD1542-Shiltey Gibborim, physician and rabbi, uses the ancient texts to produce a scientific documentary of ancient spices, herbs, and plants [also the first Hebrew text to use European punctuation]

AD1542-India: Jesuit Father, Saint Francis Xavier arrives in Goa. The great impetus of conversions comes after Ven, Robert de Nobili (q.v.) declares himself a Brahmin "Sannjasi" and lives the life of the Brahmins in 1606.

At Tanjore, Nobili makes a numbers of converts, who are allowed to keep the distinctions of their caste and prevailing religious customs; which, are condemned by Pope Benedict XIV in 1744. Benedict XIV, was notorious in Europe for his love of spicystories and used expressions, which the governments in Christian countries would not permit one to translate.

Bernardino Ochino flees Italy, and converts to Protestantism. Pope Paul III formally establishes the Roman Inquisition to fend off all opposition to the Church. Limited press censorship goes into effect, banning Ochino's works

AD1543-1621-Saint Robert Bellarmine, Italian Roman Catholic Churchman and theologian and one of the leaders of the Counter Reformation. Born Roberto Francesco Romolo Bellarmino Montepulciano, in Tuscany, on October 4, 1542, the son of a local magistrate and nephew of Pope Marcellus II.

He entered the "Society of Jesus," now known as the Jesuits, and ordained a priest in 1570. He gained a reputation as a controversialist, appointed professor of theology at the University of Leuven [Belgium]. Lecturing in Rome [1576] on the conflicts arising from the Reformation, his chief work was the "Disputations on the Controversies of the Christian Faith," 1568-1593.

His expositions on the Roman Catholic position are logical and concise and his approach became the standard in textbooks for a long period thereafter. He also took an important role in the revision of the Vulgate Bible, published in 1592. He was appointed a Cardinal in 1599, having served as archbishop of Capua from 1602 to 1605.

The Index librorum prohibitorum is issued by Pope Paul III, furthering the attempts of the Vatican to control mass media.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

Returning to Rome, he continued his academic work. He was one of the few church leaders who defended Galileo's right to publish his writings on the solar system [the earth orbits the sun and not vice versa]. Giving all his money away to the poor, Bellarmine died a pauper on September 17, 1621. English Parliament bans Tyndale's translation as a "Crafty, false and untrue translation," although 80% of the words were already in the Roman Vulgate.

Christianity's venomous attacks upon the Jews continues, "I had made up my mind to write no more either about the Jews or against them. But since I learned that these miserable and accursed people do not cease to lure to themselves even us, that is, the Christians, I have published this little book, so that I might be found among those who opposed such poisonous activities of the Jews who warned the Christians to be on their guard against them. I would not have believed that a Christian could be duped by the Jews into taking their exile and wretchedness upon himself. However, the Devil is the God of the world, and wherever God's word is absent he has an easy task, not only with the weak but also with the strong. May God help us. Amen." ~Martin Luther, Catholic monk, On the Jews and Their Lies, 1543. cf. Matthew 3:7, 11:18; John 8:39-44.

AD1544- Another Forbidden Index issues forth from the Vatican to further restrain Freedom of the Press. In order to return England to Catholicism, Queen Mary I orders the dismissal and execution of the prominent Protestant clergymen; repeals Protestant legislation; revives the heresy laws, and restores Papal supremacy [restoration of Catholicism], but the atrocities committed in her name during her short reign lead to Queen Mary I to become known as 'Bloody Mary.'

AD1545- 1563-Perhaps one of the most uneducated decisions ever made by mankind; the Council of Trent decides by a close vote of 568 to 563, to circumvent the Pagans and their Gods, the Council decides to formally make Jesus also a God. Did Jesus [and God the Father] permit the selection of a new Bible, which is to be established later at the Council of Trent in 1563 by only five votes [568 to 563], five votes, and only five votes will decide for the world, what is to be "Divine" and what is to be "Not Divine?"

The Catholic Council of Trent, 1545- 1563, attempts to reform the corrupt Roman Catholic Church and also attempts to quell public protests, but to no avail. This Vatican Council decrees that faith is necessary, but retains Church Sacraments as essential components of the Christian religion.

Trent, Council of 19th Ecumenical Council of the Roman Catholic Church, called by Pope Pius IV in response to the Protestant Reformation, at the 4th Session, the Jesuits condemn freedom of speech, freedom of the press, and freedom of conscience. Convening of the Council of Trent as the Roman Catholic Church, which tries to organize to fight the spreading Reformation [this effort to be known as the Counter Reformation].

Catholic Tradition is granted equal authority with the Bible. The Jesuits believe that, "No man has the right to choose his own religion; no man has the right to publish what he feels is the truth; and no man has the right to freedom of conscience," which is why individualism as proclaimed by the American Declaration of Independence is abhorrent to the Church.

The American Fathers will not be ordered about by religious dictators. These religious tenets are the basis for the early American fathers wanting to separate the powers of Church and state. These inalienable rights are secured by the Baptist/Calvinist forefathers in the "First Amendment" of the American Constitution [wall of separation]. In 1546 the Council declares as sacred and canonical earlier Greek writings called the 'Apocrypha.'

Martin Luther had earlier declared the Apocrypha as merely useful and good to read but not being Holy Scripture. In the year 1835 Coverdale, in the first printed English Bible, accepts the views of Martin Luther. Catherine Parr, wife of King Henry VIII, publishes her own original work entitled Prayers Stirring The Mind Unto Heavenly Meditations.

The Council of Trent, 1545-1564, places the Holy Bible on its list of Prohibited Books List, and forbade any person to read the Bible without a license from a Roman Catholic bishop or inquisitor.

The Council also added these words, "That if any one shall dare to read or keep in his possession that book, without such a license, he shall not receive absolution till he has given it up to his ordinary."

AD1546- Etienne Dolet, Stephen Dolet, the great French printer, freethinker, is hanged and then burned at Lyons on August 3, 1546. The Church gave him the martyr's crown on his thirty-seventh birthday as he he paid the penalty exacted from all who dared to think for themselves and not accept the Christianized Pagan religion. Dolet received his first taste of persecution in 1533, when he was thrown into prison for denouncing in a Latin oration the burning alive of Jean de Cartuce at Toulouse, and during the remaining thirteen years of his life he was imprisoned five more times and spent nearly half his life in confinement for challenging the Holy Mother the Church.

A sentence of death for blasphemy was pronounced on Dolet in the Chambre Ardents at Paris on August 2, 1546, where he was condemned to be hanged, and then burnt, along with his books, on the Place Maubert; and his wife and children were reduced to begging after the confiscation of his goods by the king. It was also ordered that he should be put to the torture before his execution, and questioned about his companions; and, "If the said Dolet shall cause any scandal or utter any blasphemy, his tongue shall be cut out, and he shall be burnt alive." He is hanged first, and then [for they are not very particular], probably while he still breathed, the fires are lighted, and Dolet and his books are consumed in the flames. It is said that instead of a prayer, or a scream for life, he uttered a pun in Latin, "Non dolet ipse Dolet, sed pia turba dolet." "Dolet himself does not grieve, but the pious crowd grieves."

Yet the confessor who attended him at the stake invented the wretched falsehood that the martyr had acknowledged his errors and confessed to the Church his wrongs. "I do not believe a word of it," wrote the great Erasmus, "It is the usual story, which these people invent after the death of their victims."

Dolet's true sentiments are expressed in a noble cantique, full of resignation and courage, which he composed while in prison, knowing that his death was imminent, for the Church leaders cherished those who could die worthily.

Apocryphal Books put back into the Bible.

Death of the former Catholic, now excommunicated monk, Martin Luther.

"A good heart, sustained with patience, never bends under evil, bewails or moans, but is always victor. Courage, my soul, and show such a heart; let your confidence be seen in trial; every noble heart, every constant warrior, maintains his fortitude even unto death." ~R.C. Christie, 'Enenne Dolet,' Joseph Boulmier, 'Enenne Dolet.'

AD 1546-Emperor Charles V, religious war against Protestantism [Lutherans] 1546-The Roman Catholic Church Decree on Original Sin as set forth declares, "If anyone does not confess that the first man, Adam, when he had transgressed the commandment of God in Paradise, immediately lost the holiness and justice wherein he had been constituted; and that he incurred, through the offence of that prevarication, the wrath and indignation of God, and consequently death, with which God had previously threatened him, and, together with death, captivity under his power who thenceforth had the empire of death, that is to say, the devil, and that the entire Adam, through that offence of prevarication, was changed, in body and soul, for the worse; let him be anathema." ~cf. Mark 13:7-8.

If you do not believe what the Church says, you will be condemned as a heretic and/or seditious. Such strong words from such a proclaimed authority of Jesus Christ who preached forgiveness and who himself never preached Original Sin, which is a concoction of the Christian Church in order to frighten the great numbers into going to mass.

"If anyone asserts, that the prevarication of Adam injured himself alone, and not his posterity; and that the holiness and justice, received of God, which he lost, he lost for himself alone, and not for us also; or that he, being defiled by the Sin of Disobedience, has only transfused death, and pains of the body, into the whole human race, but not sin also, which is the death of the soul; let him be anathema-whereas he contradicts the apostle who says; By one man sin entered into the world, and by sin death, and so death passed upon all men, in whom all have sinned. ~Mary, the mother of Jesus, is declared exempt from this sin by the Church Authorities.

A curse on disbelievers, "If any one asserts, that this sin of Adam, that in its origin is one, and being transfused into all by propagation, not by imitation, is in each one as his own, is taken away either by the powers of human nature, or by any other remedy than the merit of the one mediator, our Lord Jesus Christ, who hath reconciled us to God in his own blood, made unto us justice, sanctification, and redemption; or if he denies that the said merit of Jesus Christ is applied, both to adults and to infants, by the Sacrament of Baptism rightly administered in the form of the Church; let him be anathema: For there is no other name under heaven given to men, whereby we must be saved. Whence that voice; Behold the lamb of God behold him who taketh away the sins of the world; and that other; As many as have been baptized, have put on

Christ.” ~cf. Galatians, 3:27-28; cf. I Corinthians, 12:13.

As the Reformation [Protestant] fervor spread, the feminine aspect of Christianity in the worship of Mary, the mother of Jesus, became suspect. Throughout the Middle Ages, Mary's powers were believed to successfully curtail those of the devil. But Protestants entirely dismissed reverence for Mary while reformed Catholics diminished her importance. Devotion to Mary often became indicative of evil. In the Canary islands, Aldonca de Vargas was reported to the Inquisition after she smiled at hearing mention of the Virgin Mary. Inquisitors distorted an image of the Virgin Mary into a device of torture, covering the front side of a statue of Mary with sharp knives and nails. Levers would move the arms of the statue crushing the victim against the knives and nails.

Is one responsible for the sins of his or her father [Original Sin]? The Church will have us believe that we are responsible for the sins of not only our father, but our father's father, and his father's father, ad infinitum. Baptism is another means of a scare tactic to insure the flock will go to mass.

Was Noah baptized, or Moses, or Abraham? “If any one denies, that infants, newly born from their mothers' wombs, even though they be sprung from baptized parents, are to be baptized; or says that they are baptized indeed for the remission of sins, but that they derive nothing of original Sin from Adam, which has need of being expiated by the laver of regeneration for the obtaining life everlasting, Whence it follows as a consequence, that in them the form of Baptism, for the remission of sins, is understood to be not true, but false, let him be anathema. For that which the apostle has said, By one man sin entered into the world, and by sin death, and so death passed upon all men in whom all have sinned, is not to be understood otherwise than as the Catholic Church spread everywhere hath always understood it. For, by reason of this rule of faith, from a tradition of the apostles, even infants, who could not as yet commit any sin of themselves, are for this cause truly baptized for the remission of sins, that in them that may be cleansed away by regeneration, which they have contracted by generation. For, unless a man be born again of water and the Holy Ghost, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God.”

The Christian God will God only admit Christians into his Kingdom? What of the Jews, Muslims, Buddhists, etc.? The Church wishes full control over our lives: from cradle to grave. “If any one denies, that, by the Grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, which is conferred in baptism, the guilt of original sin is remitted; or even asserts that the whole of that which has the true and proper nature of sin is not taken away; but says that it is only raised, or not imputed; let him be anathema. For, in those who are born again, there is nothing that God hates; because, ‘There is no condemnation to those who are truly buried together with Christ by baptism into death; who walk not according to the flesh, but, putting off the old man, and putting on the new who is created according to God, are made innocent, immaculate, pure, harmless, and beloved of God, heirs indeed of God, but joint heirs with Christ; so that there is nothing whatever to retard their entrance into heaven. But this Holy Synod confesses and is sensible, that in the baptized there remains concupiscence, or an incentive [to sin]; which, whereas it is left for our exercise, cannot injure those who consent not, but resist manfully by the grace of Jesus Christ; yea, he who shall have striven lawfully shall be crowned.’”

“This concupiscence, which the apostle sometimes calls sin, the Holy Synod declares that the Catholic Church has never understood it to be called sin, as being truly and properly sin in those born again, but because it is of sin, and inclines to sin. This same Holy Synod doth nevertheless declare, that it is not its intention to include in this decree, where Original Sin is treated of, the blessed and Immaculate Virgin Mary, the Mother of God; but that the constitutions of Pope Sixtus IV of happy memory, are to be observed, under the pains contained in the said constitutions, which it renews.” ~Catholic Encyclopedia.

What we have is threats, threats, and more threats. Believe this, or else. What would Jesus say of this? The Church has already decreed that its followers must believe what it says, “Right or wrong!” This blind faith may have exalted in a time past, but now we are getting closer and closer to the truth and we now know that God shows preference to no particular faith or religion. Hence we must do what is good for man which is also good in the eyes of God without due consideration to faith, religion, or sect. This is what particular religions do not want. They will endeavor to proclaim their faith as the one and only True Faith. Where were these religions five or six thousand years ago?

La chambre ardente is created in France for the trial of heretics.

AD 1548-1600-Giordano Bruno, Dominican friar and Astrologer, is burned at the stake for "Intellectual Freethinking," betrayed by a disenchanted follower to the Inquisition. 1600, on February 17th, denied the customary mercy of strangulation, Giordano Bruno is burned alive, an iron gag with spikes piercing his tongue and a palette device installed to silence him forever.

The Roman Inquisition put to the torch, with all due ceremony, the mystical philosopher and visionary who caused the Church so much anguish as an obstinate heretic. A six year trial for heresy, when upon being sentenced Bruno contumaciously said to his judges, "Perhaps your fear in passing judgment on me is greater than mine in receiving it."

Bruno established his own secret society known as the Giordanisti, in Germany that is believed to later have become one of the major contributors to the Rosicrucian. It is believed that Bruno used Tarot cards to meditate upon its magical symbols in an effort to attain cosmic consciousness. The Church had previously banned the cards of mystery and secret learning. A Dominican monk, before leaving the order, is suspected of unorthodox beliefs, he travels about meeting many influential people at the court of Queen Elizabeth of England, Sir Francis Walsingham, mystic Dr. John Dee, and King Henry III.

The Church suspected Bruno of being a spy for the Protestant movement. He was a leading figure in the re-interpretation of the ancient Gnostic texts of Hermes Trismegistus, which had been recovered during the Renaissance Era. Giordano Bruno and the Magical Reformation states, "I cleave the heavens, and soar to the infinite. What others see from afar, I leave far behind me." ~ Giordano Bruno index.html - brunoindex.html - Bruno.

His reasoning and individual thinking revolted the Church and he denied their Doctrine of Transubstantiation. He could not believe that the entire Trinity was in a wafer, or in a swallow of wine. He did not believe that a man could devour the Creator of the Universe by eating a piece of bread.

This led him to investigate other dogmas of the Catholic Church, and in every direction he found the same contradictions and impossibilities supported, not by reason, but by faith.

"Why, for thousands of years, did none of God's prophets teach his people about the Trinity? At the least, would Jesus not use his ability as the Great Teacher to make the Trinity clear to his followers? Would God inspire hundreds of pages of Scripture and yet not use any of this instruction to teach the Trinity if it were the 'Central Doctrine' of faith?" ~ Edouard Schillebeeckx of the Netherlands in 1979 on the Trinity. Note: In Hebrews 5:7-8, Islam's claim about Jesus never got crucified appears, which contradicts the Bible!

Those who loved their enemies threatened his life. He is forced to flee from his native land, and he became a vagabond in nearly every nation of Europe. He declared that he fought, not what priests believed, but what they pretended to believe. He was driven from his native country because of his astronomical opinions. He had lost confidence in the Bible as a scientific work. He was in danger because he had discovered a truth. He fled to England, and gave lectures at Oxford. He found that institution also controlled by priests.

"It vexes me when they would constrain science by the authority of the Scriptures, and yet do not consider themselves bound to answer reason and experiment." ~ Galileo Galilei, The Authority of Scripture in Philosophical Controversies.

He found that they were teaching nothing of importance, only the impossible and the hurtful. He called Oxford "The widow of true learning." There were in England, at that time, two men who knew more than the rest of the world. Shakespeare was then alive. Bruno was driven from England. He was regarded as a dangerous man, he had opinions, he inquired after reasons, he expressed confidence in facts, he was a freethinker. He fled to France. He was not allowed to remain in that country. He went to Germany. He was not a believer, he was labeled an investigator.

The Germans wanted believers: they regarded the whole Christian system as settled; they wanted witnesses; they wanted men who would assert. So he was driven from Germany. He returned at last to his native land. He found himself without friends, because he had been true, not only to himself, but to the human race. But the world was false to him because he refused to crucify the Christ of his own soul between the two thieves of hypocrisy and bigotry. He was arrested for teaching that there are other worlds than this; that many of the stars are suns, around which other worlds revolve; that Nature did not exhaust all her energies on this grain of sand called the earth.

He believed in a plurality of worlds, in the rotation of this, in the heliocentric theory. For these crimes, and for these alone, he was imprisoned for six years. He was kept in solitary confinement. He was allowed no books, no friends, no visitors. He was denied pen and paper. In the darkness, in the loneliness, he had time to examine the great questions of origin, of existence, of destiny. He put to the test what is called the Goodness of God. He found that he could neither depend upon man nor upon any deity.

At last, the Inquisition demanded his person and he was tried, condemned, excommunicated and sentenced to be burned. According to Professor Draper, he believed that this world is animated by an intelligent soul, the cause of forms, but not of matter; that it lives in all things, even in such as seem not to live; that everything is ready to become organized; that matter is the mother of forms, and then their grave; that matter and the soul of things, together, constitute God. He became a pantheist, that is to say, an Atheist. He was a lover of Nature, a reaction from the asceticism of the church. He was tired of the gloom of the monastery. He loved the fields, the woods, the streams.

Giordano Bruno says to his brother-priests: "Come out of your cells, out of your dungeons: come into the air and light. Throw away your beads and your crosses. Gather flowers; mingle with your fellow-men; have wives and children; scatter the seeds of joy; throw away the thorns and nettles of your creeds; enjoy the, perpetual miracle of life."

Saint Francis Xavier founds a Jesuit mission in Japan.

The Holy Mother, the Church, and her die-hard followers continually deny the persecutions and/or tortures of women and children, but historical documents prove yet another falsehood as the Heavenly bound Christian warriors are promised full clemency for all of their sins if they will take up the sword for their Lord and Savior, "Bertrand, the Papal Legate, wrote a letter to Pope Honorius, desiring to be recalled from the croisade against the primitive witnesses and contenders for the faith. In that authentic document, he stated, that within fifteen years, 300,000 of those crossed soldiers had become victims to their own fanatical and blind fury. Their unrelenting and insatiable thirst for Christian and human blood spared none within the reach of their impetuous despotism and unrestricted usurpations. On the river Garonne, a conflict occurred between the croisaders, with their ecclesiastical leaders, the Prelates of Thoulouse and Comminges; who solemnly promised to all their vassals the full Pardon of Sin, and the possession of Heaven immediately, if they were slain in the battle. The Spanish monarch and his confederates acknowledged that they must have lost 400,000 men, in that tremendous conflict, and immediately after it, but the Papists boasted, that including the women and children, they had massacred more than two millions of the human family, in that solitary croisade against the southwest part of France." ~Bourne, George, The American Textbook of Popery, Griffith & Simon, Philadelphia, 1846, pp. 402-403.

"It is with greater fear that ye pass this sentence upon me than I receive it" ~ To those who passed the sentence upon the former monk, Bruno, from the Internet of Robert Green Ingersoll.

AD 1549- "The Book of Common Prayer," written mostly by Thomas Cranmer, in the common every day language of the time, is the accepted Anglican Church version of the Holy Bible and is made compulsory during the reign of Edward VI [1537-1553], who reintroduces Latin as the language of the services, it is later suppressed by Queen Mary I [Queen from 1553-58, Bloody Mary, who succeeded her brother Edward VI to the throne. She is instrumental in burning over three hundred protestant clergy].

The First Book of Common Prayer is issued, which changes church services from Latin to English. The First Act of Uniformity declares the Catholic mass illegal. "The Protestant sects derided each other in just as immoderate and undignified a way as they one and all derided the Papacy... Cursing and blaspheming were as frequent as praying was rare." ~Johannes Janssen.

Spain: Outwardly the Moranos [Secret Jews] passed as Spaniards and Catholics; but they held prayer-meetings at Cree Church Lane, and became known to the government as Jews by faith.

AD 1549- By the time the Venetian republic drafted an Index of Forbidden Books and Authors in 1549, many of the Italian states had already accepted their own.

Milan, Lucca, and Siena are among those regulating the printing of books articulating opinions contrary to those of the Church. Curiously enough, Rome did not have an Index at this time!

The Venetian Index was retired quickly, due to strong opposition by the bookmen (publishers, printers, importers, etc.) of Venice, who represented through their Guild, which was a very strong political entity. Venice was generally a more intellectually liberal state than Rome, as it had strong interests in maintaining the trade of people of different beliefs from different parts of the world.

AD 1550- Under Pope Paul III, 1534-49, and Pope Julius III, 1550-55, the achievements of the Roman Inquisition are considered not sufficient, and Pope Julius rules that, although the tribunal has general authority, its action should be limited especially to Italy. The moderation of these Popes is imitated by their successors with the exceptions of Pope Paul IV, 1555-59, and Pope Pius V, 1566-72.

Julius III attempts to assert his authority over monarchies by excommunicating the serial monogamist, King Henry VIII.

Under Pope Paul IV the Inquisition functions in such a manner that it alienates nearly all parties concerned, and although Pope Pius V, a Dominican, and former grand inquisitor, avoids the worst excesses of Paul IV, he nevertheless declares at the beginning of his reign that questions of faith take precedence over all other affairs and makes it clear that his first care will be to see that heresy, false doctrine, and errors are to be suppressed, which is taking part in many of the activities of the scurrilous Inquisition.

Publishing of Giorgio Vasari's Lives of the Artists, marks a new approach to artists: artists are now considered special, and almost Divine.

St. Thomas More, Cranmer, and Foxe affirm the existence of English versions of portions of the Bible, including the Gospels [11th century], Apocalypse [11th century], and Mark, Luke, Epistles of Paul [14th century].

The Catholic Church oligarchy knows the full truth regarding the origin of its Epistles of Paul, for Cardinal Bembo, d. 1547, secretary to Pope Leo X, d. 1521, advised his associate, Cardinal Sadoletto, to disregard them, saying, "Put away these trifles, for such absurdities do not become a man of dignity; they were introduced on the scene later by a sly voice from Heaven." ~Cardinal Bembo: His Letters and Comments on Pope Leo X, A. L. Collins, London, 1842 reprint.

AD 1550- 1555- Reign of Pope Julius III who, upon election as Pope, made his seventeen year old lover a member of the College of Cardinals, and also appoints him Secretary of State [Pope Julius' vast orgies with teenage Cardinals were common knowledge]. Most were horrified but the Archbishop of Benevento writes a book, "In Praise of Sodomy," dedicated to Pope Julius III.

AD 1551- Birth of Henri III, King of France, September 19th. In the final years of his reign he surrounded himself with many handsome young men and abandoned himself to the hedonistic pleasures. King Henry took particular delight in flogging the backs of penitents marching in Holy procession.

Censorship of the theater begins to curb the discussion of religious topics before an illiterate audience, which law fell gradually into abeyance. Another was passed in 1739 by the Walpole Government, to prevent satirical attacks on itself.

The Lord Chamberlain is given the power to grant or refuse all licenses for public performance. Unlicensed performances are to be punished by closure of the theater and imprisonment of the actors. This power is extended by the Theaters Act 1843. Works by Dumas and Ibsen were refused licenses, as was Wilde's Salome.

It is not until 1531, that the Church actually declares that the Sacrament [wafer] is the "Body of Christ," "The Council of Trent summarizes the Catholic faith by declaring: "Because Christ our Redeemer said that it was truly his body that he was offering under the species of bread, it has always been the conviction of the Church of God, and this holy Council now declares again, that by the consecration of the bread and wine there takes place a change of the whole substance of the bread into the substance of the body of Christ our Lord and of the whole substance of the wine into the substance of his blood. This change the Holy Catholic Church has fittingly and properly called transubstantiation." ~Catholic Catechism 1376; Council of Trent, 1551: DS 1642; cf. Matthew 26:26 ff.; Mark 14:22 ff.; Luke 22:19 ff.; 1 Corinthians 11:24 ff.

AD 1552- An Historical Account of the Birth of Christ, and the 'Perpetual Virgin,' Mary, his Mother, by James the lesser, first Bishop to the Christians in Jerusalem is first printed. James, cousin, and brother to Jesus, is credited with this work.

The authenticity is declared by the Latin Fathers, and the book is alleged to have originally been written in Hebrew and translated by Postellus into the Latin. Also known as "The Protevangelion."

AD 1553- Henry VIII marries Ann Boleyn, and two months later, the Archbishop of Canterbury announces

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

the divorce of Henry VIII from Catherine [his previous marriage]. Pope Julius III who attempts to assert his authority over monarchies excommunicates King Henry VIII and again we will have a renewed altercation of Divine Birth versus Divine Right.

In 1553 a man is tried at Vienna by the Catholic Church for heresy, having been convicted and sentenced to death by burning. It is his good fortune to escape, but he is pursued by the supporters of Christ in their intolerance and superstition as he fled to Geneva for protection.

A dove flying from hawks, unwittingly seeks safety in the nest of a vulture. This fugitive from the cruelty of Rome asked shelter from John Calvin, who had earlier written a book in favor of religious toleration. Serviettes had forgotten that this book was written by Calvin when in the minority; that it was 'Written in weakness to be forgotten in power;' that it was 'Produced by fear instead of principle.'

He did not know that Calvin himself had caused his arrest at Vienna, in France, and had sent a copy of his work, which was claimed to be blasphemous, to the Archbishop. He did not then know that the Protestant Calvin was also acting as one of the informants of the Roman Catholic Church, and had been instrumental in procuring his conviction for heresy. Ignorant of all this unspeakable infamy, he innocently put himself in the power of this very Calvin.

The maker of the Presbyterian creed caused the fugitive Serviettes to be arrested for blasphemy. He was tried, and Calvin was his accuser. He was convicted and condemned to death by fire, and on the morning of the fatal day, Calvin saw him, and Serviettes, the victim, asked forgiveness of Calvin, the soon to be murderer, who indeed, as a good Christian, did turn the other cheek. He would have, perhaps, been better to follow the dictates of another saint, "If any man smite me on one cheek, him do I smite promptly on both."

~Saint Joseph, XVI, 27

Serviettes is bound to the stake, and the fires are lit, the winds carrying the searing flames away from his body, so that he might slowly roast slowly for hours in vindication for his sins, while vainly he implores a speedy death. At last the flames ascended about his tormented body, while through smoke and fire his murderers watched his beleaguered white but heroic face.

And there they watched in unison, these virtuous professors of Christianity, until the man became a charred and shriveled mass to resume his journey in Hell. The Catholic "Inquisitors would pass calmly on, leaving a neighborhood well-nigh depopulated fathers and mothers dispatched to distant shrines for months or years, leaving dependent families to starve, or harvests un-gathered to be the prey of the first-comer, all the relations of a life, hard enough at best, disturbed and broken up... It required courage to foolhardiness for any one to raise hand or voice against an inquisitor, no matter how cruel or nefarious were his actions... Fanatic zeal, arbitrary cruelty, and insatiable cupidity rivaled each other in building up a system unspeakably atrocious... The trained inquisitor left no method untried, which promised victory in the struggle between him and the helpless wretch abandoned to his experiments... One of the most efficient was the slow torture of delay... Everything that could affect the accused injuriously was eagerly sought... The most devout Catholic could never feel safe for a moment... Wives and children and servants were not admitted to give evidence in favor of the accused, but their testimony if adverse to him was welcomed, and was considered peculiarly strong... Withholding from the accused all knowledge of the names of the witnesses against him... A witness who withdraws testimony adverse to a prisoner is to be punished for falsehood, while his testimony is to stand... The only source of disability in a witness," was mortal enmity and there, "Must have been bloodshed between the parties... Men of wealth whose whole property was at stake might well consent to divide it with the papal court, whose all-powerful intervention would thereby be secured... If he would not abjure and give satisfaction he was to be handed over to the secular arm; if he confessed and sought reconciliation he was to be imprisoned for life... He was tied living to a post set high enough over a pile of combustibles to enable the faithful to watch every act of the tragedy to its awful end... The accused was treated as one having no rights, whose guilt was assumed in advance, and from whom confession was to be extorted by guile or force..." ~Lea.

Death of King Edward VI of England: succeeded by his Roman Catholic half-sister Mary.

Convinced that the Talmud attacks Christianity, Pope Julius III orders the burning of thousands of volumes of the Holy Talmud [the very Holy Book from which Jesus preached from at the Synagogues] in Rome, Bologna, Ferrara, Venice and Mantua.

AD 1554 - Pope Julius III in his Contra Hebreos retinentes libros, 1554, orders that the the Jewish Talmud be burned everywhere, and establishes a stricter censorship over Jewish genocidal writings; an order that has never been rescinded, and which, in all probability, is still binding upon all Catholics, worldwide.

AD1555-1559-Pope Paul IV becomes concerned about alleged acts of priestly sorcery within his Vatican ranks. ~from Vatican by Martin 1996.

The Catholic Church will set the future standard for Hitler as the Roman Catholic Papal bull, "Cum nimis absurdum," which requires all Jews in Vatican controlled lands to wear [distinct insignias] badges, and be confined to inclusive Jewish ghettos [a fact Hitler will one day also initiate]. Pope Paul IV, in his Cum nimis absurdum, 1555, which was promulgated immediately after his coronation, was yet another powerful condemnation of Jewish usury, which also embodies a model legal code to curb Jewish power that was recommended to all communities. Pope Pius condemns the Jewish genocidal writings.

Over 3,000 people are crowded into about 8 acres of land, and the public health problems are horrendous.

AD 1555-Peace of Augsburg: a division between the Catholic and Protestant factions is brought to a temporary solution. What this does is create a monopoly between Lutherans and Roman Catholics excluding recognition of any other religions. A similar pact is signed in Russia in the 20th Century disallowing any religions but Christianity, Islamic and Hebrew.

Pope Paul IV pursues all suspects who preach contrary to accepted Church dogma [English Cardinals & wayward Bishops are not excluded]

AD1556- Charles V abdicates giving Spain to his son Philip and the Empire to his brother Ferdinand I and retires to a monastery.

The Catholic, Queen Mary, orders the burning of the Archbishop of Canterbury Thomas Cranmer at the stake when he refuses to recant his Protestantism.

AD 1558- The Catholic Mary, Queen of England, dies and is succeeded by her half-sister [Protestant] Elizabeth as Queen Elizabeth I. The Protestant Church of England re-instated and Elizabeth sets about reclaiming Catholic monestaries and churches, along with all their valuable possessions, in the name of the crown.

Death of Charles V former King of Spain and Holy Roman Emperor.

AD1559-1565-Pope Pius IV, fathers three illegitimate sons [see Celibacy laws of 1022 and 1123]. At the Vatican, a portrait of Pope Pius IV is surrounded by the words "Senatus Populus Que Romanus." And on the side of this inscription, "Principis Ecclesiae dotes vis Cernere Magni." "Senate and People of Rome -- Prince of the Church endowed with power and great wisdom."

On 8 May, Queen Elizabeth I gives royal assent to the Act of Uniformity, making Anglican Church attendance compulsory.

"Index of Forbidden Books," under threat of excommunication, Pope Paul IV reiterates the Church's stand on banned books [1555-1559], which means no book is to be published without prior Church approval, including college texts. Pope Paul IV introduces the Pauline Index, a much more comprehensive document banning over 583 authors, although many were repeats due to the use of pseudonyms. Pope Paul IV's own forbidden Index, is referred to as the Pauline Index. The Pope knew better than to allow any room for disputation over the new Index: he made it clear from the beginning that this document was not up for discussion.

The Pauline Index bans many Northern European scientific texts, not necessarily because they contained heretical views, but because their author was Protestant. The Church struggled to control the thinking of its members. Freedom of the press? Never! The Counter-Reformation is initiated to stop the spread of Protestantism and to declare works contrary to the teachings of the Roman Catholic Church as heresy; the punishment is severe and freedom of the press is not an alternative.

The Index is updated in 1948 and in 1966 the threat of excommunication is lifted. Pope Pius IV has three children. The Church alleges that the spiritual capacity of the "Bad Popes," is not impaired by their temporal failings. The Church always has also maintained that you cannot serve two masters. Yet the Popes will lead a carnal life of habitual self-gratification and still maintain a healthy spiritual life. The Great Poet, Dante Alighieri, himself consigns a few prelates to choice real estate in the Inferno.

The first versions of his book, "The Divine Comedy," even had the Pope in a temperate zone without an asbestos suit. The Pope threatens him with excommunication if he does not remove him from this burning inferno, which he does reluctantly. Dante's later editions are without graphics and approved by the Pope.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

From 1559-74, the Protestants publish their own Ecclesiastical History called "Centuriators," in thirteen volumes, "Showing century by century, how far the Catholic Church had departed from primitive teaching and practices." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, passim.

This heretic work caused "Keen distress and dismay in Catholic circles; and provided the Reformers with a formidable weapon of attack on the Catholic Church. It did much harm. The feasibility of a counter-attack appealed to Catholic scholars, but nothing adequate was provided, for the science of history was still a thing of the future. Its founder was as yet but 21 years of age."

Baronius, later to become a Cardinal, and still later to also be condemned by the Church he so fervently espoused. He studied hard, and later produced his detailed analogy of history in his 'Annales,' 12 volumes, "Which he had foreseen in a vision would be the term of his work," and by which the "Centuries were eclipsed," but in which he ruthlessly destroyed by commonsensical and fearless criticism so many thousands of Church Saint-and-Martyr traditions, that "The Annals were condemned by the Spanish Inquisition." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 2, 305, 306.

AD 1560-Geneva Bible: a strongly Protestant version of the Bible incorporating the works of Calvinism. The English version is the version the Puritans use when they travel to America to avoid persecution [Shakespeare quotes the Geneva Bible in many of his works]. The Geneva Bible, New Testament is a revision of Matthew's version of Tyndale with use of Beza's New Testament, 1556, Old Testament is a thorough revision of the Great Bible, appointed to be read in Scotland [but not England], at least 140 editions.

It is ironic that the Puritans traveled to America for religious freedom, yet are exceedingly strict in their interpretations of the Bible with harsh penalties administered to those who differ from the majority as in the lands they had recently left. John Knox of Scotland convinces the Parliament to adopt a "Confession of Faith" and "Book of Discipline" recognizing Protestantism.

The American colonists believed it was 'God's Will' that they inhabit the new land as they also believed that it was 'God's Will' that they conquer the heathens, after a massacre in the summer of 1636 the Puritan commander-in-charge John Mason wrote of this will of the Christian God.

"And indeed such a dreadful Terror did the Almighty let fall upon their Spirits, that they would fly from us and run into the very Flames, where many of them perished... God was above them, who laughed his Enemies and the Enemies of his People to Scorn, making them as a fiery Oven... Thus did the Lord judge among the Heathen, filling the Place with dead Bodies ... The Lord was pleased to smite our Enemies in the hinder Parts, and to give us their land for an inheritance." ~Judaism and Jewish Apologetics, by Guido G. B. Deimel, 1997.

In order for Christianity to survive in this new land, entire populations of men, women, children, and infants... had to be mercilessly butchered and exterminated, "...Pursue them throughout all generations until they are destroyed completely." Until he had his own version named after him, so did King James I of England. King James I later tried to disclaim any knowledge of the 'Geneva Bible,' al though he had quoted the 'Geneva Bible' in his own earlier writings. As a Professor Eadie reported it: "... His virtual disclaimer of all knowledge up to a late period of the Genevan notes and version was simply a bold, unblushing falsehood, a clumsy attempt to sever himself and his earlier Scottish beliefs and usages that he might win favor with his English churchmen."

The irony goes further, for King James did not encourage a translation of the Bible in order to enlighten the common people as his sole intent was to deny them the marginal notes of the 'Geneva Bible,' the marginal notes of the Geneva version were what made it so popular with the common people.

The King James Bible was, and is for all practical purposes, a government publication. There were several reasons for the King James Version being a government publication. King James I of England was a devout believer in the "Divine Right of Kings," a philosophy ingrained in him by his mother, Mary Stuart and supported by the Catholic Church.

Mary Stuart may have been having an affair with her Italian secretary, David Rizzio, at the time she conceived James, and there is a significantly strong possibility that King James was the product such an adulterous affair, and apparently, enough evidence of such conduct on the part of Mary Stuart and David Rizzio existed to cause various displeased Scot nobles, including Mary's own husband, King Henry, to drag the Italian, David Rizzio from Mary's own supper table and execute him.

The Scot nobles hacked and slashed at the screaming Rizzio with knives and swords, and then threw him off a balcony to the courtyard below where he landed with a sickening smack. In the vernacular of that day, Rizzio had been 'Scotched.'

The Catholic Mary, whom the Pope tried to install as Queen over all of England, had affairs with other men, such as the Earl of Bothwell. She later tried to execute her husband in a gunpowder explosion that shook all of Edinburgh, Scotland, which the flabbergasted King Henry happened to survive the explosion only to be suffocated later that same evening, and the murderers were never discovered.

Mary wanted everyone to switch back to Roman Catholicism, and those who proved intransigent and wanted to remain Protestant she burned at the stake, about 300 people in all [maybe more]. She intended to burn a lot more, but the rest of her intended victims escaped by leaving the country. Mary was eventually beheaded at the order of her cousin, the Protestant, Queen Elizabeth I of England. The Anglican bureaucracy returned to power, less a few distinguished notables, such as Archbishop Cranmer, and Hugh Latimer, both having been previously burned at the stake by 'Bloody Mary.'

The Geneva Bible annoyed King James I, as the Geneva Bible had marginal notes that simply didn't conform to King James' point of view. Those marginal notes had been, to a great extent, placed in the Geneva Bible by the leaders of the Reformation, including John Knox and John Calvin.

Knox and Calvin could not and cannot be dismissed lightly or their opinions passed off to the public as the mere capriciousness of local dissidents. Notes such as, "When tyrants cannot prevail by craft they burst forth into open rage," contained in Exodus 1:22, annoyed the good King James. Second, religion was controlled by the government, the king, who was responsible to no one but God.

AD 1560-End of the World? John Knox, in 1547, sees the Pope in Daniel, "And the ten horns out of this Kingdom are ten kings that shall rise after them..." ~Daniel 7:24-25.

King James was not about to lose his powers to some religious fanatics' interpretations of Biblical Scriptures or to the Roman Church. From the time of King Henry VIII, an Englishman had three choices:

- ‡ The Anglican Church.
- ‡ Silence [for heretics who didn't wish the third option]
- ‡ The rack, burning at the stake, being drawn and quartered, tortured, or some other form of 'Friendly persuasion.' ~From the works of Bible Translations by Heinz Schmitz

Emperor Charles IX abolishes brothels in France by his royal decree. However, the numbers of French whores simply increases, while many new brothels mushroomed in previously unknown places and in unsuspected forms, and therefore, become more dangerous in the spread of disease.

AD 1560-1602-Akbar, Third Moghul Emperor of India respects all faiths and in 1575 constructs a House of Worship whereby scholars from all religions can meet to discuss God.

AD 1561-Good writers will always have a job, "Sir Francis Bacon, 1561-1626, knew that it required uncommon ability to write good History. He is a witness to the fact that it was impossible for the ablest man to write it, simply because 'Actions memorable' had not been 'Tolerably reported as they passed.' If this state of things, of which Bacon is not the only witness, had been duly noted by students since his time, there would not have been so great a waste of art on the subject of 'English History,' or of 'Church History' in general. Bacon is embarrassed in referring to 'Church History.' He appears to hint that it is artificial. There is abundance of it, 'Only,' he sighs, 'I would the virtue and sincerity of it were according to the mass and quantity.' Did he say to himself that it was a branch of Posey, that is, 'Nothing else but feigned history, which may be styled as well in prose as in verse,' and that its use was to give 'Some shadow of satisfaction to the mind of man in those points wherein the nature of things doth deny it?'" ~General Introduction by Edwin Johnson, 1842-1901.

AD 1562-Scotland: Father Nicholas de Gouda is sent to visit Mary Queen of Scots to invite her to send Bishops to the Council of Trent. After attaining the English throne, King James introduces episcopacy into Scotland, and to convince the Presbyterians to this end he allowed them to persecute the Catholics to their hearts' content. The essence of the resistance to this cruelty was Father James Anderson, who had to be withdrawn in 1611.

Religious Wars: 1,200 Fr. Huguenots are slain at Massacre of Vassy; the first War of Religion begins. ~cf. Mark 13:7-8.

AD 1563-Convocation of Canterbury; Church of England, sets about to draw up uniform rules pertaining to the Christian faith. They receive parliamentary support in 1571. A long period of proposals and revisions began in 1536 with the Ten Articles, 1537 the Bishop's Book [Bible], 1539 the Six Articles, 1543 the King's Book, and in AD 1553 the 42 Articles. Articles, 19-30 pertains to the rejection of Purgatory and Christ's body as the communion. The Articles are supported by King Henry VIII, and subsequently upheld by King Edward VI. In 1563-Pope Pius IV issues his decree on the Church's position regarding Purgatory, and the last session of the Council of Trent ends.

Fierce religious wars are waged between all the escalating new faiths spread throughout Europe. Those seeking freedom from the European religious turmoil accelerated their colonization of America, but instead of religious freedom they brought with them their own religious damnations, and democracy [An ancient Greek form of rule by the people] is not rediscovered until the writing of the American Bill of Rights. The Roman Catholic Council of Trent concludes that sex is terrible and denounces "Paintings calculated to excite lust." Pope Paul IV has clothes painted onto the naked figures in Michelangelo's painting, Last Judgement, in the Sistine Chapel. It took several Popes to accomplish this task, and Michelangelo had to be sent out of town, to sculpt David, in order to achieve this.

Creation of a new stigma for mankind, "Whereas the Catholic Church, instructed by the Holy Ghost, has, from the Sacred Writings and the ancient tradition of the Fathers, taught, in Sacred Councils, and very recently in this Ecumenical Synod, that there is a Purgatory, and that the souls there detained are helped by the suffrages of the faithful, but principally by the acceptable sacrifice of the altar; the Holy Synod enjoins on Bishops that they diligently endeavor that the sound doctrine concerning Purgatory, transmitted by the Holy Fathers and Sacred Councils, be believed, maintained, taught, and every where proclaimed by the faithful of Christ. But let the more difficult and subtle questions, and which tend not to edification, and from which for the most part there is no increase of piety, be excluded from popular discourses before the uneducated multitude. In like manner, such things as are uncertain, or which labor under an appearance of error, let them not allow to be made public and treated of." ~Catholic Encyclopedia.

One thousand five hundred years plus after the death of Jesus the Church is now making a conscientious effort to prove that there is a Purgatory. There is no purgatory mentioned in Scripture. Dante in his "Divine Comedy" embraces such a place in order to rationalize in his own mind that not all men are entitled to go directly to Heaven.

It is also a good precept taken up by Church Authorities as another means [threat] to coerce its fellow members to go to Church and donate heartily for their redemption.

Nowhere in the Bible do we have mention of such a place such as 'Purgatory,' which is a creation of a religious institution. The Council of Trent pronounces "Anathema against those who either declare that indulgences are useless or deny that the Church has power to grant them." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, passim.

AD 1564-1593-Marlowe, Christopher, famous British tragedian. Described by Swinburne as "The most daring and inspired pioneer of all our literature." He was admittedly the greatest writer in England before Shakespeare, though he was killed in a quarrel before he was 30. "All they that love not tobacco and boys are fools."

With Walter Raleigh and a few others he formed a discussion-circle which clerical writers called "Raleigh's school of Atheism." They seem to have called themselves Rationalists. The word Atheist is then used loosely, but Marlowe seems to have been an atheist, and at the time of his death the Privy Council decided to prosecute him as such.-J. McCabe

AD 1564-1642-Galileo Galilei, Italian physicist and astronomer, studies the works of Copernicus and agrees that the earth is not stationary. Galileo is censored by a Church edict and ordered not to discuss, publish, or write anything further that supports this view. Cardinal Ballarmine advises Galileo to abandon his beliefs that the earth moves.

"To command the professors of astronomy to confute their own observations is to enjoin an impossibility, for it is to command them to not see what they do see, and not to understand what they do understand, and to find what they do not discover." ~Galileo, The Authority of Scripture in Philosophical Controversies.

He wrote of his astounding discoveries in Italian rather than academic Latin so the public could read about them. In 1633 Galileo is sentenced to life imprisonment for violating church edicts denouncing his beliefs about the solar system, but later the Church backs down on sentencing the aging astronomer and settles for lifetime house arrest..

Three hundred and fifty years later the Church Authorities via a papal commission acknowledge the Vatican's errors [It appears that the Church claims inerrancy and infallibility yet can change its mind]. ~In 1992, the Church 'Forgives' Galileo.

"These revolutionary teachings [that the sun is stationary and the earth moves around it instead of vice versa] were regarded by many as wicked contradictions of the teaching of the Bible. The clergy feared that they would turn men away from religion. Here, Galileo was imprisoned and forced to swear that his teachings were false." ~Professor Perkins

The Church declares itself as the Supreme Authority over all of God's creations and whether it knows of what it portends to speak of or not is irrelevant and immaterial for it is the last authority on any matter it wishes to speak on. Quick to excommunicate others for breaking its rules, but closes its eyes when its clergy do likewise.

For his astronomical efforts, and their devastating effect on the religious dogma of the time, he is forced to recant his findings before the Inquisition and spent the last decade of his life under house arrest. Catholic apologists will claim the treatment of Galileo was, "Not an official pronouncement of the Church because the Pope did not sign it." Have they neglected to consider that the 'Sacred Congregation,' that rendered the pronouncement was an official body? The superstitious and untaught Papacy becomes so concerned of not only knowing nothing whatsoever about the new concept of the sun being the center of the system that very few of them remember that Joshua had once commanded the sun to stand still. ~Joshua 10:12.

In an era where only 10% of the Italian people could read and not even 1 percent had ever read the Bible, and the Old Testament was read to them only in church, is it no wonder that the Church could additionally control their thinking? What happened to the so-called educational institutions the Church so proudly proclaims?

Few Christians are aware that it was the Muslims who were spreading education and higher learning, and not the Church. "It is enough to say that, while the Romans had given the world a complete system of schools, by the year 500, more than 95 percent of the inhabitants of Europe were illiterate and densely ignorant."

Historians acknowledge the fact that the Church, during this period, acquired a great wealth of forged documents.

The Tridentine Index [Forbidden Books] is published, furthering the Church's hold on published documents [a vicious strike against Freedom of the Press].

"If a man would follow, today, the teachings of the Old Testament, he would be a criminal. If he would follow strictly the teachings of the New, he would be insane." ~Robert G. Ingersoll, American Free thinker.

"Which are acknowledged to be spurious to the extent of 90 percent and forged documents giving it a claim to the greater part of Italy. This is the real basis of that Temporal Power, for relinquishing its claim to which Mussolini has paid the Papacy millions of dollars." ~Father Joseph McCabe.

AD 1565-The Philippine Islands is referred to as the New Spain, later on named the Philippines, in honor of King Philip [King Philip II of Spain]. King Philip II writes to the Augustinian Friar Andres de Urdaneta in Mexico to proceed to the Philippines, which the Augustinian knows is in conflict with the "Treaty of Zaragoza."

With the death of the Viceroy, Don Luis de Velasco, who had also agreed with the friars the Royal Audiencia of Mexico orders Don Miguel de Legazpi to set sail for New Spain with two ships and 380 men, plus five Augustinian priests. 19 January, Legazpi sights land and takes possession of the land in the name of King Philip II of Spain. Spain finds it cheaper to subjugate the masses by way of religion than by military contingencies in her conquests of new lands.

Spain will stretch out its arm of power to the New World, as well as the Old, "It was under the reign of the Inquisition that the soul of Spain expired, and that a great power in arms and in arts, in literature and in commerce, fell from its high place into almost utter annihilation. That religion, whose birthplace is Heaven, and whose mission is love, should be propagated over the earth by means of racks and stakes, is utterly repugnant to all that we know of her and of her author. No, it was not Christianity, but its counterfeit, which the Inquisition was erected to promulgate. These were not priests, but demons; this was not a 'Holy Office,' but a Den Of Murder...." ~The Papacy: Its History, Dogmas, Genius, and Prospects, by Rev. J.A. Wylie, LL.D, Book III, Chapter 3.

History is defined as, "A Fable or Fiction agreed upon." ~Napoleon.

Massive organized corruption is brought to the Philippines via the friars who arrive with Legazpi [their religious leader is Father Andres de Urdaneta]

The friars convert the natives to Christianity and later on in history steal their lands by convincing them that they did not have any written legal title to their lands therefore no legal claim to their properties. A ruse is perpetrated upon the poor indigenous peoples to steal their lands, and this deception of the natives is to play a pivotal role in future dealings with the liberated masses and the future government's attempts at land ownership and agrarian reforms. Church and state are one in the concerted effort to enrich the Spanish at the detriment of the natives.

The Augustinians, Jesuits, and Dominicans all vie for power and are often in disagreement with each other [Huge land grants are being stolen from the indigenous peoples via forged documents and given to the relatives of the clergy] as the friars cite the Papal bull of Adrian VI, 1459-1523, as their authority to perform duties in the Philippines independent of the local Bishop.

The natives did not realize the paternalistic attitude of the friars as a form of racism and are subject to forced labor, payment of high taxes on the lands they own, and forced conversion to Christianity under severe penalties for non-acceptance. "Why should an atheist pay more taxes so that a church, which he despises should pay no taxes? That's a fair question. How can the apologists for the church exemption answer it?" ~E. Haldeman-Julius, The Church Is a Burden, Not a Benefit, In Social Life.

The Church will claim many martyrs in their struggle to proselytize the world's native clientele and avoids mentioning the millions, worldwide, who lost their lives because they did not wish to accept the new paganism, and yet, ironically, today the Church stands against killing.

AD 1566- The Spanish Bishop, Diego de Landa, records a few of the Mayan religious stories [of which we hold little credence for he extremely disliked their gods]. In 1790 one of the few remaining artifacts regarding Mayan culture is found in the discovery of a Maya stone calendar three feet thick and twelve feet in diameter. The calendar is inscribed with twenty symbols known as the Tzolkin and based on the Maya 260 day cycle [lunar].

Space Aliens(?) The Popol Vuh, sacred to the Mayans, unambiguously states that, "Men came from the stars, knowing everything, and they examined the four corners of the sky and the Earth's round surface."

More 'Children of God,' 'Angels,' 'Omnipotent Gods,' 'Manifestations,' 'Demons in Disguise,' 'Messengers from Heaven,' or 'Invincible Devils?' ~See Biblical references to extra-terrestrials in Genesis 15:17, Exodus 13:22, Exodus 19:18-19, Matthew 29, 17:1-8, Acts 1:6-11, Luke 1:35, 29, II Kings 2:11, and of course, Ezekiel's legendary psychedelic close encounter revealed in Ezekiel 1:1-28.

"The argument that the literal story of Genesis can qualify as science collapses on three major grounds: the creationists' need to invoke miracles in order to compress the events of the earth's history into the Biblical span of a few thousand years; their unwillingness to abandon claims clearly disproved, including the assertion that all fossils are products of Noah's flood, and their reliance upon distortion, misquote, half-quote, and citation out of context to characterize the ideas of their opponents." ~Stephen Jay Gould, The Verdict on Creationism, The Skeptical Inquirer, Winter 87/88, pg. 186.

Four centuries after burning the monk Giordano Bruno for impudently suggesting that the stars surrounding us were inconspicuous solar systems peopled with living worlds, the Roman Church, reluctantly, saw fit to admit the possibility, at least tacitly, of extraterrestrial life forms. In the 20th century the Church will admit to alien beings and begin contemplating the implications upon their world order.

Jesus [the Catholic God] died for man's sins, did he also give up the ghost for all creatures, both here and another world?

Like the birds, which fly freely across the skies, dragons are supposed to be contented on the land, as well as in the air, or in the bottomless fathoms of the sea, which is why they were selected as God's Heavenly Cursed weapons of mass destruction. A dragon is said to have swallowed [and spit out] Moses for failing to circumcise his son in the tradition prescribed in the hot parched desert, where Jesus is also said to have met the red cherub-dragon, Satan.

The origins of many ancient religions could be interpreted as retort to encounters by primitive humans with some strange alien race, and according to this view, humans could not but consider the unique technology of the aliens [various types of flying machines often show up in ancient drawings] to be supernatural and the aliens themselves to be Heavenly sent Gods.

"[A]nd high above on the throne was a figure like that of a man." "I saw that from what appeared to be his waist up he looked like glowing metal, as if full of fire, and that from there down he looked like fire; and brilliant light surrounded him. Like the appearance of a rainbow in the clouds on a rainy day, so was the radiance around him. This was the appearance of the likeness of the glory of the Lord. When I saw it, I fell face down, and I heard the voice of one speaking." ~J. F. Blumrich, The Spaceships of Ezekiel, 1974, although predating it by more than a decade. Ezekiel 1:26-28, New International Version, NIV, International Bible Society.

Space Aliens(?) Both the Old and New Testaments are filled with fantastic accounts of weird and wonderful encounters with Divine beings. Abraham and his 'Smoking firepot' with a flaming torch that appears in the sky as a celestial sign of God's acceptance of his sacrifice, the 'Pillar of cloud' by day and the 'Pillar of fire' by night that leads the mighty prophet, Moses, and the Israelites out of bondage, God landing on Mount Sinai in a cloud of smoke, with a sound of a trumpet before them, Elijah being 'Carried up to Heaven' in a wonderful and glorious 'Chariot of fire,' which creates a magnificent whirlwind, and Ezekiel's famous close encounter. ~ Genesis 15:17, Exodus 13:22, Exodus 19:18-19, II Kings 2:11, Ezekiel 1:1-28.

"By day, the Lord went ahead of them in a 'Pillar of cloud' to guide them on their way, and by night, in a pillar of fire to give them light, so that they could travel by day or night." ~Exodus 13:21, New International Version, 21.

"On the morning of the third day there was thunder and lightning, with a thick cloud over the mountain, and a very loud trumpet blast. Everyone in the camp trembled. Then Moses led the people out of the camp to meet with God, and they stood at the foot of the mountain. Mount Sinai was covered with smoke, because the Lord descended on it in fire. The smoke billowed up from it like smoke from a furnace, the whole mountain [a] trembled violently, and the sound of the trumpet grew louder and louder. Then Moses spoke and the voice of God answered him." ~Exodus 19:16-19, New International Version, (NIV), International Bible Society.

"The Lord threw them into confusion before Israel, who defeated them in a great victory at Gibeon. Israel pursued them along the road going up to Beth Horon and cut them down all the way to Azekah and Makkedah. As they fled before Israel on the road down from Beth Horon to Azekah, the Lord hurled large hailstones down on them from the sky, and more of them died from the hailstones than were killed by the swords of the Israelites." ~Joshua 10:10-11.

"Their existence can no longer be denied, for there is too much evidence for the existence of extra-terrestrials and flying saucers." UFOs indicate that they might be more evolved than humanity, but would not challenge the core of Christianity, for Christ is still 'King of the Universe.' "This means that everything in the universe, including extra-terrestrials and UFOs are reconcilable with God." ~Monsignor Corrado Balducci.

What of the 'Our Lady of Fatima,' visions, which Pope John Paul II attributes his survival of the assassination attempt by Mehmet Ali Agca, and which appeared to three young shepherds, Lucy, Francis, and Jacinta, in rural Portugal beginning on May 13, 1917? ~Our Lady of Fatima: Queen of the Most Holy Rosary, published by the Benedictine Convent of Perpetual Adoration, Clyde, Missouri, 1950.

As their predecessors had done for so many centuries, and, "As is well known, the Benedictines, and other monks, were in the habit of putting forth legends, lives of the Saints, and other works under various names. Up to the date of the introduction of printing in the middle of the 15th century the whole of the learning of Europe was in the hands of the priesthood, a very close Corporation, which looked keenly after their own interests, and manipulated everything in any way they chose. There was no publication, no criticism, nor contradiction of any sort." ~The Mysteries of Chronology, with Proposal for a New English Era to be called The Victorian, by F.F. Josephus reports another great wonder that happened at the end of the Second Passover in 66, “A supernatural apparition was seen, too amazing to be believed. What I am now to relate would, I imagine, be dismissed as imaginary, had this not been vouched for by eyewitnesses, then followed by subsequent disasters that deserved to be thus signalized. For before sunset chariots were seen in the air over the whole country, and armed battalions speeding through the clouds and encircling the cities.” ~Jerusalem Under Siege, Bill Crouse, 1999.

Sworn to protect the secrets of the Church, Cardinal Spellman [1950's] will inform his friend Pope Pius XII forthwith regarding other 'Alien' incidents [Roswell Incident], which the Church, like its American military co-conspirators will keep secret from the public. From the Biblical account in Genesis 6:1-4 many have interpreted the ancient mythologies to have been generated by visions of extra-terrestrials.

The New Testament makes note of these significant events in three key passages: I Peter 3:19-20; II Peter 2:4-6; and Jude 1:6-7. The particulars are simple, yet the sustaining arguments are too many and varied to detail, the event is summarized as follows:

- † Angelic beings [Sons of God] visited Earth, lustfully desiring the attractive daughters of man. ~Genesis 6:2.
- † These alien beings took whomever they wanted as wives. ~Genesis 6:2.
- † This angelic intervention occurred both before and after Noah's Flood. ~Genesis 6:4.
- † The offspring of this unlawful union become physical Giants [Nephalim] or 'fallen Ones' in the Hebrew. ~Genesis 6:4.
- † The fallen angels who committed this sin are incarcerated in Tartarus where they await judgment. ~II Peter 2:4 Greek.
- † The arrogant Goliath, who challenged David and is slain, is said to be one of the Nephalim [fallen ones], a gargantuan offspring from an unlawful union between a fallen angel [or demon], and mankind, Goliath is the post-Flood remnant, a giant who stood nearly 10 feet tall. ~I Samuel 17:49-51.
- † Only a segment of the angels who originally fell with Lucifer ever committed this atrocity, and all who sinned are imprisoned, but there are other fallen angels who are not bound. ~Jude 1:6.
- † The sin of the angels is the same as that of Sodom and Gomorra; i.e., they gave themselves to evil fornication, specifically going after a different category of flesh. ~Jude 1:7.
- † The embellishing writer in this case creates a story, which will be told, forever, over and over, “They made two pillars, the one of brick, the other of stone; they inscribed their discoveries on them both, that in case the pillar of brick should be destroyed by the Flood, the pillar of stone might remain, and exhibit these discoveries to mankind; and also inform them that there was another pillar of brick erected by them. Now this remains in the land of Siriad to this day.” ~Flavius Josephus, lb., I, ii, 2.
- † There are those who have dispute or tried to refute the “Angelic” interpretation of Genesis 6, but supporting manifestations of argument throughout the Scripture are too numerous to allow any other plausible interpretation. ~Read Chariots of the Gods? By von Daniken.
- † Heavenly creatures, or aliens are not unique to the Bible. In Meso-America we have, “... Men came from the stars, knowing everything, and they examined the four corners of the sky and the Earth's round surface.” ~The Popol Vuh, sacred to the Mayans.

“...God spared not the Angels that sinned, but cast them into chains of darkness to be reserved unto judgment.” ~II Peter 2:4.

AD1568-Bishop's Bible-the Archbishop of Canterbury, during the reign of Queen Elizabeth, revises the Great Bible. The Dutch revolt against Roman Catholicism.

Tommaso Campanella, Dominican mystic, philosopher, astrologer, and scholar spends much of his life in prison [27 years] due to his challenging Church Doctrine. He is arraigned before an Ecclesiastical Tribunal in 1599 on charges of performing magic, practicing heresy, and conspiracy against Spain. King Philip IV of Spain is persuaded to release Tommaso through the efforts of Pope Urban VIII, taking refuge in France,

King Louis XIII and Cardinal Richelieu grant him a pension.

Urbain Grandier is burned in Loudun, 1634, as Cardinal Richelieu orchestrated his murder. The Inquisition actually condemns in one sentence, all the inhabitants of the Netherlands to death as heretics, with a few designated exceptions. This is an astounding sentence unique in history with three or four lines condemning 3,00,000 people.

Revolt of the Protestant Netherlands from control of Catholic Spain. The Protestant Dutch rise up in arms against the unpopular Spanish commencing the 80 year war of liberation [1568-1648] with King Philip II closing the port of Lisbon in 1594 to Dutch shipping. The Dutch Far East Company [Precursors to Shell Oil Corporation] merely spreads its realm to new countries in southeast Asia. ~cf. Mark 13:7-8.

The Philippines being subject to attacks by marauding Dutchmen commencing in 1600 with a fierce battle ensuing June 23, 1647, by Pampango defenders in Abucay, Bataan [recorded as a massacre due to the Spaniards and the locals losing the first major battle] and the Dutch losing the following battle at Cavite. I believe if the Dutch had won over the Philippines and Protestantism had prevailed with its defense of individuality and human rights instead of the mental obsequiousness of Christianity, the tyranny of a corrupt system might have been eradicated long ago.

Prostitution thrives in the poorer parts of the streets of Spain along its margins and just outside its walls, such as the extramural parish of San Bernardo. Rents are undoubtedly lower in the marginal areas, and prostitutes can afford a room or a little shack. The 1568 syphilis epidemic in the city is called el contagio de San Gil because it first broke out in San Gil, Spain, another parish bordering the city's walls. Hospitals for victims of this wide spread epidemic are set up outside the city walls in the parish of San Bernardo.

The city council appoints medical inspectors to examine prostitutes and recommend action against the spreading disease as one doctor warns that the city's health is also endangered by the bad condition of lettuce and deer's tongue [plants] that are being sold in the city brothels as remedies for syphilis.

AD 1569-The condemnation and torture of heretics, witches, and those seeking magicians for purposes which must of themselves be evil is addressed by the Salzburg Provincial Synod's "Concillia Salisburgensia," where measures are actually taken to prevent the further killing of people for having diabolical illusions or inclinations. King James I estimated that the ratio of women to men who "Succumbed" to witchcraft was approximately twenty to one. Of those formally persecuted for witchcraft, between 80 to 90 percent were women.

What better friend could the Jews have than the Roman Church, which, throughout history, has claimed to have defended them? Pope Pius V, in his Hebraeorum gens, 1569, orders expelled all Jews from his Papal States.

AD 1570- There is nothing new under the sun. In the early 21st century heated debates regarding same-sex marriages occur among many Christian faiths, but in Rome: Montaigne reports that at the Church of Saint John, Catholic priests perform same sex marriages, and a contemporary historian reports that same sex couples married in Saint John's are also burned alive in the city square.

Pope Pius V issues his Papal bull, "Regnans in Excelsis," which excommunicating Queen Elizabeth I. Consensus of Sandomir: The Calvinists, Lutherans, and Moravian Brothers of Poland ally against the Jesuits.

AD 1571- 13th of September, Pope Pius V initiates the Congregation of the Index [Forbidden Books] that had been confirmed by Gregory XII. In 1588, on the 22nd of January, the Index is further refined by Pope Sixtus V. The Church has taken a paternalistic attitude towards its congregation in its efforts to "Protect them" from any outside influences that might corrupt, their thinking Catholic.

In 1588, on the 22nd of January, the Forbidden Index is further refined by Pope Sixtus V. Today the Church claims it has always proclaimed Freedom of the Press [Apologists will claim that 'Purity of Faith' is necessary to protect the Church thereby necessitating the Forbidden Index, which is sometimes known as the Roman Index].

Anyone who aids or abets the Spanish Maranos in their attempt to escape is to be punished with confiscation of their properties, and any owner of a vessel or captain who should transport them are to be sentenced to death, such order shall fall under the jurisdiction of the Holy Inquisition only in the territories of Aragon, Spain, when, in 1524, Pope Clement VII, in a papal brief, also granted jurisdiction over sodomy to the Inquisition of Aragon, whether or not it was related to heresy, and in Castile, cases of sodomy were not adjudicated, unless related to heresy.

The tribunal of Zaragoza distinguishes itself for its severity in judging these heretical offenses, and between 1571, and 1579, more than 100 men are accused of sodomy, processed through the Church's kangaroo court system, and at least 36 are ordered executed by the authorities [so the Church can claim it had no hand in murder], and in total, between 1570 and 1630 there are 534 trials and 102 executions.

The primary difficulty with this logic is that the penalty for disobedience is, in its most extreme measure, often death. That insatiable arbiter who judges all without regard to race, color, or religion. Will it be possible to recognize an inspired and infallible Papal Decree, issued by such oracles on the Tiber, when it is remembered that repeatedly successive Popes have contradicted each other; and that the spiteful Popes have denounced councils, and councils have denounced Popes; that the Bible of Pope Sixtus V had so many admitted errors [nearly two thousand] that even its own authors had to recall it?

The Venetian government, at war with Turkey, resolves to expel all of the Jews from Venice and the Adriatic Islands. Though the expulsion is not enforced, it reflects the impact of the Counter-Reformation and the continued Papal willingness to sacrifice local commercial interests to their alleged doctrinal necessities.

The superior forces of Turks, intent upon conquering Christian Europe, are beaten decisively by Christian sailors reportedly calling upon the name of Our Lady of the Rosary.

"The bigoted Pope Pius V actually directed that no medical assistance should be given to any person who declined spiritual attendance!" ~Macauley, Const. Essays; Church and State, p. 136.

The Congregation of the Index is founded by [Saint] Pope Pius V, which restricts a free press and rights of the people.

Spanish owners of the houses used by city brothels include a veinticuatro, an official of the Santa Hermandad, and one of the twenty sheriffs with major law enforcement responsibilities.

AD 1572-Augustus of Saxony imposes the penalty of burning at the stake for witchcraft of any kind, including fortune telling. The Protestant districts show fewer leniencies toward witches than their Catholic contemporaries do. Scripture is against fortune telling, sacrificing humans, witchcraft, and drinking blood, are explicitly forbidden in the Bible, and the Old Testament is full of warnings in these regards. ~see Exodus 22:18; Leviticus 3:17; Leviticus 7:26; Leviticus 17:12-14; Leviticus 19:26, 31; Deuteronomy 12:31; Deuteronomy 18:9-14; 2 Kings 17:16-17; 1 Chronicles 10:13-14; 2 Chronicles 28:3-4; 2 Chronicles 33:1-6; Isaiah 8:19; Jeremiah 10:2; Ezekiel 20:31.

Pope Gregory XIII, 1572-1585, declares that the Jews, "Continue to plot horrible crimes" against the Christians "With daily increasing audacity."

AD 1572-August 4th, The Saint Bartholomew's Day Massacre: thousands of French Protestants [Huguenots] are slain by French Roman Catholics. Church bells are used to signal for the massacre to begin. The Sardinian Church age runs from 1000 to 1500 C.E., and is one of the bloodiest in the history of the Church. This era spawned the infamous Spanish Inquisition and witnessed the massacre of the Huguenots in France, and the Bartholomew's Day Massacre, where the amiable Pope gave a medal to all armed Catholics who killed unarmed Protestants. It also witnessed the horrific Crusades and the invasions of Saladin and Ghengis Khan, and the Hundred Years War, 1337-1450, between England and France, which also occurred during this period.

Admiral Coligny, a Huguenot, is ordered assassinated by Queen Catherine de Medici, mother of King Charles IX, great-niece to Pope Leo X, and mother-in-law to Mary, Queen of Scots. Coligny is stabbed to death and his body tossed out a window where later another assassin chops off his head.

It is estimated that twenty thousand Huguenots lose their lives that day. Christian apologists claiming that France had remained loyal to the Vatican while the northern nations rebelled against it in the 16th century is wholly incorrect.

In spite of the expulsion of John Calvin, a Frenchman, who claims to have 300,000 followers in France, and the bloody persecutions from 1540 to 1550 of the Protestants, or Huguenots, everywhere, the Reformist ideals were spreading swiftly. The heir to the throne and his brother and sons and some of the highest nobles embraced these Protestant concepts, and in the second half of the sixteenth century the Huguenots sustained three civil wars against the King's armies.

Pope Clement VII had married a girl of his degenerate Medici family to the equally degenerate prince who became King Henry II, and after the premature death of that monarch, in 1559, Catherine de Medici reopened France to the overbearing Jesuits, and they fabricated a Huguenot plot to sack and burn Paris. This infamous fraud led the Catholic nobles to conspire to destroy the Huguenots, who had come to Paris in large numbers for the marriage of the young King's sister to one of their religious sect.

On midnight of August 23-24, St. Bartholomew's Day, the King's Royal Troops are discharged upon the Huguenots of Paris, and the Catholic citizens join in the massacre. The order is sent also to the provinces, and leads to many days of human carnage.

The "Catholic Encyclopedia" asserts that, "The majority of historians" deny that the massacre was organized; a fictitious statement which is refuted by the later admission that Catherine had long meditated over such a crime and had won her son to support it, and that the Royal Troops had been assembled for that specific purpose. The historians Ranke and Martin admit that only 2,000 were killed in Paris, and that the Pope orders rejoicing at Rome only because he has received news that the King and Queen had escaped a murderous Huguenot plot.

The truth is that Ranke in, "The Popes of Rome," 1866, II, 47, and Martin's "Histoire de France," 1878, IX, 270-350, state the majority of non-Catholic historians insist that the massacre was organized. Martin gives one of the most shuddering accounts of what he calls "The orgy of crime," by the Christians.

He tells of brutal murders in the Royal Palace under the very eyes of the King and Queen, and describes how Queen Catherine and her maids callously make obscene jokes over the dead bodies of Huguenots they had known, and Catholic boys killing babies in the cradle. Catholic contemporaries now say that 10,000 were killed at Paris.

The figure of 2,000, which Martin accepts is actually for only one day at Paris. He finds the total number of victims to be about 20,000. Ranke, a more critical student, claims 50,000; which means that the Catholics killed, and more brutally, more than twice as many people in a few days as the French revolutionaries killed in three years.

As to Pope Gregory XIII, the haste with which he ordered bonfires and the singing of the "Te Deum," it is not disputed that he went on, while messengers with a true account continued to arrive, to strike a gold medal with the inscription "Slaughter (strages) of the Huguenots," and for weeks or months he had Vasari painting pictures of "The glorious triumph over a perfidious race." The racism and religious intolerance in christianity today is somewhat more subliminal.

The French Court, which was sobered by the anger and disgust of Europe now invented the lie about the danger to the King and Queen, tried in vain to restrain the Pope's indecent joy and save face. Ranke quotes Cardinal Santorio referring long afterwards to "The famous St. Bartholomew's Day which was most joyful to Catholics." ~Martin's long account, separately published in Blackie's French Historical Series, 1919, requires a minor correction, his death figures are too low. - M. Wilkinson's Problem of St. Bartholomew's Massacre, 1925 and from the works of J. McCabe, Rationalists Encyclopaedia

AD 1572-June 24th the Spaniards force their way up the mountainsides, through narrow trails to the gates of Vilcabamba, Peru, only to find the town destroyed and deserted. The Incas have vanished. Vilcabamba is where, earlier, a king's ransom in gold had been paid. The location is lost, because the Spaniards in their greed to conceal their treachery and greed did not make maps showing its location. Unable to locate the city or convert the natives to Christianity the Spaniards reluctantly withdraw their forces.

The Bishop's Bible, an inadequate and unsatisfactory revision of the Great Bible checked against the Hebrew text, first to be published in England by Episcopal authority with use of Rheims New Testament [Catholic version] of 1582, included Apocrypha, alterations found in many editions through 1800, revisors accused of being "Damnable corrupters of God's word."

AD 1573-1579-Diego de Landa, Franciscan Provincial, and the Catholic Bishops become aware of the Mayan natives secretly cherishing their ancient pagan rites and institute an investigation. Gross cruelties, torture, and death to the natives occur and the proceedings are stopped by order of Bishop Toral, Franciscan Provincial of Mexico.

By this time two million sacred images and hundreds of hieroglyphic manuscripts had already been burned or destroyed. In 1586, a Royal Edict is issued for the suppression of idolatry, which casts a pall upon the indigenous attempting to protect their history and heritage.

The Mayan history of the seventeenth century consists of revolts against their hard and demanding Spanish oppressors [1610-33, 1636-44, 1653, 1669, 1670, and 1675]. The Maya practiced a baptismal rite, known as the "Rebirth," without which there could be no marriage before the arrival of Christianity and its baptismal practice.

Twenty-seven parchments on Maya religion are publicly destroyed by Bishop Landa at Mani in 1562. Additional Maya history is destroyed at the storming of the Itzá capital in 1697. Little remains of their culture and almost all that has come down to us are three codices, "Codex Troano," "Codex Peresianus," and the "Dresden Codex." The Maya priests, according to their calendar, predict the End of the World on December 21st, 2012.

Between 1573-1581, the Cinque Scole Synagogue is erected in the Jewish ghetto of Rome, Italy. When the ghetto was established in 1555, the Jews were permitted only one Synagogue for a place of worship, though there were five prayer communities with ethnic, linguistic and social differences.

Pope Pius V will later agree to have one building house the five Synagogues, which will satisfy the literal restrictions, but permits the Jews to establish Castilian, Catalan, Temple and New Congregations.

AD1573-The Augustinian Friar Diego de Herrera, travels to Spain to inform the king of the abuses in the Philippines. The theoretical union of church and state is good on paper, but not in reality, the Spanish Encomenderos grossly abuse the Filipinos, who they see as unworthy, demanding tribute, plundering their lands, and killing defenseless inhabitants.

Many Filipinos will come to hate the Spaniards and the Encomenderos will resent the Augustinians who are deemed to have encroached upon their political authority. The Papal Bull of 1581 by Pope Gregory XIII attempts to rectify the injustices suffered by the Filipinos at the hands of the Catholic clergy. Bishop Domingo de Salazar becomes the champion for Filipino rights liberating Filipino slaves held by the Spaniards, and largely ignored by the Church.

The Council appeals to Governor General Gonzalo Ronquillo de Penalosa to delay the emancipation due to potential great financial loss.

AD 1574-Philippines, Chinese pirates, aboard 62 ships, invade Manila. This invasion by heathens is the beginning of mistrust between the Christian community and Chinese due to the Chinese invasion force attack on the Philippines.

AD 1575-1624-Jacob Boehme, sometimes spelled Boehm [or Behmen], a shoemaker from Görlitz, Saxony, at age 25 experiences a transformation that influences his life.

Boehm believes it is the duty of every Christian to love his enemies and to do good despite the cruelties that might be heaped upon them.

Boehme disagrees with the Lutherans on Scriptural interpretations as well as the Catholic Church. Practiced passivity in the face of adversity in his every day encounters. He believed that God was far away in the Universe and through mystical experiences his presence is brought closer to man. God the Father is the sky and Jesus Christ is the sun. The star represents the Holy Spirit.

The followers of Luther fought bitterly with the followers of Zwingli, "The Devil has made himself master of Luther, to such a degree, as to make one believe he wishes to gain entire possession of him."

~Zwingli.

"To see him in the midst of his followers, you would believe him to be possessed by a phalanx of devils."

~Zwingli, speaking of Martin Luther.

"Zwingli was greedy of honor... He had learnt nothing from me... Oecolampadius thought himself too learned to listen to me or to learn from me." ~Martin Luther.

The Bible clearly states that Satan, the Devil, is billions of years old. The Devil is mentioned 188 times in the New Testament: 62 as a "Demon," 36 times as "Satan," 33 times as the "Devil," 37 times as a "Beast," 13 times as a "Dragon," and 7 times as "Bezebuth." ~Wooden Stakes Through the Bible's Heart By Jim V, Bill Fairchild Cf. ~Revelation 4:6-8, beasts in Heaven.

"Zwingli is dead and damned, having desired like a thief and a rebel, to compel others to follow his error." ~Martin Luther.

Zwingli and Luther shared only the same perspectives on how to deal with the Roman Church, "The Bishops will not desist from their fraud... until a second Elijah appears to rain swords upon them... It is wiser to pluck out a blind eye than to let the whole body suffer corruption." ~Zwingli, 4 May, 1528.

Spain: When the Bishop of Esquilache asked permission in 1575 to establish a monastery in place of the syphilitic infected brothels, he points out that this area was, "Of such poor quality that it could not be purified.”

The city council appoints a commission to study the proposal, and it suggests compensating the owners of the properties with houses on another street and moving the brothels to a section next to the city wall. The city council appoints padres, or administrators of the city-licensed brothels, and in the last part of the 16th century, there are three padres, each the head of a separate house licensed by the city, which collects fees. City fathers who owned brothels argue that the brothels often benefited the entire community because they provided a livelihood for otherwise impoverished women. It is not surprising, then, that the city council listens sympathetically to a padre of a brothel when he complains bitterly about “Strange clergymen” as well as pious laymen called congregados who are driving women away from city-licensed brothels.

AD 1576-Bohemia, Kuttenplan, the small community imposes a tax upon itself in order to purchase a single etrog tree [Tree of knowledge of good and evil?] The tree cannot be from grafted stock according to Jewish religion and the major source of wild etrogim grows in Corsica.

The Ottoman Albania area was another major source until 1840 with the sultan maintaining strict control of the fruit.

The Catholic Encyclopedia praises the virtue of the Albanians and then admits that until recent times the Catholic priests had a tradition of kidnapping beautiful young Turkish girls and carrying them off to the mountains; but it must admitted that they gave them the sacraments of [compulsory] Baptism and marriage before sleeping with them.

Brazil: Spanish explorers report that some native women, “Give up all duties of women and imitate men... Each has a woman to serve her, to whom she says she is married, and they treat each other and speak with each other as man and wife.” ~Leather History Timeline, <http://www.leatherarchives.org/exhibit/s/deblase/timeline1.htm>

AD 1578-The Shroud is taken to Turin Cathedral.

In Ireland, the Catholic Bishops are executed by the English in 1578, 1585, 1611, and in 1652 legislative action is taken to further insure their extermination.

“An attempt was made to exterminate the entire Irish Catholic priesthood... An Act signed by the Commissioners for the Parliament of England decreed that every Romish priest... Should be... Hanged... Beheaded... Quartered, his bowels drawn out and burned, and his head fixed on a pole in some public place... Finally, scarcely a Catholic prelate was left on the whole island... Dissenters in Ireland... Also endured appalling miseries... Instances are recorded of Dissenters whose fingers were wrenched asunder, whose bodies were seared with red-hot irons, and whose legs were broken... Their wives were also whipped in public.” ~From The Protestant Inquisition, Reformation Intolerance and Persecution, by Dave Armstrong

AD 1580-1581-Philippines, Governor Gonzalo Ronquillo moves the Chinese community into a concentrated area of Manila called Parian in order to closer monitor them. Being Non-Christian, the Spaniards did not trust them.

By paying large bribes to officials the Chinese are able to continue doing business in the city. The Dominican Order is charged with the conversion of the Chinese to Christianity.

Jean Bodin publishes, “Démonomanie des sorciers” against witchcraft.

AD 1581-Melrose Number One Manuscript, the “Old Charges” are manuscripts setting out regulations for the operative mason's trade and read at their meetings.

AD 1581-Discipline becomes too relaxed and the troops under the Grand Mastership of the Knights of Malta becomes increasingly perilous. Revolts are frequent and in 1581 the Grand Master, Jean de la Cassière, is made prisoner by his own knights, whose primary grievance was his expulsion of lewd and lascivious women [The vow of obedience being better observed than that of celibacy].

AD 1582-The Calendar is stripped of eleven days by the Pope. On October 4th, Pope Gregory decrees that the Next Day will be October 15th and eleven days will be removed from the calendar. There is no October 5th through October 14th on the Catholic calendar. This is due to the Solar Calendar being eleven minutes and fourteen seconds too long each year with the present Caesarian Calendar.

We now use the Gregorian calendar. Also the first day of spring was fixed by the Council of Nice in 325 to fall on March 21st, was retarded by ten days to March 11th that converted the Lunar Calendar to the Solar Calendar. In the 1st century B.C.E., using the existing calendar, Julius Caesar had adjusted the slight errors in the calendar of the Egyptian astronomer Sosigenes and developed the Julian calendar. The priests having performed their calendar-keeping duties poorly and by time of Emperor Julius Caesar, they had the summer months falling in the spring. Finally, in 1582, Pope Gregory XIII announces that the Julian calendar is also incorrect. This had caused the Christian festivals to occur at different times of the year, not occurring during their seasonal equinoxes by approximately one day every one hundred years.

Pope Gregory XIII eliminates ten days from the year 1582. Calculating the proper date of the vernal equinox from the year of the Council of Nicaea [325], he removes one day for each intervening century. 1582 October 4th will be followed by October 15th.

When speaking of the gathered assembly of presbyters gathered at the Council of Nicaea, Sabinus, the Bishop of Hereclea, unperturbed by his own candor says in an account of the proceedings, "Excepting Constantine himself, and Eusebius Pamphilus, they were a set of illiterate, simple creatures who understood nothing. Dr Richard Watson, a disillusioned Christian historian and previously Bishop of Llandaff in Wales, referred to them as 'A set of gibbering idiots'. After a lifetime of research into church councils he concluded that, 'The clergy at the Council of Nicaea were nearly all under the power of the Devil and the convention was composed of the lowest rabble, and patronized the vilest abominations.'" ~Jesus Was Created in the Council of Nicaea, Sabinus, Bishop of Hereclea, <http://www.godlikeproductions.com/forum1/message77107/pg1>.

Over the centuries, the Christian faith has become quite adept at name calling, stigmatizing, and slandering their adversaries, "But again these same men accuse the Holy Evangelist, and even more so his Gospel, because, they say, John spoke concerning the two Passovers that the Savior had made, but the other Evangelists concerning only the one Passover. And the idiots do not know that the Gospels not only confess two Passovers but also say that they were only the first two, which along with that in which the Savior suffered his passion make three Passovers in all, which have been dealt with in the preaching."

~Epiphanius, Panarion, 51.22.

Referring to Epiphanius' quotation from the Gospel of the Ebionites in Panarion, 30.13, regarding the vegetarian diet of John and Jesus, "And his food, it says, was wild honey whose taste was of manna, as cake in oil." ~Bart D. Ehrman, Lost Scriptures: Books that Did Not Make It into the New Testament, Oxford University Press, 2003, p. 13.

It was an infantile body of men, men whom were possessed with power, and often had little or no religious training, who were responsible for the commencement of a new religion and the theological creation of Jesus Christ, and the Church readily admits that vital elements of the proceedings at Nicaea are "Strangely absent from the canons." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, Farley ed., vol. iii, p. 160.

There is another quite revealing, luminous confession, of the ignorance and uncritical credulity of early church men. Dr Richard Watson, 1737-1816, a disillusioned Christian historian and one-time Bishop of Llandaff in Wales, 1782, referred to the Nicene Bishops as "A set of gibbering idiots." ~An Apology for Christianity, 1776, 1796 reprint; also, Theological Tracts, Dr Richard Watson, On Councils, entry, vol. 2, London, 1786, revised reprint 1791.

"Wild Texts," unapproved religious manuscripts circulated amongst presbyters and they supported a great variety of Eastern and Western Gods and Goddesses: Jove, Jupiter, Salenus, Baal, Thor, Gade, Apollo, Juno, Aries, Taurus, Minerva, Rhets, Mithra, Theo, Fragapatti, Atys, Durga, Indra, Neptune, Vulcan, Kriste, Agni, Croesus, Pelides, Huit, Hermes, Thulis, Thammus, Eguptus, Iao, Aph, Saturn, Gitchens, Minos, Maximo, Hecla and Phernes. ~God's Book of Eskra, anon., ch. xlviii, paragraph 36, Catholic Encyclopedia, New Edition, Gospel and Gospels.

In the future, he declares that years ending in two zeros that were not divisible by 400 would not be leap years, which is contrary to the Julian calendar. The Jewish calendar believes the world was fashioned in what is 3761 B.C.E., of the Gregorian calendar [hence the year 2000 would be 5761].

January 1st is now officially recognized as the beginning of the New Year [many countries recognized Christmas or Easter as the start of the year]. The new system is known as the "New Style," and all dates before 1582 are thereafter marked in official records with the letters "O.S." for "Old Style."

The new calendar, is called the Gregorian, or New Style [N.S.], calendar. It was adopted by the Roman Catholic countries [the Protestant and Eastern Orthodox countries continued to use the "Old Style" [O.S.], or Julian, calendar. The Eastern Orthodox Church accepts the "New Style" in 1923, when another 13 days are lost. The Chinese adopted the new calendar in 1912. The predominantly Catholic countries recognize Pope Gregory's changes, but England does not make the correction until 1752, at which time it was necessary to drop another eleven days, while the Soviet Union does not adjust its calendars until the early 20th century.

The earliest known record of a New Year festivals dates from 2000 B.C.E., in Mesopotamia. In Babylonia the New Year began with the new moon closest to the spring equinox [generally in mid-March]. In Assyria it was near the autumnal equinox [in September]. For the Egyptians, Persians, and Phoenicians the day is celebrated on the autumnal equinox [on or about September 23]. For the Greeks it was the winter solstice on December 21st or 22nd. During the Roman Republic, March 1st began the new year, but after BC 153 the date was changed to January 1st [This date being kept by the Julian calendar of 46 B.C.E.] For countries still using the Julian calendar, New Year's Day is on January 14th.

The Islamic year is established upon the lunar, following the Holy Book, the Koran. The lunar cycles are guides for the faithful in their religious observances.

The Islamic year has 12 months with, alternately, 29 and 30 days, making a year of 354 or 355 days. There is no attempt to align the lunar year with the solar year, therefore the Muslim months have no relation to the seasons. The months continually move around the year, so major festival observances may occur during any season.

Easter: This festival in ancient times spread from China, where it was called "The Festival of Gratitude to Tien," to the whole of Pagan Europe. The festival began with a week's indulgence in various sports, the "Carne vale," to flesh farewell, or the taking a farewell to animal food, from which the modern word Carnival is derived, being followed by a fast of forty days in honor of the Saxon goddess Ostris, or Eostre of the Germans, whence our Easter.

The ancient Persians, at the festival of the solar new year, March 21st, when the sun crosses the equator, presented each other with colored eggs. Dyed eggs were Sacred Easter Offerings in Egypt. The Jews used eggs at the Passover. The early Christians did not celebrate the Resurrection of their "Lord," but made the Jewish Passover their chief festival.

"A new tradition gained currency among the Roman Christians that Jesus had not eaten the Passover before he died, but had substituted himself for the paschal lamb." The Resurrection then became the great Christian festival, and was celebrated on the first pagan holiday, the Dies Solis, after the Passover." ~M.D. Altheia, The Rationalist's Manual. Bank of Wisdom, Box 926, Louisville, KY 40201.

The Roman Catholic Church produces its own version of the Bible before the King James Version. In 1582 the Rheims New Testament is published, and is extensively used by the King James Version revisers. The Douay Bible, is a translation of the Latin Vulgate, and is published in 1609, but its publication is too late to influence the King James Version translators.

The Bishop's Bible, an inadequate and unsatisfactory revision of the Great Bible checked against the Hebrew text, 1st to be published in England by Episcopal authority with use of Rheims New Testament of 1582 included the Apocropha, alterations found in many editions through 1800, revisors accused of being "Damnable corrupters of God's Word."

"It has been said that the vocabulary of the King James Version is heavily reliant on previous versions. Four percent of the vocabulary of the entire King James Version is attributed to Wycliffe, eighteen percent to Tyndale, thirteen percent to Coverdale, nineteen percent to the Geneva Bible, four percent to the Bishops' Bible, and three percent to other previous translations. In other words, sixty-one percent of the vocabulary of the King James Version can be attributed to previous versions. Changes were made in the text and notes of the King James Version not long after its original publication. By 1613 there were three hundred differences from the original 1611 version." ~History of the English Bible by F. Keith Mincey.

AD 1582-1609-The Douay, Douay-Rheims Bible [sometimes known as the Douai Bible] is published. This is the Roman Catholic version of the Bible used in English speaking countries until the 1900's. Translated from St. Jerome's Version [Vulgate Bible-commissioned by Pope Damasus I in 382] by English speaking exiles in France.

AD 1583-Grand Lodge Manuscript Number One, the "Old Charges" are manuscripts setting out regulations for the operative mason's trade and read at their meetings.

AD 1583-One Hundred twenty-one people are burned at the stake for alleged witchcraft in Osnabruck, Germany.

The Third Provincial Council of Lima, in Peru, tells natives that, "Sodomy, whether with another man, or with a boy, or a beast ... Carries the death penalty, ... And the reason God has allowed that you should be so afflicted and vexed by other nations is because of this vice that your ancestors had and many of you still have." ~Leather History Timeline, <http://www.leatherarchives.org/exhibits/deblasetimeline1.htm>

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

AD 1583-The Inquisition, under the jurisdiction of the Dominican Order, is established in the Philippines. Now the Church can control its adversaries and the local natives by intimidation as well as by means of horrendous torture. May 5th the first Royal Audiencia is created in Manila to curb the corruptness of the Spanish appointed governor-general and officials. The abuses endured by the Filipinos, however, are from both local officials and the clergy.

The Friars are running amuck creating falsified documents, stealing the lands of the indigenous people and taxing the poor off the very lands they owned for centuries prior to Spanish colonization but now cannot own due to the Spanish requirement of documentation to show ownership. Throughout the world, "The churches beg, and if we don't give them money, why, they take it anyway, forcibly, by means of this unjust state tax exemption." ~E. Haldeman-Julius, The Church Is a Burden, Not a Benefit, In Social Life.

During the first session of the Audiencia with Governor Santiago de Vera as president, June 15th, 1584, arguments break out and the Audiencia is eventually abolished by royal decree upon the recommendation of Bishop Salazar on August 9th, 1589. The Spaniards are reluctant to give the peasants rights equal to the Spaniards and the Catholic Clergy through corruption have gained control of the public officials. Land reforms to ameliorate the wrongs four hundred years later will have little effect upon the poor for the wrongs they will suffer now and in the future.

AD 1584-Reginald Scot of England publishes his work, "The Discovery of Witchcraft" in an effort to expose charlatans and sleight-of-hand card players and magicians.

AD 1585-1619-Vanini, Lucilio, Italian martyr of freethought. He became a priest after university courses in philosophy, theology, science, and law, but was compelled to abandon the faith. He traveled in many countries urging men to the study the sciences.

Expelled from France, and in England he served a term of imprisonment in the Tower of London for his religious views.

In a weak hour, he published a work professing Christianity, but the following year he wrote a book which the Paris Parliament considered atheistic and ordered burned: he was, in fact, nearer to atheism than a definite pantheism and was a vigorous critic of theology. The French authorities arrested him as "An atheist and blasphemer," tore out his tongue and burned him alive at the stake. He died bravely, pointing out that Jesus had sweated blood in the face of death and the atheist had no fear.

AD 1585-1638-Cornelis Jansen, Flemish theologian, Bishop of Ypres, believes in the absolute predestination of man. Man is destined by God to be damned or saved. His most famous work "Augustinus" is banned by the Roman Catholic Church Authorities.

In one of the earliest recorded cases of masochism, the devout Sister Mary Magdalene de Pazzi begs other nuns to tie her up and hurl hot wax at her. She also made a novice at the convent thrash her.

Pope Gregory XIII dies, and Cardinal Felice Peretti becomes Pope Sixtus V [1585-1590].

AD 1587-Blaise de Vigenere, French cryptographer publishes his "Traicte Des Chiffres," a work on codes, numbers, and secret writings. Proof that secret organizations have been around for centuries.

AD 1587-Japan: the beginnings of persecution with the rivalries of nations and of competing orders. Spanish merchants introduced Spanish Dominicans and Franciscans.

Pope Gregory XIII at first forbade this but Pope Clement VIII and Pope Paul V relaxed and repealed the prohibition, and the persecution of "Taico-Sama," which eventually brings about a bloody struggle.

The first great slaughter of 26 missionaries at Nagasaki [the second Atomic Bomb is dropped on this large enclave of Catholics in WWII] takes place on 5 Feb., 1597, when an Anti-Christian decree is issued ordering all missionaries to leave Japan within twenty days on pain of death.

This was not aimed at merchants, as it is stated that merchants could remain and trade, but if they brought a missionary on their ships, both the ship and the goods in it would be confiscated. This decree was passed for purely political reasons. Hideyoshi scented danger. He felt that the missionaries and their converts might become politically dangerous. ~See Jawaharlal Nehru on Christianity, page 272.

The Manila Galion, used to travel once a year between the Philippines and Spanish America. Driven by a typhoon on to the Japanese coast, the Spanish captain tried to frighten the local Japanese by showing them a map of the world and especially pointing out the vast possessions of the Spanish King. The Captain, asked how Spain had managed to get this huge empire, replied, "Nothing so simple." The missionaries went first, and when there were many converts, soldiers are sent to combine with the converts and overthrow the government. When a report of this reached Hideyoshi he was not overly pleased and became still more bitter against the missionaries. He allowed the Manila Galeon to go, but he had some of the missionaries and their converts put to death. ~See Jawaharlal Nehru on Christianity, page 273.

In 1612, persecution broke out again, until 1622, when 120 martyrs suffer. The "Great Martyrdom" takes place when Blessed Charles Spinola (q.v.) suffers with representatives of the Dominicans and the Franciscans, the massacre continuing without mercy, all Jesuits arriving being executed.

AD 1588-1679- Hobbes, Thomas, English philosopher and political theorist, one of the first modern Western thinkers to provide a secular justification for the political state. The philosophy of Hobbes marked a departure in English philosophy from the religious emphasis of Scholasticism. His ideas represented a reaction against the decentralizing ideas of the Reformation, 1517-1648, which, Hobbes contended, brought anarchy. In 1666, the House of Commons, passed a bill including his work, 'Leviathan' among the books to be investigated on charges of atheistic tendencies. ~Microsoft Encarta Encyclopedia, 1998.

The Spanish Armada, Catholic Spain's attempt to destroy Protestant England, with the full cooperation of the Papacy fails. This final blow to reuniting all of Europe under a renewed Roman Catholic Papacy. Pope Sixtus V creates the Congregation of the Holy Roman and Universal Inquisition or Holy Office in his effort to reduce recalcitrants of the Church.

"Opinion of ghosts, ignorance of second causes, devotion to what men fear, and taking of things casual for prognostics, consisteth the natural seeds of religion." ~Thomas Hobbes

A Bishop accuses Hobbes of atheism, Parliament orders an investigation, and Hobbes hastily burns his manuscripts, and escapes with only the complimentary 'Catholic' ban against future writings.

"For the laws of nature (as justice, equity, modesty, mercy, and in sum, doing to others as we would be done to) of themselves, without terror of some power, to cause them to be observed, are contrary to our natural passions, that carry us to partiality, pride, revenge, and the like." ~Thomas Hobbes.

AD 1588-The Spanish Armada is defeated by the English navy and the brutal powers of the Inquisition are finally curtailed [not eliminated, for the Church still wields a strong hand throughout the world]. The Church will resort to other means to subjugate and control the naive populations of the world.

Simon of Trent, a young lad, is from the city of Trento, Italy, found dead at the age of two, and said to have been kidnapped, mutilated, and drained of his blood. His disappearance is blamed on the leaders of the city's Jewish community [based on confessions extracted under torture], which case further invigorates rampant anti-Semitism. Simon is regarded as a saint, canonized by Pope Sixtus V in 1588.

AD 1589-The French king, Henry III, is murdered by a monk for his anti-papal policy, and the leading Catholic Jesuits of Paris publicly applaud his assassination. Another Jesuit publishes a book which defends regicide, and a pupil of the Jesuits attempts to murder King Henry IV.

And yet, today, the Church still maintains its position of non-political involvement in the affairs of state of countries. Can it then explain why the Jesuits have been literally kicked out of most countries at one time or another?

Cardinal Bellarmine and the Jesuit, Surez, become concerned about King James I, who is trying to discover traitors by imposing an oath of allegiance on the Catholics who survived the religious wars in England. They make the well-timed discovery that God conferred upon His people the right to govern themselves and the people could delegate this authority to a king. Naturally, if he misbehaved they had the capability to rescind this power or to depose him; provided they had "The Sanction of the Church," as the article on Cardinal Bellarmine in the Encyclopedia of Social Science states.

The whole theory was a political ruse to get individual Catholics to murder, and an attempt by the Church to encourage the people to rise up against Protestant rulers, which was quietly dropped when the Iron Curtain was established between Protestant and Catholic Europe, especially when the Catholic kings forced the Pope to suppress the Jesuits.

The Papacy condemns the English Barons for demanding what is now respectfully called the 'First Installment of Democracy,' the 'Magna Carta,' and the Vatican was still, in the 19th century, the strongest support of the vile monarchs of Naples, Spain and Portugal in their wholesale massacre of freedom lovers, which of course has been rewritten to absolve responsibility of the Catholics.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

AD 1590-1634-Urbain Grandier, priest at Loudun, France, accused of witchcraft causing nuns at Ursuline convent to be possessed by demons. Father Grandier had taken a mistress and fathered an illegitimate child causing some displeasure amongst the nuns. Mother Superior, Sister Jeane blamed Grandier as the cause of being possessed by Asmodeus and Zabulon.

Cardinal Richelieu has Grandier tried in London where a suspicious document appears purporting to be a signed pact between the Devil and the father. Grandier is found guilty and burned alive for his crimes "You shall not permit a witch to live." ~Exodus 22:18.

Masochism: In "Lectiones antique" Ludovicus Caelius Rhodiginus describes a man's sexual perversion in that he needs to be whipped to have an erection.

Pope Sixtus V dies, and Cardinal Giambattista Castagna succeeds him as Pope Urban VII, but dies inexplicably 12 days later.

AD 1590-Manila, Philippines, the Real Audiencia is suspended by order of Governor-General Gomez Perez Dasmarias much to the dismay of the populace. Limited in education and Spanish law, the indigenous natives do know one thing, and that is they are being systematically abused and deprived of not only their rights, but of their lands as well. Political unrest causes King Philip II of Spain to re-establish the Audiencia of Manila in November 26th of 1595 that continued until the end of Spanish rule in 1898.

The Audiencia did little but document the abuses of the aristocratic Spaniards without attempting to right the wrongs committed. Many well to do Filipino families were hoping that the plight of their countrymen would improve, but there is little they can do about the situation. Discrimination is the true motive for the abuses of the peasants and indigenous people.

AD 1592-Father Cornelius Loos writes of the Inquisition and their practice of torture.

"Wretched creatures are compelled by the severity of the torture to confess things they have never done ... and so by the cruel butchery innocent lives are taken; and, by a new alchemy, gold and silver are coined from human blood." ~Father Cornelius Loos.

Confession was often extracted by the most hideous methods of torture ever developed by man in the name of God by the Inquisition. "Loathe they are to confess without torture," wrote King James I in his Daemonologie.

A physician serving in witch prisons spoke of women driven half mad: "...By frequent torture... Kept in prolonged squalor and darkness of their dungeons... And constantly dragged out to undergo atrocious torment until they would gladly exchange at any moment this most bitter existence for death, are willing to confess whatever crimes are suggested to them rather than to be thrust back into their hideous dungeon amid ever recurring torture."

"If every criminal and inhumane act ever committed were traced to its root cause, that root would be buried deep in religion." ~Sherry Matulis, Activist, 1931.

If the witch does not die during torture, the Holy Catholic Church would see to it that she is taken to the stake to be burned alive, and since many of the burnings take place in public squares, inquisitors prevent the victims from talking to the crowds by using wooden gags or cutting their tongue out.

Sexual mutilation of accused witches was not uncommon with the Orthodox Christian's understanding that divinity had little or nothing to do with the physical world, sexual desire was perceived to be ungodly, unchaste, and therefore sinful. When the men persecuting the accused witches found themselves sexually aroused, they assumed that such desire emanated, not from themselves, but from the woman.

They attacked breasts and genitals with pincers, pliers and red-hot irons. Some rules condoned sexual abuse by allowing men deemed "Zealous Catholics" to visit female prisoners in solitary confinement while never allowing female visitors.

The people of Toulouse were so convinced that the inquisitor Foulques de Saint-George arraigned women for no other reason than to sexually abuse them that they reluctantly took the dangerous and unusual step of gathering evidence against him.

Catholic apologists claim the Inquisitions weren't all that bad and that its primary purpose was to instill and maintain Purity of faith. However, the horror of the witch hunts knew no bounds. The Church had never treated the children of persecuted parents with compassion, but its treatment of witches' children was particularly brutal.

Children were liable to be prosecuted and tortured for witchcraft: girls, once they were nine and a half, and boys, once they were ten and a half.

Younger children were tortured in order to elicit testimony that could be used against their parents. Even the testimony of two-year-old children was considered valid in cases of witchcraft though such testimony was never admissible in other types of trials. A famous French magistrate was known to have regretted his leniency when, instead of having young children accused of witchcraft burned, he had only sentenced them to be flogged while they watched their parents burn.

In 1661 Scottish royalists proclaimed that, "Rebellion is the mother of witchcraft." And in England the Puritan William Perkins called the witch, "The most notorious traitor and rebel that can be..."

Witch-hunting tended to be much more severe in Germany, Switzerland, France, Poland and Scotland than in more homogeneously Catholic countries such as Italy and Spain. Witch-hunters declared that, "Rebellion is as the sin of Witchcraft."

Perhaps this is why the Roman Church denounced the Declaration of Independence in 1776 and the Protestant movement prior. ~Read The Witch Hunts: The End of Magic and Miracles 1450-1750 C.E. by Helen Ellerbe from The Dark Side of Christian History.

The most common victims of witchcraft accusations were those women who resembled the image of the Crone: crone (kron) n. [ME term of abuse: beast, hag (revived by Scott in mod. Sense) Anglo-Fr carogne [see Carrion] either directly or via MDu kronje in sense 'Old ewe, 'an ugly, withered old woman; hag]. As the embodiment of mature feminine power, the old wise woman threatens a structure, which acknowledges only force and domination as avenues of power.

The catholic Church never tolerated the image of the Crone, even in the first centuries when it assimilated the prevalent images of maiden and mother in the figure of Mary. Although any woman who attracted attention was likely to be suspected of witchcraft, either on account of her beauty or because of a noticeable oddness or deformity, the most common victim was the old woman. Poor, older women tended to be the first accused even where witch hunts were driven by inquisitional procedure that profited by targeting wealthier individuals. ~See Compton's Encyclopedia 1999.

Old, wise healing women were particular targets for witch-hunters. "At this day," wrote Reginald Scot in 1584, "It is indifferent to say in the English tongue, 'She is a witch' or 'She is a wise woman.'"

Common people of pre-reformational Europe relied upon wise women and men for the treatment of illness rather than upon churchmen, monks or physicians. Robert Burton wrote in 1621: "Sorcerers are too common; cunning men, wizards and white witches, as they call them, in every village, which, if they be sought unto, will help almost all infirmities of body and mind."

Christians will attribute illness to sinfulness, "A large number of deaf, crippled and blind people are afflicted solely through the malice of the Demon. And one must in no wise doubt that plagues, fevers and every sort of evil come from him." ~Martin Luther, Catholic monk.

By combining their knowledge of medicinal herbs with an entreaty for Divine assistance, these healers provided both more affordable and most often more effective medicine than was available elsewhere. Churchmen of the Reformation objected to the magical nature of this sort of healing, to the preference people had for it over the healing that the Church or Church-licensed physicians offered, and to the power that it gave women.

A person in the 1593, Dialogue, concerning Witches said of a local wise woman that, "She doeth more good in one year than all these Scripture men will do so long as they live..."

Churchmen portrayed the healing woman as the most evil of all witches. William Perkins declared, "The most horrible and detestable monster... Is the good witch."

The Church included in its definition of witchcraft anyone with knowledge of herbs for "Those who used herbs for cures did so only through a pact with the Devil, either explicit or implicit."

Medicine had long been associated with herbs and magic. The Greek and Latin words for medicine, "Pharmakeia" and "Veneficium," meant both "Magic" and "Drugs." Mere possession of herbal oils or ointments became grounds for accusation of witchcraft. Witch-hunters also targeted the midwives, Orthodox Christians believing the act of giving birth defiled both mother and child.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

In order to be readmitted to the Church, the mother should be purified through the custom of "Churching," which consisted of a quarantine period of forty days, if her baby was a boy, and eighty days, if her baby was a girl, during which both she and her baby were considered heathen. Some thought that a woman who died during this period should be refused a Christian burial.

Until the Reformation, midwives were deemed necessary to take care of what was regarded as the nasty business of giving birth, a dishonorable profession best left in the hands of women. But with the Reformation came an increased awareness of the power of midwives. Midwives were now suspected of possessing the skill to abort a fetus, to educate women about techniques of birth control, and to mitigate a woman's labor pains. A midwife's likely knowledge of herbs to relieve labor pains was seen as a direct affront to the divinely ordained pain of childbirth. In the eyes of churchmen, God's sentence upon Eve should apply to all women.

As stated in Genesis: "Unto the woman [God] said, I will greatly multiply thy sorrow and thy conception; in sorrow thou shalt bring forth children; and thy desire shall be to thy husband, and he shall rule over thee."

To relieve labor pains, as Scottish clergymen put it, would be "Vitiating the primal curse of woman..." The introduction of chloroform to help a woman through the pain of labor brought forth the same opposition. According to a New England minister: Chloroform is a decoy of Satan, apparently offering itself to bless women; but in the end it will harden society and rob God of the deep earnest cries which arise, in time of trouble, for help.

"If [women] become tired or even die, that does not matter. Let them die in childbirth, that is why they are there." ~Former Catholic Priest, Martin Luther on the value of women.

It is hardly surprising that women who not only possessed medicinal knowledge but who used that knowledge to comfort and care for other women would become prime suspects of witchcraft. Contemporary accounts hint at the extent of the holocaust.

Around 1600 a man wrote: "Germany is almost entirely occupied with building fires for the witches... Switzerland has been compelled to wipe out many of her villages on their account. Travelers in Lorraine may see thousands and thousands of the stakes to which witches are bound."

Are the days of punishing witchcraft over? In 1981, a mob in Mexico stoned a woman to death for her apparent witchcraft, which they believed had incited the vicious attack upon Pope John Paul II. ~Read The Witch Hunts: The End of Magic and Miracles 1450-1750 C.E. by Helen Ellerbe from The Dark Side of Christian History.

Pope Sixtus dies and the Jesuit Bellarmine persuades Pope Clement VIII to recall the Sixtine edition and prepare yet another standard Vulgate translation in 1592 to correct errors in both translating, and printing. The Latin of the older Biblical translations is rather simplistic, rude, crude and and vernacular, flourishing in literalisms and provincialisms, and in many ways [in vocabulary], as well as diction and construction, it offended many scholars. Jerome attempted smooth over the coarseness of the older versions and removed the most glaring solecisms [ungrammatical combinations of words], and offensive provincialisms [local vernacularisms]. Jerome's work is considered a masterpiece by the Church, like the King James Version, which is deemed in the harmonious unity of simple, popular, less forceful language and scholarly elegant translation.

AD 1593-At Wolfenbuttenl, ten alleged witches are burned at the stake. Resistance to the persecutions comes with the Protestants, Cleues and John Weyer, and shortly afterwards by Ewich and Witekind. Jean Bodin, a French Protestant lawyer, replies to Weyer in 1580 with much bitterness, and in 1589, the Catholic Bishop Binsfeld and Father Delrio, a Jesuit, attempt to mitigate the severity of the witch trials and denounce the excessive use of torture.

The Catholic Church gives its sanctimonious underlings permission to steal land from all non-Catholics, "Go ye, then, into all the world and take possession of all lands in the name of the Pope. He who will not accept him as the Vicar of Jesus and his Vice-regent on earth, let him be accursed and exterminated." ~Oath of the Jesuit Order.

Official regulations in Spain extend into the practice of medicine, and uneducated women practitioners suffer as Pharmacy now becomes the domain of men. A royal decree of 1593 requires all medical practitioners to be licensed, and it prohibits women from having or dispensing any medicines.

"The Chronicler of Treves reported that in the year 1586, the entire female population of two villages was wiped out by the inquisitors, except for only two women left alive." ~Barbara Walker.

Bodin's book is answered by the Reginald Scott, an Englishman, in his "Discoverie of Witchcraft," 1584, but his response is ordered to be burned by King James I, who replies to it in his "Daemonologie."

AD 1596-Pope Clement VIII orders Universities to prepare a list of possible Forbidden Books [Indexes] with copies of said lists to be forwarded to Rome for review. After reviewing and corrections by the Bishops and Inquisitors a "Codex Expurgatorius" will be dispatched declaring books to be expurgated.

AD 1597- Nine hundred Jews are expelled from Milan, which is now ruled by Spain.

A convent reports that its building was in extreme danger of collapsing and its poverty is so great that it could feed its members on only three days of the week. Nuns are particularly hurt by the devaluation of money because they have fewer ways in which to augment their incomes, unlike the monks, nuns cannot earn fees for preaching, burying the dead, or saying Masses, and they are prohibited from begging door to door for food.

AD 1581-A Moorish woman is ordered hanged by the Holy Office [Inquisition] for practicing witchcraft and abortions. As a member of an Islamic religious group she had dared to challenge the Catholic Church's rights to monopolize truth. ~ There is no mention in the Bible of any willful abortions. On miscarriage, see Exodus 21:22, and on stillbirth, Job 3:11-12.

The bridegroom has the right to stone his newly accepted wife, if he discovers, on his wedding night that she is not a virgin. Abortions are allowed, so long as they are performed by the priests in the tabernacle. ~ Numbers 5:16-31.

AD 1598- Edict of Nantes, grants Protestants the right to practice their religious beliefs without fear of persecution [this edict is revoked in 1685].

The livelihood of women prostituting themselves is cut off by regulations under pressure from French clerics; King Philip II prohibits all dramatic performances [of prostitution].

Two years later the Spanish Crown directs a group of theologians to draw up conditions for dramatic performances in Spain.

Sumptuary Laws [extravagance and luxury] are passed in the 16th and 17th centuries to prevent rich people from ostentaciously parading their wealth.

The Holy Virgin Mary is elevated in the early 17th century through the doctrine of the Immaculate Conception and stylized into the beautiful image still carried in the Holy Week processions of present-day Seville, Spain with sparkling diamond teardrops on her cheeks, and a flaming dagger thrust into her breast, her head slightly bowed by the weight of a striking golden crown, the Virgin holds out her hands for the cares and sorrows of the world.

AD 1599-1658-Cromwell, Oliver, an important leader of the English Revolution organizes his Puritan Army, 1640-1660, and takes Drogheda, killing every living thing in Drogheda [Men, women, children, animals, everything]. "Oh, the beast Oliver Cromwell. Look what he did to Drogheda!"

Little is said of the Catholic's near total obliteration of Irish Protestants for eight years, or the bashing the brains of Protestant babies, or the crushing of the babies up against the walls, all led by the sanctimonious Catholic priests.

Much of the history regarding the atrocities of Catholics is suppressed by the Church and/or downplayed as a minor or isolated case [eighty years of barbarity, in which Popes Gregory XIII, Sixtus V, Urban VII, Gregory XIV, Innocent IX, Clement VIII, Leo XI, Paul V, Gregory XV, Urban VIII, Innocent X and Alexander VII did nothing to quell the brutalities or massacres against the Protestants] ~See Fox's Book Of Martyrs

AD 1599-The name of Saint Andrews is recorded in the Masonic Lodge in Scotland, 27th of Nov. Was he a member of the Lodge or was his name added as an insult to the Church? The Roman Catholic faith has for centuries condemned Masonry for not indulging the former in recognizing the Church as the Supreme Faith in this world.

AD 1600- Giordano Bruno's Trial [and subsequent burning] begins. The priest is accused of heresy.

Palmistry is brought to Europe via the gypsies who allegedly learned this art in Western India. It is an art later practiced by the Italians, French, English, and German savants. A matter of fate versus free will as taught by the Egyptians who teach the Greeks who later teach the Romans practice palmistry.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

Coffee is introduced to the Western World by Italian traders, and this new drink grabs attention in high places. In Italy, Pope Clement VIII is urged by his close advisers to consider that favorite drink of the Ottoman Empire as part of the infidel threat.

However, he decides to "Baptize" it instead, making it an acceptable Christian beverage. Because coffee was the favorite beverage of the heathen Turks, it was believed by some Christians to be the devil's drink, and when Pope Vincent III heard this and decided to taste it before he banished it, he enjoyed it so much he baptized it, saying, "Coffee is so delicious it would be a pity to let the infidels have exclusive use of it."

A fourteen year old, Catalan de Erauso, escapes from a Basque convent then goes on to serve in the Spanish army dressed as a man. In 1620 the Pope gives permission for her to continue to dress in men's clothing [which is against Scripture. Didn't Joan of Arc die at the stake for this very reason?]

In 1603, the Church will also give dispensation to another emigrant, La Monja Alferez, who dressed as a man, [later appointed second lieutenant] Catalina de Crusa, a nun in Vizcaya, who ran away from her convent and went to Seville.

In 1630 she was licensed to dress as a man, and formally invested with this privilege in a ceremony in the Cathedral of Seville.

Much of the history regarding the atrocities of the Roman Catholic Church is suppressed and/or downplayed as minor or isolated cases [eighty years of barbarity, in which Popes Gregory XIII, Sixtus V, Urban VII, Gregory XIV, Innocent IX, Clement VIII, Leo XI, Paul V, Gregory XV, Urban VIII, Innocent X and Alexander VII did nothing to quell the brutalities or massacres committed against the Protestants]. In many cases, the Church merely revises history to its liking. ~See Fox's Book Of Martyrs, and Catholic History of the Popes, by Hayward, 1931.

After 1600, in Europe, it was believed that if there were no werewolves, then at least the wolf was a manifest creature of evil, which resulted in an unjustified, and negative, image of the wolf; an image that many people still have today. In the subsequent centuries, in country after country, the wolf was mercilessly hunted down and killed.

"Was commissioned to reform a convent at Naples, which by the laxity of its discipline had become a source of great scandal. Certain wicked men were accustomed to have clandestine meetings with the nuns." ~Papal representative, about 1600, Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 1, pg. 472.

AD1602 "City of the Sun," a poetic dialogue between the Grand Master of the Hospitalers and a Genoese sea captain is published.

AD 1602- This letter shows the Congregation of the Index exhibited great zeal in its efforts to limit the printing of all Protestant [non-Catholic] literature: "Most Reverend Father. These illustrious lordships of the Congregation of the Index are astounded to see the negligence being shown in regard to the printing of books, especially since they have written on so many occasions to employ every diligence and to keep vigilant. In spite of this, a Giardino de Madrigali by Maurito Moro, printed in Rimini has appeared, which has been prohibited by express order of His Holiness because it contains many obscenities; and also a Praxi Episcopale by Monsignor Thomasso Zerola, Bishop of Minori, printed in Venice."

"Since it contains some grievous errors, it is prohibited and is not to be sold or read until its expurgations have been published. Therefore your reverence shall not fail to promulgate the prohibitions of both books, exert greater vigilance over the printing of new books as well as those which come from outside, and communicate what errors you discover in them. I close by commending myself to your prayers." ~Rome, 20 December 1602. Of your most reverend paternity, benevolently, The Cardinal of Terranova.

AD 1602-1681-William Lilly is appointed England's Senior Astrologer.

Birth of Jerome Duquesnoy, in Brussels Belgium, the eminent sculptor is working on projects at the Cathedral of Saint Bavon in Ghent when he is arrested for sodomy with two acolytes of the church who had served as his models. He is strangled, then before he passes out, he is then burned alive at the stake.

AD1603- James I, ruler of England, is first to call himself King of Great Britain, which became an official with Act of Union in 1707.

Chinese junks arrive in Manila harbor. Governor Pedro Bravo de Acuna fears a battle with the unexpected visitors based on previous experiences in 1574. Fearing retribution from the Spanish Authorities the Chinese community, already isolated, prepares to defend themselves.

The plot is discovered and the Chinese leader Eng-Kang is arrested and killed, but on the 3rd of October the Chinese attack.

There were heavy casualties on both sides with the Spaniards eventually overcoming the heathens. That discrimination played a significant part in the relations between these two factions cannot be denied. Unable to trust each other, each prepared for battle, which was inevitable considering the circumstances and the role history had played in the past. Being Non-Christians did not help the matter.

AD 1603-1867-Palmistry becomes popular amongst the merchants in Japan during the Edo Period.

AD 1604-1657- "The Conciliator" a work, which attempts to reconcile the contradictions in the Bible, is published by Rabbi Menasheh ben Yisrael. ~English translation by E.H. Lindo is printed in New York in 1972.

AD 1605- "The Gunpowder Plot," is a conspiracy believed by many to be a Jesuit endeavor to destroy King James I, and his entire Protestant Parliament, because Elizabeth I had expelled the Jesuits from the British Empire. If the Jesuits were ever captured, they were to be drawn and quartered. ~See also the writings of William Howitt, who wrote, A Popular History Of Priestcraft, 1835, which states it was a Jesuit attempt to destroy our Great King Solomon. After Elizabeth I died the conspiracy continued on with William Cecil. They named Mary Queen of Scott's son as the King of England, rather than Elizabeth's son, because Elizabeth had a son who was the Earl of South Hampton, Wriothesley, and that he was the son of Edward Devere, who we know as William Shakespeare.

"Though you and all the kings of Christendom are led so grossly by this meddling priest, Dreading the curse that money may buy out, and by the merit of vile gold, dross, dust, purchase corrupted pardon of a man, who in that sale sells pardon from himself. Though you and all the rest, so grossly led, this juggling witchcraft with revenue cherish, yet I alone, alone do me oppose against the Pope, and count his friends my foes." ~William Shakespeare: King John, Act III, Scene 1.

The conspiracy theory states that there was no William Shakespeare. The man was Edward Devere, who ran the Globe Theater. He was the Lord Great Chamberlain to Queen Elizabeth, and he secretly had a son who was the Third Earl of South Hampton.

He was the rightful heir to the throne, not King James VI of Scotland. ~From Shakespeare Identified by Looney and This Star Of England, written by Carlton and Dorothy Ogborn, in AD 1952.

Divine right: the monarch's right to rule is given by God: His Lordship, the King, rules undisputed, in his fiefdom, via jus divinum [Divine Law] and enjoys:

- ✠ Jus Posendendi, the right to possess all within his domain [which includes its subjects]
- ✠ Jus Disponinde, the right to dispose of or grant lands to his loyal subjects.
- ✠ Jus Alluinde, right to alienate [convey or transfer land]
- ✠ Jus Abutendi, right to abut [fence lands tilled by his peasants]
- ✠ Jus Fruinde, the right to the fruits of the labor of his subjects.

AD 1605-1621- Pope Paul V, the Roman Church will adopt the Pagan 'Mystic Egg of Astarte,' and consecrates it as a symbol of Christ's Resurrection with a prayer appointed to be used in connection with it, the Pope teaching his superstitious votaries thus to pray at Easter, "Bless, O Lord, we beseech thee, this thy creature of eggs, that it may become a wholesome sustenance unto thy servants, eating it in remembrance of our Lord Jesus Christ, ..."

The goddess, Astarte, was worshipped not only as an incarnation of the Spirit of God, but also of the mother of all mankind. As the supreme female divinity of the Phoenician nation, the goddess of love and fruitfulness, like that of Baal, her name is frequently found in the earlier books of the Old Testament in the plural form Ashtaroth, and it is not until the time of King Solomon of Israel does the singular form Ashtoreth occur. ~From the Microsoft Encarta Encyclopedia, 1998.

The classic poets are full of the fable of the 'Mystical Egg' of the Babylonians; and thus its tale is told by Hyginus, the Egyptian, the learned keeper of the Palatine library in Rome, in the time of Saint Augustus. Today, Egypt is composed of 10% Orthodox Christians, "It is of interest that Christianity came back to Egypt where it grew into a strong religion until Christianity became the Roman state religion. Then the Roman Christians had all the Egyptian Christians slaughtered who didn't follow the Roman version of Christianity. Destroying also all the Egyptian Christian texts, of which only a small amount have survived today. The result is that the Roman version of Christianity became more like a Jewish religion, as they put more emphasis on the Old Testament than on the teachings of Jesus. So the compassionate Goddess teachings of Jesus became largely ignored by the Christian Church until modern times..." ~William Bond, Goddess Symbolism Within Freemasonry.

"An egg of wondrous size is said to have fallen from heaven into the river Euphrates. The fishes rolled it to the bank, were the doves having settled upon it, and hatched it, out came Venus, who afterwards was called the Syrian Goddess." ~From The Two Babylons By The Late Rev. Alexander Hislop.

"When Pope Paul V, meditated the suppression of the licensed brothels in the "Holy City," the Roman Senate petitioned against his carrying his design into effect, on the ground that the existence of such places was the only means of hindering the priests from seducing their wives and daughters!" ~The Two Babylons By The Late Rev. Alexander Hislop.

AD1606-Free Masonry is introduced to America via Jamestown and Williamsburg. The first President of the United States, George Washington, is a Mason [Grand Master, Williamsburg Lodge] while other sources state George Washington became Charter Master of the Alexandria Lodge. Some of the best known participants in the American Revolution were Freemasons, which included: Ethan Allen, Edmund Burke, John Claypool, William Dawes, Benjamin Franklin, John Hancock, John Paul Jones, Robert Livingston, Paul Revere, Colonel Benjamin Tupper, and George Washington. Of the fifty-six signers of The Declaration of Independence, eight were known Masons and seven others exhibited strong evidence of Masonic membership. Of the forty signers of the Constitution, nine were known Masons, thirteen exhibited evidence of Masonic membership, and six more later became Masons.

Washington is a vociferous advocate of fundamental Enlightenment ideas, which includes the separation of state and church. Masons promote liberty, equality, and universal brotherhood. George Washington is supported by France's General Lafayette.

During the American Revolution, Lafayette assists this "Boy General," and fondly names his own son, George Washington Lafayette, and with this same endearing love the Roman Catholic Lafayette warned Americans.

Carlo Maderno redesigns Saint Peter's Basilica into a Latin cross.

"It is my opinion that if the liberties of this country, the United States of America, are destroyed, it will be by the subtlety of the Roman Catholic Jesuit priests, for they are the most crafty, dangerous enemies of civil and religious liberty. They have instigated most of the wars of Europe." ~Lafayette.

"The Calvert Handbook of Catholic Facts," has a section titled "Great Catholics," in which the free thinking Frenchman, Lafayette, notoriously a Deist, is named as a Catholic, although it does refer to him as "A pervert Catholic."

"The philosophies of mid-18th century France developed this mechanistic view of the universe into a radically revised version of Christianity they called deism. Drawing on Newton's description of the universe as a great clock built by the Creator and then set in motion, the Deists among the philosophies argued that everything, physical motion, human physiology, politics, society, economics, had its own set of rational principles established by God, which could be understood by human beings solely by means of their reason. This meant that the workings of the human and physical worlds could be understood without having to bring religion, mysticism, or divinity into the explanation." ~Richard Hooker.

"Where Galileo was charged with heresy for championing a Scientific Theory, Newton really was a heretic. He denied the Christian Trinity, and though he believed that Christ had been more than a man, Sir Isaac Newton believed him to be subordinate to God the Father. Naturally, he kept these beliefs secret." ~Morris, Richard 1997, Achilles in the Quantum World, New York: Henry Holt & Co., p. 61.

AD1607-The Codex of Forbidden Books, "Magister Sacri Palatti" is published by the Catholic Church, with the penalty for reading or having in one's possession any book, manuscript, or papers listed as Excommunication [The Church claims its right to repress as a means to keep the faith pure]

The Church will exile all who refuse to bow down to her authority and convert, "It has been calculated that, from the time of the conquest of Granada until 1609, three millions of Arabs were exiled from Spanish soil; and never have the plains of Valencia, Murcia and Granada recovered the flourishing aspect that they wore when cultivated by their former masters. The decree of 1609 was as fatal to Spain as the revocation of the Edict of Nantes was to France nearly a hundred years later." ~Williams, Henry Smith, The Historian's History of the World, vol. 8, p. 259.

AD 1610-The Dominicans in Manila, Philippines, express their dissatisfaction to Spain for the suppression of the governmental controlled Audiencia [the Supreme Court in civil matters] having the final say on matters until 1719.

To this day, few Filipinos recognize the discriminatory racist dictums of the Catholics who brought their Bible with them to subject all peoples not Catholic and not White under the auspices of a corrupt King and corrupt Church.

The Royal Audiencia passes legislation to restrict Chinese immigration and the fixation of commodities [competition with the Spaniard businessmen must be contained] The local citizenry also having no option regarding compliance to the rules as they are compelled by their religious duties, with the Spaniards receiving the benefits of all legislation passed. The corruptness of Church and State continues unabated, a fact often suppressed in Filipino history.

AD 1611-1800 Publication of the King James [Authorized] Version, based upon the Bishop's Bible of 1621-1623, Pope Gregory XV.

AD 1611-Witchcraft: Aix-en Province, France, Sister Madeleine de Demandolx de la Palud, who had entered the Ursuline Convent at the age of twelve, becomes disheartened, and is sent home to Marseilles. A family friend, Father Louis Faufridi, revives her who falls in love with her [he is thirty-four] Madeleine confesses her relationship and is sent back to the convent at Aix.

She soon develops pains, fits and seizures and visions of devils. This hysteria spreads to five other nuns in the convent. Another nun, Louise Capeau matches Madeleine in intensity of her visions and the Grand Inquisitor, Sebastian Michaelis now becomes involved and sends the girls to the Royal Convent of Saint Maximin to be exorcised.

Madeleine is accused of being possessed by Beelzebub, Ashtaroth, and many other evils. Father Gaufridi is also called in for interrogation by the Inquisition and accused of sodomy, fornication, magic and sorcery. Found guilty in April, 1611, he is tortured, humiliated, and publicly burned.

The witchcraft hysteria continues at Saint Claire's Convent in Aix and at Saint Bridget's Convent in Lille, France. In 1642 Madeleine is again accused of witchcraft after witch's marks are found on her person, and she ultimately spends the rest of her life in prison.

AD 1611-James Stuart of Scotland, since 1603, King of England, orders a "New Revision" of the Bible [Bishop's Bible, which is a revision of the Great Bible]. AD1614-1616-Order of Rosicrucians, Brotherhood that claims inspiration from Christian Rosenkreuz and is believed that the publications [Dama Fraternitatis, Confessio Fraternitatis R.C., and Chymische Hochzeit Christiani Rosenkreutz] disseminating the name of the "The Most Honorable Order of the Rosy Cross" is authored by Johann Valentin Andreae and named after its founder Christian Rosenkreuz.

The books tell of a meeting with the Wise Men of Damcar, witnessing a royal marriage, and the discovery of secret books of wisdom. Other secret organizations at this time are the Freemasons, Compagnie du Saint-Sacrement, and perhaps the Priory of Sion.

AD1618-1707-Emperor Aurengzebe, Arengzeb, Muhi-ud-Muhammad, Last Moghul Ruler of India is not as tolerant as his predecessors in the worship of other gods. In 1618, in protest against King Ferdinand's efforts to restore Catholicism, Bohemian rebels threw two of Ferdinand's ministers out of a window.

AD 1618-19-God's prophet, Johannes Kepler, 1571-1630, accepts the Copernican Theory and immediately, believing that the simplicity of Copernican planetary ordering must have been God's plan, publishes his immortal works "Epitome of the Copernican System," and "The Harmonies of the World."

Kepler lived in Protestant dominated Germany, where the Roman Church couldn't get at him. But the Protestant Consistory of Stuttgart solemnly warns him "Not to throw Christ's kingdom into confusion with his silly fancies," and orders him to "Bring his theory of the world into harmony with Scripture," being the flatness of the world and universe, as if truth could be harmonized with ignorant fables! ~Bible Theology and Modern Truth by Joseph Whelless, for an in depth study of the Church, read True Story of the Roman Catholic Church, in six volumes by Father Joseph McCabe.

AD1618-1648-the Jesuits, in what some believe to be part of the "Jesuit Conspiracy," through Emperor Ferdinand II, and the complicity of Popes Paul V, Gregory XV, Urban VIII, and Innocent X, make possible the killing of 10 million people in what is called "The Thirty Years War." ~from Ridpath, History Of The World, published in AD 1899.

Common knowledge in 1899, the 30 Years War caused two-thirds of Germany, mainly Protestant, to be brought back under the Roman Catholic domain. Germany was practically leveled, while it was plundered, and destroyed by General Wallenstein and General Tilly, who were the devoted Roman Catholic generals who raped, pillaged, and plundered everything in their path. This did little to help spread Catholicism amongst the peoples who saw the devastation brought by Rome.

The Protestants had help in General Gustavus Adolphus, from Sweden, called the "Snow King," he was instrumental in ultimately paving the way for victory in the 30 Years War. Without this Protestant victory, in the 30 Years War, the Peace of Westphalia [Pope Innocent X was not invited] there would have been no modern era, as we know it today.

A twenty-two-year-old woman is ordered to be burned at the stake in an auto de fé because she claimed to have the power of foreseeing the future. She might have escaped detection by the Inquisition if she had been older and quietly plied her occult gifts as a neighborhood sabia [wise woman].

AD 1621-In Christianized Spain; Fathers, brothers, boy friends, or even husbands sold women into brothels for ten or twenty ducats. In 1621 a city ordinance reforming the administration of city brothels expressly prohibits the pawning of a woman into a brothel by a person to whom she owed a debt, even though she might agree to this arrangement. No woman, it asserted, should be sold into the brothels nor kept there to pay off a debt.

The 1621 Spanish ordinances to reform the ancient regulations on prostitution in the city prohibited the city brothels from admitting boys under the age of fourteen, adding that many "Boys of a tender age" had become infected in the brothels of Spain. The infected prostitute released from city-licensed brothels could continue their trade as long as they are able to, but when their infection becomes so obvious that they can no longer acquire clients, they are as likely to die from starvation as from any infection.

Confining the prostitutes to licensed brothels prevented some property damage, and protected the interests of those who owned the property used as city brothels. The historian, Francisco Rodriguez Mann, examining documents, which are no longer available in the city archives, concluded that the property used as city-licensed brothels in the last part of the 16th century were owned by city officials as well as religious institutions, including the Cathedral Council.

The Church lets no one, no group, no dogma stand in her way to Conquer the World; converting everyone to Christianity, "In addition to the Jesuit or Catholic atrocities of this century already enumerated with some particulars, they massacred 400 Protestants at Grossoto, in Lombardy, July 19th, 1620; are said to have destroyed 400,000 Protestants in Ireland, in 1641, by outright murder, and cold, and hunger, and drowning ... " ~Cushing B. Hassell, History of the Church of God, Chapter XVII.

AD 1622-1682- Sidney, Alrernon, politician, son of the Earl of Northumberland, and one of the freethinking officers among Cromwell's Roundheads. He opposed the execution of the king but also opposed Cromwell as a tyrant, and he was not reconciled with the restored royalty.

He remained a Republican and after a travesty of a trial was beheaded. He refused the services of a minister before execution and was, says Bishop Burnet, "...Against all public worship and everything that looked like a church."

The Congregatio de Propaganda Fide is created to send Catholic missionaries into areas of India outside of Portuguese Padroado authority.

Pope Gregory XV instituted his "Propaganda on behalf of the unbelievers," the object of which was described by the Papal Bull as "The conversion of the nations of the Turkish Empire, once glorious and dowered with admirable Divine gifts, that now lie sunk in a besotted condition and, having fallen to the level of wild beasts, only continue to exist in order to swell the multitudes of Hell, to the greater glory of Satan and his Angels." Diplomacy and bribery, calumny and coercion, persuasion and dissension, these were the various weapons employed by the despotic Roman Church in her efforts to dominate her needy brethren. ~Excerpts from The History of the Orthodox Church By Rev. Constantine Callinikos.

AD 1622-1673-Moliere, Jean Baptiste Poquelin, French dramatist. It surprises most folk to learn that the author of some of the greatest comedies that were ever written was a serious thinker and a freethinker. His father had been valet to the King and this and his skill in writing comedies got him royal protection.

When he produced "Don Juan," a religious writer described it as a "School of atheism in which, after making a clever atheist say the most horrible impieties he entrusts the cause of God to a valet who says ridiculous things."

"Tartuffe" is so clear a satire on religious fanatics and hypocrites that the clergy demanded that he be burned as a heretic. Of course, he is excommunicated, and it was only under royal pressure that the clergy had anything to do with his funeral. He was buried at night, ignominiously amongst the suicides. Moliere had closely studied philosophy and science and followed Epicurus. ~From the works of J. McCabe.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

AD 1622-1665-Thomas Vaughan, pseudonym of Eugenius Philalethes, a Welsh mystic, hermeticist, alchemist, teaches the kabbalistic doctrine that "The spirit of man is itself the spirit of the Living God." His works include "Anthroposophia Theomagica" a discourse on the circumstance of man in the hereafter, after death, "Magia Adamica" a treatise on ancient magic "Coelum Terrae" a discussion of heaven and anarchy "Lumen de Lumine" theurgy and "Euphrates" works on changing common metals to gold.

AD 1623-1662-Pascal, Blaise: a Huguenot and a French Calvinist, philosopher, mathematician, and physicist. Pascal's "Provincial Letters" had a devastating force on exposing the Jesuits [written in 1656, the now famous satirical 18 Lettres Provinciales] in which he thrashed the Jesuits for their attempts to reconcile 16th century naturalism with Orthodox Roman Catholicism.

AD 1623-Pope Gregory XV, in his Constitution, "Omnipotentis," seeks a milder solution [than burning at the stake] for witches who are condemned by lay tribunals and are being burned in the immediate neighborhoods of Rome.

What need of a God if there is no one to persecute or defend against? In a letter written in 1629 to a friend, Chancellor of the Bishop, Wartzburg, says things are happening under his very own eyes, and that 400 men in his city have been, or are to be, arrested on the charge of witchcraft, which include a scholar, who is a dean, and who has already been tortured, several priests, 14 seminary students, the notary of the Church Consistory, and several lawyers and public officials, as well as several beautiful and virtuous teenage girls and hundreds of children of both sexes from the age of three to five have been or are to be executed.

This predicament prevailed in a large number of German cities, to the dread of the clergy. In three months 900 innocent people were burned in the Bishopric of Barberg and 600 in another Bishopric. The one historian who has attempted to compute the number of witches burned says that it is 9,000,000, while another historian claims only 300,000 were burned alive at the stake in England. The imminent Dr Margaret Murray states that the witch hunt was organized and so vigorously held that women willingly died for it. It was the same in France.

An entire region in the South of France is described by the distinguished judge who was sent to clear it up as wholly given up, including the priests, to witchcraft and sexual orgies every month. Yet in this vast spread of a rival religion to Christianity on the threshold of modern times, most historians are so little interested that they just repeat the old legend that reeks up from its inherent absurdity the moment one reflects upon it.

AD 1623- "College of the Brethren of the Rosy Cross" places posters all over Paris, France. The posters welcomed members into their organization that promised universal peace and wisdom.

The Roman Catholic Church is not about to tolerate any nonconformity after half a century of battling the Protestant movement.

The Church prints tracts declaring this new group as worshippers of Satan and other foul deeds. Having no knowledge as to who these people are or what their beliefs are does not stop the Church Authorities from condemning them. Punishment is promised to anyone who has dealings with the Rosicrucians and they would be dealt with as any witch or devil worshipper.

AD 1623-1644-Pope Urban VIII deserves special attention for two reasons. Catholic Apologists, for his condemnation of Galileo, represent him as a benefactor of science and a man of high moral character, who was quite pained at the beliefs of Galileo's forcing the issue upon the Church; and, as his pontificate comes after the alleged "Counter-Reformation" and purification of Rome, the question of his true character is even more interesting.

Galileo, the aged scientist, did not provoke action by the Church, and Pope Urban, instead of treating him "With every consideration," the Pope directed the whole persecution with great cruelty because he believed that Galileo had made fun of his pretence of a knowledge of astronomy.

All of Rome despised the Pope's abnormal conceit and arrogance, and his slight patronage of culture was merely part of his facade as a great monarch. The Catholic historian of the Papacy, Hayward, in "History of the Popes," 1931, severely criticizes him and finds that, owing to his conduct, "The Papacy began to abandon the guidance of the world."

The "Catholic Encyclopedia," in its articles on Pope Urban VIII are extremely conservative, charges Urban with "Excessive nepotism," a mild expression for the way in which he promoted the fortunes of his unreservedly corrupt family, the Barberini, by diversion of Church funds, and, from the Catholic point of view, to the very gravest detriment of the Church, nearly bankrupting the institution.

Ranke shows that the income of his brother and three nephews rose from 20,000 to 400,000 crowns a year, and that they heaped up a fortune of, in modern money, about £100,000,000. ~ See The Popes of Rome, II, 396, etc..

Rome and all of Italy cursed Pope Urban and the whole Church hated and abused this so called, "Serene friend of science," as some of the apologists represent him, because a very large part of the wealth he showered upon his worthless family was from a large fund collected by earlier Popes from the success of their tenacious wars against the Protestants. ~ Cf. cf. Luke 14:26, Revelation 2:6

The wars ending in a compromise, or the victory of the Protestant powers, largely due to Pope Urban's refusal to release money for the war efforts, and because he preferred the profit of his family to the fortunes of the Catholic Church.

The "Cambridge Modern History" exposes Pope Urban's conduct and quotes him as actually saying, in a public speech at Rome, that Gustavus Adolphus, the great Protestant champion, was "Rendering to Christian Rome services like those of Camillus to the pagan city." ~ See McCabe's History of the Popes, 1939, pp. 442-6.

AD 1624-Augustus, Duke of Brunswick-Luneburg publishes his works on ciphers [secret codes] in the preface he makes note of the Eleusinian Rites. One of the plates included in this volume shows several gentlemen, well dressed, gathered around a table wearing various types of tall hats. It appears that they belong to a secret society.

The rule of Nzinga, as King of Angola, this female-male cross dresser fought and won many battles against the Portuguese army.

New World: Richard Cornish of the Virginia Colony is tried and hanged for sodomy and becomes the first person in America known to be convicted of this offense.

AD 1625-1891-Montagu, Edward Earl of Sandwich, British Admiral, friend and supporter of Cromwell, he accepted the restoration of King Charles II and became Admiral of the Fleet, Knight of the Garter and Master of the Trinity House. The famous diarist Pepys, who was himself orthodox, was his secretary and often mentions his master's heresies.

"I found him to be a perfect skeptic," he says at the date October 7, 1660. On another page Pepys describes the Earl as composing an anthem during service in the royal chapel and muttering heavy curses over the work.

The ever-forgiving Christian Church: February 7th, in Virginia, Thomas Hatch is sentenced to a whipping, the loss of one ear, and seven years of servitude, for daring to speak against the execution of a man for the crime of sodomy.

AD 1629-Tomasso Campanella, Dominican friar, publishes "Astrologia" while working as Astrologer for Pope Urban VIII [1623-1644]. Urban VIII claimed the ability to ward off the effects of the eclipses by secret "Zodiacal Rites."

AD 1630-A Catholic 'Secret Society,' composed of many Catholic celebrities, is founded in March, 1630, at the Convent of the Capuchins in the Faubourg Saint-Honore by Henri de Levis, Duc de Ventadour. Henri de Pichery, officer of King Louis XIII's household, Jacques Adhemar de Monteil de Grignan, a future Bishop, and Philippe d'Angoumois, the Capuchin, Pere Suffren, a Jesuit confessor to King Louis XIII and Marie de' Medici; the son and grandson of Coligny, the Protestant Admiral, and Charles de Condren, General of the Oratorians, also became members. In 1631 this association was called the "Company of the Most Blessed Sacrament."

This secret organization, which King Louis XIII covertly encouraged, never wished to have the letters patented that would have rendered it a legal body. Archbishop Gondi of Paris refused his blessing to the company although, in 1631, Louis XIII wrote him a personal letter requesting him to confer it.

The Brief obtained from Pope Urban VIII in 1633 by the Count de Brassan, one of the members, was of no importance and the company, eager to secure a new one, was granted only a few indulgences which it would not accept, as it did not wish to be treated as a simple confraternity. Guido Bagni, Nuncio from 1645 to 1656 often attended the sessions of the company but its existence was never regularly acknowledged by any official document from Rome.

The rule of secrecy obliged its members, “Not to speak of the company to those who do not belong to it and never to make known the names of the individuals composing it.” ~By George Goyau, Transcribed by Joseph P. Thomas, The Catholic Encyclopedia, Volume IV.

The moral crimes of the Church having become so ostentatious and flagrant, that the association is alleged to have labored zealously to correct abuses among the clergy and in monastery to insure good behavior in the churches, to procure missions for country parishes, and it had the honor of urging the establishment of a Seminary of Foreign Missions for the evangelizing of infidels.

It also endeavored to reform the morals of the laity by encouraging effective crusade of the Marquis de Salignae-Fénelon against dueling. It also protected the fraternities of shoemakers and tailors organized by the Baron de Renty and assisted Saint Vincent de Paul in most of his undertakings.

Finally, it was instrumental in bringing about the ordinance establishing the General Hospital where Christophe du Plessis, the magistrate, and Saint Vincent de Paul organized the hospitals for mendicants. Without seeking the revocation of the ‘Edict of Nantes,’ the Society remained constantly on the alert, lest any concession be made to the Protestants beyond what the formal text of the edict demanded and its members sent documents to Jean Filleau, a Poitiers lawyer, who for twenty-five years issued “Catholic Decisions” from a juridical perspective, on the interpretation of the ‘Edict of Nantes.’

The Catholic clergy protested against this Society, and in 1656 against the infringement of the edict by Protestants, which resulted in a long documental work prepared by the members.

In 1660, Lechassier who was Maître des Comptes and also one of the ‘Company,’ forwarded to all the country branches a questionnaire, i.e. a series of questions soaked with a view to helping the inquiry, of thirty-one articles on the infringement of the Edict of Nantes by the Protestant Movement.

The answers are collected by Forbin-Janson, Bishop of Digne, who took an active part in the assembly of clergy, the result being that commissaries were sent into the provinces for the purpose of setting right these alleged abuses. But, the Society violated the Edict of Nantes, Art. 27 declared Huguenots wholly eligible to public office, and, by secret manoeuvring, one day prevented twenty-five Protestants from being received as attorneys at the Parlement of Paris.

“The members thought they were doing right nevertheless, if we consider not their intention, but the very nature of their act and of their procedure, it is impossible to doubt that they were guilty of an iniquity.”

~Père de la Briere.

According to the testimony of Père Rapin and the Count d'Argenson, these proceedings of the Company were the starting-point of the policy that was to culminate in 1685 in the revocation of the Edict of Nantes. The year 1660 witnessed the decline of the company.

In consequence of incidents that had occurred at Caen, it was vigorously attacked in a libel by Charles du Four, Abbot of Aulnay, and denounced to Cardinal Mazarin by François Harlay de Champvallon Archbishop of Rouen.

The Secret organization ceased to function, ‘Officially’ in 1660, but continued operations to 1664, being instrumental in obtaining the interdiction of “Tartuffe,” and ceased almost altogether in 1665. The General Hospital and the Seminary of Foreign Missions continued to exist, which Mazarin and many historians who came after him, scornfully called the “Cabal of Devotees.” ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. IV.

AD 1631 - The Jesuit, Friedrich von Spee, takes a firm stand against witchcraft, on the side of humanity in his “Cautio Criminalis,” which fights against the witchcraft mania instigated by the Catholic Church to further persecute and strike demoralizing fear in the hearts and minds of unbelievers.

Rembrandt sells numerous rude etchings, thought to be of his wife passing water [pissing].

AD 1632 - Pope Clement VIII issues a complete list of “Forbidden Books.” Pernicious and damning materials are infecting the flock and the Church is attempting to protect its pecuniary arrangement with its membership.

AD 1633 - The Catholic Church gives the astronomer/scientist, Galileo, the option of denouncing his beliefs that, “The earth moved around the sun” and being imprisoned, in his own home for the remainder of his life, possibly tortured, or being burned at the stake for church heresy.

Galileo is again hauled before the force of the Church through the Inquisition, by order of His Most Holy Pope Urban VIII, who threatens Galileo with torture, and being subjected to imprisonment by order of the Pope, Galileo forced to pronounce publicly, and on his knees, the monstrous recantation, “I, Galileo

Galilei, being in my seventieth year, being a prisoner and on my knees, and before you, most Eminent and Reverend Lord Cardinals, Inquisitors-General against heretical depravity, having before my eyes and touching with my hands the Holy Gospels, swear that I have always believed, and do now believe, and by God's help will for the future believe, all that is held, preached, and taught by the Holy Catholic and Apostolic Roman Church."

Galileo, against his will, is forced to denounce what he knows of astronomy and is placed under lifetime house arrest.

Mervyn Touchet, the Earl of Castlehaven, is put on trial for sodomy, found guilty, and beheaded.

"... An injunction having been judiciously intimated to me by this Holy Office, to the effect that I must abandon the false opinion that the sun is the center of the world and immovable, and that the earth is not the center of the world, and moves, and that I must not hold, defend, or teach in any way whatsoever... The said doctrine, after it had been notified to me that the said doctrine was contrary to the Holy Scripture... Therefore... With sincere heart and unfeigned faith, I abjure, curse, and detest the aforesaid errors and heresies, and generally every other error and sect whatsoever contrary to the said Holy Church... So help me God, and his holy gospels, which I touch with my hands... And in witness of the truth thereof, I have with my own hand subscribed the present document of my abjuration, and recited it word for word at Rome, in the Convent of Minerva, this 22nd day of July, 1633." ~Galileo, From the Library of Original Sources, Editor-in-chief, O.J. Thatcher; Milwaukee: University Research Extension Co., Vol. V, pp. 306-7.

The broken old prophet of God, the Architect, then rose up in righteous rebellion of spiritual matters and mutters back at his Holy Inquisitors, the followers of the Pacifist, Christ, the immortal words, "Ma pur' si muove!" Meaning, "But it does move, for all that!" denouncing his own words, and wobbling out to his hastening death.

The world now knows who spoke the truth and whether the 'Holy Ghost' or Galileo was right. In 1664, Pope Alexander VII issues his 'Inspired' Bull in which he "Finally, decisively, and infallibly" condemns "All books teaching the movement of the earth and the stability of the sun," all works in which the arch heresy of revolving planets are taught or proposed are put upon the Index of Prohibited Books, and the so-called True Faith once again triumphs on earth.

The 1929 Edition of the Index of Prohibited Books, initiated in 1557, closes the minds of the 'Faithfully Uninformed Catholic' to over 5,000 books of the highest intellectual merit as partially catalogued in the news dispatches. ~New York, Herald-Tribune, Nov. 11, and Dec. 1, 1930. Hopefully this book may some day make this ignominious list, then the author will know he has succeeded in disseminating the truth, the anathema of Christianity, joining the ranks of Gibbon, Sterne, Dumas, Victor Hugo, Dr. Draper, Anatole France, Mark Twain, La Fontaine, Lamartine, Balzac, Rousseau, Steele, Addison, Talleyrand, Henry Hallam, Voltaire, Zola, Maeterlinck, and someday, E. Christopher Reyes.

This enlightened Catholic Index Propaganda was established at the behest of the Holy Ghost for keeping men ignorant and subservient to the establishment, dates from the foundation of the Faith; before the art of printing was discovered, it sufficed to burn a few manuscript copies to prevent the spreading of a doctrine. So it was done at Ephesus in the presence of St. Paul. —Acts 19:19. "It is known that the other Apostles, the Fathers of the Church, and the Council of Nice (325) exercised the same authority; [citing] the various censures, prohibitions, and indexes issued by cities, universities, bishops, provincial councils, and popes, through the Christian centuries." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 13, 607.

AD 1633-Galileo's Trial is initiated to convince the scientific astronomer that he doesn't see what he thinks he sees, and if he does, he shouldn't tell anyone or publish his findings, under penalty of arrest, possible torture, or even death.

AD 1634-United States: Jesuit Father Andrew White (q.v.) and four other Jesuits arrive in Maryland on the 25th of March, with the expedition of Cecil Calvert (q.v.).

In 1644 the colony is invaded by the Puritans [Protestants] from Virginia, and Father White is sent in chains to England, to be tried for being a Catholic [upon his release he takes refuge in Belgium].

Constantly menaced by their Protestant neighbors and by dissatisfied converts within the colony itself, who finally succeeded in 1692 in seizing control. A penal law against the Catholics, especially against Jesuit priests, is enacted, which made life intolerable until the colony became the state of Maryland in 1776.

AD 1636-The Archbishop Hernando Guerrero, after entering into a dispute with Governor Sebastian

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

Hurtado de Corcuera, returns from a twenty-six day exile to Manila, Philippines.

Catholics will argue that the Roman Church denounced the abuses of the government officials, but the rivalry goes back to as early as 1573 when the Augustinians went to Spain complaining of the wrongs of the Spaniards, while ignoring their own.

The Spaniards will force their will upon the inhabitants of all non-Christian lands with the consent of the Popes, spilling the blood of the indigenous natives who do not accept their Christ as Savior.

"We Spaniards are held in ignominy in this country and our name is held in abomination, as is even the most Holy name of the Lord, and we are considered as the usurpers of others' possessions, as faithless pirates, and as shedders of human blood..." ~From an article by Prof. Samson A. Lucero in The Freeman newspaper, 6 June 2001, pg. 12.

AD 1637-Philippines, the "Dreaded Sons of Islam," the Moros, are despised by their Christian counterparts. In 1637, Corcuera, with a powerful fleet of eighty ships [fitted with cannons], 600 Spaniards, and 1,000 Filipinos set out to attack the Moro city of Jolo.

AD 1638-Boston, Mass., Anne Hutchinson is convicted by both the Church and state of Massachusetts for holding discussions about religion with friends in her home. The first recorded lack of separation of church and state case in America. "There can be no perfect freedom unless the church and state are separated. But the church and state are not separated in America so long as the state grants a subsidy to the church in the form of tax exemption." ~E. Haldeman-Julius, The Church Is a Burden, Not a Benefit, In Social Life.

So, who picks up the tab when the Church pays no taxes... The poor and the middle class. Many American laws are based upon old Christian regulations: Massachusetts orders every town to "Dispose of all single persons." In Connecticut, bachelors are taxed 20 shillings a week. In 21st century America tax breaks still exist for married couples.

AD 1638-Christian troops under Governor Sebastian Hurtado de Corcuera attack Muslim forces in the Philippines. "They held out for three months, before yielding to their Christian adversaries." Three hundred and sixty two years later there is still a lack of respect for religious differences on both sides. The Muslims claiming they never relinquished any lands to the Catholics.

The predominantly Catholic Philippine government in the early 20th century yielding large tracts of land to Christians in order to lessen the Muslim population in Mindanao to enforce the claim of the government.

AD 1639-The Jesuits are formally expelled from Japan.

The German doctor Johann Heinrich Meibom describes the sexual excitement of some men when whipped in De usu flagrorum. He reasons that this is because the sperm fluid in the kidneys is heated by whipping and then descends into the testicles. Variations on this theory will dominate the crude thinking on Sadomasochism until the 19th century.

AD 1640-The "Bay Psalm Book" is published in the New World [America], this is the first known published book in Cambridge, Massachusetts, by Richard Mathor and John Eliot. The Protestant Ethic will prevail across America challenging the Catholics, and eventually lead to the revolution separating America from the tyranny of King George III. Protestantism preaching a more radical dogma of individuality versus the acquiescence of Catholicism.

Benjamin Franklin, although not a Catholic, was a religious theist, and is influential in his writings to the Colonists proclaiming individual freedom [against the Catholic teachings]. His works have also been adulterated in a publication falsely attributed to him.

The fraudulent nature of the "Prophecy," and the fact that anti-Semitism is foreign to Benjamin Franklin's behavior, has been substantially documented by eminent historians.

"I cannot find a single original source that gives the slightest justification for believing that the "Prophecy" is anything more than a barefaced Forgery. Not a word have I discovered in Franklin's letters and papers, expressing any such sentiments against the Jews as are ascribed to him by the Nazis American and German. His well-known liberality in matters of religious opinion would, in fact, have precluded the kind of utterances put in his mouth by this palpable forgery..." ~The Late Charles A. Beard

"In his writings on immigration, Franklin made no mention of discrimination against Jews." Beard also noted that, "The phraseology of the alleged Prophecy is not that of the 18th century; nor is the language that of Franklin. It contains certain words that belong to contemporary (Nazi) Germany rather than America of Franklin's period. For example, the word 'Homeland,' was not employed by Jews, in Franklin's time. It was created in connection with the Palestine mandate."

Beard also showed "Positive evidence" that Franklin held Jews in high regard, citing the instance when the Hebrew Society of Philadelphia sought to raise money for a synagogue in Philadelphia. Franklin signed the petition of appeal for contributions to "Citizens of every religious denomination" and gave Five Pounds himself to the fund. J. Henry Smythe, Jr., compiler of "The Amazing Benjamin Franklin," has characterized the Prophecy as "A counterfeit," adding it was a "Libel of the Jewish race, unjust both to Jews and to the name and fame of Benjamin Franklin. I have investigated this calumny and find no historical basis."

Julian P. Boyd, librarian of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania, made the same evaluation, and John Clyde Oswald of the International Benjamin Franklin Society notes that, "...The proceedings of the Constitutional Convention of 1787 were secret. No official record was kept but a great deal of information has been accumulated and pieced together, giving a fairly good picture of what transpired. Franklin was then 81 years of age and in poor health. He took an active part in the proceedings but made his contributions to the deliberations not orally, but in written memoranda, which he handed to this friend, James Wilson, another member of the Philadelphia delegation, who sat by him and who read them to the Convention. They have been preserved and the collection is believed to be complete..." ~John Clyde Oswald

Ben Franklin urged the delegates of the Constitutional Convention of 1787 to open their sessions with morning prayers, however, the Convention, which had been meeting for a month without in vocational prayers, did not concur. The Convention's records show that the delegates voted to adjourn rather than debate the issue. The matter was not brought up again when the Convention reconvened. Benjamin Franklin was the inventor of the lightning rods, which are commonly used today to protect buildings and other structures.

Due to Biblical interpretations of Scripture, the early churches called them Blasphemy Rods; Churches refusing to use them for the first 150 years because they lacked trust in the protective powers of Jesus, thereby condemning many churches to be destroyed by fire [due to the high spires and metal bells contained in the belfries being struck by lightning] while the local taverns remained unscathed.

As late as 1783, four hundred Church towers had been damaged by lightning due to the unwillingness of preachers to use the 'heretical rod' invented by Franklin and over one hundred bell ringers were killed. In Roman Catholic countries, the opposition to the lightning rod was so bitter, the consequent destruction to churches so frequent, and the loss of lives so great, that peasants feared to attend church services.

The ineffectiveness of amulets and sacred charms is best exemplified in the case of the Church of San Nazaro, Brescia, Italy, in which the Church was struck numerous times by lightning. Containing many revered relics, the government of Venice, thoughtlessly stored over two hundred thousand pounds of black powder in the subterranean vaults. In 1767, seventeen years after Franklin's invention of the lightning rod, the Church was struck by lightning and one-sixth of the entire population was killed, excess of three thousand lives.

The Church leaders had placed more faith in religious trinkets than scientific knowledge. The late Carl Van Doren, a biographer of Benjamin Franklin made this report: "The speech against the Jews, which Benjamin Franklin is alleged to have made to the Constitutional Convention of 1787 is a forgery, produced within the past five years [1933-38]. The forger, whoever he was, claims that the speech was taken down by Charles Pinckney of South Carolina and preserved in his Journal. The forger presumably knew that, in a letter to John Quincy Adams dated December 30 1818, Pinckney said he had kept a Journal of the proceedings at the Convention. But this Journal, if it ever existed, has never been found."

The forger claims that Pinckney 'Published' the Journal 'For private distribution among his friends' with the title "Chit-Chat Around the Table During Intermissions." No copy of any such printed Journal has come to light. Not content with these two claims, the forger has further asserted that the original manuscript of Franklin's speech, apparently from Pinckney's Journal, is in the Franklin Institute, Philadelphia.

The Franklin Institute does not possess the manuscript. The forger's authority for his document is nearly as mythical as could be imagined. He cites a manuscript, which does not exist, a printed book or pamphlet, which nobody has seen, a Journal, which has been lost for more than a hundred years. There is no evidence of the slightest value that Franklin ever made the alleged speech or ever said or thought anything of the kind about the Jews.

The "Prophecy," attributed to Franklin was first published in February, 1934, in William Dudley Pelley's publication, "Liberation," eight years later, Pelley is convicted of sedition and given a 15-year sentence. The following is a version of Franklin's faked speech: "There is a great danger for the United State of America. This great danger is the Jew. Gentlemen, in every land the Jews have settled, they have depressed the moral level and lowered the degree of commercial honesty. They have remained apart and unassimilated; oppressed, they attempt to strangle the nation financially, as in the case of Portugal and Spain. For more than seventeen hundred years they have lamented their sorrowful fate — namely, that they have been driven out of their mother land; but, gentlemen, if the civilized world today should give them back Palestine and their property, they would immediately find pressing reason for not returning there. Why? Because they are Vampires and Vampires cannot live on other Vampires, they cannot live among themselves. They must live among Christians and others who do not belong to their race. If they are not expelled from the United States by the Constitution within less than one hundred years, they will stream into this country in such numbers that they will rule and destroy us and change our form of Government for which we Americans shed our blood and sacrificed our life, property and personal freedom. If the Jews are not excluded within two hundred years, our children will be working in the field to feed Jews while they remain in the counting houses, gleefully rubbing their hands. I warn you, gentlemen, if you do not exclude the Jews forever, your children and your children's children will curse you in their graves. Their ideas are not those of Americans, even when they lived among us for ten generations. The leopard cannot change his spots. The Jews are a danger to this land, and if they are allowed to enter, they will imperil our institutions. They should be excluded by the Constitution!" ~Courtesy of the Anti-Defamation League. John 6:54. cf. Vlad the Impaler [Dracula].

During the medieval era, superstitious townspeople were fearful of Revenants. A number of the townspeople were killed by this monster, and fearful of Revenants [those miscreants who return after death], "Thereupon snatching up a spade of but indifferent sharpness of edge, and hastening to the cemetery, they began to dig; and whilst they were thinking that they would have to dig to a greater depth, they suddenly, before much of the earth had been removed, laid bare the corpse, swollen to an enormous corpulence, with its countenance beyond measure turgid and suffused with blood; while the napkin in which it had been wrapped appeared nearly torn to pieces. The young men, however, spurred on by wrath, feared not, and inflicted a wound upon the senseless carcass, out of which incontinently flowed such a stream of blood, that it might have been taken for a leech filled with the blood of many persons. Then, dragging it beyond the village, they speedily constructed a funeral pile; and upon one of them saying that the pestilential body would not burn unless its heart were torn out, the other laid open its side by repeated blows of the blunted spade, and, thrusting in his hand, dragged out the accursed heart. This being torn piecemeal, and the body now consigned to the flames...." ~William of Newburgh, 1136(?)–1198(?) Historia rerum Anglicanarum, Book 5, Ch. 24.

Life after death? Resurrection? Revivication? The response by one Bishop Gilbert Foliot was to, "Dig up the body and cut off the head with a spade, sprinkle it with holy water and re-inter it." Vampirism was quite popular in 12th century Europe. The corpse of one revenant is reported to have been found in a grave, swollen and "Suffused with blood," and when it was pierced with a sharp object, a stream of blood flew out of the wound, which story is paralleled in many accounts of alleged vampires, and the phenomenon it depicts is, in fact, said to have occurred frequently as part of the natural process of corpse decomposition.

The evils, which man creates, "One would not easily believe that corpses come out of their graves and wander around, animated by I don't know what spirit, to terrorize or harm the living, unless there were many cases in our times, supported by ample testimony." ~William of Newburgh, 1190's.

"A Christian burial, indeed, he received, though unworthy of it; but it did not much benefit him: for issuing, by the handiwork of Satan, from his grave at night-time, and pursued by a pack of dogs with horrible barkings, he wandered through the courts and around the houses while all men made fast their doors, and did not dare to go abroad on any errand whatever from the beginning of the night until the sunrise, for fear of meeting and being beaten black and blue by this vagrant monster." ~Newburgh.

Amongst the sordid ranks of the Living Dead, the Revenant holds a unique place. Not classed as reanimation nor a Resurrection, the Revenant's outward appearance originates from the repulsive restless fragments of those who, in another life, performed immense evil. Devious, deceitful, and cunning, the Revenants serve no master, and have no vast plan or intelligent design. All the Revenants crave is absolute misery, pestilence, agony, desolation, and death, feeding upon terror and pain, and their presence is considered an omen of impending doom and disaster.

Hatred breeds only ill will and contempt for people of different cultures, religions, and ethnic backgrounds. For more than two decades the "Prophecy" has been circulated throughout the United States, in the 1930's it was disseminated by chain letters, and printed copies of the spurious speech were placed in trains, buses, railway stations and similar public places.

It appeared in the propaganda press and broadcasts of Nazi Germany and fascist Italy, and a version was included in the 1935 edition of "Handbuch der Judenfrage," Handbook On The Jewish Question, a political tome by Theodor Fritsch, first written several decades earlier, that soon became a Nazi Bible. Such anti-Semitic groups as Chicago's "We The Mothers Mobilize For America" exploit the Prophecy as part of their stock-in-trade. Gerald L. K. Smith and other anti-Semitic propagandists continue to argue its authenticity, "The Cross and The Flag," Dec., 1952.

In recent years reprints of it have appeared in Mrs. Lyril Van Hyning's "Women's Voice," July 31, 1952, and Harry William Pyle's "Political Reporter," July 1953.

In the month of May 1954, it was a feature of an anti-Semitic publication, "The Point," put out by Father Leonard Feeney, the excommunicated priest, and his group at St Benedict's Center in Cambridge, Mass.

AD1641- The Massachusetts Bay Colony incorporates the language of Leviticus into its laws. Other New England colonies soon follow suit. "Suppose a man has sex with another man..." ~Leviticus 20:13, New International Reader's Version.

AD1642- 1727-Born on the 25th of Dec., Sir Isaac Newton, a mathematician, scientist, freethinker, and astrologer maintains that logic and common sense take precedence over religious scrutiny. Newton explains through reason the rationality of life and the universe. Individual thinking or the application of reason with scientific laws is not accepted in the Catholic faith as it denies the spiritual rationale of its early founders. Freethinker: noun, a person who forms opinions about religion on the basis of reason, independently of tradition, authority, or established belief. Freethinkers include atheists, agnostics and rationalists.

It is not theological hatred that moves man to contradict the Church, but that of seeking the truth, for hatred is so natural a vice of the churchman that the Romans had a word for it: 'Odium Theologicum,' Religious Hate.' No one can be a freethinker who demands conformity to a Bible, creed, or messiah. To the freethinker, revelation and faith are invalid, and orthodoxy is no guarantee of truth. ~From Freedom From Religion Foundation, Inc. FFRF, Inc., PO Box 750, Madison WI 53701.

Newton was rigorously puritanical: when one of his few friends told him "A bold story about a nun," he ended their friendship. "I do not know how I may appear to the world, but to myself I seem to have been only like a boy, playing on the sea-shore, and diverting myself, in now and then finding a smoother pebble or prettier shell than ordinary, whilst the great ocean of truth lay all undiscovered before me." He is not known to have ever had a romantic relationship of any kind, and is believed to have died a virgin.

End of the World: "But of that day or hour no one knows, not even the angels in Heaven, nor the Son, but the Father alone." ~God's Word Translation, 1995.

Isaac Newton, using his mathematical genius, predicts the End of the World in the year 2060 [based on a generation being 120 years]. Sir Isaac Newton took the year for a day concept from the Book of Ezekiel and applied it to a 1260 day prophecy out of the Book of Daniel, which adds up to 1260 years. Newton believed that in 800 C.E., the Pope had at last supremacy over world affairs [Leo III, 795-816, who, on April 25, 799, as he rode in state through the streets of Rome in a protracted religious procession, a number of fortified men sprang upon him, dragged him from his horse, and proceeded there and then to cut out his eyes and tongue; which would then render him unfit for the Papal office, yet, he is believed to have finally attained preeminence over Christian world affairs].

Newton believed that the 1260 years corresponded to the duration of the corruption of the Catholic Church, so he added 1260 to 800 C.E., and arrived at 2060 as the date of the "Fall of Babylon" or cessation of the unfaithful Church.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

Newton had secured a royal exemption from ordination in the Church of England, which normally transpired in the academic world of his day, so he would not have to follow its teachings. In a decidedly haughty tone, Newton writes, "This I mention, not to assert when the Time of the End shall be, but to put a stop to the rash conjectures of fanciful men who are frequently predicting the time of the end, and by doing so bring the sacred prophecies into discredit as often as their predictions fail." ~Article: The World Will End in 2060 According to Newton.

Newton believed that that the End of Days would see, "The ruin of the wicked nations, the end of weeping and of all troubles, the return of the Jews [from] captivity, and their setting up a flourishing and everlasting Kingdom."

AD 1642-English Parliament appoints John Booker in place of the Bishops as a censor of Astrological books.

AD 1643-The Westminster Confession of the Reformed tradition declares that, "The authority of the Holy Scripture... Dependeth not on the testimony of any man or Church; but wholly upon God [who is Truth itself] the author thereof... Our full persuasion and assurance of the Infallible Truth and Divine Authority thereof is from the inward work of the Holy Spirit, bearing witness, by and with the Word, in our hearts..."

~The Westminster Confession of Faith, Article 1, 1643, in Bettenson, Henry, ed., Documents of the Christian Church, New York: Oxford University Press, 2nd ed., 1963, p. 245. Taken from Schaff, Creeeds of Christendom, v. III.

"The New Testament writings did not become canonical because they were believed to be uniquely inspired; rather, they were judged to be inspired because they had previously commended themselves to the Church for other, more particular and practical reasons." ~Harry Y. Gamble, The New Testament Canon: Its Making and Meaning, Philadelphia: Fortress Press, 1985, p. 72.

AD 1644-1655-Pope Innocent X excommunicates anyone who is caught using tobacco in Saint Peter's Basilica [An addiction introduced to Europe from the New World via Columbus and a peril that lasts for many decades at the Vatican].

Birth of John Wilmot, later to be known as the Earl of Rochester, British writer. His poetry praises the joys of every possible type of human coupling.

Another biblical change: English Long Parliament directed that only Hebrew canon only be read in the Church of England [effectively removing the Apocrypha].

AD 1644-1718-William Penn, English Quaker, son of Admiral Sir William Penn is imprisoned four times for preaching Quaker beliefs [peace and brotherly love, but contrary to Catholic Doctrines at the time]. The Quakers are one of the few truly religiously tolerant Christian groups.

Penn publishes his work, "No Cross, No Crown" in 1659, a work he composed while imprisoned in the Tower of London. Penn founded a religious colony of Quakers in the New World that actually got along with the Native Americans [Indians] and was respected by them. Einstein had such a high regard of the Quakers he once stated, "If I were not a Jew I would be a Quaker."

"If this being [God] is omnipotent, then every occurrence, including every human action, every human thought, and every human feeling and aspiration is also His work; how is it possible to think of holding men responsible for their deeds and thoughts before such an almighty Being? In giving out punishment and rewards He would to a certain extent be passing judgment on Himself. How can this be combined with the goodness and righteousness ascribed to Him?" ~Albert Einstein, Out of My Later Years, New York: Philosophical Library, 1950, p. 27.

"Multitudes of Non-Conformists fled from Ireland and England to America ... What is amazing is the fact that, after such experiences, those fugitives did not learn the lesson of toleration, and did not grant to those who differed ... Freedom... When they found themselves in a position to persecute, they tried to outdo what they had endured ... Among those whom they attacked was ... The Society of Friends, otherwise known as Quakers." ~Historian, Owen Chadwick.

"In Massachusetts, for successive convictions, a Quaker would suffer the loss of one ear and then the other, the boring of the tongue with a hot iron, and sometimes eventually death. In Boston three Quaker men and one woman were hanged. Baptist Roger Williams was banished from Massachusetts in 1635 and founded tolerant Rhode Island. To his credit, he remained tolerant, an exception to the rule, as was William Penn, who was persecuted by Protestants in England and founded the tolerant colony of Pennsylvania. Quakerism [William Penn's faith] has an honorable record of tolerance since, like its predecessor Anabaptism, it is one of the most subjective and individualistic of Protestant sects, and eschews association with the "world" (governments, the military, etc.), whence lies the power necessary to persecute. Thus, Quakers were in the forefront of the abolition movement in America in the first half of the 19th century.” ~From The Protestant Inquisition, Reformation Intolerance and Persecution, by Dave Armstrong

“In the 17th century the most notable instances of practical toleration were the colonies of Maryland, founded by Lord Baltimore in 1632 for persecuted Catholics, which offered asylum also to Protestants, and of Rhode Island, founded by Roger Williams.” ~Oxford Dictionary of the Christian Church

“In 1644, after the overthrow of the monarchy, when the Puritans came into power, an Act of Parliament forbade all observance of Christmas, for it was held that Christmas was not originally a Christian festival at all, but was of heathen origin. Parliament directed that the 25th December, ‘Which had hitherto been commonly called Christmas Day,’ was to be kept as a fast. This law remained in force for sixteen years, and during this period the enactment was repeated and made still more stringent. No church dare be opened, no service of any kind held; the law expressly enacted that on Christmas Day everyone was to go on as usual with his work, and every merchant who shut his shop on this day was brought before the judge and punished.... Plum-pudding and mince pies were branded as heathenish inventions... In Canterbury, for instance, there was a general riot; the whole town was divided into two parties—those who observed Christmas and their opponents, and the festival of peace ended in a general row; many houses of the town were totally destroyed and some set on fire.” ~Excursus: from: The Fathers of the Church, Saint Augustine [354-430], Sermons on the Liturgical Seasons, Translated by Sister Mary Sarah Muldowney, R. S. M., The Catholic University of America Press, 1977, pg. 439-440.

AD 1646-The first record of an initiation into an English Masonic Lodge occurs on the 16th of October 1646 when Elias Ashmole makes an entry in his diary that he and a Colonel Henry Mainwaring have been initiated into a non-operative lodge. The lodge is not mentioned again until 1682, the 11th of March [thirty-six years later].

AD 1647-1690-The condemnation of sex by the Church and its rewards for acceptance of same is reflective of the overt sexual repression of St. Marguerite Marie, who was beatified in 1864 and recently canonized. After seventeen months in a monastery, “She lay down on the pavement of the church, the sheet of the dead spread over her, and she rose again, radiant, for she was henceforth to be dead to the world.”

She believed she had become the bride of Christ. The method she practiced to restrain her sexual feeling is too repulsive for repetition here, despite the fact that she hoped she would be able to do it every day. The following night the image of Christ rewarded her for her self-mortification and held her in close embrace for two or three hours with her mouth pressed on his heart, as the Christ was crushing her by the weight of his love, he is alleged to have said to her: “Let me do my pleasure. There is time for everything. Now I want you to be the plaything of my love, and you must live thus without resistance, surrendered to my desires, allowing me to gratify myself at your expense.”

As Professor Leuba remarks, this took place not in the Dark Ages, but in the latter half of the last century, and is recorded by a Bishop of the Roman Catholic Church. ~From The Ten Commandments by Joseph Lewis

AD 1647-Matthew Hopkins: Witch-Finder, son of a Puritan minister who sought witches in Essex, Huntingdonshire, and Suffolk, soon discovers a coven of witches and searches their bodies for Devil's Marks.

He learns that he can make a living by reporting witches to the authorities and develops a system of “Floating Witches” whereby he would throw the victim in the water, if they floated they were witches, if their bodies sunk, they were innocent [if they did not drown first]. Water being the medium of baptism and purification he deduced that the water would reject witches. Hopkins is estimated to have caused the death of two hundred victims in his witch-hunt.

The pious Christians already echo the incongruous Catholic pretensions regarding “The Science of the School-Men.”

Have the Christians already forgotten that it was Christianity that suppressed all the evidence of the Church's resentment to science and all reference to the imprisonment of Roger Bacon, the embarrassment of Galileo, the tragic fate of Cecco d'Ascoli, and of Vesalius, nor do they tell of the veil of secrecy regarding the scientific findings of Copernicus, who received his central inspiration from the revived Greek literature, also condemned by the Roman Church, which so persecuted Copernicus, that he dared not publish his findings until his death for fear of ex-communication and worse, torture.

“Catholics... Were the first in America to proclaim and to practice civil and religious liberty... The colony established by Lord Baltimore in Maryland granted civil and religious liberty to all who professed different beliefs... At that very time the Puritans of New England and the Episcopalians of Virginia were busily engaged in persecuting their brother Protestants for consciences' sakes and the former were... Hanging `witches. ’” ~Patrick O'Hare.

*“For the first time in history... All churches would be tolerated, and... None would be the agent of the government... Catholics and Protestants side by side on terms of equality and toleration unknown in the mother country... The effort proved vain; for... The Puritan element... October, 1654, repealed the Act of Toleration and outlawed the Catholics... Condemning ten of them to death, four of whom were executed... From... 1718 down to the outbreak of the Revolution, the Catholics of Maryland were cut off from all participation in public life, to say nothing of the enactments against their religious services and... Schools for Catholic instruction... During the half-century the Catholics had governed Maryland they had not been guilty of a single act of religious oppression.” ~John Tracy Ellis, American Catholicism, Garden City, N.Y., Doubleday Image, 1956, pp.36,38-9.*

AD 1648-The Peace of West Phalia, Spanish Netherlands becomes an independent nation of Protestants. The Dutch struggle for independence from Catholicism and the dictums of the Pope, lasted 80 years. Wars between Catholics and Protestants ends, closing a dark period of Christianity wherein millions of Christians were brutally murdered by the Roman Catholic Church under the so-called banner of Papal Authority. Protestants are now free to worship as they please, free from religious persecution. End of the World: Many Jews is that the Messiah will appear in 1648, as just prior to that date, a young Jewish teacher named Sabbatai Zevi audaciously declares to his small group of disciples that he is the anticipated Messiah. 1648 year passes without a public acknowledgement of Zevi's claims, and he continues to gather gullible followers, however, around this time, there also arose speculation among Christians that the Millenium will begin in 1666, and Zevi appears to have latched onto that new date.

“Many [Jews] sold their houses and lands and all their possessions, for any day they hoped to be redeemed. My good father-in-law left his home in Hamelm, abandoned his house and lands and all his goodly furniture and moved to Hildesheim. He sent on to us in Hamburg two enormous casks packed with linens and with peas, beans, dried meats, shredded prunes and like stuff, every manner of food that would keep. For the old man expected to sail any moment from Hamburg to the Holy Land.” ~WPF, pp. 8-12.

The massacre of Jews occurs in Nemirov, Polonnoye, Tulchin, Volhynia, Bar, Lvov, and other European cities in Ukraine with about 100,000 Jews ruthlessly murdered and 300 Jewish communities destroyed. During this period there are a few attempts by the various Catholic Popes to reduce the brunt force of the Church's policies against the Jews, as they are largely overlooked.

AD 1649-“Irish Massacre.” Protestants defending their right to believe in the “Bible,” in direct confrontation with Catholic Rome’s anticipation for them to believe in the priests and the decrees of the Popes. Saint Patrick it is alleged was not a true Catholic, but more of a Protestant in his thinking.

In 1641, the massacre begins, supported by Roman Catholic nobles and the mobs in Ireland, continuing until 1649, a period of eight years, during which the Catholic children were taught to kill the Protestant children. The Church did not excommunicate those who fought for the Catholic cause, regardless of the extreme measures undertaken or numbers killed in the name of God.

Colonial Lesbianism: Sarah White Norman and Mary Vincent Hammon are charged with “Lewd behavior each with other upon a bed” in Plymouth Massachusetts. Charges against Hammon are dropped, but Norman is convicted and has to make a public confession, which makes poor Sarah Norman the first woman in America known to be convicted of lesbian activity.

The state of Maryland Assembly passes Act of Toleration, professing belief in the Holy Trinity.

AD 1650-Archbishop Ussher claims the creation of this world, as we know it today, claiming it occurred on Sunday, October 23rd, 4004 B.C.E.

AD 1651-On 6 January 1661, 50 Fifth Monarchists, headed by a wine-cooper named Thomas Venner, make an effort to attain possession of London in the name of “King Jesus,” but most of the fifty are either killed or taken prisoner, and on 19 and 21 January, Venner and ten others are hanged [but cut down just before death], then drawn and quartered for high treason. This failure of Venner's Rising leads to repressive legislation to suppress non-conformist religious sects in Britain.

Although some physical events such as the Great Plague of London and the Great Fire of London continued to encourage belief in "The End of the World" ruled by carnal human beings; the doctrine of the sect either died out, or become merged in a milder form of Millenarianism. ~ Fifth Monarchy Men: Study in Seventeenth Century English Millenarianism by Bernard Capp ISBN 0-571-09791-X.

AD 1652-1699-The Religious Wars begin in France, Protestants and Catholics; at the St. Bartholomew's Day Massacre when a large number of Protestants perish. The Church will persecute those who attempt to leave its sphere of influence and many will be martyred in the name of God by the Church authorities. However, little if anything is said of those who fought and died for their own religious freedoms and beliefs.

AD 1654-In 1654 twenty-three Jewish refugees, fleeing Brazil, South America, landing, by mistake, in New Amsterdam [later known as New York].

Execution of Jerome Duquesnoy, born 1602, court sculptor of Flanders who is found guilty of sodomy with two church acolytes who had served as his models, Jerome is strangled and burned at the stake. His brother, Francois, also a sculptor, created Brussels' famous Pissing Boy fountain.

"One of the conditions [for escaping being burned alive at the stake] was that of stating all they knew of other heretics and apostates, which proved an exceedingly fruitful source of information as, under the general terror, there was little hesitation in denouncing not only friends and acquaintances, but the nearest and dearest kindred [...] parents and children, and brothers and sisters." ~ Henry Charles Lea, History of the Inquisition of Spain.

AD 1653- May 16: The Oath of Coonen Cross at Mattancherry, Cochin some Thomas Christians declaring independence from Roman Catholic authority.

AD 1655-1667-Pope Alexander VII is "Elected after a struggle of eighty days; at a time when churchmen were being forced to realize the deplorable consequences, moral and financial, of nepotism... Nepotic abuses came to weigh as heavily as ever upon the Papacy... Eendeavors to enrich their families." ~ Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 1, 294.

New World: The colony of New Haven expands its definition of sodomy as a capital offense to include sexual relations between women [Lesbianism].

Pope Alexander VII sent orders from the court of Turin to heads of Waldensian and Vauois families at LaTorre to: leave their homes within three days, and move to certain assigned districts, prove within 20 days that they'd become Roman Catholics or have sold their land to Catholics in the spring. The Pope sent 15,000-man army, burned 22 villages, burned aged people in their homes, hewed the men to pieces, impaled women naked, dashed childrens' brains out before mothers, and had 150 women beheaded and their heads used for bowling entertainment.

England: The lawyers declare there is nothing against the Jews' residing in England [1655], but both the divines and merchants are opposed to readmission, and Cromwell stops the discussion in order to prevent an adverse decision.

AD 1660-1685 Charles II, King of England, restoration of monarchy in England beginning under Emperor Charles II, continuing through King James II, reverses decision of Long Parliament of 1644, henceforth reinstating the Apocrypha, but his reversal is not heeded by non-conformists.

AD 1660-Boston, Massachusetts: The British colonies; Mary Dyer is hanged for being a Quaker [Protestant].

AD 1661-New England: The first Colonial divorce occurs. Massachusetts averages one a year until 1760. All of the Southern colonies, plus Massachusetts, and Pennsylvania pass laws prohibiting interracial sex and marriage.

AD 1662-Fraternal organizations exist all across Europe. "The Holy Guide" is published by John Heydon [original publication in 1627] A noteworthy change is this addition of, "I am by office Governor of this House of Strangers, and by vocation I am a Christian Priest, and of the order of the Rosie Crosse, And therefore am come to you, to offer you; my service, both as Strangers, and chiefly as Christians." ~The Rosicrucians.

AD 1662-Isobel Gowdie, Scottish wife of a farmer, is initiated into a witch's coven without the knowledge of her husband. She describes how she has relations with the Devil and other demons. When she comes forward to confess her sins to the elders of the church at Auldearne, she implicates others as well. She repents her crimes, but is hanged, and her body burned, as is the custom for witches. Burning is alleged to destroy the soul of the individual as well as the material being.

Reign of Emperor Kang Xi, who first took steps to prohibit consensual homosexuality in China.

AD 1662-The practice of searching for the Devil's Mark on persons is made illegal in England. The Devil's Mark is alleged to be a spot that is insensitive to pain and marks an individual as having a rapport with the Devil. Inquisitors would search victims to locate such marks to prove the guilt of their victims [Woe be onto he or she who has a birthmark of the wrong color or location ...this could be a mole, skin discoloration, a scar, strawberry mark, etc.]

AD 1663-Don Diego de Salcedo is appointed the new governor in Manila, Philippines. He immediately disagrees with the friars and the Archbishop Miguel de Poblete. Don Diego orders the cessation of payments to the Friars from the Royal funds [the treasury].

This will be just one of many clashes between the Church and the state with the Church winning out by falsifying documents and stealing the lands from the indigenous peoples and the people acquiescing to authoritarian rule, fearful of being excommunicated.

AD 1664-1773-Many priests leave the 'Calling' after discovering the truth, a fact long hidden from the public by the various Christian sects. Jean Miller [Meslier] was one of them. He was 'cure,' or 'parish priest,' of Entrepigny, and left his small property to his parishioners, asking only to be buried in his own garden. Among his effects were found three copies of a manuscript of 370 folior, signed by his own hand and entitled 'My Testament.'

The writing is found to be a merciless exposure of Christianity, and what he could not say while alive, he says in this legacy to his flock. As he himself wrote on the wrapper of the copy for his parishioners, "Thave not dared to say it during my life, but I will say it at least in dying or after my death."

On November 17, 1794, the National Convention sent to the Committee of Public Instruction a proposal to erect a statue to Meglier as "The first priest who had the courage and honesty to abjure his religious errors." A work called 'Bon Sens,' translated into English as 'Good Sense,' is not by Meslier, but by D'Holbach. ~In fidel Death-Beds by G.W. Foote and A.D. McLaren, Authorities: Larousse, Dictionaire Universelle. Bouilliot, Biographie Ardenaise. Voltaire's Works and Letters.

AD 1664-Pope Alexander VII issues a new official Index of Forbidden Books. The epitome of crass censorship is expressed in the following Catholic logic, "It is true, the believer is less free in his knowledge than the unbeliever, but only because he knows more. Hence it is, that a well-instructed Christian child knows more of the important truths than did Kant, Herbert Spencer, or Huxley. Believing do not wish to be free-thinkers just as respectable people do not wish to be vagabonds!" ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 13, 607.

Free-thinkers cannot rest easy as those who would attempt to suppress our words and our thinking continue in their infinite liaisons of Creed, Greed, and Crime; robbing not only the financial wealth of the poor but their intellect as well.

"Hypocrisy! Thou art the Church of God! 'Semper Eadem,' 'Lying and shameless!" ~From the works of Joseph Wheless.

This Forbidden Index will remain in effect and will later be combined with a revised Index in 1996 [The Church still claims Freedom of the Press although it has not officially done away with the Index].

AD 1665-Sabbatai Sevi was a seventeenth century, messianic claimant who gathered a large following in the Mediterranean region, Sevi's biographer, Gershom Scholem, reports that there was a sudden eruption of miracle stories that proliferated around this man everywhere he went.

In the Age of Apocryphal Literature, we have, "The realm of imaginative legend soon dominated the mental climate of Palestine. The sway of imagination was strongly in evidence in the letter sent to Egypt and elsewhere and which by autumn of 1665, the same year that he visited Palestine, had assumed the character of regular, Messianic propaganda in which fiction far outweighed the facts." ~Scholem in his biography of Sabbatai Sevi, published by Princeton University Press.

Sevi commanded that a fire be built in a public place, and after the fire was ongoing, he walked through the fire three times, with no harm to his clothing or to his body. Correspondence is known to exist in which the claim is made that when Sevi was imprisoned his chains miraculously broke away and that he left the prison through closed doors. He is also alleged to have killed a group of bandits on the highway with just words spoken from his mouth much in the same manner that the Apostle Peter pronounced death upon Ananias and Sapphira. ~Acts 5:5.

"The Savior said to me, 'He whom you saw on the tree, glad and laughing, this is the living Jesus. But this one into whose hands and feet they drive the nails is his fleshly part, which is the substitute being put to shame, the one who came into being in his likeness. But look at him and me.'" ~The Apocalypse of Peter, banned from the Bible.

Some of the Disciples also claim that Saint Peter even raised people from the dead. Charles Manson had a following, and numerous legends were already circulating about Manson's followers, one legend maintaining that while 'The Family' was on a bus trip through Death Valley, Manson levitated the bus over a creek where there was no bridge. ~See Edward Sanders, The Family

The process is called 'Cognitive Dissonance Reduction,' in which the individual or group attempts to use rationalism to explain away that which is illogical.

AD 1668-Philippines: The Inquisition flexes its muscles, and the Santo Domingo convent is in no short supply of instruments of torture nor were Fort Santiago Dominican Friars or the Spanish imposed Audiencia in the Philippines. Governor Salcedo is arrested on alleged charges brought by Friar Paternina who is the Commissary of the Inquisition in Manila and has the governor chained at San Augustin. He is later ordered sent to Mexico for trial, but dies in route from malnutrition.

The Catholic Church is bent on not having a repeat of what happened in Europe [Protestantism] and rules with an iron hand in the Philippines, punishing all who stand in its way.

AD 1669-"The Secret Instructions Of The Jesuits," is published by Dr. Compton, Bishop of London. Regarding the Catholic, Jesuit Order in this book, I have taken information from the May issue of "The Spectrum," 15 April, 2000, in an article written by Rick Martinan and from the novel, "Vatican Assassins," by Eric Jon Phelps. Eric Jon Phelps states that the Jesuit religious convictions include the condoning of some degree of violence [or violent protest] and the use of armaments, or non-negotiable force, hence the Jesuit's hierarchy are addressed as Generals. ~You can also access this information at: www.thespectrumnews.org or thespectrum@tminet.com

End of the World: A little known fact; The Old Christian Believers in Russia deem that the End of the World will occur in this year. Twenty thousand Russian believers burn themselves to death from 1669 to 1690 to protect themselves from the Anti-Christ.

AD 1672-1751- Henry Saint John, Viscount Bolingbroke, distinguished member of the Tory Ministry, impeached by the Whig Parliament and the leadership of Sir Robert Walpole, which was a party prosecution, and although Bolingbroke was attainted of high treason, he did not lose a friend or forfeit the respect of honest men.

Swift and Pope held him in the highest esteem; they corresponded with him throughout their lives, and it was from Bolingbroke that Pope derived the principles of the 'Essay an Man.' Bolingbroke's philosophical writings show him to have been a Deist who believed in God, but rejected Revelation. The approach of death, preceded by the excruciating disease of cancer in the cheek, did not produce the least change in his convictions.

According to Goldsmith, "He was consonant with himself to the last; and those principles which he had all along avowed, he confirmed with his dying breath, having given orders that none of the clergy should be permitted to trouble him in his last moments." ~Life of Lord Bolingbroke, Works, IX, p. 248: Tegg, 1835.

"Men never do evil so completely and cheerfully as when they do it from a religious conviction." ~Pascal, Pensees, 1670. cf. Lamentations 3: 38-39, evil from God

AD 1672-The New World: Bishop Diego de Landa sets out to completely obliterate any mention of Mayan gods by gathering all articles, religious artifacts, manuscripts, parchments, or other documents in the town of Mani and having them burned.

He claims that the documents found contained drawings and symbolic characters that are superstitious in nature, lies, and evil. Archeologists now believe these documents may have contained documented evidence of a culture that may have gone back as far as 10,000 years. In the surviving Codices there is reference to the "Tree of Life," ~Genesis 2:9; 3:22, Proverbs 3:18, 11:30, Revelations 2:7, 22:19] also described as the Cross of Life, eleven thousand years before the time of Jesus. cf. Lamentations 3: 38-39, evil from God.

inclination to me, and was willing to be under my government; so I set the baseness of the action before him by telling the whole story, and how wicked it was, and that it could not be forgiven till he had done some good action to balance that, and expiate the crime. Whereupon he at last asked me what he must do. I told him that he must root out all heretics from his kingdom.” ~Pere La Chaise, confessor of King Louis XIV.

In 1672, King Louis XIV brought his army across the river into Holland to kill the Dutch. The iced river thawed and the Catholic French army drowned, allegedly prodded by the prayers of the Dutch Protestants. AD 1673-Due to persecution and condemnation by the Catholic Church, the secrecy of the Masons precluded public recognition and there are few existing ritual, minutes, descriptions, or primary evidence of Masonic activity in the 17th century. There is, however, a list of twenty-seven members of a Lodge in Chester dated 1673.

AD 1676-1745- Walpole, Sir Robert, Earl of Oxford, famous British statesman who dominated the House of Commons for 20 years and held the highest offices in the kingdom, and is regarded by historians as one of the greatest statesmen in English history. He was cynical and not over scrupulous in promoting his own affairs as his political life at the time was thoroughly corrupt.

He promoted his bastard sons to Bishoprics as the people must have smiled when he described himself in the House of Commons as “A sincere member of the Church of England.” He went beyond the Deism that was then prevalent at Court, the queen being a serious skeptic herself, and it is fairly evident that he was an atheist.

“Each of those churches shows certain books, which they call revelation, or the Word of God. The Jews say that their Word of God was given by God to Moses face to face; the Christians say, that their Word of God came by ‘Divine Inspiration;’ and the Turks say, that their Word of God [the Koran] was brought by an Angel from Heaven. Each of those churches accuses the other of unbelief; and, for my own part, I disbelieve them all.” ~Thomas Paine.

The English translation of Bayle’s freethinking Dictionary was dedicated to him, and the letter dedicating it spoke blandly of “The blind zeal and stupidity of cleaving to superstition.” The chief biography, by A. C. Ewald, says that “he was a man whose life reflected a genial paganism, who regarded all creeds with the impartiality of indifference” (p. 40). His son Horace Walpole (1717 – 1797), second Earl of Oxford, was one of the most brilliant writers of the Deistic school and was also skeptical about immortality. He was the most famous letter writer of the age as his extant letters fill 16 volumes, and in these he often gives rein to his free thought views.

AD 1677-The Death Penalty is abolished under the old English law, the penalty for heresy, blasphemy, and schism was death by burning, after trial by the Ecclesiastical Courts. The Ecclesiastical Courts subsequently lose their jurisdiction over any but the clergy of the Established Church.

As heresy dropped out of sight, attention is now fixed on blasphemy, the law of blasphemous libel still remaining on the Statute Book. “An Act for the more effectual suppression of blasphemy and profaneness” was passed in the reign of William III.

“Any person or persons having been educated in, or at any time having made profession of, the Christian religion within this realm who shall, by writing, printing, teaching, or advised speaking, deny any one of the persons in the Holy Trinity to be God, or shall assert or maintain that there are more gods than one, or shall deny the Christian doctrine to be true, or the Holy Scriptures of the Old and New Testament to be of divine authority, shall upon conviction be disabled from holding any ecclesiastical, civil, or military employment, and on a second conviction be imprisoned for three years, and deprived forever of all civil rights.” ~Statue enacted by King William III, 9 and 10, c. 32.

The Unitarians, Christians not believing in the Trinity, caused the repeal by the 53 George III, c. 160 Law. But it still disgraces the Statute Book. In 1883 Messrs. Foote, Ramsey, and Kemp were successfully, and the late Mr. Bradlaugh unsuccessfully, prosecuted under this Act.

It was alleged against them that they “Wickedly and profanely attempted to bring the Holy Scriptures and the Christian religion into disbelief and contempt,” not only “Against the peace of our lady the Queen,” but also “To the great displeasure of Almighty God.” ~M.D. Aletheia, The Rationalist’s Manual, Bank of Wisdom, Box 926,

Louisville, KY 40201

AD 1678-Philippines: Friar Felipe Pardo, Dominican Order, known as the “Mad Archbishop of Manila” refuses the decree sent by King Philip II of Spain to denounce the involvement of the Friars in the death of the previous governor. Friar Pardo is recalcitrant in his efforts to remain in office and is literally removed from his administrative center by being carried out [physically] on his throne and exiled [State power versus spiritual authority continues in the newly discovered lands].

AD 1680-The Apache Indians in North America help their Pueblo dwelling brethren in killing the Christian Missionaries who enslave and torture them in their efforts to convert them to Catholicism. The early missionaries in the New World used starvation, beatings, incarceration, threats, and separation from family to convert the Native Americans to the New Faith. The missionaries who give their lives to force their religion upon a non-accommodating indigenous people will be long remembered by the Catholic Church, while their crimes against humanity, committed in the name of “Our Lord,” will be long forgotten.

The introduction of slavery into America in the Columbia Encyclopedia, it had never been fully abolished in Europe, although Papal decrees allegedly condemned it, is misrepresented in the interest of the Christian Church.

The large use of slave eunuchs by the Moslem is heavily censured, but it is not mentioned that the Spanish Arabs were furnished with these castrated slave boys, actually castrated by the monks of then Catholic France.

“It is contended by many that ours is a Christian government, founded upon the Bible, and that all who look upon that book as false or foolish are destroying the foundation of our country. The truth is, our government is not founded upon the rights of Gods, but upon the rights of men. Our Constitution was framed, not to declare and uphold the deity of Christ, but the sacredness of humanity. Ours is the first government made by the people for the people. It is the only nation with which the gods have nothing to do. And yet there are some judges dishonest and cowardly enough to solemnly decide that this is a Christian country, and that our free institutions are based upon the infamous laws of Jehovah.” ~Col. Robert G. Ingersoll.

AD 1681- The young Count de Vermandois, the son of King Louis XIV of France by Louise de La Valliere, applies for admission to a secret fraternity of active homosexuals [but subversive], in the French Court. Because the young count is so indiscreet in his activities, his father soon discovers his orientation, and the existence of the fraternity. King Louis has his son whipped in his presence and then exiles him.

AD 1682- Pope Innocent XII abolishes Jewish loan-banks in Rome. In 1683, the Pope extends the ban to Ferrara and other Jewish ghettos under his Papal authority. Prohibited from shopkeeping and most trades and crafts, the Roman Jewish community shrinks, while the Jews of Northern Italy begin their profitable entering commerce and industry. “The Pope is of so great authority and power, that he is able to modify, declare, or interpret even Divine Laws.” ~Quoadea quoconcernunt papae dignitatem, auctoritatem, seu potestatem, et infallibilitatem.

Pope Innocent III, 1198-1216, had already claimed the Divinity Powers of his station, “Just as the founder of the universe established two great lights in the firmament of Heaven, the greater light to rule the day, and the lesser light to rule the night, so too He set two great dignities in the firmament of the Universal Church... The greater one to rule the day, that is, souls, and the lesser to rule the night, that is, bodies. These dignities are the Papal authority and the Royal Power. Now just as the moon derives its light from the sun and is indeed lower than it in quantity and quality, in position and in power, so too the Royal Power derives the splendor of its dignity from the Pontifical Authority...” ~Pope Innocent III, Letter to the prefect Acerbius and the nobles of Tuscany, 1198.

These Papal claims of Supreme Authority include the presumed authority to modify the Divine Laws of God, were specifically prophesied in the book of Daniel, “And he shall speak great words against the most High, and shall wear out the saints of the most High, and think to change times and Laws [of the most High] and they shall be given into his hand until a time and times and the dividing of time.” ~Daniel 7:25.

AD 1685-1753-Berkeley, George, Irish philosopher and clergyman, regarded as the founder of the modern school of “Idealism-seeking perfection in all things.” He believed that matter could be envisioned to exist independent of the mind; the observable fact of our senses can be explained by supposing a God that continually induces perceptions in our human minds.

Berkeley studied at Trinity College, Ireland, where he became a fellow in 1707. In 1710 he publishes his famous work, “The Principles of Human Knowledge.” Failing to convince people of his theories, he published another version called, “The Three Dialogues between Hylas and Philonous,” in 1713. His philosophical beliefs, regarded as irrational by his contemporaries, compelled him in 1728 to venture to America, where he assisted in the growth of Yale and Columbia Universities.

Berkeley's philosophical theories were developed as his response to "Skepticism" and "Atheism." He believed that skepticism arose when experience or our sensations of what we perceive as such are separated from this material world. Once this has been accomplished, there is no way of knowing about things except through ideas. The "Being" of any entity consists in their being perceived. What is perceived is real, and only things that can be known to exist are those that will be perceived [Therefore, if we can think of God, he must exist].

Things exist as ideas in our mind, however, things can exist apart from the human mind and perception [that which we do not yet know of], and people cannot always control what ideas they have. Therefore, there must be a mind in which all the ideas exist, an infinite omnipresent spirit, namely, "God," who can perceive everything.

Berkeley's philosophical theoretical system eliminated any possibility of knowledge of an external material world, and his concept of matter was forceful and has influenced philosophers and thinkers.

AD 1686-King James II takes the first steps to restore England to Catholicism, gathering a standing army of 13,000 troops at Hounslow to intimidate Londoners.

AD 1687-the Quietism movement is condemned by Pope Innocent XI for the followers believe that by achieving a oneness with God one is abandoning all to God and the Soul can return to its source, thinking of no pleasure nor pain, no reward nor punishment. . . And if one is stirred by nature then it is because of nature [God permits the perfect soul to be influenced by demons and commit carnal acts]. The teachings of Quietism are practiced by Pietro Matteo Petrucci [1636-1701] and the Bishop of Jesi [1681], who is made Cardinal in 1686.

Petrucci is admonished by the Inquisition and resigns his Bishopry in 1696. Quietism- "... Doctrines had found adherents even in the higher ranks of the clergy, such as the Oratorian, Pietro Matteo Petrucci [1636-1701], who was made Bishop of Jesi [1681], and raised to the Cardinalate (AD 1686). His works on Mysticism and the spiritual life were criticized by the Jesuit Paolo Segneri, and a controversy ensued which resulted in an examination of the whole question by the Inquisition, and the proscription of fifty-four propositions taken from eight of Petrucci's writings [1688]. He submitted at once, resigned his bishopric in 1696, and was appointed by Pope Innocent XII Apostolic visitor. "

"Other leaders of the Quietist movement were: Joseph Beccarelli of Milan, who retracted before the Inquisition at Venice in 1710; Francois Malaval, a blind layman of Marseilles [1627-1719]; and especially the Barnabite Francois Lacombe, the director of Mme. Guyon, whose views were embraced by Fénelon. The doctrine contained in Fénelon's 'Explication de Maximes des Saints' was suggested by the teachings of Molinos, but was less extreme in its principles and less dangerous in its application; it is usually designated as Semiquietism." ~from the Catholic Encyclopedia

Mme. Guyon, is perhaps the most noted example of how the suppression of the natural sexual instincts distorts the mentality. She believed herself "Married" to God and would often acclaim that she loved him more than the most passionate lover his mistress. She craved "The love that thrills and burns and leaves one fainting in an inexpressible joy and pain." So strong did passion burn within her that she actually experienced an orgasm, which prompted her to say that if God would make sensual people feel as she did, they would give up their false pleasures of the flesh! The method by which she sought to stifle her sexual desires is too repellent to be recorded. —From The Ten Commandments by Joseph Lewis.

AD 1688-Emanuel Swedonborg: Bishop, professor of theology, and a linguist; his beliefs are the basis for the Church of the New Jerusalem which present a new interpretation of Christian beliefs. His beliefs however, contradict accepted Catholic Doctrines.

The Inquisition flexes its muscles in the Philippines, and the Santo Domingo convent appears to be in no short supply of instruments of torture nor are the Fort Santiago Dominican Friars, or the Spanish imposed Audiencia in the Philippines. The poor Filipino is condemned to accept a superstitious religion in which he has no voice [could not become ordained], and attend schools from which he could not progress [colleges denied to him]. Friar Felipe Pardo, Dominican Order, known as the "Mad Archbishop of Manila" refuses the decree sent by King Philip II of Spain to denounce the involvement of the Friars in the death of the previous governor in 1678.

King James II declares a petition signed by seven Bishops as a seditious libel against the crown. The Bishops, including the Bishop of Canterbury, are ordered arrested and imprisoned in the Tower of London, and in what later becomes known as the Trial of the Seven Bishops, they are all found not guilty, their subsequent release being greeted by huge celebrations throughout the country.

The Jacobites derived their name from "Jacobus," the Latin name for King James II of England, who is dethroned in 1688 by William of Orange during the Glorious Revolution "Battle of the Boyne." King James was an unpopular king due to his Roman Catholicism and failure to acknowledge individual rights by his autocratic rule.

The Jacobites attempt minor plots aimed at overthrowing the new Protestant dynasty, and in 1715 the Catholic Jacobite nobles lead an uprising in Scotland along the English border country in favor of James's son, James Francis Edward Stuart, who was known as the "Old Pretender."

After an indecisive battle with the government forces, the Jacobites surrender at Preston, England, and Stuart returns to exile in France. Seven noblemen are sentenced to death for their complicity in the revolt, but only James Radcliffe, the Earl of Derwentwater, and William Gordon, Viscount Kenmure are executed. The second Jacobite rebellion, known as "The Forty-Five," on July 1745, Charles Edward Stuart, James II's grandson, known as the "Young Pretender," lands in Scotland and in September enters Edinburgh, Scotland, with 2000 men. Jacobite forces subsequently win three battles in Scotland and invade England. The revolt fails and a number of nobles are executed for taking part in the rebellion with one hundred being condemned to death.

The Jacobites, politically and mystically devoted, claim the Templar tradition as their own. The Jacobites, failing to restore the Scottish Stuarts to the English throne, accepted the help of Masonic allies in France who later became involved in the Enlightenment.

The Templar ideal of a free society founded on religious and political liberties takes root. Scottish, English and French Masons had begun to dramatically change the way the world is perceived with Locke, Montesquieu, and Voltaire, all Masons, preaching the philosophy of individual liberty, challenging the institutional restraints and religious fervor of the Church. —From Secret History, by David Lewis.

"John Milton and John Locke, otherwise relatively 'enlightened' Protestants, argued for tolerance, but excluded Catholics - the former in his Areopagitica, 1644, and the latter in his first Letter Concerning Toleration, 1689." ~Historian, Owen Chadwick.

AD1688-1790- "Deism" pervades the religious institutions. Religion is studied as a natural cause [science] based on reason versus revelation, which is contradicted by Church authorities, for some of their beliefs do not hold up to logic or reason [they hold some beliefs to be of a spiritual nature].

The most famous adherents are Benjamin Franklin [American statesman, writer, and inventor], Thomas Jefferson [U.S. President], and Jean Jacques Rousseau [French publisher, author, philosopher, poet, historian, scientist and playwright]. Other Freethinkers include: John Adams [U.S. President], Samuel Adams [signer of the Declaration of Independence], Ms. Clara Barton [founder of the 'American Red Cross'], Alexander Graham Bell [inventor of the telephone], Clarence Darrow [famous attorney who protected Freedom of Expression Rights], Charles Dickens [author of: A Christmas Carol, A Tale of Two Cities, Pickwick Papers, David Copperfield, and Oliver Twist], Thomas Edison [patented 1093 inventions, amongst which are: the electric light bulb, the phonograph, and the movie projector], Sigmund Freud [psychoanalyst], Robert Frost [American poet and Pulitzer Prize Winner, author of: A Boy's Will, A Witness Tree, and In the Clearing], Carl Gustav Jung [psychologist], E. Christopher Reyes [author of this book and: Philippines: Friend and Foe, Faith Without Guilt; whose passion for social justice and religious tolerance drew the ire of many Filipino politicians who proclaimed him a 'Persona-non-grata' in Dimiao, Bohol, Philippines], D.H. Lawrence [author of Lady Chatterley's Lover, Women in Love, and Aaron's Rod], Pablo Picasso [painter], B.F. Skinner [Behavioralist], Mark Twain [author of: Huckleberry Finn, Tom Sawyer and The Prince and the Pauper].

Clarence Darrow in a 1930 speech in Toronto, said, "I don't believe in God because I don't believe in Mother Goose."

Many "Freethinkers," contrary to Church interpretations, have not lost the faith, but have merely found a faith, a faith in God, unencumbered by walls, institutional teachings, or religious constraints. Freethinkers are unrestrained by idolization of authoritarian figures, idols, superstitions, and rigid institutional thinking, and therefore a threat to religious institutions per se.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

"I almost shudder at the thought of alluding to the most fatal example of the abuses of grief, which the history of humankind has preserved; the Cross. Consider what calamities that engine of grief has produced!" ~John Adams, American Free Thinker.

AD 1689-1691-Pope Alexander VIII "Bestowed on his relations the riches they were eager to accumulate; in their behalf, and to the discredit of his Pontificate, he revived sinecure offices. Out of compassion for the poor of well-nigh impoverished Italy, he sought to succor them by reducing the taxes." ~So says the Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 1, 295.

Pope Alexander VIII, 6 October 1689 to 1 February 1691, also condemned the Jewish genocidal writings. The Toleration Act guarantees freedom of worship to all Protestant dissenters.

End of the World: Benjamin Keach, a 17th century Baptist, predicts the End of the World for this year. He will be joined by more Fundamentalists in the following centuries who predict the End of the World.

Fundamentalists, "We affirm that Genesis 1-11 is an accurate and historical account of the events it presents. The description found therein is reaffirmed throughout the Old Testament, and every New Testament writer and Jesus Himself explicitly or implicitly affirms the historicity of Genesis 1-11." ~Bible Creation Story Conformity Now Required at Southern Adventist University! cf. Epic of Gilgamesh.

AD 1691-1700-Pope Innocent XII showers money and favors on his relatives in the form of unearned court appointments. Nepotism and cronyism continues to pervade the Vatican, although apologists attempt to minimize this fact throughout Catholic history. Via revisionism

The Treaty of Limerick allows Catholics, in Ireland, to practice their religion freely, although harsh penal laws against them are introduced soon afterwards.

AD 1692-Sarah Good: Salem Massachusetts, member of a witch's coven. Sarah and her housekeeper Tituba along with Sarah Osburn are accused of witchcraft by two children [Elizabeth Parris and Abigail Williams] one of who is the daughter of the minister at Salem. Tituba confesses to the crimes of witchcraft and mass hysteria takes over the small town of Salem. Two hundred others are accused also, and thirty-four are convicted. On July 19th Sarah Good is taken to Gallows Hill and implored to confess her heresy. Instead, she puts a curse upon the Reverend Noyes and she is hanged shortly afterwards.

AD 1693-1775-Johann Johnston, a doctor of medicine publishes his book entitled, "De Serpentina et Draconibus," which depicts prehistoric dinosaurs. He claims to have made the renditions from live models. The Vulgate Bible, Latin Version, 1590, translated from the works of Saint Jerome in 400, does not mention dinosaurs per se for this is an 18th Century word, but uses the terms: whales, sea monsters, behemoths or leviathans [The Hebrew name for sea monster, gliding serpent, also 'Dragon of Turmoil' which challenged God . ~Job 9:13, 40-41, and Isaiah 27:1.

In the Vulgate [Genesis 1:21] we have, "So God created the Great Dragon." Other versions: "And God created the great sea monster." And "God created great whales, and every living creature..." Did the ancients have first hand knowledge of the last remnants of dinosaurs, animals, which are now extinct? ~A monster mentioned in the Book of Revelations [19:20] has two horns, and this beast speaks like a Dragon bearing the mystical number 666.

Were our forefathers witnesses to the last vestiges of ancient creatures we thought extinct for millions of years and the Biblical references to sea creatures, giant whales, and leviathans, merely their attempt to describe something which can only be described in a limited vocabulary and no longer exists?

The Swiss naturalist Conrad Gesner, 1581-1587, in his "Historia Animalium," has an image of a sea snake about 300 feet in length [90 meters] long twisting its coils around a sailing vessel [Ancient Egyptian inscriptions also told of a long ago large serpent exceeding forty feet in span].

With the translations of the Egyptian pyramids comes the story of a large serpent, described as filling the locals with terror. Did this huge serpent really exist and were these ancient serpents hunted and eventually exterminated?

During the Merovingian Dynasty [481-750] in what is now France, stories were told of a triumphant, Dragon-slaying hero of courage and strength. The Chinese also have their lore which describes the "Dragons," which are known as the "Lung" in their ancient writings with the dragons of Chinese and Japanese myth and art being portrayed as reptiles with bat-like wings and claws and were alleged to spread disease and death among the people. For ages the Dragon was also the emblem of the former Imperial House of China.

The Anasazi Indians of North America are known to have carved on stone pictures of ancient creatures resembling pterodactyls that cannot be explained today [see AD 1530].

In Greek mythology, we have the "Basilisk," or "Cockatrice," which is a serpent so horrible that it kills with a glance. Pliny the Elder, who published a 37-volume "Natural History," which is a compilation of 2,000 earlier works, described a creature simply as, "... A snake with a small golden crown."

In the writings of Ctesias, the Greek historian, once a physician to the Persian king Artaxerxes II, upon returning from Persia in BC 400, wrote a book on the amazing things he saw in the Far East, tells of a certain wild horse in India with a white body and a horn on the forehead. Is there some truth to these ancient myths?

"The early ecclesiastical writers were unconscious of nearly all the problems to which criticism has given rise... Looking at the Divine side, they deemed as of trifling account questions of authorship, date, composition, accepting unreservedly for these points such traditions as the Jewish Church had handed down... The Fathers saw in every sentence of the Scripture a pregnant oracle of God. Apparent contradictions and other difficulties were solved without taking possible human imperfections into view. Except in regard to the preservation of the sacred text there was nothing to elicit a critical view of the Bible in the age of the Fathers, and this applies also to the Scholastic period." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. iv, pg. 492.

Ctesias described drinking mugs made of rhinoceros horn, common in medieval times, which were decorated with three colors. The dust filed from the animal horn, he alleged could give one protection against deadly drugs.

In older versions of the Old Testament, the Hebrew word "Re'em," which is now translated as "Wild ox," was translated "Monoceros," which meant "One horn."

This interpretation later became "Unicorn" in English. Other mythological creatures once contained in Scripture are: 'Cockatrice,' a legendary serpent that is hatched by a reptile from a cock's egg and that has a deadly glance. In Job 39:10, we have wrongly translated unicorn in the King James Bible.

The word was contained in Isaiah 14:29, now rendered as snake, Isaiah 1:8, serpent, and Isaiah 59:5, adders, now snake. 'Unicorns' were mentioned in Deuteronomy 33:17, rendered now as wild ox or wild bull, Psalms 22:21, wild oxen, or wild bulls, Isaiah 34:7, now interpreted as wild oxen and wild bulls. 'Satyrs,' a sylvan deity in Greek mythology having certain characteristics of a horse or goat and fond of Dionysian revelry were contained in Isaiah 13:21, now goat-shaped demon, wild goats [like demons] in the Amplified Bible, Isaiah 34:14, as goat-shaped demons, and shaggy wild goat. ~Definitions from 1996 Zane Publishing, Inc. and Merriam-Webster, Incorporated

The mermaid that figures so much in the romantic tales of the north is borrowed from the story of "Atergatis," the "Fish Goddess" of Syria, who was called the mother of Semiramis, and was sometimes identified with Semiramis herself, was described with "Yellow Hair" and light complexion. "The Ellewoman," the Scandinavian name for the mermaid is "Fair Complexioned," says the introduction to the "Danish Tales" of Hans Andersen, "And Gold-Haired, and plays most sweetly on a stringed instrument." Such is the affinity to fairness and the ancient pagan 'Sun-god' that, "She is frequently seen sitting on the surface of the waters, and combing her long Golden Hair with a Golden Comb."

German mythology and legend has Nibelungs [Nibelungen], in Germanic and also Scandinavian mythology, as a race of dwarfs or elves dwelling in Niflheim, a realm of mist and darkness. The Nibelungs are the descendants of Nibelung, a legendary Scandinavian king, and heir to a vast treasure of gold and jewels that had been accumulated in ancient times. The treasure is tainted with corruption, greed and lunacy.

The Dwarf Andvari [Alberich] guards the cache, called the "Rhine Gold." In the "Volsunga Saga," the hero, Sigurd, acquires the gold by slaying Fafnir, who had killed his own father, Hreidmar, for it and turned himself into a dragon to protect the treasure [History is replete with legends about giants as well as dwarfs].

AD 1693-The "York Number 4 Manuscript" gives the names of six members of a Masonic Lodge of which nothing else is known or recorded.

AD 1694-1778-Voltaire, Francois Marie Arouet, French satirist, poet, and writer of scathing articles about the Catholic Church: One of the foremost leaders in the Age of Enlightenment, he emphasized the use of human reason [logic] that defiantly contradicted the Church's authority over man. Voltaire went to a Jesuit school. He said later that he learned Latin and nonsense. "The more he became truly wise, the more he distrusted everything he knew,” Voltaire, describing a theologian. He was banished from Paris for insulting the Prince Regent, an unspeakable unscrupulous individual, in his 22nd year and in the following year was sent to the Bastille for further free speech.

In hopes of populating the town, the French freed criminals from the Bastille and other overcrowded prisons to settle in a particular area. The rogue settlers soon found a perfect match in 88 released female prisoners, many of whom were prostitutes and thieves who were released in 1727 to be their brides. Known as “Casket girls” because of all their worldly possessions, which were often shipped in wooden, casket-like boxes, the women were accompanied by five Roman Catholic nuns.

Voltaire loved brilliance, in fact the indulgence, of Paris but after the age of 20 was twice in the Bastille and spent nearly the whole of the rest of his life in exile for the right of free speech. His books were suppressed or burned by the hangman.

The first mention of the Cerne Abbas Giant, which is a huge chalk drawing on the side of a hill near Dorchester, England. The monstrous naked giant, with club, and erect phallus is supposedly prehistoric, but is not noticed until recently. Some suspect a 17th Century hoax designed to annoy the pious Puritans.

“Christianity is the most ridiculous, the most absurd, and bloody religion that has ever infected the world.” ~ Francois Marie Arouet Voltaire, in a letter to Frederick the Great.

He spent 3 years in England and three in Prussia, and from 1758 to death lived on the border of Switzerland in case he had to flee. During all this time, most of the Catholic Bishops and Archbishops lived in open license, immorality, decadence, and luxury, and their modern successors professed to be shocked at the wicked Voltaire. He had a passion for justice, religious toleration, and freedom, and he was a man of the greatest generosity. Besides his caustic works on religion he wrote serious works on toleration, science and other subjects, and was one of the leading historians of his time and a tragedian of distinction.

The anachronistic and despotic institutions of “L’ancien regime” or, “The Old Order,” was being subjected to a type of scrutiny which it endeavored to survive, of which Voltaire was also assisting to crystallize a new perspective of man and his role in this life through that of reason, nature, progress, logic, and religion through “free will” versus the Church’s superstition, divine inspiration, demonic retribution, and the “Lawful representatives” of the people via God, Pope and the King. That the “Natural World” [New Jerusalem] was hostile, unknowable, and forever subject to a higher order ruled by “Supernatural Forces,” those not under the control of man, Gods and demonic creatures always disposed to ruin man unless he acquiesced to the Catholic Order was challenged throughout Europe with the “New Age of Reason.”

“To be a true liberal and representative of the masses, one must have the visceral fortitude to stand up for justice and equality regardless of the consequences from long established tyrannies.” ~E. Christopher Reyes August 2, 2012.

That one’s time in this material world was allotted only for preparation in dying and of being reborn into the supernatural kingdom only through the approval of a corrupt hierarchy was being met with skepticism. “For he who persists in evil, and is the servant of evil, cannot be made a portion of good so long as he persists in evil, because from the beginning, as we have said, God instituted two kingdoms, and has given to each man the power of becoming a portion of that kingdom to which he shall yield himself to obey. And since it is decreed by God that no one man can be a servant of both kingdoms, therefore endeavor with all earnestness to betake yourselves to the Covenant and Laws of the good King. Wherefore also the true Prophet, when He was present with us, and saw some rich men negligent with respect to the worship of God, thus unfolded the truth of this matter, ‘No one,’ said He, ‘Can serve two masters; ye cannot serve God and mammon [debasement of material wealth or possessions];’ calling riches, in the language of His country, mammon.” ~The Recognitions of Clement, About the Recognitions and Homilies. 5.9, The Two Kingdoms.

The hierarchical acceptance of a God in Heaven and the Popes and kings on earth as his “Lawful representatives” stipulated conformity, constancy, and absolute obedience, instead of growth, seeking the truth, and blasphemy [for daring to challenge a questionable leadership].

The French philosopher Voltaire saw the clergy and Christianity as a plague upon the human race, exclaiming “Ecrasez l’infame,” “Crush the Infamous Things!”

The Church authorities are perceived as corrupt and immoral with the Pope deemed a tyrant who would not allow any interpretation of Scripture but his own, however illogical, irrational, or superstitious it may be. The king is despised as a minion and errand boy for the "Whore Master" in Rome.

It is a well known fact that the Pope and his entourage [Cardinals and Bishops] had women going in and out of the Vatican at night, while they chastised the members of their own congregation for their immorality, while failing to keep theirs in check. The Bible was the "Holy Book" of the Christian Enlightenment, but the Encyclopedia was soon to be the Inspiration of the Enlightenment with its vast source of knowledge through reason and logic, it was soon to challenge the superstitious views of the Church authorities. In spite of the high position of the chief writers they had to produce their work in the midst of fierce religious hostility.

As volume after volume was more or less secretly printed and published they were repeatedly condemned and the authors threatened. Denis Diderot was the creator of the first Encyclopedia, and was jailed for skepticism, and his writings burned. English publishers who printed Thomas Paine's 'The Age of Reason,' were jailed for blasphemy. When the encyclopedic work was near completion the clergy bribed the printers to mutilate the finest articles after Diderot had passed the proof. But the leading Minister, the Due de Choiseul, a secret skeptic, and the king's chief mistress Mme. de Pompadour protected the rebellious editors, and the great work circulated freely when its arch-critics the Jesuits, were suppressed by the Pope as grave offenders.

The immense influence of the encyclopedia rebukes most Christian historians for taking so little notice of it. Such was its circulation that the printers made a profit of $5,000,000: an immense sum to make out of a literary and scientific work at a time when less than 10 percent of the community could read. However, it astonished the French middle class and put into their minds the germs of all the reforms which they would soon put forward in the Revolution before the pious Robespierre ruined it with his Supreme Being and Terror. ~The Columbia Encyclopedia's, Crimes Against The Truth, by Joseph McCabe, Haldeman-Julius Publications, Girard, Kansas.

Here was a compendium of knowledge dealing with the arts, sciences, history, mechanics and philosophy, which already encompassed 36 volumes by 1780. Embarked upon by an Atheist, Diderot, in 1751, the Encyclopedia bears the freethinking and independent marks of Voltaire, Montesque, Rousseau, Buffon, and Turgot. The French Revolution was the culmination of ill treatment by both the Church and monarchial despots. The truth, which Professor Aulard has shown in a small specialist work entitled, "Christianity and the French Revolution," 1927, is that the mass of the French people voluntarily quit the Church, and Danton and Robespierre resisted all their demands that it should be disestablished until the summer of 1793.

Most historians endorse the Catholic legend that the people of Paris then set up a 'Cult of Reason,' and had a prostitute masquerading as the 'Goddess of Reason' in the Cathedral of Notre Dame, a myth too shabby to appear in any but a Catholic Publication.

"The brothel in the city, then, is like the stable or latrine for the house. Because just as the city keeps itself clean by providing a separate place where filth and dung are gathered, etc., so neither less nor more, assuming the dissolution of the flesh, acts the brothel: where the filth and ugliness of the flesh are gathered like the garbage and dung of the city." ~Francisco Farfan, a 16th century cleric of Spain.

The ceremony in honor of Liberty and Reason that was held in Notre Dame, which had been handed over by the clergy to the municipality, was a dignified pageant in which a lady, and not a prostitute and not using the altar, personified Liberty and recited a fine ode composed by the leading poet of the day. Diderot's compendium, in the first edition, has a drawing of Lucifer, the symbol of light and rebellion, standing beside the Masonic symbols of the square and compass, which shows that members of the Masonic Order may have had a hand in its compilation [Masons professing a faith in God, and not in the Church. Which is another reason to denounce the Order]. Many Catholic authorities believed, at the time, that the Masons had a significant hand in the French Revolution. ~Note: Translators of the King James Bible, of 1611 C.E., inserted the word Lucifer: in Isaiah 14:12. Isaiah 14:12 is the only place in the entire King James Bible that the word 'Lucifer' appears.

The deistic God [belief in one God, but not in revelation] is symbolized in the Masonic lodges as the "Great Architect of the Universe," most assuredly not the God of the Christian superstitious world and therefore the condemnation of the Church would be forthcoming for centuries to come. The Roman Catholic Church finds itself unable to coerce the Masonic brotherhood [through ex-communication, banishment, and even torture], to succumb to the will of "Religious Authority," as well as to relinquish its concepts in God by accepting the Trinity, Virgin Birth, and the succession of Popes through Saint Peter.

The Catholic Church will eventually be forced to secede from its self-declared "War" against a group of "Freethinkers" it cannot even marginally cope with and temporarily focus on other world endeavors.

"... God Himself has set up a Living Authority to establish and teach the true and legitimate meaning of His heavenly revelation. This authority judges infallibly all disputes, which concern matters of faith and morals, lest the faithful be swirled around by every wind of doctrine, which springs from the evilness of men in encompassing error. And this living infallible authority is active only in that Church, which was built by Christ the Lord upon Peter, the head of the entire Church, leader and shepherd, whose faith He promised would never fail. This Church has had an unbroken line of succession from Peter himself; these legitimate pontiffs are the heirs and defenders of the same teaching, rank, office and power. And the Church is where Peter is, and Peter speaks in the Roman Pontiff, living at all times in his successors and making judgment, providing the truth of the faith to those who seek it. The Divine Words therefore mean what this Roman See of the most blessed Peter holds and has held." ~Qui Pluribus, On Faith And Religion, Encyclical of Pope Pius IX, November 9, 1846.

When Voltaire was born, the natural was the only thing in which the church did not believe. The monks sell little amulets of consecrated paper to cure diseases, and if laid in a cradle they would prevent a child being bewitched, they could be put into houses and barns to keep devils away, or buried in a field to prevent bad weather, to delay frost, and to insure good crops. There was a regular formulary by which they were made, ending with a prayer, after which the amulets were sprinkled with holy water.

The Church contended that its servants were the only legitimate physicians. The priests cured in the name of the Church, and in the name of God, by exorcism, relics, water, salt, and oil. St. Valentine cured epilepsy, St. Gervasius was good for rheumatism, Saint Michael de Sanatis for cancer, Saint Judas for coughs, St. Ovidius for deafness, Saint Sebastian for poisonous bites, Saint Apollonia for toothache, Saint Clara for rheum in the eye, Saint Hubert for hydrophobia. Devils were driven out with wax tapers, with incense, with holy water, by pronouncing prayers, and the church, as late as the middle of the 12th century, prohibited good Catholics from having anything to do with physicians. ~from the works of Robert Green Ingersoll.

It was believed that the devils produced storms of wind, of rain and of fire from heaven; that the atmosphere was a battlefield between angels and devils; that Lucifer had power to destroy fields and vineyards and dwellings, and the principal business of the church was to protect the people from the Devil. This was the origin of Church bells. These bells were sprinkled with Holy Water, and their clangor cleared the air of imps, evil spirits and fiends. The bells also prevented storms and lightning.

Even in the Bible, Angels aren't always so Angelic. "The Angels had intercourse with Human beings." ~Genesis 6:4.

The Church used to anathematize insects in the 16th century, regular suits were commenced against rats, and judgment was rendered, and every monastery had its master magician, who sold magic incense, salt, and tapers, consecrated palms and relics. Every science was regarded as an outcast, an enemy, by the Church, every fact held the creed of the Church in scorn. Investigators were enemies in disguise. Thinkers were traitors, and the Church exerted its vast power for centuries to prevent the intellectual progress of man. There was no liberty, no education, no philosophy, no science; nothing but credulity, ignorance, and superstition, which helped to perpetuate the whimsical indulgences of the clergy.

What better source than the original? "Theology is the very science[?] of faith itself." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 13, 598. "While acknowledging the freedom due to them, she tries to preserve them from falling into errors contrary to Divine Doctrine, and from overstepping their boundaries and throwing into confusion matters that belong to the domain of faith!" ~Vatican Decrees, Sess. III, De Fide, ch. 4; CE. xiii, 609.

"Science is limited by truth, which belongs to its very essence. Should science ever have to choose between truth and freedom, it must under all circumstances decide for truth, under the penalty of self-extermination... Ethics is more important for mankind than science. Those who believe in revelation know that the Commandments are the criteria by which men will be judged." ~Matthew 25:35-46.

"The demand for unlimited freedom in science is unreasonable and unjust, because it leads to license and rebellion..To submit one's understanding to a doctrine supposed to be Divine and guaranteed to be infallible is undoubtedly more consistent than to accept prevailing postulates of science... When a clearly defined dogma contradicts a scientific assertion, the latter has to be revised.” ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 13, 598-607, passim, read the works of Dr. Andrew D. White, The Warfare between Science and Theology, for a detailed analysis of the hypocrisy of the Church, and Dr. John W. Draper's Conflict between Science and Religion.

The world was really under the control of Satan and his agents. The Church, for the purpose of increasing her power, exhausted every means to convince the people of the existence of witches, devils, and fiends. In this way, the church had every enemy within her power.

She simply had to charge him with being a wizard, of holding communication with devils, renouncing the Bible, the Trinity, Immaculate Conception, or a belief in God, and the ignorant mobs were ready to tear him to pieces. It may be that Voltaire was correct in his day when he stated that he did not believe in a hell, but he wanted his servants to believe in it.

To such an extent was this frightful course pursued, and such was the prevalence of the belief in the supernatural, that the worship of the devil was established, absolutely. The power of the Devil was proven by the Bible with the history of Job, the temptation of Christ in the desert, the carrying of Christ to the top of the temple, and hundreds of other instances, were relied upon as establishing his power; and when people laughed about witches riding upon anointed sticks in the air, invisible, they were reminded of a like voyage when the Devil carried Jesus to the pinnacle of the temple. The Protestants vied with the Catholics. Luther stood side by side with the priests he had deserted, in promoting this belief in devils and fiends. To the Catholic, every Protestant was possessed by a devil. To the Protestant, every Catholic was the homestead of a fiend. ~from the works of Col. Robert Green Ingersoll.

The Church ruled and owned France in a period of almost Universal Corruption. The priests were immoral and lascivious libertines. The judges were nearly as cruel as venal, and the royal palace was simply a house of rendezvous for nocturnal meetings. The nobles were heartless, proud, arrogant, and cruel to the last degree. To rob men of their money is cruel, but infinitely worse is to cheat them also of their souls. The common people were treated as beasts, and it only took the Church a few hundred years to bring about this un happy set of conditions.

It is fashionable to say that he was not profound. This is because he was not stupid. In the presence of absurdity he laughed, and was called irreverent, for he believed even God could not damn a priest forever: this was regarded as blasphemy. He endeavored to prevent Christians from murdering each other and did what he could to civilize the disciples of Christ.

He willfully closed his eyes to the illumination of the Gospel, examined the Bible for himself and advocated intellectual liberty, struck from the brain the fetters of an supercilious faith, assisted the weak, cried out against the torture of man, appealed to reason, endeavored to establish universal toleration, succored the indigent, and defended the oppressed.

On Easter Sunday, 1768, Voltaire took his Secretary Wagniere with him to commune at the village church, and also “To lecture a little those scoundrels who steal continually.” Apprised of Voltaire's sermon on theft, the Bishop of Anneci rebuked him, and finally “Forbade every curate, priest, and monk of his diocese to confess, absolve or give the communion to the seigneur of Ferney, without his express orders, under pain of interdiction.”

The priests became anxious. They began to fear that God would forget, in a diversity of affairs, to make a terrible example of Voltaire. He was imprisoned, banished, and ultimately lived out his life at Ferney near Geneva. When in prison he was not allowed paper or ink, so he wrote verses with pieces of lead between the lines of a book.

The Catholic Church likes to claim that upon their death bed that many non-believers claim Jesus as their Savior, so, “When you see me about to die, call the notary; I will declare before him that I die in none of the prevailing religions.” ~Voltaire, on his deathbed.

Yet contrary to his wishes, “Two days before his death, his nephew went to seek the cure of Saint Sulpice and the Abbe Gautier and brought them into his uncle's sick chamber, who was informed that they were there. ‘Ah, well!’ said Voltaire, ‘give them my compliments and my thanks.’ The Abbe spoke some words to him, exhorting him to patience. The cure of Saint Sulpice then came forward, having announced himself, and asked of Voltaire, elevating his voice, if he acknowledged the Divinity of our Lord Jesus Christ. The sick man pushed one of his hands against the cure's coat shoving him back, and cried, turning abruptly to the other side, 'Let me die in peace.' The curer seemingly considered his person soiled, and his coif dishonored, by the touch of the philosopher. He made the nurse give him a little brushing, and went out with the Abbe Gautier." ~from the works of Robert Green Ingersoll.

"His chief flaw is his prejudice against religion."—Columbia Encyclopedia. He expired, says Wagniere, on the 30th of May of 1778, at about a quarter past eleven at night, with the most perfect tranquility. Ten minutes before his last breath he took the hand of Morand, his valet de chambre, who was watching by him, pressed it and said: "Adieu, my dear Morand, I am gone." These were his last words.

AD1694- Birth of Francois Marie Arouet, better known as the French philosopher/writer Voltaire. Voltaire once ended a letter to a male friend, "I kiss your rod." Should we consider Candide a masochist? ~Leather History Timeline, <http://www.leatherarchives.org/exhibits/deblase/timeline1.htm>

AD1695-Edward Hall claims initiation into the Chichester Lodge in 1695, there have been no other records discovered pertaining to this lodge or its membership.

AD1697-Thomas Aitkenhead, a free thinking student who ridiculed Scripture as fable and reviled Christ as a fraud, is executed in Edinburgh.

AD1698-1762-Montagu, Lady Mary Wortly, one of the most brilliant ladies of English society in the 18th century, whose father, the Earl of Kingston, had her elected to the most exclusive club in London, the Kit-Kat, when she was 7 years old and she fully redeemed her intellectual promise. She translated Epicetus when she was 19 and married the skeptical grandson of the skeptical Earl of Sandwich.

The Pope, Lord Harvey, and other famous Deists met in her dazzling salon. Her letters are very free about her opinions. "Priests can lie and the mobs believe, all over the world" she says (p. 88). She scorns "The quackery of all the Churches" (p. X 108) and all "Creeds and theological whimsies."

Little is known of sex. Kristian Franz Paullini confirms Meibom's theory in Flagellum salutis, but claims that man's blood is warmed up by whipping, which then excites the sperms in the testicles.

AD1700- In the Prussian state of Uuerttemberg, cripples and blind persons are not permitted to marry. In 20th century South America, the Catholic Church attempts to stop a cripple from marrying because he cannot consummate the marriage, but the couple perseveres.

AD1705-1774-Clement XIV, Born Giovanni Vincenzo Antonio Ganganelli in Sant' Arcangelo, Italy and educated by the Jesuits and the Piarists, he entered the "Order of the Franciscans" in 1723. Pope, 1769-74, in 1743 he wrote a theological defense of the Jesuits, and suppressed the Jesuit Order in 1773. He was pressured by many European leaders to disband the Jesuits because of their extreme political influence and control. The order remained suppressed until 1814.

Pope Ganganelli abolished the Jesuits with a Papal Bull; the Jesuits call it a "Brief." It is not a brief; it is in the "Library of the Bulls," and it is called "Dominic Ac Redemptor Nostor." When Pope Clement XIV abolished the "Jesuits," he abolished them forever; they were not to talk about their abolition, they were not to teach, and he went so far as to confiscate all of their wealth, land, and other properties, and the Dominicans take over the administration of the Jesuit holdings [which may be why the Dominicans had their penis' cut off during the French Revolution]. ~cf. Deuteronomy 23:1.

A "Conspiracy Theory" has it that the decision of the Jacobins and the Jesuits was to get their revenge, but the Inquisition had also been removed from their authority, this being their "Judicial Arm" to punish. The final outcome was the Jacobins rallied on the side of the Jesuits using their influence to kill many Dominicans in France.

Harduoin anticipated the substance of what I have had to say in these pages concerning the Basilian and Benedictine literature by some two hundred years, "He denounces the Ecclesiastical Histories and the Fathers and Councils as a system of fable. He reveals to us the forgers sitting down in their scriptoria, with 6th, 7th, 8th, 9th, or 10th century ink and parchments, and with corresponding alphabets, to write works in the names of imaginary authors. He designates the producers of the first Church literature a conspiracy, a wicked and impious crew of atheists, whose virus had infected the Missal even, and the Breviary. He was aware that he was attacking the Benedictines of the 13th century, and he pointedly says that he bears no ill-will to the Benedictines of his own day." ~Father Harduoin, Ad Censuram Veterum Scripto num Prolegomena, 1766: see Appendix III, 722-732.

AD1705-The End of the World is predicted by the Camisard Prophets. Camisards, from the French dialect camisa, "Shirt," applied to the French Huguenot, Protestant peasants who rose in rebellion in 1702 against King Louis XIV. The Camisards, wore black smocks during night raids, and sought refuge in the Cévennes after Louis XIV in 1685 had revoked the religious freedom granted to them by the Edict of Nantes.

Any thoughtful man will reflect that if the Church had no influence on sexual promiscuity and general immorality it certainly had none regarding the increase of wealth, the progress of art, and military victories. France was not a Catholic country in the same sense as Italy, Spain and Portugal, nor their colonies in the New World. The best elements in the Church itself defied the Papacy and declared the independence of the Gallican Church. Ecclesiastical Gallicanism argued that the decisions of Ecumenical Councils had supremacy over the Pope, that the Pope was not infallible, and that all Bishops were established by 'Divine Right' as the successors of the apostles. Royal Gallicanism stressed the French kings' absolute independence from Rome in all temporal affairs.

There were more than a million Protestants in the land, and the licentiousness of the Church encouraged the skepticism that had been growing for a century. A number of the greatest French writers from the 16th century onward, from Montaigne, Cyrano de Bergerac, Moliere, Boileau, and Bayle, were Freethinkers and had extensive support in the middle class. France was only in a formal sense a Catholic country.

Through the Concordat of 1516, the Pope gave the French king the right to appoint all Bishops in his realm. The development of the General Assembly of the French clergy in the 16th century strengthened the cohesion and independence of the French episcopacy in relation to Rome. The doctrine achieved its fullest triumph with the Four Gallican Articles of 1682, issued by the General Assembly under the leadership of Bishop J. B. Bossuet and accepted by King Louis XIV... The declaration of the First Vatican Council, 1869-70, on Papal infallibility and the general triumph of ultramontanism among the French clergy, however, brought an end to the movement. ~From the Microsoft Encarta Encyclopedia, 1998.

The French revolt sparked a religious "Awakening" among them. Led by the French soldier Jean Cavalier, the Camisards used guerrilla warfare from mountain strongholds against the King's Royal Troops.

Roman Catholic churches were burned, and priests are killed or forced to flee. Persecuted by Pope Clement XI, who issued a papal bull excoriating the Camisards, the Catholics burned more than 450 villages and exterminated most of their Protestant inhabitants. In the French Revolution, democratic principles and human liberties inspired foundations were laid, and then, after the compromise of the reign of Napoleon, the restored monarchs and the Holy Mother the Church tore up the foundation stones of democracy and forced the masses back under a regime of absolute monarchy, the Inquisition, the subjection of women, industrial semi-slavery, dense ignorance, and sordid criminal law and practice. The horrors of the Inquisition are abolished during the command of Napoleon and the reign of Joseph I, 1808-1812.

Poisoning with arsenic was terribly rife in the middle class and a dozen priests in the actual service of the Church duped and exploited the wealthy middle class and the nobles by performing "black masses," by means of which they professed to put folks in contact with the devil. It is a Catholic lie that this was perpetrated by only a few ex-priests. There was not one ex-priest among them, and some were fashionable preachers in Paris. Babies were actually sacrificed to the devil, and some of the highest ladies in the land lay naked upon an altar while the priest said his parody of the mass on their bellies.

The vilest of human scum of Paris hung round the palatial abodes of the rich, even the royal palace, and pandered to the unrestrained passions of the nobles. The Catholic Cardinal Archbishop flaunted his mistresses as openly as the lascivious and morally bankrupt King, and the people sang ribald songs about him in the streets. On account of Louis XIV and the corrupt Church, says the Duc de Saint Simon, one of the chief French writers of the age, "Paris became the main sewer of the lusts of Europe."

There had been a Quarrel between the King and his chief mistress. He complained that she stank because she never took a bath, and she retorted that the smell came from his chronically foul breath. No encyclopedia will tell you how the money to build the huge and magnificent palaces was squeezed out of the blood and pores of the people.

A large part of the country was at one time so distressed that the townspeople fled to the woods from the tax-gatherer, tried to live off grass, bit into their own limbs, or ate bodies of some of the nude orphaned children who wandered in groups through the countryside. Isn't it ironic that nearly all the nobles and ladies and mistresses had Jesuit confessors, yet this didn't preclude them from scandalous acts nor the Pope from not rebuking them.

AD 1706-The End of the World: Does not materialize and the Camisards now predict another date for Doomsday deliverance.

AD 1706-1775-John Baskerville, printer, free thinker, was renowned for the excellence of his workmanship, the exquisiteness of his types, and the splendor of his editions. Buried in a tomb, in his own garden, on which was placed the following inscription: "Stranger, beneath this cone, in unconsecrated ground, a friend to the liberties of mankind directed his body to be inured. May the example contribute to emancipate thy mind from the idle fears of superstition and the wicked arts of Priesthood." This virtuous free thinker took precautions against "The wicked arts of priesthood."

"His will, professed open contempt for Christianity, and the biographers who reproduce the document always veil certain passages with lines of stars as being far too indecent [i.e., irreverent] for repetition."

~See Dictionary of National Biography, quotation of Mr. Leslie Stephen.

AD1706-1790-Benjamin Franklin, free thinker, American printer, author, diplomat, philosopher, founder of the first public library system, first Postmaster General, first minister plenipotentiary from the U.S. to France, and scientist, who made innumerable contributions to the cause of the American Revolution, 1775-1783, of which he proclaimed, "A Republic if you can keep it."

There are no Biblical MSS. in the Christian libraries, which are not elegantly written and superbly finished, because there are none, which are incorrupt. Of Saint Jerome's Latin Vulgate there are no copies, because such were written only for use, and when worn out were cast away. There was no Royal Library in France till Charles V., the Wise, 1364-1380.

"Of all the systems of religion that ever were invented, there is none more derogatory to the Almighty, more unedifying to man, more repugnant to reason, and more contradictory in itself than this thing called Christianity. Too absurd for belief, too impossible to convince, and too inconsistent for practice, it renders the heart torpid or produces only atheists or fanatics. As an engine of power, it serves the purpose of despotism, and as a means of wealth, the avarice of priests, but so far as respects the good of man in general it leads to nothing here or hereafter." ~Thomas Paine, American free thinker.

And "We must all hang together or assuredly we will all hang separately." Franklin helps draft both the "Declaration of Independence" and the "Constitution of the United States," and the newly formed federal government that followed, rank him among America's greatest statesmen.

As a dignitary of one of the most distinguished Freemason lodges in France, Franklin had the opportunity of meeting and speaking with a number of philosophers and leading figures of the French Revolution, 1789-1799, upon whose political opinion he exerted a significant influence. Although he favored a liberalization of the French government, he opposed change through violent means.

His father often repeated a Proverb of Solomon to him, "Seest thou a Man diligent in his Calling, he shall stand before Kings, he shall not stand before mean Men." In Benjamin Franklin's own words. ~from the Microsoft Encarta 1998 Encyclopedia.

"I had been religiously educated as a Presbyterian; and tho' some of the Dogmas of that Persuasion, such as the Eternal Decrees of God, Election, Reprobation, etc. appear'd to me unintelligible, others doubtful, and I early absented myself from the Public Assemblies of the Sect, Sunday being my Studying-Day, I never was without some religious Principles; I never doubted, for instance, the Existence of the Deity, that he made the World, and govern'd it by his Providence; that the most acceptable Service of God was the doing Good to Man; that our Souls are immortal; and that all Crime will be punished and Virtue rewarded either here or hereafter; these I esteem'd the Essentials of every Religion, and being to be found in all the Religions we had in our Country I respected them all, tho' with different degrees of Respect as I found them more or less mix'd with other Articles which without any Tendency to inspire, promote or confirm Morality, serv'd principally to divide us and make us unfriendly to one another."

"This Respect to all, with an Opinion that the worst had some good Effects, induc'd me to avoid all Discourse that might tend to lessen the good Opinion another might have of his own Religion; and as our Province increas'd in People and new Places of worship were continually wanted, and generally erected by voluntary Contribution, my Mite for such purpose, whatever might be the Sect, was never refused. Tho' I seldom attended any Public Worship, I had still an Opinion of its Propriety, and of its Utility when rightly conducted, and I regularly paid my annual Subscription for the Support of the only Presbyterian Minister or Meeting we had in Philadelphia."

He us'd to visit me sometimes as a Friend, and admonish me to attend his Administrations, and I was now and then prevail'd on to do so, once for five Sundays successively. Had he been, in my Opinion, a good

Preacher perhaps I might have continued, notwithstanding the occasion I had for the Sunday's Leisure in my Course of Study: But his Discourses were chiefly either polemic Arguments, or Explications of the peculiar Doctrines of our Sect, and were all to me very dry, uninteresting and unedifying, since not a single moral Principle was inculcated or enforc'd, their Aim seeming to be rather to make us Presbyterians than good Citizens. My intention being to acquire the Habitude of all these Virtues, I judg'd it would be well not to distract my Attention by attempting the whole at once, but to fix it on one of them at a time, and when I should be Master of that, then to proceed to another, and so on till I should have gone thro' the thirteen. And as the previous Acquisition of some might facilitate the Acquisition of certain others, I arrang'd them with that View as they stand above."

"Temperance first, as it tends to procure that Coolness and Clearness of Head, which is so necessary where constant Vigilance was to be kept up, and Guard maintained, against the unremitting Attraction of ancient Habits, and the Force of perpetual Temptations. This being acquir'd and establish'd, Silence would be more easy, and my Desire being to gain Knowledge at the same time that I improv'd in Virtue, and considering that in Conversation it was obtain'd rather by the Use of the Ears than of the Tongue, and therefore wishing to break a Habit I was getting into of Prattling, Punning and Joking, which only made me acceptable to trifling Company, I gave Silence the second Place."

"This, and the next, Order, I expected would allow me more Time for attending to my Project and my Studies; Resolution once become habitual, would keep me firm in my Endeavours to obtain all the subsequent Virtues; Frugality and Industry, by freeing me from my remaining Debt, and producing Affluence and Independence would make more easy the Practice of Sincerity and Justice, etc. etc. Conceiving then that agreeable to the Advice of Pythagoras in his Golden Verses, daily Examination would be necessary, I contriv'd the following Method for conducting that Examination. I made a little Book in which I allotted a Page for each of the Virtues. I rul'd each Page with red Ink so as to have seven Columns, one for each Day of the Week, marking each Column with a Letter for the Day. I cross'd these Columns with thirteen red Lines, marking the Beginning of each Line with the first Letter of one of the Virtues, on which Line and in its proper Column I might mark by a little black Spot every Fault I found upon Examination, to have been committed respecting that Virtue upon that Day. This my little Book had for its Motto these Lines from Addison's Cato, "Here will I hold: If there is a Pow'r above us, (And that there is, all Nature cries aloud Thro' all her Works) he must delight in Virtue, And that which he delights in must be happy."

It is not only the strong individual freedoms Benjamin Franklin speaks of, but the whole concept of individual rights challenging the institutional religious doctrines of the Catholic Church which causes Pope Pius IX to write a letter to the Confederate Leader, Jefferson Davis, in 1865, supporting his cause against the United States government. Throughout history the Church will support those elements, which will assist them in bringing countries back to Catholicism [Islamic and Orthodox Christian in particular].

"It [slavery] was established by decree of Almighty God... It is sanctioned in the Bible, in both Testaments, from Genesis to Revelation... it has existed in all ages, has been found among the people of the highest civilization, and in nations of the highest proficiency in the arts... Let the gentleman go to Revelation to learn the decree of God - let him go to the Bible... I said that slavery was sanctioned in the Bible, authorized, regulated, and recognized from Genesis to Revelation... Slavery existed then in the earliest ages, and among the chosen people of God; and in Revelation we are told that it shall exist till the End of Time shall come. You find it in the Old and New Testaments in the prophecies, Psalms, and the Epistles of Paul; you find it recognized, sanctioned everywhere." ~Jefferson Davis, Vol. 1, by Dunbar Rowland, pp. 286 & 316-317.

The Catholic Church admits that the Epistles of Paul are forgeries, saying, "Even the genuine Epistles were greatly interpolated to lend weight to the personal views of their authors." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, Farley ed, vol. vii, p. 645.

blessing... My own convictions as to Negro slavery are strong. It has its evils and abuses... We recognize the negro as God and God's Book and God's Laws, in nature, tell us to recognize him - our inferior, fitted expressly for servitude... The Evangelical Church will get caught up in this dilemma of slavery when, "The Old School [Presbyterian] General Assembly report of 1845 [16 years before the Civil War] concluded that slavery was based on 'Some of the plainest declarations of the Word of God.' Those who took this position were conservative evangelicals. Among their number were the best conservative theologians and exegetes of their day, including, Robert Dabney, James Thornwell and the great Charles Hodge of Princeton - fathers of twentieth century evangelicalism and of the modern expression of the doctrine of biblical inerrancy. No one can really appreciate how certain these evangelicals were that the Bible endorsed slavery, or of the vehemence of their argumentation unless something from their writings is read. I can only give a pale reflection of their righteous zeal for 'The Biblical case for slavery.' " ~ Kevin Giles, The Biblical Argument for Slavery: The Evangelical Quarterly, Vol. 66, no. 1, 1994, pp. 6, 7, their decision is based on Genesis 12:16, 24:35-36, Joshua 9:23, Exodus 20:17, Job 1:15-17; 3:19; 4:18; 7:2; 31:13; 42:8, 1 Kings 8:2,6, 1 Kings 9:20-21, and Leviticus 25:44-46.

Benjamin Franklin believed in a God, but not the existing religious institutions that professed the teachings of God and like so many of his fellow men who espoused the religious and political freedoms of man was a Mason.

In "Anderson's Constitutions," which was the handbook for English Freemasonry, Anderson enunciates the Masonic mandate for the "True Noahide" as expressed by the Prince of Masonry, Albert Mackey: "On 8 December 1730, Benjamin Franklin printed in his newspaper, The Pennsylvania Gazette, the first documented notice about Freemasonry in North America. Franklin's article, which consisted of a general account of Freemasonry, was prefaced by the statement that 'there are several Lodges of Free Masons erected in this Province'... Franklin himself became a Freemason in February 1731, and Provincial Grand Master of Pennsylvania in 1734. That same year, he ushered into print the first Freemasonic book to be published in America, and edition of Anderson's Constitutions... the Bible for English Freemasonry."

"It enunciates what were to become some of the now familiar and basic tenets of the Grand Lodge... [In] The first article... Anderson writes, 'Tis now thought more expedient only to oblige [Masons] to that Religion to which all men agree..." [Masons being of many religious beliefs]. "...A revision of the Old Charges contained this passage: 'A Mason is obliged by his tenure to obey the Moral Law.'

In the edition of 1738, Dr. Anderson has, without authority, completed the sentence by adding the words, 'As a true Noahide... The only religious laws, which a Freemason is required to obey are those, which are contained in the code that has been attributed to Noah. This sentiment is still further expressed toward the close of the 'Old Charges' where it is said that the Mason is obliged only 'to that religion in which all men agree,' excluding therefore atheism and requiring the observance of such simple laws of morality as are enjoined in the precepts of Noah."

A titular Presbyterian, he enjoyed the company of ministers, never attending church regularly, reserving the quiet of Sunday mornings for reading and research. He donated money to several churches that he deemed used the funds philanthropically, including for a while, Philadelphia's Synagogue.

AD1707-1788-Georges-Louis Leclerc, the Comte de Buffon, wrote a 36 Volume 'Natural History,' work that declared, modern animals had "Evolved," or "Degenerated," from other species back to the beginning of time and creation. He believed some changes were produced when different forms interbred while others are caused by adjustments to food, climate, pressure, etc.

The inspired Vicegerent of Yahveh, His Imminence, the Pope, forces Buffon to subscribe and swear to the following debasing formula of recantation, "I declare that I had no intention to contradict the text of scripture; that I most firmly believe all therein related about the creation, both as to order of time and the matter of facts. I abandon everything in my book respecting the formation of the earth, and generally all which may be contrary to the narrative of Moses," and his monumental 'Histoire Naturelle' of thirty-six volumes is put under the Anathema of the Holy Mother, the Church in its Holy Index of heretic material. Darwin is preceded by or perhaps influenced by this freethinker.

In the 21st century the superstitious tendencies of various religions still prevail in their attitudes towards cancer and stem cell research. If it isn't spelled out in their 'Holy Scriptures,' then God doesn't want it.

AD 1708-1781-Sir Francis Dashwood, English aristocrat, in the employ of Frederick, Prince of Wales, founder of the secret "Brotherhood of the Knights of Saint Francis," named after himself and not the Saint, the members meet for sexual orgies and allegedly to worship the Great Goddess at Medmenham Abbey near Marlow on the Thames.

Its thirteen members included amongst others, The Earl of Sandwich, Prince of Wales, and Marquis of Queensbury [known for his development of the rules of boxing or pugilism].

AD 1708-The End of the World is again predicted by the French Camisard Prophets.

AD 1709-The Convent at Port-Royal des-Champs is ordered razed to the ground by King Louis XIV with approval of Pope Clement XI for harboring Jansenian believers. King Louis XIV states: "I am the law," this is a declaration that is to be supported for centuries by the Jesuit Order which is accountable to no other than the Pope in Rome.

King Louis XIV, a man of gross appetites in food as well as in sex, a man so weak in self-control that, in defiance of his Church, he never made the least effort to keep within the bounds of decency in any respect, a man of mediocre intelligence and monstrous vanity, and whatever great work is assigned to him, was a man whose few accomplishments were performed by his two chief ministers, Colbert and Louvols [The magnificent Palaces at Versailles]

The Palace bears witness to his callousness towards the masses and of his egoism, for the funds were wrung cruelly from a vilely-treated and sometimes starving people. He held nothing but contempt for Paris, the capitol, and he rarely ventured into it because it was squalid, impoverished, smelled atrociously and its inhabitants were resentful of him. Louis XIV's most important, and lamentable, undertaking was that he was personally responsible for the revocation of the 'Edicts of Nantes'; the annulment of the Charter of Toleration of Protestants, an act which inflicted appalling suffering on the greater part of the nation and began the ruin of his country. ~For a detailed documentary of the repulsive times of Louis XIV, read the official police records for the time, the Archives of the Bastille, which verbatim records the trials, horrible tortures in the jails, and afford a unique picture of the criminality of the greatest city in Europe.

As to the moral value of the church, the life of Louis itself is most eloquent in an era which the Roman Church claims to have raised the ethics of society and ruled so benevolently. From the age of 16 to 45 King Louis had a succession of mistresses who were as well known as Pope John Paul II is today. And during all this time he had successive Jesuit confessors and none of them demanded the dismissal of any of his mistresses as their own theology required them to do.

At the age of 45 Louis fell under the influence of a lady, converted from her previous immoral life, now of strict virtue and piety. In view of his age, poor health, and the pace of his life it seems probable enough that Louis had lost his vigor. However that may be, Mme. de Maintenon and the Jesuits closed round him, foully persecuted the Huguenots, and in the end persuaded him to do penance for his sins by revoking their Charter of Freedom. With all his commerce in love-making King Louis left no son, and the Duke of Orleans became Regent, along with his licentious [and some say incestuous] daughter, joined by his debauched court favorite, Cardinal Dubois, who presided over the traditional orgies in the court.

"The open vices of Orleans and his daughter doubtless contributed to the lawlessness of society, but in the reliable memoirs [Saint Simon, etc.] the vilest stories relate not to Orleans but to others, and the example of the prince was followed by the dukes and by such of the nobility as came into contact with society and by lawyers and financiers." ~ The Cambridge History; vol. VI, 332.

What did the Pope Benedict XIV think of all this debauchery? He had appointed a Cardinal, of one of the vilest of the courtiers, Dubois, who was mediator in this immoral revelry. The distinguished jurist President de Brosses tells us in his Familiar Letters that on his visits to Rome he discovered that Pope Benedict XIV, accredited by many Catholics as the greatest Pope in two centuries, most eager for the latest lewd stories about the court and relished "Full of good stories about girls" in particular. Such is the history of France and Catholic influence, not to be found in most library shelves.

Father Hardouin says of the Acts of Martyrs, that it was necessary they should be written equally with the Ecclesiastical History and the Lives of Saints, so that it might appear that in every age of the Church the doctrine contained in the writings of the Fathers had been approved and handed down by Christianized Holy men, and that numberless martyrs had poured forth their blood in defence of the same.

researchers, that the Creation had several authors [The Book of Genesis, had several authors].

AD 1711-1776-Hume, David, Scottish historian and philosopher, influential in the development of "Skepticism" and "Empiricism," two major schools of philosophy.

Hume believed, "Reason can never show us the connection of one object with another, though aided by experience, and the observation of their conjunction in all past instances. When the mind, therefore, passes from the idea or impression of one object to the idea or belief of another, it is not determined by reason, but by certain principles, which associate together the ideas of these objects and unite them in the imagination."

Failing to obtain an appointment to the faculty of the University of Edinburgh, most likely due to his being regarded as a religious skeptic [doubting the major religious tenets of his time], Hume became tutor to the Marquis of Annandale and later, Judge Advocate to a British military expedition conducted in France.

His "Philosophical Essays Concerning Human Understanding," subsequently entitled, "An Enquiry Concerning Human Understanding," appeared in 1748. This book is a condensation of his work, "Treatise."

Hume served as Undersecretary of State in London, from 1767-68. David Hume was one of the few Scotchmen of his day who was not owned by the church. He had the manliness to examine historical and religious questions for himself, and the courage to give his conclusions to the world. He was a philosopher, and lived a calm and cheerful life, unstained by an unjust act, free from all excess, and devoted in a reasonable degree to benefiting his fellow-men.

After examining the Bible he became convinced that it was not true. For failing to suppress his real opinion, for failing to tell a deliberate falsehood, he brought upon himself the hatred of the church. Intellectual honesty is the sin against the Holy Ghost, and whether God will forgive this sin or not his church has not, and never will. Hume took the ground that a miracle could not be used as evidence until the fact that it had happened was established.

Adam Smith, author of the "Wealth of Nations," speaking of Hume in his last sickness, says that in the presence of death "his cheerfulness was so great, and his conversation and amusements ran so much in the usual strain, that, notwithstanding all his bad symptoms, many people could not believe he was dying." A few days before his death Hume said: "I am dying as fast as my enemies... If I have any... Could wish, and as easily and tranquilly as my best friends could desire."

On the 25th of August, 1776, the philosopher, the historian, the infidel, the honest man, and a benefactor of his race, in the composure born of a noble life, passed quietly and painlessly away. Dr Black wrote the following account of his death; "Monday, 26 August, 1776. 'Dear Sir: Yesterday, about four o'clock in the afternoon, Mr. Hume expired. The near approach of his death became evident on the evening between Thursday and Friday, when his disease became exhaustive, and soon weakened him so much that he could no longer rise from his bed. He continued to the last perfectly sensible, and free from much pain or feeling of distress. He never dropped the smallest expression of impatience; but when he had occasion to speak to the people about him, always did it with all affection and tenderness... When he became very weak, it cost him an effort to speak, and he died in such happy composure of mind that nothing could exceed it."

The Christian clergy took it for granted that this serene and placid man died filled with remorse for having given his real opinions, and proceeded to describe with every incident and detail of horror, the terrors of his last moments.

Brainless clergymen, incapable of understanding what Hume had written, knowing only in a general way that he had held their creeds in contempt, and answered his arguments by maligning his character. Christians took it for granted that he died in horror and recounted the terrible scenes.

When the facts of his death became generally known to intelligent men, the ministers redoubled their efforts to maintain the old calumnies, and most of them are in this employment even unto this day. Finding it impossible to tell enough falsehoods to hide the truth, a few of the more intelligent among the priests admitted that Hume not only died without showing any particular fear, but was guilty of unbecoming levity. The first charge was that he died like a coward; the next that he did not care enough, and went through the shadowy doors of the dread unknown with a smile upon his lips. The dying smile of David Hume scandalized the believers in a God of love.

They felt shocked to see a man dying without fear who denied the miracles of the Bible; who had spent a life investigating the opinions of men; in endeavoring to prove to the world that the right way is the best way; that happiness is a real and substantial good, and that virtue is not a termagant with sunken cheeks and hollow eyes. —from the works of Robert Green Ingersoll.

AD1712-1786-Emperor Frederick II of Prussia, Frederick the Great, Master Mason, and one of the great leaders in the Age of Enlightenment: In 1740, Voltaire, the philosopher and freethinker visits King Frederick's court to discuss the principles of the Enlightenment. Voltaire, initiated into the Lodge of the Nine Muses, and King Frederick were both Freemasons, Frederick having served as Grand Master and head of the Scottish Rite and helping secularize many of the institutions of Prussia during his reign. When the great French heretic Voltaire died, Frederick pronounced his eulogium before the Berlin Academy, denouncing "The imbecile priests."

By his own reports, except for one relationship, the artist was a lifelong unfulfilled masochist, dating from a school spanking when he was eleven years of age. In one of Rousseau's affairs, he had a Mistress who dominated him thoroughly, but even she refused to re-enact his desired spanking.

"The best destiny they can look for is that they and their vile artifices will remain forever buried in the darkness of oblivion, while the fame of Voltaire will increase from age to age, and transmit his name to immortality." ~Frederick the Great, Vol. VI, p. 694, edition, 1869.

AD1713-1784-Junipero Serra: beatified in 1988. Father Serra is known to have tortured Native Americans by the hundreds in order to convert them to Christianity.

Native Americans denounce his beatification across the United States and have provided documentation to show his treatment and attitude towards the indigenous peoples was not always so saintly. Beatification occurs when the Pope declares that this person is in Heaven.

Father Sierra is appointed "Head Inquisitor" of Sierra Gorda, Mexico in 1752. The natives revolt against the strict discipline of the early Christian fathers on November 4th, 1775.

Those who would not convert were beaten, locked up, and often starved into submission. Those who were fortunate enough escaped back into their native lands. Sierra believed in and practiced what he called, "Forced Residency."

In a letter to Governor Felipe de Neve in 1780, Father Sierra, who beat and starved the Native Americans into submission in accepting the Lord, Jesus the Christ, states, "...The natives of these parts will in the course of time, develop into useful vassals for our religion and for our State ..." ~Tibesar 1956: 407-415.

According to Christians, God, the Father, wrote a letter to his children, "The children have always differed somewhat as to the meaning of this letter. In consequence of these honest differences, these brothers began to cut out each other's hearts. In every land, where this letter from God has been read, the children to whom and for whom it was written have been filled with hatred and malice. They have imprisoned and murdered each other, and the wives and children of each other. In the name of God every possible crime has been committed, every conceivable outrage has been perpetrated. Brave men, tender and loving women, beautiful girls, and prattling babes have been exterminated in the name of Jesus Christ. For more than fifty generations the Church has carried the black flag. Her vengeance has been measured only by her power. During all these years of infamy no heretic has ever been forgiven. With the heart of a fiend she has hated; with the clutch of avarice she has grasped; with the jaws of a dragon she has devoured; pitiless as famine, merciless as fire, with the conscience of a serpent: such is the history of the Church of God." ~Heretics And Heretics, 1874, by Robert Green Ingersoll.

Rome, for centuries, has insisted that every man must be punished for his own sins, and that God cannot be satisfied without groans and pains, sighs and lacerations, blood and flesh, tortures of the body, and penances without number, on the part of the offender, however broken in heart, however contrite that offender may be.

Scripturally, this perverse demand for torture, on the part of those for whom Christ has allegedly granted a complete and perfect atonement, might seem exceedingly bizarre; but, looking at the real character of the God whom the Papacy has set up for the worship of its deluded devotees, there is nothing in the least strange about it, for that model of god is 'Moloch,' the 'God of Barbarity' and blood. Moloch, in the Old Testament, a deity at one period, is associated with Baal, was most likely a 'Sun-God,' but differing from Baal in being almost entirely malicious, the worship of Moloch embracing human sacrifices, ordeals by fire, and self-mutilation. ~See 2 Kings 23:10, Leviticus 18:21, 20:2, 1 Kings 11:7, Jeremiah 32:35.

At first Moloch was worshipped as the "revealer of goodness and truth," but eventually his worship was made to correspond with his dark and forbidding countenance and facial appearance. "First Moloch, horrid king, besmeared with blood of human sacrifice, and parents' tears, though, for the noise of drums and timbrels loud, their children's cries unheard, that passed through fire to his grim idol." ~Milton. Cf. Leviticus 18:21, 20:2-5; Jeremiah 32:35 and II Kings 23:10.

The early Christian Fathers denounce idolatry, "Begin, therefore, to cast out of your minds the vain ideas of idols, and your useless and empty fears, that at the same time you may also escape the condition of unrighteous bondage. For those have become your Lords, who could not even have been profitable servants to you. For how should lifeless images seem fit even to serve you, when they can neither hear, nor see, nor feel anything? Yea, even the material of which they are made, whether it be gold or silver, or even brass or wood, though it might have profited you for necessary uses, you have rendered wholly inefficient and useless by fashioning gods out of it. We therefore declare to you the true worship of God, and at the same time warn and exhort the worshipers, that by good deeds they imitate Him whom they worship, and hasten to return to His image and likeness, as we said before." ~The Recognitions of Clement, About the Recognitions and Homilies. 5.14, Idols Unprofitable.

Human victims were his most acceptable offerings; human groans and wailings were the sweet music to his ears; human tortures were believed to be delight to his heart, and his image bore, as the symbol of his "Majesty," a whip, and with whips his worshippers, at some of his festivals, were required unmercifully to scourge themselves. "After the ceremonies of sacrifice, the whole assembly, to the amount of many thousands, scourge themselves; but in whose honor they do this I am not at liberty to disclose." ~Herodotus on the Feast of Isis at Busiris in the worship of Moloch.

"Soon as they reach thy soundings, down at once they drop slack sails and all the naval gear. The ship is moored; nor do the crew presume to quit thy sacred limits, till they've passed a fearful penance; with the galling whip lashed thrice around thine altar." ~Callimachus in his Hymn to Delos.

When the priests of Baal contended with Elijah, to gain the favor of their god, and induce him to work the desired miracle in their behalf, "They cried aloud and cut themselves, after their manner, with knives and with lancets, till the blood gushed out upon them." ~The Two Babylones by Rev. Alexander Hislop.

AD 1713-Pasquier Quesnal is condemned by Pope Clement XI and Papal Bull, "Unigenitus" for his beliefs in Jansenism [Man's future is predestined and he has no contro]

AD 1713-Diderot was born in what may be called the humbler walks of life, being educated by the Jesuits, and was for several years almost a beggar in Paris. He was endeavoring to live by his pen, in that day and generation, a man without a patron, endeavoring to live by literature, was necessarily almost a beggar. He nearly starved, frequently going for days without food.

After ward, when he acquired means, he was as generous as the air. He wrote upon all conceivable subjects, that he might have bread and he even wrote sermons, and regretted it all his life. He and D'Alembert were the life and soul of the Encyclopedia, helping to gather the knowledge of the world for the use of each and all, which was unknowingly to be the downfall of the monarch and the Church in France [knowledge].

His motto was, "Incredulity is the first step towards philosophy."

He had the vices of most Christians and was almost as immoral as the majority of priests. His vices he shared in common, his virtues were his own. All who knew him united in saying that he had the pity of a woman, the generosity of a prince, the self-denial of an anchorite, the courage of Caesar, and the enthusiasm of a poet. He said what he thought and the priests hated him. He was in favor of universal education, which the church despised it.

He wished to put the knowledge of the whole world within reach of all. Every Catholic was his enemy and his desk was ransacked by the police searching for manuscripts in which something might be found that would justify the imprisonment of such a dangerous man. The knowledge given to the people was the impulse, the commencement, of the revolution that left the Church without an altar and the king without a throne.

Diderot thought for himself, and bravely gave his thoughts to others, and for this reason he was regarded as a criminal. He believed, "The more man ascends through the past, and the more he launches into the future, the greater he will be, and all these philosophers and ministers and truth-telling men who have fallen victims to the stupidity of nations, the atrocities of priests, the fury of tyrants, what consolation was left for them in death? Thus: That prejudice would pass, and that posterity would pour out the vial of ignominy upon their enemies. O Posterity! Holy and sacred stay of the unhappy and the oppressed; thou who art just, thou who art incorruptible, thou who findest the good man, who unmaskest the hypocrite, who breakest down the tyrant, may thy sure faith, thy consoling faith never, never abandon me!" ~from the works of Col. Robert Green Ingersoll.

The moment Diderot was dead, Catholic priests began painting and recounting the horrors of his expiring moments. They described him as overcome with remorse, as insane with fear; and these falsehoods have been repeated by the Protestant world, and will probably be repeated by thousands of ministers after we are dead.

The truth being, there were a few moments of perfect peace with his wife who said, "He is asleep." She enjoyed his repose, and breathed softly that he might not be disturbed. Yes, he was asleep. He had now become a part of the eternal silence.

AD1715-1771- Helvétius, Claude Adrien: French philosopher, freethinker, atheist, born in Paris, France, appointed 1738 to Farmer General, a post that involved the collection of the Royal Income, but resigned due to the corruption of his colleagues in office. Helvetius asserted that all human faculties, judgment, the power of comparison, and even memory, are mere attributes of a physical sensation; and the only motive of human activity is self-interest; that no choice exists between that of good and evil or right and wrong, and even self-sacrifice is but a choice between competitive pleasures.

Helvétius' work is condemned as an affront to public morals by the Theological Faculty of the Sorbonne, Paris, and is publicly burned in 1759. Helvétius refuted the doctrines of the French philosopher Jean Jacques Rousseau; it too was publicly burned.

He also wrote considerably on the subject of witchcraft.

AD 1717-The documented history of Craft Freemasonry begins. The Grand Lodge of England is nicknamed the "Grand Lodge of the Moderns," was founded on 24 June 1717 while the Grand Lodge of England, is named the "Grand Lodge of the Antients," was founded on 17 July 1751. They joined on 25 November 1813, laying to rest the claim that the Antients were schismatic when there was a lineage to the Grand Lodge of Ireland.

AD1717-The Philippines: a new governor arrives in Manila, Don Fernando Manuel de Bustamante. He quickly attempts to put a stop to corruptness in government and stealing from the public coffers by public officials, which is still quite prevalent in the islands 284 years later.

The Roman Catholic Friars however, deprived of their benefits and paybacks, and with the civil servants, support the plot to remove the governor and protect the public officials. The officials seek sanctuary in the churches and the governor orders the Archbishop Geronimo de la Cuesta to surrender the officials. He refuses and the governor orders the Archbishop arrested and taken to Fort Santiago where he is imprisoned. The corrupt Friars, defiant of political rules, protest by ringing of the bells in all the churches in Intramuros, Manila. The Friars give weapons, blessings, and promises of monetary rewards to their parishioners whom they send to the governor's palace armed to do battle. The governor is killed and the Archbishop is released from prison. By custom, the Archbishop, is now the new governor-general.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

The Church proclaims to be a religious organization, but the fact remains that it is a 'Socio-political-religious' organization which supports the rich and the infamous worldwide. This is reflected in its efforts during the "EDSA" situation in Manila that helped to establish Cory Aquino as President of the Philippines in the 20th century, toppling a corrupt government; sometimes the Church does good. It flexes its muscles only after there is considerable possibility of its being on the side of the majority. The Church has not spoken out against any ill-gotten wealth of previous tyrannical leaders or despots worldwide.

AD1717-Official launching of the London Grand Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons: This United Grand Lodge, using Dr. John Anderson's "Constitution" to standardize the rituals and practices of Freemasonry, also establishes the Masonic story of Hiram Abiff, King Solomon's Master Builder, along with the pyramid style organizational model.

Dr. Anderson further stipulates in his constitution that, "A Mason is obliged, by his tenure, to obey the Moral Law: and if he rightly understands the Art, he will never be a stupid atheist nor an irreligious libertine..." A conflict is encountered in some of the Masonic brothers, calling themselves "Ancients" refusing to acknowledge the regency of the Grand Lodge. The various lodges having become established as "Gentlemen" organizations, with some lodges having kings, and other members of nobility as members. Masons are charged with homosexuality, sodomy and debauchery by Church Officials in an effort to curtail further membership into an organization whose members are known to make secret compacts, have knowledge of other members through special handshakes and signs, and refuse to acknowledge the Roman Catholic Church as the Supreme Authority Appointed by God.

AD1718-Catholic English version of New Testament by Dr. Nary is much less cumbersome than Catholic Reims-Douay.

AD1719-Persecution of Masons continues and manuscripts, ledgers, and other valuable documents are destroyed to prevent them from falling into the wrong hands [religious as well as political authorities controlled by the Mother Church].

AD1721-1791-Korea, An Chôngbok, writes of his conversation with a Catholic in 1790. An viewed the Christian rejection of the world as a selfish act that is a force for disorder.

In his opinion, it destroys any concern for the common good, as well as the bonds of obligation between subject and ruler. "Someone said to me, 'These European priests live celibate lives, and that is more than virtuous Chinese scholars are capable of. Moreover, the breadth and depth of their knowledge make them truly exceptional men. They are able to map the heavens, calculate calendars, and make such useful items as a cannon that can pierce the nine layers of Heaven and has a range of 80 ri... These Europeans are also able to circumnavigate the globe. When they enter a strange country, they are able to speak and read that country's language after just a short while. And their astronomical calculations are accurate in every particular. They truly are sagelike men. Since they are sagely, then how can you not trust them?'"

I reply, "What you say may be true, but let's look at where they come from. Europe lies at the foot of the Kunlun mountains. Therefore the climate is invigorating, the people are unusually sturdy and tall, and there is an abundance of natural resources there. It is like the abdomen in the human body—the blood collects there to drink and dine and then goes back to serving as the foundation of human life. China, on the other hand, is in the southeast corner of the world. The sun's light is concentrated there. As a result those who are born with an endowment of the material force of that place are sagely men such as Yao, Shun, ... The Duke of Zhou, and Confucius. China is like the heart in man's chest, which is the site of intelligence and out of which the myriad transformations come. If you look at it this way, then you can see why the sagely learning of China is sound but the 'heavenly learning' of Europe, though there are some who call it the true way and a sagely teaching, is not what I call sagely teaching."...

My questioner continued, "Jesus is the name of the Messiah, the savior of the world. He was just like the sages in that he wanted to promote moral behavior. There is no difference."

I responded, "How can you say that? When Jesus worked on 'Saving the World,' he focused on a world after this one. He tantalized people with promises of heaven if they did good and threatened people with Hell if they did evil. In promoting moral behavior, the sages, however, focus on this world. They illuminate virtue and revitalize the people in order to educate and transform them. Jesus encouraged selfishness and the sages foster selflessness. Therein lies a difference. If what the Westerners say is true and there really is a Heaven and a Hell, then those who do good and avoid evil in this life will go to Heaven anyway, and those who are not virtuous and who act improperly will end up in Hell anyway after they die. In the meantime, people should simply continue to do what is right and not turn their backs on the moral nature Heaven has given them. They should not pay the slightest attention to the possibility of some reward in the next life for what they do in this life. Master Ch'eng said that Buddhists seek escape from the never-ending cycle of birth, death, and Rebirth only because that is in their own self-interest. Don't the prayers of Catholics to avoid Hell also represent their pursuit of individual self-interest?" ...He continues, "These Europeans warn us about the three enemies of man. The first is our own body. The sensations of sound and sight, of taste and smell, along with our tendencies toward lust, laziness, and licentiousness, quietly weaken us internally. Our second enemy, according to them, is the mundane world. Through the lure of wealth, fame, amusements, and frivolities, it openly attacks us from the outside. The third enemy of man is the Devil. He uses our own pride as well as external allurements to bewitch and confuse us and attacks us both internally and externally. How can you not agree with this? Doesn't this make a lot of sense?"

I answer, "You have really been deluded. This notion that our body is our enemy is a terrible perversion of morality. It is true that because we have bodies we are beset with desires of the flesh. That is why we Confucians stress the need for self-control. But where do you think your body comes from? We get our bodies from our parents. So, if our bodies are our enemies, then our parents who gave us those bodies must be our enemies as well!" ~From Catholicism in Korea, Microsoft Encarta Encyclopedia, 1993-1997, Microsoft Corporation, Translated by: Donald Baker, Source: Lee, Peter H., ed. Sourcebook of Korean Tradition. In 1864 the Taewōn'Gun, meaning the "Grand Prince," seizes power, outlaws Christianity, and seeks to curb all foreign contact.

A major vampire scare occurs in Eastern Europe, and government officials frequently got dragged into the hunting and staking of vampires, which started with an outbreak of alleged vampire attacks in East Prussia in 1721 and in the Habsburg Monarchy from 1725 to 1734. Two famous cases involved Peter Plogojowitz and Arnold Paole. Plogojowitz died at the age of 62, but came back to life a couple of times after his death asking his son for food, and when the son refused, the son was found dead the next day. Plogojowitz returned and attacked his neighbours who then died from loss of blood.

AD 1723-Dr. James Anderson, minister of the Church of Scotland, publishes his "Book of Constitutions" a work on Masonic ritual.

AD 1724-1804-Kant, Immanuel, German philosopher, professor, considered to be one of the most influential thinkers of modern times, Kant's unorthodox religious teachings, are based on rationalism versus revelation, and this brings him into direct conflict with the King of Prussia. In 1792, Kant is forbidden, by Frederick William II, King of Prussia, to teach or write on any religious subjects.

Kant obeys this order until the death of the king [five years later], and then felt released from this obligation. In his work, "Metaphysics of Ethics," published in 1797, Kant describes his ethical system, based on a belief that reason is the final authority for morality.

"Act as if the maxim of your action were to become through your will a general natural law."

The basis of modern Agnosticism lies in the works of the British philosopher David Hume and the German philosopher Immanuel Kant. Both men pointed out the logical fallacies in the traditional arguments for the existence of God and of the soul, which led to their chastisement by Church authorities, the Church claiming that God cannot be revealed through logic alone.

"Demonstration and refutation together with their fallacies are useful in arguing with others; and perception and inference together with their fallacies are useful for self-understanding." ~Dignaga, India, about 550 C.E.

scholar, linguist [conversant in Greek, Latin, Sanskrit, Arabic, Chinese, French, English, Italian, Portuguese, and Spanish] ambidextrous, French archeologist, and Egyptologist, known as “the man who does not die,” member of the Illuminati, claims to have found the secret to eternal youth and to have in his possession the magical staff, which Moses used to bring water from the rock, and have direct knowledge of the “Philosopher’s Stone,” used to create gold. The original goal of the Illuminati [considered a Satanic organization] was “To control the minds of European leaders through hypnosis, witchcraft, and mind control.” ~Satanic Bible.

St. Germain proclaims that the symbols on Tarot cards are the last vestiges of an ancient Egyptian religious cult. Intelligence that is exploited by sheer audacity in courts throughout Europe, he masquerades as the Marquis de Montferat, Signor Gauldi, Count Hompesch [last Grand Master of the Knights of Malta], Chevalier Weldon at Milan and Leipzig and others.

His most noted work is “La Très Sainte Trinosophie,” Manuscript No. 2400 in the French Library at Troyes, allegedly containing magical symbols and Egyptian hieroglyphics and a nine volume work, “Le Monde Primitif” published from 1775-1784.

AD1725-A Masonic Lodge is established in Paris, and in the minds of the ruling Bourbons, the “Doctrine of Religious and Intellectual Tolerance” is considered inherently subversive.

In 1737, King Louis XV issues an edict that loyal subjects cannot belong to any Masonic Order. King Louis XV found amusement in causing the arrest of ecclesiastics caught frequenting local brothels, and it did not take long to secure the arrest of several hundred.

The mere secrecy of the order, with its historical lore, awe-inspiring symbolism, and belief in the independence of man, is considered fertile soil for imaginative diatribe and invectives. Printed works bearing titles such as, “The Grand Mystery of the Freemasons Discovered,” are soon circulated in the streets of Paris, France.

“Freemasons who have lately been suppressed not only in France, but in Holland ‘were a dangerous race of Men.’” ~From a popular English journal, The Gentleman’s Magazine.

Freemasons believe in the rights of men to choose their religion as well as to choose in their governance, which is denied under the monarchial system.

Louis XV would amuse himself by causing the arrest of all ecclesiastics caught frequenting brothels, and it never took long to secure several hundred. At one time in Spain the number of bastard children of the priests almost equaled the number of children of the laity! ~See The Ten Commandments by Joseph Lewis.

AD1730-British Roman Catholics have a condescending attitude toward Roman Catholic Church authority detesting interference in their stately affairs. The Duke of Norfolk is proclaimed Grandmaster of the Premier Grand Lodge of England.

A previous Duke of Norfolk, on 29 August, 1541, sentences, with appalling consequences, Dereham and Culpepper, both former members in good standing with the King, now charged with “Presumptive Treason,” to be drawn on hurdles, hanged, cut down alive, disemboweled, and, while still alive, have their bowels burned before their eyes, then to be beheaded, and drawn and quartered... All for allegedly being intimate with the Queen of England.

The birth of Baron Freidrich von Steuben, who is an aid to Frederick the Great, in charge of training the Prussian army until there were strong objections to his “Indecent liberties” with the young men. The Baron then offers his services to the Continental Army, in America, and joins forces with General George Washington at Valley Forge where he organizes and disciplines the Colonialists into a powerful striking force. Upon retirement, he adopts two handsome young men to become his heirs, and most likely continued to train and discipline them.

AD1730-1731-Religious Influence: Three hundred prosecutions result and seventy citizens, including boys as young as fourteen are executed upon authorities discovering an extensive homosexual network in Amsterdam..

AD1730-Samuel Pritchard publishes an alleged expose on the brotherhood entitled, “Masonry Dissected.” He asserts that the oath and obligation involves evil and sinister obligations. Word spreads quickly amongst the enemies of Masonry since being a secret organization, only the members know of the oaths they take and are obliged not to reveal it.

It is regrettable that so many religious institutions have sought to stigmatize [rather than attempt to understand] that which they do not know and have acted merely on say so [rumors]. This will lead to a subliminal religious hatred, which will carry on into the 21st century.

Masonry has been declared, at one time or another, a threat to major organized religions, although one cannot become a Mason unless one believes in God, it is never the less a threat to the Church [Masons are of various religions], and a threat to the family [although Masons practice what they preach by instilling in their members a strong belief in the family institution].

November 6th, the future Frederick the Great of Prussia, 18, is compelled by his father to watch the pain of being tortured and eventual beheading of his lover, Lt. Hans Hermann von Katte, after the two of them are caught trying to flee together. Later as king, on learning that a particularly well-endowed soldier had been arrested for "Bestiality with his horse," the young Frederick is reputed to have replied, "Fool! Don't put him in irons; put him in the infantry." ~Leather History Timeline, <http://www.leatherarchives.org/exhibits/deblase/timeline1.htm>

"One of the greatest delusions in the world is the hope that the evils in this world are to be cured by legislation." ~Thomas B. Reed, 1886.

AD 1731- Wickliffe's New Testament is printed without Church approval.

AD 1733-1804- Priestley, Joseph, British chemist, experimenter, religious free thinker, who isolated and described several gases, including oxygen, and is considered one of the founders of modern chemistry due to his contributions to experimentation.

His experimental work resulted in his election to the French Academy of Sciences in 1772, the same year he is employed by William Petty Fitzmaurice, 2nd Earl of Shelburne, as librarian and literary companion. In AD 1780 Priestley leaves his position with Petty because of their religious differences. He turns to Unitarian [One God and renouncing belief in the Trinity] thinking, and is considered a religious radical. His book, "History of the Corruptions of Christianity," 1782, is of course, officially banned in 1785, by the Roman Catholic Church, for revealing the truth, which the Church prefers hidden away from all eyes of its members [hence the Forbidden Index].

AD 1734-The End of the World is predicted on this date by Cardinal Nicolas of Cusa. A German Cardinal, scholar, mathematician, scientist, and philosopher, in 1433, he wrote in defense of the Conciliar Theory that asserted the supremacy of Church Councils over that of the Pope.

Oxford English Dictionary records the folkloric use of vampire in English from 1734 and the zoological not until 1774. It wasn't long before vampire bats were adapted into fictional tales, and they have become one of the more important vampire associations in popular culture. ~John 6:54. cf. Vlad the Impaler [Dracula].

AD 1735-The Dutch Masonic Lodges are officially banned by the government with the approval of the Roman Catholic Church.

AD 1736-End of the World: American colonist preacher, Cotton Mather's third Doomsday prediction.

In Europe, British theologian and mathematician William Whitson predicts a Great Flood similar to Noah's for October 13th of this year.

AD 1736-1812-Tooke, John Horne, M.A., British reformer. His father put him in the ministry of the Church of England but he was a freethinker and soon threw off his cassock and regretted, as he said, that he had had "The infectious hands of a Bishop waved over him." He was a prominent figure in the fight for freedom and democracy, and was often prosecuted.

In 1777 he is sentenced to a fine of $1,000 and a year in prison for defending the American Colonists, and in 1794 he is charged with high treason for defending the French Revolution. He was a notorious Deist but under British Law at that time a clergyman could not divest himself of his orders and he was excluded from the bar, of which he qualified, and Parliament, on the ground that he was a clergyman.

AD 1736-Across the Atlantic Ocean, Londoners prepare for a Doomsday Flood, predicted by William Whitson, and gather in boats on the River Thames.

AD 1737-Andrew Michael Ramsey, the tutor of Bonnie Prince Charlie, a Knight of the Order of Saint Lazarus, declares that this Order is descended from the Crusader Knights [The Knights Templar are still anathema in France] and the Order originated from the mystery schools of the goddesses Isis, Diana, and Minerva.

This hint at being a carry over from the Crusading Knights may well be the reason Pope Clement issues his

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

Papal Denunciation a year later against Masonry.

AD 1738-Pope Clement XII issues the first, of many, "Papal Denunciations of Free Masonry" that the Church interprets as a rival religion. Catholics initiated into the craft are ordered Excommunicated. The "Oath of Secrecy" taken during the initiation rites is viewed as a threat to the sanctity of the authority of the Church and the confessional.

"For the sake of the peace and safety of civil governments, and spiritual safety of souls, and to prevent these men from plundering the House like thieves, laying waste the Vineyard like wolves, perverting the minds of the incautious and shooting down innocent people from their hiding places... No Catholic is to be a Freemason."

I must admit that Freemasons, as believers in the sanctity of individual rights and freethinkers, are a threat to any authoritarian regime, which attempts to limit the religious rights as well as god given human rights of any individuals.

"The first warning of the danger [Freemasonry] was given by Pope Clement XII in the year 1738, and his constitution was confirmed and renewed by Pope Benedict XIV. Pope Pius VII followed the same path; and Pope Leo XII, by his apostolic constitution, Quo Graviores, put together the acts and decrees of former Pontiffs on this subject, and ratified and confirmed them forever. In the same sense spoke Pope Pius VIII, Pope Gregory XVI, and, many times over, Pope Pius IX." ~from the Catholic Encyclopedia.

AD 1738-It is alleged that Rev. James Anderson is the author of, "The New Book of Constitutions of the Most Ancient and Honorable Fraternity of Free & Accepted Masons," and also, "The Euclid." The name of Masonry, and its mysteries, are further slandered by religious authorities and the Church uses this information to further endorse its banishment on this order. Masons, who promote the brotherhood of men under the fatherhood of God, are penalized and tortured. A ban is imposed on the Swedish Masonic Lodges in 1738 and in Switzerland in 1745.

In Conrad Goeringer's Part I of "The Enlightenment," Goeringer states, "Eleven other Popes would condemn Freemasonry in the most vitriolic language possible. Pope Leo XII lamented the fact that Christian princes and heads of state had not fully obeyed the Vatican in suppressing Masonry, 'As the safety of both Church and State required,' in the words of one Jesuit writer."

The Masons, adherents to free will and free choice, refuse to force Catholicism upon their membership as the one and only true faith and are further challenged by the Church, Pope Pius VIII declared of the Masons that, "Lying is their rule, Satan is their God, and shameful deeds their sacrifice...." Pope Gregory XVI wrote that Masons and kindred secret brethren were comparable to a sewer in which "Are congregated and intermingled all of the sacrileges, infamy and blasphemy, which are contained in the most abominable heresies."

Pope Pius IX, outdoing his papal predecessors, also condemns Masonry in six separate bulls between 1846 and 1873, denouncing, "Those baneful secret sects who have come forth from the darkness for the ruin and devastation of Church and State...." ~www.Bank of Wisdom.com

Fortunately or unfortunately for the Church, as the case may be, it is not Freemasonry, but the Church itself which has been its own undoing in attempting to impose its will upon those who are not receptive to their do not think policy.

Quick to blame others for its shortcomings in graft, corruption, and immorality, the Church has not changed, clinging to a superstitious religious doctrine founded centuries ago, and refusing to clean up the corruption that permeates the Vatican itself with cover-ups and money laundering continuing well into the 20th century [see the Vatican Bank scandals and lawsuit filed in AD 2000].

AD 1738-Pope Clement XII issues "In Eminenti," on 28 April: this constitution being the first public written attack by the Papacy against Masonry. Pope Clement forbids Masonic membership by Catholics and directs the "Inquisitors of Heretical Depravity" to take such action against Catholics who become Masons or assist in Freemasonry in any way.

Excommunication is ordered as punishment for those who defiantly defy this ban. The Church objects to Masonry being:

† Open to men of all religions.

- † Oaths are taken.
- † Masons deny clerical authority.
- † Masons meet in secret.

In the early 20th century the former Benedictine monk, Joseph McCabe states: “The laws of the Church are not binding in conscience, unless they are issued by the civil power. The acts and decrees of the Roman Pontiffs concerning religion and the Church need the sanction and approval, or at least the consent of the civil power. The Apostolic Constitutions, which condemn secret societies, whether or not they require an oath of secrecy, and punish their members and promoters with an anathema, have no force in those parts of the world where such societies are allowed by the civil government”

“The excommunication passed by the Council of Trent and the Roman Pontiff, against those who invade or seize the property of the Church, is based upon a confusion of the spiritual and the civic, or political order, and the protection of worldly-goods. The Church must not pass any decree that may coerce the consciences of the faithful in questions of the use of secular property. The Church has no right to punish transgressors of its laws with material penalties; that it is in harmony with the principles of sacred theology and public law for the civil authority to take over the ownership of property taken from the Church.” ~Fr. Joseph McCabe.

AD 1740-58-Pope Benedict XIV issues a Papal bull denouncing the Free Masons and excommunicating their members. Free Masons and freethinkers; refuse to acknowledge the Roman Catholic Church as the supreme representative and authority of God [as well as Divine Rex-the Divine Right of Kings]. Freethinkers can be deists [believe in a God] but, that is not enough for the Church Authorities, it is the Church's position that Freethinkers are those people who have abandoned religious truths of the Church [Roman Catholic].

The Church can continually change its doctrine, which is founded upon unfettered private judgments declared years ago by clergy who could neither read nor write and in this modern era the Church is attempting to reconcile that which is now obsolete and contradictory to their new doctrinal policy. Freethinkers are merely those individuals who refuse to bow down to the tyrannical and the oppressive religious leaders in their alleged pursuit of religious freedom and truth.

China enacts sodomy laws by the Manchu Qing regime, which outlaws male homosexuality.

AD 1743-1795-The Comte di Alessandro Cagliostro is known for being an Italian hypnotist, fortune-teller, swindler, and charlatan. He becomes interested in Freemasonry and is said to have founded the contemporary “Egyptian Masonic Rite,” Co-Masonry of which women may join. The Duchess of Bourbon presided as Grand Mistress in the “Grand Orient of France” in 1775.

These Masonic Lodges are established by the “Rite of Mizraim,” and accept both men and women members by 1819. Cagliostro initiates many scams, many that are revealed and glossed over as antics and although many of his scams are discovered and revealed, he remains popular in the court of King Louis XVI of France. In 1789 the Inquisition does not accept his cavalier ways, practicing Masonic rituals, and nonchalant antics and declares him a heretic of the Church and condemns him to death. He is imprisoned at the Castle of San Leo near Montefeltro. His sentence being commuted to a life sentence, he eventually dies in prison.

His volume of “La Très Sainte Trinosophie” by the Comte de St. Germain is confiscated [and most likely destroyed by Church Authorities] Cagliostro's memoirs mention an initiation into the “Order of Knights Templars” officiated by the Comte de Saint Germain. Founder of a contemporary group called the “Egyptian Lodge.”

During this same period, Baron von Hund, Alten-Grotkau, and Karl Gotthelf claim to have been initiated into a Masonic Order of the Temple known as “Strict Templar Observance,” known in Germany as “The Brethren of John the Baptist.” Some claim that this organization along with its alleged historical ties to the Scottish Templars, are false. The suspected names of past Grand Masters list is identical to that submitted by the “Priory of Sion” organization.

AD 1743-1826-Thomas Jefferson, fourth President of the United States, writes what is to be known as, “The Jefferson Bible,” which is composed of Matthew, Mark, and Luke. Thomas Jefferson, a Deist, deletes all the supernatural from the three Gospels.

"To say that the human soul, angels, God, are immaterial is to say they are nothings, or that there is no God, no angels, no soul. I cannot reason otherwise. At what age of the Christian Church this heresy of immaterialism or masked atheism crept in... I do not exactly know... But a heresy it certainly is. Jesus taught nothing of it." "The day will come when the mystical generation of Jesus by the Supreme Being as his father, in the womb of a virgin, will be classed with the fable of the generation of Minerva in the brain of Jupiter." ~Thomas Jefferson, declared a Christian by tele-evangelists who claim that our Founding Fathers were Christian and founded a Christian nation.

"Where the preamble declares, that coercion is a departure from the plan of the Holy author of our religion, an amendment was proposed, by inserting the word 'Jesus Christ,' so that it should read, 'A departure from the plan of Jesus Christ, the holy author of our religion;,' the insertion was rejected by a great majority, in proof that they meant to comprehend, within the mantle of its protection, the Jew, and the Gentile, the Christian, and the Mahometan, the Hindu, and Infidel of every denomination." ~Thomas Jefferson. Jefferson duplicates much of the "Declaration of Independence" from the "Mechlenburg Declaration," written by Calvinistic Presbyterians of North Carolina, when they seceded the County of Mechlenburg, from the Colonies. ~From the works of D. James Kennedy.

"Question with boldness even the existence of a God; because, if there be one, he must more approve of the homage of reason than that of blindfolded fear." ~Thomas Jefferson 1787.

Today, in this so called age of 'Enlightenment,' few will read or learn of Thomas Jefferson as the strong advocate for the rights of the individual over those of the institution, especially the religious type. Jefferson, who wrote many deriding passages on the "Priest-craft," or the Jefferson who was denounced as a "Howling atheist," and the Jefferson whose famous vow of "Eternal hostility against every form of tyranny over the mind of man," which is now engraved upon his memorial in Washington, was written specifically towards the clergy. ~Breaking the Last Taboo by James A. Haught.

Many of the first Europeans to arrive on American shores were religious dissenters who sought freedom to worship. Many of these people believed they were establishing some type of Christian utopia, and many supported religious liberty only for themselves and their specific religious sects.

The early colonies were in effect, mini- theocracies, where only those who worshipped according to the proclaimed state orthodoxy were welcome, and all others persecuted for not accepting the beliefs of the majority. Following the American Revolution, political leaders began to construct the new American government. A minority still clung to the European notions of church/state union, but a general consensus emerged that the new country should steer clear of officially established religion since it did not work in Europe and many were afraid of a particular faith attempting to control government [as in the Roman Church via the Jesuits].

The states with government favored religions gradually began moving toward separation of church and state, and Massachusetts, the last state to maintain an official religion, disestablished its state church in 1833. If a Christian republic had been the goal of the framers, that sentiment would have been included in the Constitution. ~On the First Amendment, read John M. Swomley's 1987 book, Religious Liberty and the Secular State.

The burden of a Church should not be the burden of the taxpayer; "Is a church too small and too poor to pay taxes? That means that not enough people want the church seriously enough to pay for its upkeep. Then, why should such a church exist? Why should atheists, agnostics and non-churchgoers be forced to maintain such a useless, unwanted church by granting it tax exemption?" ~E. Haldeman-Julius, The Church Is a Burden, Not a Benefit, In Social Life.

During the Constitutional Convention, a religious minority faction favored some recognition of Christianity in the American Constitution. "The book, called the Bible, is filled with passages equally horrible, unjust and atrocious. This is the book to be read in schools in order to make our children loving, kind and gentle! This is the book they wish to be recognized in our Constitution as the source of all authority and justice!" ~Robert G. Ingersoll, The Gods, 1872.

In a report to Maryland lawmakers, delegate Luther Martin asserted that, "In a Christian country, it would be at least decent to hold out some distinction between the professors of Christianity and downright infidelity or Paganism."

His views were rejected, and the Constitution was adopted as a secular document, without the incorporation of God or mention of Christianity. The early founders did not intend for the new government to be

Christian, and this is found in the Treaty of Tripoli, a trade agreement signed between the United States and the Muslim region of north Africa in 1797, after negotiations under George Washington. The document, approved by the Senate under John Adams, states, "The Government of the United States is not, in any sense, founded on the Christian religion..."

The framers wrote the Constitution as a secular document not because they were hostile to Christianity but because they did not want to imply that the new federal government would have any authority to meddle in religion, creed, or sect, and vice-versa. Jefferson swore his hostility to "Every form of tyranny over the mind of man."

Thomas Jefferson is acclaimed for his achievement at a convention where his bill to establish religious freedom and to ensure the separation of church and state is introduced. The bill, introduced in 1779, guaranteed, "That no man shall be compelled to frequent or support any religious worship, place or ministry whatsoever."

It guarantees, too, that no one should suffer in any way for his "Religious opinions or belief," became effective in 1786. In an 1802 letter to the Danbury Baptist Association of Connecticut, Thomas Jefferson, then President, declared that the American people through the First Amendment has erected a, "Wall of separation between Church and State."

The colonial religious liberty pioneer Roger Williams had used a similar phrase, 150 years earlier. James Madison, considered to be the Father of the Constitution, said in an 1819 letter, "The number, the industry and the morality of the priesthood, and the devotion of the people have been manifestly increased by the total separation of the church and state." In an earlier, undated essay, Madison wrote, "Strongly guarded... Is the separation between religion and government in the Constitution of the United States." Both Thomas Jefferson and James Madison held an expansive view of the First Amendment rights, arguing that the church/state separation would protect both religion and government. Jefferson believed that no worthy religion would seek the power of the state to coerce its beliefs.

In his notes he argued that disestablishment would strengthen religion, holding that it would "Oblige its ministers to be industrious [and] exemplary." The state likewise was degraded by an established faith, Jefferson asserted, because establishment made it a partner in a system based on bribery of religion. ~Read Under God, by Garry Wills.

"To penetrate and dissipate these clouds of darkness, the general mind must be strengthened by education." ~Thomas Jefferson.

In the court's 1947, "Everson v. Board of Education," decision, Justice Hugo Black wrote, "In the words of Jefferson, the clause against establishment of religion by law was intended to erect 'a wall of separation between Church and State.'"

It is only in recent times that this separation has come under attack by judges in the federal court system who 'oppose' separation of church and state, under the guise of religious morality.

AD1744-1829- Jean-Baptiste Lamarck, maintained that plants and animals evolved because of their innate tendency to progress from simple to complex forms [predates Darwinian theory].

AD1746-Dom Augustine Calmet, a well-respected French theologian, and scholar, puts together a treatise, which was at least ambiguous concerning the existence of vampires, if not admitting it explicitly. He amassed numerous reports of vampire incidents and an abundance of readers, including both a critical Voltaire and supportive demonologists, interpreted the treatise as claiming that vampires do exist. The Empress Maria Theresa of Austria sent her personal physician, Gerhard van Swieten, to investigate the matter, concluding that vampires do not exist, and the Empress passed laws prohibiting the opening of graves and the desecration of bodies. ~John 6:54. cf. Vlad the Impaler [Dracula].

AD1747-1766-Barre, Chevalier de La, Freethinking and martyr, Chevalier was accused of not bowing to a religious procession, singing an "Ungodly" song, and possessing books contrary to the Catholic religion, including the "Dictionary of Philosophy," by Voltaire.

He was tortured, and then beheaded at the tender age of 19 by request of the Catholic Church. A monument to him was erected in Abbeville France on July 7, 1907 and is inscribed the particulars.

"In commemoration of Martyr Chevalier de la Barre murdered in Abbyville the first of July, 1766

To Pope Pius XII. "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

AD 1749-1806- Fox, The Right Honorable Charles James, one of the most eminent of British statesmen. He rose to the position of Lord of the Treasury and Foreign Secretary but was chiefly remarkable for the consistent use of his brilliant oratory on the side of reform in an evil and corrupt age. He defiantly wore the colors of the Americans in the House of Commons during the War of Independence, and opposed the fighting, greeted the fall of the Bastille as "One of the greatest and best events in history," and denounced slavery. He was no ascetic but a man of much culture, Gibbon says, "Perhaps no human being was ever more perfectly exempt from the taint of malevolence, vanity, or falsehood."

Lord Holland, his nephew, says that he was "No believer in religion" and, although he allowed his wife to have prayers when he was dying, he took no notice and said that he "Did not like to pretend any sentiments he did not entertain" ~See Greville's Memoirs, IV, p. 159.

AD 1749-The last documented trial for witchcraft in Germany.

The birth of King Christian VII of Denmark, whose physician assigns him a sadistic male lover who beat him regularly.

AD 1749-1791- Mirabeau, Count Honore Gabriel Victor Riquetti, French statesman. He was the leader of the French Revolution in its first stage, having energetically attacked the despotism of the throne for many years. He died too soon for the trying days of the later Revolution.

He is usually classed as a Deist but Carlyle tells in his French Revolution that when he was dying he said, pointing to the sun, "If that isn't God it is at least his Cousin." He rejects the idea of immortality and seems rather to have been an atheist. ~From the Works of J. McCabe.

AD 1750-1831- Girard, Stephen, philanthropist and freethinker. A wealthy ship owner of Philadelphia who left nearly all his money, or $7,500,000, which is said to have been the largest fortune made to that date in America. He was a man of great integrity and moral character and had begun as a poor working boy to charity. Most of it, $5,260,000 was to be used in building and endowing a super orphanage, being a Deist, he stipulated that no ecclesiastic should ever set foot in it except as a visitor. Girard's Christian heirs contested the will in 1836, and in 1844 famous legal orator Daniel Webster argued for the heirs before the U.S. Supreme Court, making a famous plea for Christianity. The Court upheld the will, and the school was organized.

The estate, which is now worth $90,000,000 is, of course eventually brought under the influence of the clergy; ironically, one of whose favorite arguments is that freethinkers never founded any charitable institutions.

Richard Challoner, a Roman Catholic Bishop in England, publishes his version of the Rheims-Douay Bible in 1750. The Holy Bible is translated from the Latin Vulgate: diligently compared with the Hebrew, Greek, and other editions in divers languages, and first published by the English College at Doway, Anno 1609: newly revised, and corrected, according to the Clementin edition of the Scriptures: with annotations for clearing up the principal difficulties of the Holy Writ was published in Dublin.

A new revision published in 1763-1764 becomes the basis for almost all the later editions of the Rheims-Douay Bible. Challoner's version differs substantially from the original Rheims-Douay Bible. Many of the original notes are removed, and the text is selfishly changed in many places to support new Catholic doctrines. The Challoner Version remains the standard Catholic Bible until publication of the Confraternity Version in 1941.

AD 1750- The Age of Reason spreads across Europe, resulting in the emergence from centuries of religious darkness and ignorance into a new age enlightened by rationalism, science, and a respect for humanity.

A forged "Book of Jasher" is published by an individual who claims to be alive and alleges that this work is a history of the fabrications of Jasher taken from a Hebrew translation. Another fabrication is published in 1829 making similar claims. The Jews kept records of daily transactions and wrote of occurrences in the community. Jasher is such an account of the annals of Jewish history.

Referring to Jasher, Josephus writes, "...Records kept in some safe place on purpose..." the Jews having written these manuscripts took them with them in their travels and banishments by the Romans for safe keeping.

Few historians during this era can testify as to what occurred, and "Despite all discrepancies, ambiguities, contradictions and plain mistakes, the fact remains that Josephus was a highly reliable witness, not only with respect to events in Palestine and Jerusalem of his own time, but also, though to a somewhat lesser extent, with regard to earlier times, for which he depended on available traditional sources. In sum, despite ambiguities and exaggerations, his is the most comprehensive surviving account in existence..."

~Comfeld, 1982, in his introduction to the Jewish Wars by Flavius Josephus.

The Bible contradicts itself on multiple issues, from everything detail to trivia, the spelling of the King of Tyre's name in 1st Kings 5:1 vs. 2nd Chronicles 2:3, to major matters, that is Jesus' last words on the cross: Matthew 27:46 = Mark 15:34 vs. Luke 23:46 vs. John 19:30; compare also Gospel of Philip 72:1 and Gospel of Peter 5:17.

In Antiquities of the Jews, Book Thirteen, Flavius Josephus states that 82 years elapse between the Death of Judas Maccabeus [c. 161 B.C.E.] and the Death of Queen Alexandra [c. 67 B.C.E.], which in so doing, he under quoted by Twelve Years the actual time elapsed. There were in fact 94 solar years.

AD 1751-1836- Madison, James, fourth President of the United States and a freethinker like his three predecessors. He learned Hebrew and made a thorough study of theology after graduating from Princeton and gave up his Christian beliefs. Madison helps draft the constitution of Virginia and insisted on it protecting religious freedom. He effectively protested against a proposal to make contributions to religion in that state compulsory and got state and Church completely separated. His letters in "Writings of James Madison," 9 vols., 1910, show all his life he opposed the Churches.

Madison argues that the establishment is no friend to religion or the state. He insists that civil society would be hindered by establishment, charging that attempts to enforce religious belief by law would only weaken government.

In his 1785, 'Memorial and Remonstrance,' Madison stated, "Religion is not helped by establishment, but is hurt by it."

"Religious bondage shackles and debilitates the mind and unfits it for every noble enterprise, every expanded project." ~James Madison at the age of 22.

In a letter of May, 19, 1823, he insists that the university shall not become "An Arena of Theological Gladiators" (IX, 126). He was a theist but not with a certainty of conviction. In a letter to a clergyman near the end of his life he wrote: "There appears to be in the nature of man what ensures his belief in an invisible cause of his present existence and an assurance of his future existence."

This is hardly a personal profession of belief, and he is one of the few leading statesmen who did not adorn his speeches and letters with occasional references to God to appease the public.

AD 1751-King Ferdinand VI, of Spain, grants exemption to the paying of taxes and forced labor to three Filipino rulers: Lakandula, Rajah Matnda and Rajah Soliman in exchange for a friendship treaty.

The Anti-Semite, Pope Benedict XIV, in his Quo Primum 1751, denounces Jewish control of commerce and "Systematical despoliation" of the Christian through usury.

AD 1751-Regarding the Jews in Poland, the Great Church of Rome declares, "*God in His Goodness allowed Catholicism to take root in Poland at the end of the 10th century during the reign of Our predecessor Pope Leo VIII. At the time, the efforts of King Mieszko and his Christian consort Dobrava [Dlugosz, Annalium vestrorum Scriptorum, 2, 94] encouraged the spread of Christianity. Since then pious and devout Poles have continued the faithful practice of their new religion. During this time various sects have attempted to establish themselves in Poland and to spread the seeds of their errors, heresies, and evil opinions. But the faithful Polish people have strongly withstood their efforts...*"

"Another threat to Christians has been the influence of Jewish faithlessness; this influence was strong because Christians and Jews were living in the same cities and towns. However their influence was minimized because the Polish Bishops did all they could to aid the Poles in their resistance to the Jews."

Freedom of religion is espoused by the Church, but not practiced, and after borrowing from the Jewish Torah, the Church now denies their religious historical roots. This preaching of hatred will have monumental consequences in a Catholic man named Hitler.

"The famous monk, Radulph, inspired long ago by an excess of zeal, was so inflamed against the Jews that he traversed Germany and France in the 12th century and, by preaching against the Jews as the enemies of our Holy Religion, incited Christians to destroy them. This resulted in the deaths of a very large number of Jews. What must we think his deeds or thoughts would be if he were now alive and saw what was happening in Poland? But the great St. Bernard opposed this immoderate and maddened zeal of Radulph, and wrote to the clergy and people of eastern France.”

At least someone within the Church had the common sense to see the atrocities committed in the name of Jesus Christ and God and recognize it as such. “The Jews are not to be persecuted: they are not to be slaughtered: they are not even to be driven out. Examine the divine writings concerning them. We read in the psalms a new kind of prophecy concerning the Jews: God has shown me, says the Church, on the subject of my enemies, not to slay them in case they should ever forget my people. Alive, however, they are eminent reminders for us of the Lord’s suffering. On this account they are scattered through all lands in order that they may be witnesses to our redemption while they pay the just penalties for so great a crime.” ~Epistle 363. The Jews are persecuted for centuries for a crime they did not commit. A crime they have lived with for almost two thousand years and not to be revealed until the advent of Pope John Paul II in the year 2000 when his Holiness travels to Jerusalem to ask forgiveness from the Rabbis, yet news media did not print the details of this meeting, leaving many to believe that the differences were primarily religious in nature.

Radulph writes this to Henry, the Archbishop of Mainz: “Doesn’t the Church every day triumph more fully over the Jews in convicting or converting them than if once and for all she destroyed them with the edge of the sword: Surely it is not in vain that the Church has established the universal prayer which is offered up for the faithless Jews from the rising of the sun to its setting, that the Lord God may remove the veil from their hearts, that they may be rescued from their darkness into the light of truth. For unless it hoped that those who do not believe would believe, it would obviously be futile and empty to pray for them.” ~Epistle 365.

Pope Innocent III, after saying that Jews were being received by Christians into their cities, warns that the method and condition of this reception should guard against their repaying the benefit with evil-doing.

“They, on being admitted to our acquaintance in a spirit of mercy, repay us, the popular proverb says, as the mouse in the wallet, the snake in the lap and fire in the bosom usually repay their host.”

Pope Innocent III further states that: “... It was fitting for Jews to serve Christians rather than vice versa.” And added: “Let not the sons of the free woman be servants of the sons of the handmaid; but as servants rejected by their lord for whose death they evilly conspired, let them realize that the result of this deed is to make them servants of those whom Christ’s death made free,” as we read in his Decretal.”

“Likewise in the Decretal under the same heading, he forbids the promotion of Jews to public office: “forbidding Jews to be promoted to public offices since in such circumstances they may be very dangerous to Christians.” ~Catholic Encyclopedia.

It is this archaic bigotry founded on enhancing the spread of Paganized-Catholicism in a bygone era that precipitates a hatred doctrine that will encapsulate the Jews into a God killing people and promote a revulsion against them that will terminate with their attempted world wide extinction in WWII by a dictatorial man who is a professed Catholic and Jew Hater and later on in history by a group of Catholic authorities in Bosnia who profess similar attitudes, ... all in the name of God.

AD1751-Pope Benedict XIV, issues “Providas,” on 18 May, which confirms the Church’s previous stand in “In Eminenti,” condemning Freemasonry on the grounds of its secret oaths, naturalism, secrecy, religious indifferentism, and its perceived possible threat to the Roman Catholic Church and state. Specifically, it forbids Roman Catholics from seeking membership in any Masonic organization.

AD1752-Calendar Adjustment; The day following 2 September is declared 14 September to allow for the discrepancy in the Julian calendar of 11 minutes and 4 seconds per year loss in time.

Benjamin Franklin discovers the identity of lightening and electricity, and his lightening rods [the Devil’s rod] are only used after a Christian Church is struck by lightening and burns to the ground, showing no special dispensation for a House of the Lord.

AD 1753- Pelham, in 1753, brings in a bill allowing Jews to become naturalized by application to Parliament. It passed the Lords without much opposition, but on being brought down to the House of Commons the Tory party makes a great outcry against this “Abandonment of Christianity,” as they called it.

Birth of Tippu Sahib, the last ruling maharajah of Mysore, who consumes his life resisting British designs on India. The "Tiger of Mysore" demonstrates his passionate feelings for the British by personally supervising the gang rape of each captured soldier.

Birth of Jean Jaczues Regis de Cambaceres, France, who, under General Napoleon Bonepart develops into the primary architect of the Napoleonic Code. Cambaceres is discreet, but not secretive, about his homosexuality, and it is through his influence that the Napoleonic Code, and many later French laws are based upon his legalized private consenting homosexual acts between adults.

AD 1754-Birth of William Bligh who is later to become renowned hard driving Captain Bligh of the H.M.S. Bounty. Captain Bligh survives the crew's mutiny and the long voyage in an open boat, while most of the mutineers perish on Pitcairn Island. Captain blight knew how to have a man flogged!

AD 1755-Birth of Hans Axel, Count von Fersen, Stockholm Sweden. General, Statesmen, and distinguished lover of three Swedish kings. The reason for his horrible death has never been satisfactorily explained. A savage mob tears him to pieces in the streets of Stockholm as police look on and do nothing. He is beaten with canes and umbrellas and then kicked to death.

AD 1756-1791-Mozart: The youngest child and only surviving son of a Catholic Freemason, Leopold Mozart, baptized Johannes Chrysostomus Wolfgangus Theophilus Mozart, was born in Salzburg. He showed an early precocity both as a keyboard-player and violinist, at the age of six Mozart had become an accomplished performer on the clavier, violin, and organ and was highly competent in sight-reading and improvisation.

Five short piano pieces composed by Mozart when he was only six years of age are still popular today. He conducted a Mass of his own composition at the age of twelve, and two years later was made a Knight of the Holy Ghost by the Pope Clement XIV for his playing. When his father received his second degree Wolfgang wrote "Fellow Crafts Journey" [Op. K468] to honor the occasion. For Lodge Zur Wohltatigkeit he wrote "Opening Ode" [Op. K483] and "Closing Ode" ~Op. K484.

In 1769, he was appointed concert master to the Archbishop of Salzburg, later, at La Scala, Milan, Italy, he is made a Chevalier of the "Order of the Golden Spur," by Pope Pius VI, but, when he is accused of neglect of religion, throws off his appointment, joins the Freemasons, and begins the series of compositions, which will make him world-famous.

The Catholic Encyclopedia, in claiming him for the Church, reminds us that his last composition was the "Requiem Mass," that is still used in Catholic services. He was, on the contrary, like Beethoven and so many other masters of music, a notorious fugitive from the Church. ~see Wilder's authoritative biography, Mozart, Engl. Trans., 1908.

Hard pressed for money, he composed the Requiem secretly for Count Walsegg, who was to put his own name on it. Wilder quotes a letter of Mozart to his family, in 1778, saying that he believes only in the Grand Architect of the Freemasons (pp. 232-3). Although he refused to do so, his wife sent for a priest when he was dying. The man refused to come, and Mozart was, without Church service, buried in the common grave of the poor. The second leading biographer, A. Ulibiche, "Mozart's Leben," 1847, tells how, referring to the orthodoxy of Mozart's youth, said: "That is all over and will never come back." ~I, 243.

Yet Catholic works generally, as well as the Catholic Encyclopedia, which solemnly promises the public the exact truth, list him as a Catholic. ~J. McCabe, Rationalists Encyclopedia.

His last Masonic work (Op. K623) was written for the dedication of a Masonic temple in Vienna on November 15, 1791. Mozart was essentially an operatic composer. His last stage work, "The Magic Flute," an opera with strong Masonic themes, was running with success at the time of his death. Initiated: December 14, 1784, at Lodge Zur Woltatigkeit, Passed: January 7, 1785, Lodge Zur Wahren Eintracht. On his death bed he refused to ask for a priest and when his wife nevertheless sent for one, he was refused, and Mozart, after composing so many compositions for the Catholic Church, was buried without service in the common grave of the poor.

AD 1756-1836- William Godwin, anarchist, freethinker, and Atheist, represents one of the most consistent open-minded impulses of the Enlightenment, writing "Political Justice" in 1793.

Thomas Jefferson and his followers, the republicans, accepted Godwin's anti-authoritarian sentiments and Jefferson, while still a governmentalist [supporter of the king] at heart, said, "A little rebellion now and then" by the people to be "A good thing." Godwin's Atheism and anti-statism [anti-government] were followed by two other figures in libertarian history, Michael Bakunin [1814-1876-who turned against philosophy as a remedy for social problems] and Pierre Joseph Proudhon [1809-1865], both of whom were Freemasons.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

When war swept through Europe in the mid 19th century, it was the Masonic model of regulation and freethinking, which provided an organizational blueprint for Bakunin's works, "International Brotherhood" and the "Revolutionary Alliance."

AD1756-1816- Miranda, General Francisco, Vice-President of Venezuela. He fought with the Americans in the War of Independence against the British, and with the French during the Revolution. He returned to South America, led an abortive revolt against the suppressive Spaniards and passed some years in America and England, where he was closely associated with the Jeremy Bentham school. He was already an atheist, as stated by John Stuart Mills. He helped liberate Venezuela and became Vice President, but shortly thereafter fell into the hands of the cruel Spaniards and died in a dungeon of the Catholic Inquisition in Spain.

AD1757-1827-William Blake, English artist, poet, engraver, famous work, "The Ancient Days," "Songs of Innocence," "The Marriage of Heaven & Hell," and "Songs of Experience." He describes the Deity [God] using a compass to circumscribe the world and his creations.

He said to have communicated with angelic life forms as a child and claimed that his deceased brother spoke with him and is the one who showed him the new printing techniques employed in his works.

AD1757-The mystic, Emanuel Swedenborg, has a vision of angels that tell him that the World will end this year [He is not taken seriously].

AD1757-9th of July, Pope Benedict the XIV issues the Papal Bull, "Sollicita Ac Provida" to regulate and define literary works acceptable to the Church by the Congregations of Inquisition & Index. All works of a religious or a theological nature are subject to this Papal Bull. In 1758 a new decree refines the "Codex of Forbidden Books" in regards to books not mentioned previously in the Index. Included in the new Codex are issues pertaining to "The Immaculate Conception" and "Theory of Grace."

AD1761-The "Order of the Elect Cohens," an occult Freemasonry organization, is founded by Martines de Pasqually [1727-1779]. Some say that Pasqually was connected to the Dominican Order and also the Inquisition. His secretary is Louis Claude de Saint-Martin, an occult philosopher, organizes the "Reformed Scottish Rite."

AD1761-William Bell predicts the End of the World by earthquakes on February 8th and another on March 8th, with the ultimate end within 28 days. Londoners gather in boats along the Thames River or leave the cities for the countryside. His prediction doesn't come true and he is thrown into Bedlam, London's prison for mad people.

AD1763-George Bell, a devout Methodist, predicts the End of the World on February 28th of this year.

AD1762- "The 18th century was not an age remarkable for depth of spiritual life... Here [in the Bishopric of Saint Agatha, near Naples, in 1762] with 30,000 uninstructed people, 400 mostly indifferent and sometimes scandalous secular clergy, and 17 more or less relaxed religious houses... A field so overgrown with weeds that they seemed the only crop." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 1, pg. 337.

AD1762- 'Red Christmas' whereby 6000 non-Catholic Chinese are massacred by orders of Don Simonde Anda in the Philippines for allegedly plotting against the Catholic Spanish government.

"The only thought was to make Christians and never citizens. This people was divided into parishes, and subjected to the most minute and extravagant observances. Each fault, each sin is still punished by the rod. Failure to attend prayers and mass has its fixed penalty, and punishment is administered to men and women at the door of the [Catholic] Church by order of the pastor." ~La Pérouse.

The Spaniards only concern is punishment and subjection of all natives to the will of the Church, "Lord, Thou art powerful to punish the offenses done in this island against Thy majesty, and in order to found in it Thy house and Holy Church where Thy glorious Name be venerated and exalted! I beseech Thee to enlighten and guide me so that we do here may be to Thy glory and honor, and the glorification of Thy Holy Catholic Faith." ~Spanish explorer/conqueror, Don Miguel Lopez de Legazpi, 1559.

AD1764-The Archduchess Maria Theresa of Austria bans Masonry with Catholic Church approval.

AD1766- "The Ecclesiastical history of the first twelve centuries is absolutely fabulous. The series of Popes is no more authentic than the series of Jewish high priests. The agreement of the monastic chronicles for the year 1215 shows that they were all the product of one monastic 'Scriptoria.'"

"Not one was written by a contemporary of the events described. Gregory 'The Great,' elected 1227, is the first of whom we have any historic notice; which leaves a forged and fraudulent list of some 180 Popes, who never had an existence other than in the worse than imagination of the compilers ... There are no tombs or sepulchers of any of the Popes prior to this date, nor yet coins, but what are acknowledged to be spurious." ~Harduin's 'Prolegomena,' 1766, Bank of Wisdom, Box 926, Louisville, KY 40201.

Hardouin, who was "A learned scholar and a writer of high position in the Jesuit College in Paris" 1645-1728, exposes the worthlessness and lying legends of the so-called "Patristic Fathers." Hardouin dates the first design of the Catholic forgers in France from 1180-1229, which continued from 1245-1314; and the construction of this genre of literature went on to an immense degree for the propagation of the 'Faith' during the next 150 years. ~Hardouin's 'Prolegomena,' 1766, Bank of Wisdom, Box 926, Louisville, KY 40201.

AD 1768-The Jesuit Order is expelled from the predominantly Catholic Philippines for their political involvement. There are five Catholic Orders residing in the Philippines, which in 1888, while visiting Hong Kong, Rizal discovers, through a conversation with Fr. Procurator of the Dominican Order do quite well financially.

On Easter Sunday, at about nine o'clock in the morning, the pornographic writer, essayist of naughty titillating books, the Marquis de Sade accosts Rose Keller who accompanies the Marquis de Sade into a cab to Arcueil, where upon arrival he rents a cottage, orders her to undress, threatens her with a knife, and flogs her. All of his writings are condemned by the Church.

Yet, we still have Biblical pornography, "Yet she multiplied her whoredoms, in calling to remembrance the days of her youth, wherein she had played the harlot in the land of Egypt. For she doted upon their paramours, whose flesh is as the flesh of asses, and whose issue is like the issue of horses." ~Ezekiel 23:19-21.

"... And lusted after her paramours there, whose members were like those of donkeys, and whose emission was like that of stallions." ~Ezekiel 23:21, NRSV.

The excommunication of Ferdinand, Duke of Parma, by Pope Clement XIII on 30 January, 1768, proved the signal for a storm of opposition against the Holy Thursday Bull, and the Pope's spiritual power, in almost all the European states.

AD 1769-1821-Napoleon Bonaparte, promoted to brigadier general at the age of 24. He acquires additional power by concluding an agreement with Pope Pius VII, Concordat of 1801, which contributed to French domestic harmony by ending the quarrel with the Roman Catholic Church that had arisen during the Revolution.

Owing to his set policy of making the Church a supporter of his proclaimed throne he behaved as an orthodox Catholic, but he was not the only Catholic monarch to treat the Pope with contempt. In 1808, he appoints his brother Joseph king of Spain. "Power is my mistress," says Napoleon.

Lord Rosebery has made an impartial study of his position as regards religion in "The Last Phase," a study of him in exile (pp. 168-173). He shows that Napoleon, especially in his later years, did not believe in the Divinity of Christ or a future life. Catholics boast that at the end he asked for the sacraments. In doing so, however, he gave his friends the excuse that "There is so much that one does not know."

AD 1769-On August 28, Saint Andrew's Masonic Lodge in Boston confers a Freemasonic degree named after the Knights Templar. The lodge assumes a significant role in the American Revolution by 1773. The Grand Lodge of Scotland made Joseph Warren Grand Master of the Freemasons in North America. Masonic members include the revolutionists Paul Revere and John Hancock, with the lodge's membership overlapping with the most damaging secret society to English rule in the new world, the "Sons of Liberty," with twelve members of the lodge participating in the Boston Tea Party [no taxation without representation].

Protestantism and the rights of man have permeated the thoughts and actions of the early colonists, Freemasonry playing a major role in the dissemination of individual rights versus institutional propaganda [religious and political]. Benjamin Franklin becomes a member of a mysterious French secret society called the "Royal Lodge of Commanders of the Temple West of Carcassonne."

The area around the fortress at Carcassonne was a medieval center for Cathars and Templars, housing a complex of philosophical and mysterious symbols having to do with sacred geometry. Symbols that are to later surface in the ritual garments worn by Franklin and the first President of the United States, George Washington during Masonic ceremonies. ~from Henry Lincoln's Discoveries in France.

Individual rights are what set the Americans apart from their European ancestors and pose a constant threat to the Church. So much so that Pope Pius IX attempts to enlist the help of the Confederacy in the American Civil War to overthrow these Protestant thinkers [see AD 1865].

Anti-Semitism continues in the Universal Roman Catholic Church, "The Jews, eternal insolent children, obstinate, dirty, thieves, liars, ignoramuses, pests and the scourge of those near and far ... Managed to lay their hands on ... All public wealth ... And virtually alone they took control not only of all the money ... But of the law itself in those countries where they have been allowed to hold public offices... [Yet they complain] at the first shout by anyone who dares raise his voice against this barbarian invasion by an enemy race, hostile to Christianity and to society in general." ~Those words appeared in 1880 in Civiltà Cattolica, the journal Pope Pius IX had ordered the Jesuits to publish in Rome as the informal organ of the Vatican, every article must be cleared before publication by the papal secretariat of state.

AD1770-1844-Thorvaldsen, Bertel, famous Danish sculptor. Son of an Iceland wood carver, he studied at the Copenhagen Academy. He became one of the finest sculptors of his time receiving the highest of international honors. He produced a good deal of religious work, including the statue of Pope Pius VII; he is very interesting in connection with the question of the inspiration of religious art.

His pious biographer Thiele admits, almost with tears, that he rejected Christianity, and in fact he had from youth a passion for ancient Greece and Rome, but in his time there was not much money in classical art. When someone asked him how he, a freethinker, came to produce such beautiful religious statues he said: "Neither do I believe in the gods of the Greeks but for all that I can represent them."

The ancient Icelandic mythology calls their god, "The Author of every thing that existeth, the eternal, the living, and awful Being; the searcher into concealed things, the Being that never changeth." It is attributed to this deity "An infinite power, a boundless knowledge, and incorruptible justice." ~The Ultimate Deception-The Two Babylons or The Papal Worship Proved To Be The Worship of Nimrod and His Wife, By The Late Rev. Alexander Hislop AD1770-1827-Beethoven, Ludwig van, German composer, Freethinker, Mason, considered one of the greatest composers in the Western tradition. Born in Bonn, Beethoven was raised in an unhappy, surrounding with his father, a singer and alcoholic in the court chapel. Beethoven became a court musician in order to support his family and his early compositions under the tutelage of the German composer Christian Gottlob Neefe, particularly the funeral cantata on the death of the Holy Roman Emperor Joseph II in 1790, signaled a tuning point in his career.

Plans were made for Beethoven to study in Vienna, Austria, with Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart, but Mozart's death in 1791 prevented this, Beethoven went instead to Vienna in 1792 and became a pupil of Austrian composer Joseph Haydn.

Although there is no written record of Ludwig van Beethoven's becoming a member of the Craft, there are very strong justifications for believing that he was a Mason with many of his friends and fellow musicians being Masons and there being references to Masonry in his voluminous correspondence. The Adagio of his Seventh quartet bears the superscription: "A weeping willow or an acacia over the grave of my brother." Both of Beethoven's blood brothers were alive when the work was written and so these words probably had a Masonic correlation. Schindler, one of his biographers, mentions a handshake when visiting the composer: "... A grip of our hands said the rest."

A song, "What is the Mason's aim," was written for the "Loge des Frères Courageux à l'Orient de Bonn" and published in 1806. ~Excerpted from: Ars Quatuor Coronatum, Transactions of Quatuor Coronati Lodge No. 2076. Volume 103 for the Year 1990. Frederick Smyth, Ed. ISBN 0 907655 20 3. page 152.

When he was dying he yielded to the pressure of Catholic friends and let a priest administer his sacraments, but it is admitted that when the priest left the room he said, in the Latin words of the ancient Roman theater "Applaud, my friends, the comedy is over." One apologist biographer implausibly argues that he meant the comedy of his life. During the years of his inspiration he had little religious feeling. When Felix Moscheles once scribbled on a manuscript "With God's help," Beethoven wrote "Man Help Thyself." ~From the works of the former Benedictine monk, Joseph McCabe, Rationalist Encyclopaedia.

AD1772-1843-Madam Marie Le Normand, occultist, Astrologist and spiritualist, known as the "Sybil of the Faubourg Saint Germain" is widely acclaimed for predicting futures. She reads the horoscope of Napoleon, Jean Paul Marat, Maximilien Robespierre and Josephine Beauharnais. She also reads the cards of aristocrats in Paris, becoming quite popular with wealthy clientele. She retires to Belgium where she has a dispute with Belgian customs that results in her imprisonment.

The Marquis de Sade, and his man servant Latour, are found guilty of abominations [Crimes Against Nature]. The Marquis of crimes of poisoning, and sodomy, and his man servant for the crime of sodomy, and are condemned to expiate [apologize] their crimes at the cathedral porch before being taken to the Place Saint-Louis “For the said Sade to be decapitated.. and the said Latour to be hanged by the neck and strangled... Then the body of the said Sade and that of the said Latour to be burned and their ashes strewn to the wind.” ~Ibid

On Sept 12th Sade and Latour are executed in effigy on the Place des Precheurs, in Aix.

AD1772- Robert Edward, Ninth Lord Petre, considered the head of the Catholic community in England, becomes Grandmaster of the Premier Grand Lodge and serves for 5 years [Pope Clement XIV is rather unconcerned about Masonry during this period in history].

AD1773-James Mill, author of the 'History of British India,' the 'Analysis of the Phenomena of the Human Mind,' and a free thinker, would have entered the pulpit as a Presbyterian preacher, had he not, “By his own studies and reflections been led to reject not only the belief in Revelation, but the foundations of what is commonly called Natural Religion.” ~J.S. Mill, Autobiography, p. 38.

“He came to the conviction that concerning the origin of things nothing whatever can be known.” He looked upon religion as “The greatest enemy of morality,” and he regarded the God of Christianity as an embodiment of the “One plus ultra of wickedness.” ~Prof. A. Bain, James Mill, p. 409.

AD1773-It is rumored that Pope Clement XIV, Ganganeli, is alleged to have been poisoned for abolishing the Jesuits [The Jesuit Order is abolished thirty-nine times in various kingdoms across Europe].

AD1773-It is alleged that Emperor Fredrick the Great, wrote the Higher Degrees [last 8 Degrees, of the Scottish Rite], Freemasonry, when Fredrick protected them from Pope Clement XIV during the suppression.

AD1773-The Abyssinian Church has long ago accepted the “Book of Enoch.” The Ethiopian version of “The Book of Enoch” is discovered by James Bruce. “The Book of the Secrets of Enoch” is found in 1886. In 1928 “Enoch III” also known as the “Hebrew Enoch” is translated. The Book of Enoch is but another literary piece forged in the name of the grandson of Adam, whose fragmentary remains incite the visions of believers in religious literature, which circulated under the pretended authorship of that mythical Patriarch. This Apocryphal Jewish book is instrumental in the kabbalistic interpretations.

In Enoch, chapters 1-5, we have the declaration that God will leave his heavenly abode on “Judgment Day” and appear on earth with his host of Angels, chapters 6-16, the fall of the rebellious Angels who fraternized with the daughters of man, chapters 17-36, descriptions of diverse worlds. In chapter 82, Methusalem is instructed to write down and reveal everything in the books concerning all these matters of God to the future generations of the world.

The Book of Enoch is considered Holy Scripture by the early Christians, and the earliest literature of the so-called “Church Fathers” is overflowing with references to this mysterious book. The 2nd century Epistle of Barnabus also makes much use of the Book of Enoch, and 2nd and 3rd Century “Church Fathers,” such as Justin Martyr, Irenaeus, Origin and Clement of Alexandria, who also make use of the Book of Enoch.

The Church Father, Tertullian, 160-230 C.E., even calls the Book of Enoch “Holy Scripture,” and the Ethiopic Church includes the Book of Enoch to its official Church Canon.

AD1773-The Grand Orient is established in France, a rival to The Grand Lodge [Masonic].

AD1775-The word “Jew” does not come into existence until this year. Prior to 1775 the word “Jew” does not exist in any language. The word “Jew” being introduced into the English language for the first time in the 18th century when Sheridan uses it in his play “The Rivals,” “She shall have a skin like a mummy, and the beard of a Jew.”

Prior to this, the word “Jew” had not become a word used in the English language. Shakespeare, in his “Merchant of Venice,” V.III.i.61, writes, “What is the reason? I am a Jew; hath not a Jew eyes?”

AD1775-William Hutchinson in his “The Spirit of Freemasonry,” with Grand Lodge official sanction, rejects any direct lineage to the “Operative Masons.”

The Rheims, or Douai Bible, translation of the New Testament into English is first printed in 1582, the word "Jew" does not appear in it. The King James Authorized translation of the New Testament into English is begun in 1604 and published in 1611, and the word "Jew" does not appear in it.

The word, "Lord" as defined in, "A Dictionary of the English Language" by Samuel Johnson, first published in 1775, and reprinted in 1979, means: a ruler, monarch, governor; to domineer. It is during this era that we have the introduction of the "Negative Confession."

Eulogies given proclaiming the good one has done, omitting their sins, to such a degree, that often the families, to gain further prestige, would later make substantial financial contributions to the Church, in order to Sanctify their dearly departed.

Birth of Matthew Gregory "Monk" Lewis in London, England. Gregory is a master at writing the silly, overripe 18th Century Gothic romance novels that are still fashionable to read. In his Ambrosio, or the Monk, 1795, Ambrosio is seduced by a woman driven to blind nymphomania by supernatural Demons, who enter the monastery, and Ambrosio's bed, disguised as a boy. Gregory's sins are found out and he is tortured by the Inquisition, sentenced to death, and bargains with the Devil, who destroys him.

AD 1776-1831-Niebuhr, Professor Barthold Georg is considered the second greatest German historian. Diplomatic service in Rome led him to take up the study of its ancient history and after 20 years of research he produced his famous Roman History, 3 vols., 1811-1832. He could read 20 languages and had an extraordinarily wide knowledge.

His biographer, Winkworth shows that while he refused in his later years to discuss religion, he had been an aggressive skeptic in his earlier years, always rejecting Christianity. "I would not overthrow the dead Church," he said, "But if she falls it will give me no uneasiness."

Pope Clement XIV suppresses the Jesuit Order [which is sworn to follow his direction], except in Russia and Prussia.

The Jewish community had a great financial stake in the colonies and some supported the British cause because of it, which is not unique since many Americans [Royalists] also supported the Mother Land, Great Britain, "They [the Jews] work more effectively against us, than the enemy's armies. They are a hundred times more dangerous to our liberties and the great cause we are engaged in... It is much to be lamented that each state, long ago, has not hunted them down as pest to society and the greatest enemies we have to the happiness of America." ~George Washington, in Maxims of George Washington by A. A. Appleton & Co.

Benjamin Franklin also spoke out on the Jewish dilemma, "I fully agree with General Washington, that we must protect this young nation from an insidious influence and impenetration. The menace, gentlemen, is the Jews. In whatever country Jews have settled in any great number, they have lowered its moral tone; depreciated its commercial integrity; have segregated themselves and have not been assimilated; have sneered at and tried to undermine the Christian religion upon which that nation is founded, by objecting to its restrictions; have built up a state within the state; and when opposed have tried to strangle that country to death financially, as in the case of Spain and Portugal. For over 1,700 years, the Jews have been bewailing their sad fate in that they have been exiled from their homeland, as they call Palestine. But gentlemen, did the world give it to them in fee simple, they would at once find some reason for not returning. Why? Because they are vampires, and vampires do not live on vampires. They cannot live only among themselves. They must subsist on Christians and other people not of their race. If you do not exclude them from these United States, in their Constitution, in less than 200 years they will have swarmed here in such great numbers that they will dominate and devour the land and change our form of government, for which we Americans have shed our blood, given our lives our substance and jeopardized our liberty. If you do not exclude them, in less than 200 years our descendants will be working in the fields to furnish them substance, while they will be in the counting houses rubbing their hands. I warn you, gentlemen, if you do not exclude Jews for all time, your children will curse you in your graves. Jews, gentlemen, are Asiatics, let them be born where they will nor how many generations they are away from Asia, they will never be otherwise. Their ideas do not conform to an American's, and will not even thou they live among us ten generations. A leopard cannot change its spots. Jews are Asiatics, are a menace to this country if permitted entrance, and should be excluded by this Constitutional Convention." ~Benjamin Franklin, Chit Chat Around the Table During Intemission, at the Philadelphia Constitutional Convention of 1787. This statement was recorded in the diary of Charles Cotesworth Pinckney, a delegate from South Carolina.

Jefferson also proclaims his consternation, "Dispersed as the Jews are, they still form one nation, foreign to the land they live in." ~Thomas Jefferson, in D. Boorstin's, The Americans.

AD 1776- Nathan Hale, American patriot, was the only secret operative to be ferreted out by the British for spying, and after speaking his famous remarks, “I regret that I have but one life to give to my country,” he is hanged. The relationship between Yale University and the soon to be “Intelligence Community” is very unique. Nathan Hale, along with three other Yale graduates, was a member of the “Culper Ring,” one of America’s first intelligence operations organizations. Established by George Washington, it was successful throughout the Revolutionary War. Yale is also the birthplace of the “Secret Order of Skull and Bones.” In “America’s Secret Establishment,” ~Antony C. Sutton, 1986, page 5-6, states: Those on the inside know it as ‘The Order.

Others have known it for more than 150 years as ‘Chapter 322’ of a German secret society. More formally, for legal purposes, ‘The Order’ was incorporated as ‘The Russell Trust’ in 1856. It was also once known as the “Brotherhood of Death.”

Those who make light of it, or want to make fun of it, call it ‘Skull & Bones,’ or just plain ‘Bones.’ The Order, as it prefers to be called by its members, is a bastion of White Anglo Saxon Protestant (WASP) culture.

There are two other secret societies at Yale University, “Scroll and Key,” and “Wolf’s Head,” founded in the mid-19th century. Rosenbaum, in his “Esquire Magazine” article, stated that anyone in the Eastern Liberal Establishment who is not a member of “Skull & Bones,” is most assuredly a member of either “Scroll & Key” or “Wolf’s Head.”

The Jesuits are expelled from the Spanish Empire for involvement/interference in the affairs of the monarchy.

AD 1776- The American Independence and its alleged Illuminati implications: It is certain that there were staunch Christians among the founding fathers of the United States [however, many were mono-theists, believing in God, but not in any particular organized religious institution or church]. The men responsible for building the foundation of the United States [such as Thomas Jefferson, Benjamin Franklin, and George Washington] had little use for the archaic Christianity, and many were strongly opposed to it. They were men of The Enlightenment Era, not men of Christianity. They were Deists who did not believe the Bible was historically true or scientifically accurate. The words “Jesus Christ, Christianity, Bible, and God” are never mentioned in the Constitution; not even once.

“Ralph Reed likes to quote Alexis de Tocqueville [Democracy In America] on religion’s central place in American democratic society. The quotations are not always accurate, but he is right about one important thing. Tocqueville, like Benjamin Franklin, believed that religion is essential to the health of republican liberty. However, Reed apparently closed the pages of Democracy in America too soon. Had he read further, he would not have missed Tocqueville’s point that it is dangerous for religion to tie itself to political institutions and to topical political controversy.” ~Isaac Kramnick and R. Laurence Moore, The Godless Constitution: The Case Against Religious Correctness, New York: W.W. Norton, 1996, p. 21.

Historical evidence now proves that the framers of the American Declaration of Independence and Constitution were not Catholic nor were they followers of Christian Doctrines as we prescribe to them today. They were deists, theists and Freemasons, believing in the independence of man from both political as well as religious institutions. “So successful were the drafters of the Constitution in defining government in secular terms that one of the most powerful criticisms of the Constitution when ratified and for succeeding decades was that it was indifferent to Christianity and God. It was denounced by many as a Godless document, which is precisely what it is.” ~Isaac Kramnick and R. Laurence Moore, The Godless Constitution: The Case Against Religious Correctness, New York: W.W. Norton, 1996, p. 23.

The dictionary definition of “Theism” and “Deism” is:

Theism – the•ism \ˈθiːz-ˈi-zəm\ noun (1678)–: a belief in the existence of a god or gods; specif: a belief in the existence of one God viewed as the creative source of man and the world who transcends yet is immanent in the world. ~1996 Zane Publishing, Inc. and Merriam-Webster, Incorporated

Deism – de•ism \ˈdè-ˈi-zəm, ˈdà-\ noun often cap. 1682: a movement or system of thought advocating natural religion, emphasizing morality, and in the 18th century denying the interference of the Creator with the laws of the universe. ~1996 Zane Publishing, Inc. and Merriam-Webster, Incorporated

“The bill for establishing religious freedom, the principles of which had, to a certain degree, been enacted before, I had drawn in all the latitude of reason & right. It still met with opposition; but with some mutilations in the preamble, it was finally passed; and a singular proposition proved that its protection of opinion was meant to be universal. Where the preamble declares, that coercion is a departure from the plan of the Holy author of our religion, an amendment was proposed by inserting 'Jesus Christ,' so that it would read 'A departure from the plan of Jesus Christ, the Holy author of our religion;' the insertion was rejected by a great majority, in proof that they meant to comprehend, within the mantle of its protection, the Jew and the Gentile, the Christian and the Mohametan [Mohammadan, Islam], the Hindoo [Hindu] and Infidel [agnostics, atheists, doubters] of every denomination." ~Thomas Jefferson, in reference to the Virginia Act for Religious Freedom, supports religious liberty for all people, not just Christians.

Historical accounts of Freemasonry in, "The Temple and the Lodge," tell of the philosophical influences of Freemasonry on the founding documents, while avoiding the impression of a Masonic involvement. Of the fifty-six signatories of the Declaration of Independence, thirty-three may have been Freemasons. While nine have been definitely identified as Freemasons, another ten may possibly have been, but we may never know due to documents lost during the Nation's struggle for freedom. Of the general in the Continental Army, there were so far as documentation can establish, thirty-two Freemasons out of seventy-four, plus six of his aides.

"The Declaration of Independence gives us important insight into the opinions of the Founding Fathers. Thomas Jefferson wrote that the power of the government is derived from the governed. Up until that time, it was claimed that kings ruled nations by the Authority of God. The Declaration was a radical departure from the idea of Divine Authority... The 1796 treaty with Tripoli states that the United States was 'In no sense founded on the Christian religion.'" This was not a mere idle statement, meant to please the Muslims, they believed it and meant it. This treaty was written under the Presidency of George Washington and signed under the Presidency of John Adams. ~The Nazarene Way of Essenic Studies: Theology of America's Founding Fathers, Excerpts from the Age of Reason, written by Thomas Paine in 1794.

Granted the known Freemasons are, as a rule, more prominent in the struggles for freedom, a conspiracy attributed to the Masonic Order has never been documented. Are great men prone to join an organization such as Freemasonry or is said organization prone to attract men of such independent and freethinking character? On the 11th of June, the Continental Congress appoints a committee to draft a Declaration of Independence.

Two of the five men on this committee, Benjamin Franklin and Robert Livingston, are known Freemasons, and Robert Sherman is believed to have been a member also, but documents have been lost. The other two, Thomas Jefferson and John Adams, are not, although they had many Masonic friends. "If there are some who truly wish to return this country to its beginnings, so be it... Because it was a climate of Free thought. The Founders were students of the European Enlightenment. Half a century after the establishment of the United States, clergymen complained that no President up to that date had been a Christian." ~The Nazarene Way of Essenic Studies: Theology of America's Founding Fathers, Excerpts from the Age of Reason, written by Thomas Paine in 1794.

The text of the Declaration of Independence is composed by Jefferson and submitted to Congress, which accepted it on 4 July 1776, one year after King George declares war on the colonies.

The nine signatories whom we know to be established as Freemasons, and the ten who may have been included such influential figures as George Washington, Benjamin Franklin, Joseph Hewes, William Hooper, Robert Paine, Richard Stockton, George Walton, William Whipple, William Ellery, the President of the Congress, John Hancock, and many more whose records were lost during the independence war effort. The army, moreover, remains almost entirely in Freemasonic hands...As we shall see, it is in the Constitution of the United States that the influence of Freemasonry is most discernible. On 25 May 1787, the Constitutional Convention opened in Philadelphia and commenced its efforts to implement the new government for the nation.

The first voice to make itself heard was a Freemasonic one; that of Edmund Randolph, a member of a Williamsburg lodge, was General George Washington's aide-de-camp, and subsequently became Attorney General, then governor of Virginia and Grand Master of Virginia's Grand Lodge. During Washington's presidency, he was to serve as the first Attorney General of the United States, then the first Secretary of State.

The Sabbath was stringently kept by the Puritans and Pilgrims who were substantially fanatics about the sacredness of Sunday, and the first day of the week was set apart for preaching, praying, attending church, reading the Bible and studying the catechism, while walking, riding, playing on musical instruments, boating, swimming and courting, were all considered crimes.

No one was supposed to be happy on that blessed day of the Lord. It was a time of diffuseness, sacred, solemn and religiously insensitive. They detested art, music, and most everything considered to produce joy. They found despicable everything except the Bible, the church, God, Sunday and their creed.

So universal was the Sabbath superstition that the Legislatures of nearly all of the early American States passed laws to prevent work and enjoyment on that day, and declared all contracts void relating to business entered into on Sunday.

The early German immigrants were a God send, and gave Americans the first valuable lesson regarding the Sabbath. They came to this country in large numbers, and they did not keep the American Sabbath, but instead, they listened to music and they drank beer on that Holy day.

They took their wives and children with them and enjoyed themselves; yet they were good, kind, industrious people. They paid their debts and their credit was unsurpassed. Americans realized that men could be good and women virtuous without "Keeping" the Sabbath. ~Sabbath Superstition Robert Green Ingersoll.

AD 1776-The participants of the American Revolution were Bible believing Calvinists/Baptists who refused to submit to the tyranny of King George III, of England, who they believed was controlled by the Catholic preaching Jesuits, for, Christianity still ruled in Europe.

The people who arrived here from the northern countries, except those from Spain and Italy, didn't want to duplicate the European Christian models, and it is the Baptists, in the Second Amendment, who secure the right to bear arms, because they had already secured the right of the, "Sword of Just Defense," and the "Sword of the Spirit" in the First Amendment, believing in their right to never having their Bibles taken from them.

The moment the colonies began to deny the rights of the King they also began to suspect the power of the priest. In digging down to find an excuse for fighting George III, they unwittingly undermined the Church. They went through the Revolution together, finding that all denominations fought equally well.

They also found that persons without religion had patriotism and courage, and were also willing to die that a new nation might be born. As a matter of fact the pulpit was not in hearty sympathy with our fathers. [Many priests were imprisoned because they would not pray for the Continental Congress].

After victory had enriched their position, and it became necessary to make a constitution the infidels, men like Paine, Jefferson, and Franklin, realized that the church must be left out; that a government deriving its just powers from the consent of the governed could make no contract with a Church pretending to derive its powers from an infinite God.

The Attorney General of England, in a celebrated State trial in the sale of a copy of the American revolutionist, Thomas Paine's, 'The Age of Reason,' urges the jury of the great necessity, "To prevent its circulation among the industrious poor," for, he declaimed, "Of all human beings they stand most in need of the consolations of religion; ... because no man can be expected to be faithful to the authority of man who revolts against the government of God!" ~Williams' Case, 26 Howard's State Trials, pg. 719; 1798-99.

Such is the affect of American freethinking upon the world, that of individuality, and for that the Popes would look disdainfully upon them, except that this American membership contributes more monetary gifts than any other country in the world.

"As to the book called the Bible, it is blasphemy to call it the word of God. It is a book of lies and contradictions, and a history of bad times and bad men. There are but a few good characters in the whole book. The fable of the Christ and his twelve Apostles, which is a parody on the sun and the twelve signs of the Zodiac, copied from the ancient religions of the eastern world, is the least hurtful part. Everything told of Christ has reference to the sun. His reported Resurrection is at sunrise, and that on the first day of the week; that is, on the day anciently dedicated to the sun, and from thence called 'Sunday,' in Latin dies 'Solis,' the Day of the Sun; as the next day, Monday, is 'Moon-day.' But there is no room in a letter to explain these things... I have now, my friend, given you a facsimile of my mind on the subject of religion and creeds, and my wish is, that you make this letter as publicly known as you find opportunities of doing." ~N.Y. Aug. 15, 1806, Thomas Paine in a letter to Andrew Dean.

By the efforts of the early American so-called infidels, the name of Jesus is left out of the Constitution of the United States. They knew that if an infinite being was put in, no room would be left for the people. They knew that if any Church was made the mistress of the state, that mistress, like all others, would corrupt, weaken, and destroy soon it. Washington wanted a church established by law in Virginia and was prevented by Thomas Jefferson.

The "Dade Code" was a part of the Virginia statutes, and authorized public officials to execute anyone who "Spoke impiously of the Trinity or one of the divine persons, or against the known articles of Christian faith."

Every person over the age of 16 had to supply the ministers with an annual donation of ten pounds of tobacco and one bushel of corn. When the price of tobacco went down, an additional assessment was imposed: the "20th calfe, the 20th kidd of goates, and the 20th pigge."

The code is written in London by Anglican Bishops who arrange a list of prohibitions and punishments, which are meant to keep people from thinking or speaking out against the clergy and Christianity and meant to mold the citizens into conformity, acquiescence, and piety. The same penalty of death is meted out for "Blaspheming God's Holy Name." ~James Madison by John Patrick Michael Murphy, 1999.

If you are a stranger in town you were mandated to report to the nearest Anglican priest who would put questions to you to see if you were Holy enough to stay. If you missed church masses, without good reason, on three occasions, the death penalty could be imposed, and the 'Code,' excluded all other religions from the colony.

The 'Dade Code' was fought by Presbyterians, Methodists, Baptists and freethinkers who banded together for a common cause, which sought to dis-establish the Church of England from the American Colonies, which meant it would have to be supported only by its supporters, not everyone, and it would have to allow all other Christian religions equality.

"During almost fifteen centuries has the legal establishment of Christianity been on trial. What has been its fruits? More or less in all places, pride and indolence in the clergy, ignorance and servility in the laity; in both, superstition, bigotry, and persecution." ~James Madison.

The church never has pretended that Jefferson or Franklin died in fear. Franklin wrote no books against the fables of the ancient Jews. He thought it useless to cast the pearls of thought before the swine of ignorance and fear. Jefferson was a statesman and father of a great party. He gives his views in letters and to trusted friends. He was a Virginian gentleman, author of the Declaration of Independence, founder of a university, father of a political party, President of the United States, a statesman and philosopher.

Thomas Jefferson is too powerful for the divided Churches of his day, and too great an image to be desecrated today. Thomas Jefferson, who is largely responsible for the principles of the American Constitution, learned them, especially the great principles of Freedom and Democracy, from the pages of the Roman Jesuits, Suarez and Bellarmine.

AD 1776- Pope Pius VI denounces the American Bill of Rights and the Declaration of Independence. Today, the Church still proclaims to have a history of Human Rights patronage, yet falsifies or conceals documents, which might implicate their priesthood in molestation and pedophile cases worldwide.

It is alleged that the Jesuit Order, formally suppressed by Pope Pius VI, is allied with Emperor Frederick the Great of Prussia and the Empress Catherine of Russia. The Jesuit General in control of the Scottish Rite Freemasonry now seeks an alliance with the Masonic House of Rothschild in England.

To accomplish this he chooses a Jesuit, Jewish by race, Adam Weishaupt. Weishaupt, an instructor of Canon Law, Council of Trent, at the Jesuit College of Ingolstadt, in Bavaria, is said to have a nominal role as the founder of the "Illuminati," playing a subordinate though conspicuous role in the organization of this sect. ~From Occult Theocracy, Lady Queenborough, published in 1933.

And beneath, "The talents of the learned and the virtues of the wise, a noble and beneficent manner with which all are charmed, depict much better than this image the true portrait of Pius VI." ~From a French Manuscript of the Work Written in the Year 1716, with a Dissertation on the Original Treatise and a Bibliography of the Various Editions by Alcoffibas Nasier

On May 1, 1776, the "Order of the Illuminati," was officially founded and is alleged to use the Jewish House of Rothschild to finance the French Revolution and the rise of Napoleon [the Freemason (?)], with his Jesuit trained mentor, Abbe Sieyes. Once Saint Ignatius of Loyola became powerful in the Vatican hierarchy as the Jesuit General, the occult Illuminati became, "The most important branch of the Jesuit order, eventually coming to control the world economy, international banking, military forces, all branches of witchcraft, and the religions of the world, putting humanity on its knees to serve the Pope." ~Satanic Bible.

Note: to this day, the Vatican has not recognized Israel as a nation, and has not apologized for backing Hitler's Nazis regime.

The ruling monarchs will meet at Vienna and form an Un-Holy Alliance, blessed by the Church, to, they claim, stamp out the last spark of revolutionary fire.

From 1820 to 1860 the valiant people of Europe fight magnificently for the restoration of the 'Rights of Man,' which the Revolution had formulated and the Pope arrogantly mocks.

Yet, Catholic [revised] history mentions no martyrs, those brave individuals who fought for the rights of man. Representatives of the poor? Not hardly.

Not even in the inauguration of the 21st century, though the Church will dispute this claim, let them open up their financial records and return to the Jews the treasures that were stolen from them, let them be transparent in their dealings with the poor, then we can truthfully say they represent the poor. General Napoleon Bonaparte saw through the canard of the Jesuit Order and gave them only token respect.

"The Jesuits are a military organization, not a religious order. Their chief is a general of an army, not the mere father abbot of a monastery. And the aim of this organization is power. Absolute power, universal power, power to control the world by the volition of a single man. Jesuitism is the most absolute of despotisms; and at the same time the greatest and most enormous of abuses..."
"The general of the Jesuits insists on being master, sovereign, over the sovereign. Wherever the Jesuits are admitted they will be masters, cost what it may. Their society is by nature dictatorial, and therefore it is the irreconcilable enemy of all constituted authority. Every act, every crime, however atrocious, is a meritorious work, if committed for the interest of the Society of the Jesuits, or by the order of the general." ~from Fifty Years In The Church Of Rome, by Charles Chiniqy, 1968, reprinted from the 1886 edition, quoting Memorial Of The Captivity Of Napoleon At St. Helena, General Montholon. The Catholic Encyclopedia rewrites history by de-emphasizing the notorious and nefarious role of the Jesuit Order throughout the world.

There are contradictions in the historical writings of the Jesuit Abbe Barruel, who blames the Rothschilds and Freemasons for the French Revolution, it being believed that the "Society of Jesus," was the instrument used to carry out the Revolution and punish the monarchs who provoked and expelled the Jesuits from their domains. The Jesuits, expelled from the Spanish Empire, found refuge in Corsica and from there they supported their great avenger, Napoleon Bonaparte of France. Napoleon, while banished to the island of St. Helena, writes his "Memoirs," which accurately describe his organizers, the Jesuits.

AD1776-Order of the Illuminati, founded by a Bavarian Law Professor, Adam Weishaupt is based on the works of Voltaire and the French Encyclopedists who relied on rationale and logic versus religious fallacy and superstition. Weishaupt's rigorous education rested in the hands of his godfather, Baron von Ickstatt, a member of the Privy Council, after his father died when he was still a child.

Adam has free access to the Baron's extensive library, well stocked with the works of the Enlightenment philosophers. Weishaupt graduates from the University of Ingolstadt in 1768, and rises quickly within the Jesuit dominated institution attaining a full professor in 1733. Despite his extreme militant Atheism, he somehow managed to become the Dean of the Law Faculty two years later at the age of 27.

He is constantly at odds with university and ecclesiastical authorities and during these tumultuous years, Weishaupt conceives the idea of forming a secret society, a new order, one similar to the Masons, but organized along policies similar to the Jesuits, an order committed to the ideals of the Enlightenment.

Weishaupt felt that with this new order, "Princes and Nations shall disappear from off the face of the earth! Yes, a time shall come when man shall acknowledge no other law but the great book of nature; this revelation shall be the work of Secret Societies and that is one of our grand mysteries..."

He believed that, "The grand art of rendering any revolution, whatsoever certain is to enlighten the people, and to enlighten them is, insensibly to turn the public opinion to the adoption of those changes which are the given objects of the intended revolution. ..." ~From Occult Theocracy, Lady Queenborough, published in 1933.

Illuminati candidates at all levels were to apply themselves "To acquiring of interior and exterior perfection," a perfection, which he believed would, through the efforts of the Order, would illuminate the world with reason and good deeds. Weishaupt had already accepted the Rousseau vision of a world free from the constraints of government and church, where humanity would exist in a universal community

[utopian world] and being one with nature.

Le Forestier wrote that Weishaupt contemplated this new order for several years and, after wrangling over an appropriate name, founded the “Order of the Illuminati” on May 1, 1776. It was this new order, which became, in the words of the Jesuit polemicist Abbe Barruel, “...The conspiracy of the Sophisters of Impiety and Anarchy against every religion natural or revealed...”

Abbe Barruel spoke of Weishaupt, “... An odious phenomenon in nature, an Atheist void of remorse, a profound hypocrite, destitute of those superior talents which lead to the vindication of truth, he is possessed of all that energy and ardor in vice which generates conspirators for impiety and anarchy... head of a conspiracy which, when compared with those of the clubs of Voltaire and D’Alambert, or with the secret committees of D’Orleans, make these latter appear like the faint imitations of puerility, and show the Sophister and the Brigand as mere novices in the arts of revolution.” ~From Occult Theocracy, Lady Queenborough, published in 1933.

Weishaupt’s Order grew to a membership of 200-300, when the Marquis d’Costanza enlisted the efforts of Baron Adolph von Knigge in 1778. Knigge, 1752-1796, was a noted German playwright and novelist, who had translated Mozart’s “Magic Flute,” an opera copious with Masonic symbolism and metaphor. Later on Baron Adolph Knigge would adopt the teachings of the Order in an attempt to infiltrate the Freemasons. It was Baron Knigge who assisted in the assimilation of Masonic symbolism and secret identifications and rituals to the Illuminati, but much of the ritual of Freemasonry had been accepted by Weishaupt already who had dabbled in Masonry several years before forming his Order, and Weishaupt considered much of it of little use in furthering his plan. In 1784 a decree is issued in Bavaria banning secret orders and societies. Weishaupt bases his new order on the Freemasonry already practiced in Europe at the time. Unable to gain enough converts due to slight differences in views he writes a new order based upon an even stricter code of secrecy.

This new order came to be known as the “Illuminated Freemasons.” The Order did its work in secret, with the constant fear of being exposed to both the civil authority and the clergy. Instruction was given at the lower level of the Minerval Academies, the order posturing itself as having no interest in politics or religion to protect itself and became immersed only with the philanthropic deeds based on the life of Jesus Christ!

Jesus says, “Know what is in front of your face, and what is hidden from you will be disclosed to you.

For there is nothing hidden that will not be revealed. [And there is nothing buried that will not be raised].” ~Gospel of Thomas.

It is the Baron Xaverius von Zwack, known as “Cato,” to his friends, who is a member of the “Areopagites,” or “Ruling Council of the Illuminism,” who had begun recruiting Minervals from within the Masonic lodges.

As a result of the efforts of Knigge, the Order swells to over 2,000 members and extends throughout Europe. Each country is headed by a national director, who presides over a group of inspectors; who in turn carry on the affairs of the Order with the help of provincial aides, working down to the city level and minerval academy level [initiates].

In 1783 Weishaupt writes to his dear friend regarding the problems he is having with the Illuminati members, the names referred to are “Code names” to maintain the secrecy in the Order, “I am deprived of help. Socrates, who would insist on having a position of trust amongst us, and is really a man of talent, of the right way of thinking, is certainly drunk. Augustus’ reputation could not be worse. Alcibiades does nothing but sit all day long with the vintner’s pretty wife and spends his whole time in sighing and pinning with love. ... Tiberius attempted to ravish the wife of Democides, and her husband took them in the act...”

~From Occult Theocracy, Lady Queenborough, published in 1933.

He felt disenchanted with the Order and felt that the Order was a society of, “... Dissolute, immoral wretches, whose masters, liars, bankrupts, braggarts and vain fools...” Conrad Goeringer writes of this era in Illuminati history, “Seized correspondence of the Illuminati, exhibited by Barruel, indicates that a growing portion of Weishaupt’s activity was expended in maintaining a semblance of control of some of the freewheeling Illuminists. In one letter, Spartacus told a provincial lodge director that a ‘Worthy Brother of the highest rank in the Order’ has stolen jewelry from another member. Would the director implore the Brother to return his loot to its rightful owner?”

Despite his goal to “Fit man by illumination for active virtue,” even Weishaupt was caught up in the tragi-comedy; “I am in danger of losing at once my honor and reputation,” he writes, “By which I have had long such influence,” and revealed that he had gotten his sister-in-law pregnant. “Attempts to secure abortion failed, and Weishaupt was forced to consummate the cuckholding-marriage following the birth of a son.” ~From Occult Theocracy, Lady Queenborough, published in 1933.

The gains made in recruiting from the Masonic Brotherhood, or “Illuminizing” so much of Freemasonry, is not a total success. Illuminist propaganda attacking the Church was traced to the Masonic Lodge Theodore, which was subject to the Order. The Bavarian officials then directed that inquiries be made and the Masonic lodge was ordered dissolved.

The closure of other lodges was soon ordered, as it became very apparent to investigators that there was a conspiracy, taking place against state and church authority and the inevitable traitors within the Illuminati soon appeared. Other factions, such as the Rosicrucians availed of this opportunity as well, and some Illuminists theorized that the Jesuit Order was behind the plot to disband the Illuminati. The growing animosity between Weishaupt and Knigge continued. Weishaupt condemned his former associate for his growing obsession with occultism and ritual and this ultimately led to Knigge helping to seal the fate of the Order of the Illuminati.

Disheartened by the course of events, four university professors in the lower degrees of the Order revealed their secret knowledge to the public officials, charging that the sect posed a threat to Christianity and local order, condoned epicurean pleasure, justified suicide, and taught that “The end justified the means,” [Machiavellian principles], if it served a grand cause. In 1785, the police raid the lodges of the Order and public trials and banishments ensue with the Order being abolished. Weishaupt is expelled from the university where he taught and is offered a pension which he refused.

He writes of the Order, “I have contrived an explanation [of Freemasonry], which has every advantage, is inviting to Christians of every communion, gradually frees them from all religious prejudices, cultivates the social virtues, and animates them by a great, a feasible, and a speedy prospect of universal happiness, in a state of liberty and moral equality, freed from the obstacles, which subordination, rank and riches continually throw in our way. My explanation is accurate and complete; my means are effectual and irresistible. Our secret association works in a way that nothing can withstand, and man shall soon be free and happy... To fit man by Illumination for active virtue, to engage him to it by the strongest motives, to render the attainment of it easy and certain... This indeed will be employment suited to noble natures, grand in its views, and delightful in its exercise... And what is the general object? The Happiness of the human race... When we see the wicked so powerful and the good so weak, and that it is in vain to strive singly and alone against the general current of vice and oppression, the wish naturally arises in the mind that if it were possible to form a durable combination of the most worthy persons, who should work together in removing the obstacles to human happiness... And by fettering lessen vice; means which at the same time should promote virtue, by rendering the inclination to rectitude, hitherto so feeble, more powerful and engaging. Would not such an association be a blessing to the world?” The Illuminati, “...In 1783 the anarchistic tendencies of the order provoked public denunciations, which led, in 1784, to interference on the part of the Bavarian Government. As the activity of the Illuminati still continued, four successive enactments were issued against them [22 June, 1784; 2 March, and 16 August, 1785; and 16 August, 1787], in the last of which recruiting for the order was forbidden under penalty of death.”

“In two letters addressed to the Bishop of Freising [18 June and 12 November, 1785] Pope Pius VI had also condemned the order. As early as 16 February, 1785, Weishaupt had fled from Ingolstadt, and in 1787 he settled at Gotha. His numerous apologetic writings failed to exonerate either the order or himself, objects of the order were to be revealed to members only after their promotion to the ‘Priestly’ degree [Nacht, I, 68]. ~From Occult Theocracy, Lady Queenborough, published in 1933.

“The preliminary degrees were to serve for the selection, preparation, and concealment of the true ‘Illuminati’; the others were to open the way for the free religion and social organization of the future, in which all distinction of nations, creeds, etc., would disappear. The Government of the Order was administered by the superiors of the Minerval ‘Churches,’ ‘Provincials,’ ‘Nationals,’ and ‘Areopagites’ [who constituted the Supreme Council], under the direction of Weishaupt as general of the order. Members were acquainted only with their immediate superiors, and only a few trusted members knew that Weishaupt was the founder and supreme head of the order. All the members were obliged to give themselves a training in accordance with the aims of the society, and to make themselves useful, while the order, on its part, pledged itself to further their interests by the most effectual means. They were especially recommended to systematically observe persons and events, to acquire knowledge, and to pursue scientific research in so far as it might serve the purposes of the order."

"Concerning all persons with whom they had intercourse they were to gather information, and on all matters which could possibly affect either themselves or the order they were to hand in sealed reports; these were opened by superiors unknown to the writers, and were, in substance, referred to the general. The purpose of this and other regulations was to enable the order to attain its object by securing for it a controlling influence in all directions, and especially by pressing culture and enlightenment into its service."

"All Illuministic and official organs, the press, schools, seminaries, cathedral chapters (hence, too, all appointments to sees, pulpits, and chairs) were to be brought as far as possible under the influence of the organization, and princes themselves were to be surrounded by a legion of enlightened men, in order not only to disarm their opposition, but also to compel their energetic co-operation. A complete transformation would thus be effected; public opinion would be controlled; "priests and princes" would find their hands tied; the marplots who ventured to interfere would repent their temerity; and the order would become an object of dread to all its enemies." ~From the Catholic Encyclopedia. Alternative resources should be sought, as this work is most prejudicial in all matters relating to the Church, its adversaries, and its history.

Due to the many requests of friends and those seeking more knowledge regarding the "Illuminati" I have transcribed the following, which is the works of another. I do not attest to its accuracy, authenticity, nor to its precepts, merely present it as I have found it as written by Myron Fagan: "Behind the United States and its Constitution is a small group of men whose sole objective is to enslave the whole world and humanity in their satanic plot for a one world government. Now to give you a very clear picture of this satanic plot, I will go back to its beginning, back to the middle of the 18th Century, and name the men who put that plot into action."

"This satanic plot was launched back in the 1760's when it first came into existence under the name of the 'Illuminati.' This Illuminati was organized by one Adam Weishaupt who became a convert to Catholicism and later a Catholic priest. Then, at the request of the Financiers, he defected from the Catholic Church, and organized the Illuminat, which was financed by the International Bankers. Every war since then, beginning with the French Revolution, has been promoted by the Illuminati operating under various names and guises. I say under various names and guises because, after the Illuminati was exposed and became too notorious, Weishaupt and his co-conspirators began to operate under various other names. But why did the world conspirators choose the word 'Illuminati' for their satanic organization? Weishaupt himself said that the word is derived from Lucifer and means «holders of the light. 'The Luciferian Conspiracy.'"

'Weishaupt was a Jesuit-trained professor of Canon Law, teaching in Inglecot University, when he defected from Christianity to embrace the Luciferian Conspiracy. This was in 1770. He began to write out the master plan that was designed to give the "Synagogue of Satan," so named by Jesus Christ, ultimate world domination so they could impose the Luciferian ideology on what would remain of the human race after the final social cataclysm by use of Satanic Despotism. Weishaupt completed his task on May 1, 1776. (Communist nations continue to yearly conduct celebrations on May 1st in honor of this great event.) That was the day Weishaupt officially completed his plan, which required the destruction of all existing governments and religions. That objective was to be reached by dividing the masses of people into opposing camps in ever increasing numbers on political, social, economic, and other issues, the very conditions we have in the United States today. The opposing sides were then to be armed, and incidents were to be provided which would cause them to fight and weaken themselves, gradually destroying national governments and religious institutions.”

The Plan of Operation: “The main features of the Weishaupt plan of operation required his Illuminati to do the following things to help them to accomplish their purpose”:

1. “Monetary and sex bribery was to be used to obtain control of men already in high places in the various levels of all governments and other fields of endeavor. Once influential persons had fallen for the lies, deceits, and temptations of the Illuminati, they were to be held in bondage by application of political and other forms of blackmail, threats of financial ruin, public exposure, and physical harm, even death to themselves and loved members of their families.”
2. “The Illuminati who were on the faculty of colleges and universities were to cultivate students possessing exceptional mental ability and who belonged to well-bred families with international leanings, and recommend them for special training in Internationalism. Such training was to be provided by granting scholarships, like the Rhodes scholarship, to those selected by the Illuminati. All such scholars were to be first persuaded and then convinced that men of special talent and brains had the right to rule those less gifted on the grounds that the masses do not know what is best for them physically, mentally, and spiritually.”
3. “All influential people who were trapped to come under the control of the Illuminati, plus the students who had been specially educated and trained, were to be used as agents and placed behind the scenes of all governments as experts and specialists. They would advise the top executives to adopt policies which would, in the long run, serve the secret plans of the Illuminati’s one world conspiracy, and bring about the destruction of the governments and religions they were elected or appointed to serve.”
4. “They were to obtain absolute control of the press so that all news and information could be slanted to convince the masses that a one world government is the only solution to our many and varied problems. They were also to own and control all the national radio and TV channels.”

“After reading these four points of strategy, we have to admit that our mass communications media is controlled at all levels, and that at all levels our governments are also infiltrated and controlled, just like Weishaupt had planned back in the 1700’s. Unfortunately, few people are aware of this fact, which is why they make little sense out of many of the world events that take place today. Let us now go back to the first days of the Illuminati. Because Britain and France were the two greatest world powers in the late years of the 18th Century, Weishaupt ordered the Illuminati to foment the colonial wars, including the Revolutionary War in America, to weaken the British Empire. They were also ordered to organize the French Revolution in order to destroy the French Empire.”

“Weishaupt scheduled the French Revolution to start in 1789. However, in 1784, a true act of God placed the Bavarian Government in possession of evidence, which proved the existence of the Illuminati. And that evidence could have saved France if they, the French Government, had not refused to believe it.”

An Act of God: What was this act of God? Let me explain. It was in 1784 that Weishaupt had issued his orders for the French Revolution. A German writer named Zwack had put these orders into book form, which contained the entire Illuminati story and Weishaupt’s plan. A copy of this book was sent to the Illuminates in France, who were headed by Robespierre, whom Weishaupt had delegated to foment the French Revolution. The carrier was struck and killed by lightning as he rode on his way from Germany to France. The police found the subversive documents on his body, and turned them over to the proper authorities”

“After a careful study of the plot, the Bavarian Government ordered the police to raid Weishaupt’s newly organized lodges of the Grand Orient and homes of his most influential associates. All additional evidence thus discovered convinced the authorities that the documents were genuine copies of the conspiracy by which the Illuminati planned to use wars and revolutions to bring about the established. (Note: This is exactly in line with the United Nations plot of today.) In 1785, the Bavarian Government outlawed the Illuminati, and closed the lodges of the Grand Orient. In 1786, they published all the details of the conspiracy, the English title of that publication being "The Original Writings of the Order and Sect of the Illuminati".

"Copies of the entire conspiracy were sent to all the heads of Church and State in Europe. But the power of the Illuminati was so great that this warning was ignored. Nevertheless, «Illuminati» became a dirty word, and it went underground. At the same time, Weishaupt ordered Illuminates to infiltrate into the lodges of Blue Masonry, and form their own secret societies within all secret societies. Only Masons who proved themselves internationalists, and those whose conduct proved they had defected from God, were initiated into the Illuminati."

"In order to infiltrate into Masonic Lodges in Britain, Weishaupt invited John Robison over to Europe. Robison was a high degree Mason in the Scottish Rite. He was a professor of natural philosophy at Edinburgh University and secretary of The Royal Society of Edinburgh. Robison did not fall for the lie that the objective of the Illuminati was to create a benevolent dictatorship, but he kept his reaction to himself so well that he was entrusted with a copy of Weishaupt's revised conspiracy for study and safekeeping." Partially because the warnings about the Illuminati were ignored, the Revolution broke out in 1789, as allegedly prophesized by Weishaupt. In order to warn other governments to this danger, Robison published, in 1789, a book entitled "Proof of a Conspiracy to Destroy All Governments and Religions", but his warnings were also ignored.

The Napoleonic Wars: "The men who had directed the French Revolution decided to engage in another international plot. This time they organized the Napoleonic Wars to topple several more of the Crowned Heads of Europe. One branch of the Financiers financed Napoleon, while another branch financed Britain, Germany, and other nations. Of course, both branches received their orders from the masterminds of the Illuminati." "Immediately after the Napoleonic Wars, the Illuminati assumed that all the nations would be so desperate and so weary of wars that they would be glad for any solution. So the stooges of the Illuminati set up what they called "The Congress of Vienna». At this meeting they tried to create the first League of Nations, their first attempted one world government. They held the theory that all the Crowned heads of the European Government were so deeply in debt to them that they would willingly or unwillingly serve as their stooges. But the Czar of Russia caught on to the plot, and completely torpedoed it. The enraged Financiers then vowed that some day they would destroy the Czar and his entire family. And this very threat was later accomplished in 1917."

"We must bear in mind that the Illuminati was not set up to operate on a short-range basis. Normally, a conspirator of any type enters into a conspiracy with the expectation of achieving his objective during his own lifetime. But that was not the case with the Illuminati. True, they hoped to accomplish their objective during their lifetime but, paraphrasing 'The show must go on,' the Illuminati operates on the very long-range basis. Whether it will take scores of years or even centuries, they have dedicated their descendants to keep the plot going until they hope the conspiracy is achieved."

"The disastrous rebuff at the congress held in Vienna by the Czar of Russia did not by any means destroy the Illuminati conspiracy; it merely forced them to adopt a new strategy. Realizing that the one world idea was, for the moment, killed, the Illuminati decided that, to keep their power, they would have to tighten their control of the money system of the European nations."

To Control the Economy: "Earlier, the outcome of the Battle of Waterloo had been falsified. The Financiers had spread a story that Napoleon had won that battle, which brought about a panic on the stock market in England. All stocks had plumped down to practically zero. The International Bankers then bought all the stocks for virtually a penny on its dollar value, which gave them complete control of the economy of Britain and, virtually, of all Europe. Immediately after the congress held in Vienna, the International Bankers forced Britain to set up a new bank of England, which they controlled absolutely, and which they still control to this very day."

"Weishaupt died in 1830, but prior to his death, he prepared a revised version of the age-old conspiracy of the Illuminati, which, under various names, was to organize, finance, direct, and control all international organizations and groups by working their agents into executive positions at the top.

World Wars: "The First World War was to be fought so as to enable the Illuminati to destroy Czarism in Russia, as vowed by the International Bankers after the Czar had torpedoed his scheme at the congress held in Vienna, and to transform Russia into a stronghold of atheistic Communism. The differences stirred up by agents of the Illuminati between the German and British Empires would be used to foment this war. After the war would be ended, Communism was to be built up and used to destroy other governments and weaken religions."

The Second World War: "When and if necessary, was to be fomented by using the controversies between fascist and political Zionists. During this war, International Communism was to be built up until it equaled in strength that of the United Christendom. When it reached that point, it was to be contained and kept in check until required for the final social cataclysm."

The Third World War: "Is to be fomented by using the so-called controversy agents of the Illuminati would stir up between political Zionists and the leaders of the Moslem world. That war is to be directed in such a manner that all of Islam and political Zionism, Israel, will destroy each other while, at the same time, the remaining nations, once more divided on this issue, will be forced to fight themselves into a state of complete exhaustion-physically, mentally, spiritually, and economically. The stage will then be set to put the one world government into operation."

A One World Government: "In the final phases of the conspiracy, the One World Government is to consist of a key dictator—the head of the United Nations, the Council on Foreign Relations (the Illuminati group in the U.S.), a few billionaires, the Communists, and scientists who have proven their devotion to the great conspiracy. All others are to be integrated into a vast conglomeration of monopolized humanity, becoming total slaves of the conspiracy. In the United States, immediately after World War I, the Illuminati set up what they called the Council on Foreign Relations, commonly referred to as the CFR. This CFR is actually the Illuminati now operating in the U.S. Its hierarchy, the mastermind control of the CFR, to a very great extent, are descendants of the original Illuminati conspirators, even though many of them have changed their names to conceal this fact." "There is a similar establishment of the Illuminati in England, operating under the name of the British Institute of International Affairs"

"There are similar secret Illuminati organizations in France, Germany, and other nations operating under different names. All of these organizations, including the CFR, continuously set up numerous subsidiary or front organizations that are infiltrated into every phase of the various nations affairs. But, at all times, the operation of these organizations were and are masterminded and controlled by the Illuminati." ~By Myron Fagan.

It is hoped by revealing this "Conspiracy Theory," and through education one will seek and discover the truth. The only truth in the Illuminati being in that it reveals so cogently what we must never forget that this is one world and we must all learn to get along regardless of our religious or political affiliations. What the "Illuminati" encountered was religious, governmental, and clerical harassment, of the denial of their fundamental rights of freedom of speech, assembly and the press due to their covert beliefs in the overthrow of these institutional hierarchies, which were in power.

The ruling agencies could not sit idly by while they [the Order] plotted their overthrow by any means possible. The death of the sublime Order by repression, subjugation, incarceration, and intolerance necessitated a contagious secrecy, which could not help but contaminate those whom it touched. The undertaking of promoting thoughts and concepts soon became mired in that of conspiracy, various degrees of revelation, secrets, passwords, and mysteries and the dream of Adam Weishaupt was no exception. Weishaupt was a man radically concerned with social justice, the struggle against political tyranny, and was an Atheist.

Perhaps the latter was the undoing of the Order for there is no true separation of church and state in most countries, even today, although many claim such exists. Barruel's extensive polemic against "Jacobinism" and "Illuminism" went into print in England 1798. A work by the Englishman, John Robison, titled, "Proofs of a Conspiracy Against All Religions and Governments of Europe," was published in Great Britain and New York that same year. Robison was a Freemason who considered Illuminati Order to be a perversion of the craft, and although history does not record whether or not he was a Rosicrucian [they never admitted being a member], Robison cannot explain the popularity of Illuminist ideas, which contain so much Masonry in their literature.

manifestation of a far greater Atheistic evil called "Jacobinism." The "Jacobins" are a radical, anti-clerical and at times repressive faction during the French Revolution of 1789 that ironically, adopted their name from a Dominican order of priests, whose seized Monastery served as a Jacobin assembly place, formerly the "Breton Club," or "Friends of the Constitution."

During this period we also had other secret organizations such as the Illuminati, which created an enormous amount of confusion regarding the whole world of Masonry and its secret order. The illusion of "Illuminist Invincibility," Weishaupt had worked diligently to create was nurtured by rumors that the Order had survived in Germany was created by Carl Frederick Bahrdr [1741-1792]. Bahrdr, a militant Atheist, had suffered immensely due to his anti-clerical satires. He founded the German Union with other Atheists as a reading society devoted to the circulation of Enlightenment works. It was the Illuminist Areopagite, Bode, who conceived of the idea of such a group to be foolhardy.

"It is true, of course, that the phrase 'Separation of Church and State' does not appear in the American Constitution. But it was inevitable that some convenient term should come into existence to verbalize a principle so clearly and widely held by the American people.... The right to a fair trial is generally accepted to be a constitutional principle; yet the term 'Fair Trial' is not found in the Constitution. To bring the point even closer home, who would deny that 'Religious Liberty' is a constitutional principle? Yet that phrase too is not in the Constitution. The universal acceptance which all these terms, including 'Separation of Church and State,' have received in America would seem to confirm rather than disparage their reality as basic American democratic principles." ~Leo Pfeffer, Church, State, and Freedom, Beacon Press: Boston, 1967.

Adams is one of the greatest of American political philosophers which is reflected in his, "A Defense of the Constitutions of Governments of the United States of America," 3 volumes, 1787-1788, and his "Discourses on Davila" 1805. Correspondence between Jefferson and Adams shows the two men were the most accomplished thinkers of their times and rose to high political office in the New World, as they freely quote Greek, Latin, Italian and French to each other.

In this predominantly Christian land his grandson, and others, portray Adams as a Unitarian, but he was not even a Deist [believer in God]. In a letter he wrote to Thomas Jefferson, May 12, 1820, he states that a "Crowd of skepticisms" kept him awake at night [this letter has been suppressed by his Unitarian grandson]. In a letter, dated January 17, 1820, Adams defines God as, "An essence that we know nothing of," bold word in his times and he goes on to further state that the attempts of philosophers to get beyond this are "Games of push-pin."

The Incarnation he refers to as an "Awful blasphemy... Whether we call it fate or chance or God." Adams believed in a "Personal immortality" but is reluctant to admit that he had no proof of it. In another letter of May 15, 1817, he states he is often "Tempted to think that this would be the best of all possible worlds if there was no religion in it."

He finds the guilt associated with religion offensive and his family turns to a more respectable Unitarianism form of thinking. His grandson, Charles Francis Adams, 1835-1915, becomes a distinguished historian, and an Agnostic of the Leslie Stephen School as evidenced by his work, "Life and Letters." John Adams declares May 9, 1798 to be a day of fasting and prayer, "... To implore Heaven's mercy and benediction on the imperiled nation..."

It is on this day that the Illuminati hysteria in the New World begins. John Adams knows of the Jesuit Intrigue directed at the new "Protestant Republic" of the United States of America and writes to President Jefferson, "Shall we not have regular swarms of them here, in as many disguises as only a king of the gypsies can assume, dressed as painters, publishers, writers, and schoolmasters? If ever there was a body of men who merited eternal damnation on Earth and in Hell it is this Society of Loyola's." ~from The New Jesuits by George Riemer, 1971.

The first known Sado-Masochist safety text: The French doctor Francois Amedee Doppet confirms Meibom and Paullini's theory by expanding it, pointing out that women always have warm vaginas after a whipping. At the end of his article "Das Beisseln und sein Auswirkung auf den Geschlechtstrieb," the doctor gives safety tips for flagellants.

AD 1787-Founding of the African American Episcopal Church. Dissenters from Saint George's Church in

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

Philadelphia, splinter off due to racial discrimination.

AD1788-Publication of, 'Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire,' by Edward Gibbon, which Carlyle called "The splendid bridge from the old world to the new," is universally known and admired. When Gibbon wrote that, "It was not in this world that the primitive Christians were desirous of making themselves either agreeable or useful," every sensible reader understood his meaning.

AD1789-The Anti-Christ is supposed to arrive in this year, according to Cardinal Pierre d'Ailly, who lived 1350-1420.

A French philosopher and theologian, his best-known work is "Imago Mundi," Image of the World, in which he suggests that the Indies could be reached from the West, a little known fact, which was known to Christopher Columbus almost a hundred years later.

The French Bastille is stormed during the Revolution, and the Marquis de Sade's cell is pillaged. All of his furniture, his suites, linen, his library, and most important, his wicked manuscripts are "Burned, pillaged, torn up and carried off." ~Ibid

AD 1789-1792: Tippu Sultan's attack the destruction of Christian Churches from Kunnamkulam to Angamali the forcible conversion and persecution of Christians shifting of Church headquarters from Kandanad to Kottayam.

AD 1789-The "Jacobins," is a name given to the members of a radical French political organization that played a major role in the French Revolution.

Founded in 1789 as the "Society of Friends of the Constitution" it was thought to have Masonic connections; the name Jacobins being derived from the meeting place of the organization, a former Jacobin monastery in Paris. The leaders, Comte de Mirabeau, and Maximilien Robespierre subsequently become its primary figures. Many have questioned how it controlled or could persuade over 1200 related societies throughout France [enormous political power resulted from the close organization of these groups and from the use of opinion that was exercised by Jacobin leaders], in favor of a "Constitutional Monarchy," in order to guarantee basic human rights.

After the attempted escape from France of the high spending and repressive King Louis XVI in 1791, the Jacobins desired the extermination of all types of Royal Rulers.

In the National Convention, the French representative assembly, from 1792 to 1795, the club exerted immeasurable influence; no important action was undertaken by the National Convention, until the matter had been discussed in the meetings of the Jacobins first. Extremist elements of the group took control and eventually plunged the country into a "Reign of Terror," which again, some attributed to the Freemason connection. The French Jacobins opposed monarchies and insisted on the death of the king, death to all who opposed their concepts, and sent thousands of rivals to their death on the guillotine.

The organization lost its power with the downfall of Robespierre and was banned by the convention on November 11, 1794.

AD1789-The beginning of the French Revolution and Romanticism. The stress is now on individual rights and freedom through the equality of the person versus the institution. There is a resurgence in the supernatural [ghosts, fairies, ghouls, and haunting], and getting back to nature.

"Freedom of the Press" is Americanized in a First Amendment Right legislated by America's Masonic founders to separate freedom to express one's beliefs without persecution in contradiction to Church policy. It is ironic, that the very people who left their European roots to settle in the New World due to religious persecution would also persecute all those who did not agree with them in the New Protestant teachings.

"Nothing can exceed the mendacity of the religious press. I have had some little experience with political editors, and am forced to say, that until I read the religious papers, I did not know what malicious and slimy falsehoods could be constructed from ordinary words. The ingenuity with which the real and apparent meaning can be tortured out of language is simply amazing. The average religious editor is intolerant and insolent... And always accounts for the brave and generous actions of unbelievers by low, base, and unworthy motives." ~The Ghosts, Ingersoll's Works, Vol. 1, p. 260.

The early American colonies had all of the accoutrements of feudal theocracies; each colony had, an established and tax-funded church of the Christian religion.

All who do not accept the new Christian teachings will be considered stupid, ignorant, foolish, and subject to chastisement, and such condemnation as the new Church deems appropriate, "It is our desire that all the various nations, which are subject to our Clemency, and Moderation, should continue to profess that religion, which was delivered to the Romans by the Divine Apostle Peter, as it has been preserved by faithful tradition, and which is now professed by the Pontiff Damasus and by Peter, Bishop of Alexandria, a man of Apostolic Holiness. According to the Apostolic teaching and the Doctrine of the Gospel, let us believe in the one deity of the Father, the Son and the Holy Spirit, in equal majesty and in a 'Holy Trinity.' We authorize the followers of this Law to assume the title of Catholic Christians; but as for the others, since, in our judgment they are foolish madmen, we decree that they shall be branded with the ignominious name of heretics, and shall not presume to give to their conventicles the name of churches. They will suffer in the first place the chastisement of the Divine Condemnation and in the second the punishment of our authority, which in accordance with the will of Heaven we shall decide to inflict." ~Codex Theodosianus XVI.1.2, Henry Bettenson, Documents of the Christian Church, Oxford University Press, 1967, 2nd, 1st 1943, p. 22.

In Virginia, laws provide the death penalty for speaking against the Divinity or tenets of the Christian faith, Delaware prohibits anyone who is not a believer in the "Trinitarian Christianity" from holding a public office, South Carolina officially declare the "Christian Protestant" doctrine to be the "Established religion of the State," and further stipulates, "That God is publicly to be worshiped" and also that, "The Christian Religion is the only true religion."

AD 1789-1790-Illuminati booklets are published pertaining to "The Illuminati," a secret group that seeks a bloodless revolution and establishment of the millennium on earth. May 5, 1789, The French Revolution under King Louis XVI the king is dethroned and church properties are confiscated. Both are corrupt and the pheasants revolt to overthrow the political and religious oligarchies that have driven the people to poverty. Freemasonry and Illuminati symbols are represented as emblems of the revolutionists. Some members of these two secret groups were for the revolution while others were against it, so there is no proof that the revolution was instigated by either group. The anti-Illuminati book "Proofs of Conspiracy" deepens the conspiracy factor theory in 1797 by spreading more rumors and innuendos.

AD 1790-The Second Coming is predicted by the Irishman, Francis Dobbs.

AD 1792-End of the World: This is the date of the End of the World calculated by some believers in the American Shaker movement [Quakers].

AD 1792-1878-born Giovanni Maria Mastai-Ferretti on the 13th of May, later to become Pope Pius IX [1846-1978], serving the longest pontificate of any Pope, he was refused admission to the Pope's Noble Guards because of epileptic attacks and he turned his energies to the study of theology. When his epilepsy passed away, Giovanni was ordained a priest. In 1823 he accompanied the apostolic delegate to Chile, and became the first Pope to have visited the New World.

William Carey's Enquiry into the Obligations of Christians to Use Means for the Conversion of Heathens evokes waves of strong evangelical missionary voluntarism.

Space Aliens(?): The Chilean Gods are portrayed as white, "Beings descended from the sky in flying vessels... White men in flying rings, who can touch the sky." ~Chilam Balam.

Pope Pius IX flees from Rome in the revolution of 1848 [by an anticlerical group of liberals who sought to overthrow the power of the Church] to Gaeta, Naples, returning two years later devoted to abolish liberalism in all forms. He affirms the Church's position over control of education, science, and culture. His support of Ultramontanism [see AD 156] results in the confirmation of the Infallibility of the Pope... Said to have been Anti-Semitic and neither a believer in liberalism nor freedom of the press. Many Italians were arrested, executed, or forced into exile for disagreeing with the Catholic Church.

It is Pope Pius IX who wrote the "Syllabus of Errors" condemns any pre-conceived ideas that the dogmas of the Church "Are indiscriminately the object of natural philosophy or science." Whenever religion and science differ, religion must always prevail. In the Counter Reformation, it is dozen of years of Puritanism, and the short-sighted neglect of greater evils that leave the Papal Court still very corrupt.

It was the scorn of Europe, with the exception of the genial Pope Benedict XIV, until the French Revolution, the disdainful treatment of it by Napoleon, and the occupation of Italy by the French stirred it, like an aged lady, into a flutter of futile agitation.

During the fifty years of grim reaction, which followed the fall of Napoleon, it supported the vilest measures of the Catholic monarchs and felt that it could safely return to its old ways with lavish spending, nepotism, and corruption. Too loose but able Cardinal Secretaries of State manages the Church for Popes of questionable character, and the period closes with the futilities of Pope Pius IX. Literature still survives regarding the Roman Catholic Church and references to “The Syllabus,” or the “Syllabus of Condemned Opinions.”

A “Syllabus” was an enjoyable medieval drink composed of sugar, cream, brandy, sherry, and lemon. The word means “A collection,” and the ecclesiastical historians will tell you that it was selected as the title of a number of propositions condemned by Pope Pius IX. Amongst these propositions, which Catholics were strictly forbidden to review was almost every principle of the American Constitution that had any reference to religion.

The good Catholic is supposed to regard with abhorrence such statements as that Church and State must be separated, that the ecclesiastical authority has no power over the secular, that education is the business of the State, that there must be complete religious freedom, that a man may choose his religion in the light of his reason and conscience, that all sects must be equal in the law, that a Christian is validly married in a registry office, etc.

“The statement that Thomas Jefferson meant his 'Wall of Separation' to be 'One-directional,' only to protect the church from incursions by the state 'Is an example of one of the Religious Right's more blatant lies. It is impossible to determine where this myth originated, but we do know that it began appearing with increasing frequency in the early 1990s. The phrase 'One-directional' often appears in quotation marks to make it appear as if it were lifted from a letter or personal writing of Jefferson's. Of course, Jefferson said no such thing about his 'Wall,' as any of his biographers or church-state historians will readily testify. Jefferson's writings indicate beyond a doubt that he believed separation would protect both church and state.” ~Robert Boston, Why The Religious Right is Wrong About Separation of Church & State, Buffalo, NY: Prometheus, 1993, p. 222.

Under Pope Leo XIII, due to his blunders, the Papacy lost tens of millions of its subjects, but one of the developments of the new scientific civilization gave it a fresh hope. The scientific conquest of the death rate led to a rapid increase of population, and, while more advanced countries met this by industrial progress and the control of the birth rate, the Church forbade any such control, under the usual threat of “Pain of hell,” in impoverished Catholic countries, and from these, Ireland, Italy, and Poland in particular.

This caused an illusion of growth in the richest and best-educated countries in the world, and gave the Popes, for the first time since the Reformation, a large power of political bargaining and a new prestige. Popes sought to retain many adherents even in advanced countries, and the present Pope, reverting to the most fanatical traditions of the institution, sought alliances with corrupt forces of reaction to crush the spreading rebellion in Catholic countries, duped the democracies, and curried favors with what he expected to be the triumphant new autocracies. ~See Fr. Joseph McCabe's History of the Popes, 1939, the Catholic work of Mgr. Mann, covering the earlier period, Lives of the Popes in the Early Middle Ages, 13 vols. 1902-15 is richly documented, but equally rich in illustration of the vices of the modern apologist. Prof. Ludwig Pastor's, History of the Popes from the End of the Middle Ages Engl. Trans., 14 vols., AD 1891-1924, is a learned and conscientious study of the Papacy during the Renaissance, the Reformation, and the Counter-Reformation, written by a Catholic under the illusion that Pope Leo XIII meant what he said when he threw open the Vatican Secret Archives to scholars after, as Pastor admits, abstracting in the choicest records, and urged Catholic historians to tell the truth.

Though there was still much corruption in the Papal Court in the nineteenth century, Cardinal Vannutelli, father of three children, tried to succeed Pope Leo, although there are no formal charges against the character of Pope Leo XIII, but the religious sagacity and diplomatic distinction attributed to him in most literature are Catholic myths. His official biographer, Mgr. T. Serclaes, in Two Vols., 1894, shows that he was a complete failure in diplomatic missions when he was a Cardinal, and Pope Pius IX set him aside. He is elected Pope largely because he is not expected to live long.

Pope Pius IX's refusal to recognize the French Republic until it was too late, or to be reconciled to the Italian Government, led to the loss of tens of millions of Catholics; his intrigues with England against the Irish, and with Germany against the Poles, failed, and his pedantic rebuke of the American Bishops had to be effectually disowned.

In Europe and America, the Church lost, largely owing to Pope Pius's blunders, more subjects than it had lost at the Reformation. ~From the works of Father J. McCabe, Rationalists Encyclopaedia. It was in 1869 that Giovanni Ferretti, as Pope Pius IX, will issue a decree declaring abortion sinful and banning it entirely. His reason was unconventional in that it had nothing to do with morality as the change in doctrine originated with the acceptance of the Immaculate Conception of Mary. ~Abortion: An Eternal Social and Moral Issue edited by A. Landes, M. Siegel & C.

Foster p. 3, 1994, Information Plus, Wylie TX.

In the Bible, the prophet, Jeremiah, appears to have wished that he had been aborted, “Why did I come forth from the womb, to see labor and sorrow, with my days spent in shame?” ~Jeremiah 20:18.

“For the life of the flesh is in the blood: and I have given it to you upon the altar to make an atonement for your souls: for it is the blood that maketh an atonement for the soul.” —Leviticus 17:11, which means life begins in the woman 18 days after conception.

This unwarranted doctrine imagined that Mary [not Jesus] was without sin from the moment of conception. The penalty for abortions was excommunication and not civil punishment. In 1968, the Encyclical ‘Humanae Vitae’ by Giovanni Montini, as Pope Paul VI, will ban all contraceptions.

The Church is more concerned with the perpetuation of Christianity through new members [births] than the safety of women, “Ironically, the Pope's opposition to contraceptives results in hundreds of thousands of abortions, most in illegal and unsafe conditions that threaten women's lives. Due primarily to the lack of readily available contraception, 55 million abortions are performed in the world annually. Worldwide, 182,000 women die each year from dangerous abortions. In the United States, where... Women's right to abortion has been recognized since 1973 [over the Church's strenuous opposition], the death rate for women who obtain abortions has dropped almost 90%. So by opposing contraceptives and legalized abortion, the Pope is in effect sentencing many women to die.” ~Joseph Daleiden.

The seed had already been planted by the 4th century, “Why do you sow where the field is eager to destroy the fruit, where there are medicines of sterility [oral contraceptives], where there is murder before birth? You do not even let a harlot remain only a harlot, but you make her a murderess as well... Indeed, it is something worse than murder, and I do not know what to call it; for she does not kill what is formed but prevents its formation. What then? Do you condemn the gift of God and fight with his [natural] laws?... Yet such turpitude... The matter still seems indifferent to many men, even to many men having wives. In this indifference of the married men there is greater evil filth; for then poisons are prepared, not against the womb of a prostitute, but against your injured wife. Against her are these innumerable tricks.” ~John Chrysostom, Homilies on Romans 24, 391 C.E.

“You may see a number of women who are widows before they are wives. Others, indeed, will drink sterility [oral contraceptives] and murder a man not yet born, [and some commit abortion].” ~Saint Jerome, Letters 22:13, 396 C.E.

“This proves that you [Manicheans] approve of having a wife, not for the procreation of children, but for the gratification of passion. In marriage, as the marriage law declares, the man and woman come together for the procreation of children. Therefore, whoever makes the procreation of children a greater sin than copulation, forbids marriage and makes the woman not a wife but a mistress, who for some gifts presented to her is joined to the man to gratify his passion.” ~Saint Augustine, The Morals of the Manichees 18:65, 388 C.E. Note: Augustine had a lover, and a son, out of wedlock.

AD 1792-Shakers: a name applied to the United Society of Believers in Christ's Second Coming is a sect established in Great Britain, 1750. The first leaders were James Wardley and Jane Wardley, his wife, who seceded from the Society of Friends. Jane claimed to have a special Spiritual Illumination and to have “Received a call” to go forth and testify for the truth [Predicting the End of the World].

AD 1792-1822-Percy Bysshe Shelley, English poet, linguist, philosopher, free thinker. His beliefs concerning love, marriage, human rights, revolution, and politics caused him to be considered a dangerous immoralist by many in his time.

The Church has long been preparing for such freethinkers as Shelley ever since Emperor Constantine had bequeathed the Roman clergy with political power in the Fourth Century. In 1444 Caxton published the first book ever printed in England. Thirty years later, the Bishop of London convokes the prelates and priests for the express purpose of spiking the notion of ‘Freedom of the Press,’ exhorting the cabal, “If we do not destroy this dangerous invention, it will one day destroy us!” Soon after, the Common Law of England would prohibit ‘Freedom of Speech’ and the press if it caused “Reproach” to the Roman Church or “Derided” the Bible.

Centuries later, the Church will claim it has always stood for ‘Freedom of the Press’ and of the ‘Freewill’ of man. Shelley would use the press to publish his vision of humanity and how “Power and priest-craft” had duped the ignorant masses.

The bold and arrogant Shelley is expelled from the University of Oxford, at the age of 18, for publishing ‘The Necessity of Atheism,’ which began with the words, “There is no God,” which he posted a copy to

To Pope Pius XII, “I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians.” ~Mahatma Gandhi

"Every Bishop in the Kingdom" and placarded the chapel with atheistic signs. Shortly after his departure from Oxford, the Lord Chief Justice of Great Britain, Lord Ellenborough, sentenced an aged publisher to prison and gave him a bankrupting fine, for printing Tomas Paine's, 'The Age of Reason,' and Shelley publishes an open letter to the eminent and ignorant jurist, pleading for the right to think, to investigate, and to publish.

Shelley's contention was that truth is only found when there is an opportunity for open discussion. "That, which is false will ultimately be controverted by its own falsehood. That which is true needs but publicity to be acknowledged." ~Percy Bysshe Shelley, by John Patrick Michael Murphy, 1999.

In Shelley's day, the radical concept of 'Freedom of the Press' was associated with atheism, a most provocative perspective, which was deemed a threat to both the Church and the State. If one attacked the Church it was blasphemy, if one attacked the State or its policies, it was sedition. Both were illegal. The Law said you can't blaspheme, the Clergy said you must not be seditious. One protected the clergy; the other shielded the politicians, which Shelley attacked with the truth, using a printing press.

Shelley wrote to the Queen, "Which blasphemously derided the truth of Christian Revelation and denied the existence of God." He would be denounced and disowned by his father, a ranking Member of Parliament. Shelley was ahead of his time, informing the Lord Chief Justice that if religion would admit free discussion, "...The Mohammedan, the Jew, the Christian, the Deist, and the Atheist, will live together in one community, equally sharing the benefits which arise from its association, and united in the bonds of brotherly love."

That didn't happen then and it does not appear it will happen in our lifetime, but a debate would arise in England concerning the rights of human beings, and this discussion will cause Thomas Paine's "Sedition" to be read in his native England as it had been in America a generation earlier, with the Crown reluctantly curtailing the enforcement of the Blasphemy Act of 1698 and even granting the public's right to criticize the government itself.

Civil marriage is established after the French Revolution. One can now marry without benefit of the Church.

AD 1793-1793-The last execution of a witch in Poland.

AD 1794-End of the World: The Shakers, again, predict Doomsday. Charles Wesley, brother of John Wesley who is founder of the Methodist Church, also predicts Doomsday. John Wesley believes that the End of the World will come in 1836, while other members suggest 1830 and 1847.

Based on the text of Daniel 8:14, a New England farmer named William Miller expects the World to End in 1843 or 1844, and his followers pinpoint October 22, 1844 as the Final Day.

Unwilling to accept the Great Disappointment that results when October 22 passes without Christ's return, some explain that Christ began to cleanse the "Heavenly Sanctuary" on that date, thus giving birth to the modern Adventist movement.

AD 1794-Duke Carl Theodore of Bavaria issues an edict banning all unauthorized societies. His second edict specifically bans Freemasonry and the Illuminati. Professor Weishaupt, the founder of the Illuminati flees Bavaria to Regensburg.

Authorities find treatises and other documents pertaining to the sanctioning of suicide, experiments with chemicals, and attempts at abortion by a woman who had become pregnant by him. A government commission later publishes the papers of the Illuminati.

AD 1794-Doctor Sigismund Bacstrom is initiated into the Rosicrucians. In his manuscripts he contends that Freemasonry had its origin in the Sanctuary of the Rosy Cross. Many secret organizations may have had their origins in a work described as "The Crata Repoa." A translation was published in the Masonic journal known as "The Kneph."

Prussia becomes the first Christian German state to abolish the death penalty for homosexuality, in effect since 1532, and replaces it with flogging and imprisonment.

AD 1795-Richard Brothers, who calls himself "God's Almighty Nephew," is certain that he will be the one to lead the Ten Lost Tribes of Israel and that he will become King of England. He is committed to an Insane Asylum.

AD 1795-Nathaniel Brassey Halhead, a friend of Richard Brothers, predicts the End of the World on November 19th.

AD 1796-1859- Mann, Horace, creator of the American school system. Of poor parents he received little in the way of formal education except by his own exertions and when he became a prosperous attorney he took up education as the work of his life. It is not generally realized that the man who is so much honored as a freethinker though the "Dictionary of American Biography" candidly describes him as "A Puritan without a theology."

He was not merely outside the churches, he believed in an impersonal God and rejected the idea of immortality. ~From the works of the former Benedictine Monk, Joseph McCabe.

AD 1796-Angelo Soliman, born a North African slave, educated and won his freedom. A Mason, who married a widowed baroness in 1781, upon his death in 1796, his remains are claimed by the last Holy Roman Emperor Francis II, who claims his body either out of anger for his being a Mason or a Free black man is not known, but his body is flayed, stuffed, and exhibited in the private museum of Roman Emperor Francis II.

AD 1796-Dissenting parishioners of the John Street Methodist Episcopal Church in New York City separate due to their diminutive involvement in church affairs. Officially becoming the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church in 1848.

AD 1797-General Napoleon seizes much of the Papal States [Central Italy] and it is not until 1815 that the Congress of Vienna restores most of the land to the Vatican.

AD 1797-Czar Paul of Russia assigns the Knights of Malta a considerable amount of property in his domain, and in return is elected Grand Master, but his election is not recognized by Pope Pius VI. From that time forward the Pope has named the grand master of the bailiff who takes his place.

AD 1797-"Proofs of Conspiracy against All the Religions and Governments of Europe, Carried On in the Secret Meetings of Free Masons, Illuminati, and reading Societies, Collected from Good Authorities" is published proclaiming to have knowledge of Masonry and its secrets. Count Cagliostro, while in his prison cell in Italy, proclaims his knowledge of the Illuminati and Freemasonry conspiracies in order to gain his freedom [It didn't work]. "The Order of the Illuminati" is founded by a Bavarian Law Professor, Adam Weishaupt and later banned by the government. He believed that the Jesuits were responsible for the oppression of the Bavarians and the established church [Catholic] must be challenged and replaced if the people were ever to improve their plight.

Weishaupt foresaw a day when man would live in a universal brotherhood where the dictates of organized religion and class distinctions would not prevail. His group of disciples met in secrecy and their correspondence is encoded to avoid interception. He felt that Free Masons would accept his ideas and set about to recruit them. The Illuminati spread through Bavaria, Switzerland, Bohemia, Hungary, and Italy. At some time he changes his views and includes the Masons in his clandestine plots.

Weishaupt's book purports a proof of conspiracies against all religions and governments by a secret order that holds secret meetings called Free Masons. The first President of the United States, George Washington, when confronted with the publication states, "... The nefarious and dangerous plan and doctrines of the Illuminati," dismisses further discussion since he has knowledge that the Masons are not involved.

Thomas Jefferson reads the "Proofs of Conspiracy" and says, "...If Weishaupt had written here, where no secrecy is necessary in our endeavors to render men wise and virtuous, he would not have thought of any secret machinery for that purpose." Jefferson defended the "Order of the Illuminati" and its founder, Adam Weishaupt.

The John Birch Society, an extremist rightwing group, publishes the "Proofs of Conspiracy" by Weishaupt again in 1967. Prominent deists and skeptics in the American Colonies were often Freemasons, among them Franklin, Washington and, many believed, Jefferson. The collapse of traditional puritan institutions, and the disestablishment of the major religious groups created a pervasive neurosis and anxiety throughout religious groups.

"The attitude of the age was one of enlightened reason, tolerance, and free thought. The Founding Fathers would turn in their graves if the Christian Extremists should have their way with this country."

Worse still for the churches [a fact very few know or is revealed by the religious institutions], of the some 4 million people living in America in 1790, Christian groups could claim less than 5% of these in their membership rolls. Clergymen tried every conceivable theme to exploit Christianity in their quest for new followers.

AD 1797- "Act only on that maxim through which you can at the same time will that it should become universal law." ~Kant, research courtesy of Hank Shiver on the Internet

AD 1798- On the 9th of May, 1798, a minister, Rev. Jedediah Morse of Boston preached to his congregation. Known as an intense orator, geographer and a supporter of the revolution in France, his enthusiasm for the revolution waned with the "Astonishing increase in irreligion" precipitated by the "Terror" [plague] in Europe and the rise in Atheism [The term "Black Death" was not used to refer to the plagues of 1347 through 1351, contemporaries usually referring to it as the "Pestilence," or the "Great Mortality," believing it was God's atonement for the sins of mankind, the last plague occurring in 1722 across the face of Europe].

Morse warned his North Church Street audience that a corresponding force was at work in America. Historian Vernon Stauffer states: "If, said Morse, a contributory cause for the present 'hazardous and afflictive position' of the country is sought, it will readily be found in 'The astonishing increase of irreligion.' The evidence of this, in turn, is to be found, not only in the prevailing atheism and materialism of the day, and all the vicious fruits, which such impious sentiments have borne, but as well as the slanders with which newspapers are filled and the personal invective and abuse with which private discussion is laden, all directed against the representatives of government, against man, many of whom have grown gray in their country's service and whose integrity has been proved incorruptible. It is likewise to be discovered in the reviling and abuse which, coming from the same quarter, has been directed against the clergy, who, according to their influence and ability, have done what they could to support and vindicate the government..."

"When the question is raised respecting the design and tendency of these things, their inherent and appalling impiety is immediately disclosed. They 'give reason to suspect that there is some secret plan in operation, hostile to true liberty and religion, which requires to be aided by these vile slanders.'"

Morse maintained that a Master Plan did exist, the end result of which had already been achieved in France [revolution], and was being implemented throughout Europe and America as well. Morse went on to warn that during the last two decades, a secret order calling themselves "The Illuminated" had plotted against thrones and altars everywhere, and had already established itself in the United States.

Jacobinism, known as the hidden "Manifestation of the Illuminati" was at work. Thomas Paine's "Age of Reason" is regarded as part of the general plan to accomplish the "demoralization of the people." "Give to every human being every right that you claim for yourself." ~Thomas Paine, free thinker.

"Illuminism" had invaded the New World. Morse was vigilant not to mention Freemasonry as part of this plot; he followed Robison's lead, maintaining that "Illuminism" had been embedded onto the craft, and represented a corruption of Masonic Doctrine. Rev. Morse's sermon, with the circulation of Barruel's "Memoirs" and Robison's "Proofs of a Conspiracy" works created a widespread alarm throughout New England.

These conspiracy theories were vague, yet enticing to explain, to the shallow and the uninformed, many of the actual events taking place in Colonial America. There was a spirit of irreligion in the colonies, and the old puritan institutions were disintegrating. "The day that this country ceases to be free for irreligion, it will cease to be free for religion, except for the sect that can win political power." ~Supreme Court Justice Robert Houghwout Jackson, dissenting opinion in Zorach v. Clauson, 343 US 306-1952.

One of the most distinguished free thinkers in the early days of the Colonies was Thomas Paine. On January 10, 1776, his 50-page pamphlet advocating independence from England came off the press; it was called, Common Sense. It is credited with being the flicker that started the fire that led to the American Revolution. A Royal Proclamation against seditious writings was issued on May 21, 1792, and on June 8, Paine was charged with sedition and his trial was set for December 18.

Replying to these ridiculous charges, Paine wrote, "If to expose the fraud and imposition of monarchy and every species of hereditary government, to lessen the oppression of taxes, to propose plans for the education of helpless infancy, and the comfortable support of the aged and distressed, to endeavor to conciliate nations to each other, to extirpate the horrid practice of war, to promote universal peace, civilization, and commerce, and to break the chains of political superstition, and raise degraded man to his proper rank; if these things be libelous, let me live the life of a libeler, and let the name of libeler be engraved on my tomb!"

"Of all the tyrannies that affect mankind, tyranny in religion is the worst; every other species of tyranny is limited to the world we live in; but this attempts to stride beyond the grave, and seeks to pursue us into eternity." ~Thomas Paine, Age of Reason.

"It is because many enlightened Americans are convinced of this truth that they not only do they not show the doubts they may have about the reality of Christianity but even hesitate to join new sects such as the Unitarians. They are afraid that they may lead indirectly to the destruction of the Christian religion." ~The Frenchman, Alexis de Tocqueville on American Christianity.

The concepts of the Enlightenment were being realized on a number of levels, which included the political rights as well as the commitment to material progress. A public debate followed Morse's revelations in countless New England journals such as the "Independent Chronical" and the "Massachusetts Mercury," but these also failed to produce any new evidence that the "Illuminism" had survived and now existed in the lodges in the New World. No lodges were uncovered and no names were revealed.

Thomas Jefferson, who would later stand accused of being part of this non-existent Illuminist conspiracy in the New World, had read Barruel's scurrilous work regarding the Order. As many before him, even he accepted much of Weishaupt's rationale in defense of "Illuminism" found in the chief's "Aopologie der Illuminaten."

In a letter Jefferson wrote to Bishop Madison in 1800, he states: "I have lately by accident got a sight of a single volume [the 3rd] of the Abbe Barruel's Antisocial Conspiracy, which gives me the first idea I have ever had of what is meant by the Illuminatism against which Illuminate Morse, as he is now called, and his ecclesiastical associates have been making such a hue and cry. Barruel's own parts of the book are perfectly the ravings of a Bedlamite. But he quotes largely from Weishaupt [sic] whom he considers as the founder of what he calls the order. As you may not have had an opportunity as forming a judgment of this cry of 'Mad Dogs,' which has been raised against his doctrines, I will give you the idea I have formed from only an hour's reading of Barruel's quotations from him, which, you may be sure, are not the most favorable."

"Weishaupt seems to be an enthusiastic philanthropist. He is among those [as you know the excellent Price and Priestley also are] who believes in the infinite perfectibility of man. He thinks he may in time be rendered so perfect that he will be able to govern himself in every circumstance, so as to injure none, to do all the good he can, to leave government no occasion to exercise their powers over him, and, of course, to render political government useless. This, you know, is Godwin's doctrine, and that is what Robinson [sic], Barruel, and Morse had called a conspiracy against all government..."

Hence, Catholic supporters blame the "Virus" of Freemasonry for almost every political assassination, revolution and war thereafter. The "Evidence" for such preposterous claims is a potpourri of facts mixed with myths; most particularly in the perception of the Vatican who see the infestation of Masonry to be found worldwide doing its diabolical and sinister work.

With the French expulsion of the Pope from Rome by Napoleon's soldiers, the Jews are finally granted equal rights and all earlier special laws relating to their status are revoked.

Napoleon comes to power and takes the Pope prisoner, February 15, 1798.

AD1799-1890-Ignaz von Döllinger, Roman Catholic Church Historian is excommunicated for refusing to accept the new Church dogma in 1871 [for refusing to accept the doctrine of "Pastor Aeternus" which is passed on July 18, 1870 proclaiming the infallibility of the Pope in religious matters]

The Church is relentless in its pursuit of attempting to give the Papacy powers that are not only void from Scripture but also contrary to common sense. The Church claims its "Doctrine of Papal Infallibility," "Ex Cathedra," applies only to pronouncements regarding faith and morals. Not only is the "Extraordinary Magisterium," teaching authority, infallible, but the "Ordinary Magisterium," also. "Papal Infallibility and Biblical inerrancy are the two ecclesiastical versions of this human idolatry. Both Papal Infallibility and Biblical inerrancy require widespread and unchallenged ignorance to sustain their claims to power. Both are doomed as viable alternatives for the long-range future of anyone." ~Bishop John Shelby Spong Resurrection: Myth or Reality? San Francisco: HarperCollins, 1994, p. 99.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

The "Constitution Dei Filius," of the First Vatican Council, set forth the twofold nature of the Church's infallible Magisterium in these words: "It is a duty to believe... That the Church puts forward to be believed as revealed truth either in a solemn judgment [a formal ex cathedra pronouncement such as the Immaculate Conception] or by her ordinary and universal Magisterium."

As a result of the restoration of the old order at the Vatican, in Italy, the Jews are again ghettoized and the severe restrictions against them are reimposed.

In 1799, "... People were already rejoicing that the Papacy and the Church had come to an end. But the priest, Count Antonio Rosmini... Published his ideas in 1848 in the treatise 'Of the Five Plagues of the Church,' in which he also particularly recommended the reform of the Church... The demand for reform in the States of the Church was in fact not unjustified." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 14, 264, 265.

AD 1800-Listen to your every day Sunday evangelists on television and they will say that America is a Christian nation, yet, in the 18th century, "Gentlemen, we are not, nor have we ever been, a Christian nation... The United States is not a Christian nation any more than it is a Jewish or Mohammedan nation."

~John Adams, second U.S. President.

The Roman Church claims to be a friend of the Jews, yet, Pope Pius VII, 14 March 1800 to 20 August 1823, is known as being an 'Anti-Semite' amongst Jewish writers.

Rome continues to attempt to keep the Bible from men, and maintain their ignorance in what is said Biblically; Pope Pius VII, 1800-1823, denounces the Bible Society and expresses shock at the circulation of the Holy Scriptures. Pope Pius VII states, "It is evidence from experience, that the holy Scriptures, when circulated in the vulgar [English] tongue, have, through the temerity of men, produced more harm than benefit."

Pope Leo XII calls the Protestant Bible [King James Bible] the "Gospel of the Devil" in an encyclical letter of 1824, while Pope Gregory XVI, 1831-1846, railed "Against the publication, distribution, reading, and possession of books of the Holy Scriptures translated into the vulgar tongue [English]."

Pope Leo XII, in January 1850, also condemns the Bible Societies and admits the fact that the distribution of Scripture has "Long been condemned by the Holy Chair [the Papal seat: the Pope]."

In Washington D.C., We'wha, a two-spirit leader and representative for the Native American Zuni tribe, is married to a man.

AD 1801-1881-Littre, Maximilien Paul Emile, distinguished French philologist, author of a monumental "Dictionary of French Language," in five large volumes.

This alone entitled him to a seat in the French Academy but the Bishop Dupanloup, the Catholic leader, long kept him out and resigned when he was at last admitted. Littre was a notorious Positivist, agnostic, without any mysticism.

Yet the Catholic Encyclopedia now counts him amongst the lambs. With a blatant untruth it says that when he was near death he "Asked to be baptized, and he died a Catholic." A French Catholic, J. d'Arzac, tells the truth in a book on Littre. His female relatives were pious and they got a Jesuit priest to baptize him when he was dying and "Could no longer speak." ~Fr. J. McCabe.

AD 1802-1885-Victor Hugo, writer, poet, free thinker, in one of his remarkable, "Religion et les Religions," derides and denounces the basic tenets and pretensions of Christianity, claiming to the clergy that the Devil is only the monkey of superstition, and Hell is an outrage on humanity and a blasphemy against God; and when you tell me that your deity made you in his own image, I reply that he must be very ugly.

Hugo's great oration on Voltaire, a free thinker, in 1878, roused the ire of the Catholic Bishop of Orleans, who reprimanded him in a public letter, and Hugo's response is, "France had to pass an ordeal. France was free. A man traitorously seized her in the night, threw her down and garrotted her. If a people could be killed, that man had slain France. He made her dead enough for him to reign over her. He began his reign, since it was a reign, with perjury, lying in wait, and massacre. He continued it by oppression, by tyranny, by despotism, by an unspeakable parody of religion and justice. He was monstrous and little. The Te Deum, Magnificat, Salvum fac, Gloria tibi, were sung for him. Who sang them? Ask yourself. The law delivered the people up to him. The Church delivered God up to him. Under that man sank down right, honor, country; he had beneath his feet oath, equity, probity, the glory of the flag, the dignity of men, the liberty of citizens. That man's prosperity disconcerted the human conscience. It lasted nineteen years. During that time you were in a palace. I was in exile. I pity you, sir." ~Victor Hugo.

Victor Hugo's death-chamber was unprofaned by the presence of a priest. Victor Hugo is laid to rest in the Church of Saint Genevieve, resecularised as the Pantheon for the occasion, so that the Church may claim him as one of their own [and the interment took place without any religious rites].

AD 1801- "I have examined all the known superstitions of the world, and I do not find in our particular superstition of Christianity one redeeming feature. They are all alike founded on fables and mythology. Millions of innocent men, women and children, since the introduction of Christianity, have been burnt, tortured, fined and imprisoned ..." ~Thomas Jefferson, third U.S. president, in a letter to William Short.

End of the World: The sky is falling: Pierre Turrel predicts the End of the World and all of humanity. Persecution by Church and State is directed at followers of Judaism, but the Church believes that some Jews must be allowed to live, because the anti-Semitic Gospel of John, Book of Revelation indicates that they have a distinct role to play in the "End times."

"The Framers wrote the Constitution as a secular document not because they were hostile to Christianity but because they did not want to imply that the new federal government would have any authority to meddle in religion." ~Robert Boston, Why The Religious Right is Wrong About Separation of Church & State, Buffalo, NY: Prometheus, 1993, pp. 223-24.

However, since the Church at this time believes that all Jews are responsible for Jesus' death, past, present and future, then it is acceptable to make Jews' lives quite wretched, but Jews can break away from this oppression by merely giving up their religion, converting to Christianity, and being baptized. Consequent attacks against the dejected Jews are mostly racially motivated, and perpetrated by devout Christian, governmental and secular groups and individuals.

The Jewish people are viewed as a separate demonic race more so than as followers of a different religion. France: The Marquis de Sade, and his publisher, Nicolas Masse, are arrested after the police search finds lustful and licentious manuscripts and printed works, including his, Juliette and La Nouvelle Justine and a tapestry depicting, "The most obscene subjects, most of which were drawn from the infamous novel Justine." ~Ibid.

AD 1802- Hugh Miller, a stone mason, was a pious member of the Presbyterian Church of Scotland, but throughout his life was fascinated by science and literature. The Old Red Sandstone, 1841, and some of his other geological works are notable from a scientific point of view, but he became obsessed with the "Conflict between religion and science" concerning the age of the earth as estimated by the geologists. "The Testimony of the Rocks," written in 1856, is his attempt to reconcile Genesis and geology. Miller realized that the theologian had often made himself "Eminently ridiculous" by not restricting himself to his proper prefecture and declared the "Introduction to the Scriptures" to be a "Picturesque myth," that was the rejection of the authority of Revelation altogether.

AD 1803- 1869-Berlioz, Hector, French Composer and freethinker. Although he composed Catholic Church music, "Te Deum," and "Mass of the Dead," etc., and is claimed as one of their own in the Catholic Encyclopedia, Berlioz often admits in his letters that he was an atheist. In G.K. Boulton's, "Life of Berlioz," 1903, p. 298, there is a letter written shortly before he died, in which he says: "I believe nothing." ~From the works of J. McCabe in Rationalist Encyclopedia.

AD 1804- 1876-George Sand, the pen name of Aniantine Lucile Aurore Dudevant, her maiden name was Dupin, establishing her fame as one of the finest of French prose writers. She believed in God, says Plauchart, but "Certainly not in the vengeful and merciless God of the orthodox." Her last work was a critical notice of Renan's Dialogues et Fragments Philosophiques in 'Le Teynps,' only a month before her decease. She suffered from internal paralysis, and medical skill was of no avail. On the 8th of June, at nine in the morning, she "Expired in calmness and serenity." ~Plauchart, 'Galdrie Contemporaine', Pt. II.

Before the end she said: "It is death; I do not ask for it, but neither do I regret it." ~George Sand by Bertha Thomas, p. 245.

George Sand's biographer in English, Bertha Thomas, writes, "Up to the last hour she preserved consciousness and lucidity. The words, "Ne touchez pas la verdure," among the last that fell from her lips, were understood by her children, who knew her wish that the tree should be undisturbed under which in the village cemetery she was soon to find a resting place." ~George Sand by Bertha Thomas.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

Such was the peaceful death of the great writer, whom Mrs. Browning hailed in two glorious sonnets as “Large-brained woman and large-hearted man,” and whom Flaubert himself addressed as “Chere maitre.” ~Infidels Death-Beds by G.W. Foote and A.D. McLaren AD1804-Dr. Bernard Raymond Fabr -Palaprat founder the Ancient and Military Order of the Temple of Jerusalem claims his authority from The Charter of Transmissions of Larmenius [1324 by Johannes Marcus Larmenius] establishing his Order as being of the Templar line.

AD1805-Jean Marie Ragon, mystic, philosopher on ancient mysteries, Belgian Freemason, founder of the secret brotherhood of “Les Trinosophists.” He used Egyptian versions of Freemasonry and develops 90 degrees of Masonic Mysteries.

Erotica: Publication of Ein Jahr in Arkadien [A Year in Arcadia], by Herzog August von Sachsen Gotha, the first homoerotic book in the German Language.

AD1806-1872-Benito Juarez, President of the Republic of Mexico, freethinker and Freemason: a full-blooded Indian, he was admitted to the Mexican bar and later became a judge. As governor of Oaxaca, then Minister of Justice, he “Challenged” the clergy and the Roman Catholic Church, and eventually, as President of Mexico, curtailed their privileges and checked their corrupt practices upon the poor and suffering. President of Mexico from 1858-1862 and again from 1867-1872

In his efforts to obtain transparency in the financial workings of the Roman Catholic Church and where their monies went [and being denied], initiated a number of weeping reforms, including the reduction of the civil power of the Roman Catholic Church by confiscating ecclesiastical property and forcing the Church to pay taxes [true separation of Church and State].

Perhaps the fact that he was a Mason is another reason the Church has resented Masons and persecuted them for their views and unwillingness to declare the Roman Catholic Church as the only true faith in the world. “The churches can well afford to pay fair taxation. But supposing they couldn't. Would not that be a very significant evidence that the churches were not really wanted?” ~E. Haldeman-Julius, The Church Isa Burden, Nota Benefit, In Social Life.

The Anti-clerical laws of Mexico go back to the days of Presidents, Juarez and Diaz. The chief law is that, on account of intrigues and conspiracies, in an attempt to return the country to Spanish dominion, no priests, monks, or nuns of Spanish birth are to be permitted to reside in it.

Diaz's Catholic wife thwarts his efforts to apply the law, and after the war, 1918, numerous Spanish clergy and nuns scheme without reservation, and the Socialists begin to work up a plan for the annexation in the United States.

Miracle? At Leeds, a hen is said to have laid eggs bearing the words, “Christ is coming,” which many who visited the spot abruptly “Got religion.” But, then someone discovered that the ink-inscribed eggs had been forced up into the chicken's body [how they knew, they didn't say].

AD1806-73-John Stuart Mill, considered a radical thinker, systematized the utilitarian doctrines of his father and the philosopher, Jeremy Bentham, in such works as ‘Utilitarianism,’ 1836, basing his knowledge upon human experience and emphasizing human reason, which at that time was still contrary to Church thinking. Mill advocated those policies that he believed most consistent with individual liberty, emphasizing that liberty could be threatened as much by social as by political tyranny. Famous for his essay “On Liberty,” 1859.

Mill studied pre-Marxian socialist doctrine, and, although he did not become a socialist, he worked actively for improvement of the conditions of the working people. In Parliament, Mill was considered a radical, because he supported such measures as public ownership of natural resources, equality for women, compulsory education, and birth control.

“Such being the reasons which make it imperative that human beings should be free to form opinions, and to express their opinions without reserve; and such the baneful consequences to the intellectual, and through that to the moral nature of man, unless this liberty is either conceded, or asserted in spite of prohibition; let us next examine whether the same reasons do not require that men should be free to act upon their opinions to carry these out in their lives, without hindrance, either physical or moral, from their fellow-men, so long as it is at their own risk and peril. This last proviso is of course indispensable. No one pretends that actions should be as free as opinions. On the contrary, even opinions lose their immunity when the circumstances in which they are expressed are such as to constitute their expression a positive instigation to some mischievous act. An opinion that corn-dealers are starvers of the poor, or that private property is robbery, ought to be unmolested when simply circulated through the press, but may justly incur punishment when delivered orally to an excited mob assembled before the house of a corn-dealer, or when handed about among the same mob in the form of a placard. Acts, of whatever kind, which, without justifiable cause, do harm to others, may be, and in the more important cases absolutely require to be, controlled by the unfavourable sentiments, and, when needful, by the active interference of mankind. The liberty of the individual must be thus far limited; he must not make himself a nuisance to other people."

"But if he refrains from molesting others in what concerns them, and merely acts according to his own inclination and judgment in things which concern himself, the same reasons which show that opinion should be free, prove also that he should be allowed, without molestation, to carry his opinions into practice at his own cost. That mankind are not infallible; that their truths, for the most part, are only half-truths; that unity of opinion, unless resulting from the fullest and freest comparison of opposite opinions, is not desirable, and diversity not an evil, but a good, until mankind are much more capable than at present of recognising all sides of the truth, are principles applicable to men's modes of action, not less than to their opinions. As it is useful that while mankind are imperfect there should be different opinions, so it is that there should be different experiments of living; that free scope should be given to varieties of character, short of injury to others; and that the worth of different modes of life should be proved practically, when any one thinks fit to try them. It is desirable, in short, that in things which do not primarily concern others, individuality should assert itself. Where, not the person's own character, but the traditions or customs of other people are the rule of conduct, there is wanting one of the principal ingredients of human happiness, and quite the chief ingredient of individual and social progress." ~Source: Mill, John Stuart, On Liberty, New York: W.W. Norton & Co., 1975, Excerpt from On Liberty, Microsoft Encarta Encyclopedia 1998 Ed.

Has it not occurred to the reader as to why the Church looks upon truth as a controversial subject? "He [John Mill] absented himself during his whole life from religious services," and that "In everything characteristic of the creed of Christendom he was a thorough-going negationist. He admitted neither its truth nor its utility." ~John Stuart Mill by Alexander Bain, p. 139, 140.

A French Jesuit Priest, Abbe Barruel, writes a treatise blaming the Masonic Order for the destructive French Revolution, and later issues a letter alleging that the Jews, not the Free Masons, are the guilty party, believing in an international Jewish conspiracy to control the world came from this Christian source; the conspiracy theories carry on today.

AD 1807-1882- Garibaldi, Giuseppe, famous Italian soldier and staunch enemy of the Popes. A sailor of many adventures who devoted himself to destroying the Papal rule in Italy, he contemptuously called the Mother Church "The Holy Shop" and his quarrels with Mazzini, who was a theist, were largely over religion. In his "Life of Garibaldi," 1881, Bent reproduces a letter he wrote two years before he died. Ramabn Philipose of Kayamkulam translates the Bible into Malayalam.

"Dear Friends-Man created God, not God man-yours ever, Garibaldi...The priest is the personification of falsehood, the liar is a thief, and the thief an assassin." ~Garibaldi, Memorie Autobiografiche, p. 2.

His English biographer, Theodore Bent, admits that in his old age Garibaldi grew more and more sceptical. In one of his laconic letters of 1880, he says, "Dear friends, ...Man has created God, not God man. Yours ever, Garibaldi."

AD 1807-1874- Cornell, Ezra, American philanthropist, industrialist, as well as freethinker, who launched telecommunications in the United States. Cornell built, developed, and promoted telegraph lines across America, which were wire links between cities that allowed users to send and receive messages through the use of an electrical apparatus.

As a result of the success of electronic telegraphy, Cornell and other industrialists helped found the Western Union Telegraph Company. He also endowed and was a principal founder of Cornell University, a school where people try to teach what they know instead of what they guess.

Yet Cornell University is attacked by every orthodox college in the United States at the time it was founded, because they said it was without religion. When the university opened in 1868, its charter embraced many of his interests in arts, sciences, truth, and commerce.

AD1808-1888-Samson Raphael Hirsch, philosopher, Rabbi, statesman, influential leader in the Orthodox Jewish Faith. Interpretations of the building of the Sukkot [tabernacle] and basic tenets that regardless of your station in life, rich or poor, lodge or palace, it is only a transitory home in this materialistic world. God is our only protection and His grace shields us.

Napoleon frees the Jews from the Ghetto of Florence, but the Jews are forced to return to the Ghetto in 1815, with the restoration of the House of Lorraine.

"It was once proposed that all religions persuasions should be free and their worship publicly exercised. We Catholics have rejected this article as contrary to Roman Catholic Canon Law." ~Pope Pius VII, 1808.

AD1808-1892-Henry Edward Manning; Archdeacon of Chichester, but eleven years later joins the ranks of the Roman Catholic Church, and in 1875 he is created Cardinal. One of his utterances has become a "Familiar quotation" among "No Popery" alarmists, "The will of an imperial race is to be bent, broken, and subdued to the Faith." ~Quoted in the Quarterly Review; Vol. 126, p. 294.

He is obsessed by the concept of death and a future life, and on September 23, 1888, he wrote in his Diary: "I have but one desire and prayer, that is to make a good end." As Manning drew near to his death, "He was oppressed with an awful anxiety about the future." ~Dr. R.F. Horton England's Danger, 1899, p. 139.

AD1809-The Knights of Malta are defeated by the forces of Emperor Napoleon of France.

End of the World: Mary Bateman, a fortune teller, has a magic chicken that lays eggs with End-Time messages on them, including one that says that Jesus Christ is coming. She later is hanged for poisoning a wealthy client.

AD1809-1865- Pierre Joseph Proudhon, French socialist, journalist, and freethinker, is regarded as the "Father of Anarchism." Anarchism [Greek term meaning, "Without a chief or head"], is any political movement based in the conviction that if government were abolished people could live in natural harmony. Proudhon's thoughts first appeared in 1840 in, "What Is Property?" a book that expounded upon the evils of personal ownership of property. He criticizes authority [political and religious] as an unnecessary evil. America: New York: Genton vs. Reed, the state Supreme Court now recognizes common-law marriages [cohabitation], which won't be declared void until 1901.

AD1809-1892-Darwin, Charles: no other man in the last two centuries has had such a negative effect upon religion per se as Charles Darwin. His controversial theory on evolution has made the Christian world step back to re-evaluate their interpretation of Scripture and religion as a whole. His theory has people still interpreting, defending, or criticizing how man came about.

A freethinker, Darwin was such an unresponsive student to the prevailing teachings that his father declared, "You care for nothing but shooting, dogs, and rat-catching, and you will be a disgrace to yourself and all your family." ~Compton's Interactive Encyclopedia, 1998.

Many people, in harmony with their religious teachings believed the earth to be about 6,000 years old as their Christian teachings also taught that all species were created at one time, thus precluding any evolution process. Darwin received an appointment as an unpaid naturalist on board the exploring ship "Beagle," leaving England on Dec. 27, 1831 to chart the southern coasts of South America, and sail around the world. The voyage lasted until October 1836, during which he examined geologic [rock] formations, collected fossils, and examined plants and animals.

Darwin began to doubt that the many species of living creatures, as well as plant life, had come into being miraculously. Darwin went on to write his famous book "On the Origin of Species by Means of Natural Selection," which appeared in 1859, this work is immediately recognized by the scientific community as a landmark dissertation on biology and the evolution of mankind, but many Christians see it as a threat to their theological precepts as taught by Church authorities.

The theory of "Social Darwinism," evolved in modern society with the concept that individuals, cultural groups, societies, and races were subject to the processes of "Natural selection."

This survival of the fittest theory was later applied to societies and was popularized by Herbert Spencer, Walter Bagehot, and William Graham Sumner, who believed that societies would gradually improve, as the weaker of their species died out, and this theory was also used to support the free market economy operations theory in contrast to governmental intervention and control. It is also used to justify capitalist imperialism, colonialist, and racist policies; a popular theory which declined in 20th century.

Birth of Edward Fitzgerald, the English writer who cruised the Suffolk docks, "Looking for some fellow to accost me and fill a very vacant place in my heart." ~Ibid.

Masochist: Birth of William Gladstone, death May 19, 1898, the four time Prime Minister of England who is dedicated to self flagellation both to punish himself for impure thoughts and to achieve a pleasure from the act, which he then repents.

"The mystery of the beginning of all things is insoluble by us, and I for one must be content to remain an agnostic." ~Charles Darwin.

AD1810-1903-Pope Leo XIII endorses Pope Pius IX and Pope Gregory XVI's position Against Freedom of the Press, worship, and separation of Church and State. The Church does not partial to free thinkers. The First Vatican Council moves to strengthen his powers by initiating dogma of Papal Infallibility in 1870. In 1872, Bismarck of Germany feels threatened by the Catholic constituency by their voting according to the dictates of Rome and passes a law against the Society of Jesus.

A mid 18th century observer states, "... The degree of power to which the representatives of the Society of Jesus [Jesuits] had been able to obtain in Bavaria was all but absolute."

The Jesuits are expelled from Germany for their ceaseless political interventions. In 1873 the Falk Laws and May Laws make the Catholic clergy in Germany subject to the authority of the state [civil marriage is mandatory] 1896 Pope Leo declares ordinances of Anglican Church invalid. He makes many statements on social and economic policies of which "Human Genus" condemns Freemasonry.

"... Masonic sect produces fruits that are pernicious and of the bitterest savor... They are prepared to shake the foundations of Empires, to harass the rulers of the state, to accuse, and to cast them out..."

Pope Leo denounces the separation of the Church and State in the United States and attempts to revive the philosophy of Saint Thomas Aquinas as the basis for political and social renewal.

Separation of Church and State in France: The Napoleonic Code is instituted in France, which now eradicates all laws forbidding homosexuality.

The mother of a schoolgirl accuses Marianne Woods and Jane Pirie, mistresses at a boarding school for girls, of "Improper and criminal conduct" with each other; the British courts must now debate whether a sexual relationship between women is possible. Lillian Hellman uses this plot 120 years later as the basis for her play The Children's Hour.

AD1813-The Union in 1813 between the Grand Lodge of Antients and the Grand Lodge of the Moderns marked the close of Craft Freemasonry in England as a predominantly Christian association. The Duke of Sussex is elected Grand Master annually thereafter, until his death in 1843.

He proclaims Freemasonry to be universal and removes all Christian references from the Masonic lectures and ritual. He encourages the appendant bodies and the "Royal Arch," higher bodies, to pursue a Christian course but maintains the universality of the three primary Craft degrees.

Russia: April 28th, Prince Mikhail Kutuzov, who lead the defense of Moscow against the French forces of Napoleon Bonaparte, dies of a heart attack while having sex, with a soldier.

AD 1813-1878-Bernard Claude M.S., D.Sc.: famous French physiologist and freethinker. The Jesuits educated him, so the Church was allowed some contribution in his funeral ceremonies. Catholics like to claim the great scientist as "One of us." An absurdity, since in his published works he makes no secret of his agnosticism. He does this repeatedly in his chief work "Introduction a `L etude de la Medicine Experimentale," published in 1865.

He says that "The best philosophical system is to have none at all" (pg. 51), that philosophy represents "The eternal aspiration of human reason toward knowledge of the unknown" (pg. 351), and that it deals with "Questions that torment humanity and have never yet been solved."

In private circles, his language was less stately. Sir Michael Foster quotes him as saying that the Vespers, the Sunday evening service in Catholic Churches, is "The servant girls' opera." ~From A Biographical Dictionary of Ancient, Medieval, and Modern Freethinkers, By the former Benedictine monk, Joseph McCabe.

Lord Byron introduces many common elements of the vampire myths to Western literature in his epic poem The Giaour, 1813, which includes the combination of horror and lust that the vampire feels and the concept of the undead passing its inheritance to the living.

Some medieval Christians believed that one could live Eternally as long as “You eat the flesh and drink the blood.” ~John 6:54. cf. Vlad the Impaler [Dracula].

AD 1814-1886-Molteno, Sir John Charles K.C.M.G., Premier of Cape Colony. A poor boy of Italian extraction but born in England, who made a fortune in South Africa and rose in politics until he became Premier. His son and biographer says that he shed, at an early age, the Catholic belief in which he was reared, and that although his life was “In the highest sense religious,” the usual orthodox description of a freethinker who was a good man, he was “Above the narrow formulates of any sect.”

Francis Scott Key writes his famous, “The Star Spangled Banner,” but Key set his flag waving poem to music originally titled “Anacreon In Heaven.” The Anacreonics are elated in copying the Greek poet's style, which appears to overlook the subject, that it was largely about boys he copulated with.

AD 1814-Jesuit Conspiracy Theory: A Jesuit, Abbie Sieyes, advisor and director of Napoleon, asks Napoleon to imprison Pope Pius VII for 5 years, which he does, and the Pope is in prison until 1814, when he restores the Jesuit Order.

The previous Pope is killed [Pius VI]. The Jesuits use the Catholic French soldiers of General Napoleon Bonaparte to humiliate the Papacy and when they overturn Saint Peter's chair they find, written in Arabic: “There is no other God but Allah, and Mohammed is his prophet.”

The chair is alleged to have been taken from a Caliph during the Crusades. The Pope then restores the Jesuit Order with a Papal Bull, calling upon the vengeance of the Apostles Peter and Paul, etc. ~from Ridpath, History Of The World.

“Their progress through Constantinople [Crusaders] to the Holy Land was marked by orgies and excesses, murders and debaucheries, which were a disgrace not only to their religion but to humanity itself.. We hear of nothing more absolutely wanton than the crucifixion of the captives of Edesa, or the sending to the Greek emperor... Of a whole cargo of sliced-off noses and thumbs.” ~Hearnshaw.

AD 1815-1902-Elizabeth Cady Stanton, reformer, freethinker, and writer. Daughter of Judge Cady and married to the abolitionist Stanton, she was a very accomplished young woman who knew Latin and Greek, and threw herself with great zeal into the feminist movement and became their leader. Like most leaders, she was a skeptic, an agnostic. “The Bible and the Church have been the greatest stumbling blocks in the way of woman's emancipation.” In her autobiography she complains that, “The religious superstition of women perpetuate their bondage more than all other adverse influences.” ~Bank of Wisdom.

We read in the life of Garrison that at a public meeting she once said: “In the darkness and gloom of a false theology I was slowly sawing off the chains of my spirit-bondage when, for the first time, I met Garrison in London. A few bold strokes from the hammer of his truth and I was free.” She edited an expurgated version of the Bible for women in 1895. ~www.infidels.org

AD 1815-The Holy Alliance Treaty by Czar Alexander I of Russia mandates Christianity as the “Rule of Conduct” for European countries. The Grand Alliance or Quadruple Alliance is signed preserving “Legitimate Government” [Hereditary Rights of Royalty] Kings are in fear of losing their hereditary rights with the populations of European countries increasing and the people demanding individual rights of freedom and expression.

The Alliance is upheld by the Roman Catholic Church, as it legitimizes monarchies within Catholic countries, which support the Catholic religious cause of institutionalization.

AD 1816-1882-Arthur Count de Gabon, publishes his “Essay on the Inequality of Human Races,” proclaiming a fair-haired Aryan race that is superior to all the others and whose vestiges constitute a fractional racial aristocracy neglected by the influence of inferior races.

In 1899, Gabon's adherent, Houston Stewart Chamberlain, publishes “The Foundations of the Nineteenth Century,” in Germany. He upholds the German race to be the purest of all mankind and condemns the inferior races, especially the Jews and Negroes.

Eugenics, Social Darwinism, racial profiling, Christian dogma and racial hygiene become one.

AD 1816-John Adams knows of the Jesuit intrigue directed at the new “Protestant Republic” of these United States of America and writes to President Jefferson: “Shall we not have regular swarms of them here, in as many disguises as only a king of the gypsies can assume, dressed as painters, publishers, writers, and schoolmasters?”

"If ever there was a body of men who merited eternal damnation on Earth and in Hell it is this Society of Loyola's." ~from The New Jesuits, by George Riemer, 1971

AD 1817-1903-Mommsen, Professor Theodor, one of the most accomplished German historians and scholars in Europe. His chief biographer, L. M. Hartmann (Theodor Mommsen, 1908) says that he "left Christianity for Deism and Deism for Atheism."

He hated Kaplanokratie, the rule of priests, and L. M. Hartmann says that one of the reasons why he left his History of Rome unfinished was because "he found no pleasure in describing the substitution of the Nazarene for the ancient spirit" (p. 81). He was Perpetual Secretary of the Berlin Academy of Sciences.

AD 1817-1894-Layard, The Right Honorable Sir Austin Henry, G.C.B., D.C.L., P.C., British Assyriologist. He combined his office of Ambassador in the Near East with Assyrian explorations which made him famous.

Amongst other things he exposed the fraud of the "Holy Places" in Palestine and said in a letter in 1853 that "The best thing the Turks could do would be to turn all the Christians out of Jerusalem."

The letter is given in his Autobiography (II, 200), where he explains that lectures he heard in early years "Rapidly undermined the religious opinions in which I had been brought up." ~I. 56.

Joseph Smith introduces the Book of Mormon. "According to 2 Samuel 12:7-8, God himself gave David Saul's wives. Here again is the Divine stamp of approval upon bigamy, concubinage, and polygamy; a whole regiment of wives... Nowhere in the Sacred Book does God issue a Command against these practices. Little wonder that among Jews in Muslim countries polygamy continues to the present day, and that Mormons originally practiced polygamy." ~A. J. Mattill Jr.

"All tyranny rests on fraud." ~Prof. Bergen Evans

AD 1818-1883-Karl Marx: a revolutionist, philosopher, socialist and founder of modern day communism. During his time there was no middle class and his works appealed to the poor and exploited workers around the world. "Religion is the sigh of the oppressed creature, the feeling of a heartless world, just as it is the spirit of unspiritual conditions. It is the opium of the people." ~Karl Marx, Introduction, Critique of the Hegelian Philosophy of Right, Deutsch-Franzoesische Jahrbuecher, 1844.

The labor movement was not foretold and the significant increase in the livelihood of the middle class eventually killed his ideas for a communist world in the industrial revolution. It is alleged that Karl Marx was a 33rd-degree Freemason and a worshipper of Lucifer, whose father wanted nothing to do with him, because his father was a Baptist preacher.

"The first requisite for the happiness of the people is the abolition of religion." ~Karl Marx, 1948.

"The Russians and Chinese take these principles along with those of Friedrich Engels in their 'Communist Manifesto' to exploit the masses instead of helping them. His other literary work is 'Das Kapital.' He sees religion as 'Opium for the people' that makes their suffering bearable. Communism developed his ideas but his ideas were not impervious to corruption, a disease that now inflicts the Chinese system. Is Communism better than a Democracy? The verification is in the quality of life of the people under the system examined. Contrary to its teachings [and renunciation of God] communism offers little to the masses but a promise of an idealistic society that cannot be obtained due to human greed and avarice. If one has a corrupt government communism cannot promise any more nor less."

~Myron Fagan on Karl Marx.

"The Illuminati Conspiracy was still active, and in 1848, Karl Marx wrote the Communist Manifesto, under the direction of one group of Illuminists, while Professor Karl Ritter of Frankfurt University wrote the anti-thesis, under the direction of another group of Illuminists. The idea was that those who direct the overall conspiracy could use the differences of those two so-called ideologies to enable them to divide larger and larger members of the human race into opposing camps so that they could be armed and then brainwashed into fighting and destroying each other. And, in particular, to destroy all political and religious institutions. The work Ritter started was continued after his death and completed by the German so-called philosopher, Friedrich Wilhelm Nietzsche. Nietzsche helped to develop Racism and then Nazism, which was used to foment World War I and II." ~Myron Fagan.

But, contrary to many scholars, Nietzsche not only attacked anti-Semitism, but he broke ties with composer Richard Wagner because of the anti-Semitism of the latter. Since Nietzsche himself wasn't anti-Semitic, he could not directly influence later anti-Semitism or German nationalism. So, in many ways Nietzsche was diametrically opposed to many Nazi values.

"In Germany they first came for the communists; and I didn't speak up because I wasn't a communist. Then they came for the Jews; and I didn't speak up because I wasn't a Jew. Then they came for the trade unionists; and I didn't speak up because I wasn't a trade unionist. Then they came for the Catholics; and I didn't speak up because I wasn't a Catholic. Then they came for me, and by that time there was nobody left to speak up." ~Martin Niemöller.

Hitler merely picks up the clichés of Nietzschean such as "Lords of the Earth," "Herd Instinct," "Super-race" and "The will to Force" appear in Hitler's book, 'Mein Kampf.' Although Nietzsche denied that any "Overmen" had yet arisen, he mentions several individuals who he believed could serve as models.

Among the models he lists are: Socrates, Jesus, Leonardo da Vinci, Michelangelo, Shakespeare, Goethe, Julius Caesar, and Napoleon. Hitler, if not too religious himself, at least had to pretend to be a believer in Christianity order to gain the support of the Christian masses. The February 23, 1933 Lansing State Journal headline read, "Hitler Aims Blow at 'Godless' Move."

The article states, "A campaign against the 'godless movement' and an appeal for Catholic support were launched Wednesday by Chancellor Adolph Hitler's forces... A campaign against the 'godless' movement was announced by Bernard Rust, Nazi Commissioner for Education and Culture in Prussia, in an address Tuesday night... An appeal to Catholic Nazis was printed Wednesday in Hitler's 'Voelkischer Beobachter,' assailing the Catholic centrist and populist parties... Nazis invaded a centrist campaign meeting at Trier but were repulsed after a stiff fight..." ~The Defense of Zacharias that Fails by Doug Krueger.

Most Germans were theists, and they were courted into the Nazi party in part by theistic talk of God and country. If the xian message won converts, it is logical most of the Nazis were most likely xians also. Hitler was no theist, although he proclaimed Christianity, he also despised it, for its acquired weakness, which eventually acquiesced to advancing civilization by surrendering its power to condemn and murder. He also despised Judaism.

Hitler alleged that the conscience was a Jewish invention and also had to be abolished. The Nazis, eager to blame someone or something for the loss of WWI, already believed in the basic tenets of National Socialism even before Hitler became a political force. Anti-Semites and nationalists abounded in Germany long before Hitler was even born, and Anti-Semitism, already had a long history, espoused for centuries, subliminally, by the Roman Church.

Hitler professed to be doing God's work in exterminating the weaker races, and perhaps he may have received this indoctrination from, "Cursed is he who is lax in doing the Lord's work! Cursed is he who keeps his sword from bloodshed!" ~Jeremiah 48:10.

Believe it or not, the Church does not like to spill blood, and often use civil authorities to do its dirty work, "For when anyone is condemned as a heretic by the examinations of the Holy Church then the Holy Church must leave him to lay justice and the lay justice must burn him, seeing that the Spiritual Justice ought not to put anyone to death." ~The Catholic Two Swords Dogma as defined by Philippe de Beaumanoir.

"Therefore, I believe today that I am acting in the sense of the 'Almighty Creator': By warding off the Jews I am fighting for the Lord's work." ~Adolph Hitler, WWII.

AD 1820-1894-Coleridge, Sir John Duke Baron Coleridge, F.R.S., D.C.L., M.A., Lord Chief Justice of England. Lord Coleridge showed his liberality in mid-career by working for the suppression of religious tests at universities but, as is usual in cases of men of his position, the full extent of his heretic beliefs was unknown until his death. In a letter to a brother-judge and fellow heretic, Lord Bramwell (see) he says: "Of ecclesiastical Christianity I believe probably as little as you do," but he thinks that the religion will last "Longer than is good for the world." ~See Fairfield's Some Account of G. W. Wilshire, p. 105.

AD 1821-Mason continue in their refusal to take an oath to the Catholic Church, which declares Jesus Christ as their Lord and Savior, so Pope Pius VII, issues "Ecclesiam A Jesu Christo," on 13 September, specifying Excommunication for Catholics who become Freemasons and gives as reason for the censure the oath bound secrecy of the organization and their alleged conspiracies against the Church and state.

Freemasonry is also linked with the "Society of the Carbonari," known as the "Charcoal Burners," who are active in Italy and are believed to be a revolutionary group spreading rebellion.

Feodor Dostoevski, death Feb. 9, 1881, whose letters to his beloved Anna are infused with direct references to his fetish for her feet. His contemporary, Turgenev, calls him, "The Russian Marquis de Sade," possibly suggesting more than the Anna letters reveal.

AD 1822-1895- Pasteur, Louis, world famous French chemist. His distinction in European science was such that Catholics strain the evidence to the point of actual fraud in their vain efforts to claim him. In the "Encyclopedia Britannica," an article on him in which he is wantonly described as "this simple and devout Catholic" is substituted for the truthful article in earlier editions.

The anonymous Catholic author quotes as his authority the standard biography by Vallery-Radot, yet this describes Pasteur as a Freethinker; and this is confirmed in the preface to the English translation by Sir W. Osler, who knew Pasteur personally. Vallery-Radot, himself a Catholic yet admits that Pasteur believed only in "An Infinite" and "Hoped" for a future life. Pasteur publicly stated this himself in his Academy speech in 1822 (in V.R.).

Louis Pasteur said, "The idea of God is a form of the idea of the Infinite whether it is called Brahma, Allah, Jehova, or Jesus."

The biographer further states that in his last days Pasteur turned to the Church but the only "Evidence" he gives is that he liked to read the life of St. Vincent de Paul, and he admits that he did not receive the sacraments at death. Relatives put rosary beads in his hands, and the Catholic Encyclopedia claims him as a Catholic in virtue of the fact and of an anonymous and inconclusive statement about him. "The rosary is unquestionably of Pagan origin." ~Carus

Wheeler says in his "Dictionary of Freethinkers" that in his prime Pasteur was Vice-President of the British Secular (Atheist) Union; and Wheeler was the chief Secularist writer of the time. The evidence is overwhelming.

Yet the Catholic scientist Sir Bertram Windle assures his readers that "no person who knows anything about him can doubt the sincerity of his attachment to the Catholic Church," and all Catholic writers use much the same scandalous language. ~from the Rationalist Encyclopedia.

AD 1822-1885- Grant, Ulysses Simpson, 18th President of the United States. Chief General in the Civil War and President 1868 to 1877. His principal biographer, Hamlin Garland [U.S. Grant, 1898] says that he "Subscribed to no Creed."

At one point he says that Grant "Believed the fundamental doctrines of the Christian religion" just as they often say that a freethinker is "A good Christian in the true sense" at another that he only prayed "Mentally," although he does not say that Grant told him, and finally that General Hallock rebutting the charge of swearing and drinking said that his sobriety was remarkable for "A man who is not a religious man." He was unconscious when he was baptized but unexpectedly recovered and said that he was surprised at what they had done. The Christian world will descend to any level to claim one so great as their own.

AD 1824-Pope Leo XII, "You have noticed a society, commonly called the Bible Society, boldly spreading throughout the whole world. Rejecting the traditions of the Holy Fathers and infringing the well-known decree of the Council of Trent, it works by every means to have the Holy Bible translated, or rather mistranslated, into the ordinary languages of every nation. There are good reasons for fear that [as has already happened in some of their commentaries and in other respects by a distorted interpretation of Christ's Gospel] they will produce a Gospel of men, or what is worse, a Gospel of the devil!"

Once again, the power of the Church is being weakened by the common man having access to the Bible in a language he can understand and learning for himself the words of the ancient prophets. Individual interpretations are a challenge to the institutionalization of Catholicism as it denies the Church to think for the individual regarding religious matters.

AD 1825-Pope Leo XII, issues "Quo Graviora Mala," on 13 March, restating the Roman Catholic Church's objection to Freemasonry on the ground of it being a secret society [clandestine], with oath bound secrecy, conspiring against the Catholic Church and government.

AD 1824-Palmistry [Chiromancy] is outlawed in England.

AD 1825-Pope Leo XII issues an Ecclesiam, on Mar. 13th, "Quo Graidra."

AD 1826-1898-Mathilda Joslyn Gage, an American writer, abolitionist, freethinker, and one of the most capable of American women who, in spite of significant public hostility, took an active part in the abolitionist and feminist movements of the early 19th century.

"A living language is continually changing. Like the fashions and customs in apparel, words and phrases at one time current and fashionable, in the lapse of time become awkward and obsolete. But this is not all; many of them, in a century or two come to have a signification very different from that which was once attached to them: nay, some are known to convey the ideas not only different from, but contrary to, their first signification. This constant mutation in a living language will probably render new translations, or corrections of old translations, necessary every two or three hundred years. For, although the English tongue may have changed less during the last two hundred years, than it ever did in the same lapse of time before; yet the changes which have taken place since the reign of James I, do now render a new translation necessary." ~Alexander Campbell, 1764, The Living Oracles, aka the Quaker Bible, 182.

Mrs. Gage was President of the National Women Suffrage Association, editing their paper, and collaborating with Miss Susan B. Anthony in the writing the history of their movement. Her freethinking is emphatically given in her work, "Women, Church, and State," published in 1893.

A royal decree states that [European/White] friars should control most Philippine parishes, and Indio and mestizo priests are quickly demoted to curate rank.

Pope Leo XII will ban the use of condoms because they prevent, "The immoral evildoers from suffering diseases as are the just punishment for their Sin," a practice to be continued by Pope John Paul II into the 21st century as 3rd world nations succumb to the advancing AIDS epidemic. Pope Benedict XVI will re-address this issue in the early 21st century.

AD 1826-1828-A dark era in Freemasonry-the Anti-Masonic Party, is established after the strange disappearance and/or death(?) of William Morgan. His final disposition has never been revealed or discovered. Morgan allegedly knew secrets of the Order of Masonry and boasted of publishing his findings. Heavily indebted with creditors hounding him, his exploits drew much publicity.

Anti-Masonic sentiment spreads due to an incident, which even today is still conjectural. Reprinted from "The Short Talk Bulletin," vol. XI, of March, 1933 No. 3, "The Morgan Affair," which is perhaps the most extravagant story of Freemasonry. This is a story of political fuel, with the anti-Masons alleged abduction and murder of William Morgan, supplied to the anti-Masonic hysteria of a hundred years ago.

The gradual emergence of the Ancient Craft from the cloud that threatened to extinguish it, is a tale, which all Freemasons still ponder to their enlightenment.

William Morgan, a brick mason, lived in Batavia, New York, from 1824 to 1826. Accounts of him differ widely, as they do of any notorious person. Few are so wicked as to be without friends; few are so good they have not their detractors.

From the estimates of both enemies and friends, the years have brought an evaluation of Morgan which shows him as a shiftless rolling stone; uneducated but shrewd; careless of financial obligations: often arrested for debt; idle and improvident; frequently the beneficiary of Masonic charity. That he was really a Mason is doubtful; no record of his raising or Lodge membership exists, but it is certain he received the Royal Arch in Western Star Chapter R. A. M. No. 33 of Le Roy, New York.

It is supposed that he was an "Eavesdropper" and lied his way into a Lodge in Rochester by imposing on a friend and employer, who was led to vouch for him in Wells Lodge No. 282 at Batavia. Judge Ebenzer Mix, of Batavia, a Mason, of unquestionable reputation, wrote of this alleged Masonic membership, "There must have been a most reprehensible laxity among the Masons both of Rochester and Le Roy; for there was no evidence educed, then or afterwards, that he ever received any Masonic degree save the Royal Arch, on May 31, 1825, at Le Roy."

At any rate, he visited Lodges, was willing to assist, made Masonic speeches, and allegedly took part in degrees. When Companions of Batavia asked for a Royal Arch Chapter, he was among those who signed the petition. But suspicion of his regularity began to grow, and his name was omitted as a member when the Charter was granted. Just how much this incident inspired the enmity he developed for the Fraternity is only a guess; doubtless it had much to do with it.

Enemy he became, and it became known that he had applied for a copyright on a book, which was to "Expose" the Masonic ritual, secrets and procedure. In spite of the deep resentment, which this proposed expose created, Morgan entered into a contract, March 13, 1826, with three men for the publication of this work. They were: David C. Miller, an Entered Apprentice of twenty years standing, stopped from advancement for cause, who thus may have held a grudge against the Fraternity; John Davids, Morgan's landlord; and Russel Dyer, of whom little is known.

These three entered into a penal bond of half a million dollars to pay Morgan one fourth of the profits of the book. Morgan boasted in bars and on the street of his progress in writing this book.

The more he bragged, the higher the feeling against him ran, and the greater the determination engendered that the expose should never appear. Brethren were deeply angered; fearful that the "Secrets" of Freemasonry might be "Exposed," and the Order might collapse. Feeling ran high. Matters came to a head in September of 1826.

Morgan was arrested for the theft of a shirt and tie. Of this he was acquitted, but immediately rearrested for failure to pay a debt of $2.68, and jailed. After one day behind bars, some one paid the debt. When he was released he left in a coach with several men, apparently not of his own free will. He was taken to Ft. Niagara and there confined in an unused [ammunitions] magazine.

Morgan disappeared! No one is sure what happened to William Morgan. Enemies of the Craft said Freemasons had kidnapped and murdered him, to prevent the publication of his expose. Freemasons, of course, indignantly denied the charge. As time went on and Morgan was not found, members of the Craft disavowed any approval of any such act, if it had been committed. Governor Clinton, Past Grand Master, issued proclamation after proclamation, the last one offering two thousand dollars reward, "That, if living, Morgan might be returned to his family; if murdered, that the perpetrators might be brought to punishment."

It was not too difficult to discover that Masons were concerned in Morgan's hundred and twenty-five mile journey to Ft. Niagara. Three members of the Craft: Chesebro, Lawson and Sawyer, pleaded guilty to conspiracy to "Seize and secrete" Morgan, and, together with Eli Bruce, Sheriff, and one John Whitney, all served terms in prison for the offense. But murder could not be proved for no body was found.

In October of 1827, a body was washed ashore forty miles below Ft. Niagara. Morgan's widow "Identified" the body, although it was dressed in other clothes than her husband had worn when he disappeared; was bearded, although Morgan was clean shaven; and had a full head of hair, although Morgan was bald!

Thurlow Weed, Rochester Editor, was accused of having the corpse shaved and of adding long white hairs to ears and nostrils, to simulate the appearance of Morgan. The first inquest decided that this was, indeed, the body of William Morgan.

Three inquests were held in all. The third decided, on the unimpeachable evidence of Mrs. Sara Monroe, who minutely described the body, its marks, and the clothes it wore, that the corpse was not William Morgan, but Timothy Monroe, of Clark, Canada, her husband. Commonplace and unexciting truth seldom catches up with scandalous, electrifying, remarkable falsehood! William Morgan had disappeared. Freemasons had been convicted of abducting him.

A body had been found and identified as Morgan. That better evidence and a less excited jury had later reversed this identification was anti-climatic. The stories of Morgan's "Murder" persisted. Thurlow Weed, whom history shows as an unscrupulous opportunist, no matter what the exact truth of his activities with the body may have been, added fuel to the flames. Weed died in 1882. On his deathbed he stated that in 1860, twenty-two years before, John Whitney, who had been convicted in the conspiracy charge, confessed to him the full details of the murder of Morgan.

According to this alleged confession, Whitney and four others carried the abducted Morgan in a boat to the center of the river, bound him with chains, and dumped him overboard. Weed stated, and here his memory failed him, that Whitney had promised to dictate and sign this confession, but died before he could do so, but Whitney died in 1869, nine years after!

Whitney did indeed tell a story, not to Thurlow Weed, who was his accuser in the conspiracy case and whom he hated— but to Robert Morris. This story is both the most probable and the best attested of any we have, as to the true fate of William Morgan.

Whitney told Morris that he had consulted with Governor Clinton at Albany, relative to what could be done to prevent Morgan executing his plans to print the expose. Clinton sternly forbade any illegal moves, but suggested the purchase of the Morgan manuscript, for enough money to enable Morgan to move beyond the reach of the influence and probable enmity of his associates in the publishing enterprise. From what source, Masons? Governor Clinton?

Whitney was assured of any amount needed, up to a thousand dollars, which was a great sum in those days. In Batavia Whitney summoned Morgan to a conference in which the bribe was temptingly held forth. On the one hand, the enmity of all, persecution, continual danger, it is not improbable that threats were mingled with the bribe!

On the other hand, money, safety, freedom from a plan to publish, held much danger. If Morgan would take five hundred dollars, go to Canada, “Disappear,” his family would be provided for, and later sent to him! Morgan agreed. He was to be arrested and “Kidnapped,” to make it easy to get away from Miller and his associates. Whitney feared that without some such spectacular escape, Morgan might at the last moment decline to go through with the plan, fearing reprisals from his friends in the publishing venture.

Whitney told Morris that two Canadian Masons received Morgan from the hands of his “Kidnappers” at Ft. Niagara, traveled with him a day and a night to a place near Hamilton, Ontario, where they paid him the five hundred dollars, receiving his receipt and signed agreement never to return without permission of Captain William King, Sheriff Bruce, or Whitney. Later there were two other “Confessions” of complicity in the “Murder” of Morgan, neither of which was consistent with the facts.

Doubtless they were of the same hysterical origin, which leads so many notoriety seekers to confess crimes, which by no possibility they could have committed. Did William Morgan choose the easier way, disappear with five hundred dollars from a dangerous situation, eliminating from his responsibilities a wife and family suddenly burdensome, and, in a new freedom, ship on a vessel from Montreal and out into the world, there to come to an unknown end?

Or was he basely murdered by Masons who thought the crime less than the evil results to follow on the publication of Morgan's Book. No man knows. No incontestable evidence can be adduced, or was ever adduced, definitely to prove either solution. All that is undoubted is that William Morgan was apparently kidnapped and did disappear.

It is difficult, a hundred years after, to understand the extent and power of the widespread excitement and passions this incident created. For the fame and infamy of the Morgan affair spread over an immense territory. It was the beginning of an anti-Masonic sentiment, which grew and spread like wild fire. Meetings were held, and both the press, and the pulpit denounced the Order.

An anti-Masonic paper was started, with Thurlow Weed as Editor, soon joined by the Anti-Masonic Review, in New York City. The many groups in Pennsylvania, already opposed to any oath bound society (Quakers, Lutherans, Mennonites, Dunkards, Moravians, Schwenkfelders, German Reformed Church) were aroused to a high pitch of feeling against the alleged “Murderers” and “Kidnappers,” the Freemasons.

The anti-Masonic excitement spread, fast and far. Gould, in his “History of Free-Masonry,” epitomizes the spirit of that time: “This country has seen fierce and bitter political contests, but no other has approached the bitterness of this campaign against the Masons. No society, civil, military or religious, escaped its influence. No relation of family or friends was a barrier to it. The hatred of Masonry was carried everywhere, and there was no retreat so sacred that it did not enter. Not only were teachers and pastors driven from their stations, but the children of Masons were excluded from the schools, and members from their churches. The Sacrament was refused to Masons by formal vote of the Church, for no other offense than their Masonic connection. Families were divided. Brother was arrayed against brother, father against son, and even wives against their husbands. Desperate efforts were made to take away chartered rights from Masonic Corporations and to pass laws that would prevent Masons from holding their meetings and performing their ceremonies."

Reverend Brother John C. Palmer, Grand Chaplain of the Grand Lodge of the District of Columbia, says in his little classic of the Craft, "Morgan and anti-Masonry," Volume 7 of "The Little Masonic Library," published by The Masonic Service Association in 1925: "The pressure was so strong that withdrawals by individuals and bodies were numerous. In 1827, two hundred and twenty-seven lodges were represented in the Grand Lodge of New York. In 1835, the number had dwindled to forty-one. Every Lodge in the State of Vermont surrendered its Charter or became dormant; and the Grand Lodge, for several years, ceased to hold its sessions. As in Vermont, so also in Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Massachusetts, Connecticut; and in lesser degrees in several other states. The Masonic Temple was cleft in twain; its brotherhood scattered, its trestle board without work; its working tools shattered. Thus Masonry endured the penalty of the mistaken zeal of those fearful brethren who thought that the revealing of the ritual to profane eyes would destroy the Order and who hoped to save it by removing the traitor within the camp."

Space here is not sufficient to retell the interesting, often exciting, and always varied story of the political campaigns, which were predicated on, and took much of their ammunition from, the anti-Masonic excitement, which followed the Morgan affair. It is not to be supposed that the abduction and alleged, never proved, murder of Morgan was the sole cause of this outburst, any more than was the assassination in 1914 the sole cause of the World War.

Both were triggers, which set off guns, which, in turn, caused other explosions. Suffice it here that a wave of hysteria was seized upon by able politicians, fanned by demagogues, increased by the righteous indignation of good men and true who saw not beneath the surface, helped onward by press and pulpit with the best of intentions but little understanding, until the whole east flamed with passion and Freemasons were spit upon in the streets, lodges threw away their charters, and Freemasonry bowed its head to a storm as unjust and undeserved as all religious persecutions have always been. Like any other hysteria, this passed. Passions wore themselves away.

A few sturdy and brave men stood staunchly by a few Grand Lodges with high courage and the strength of the right never ceased to proclaim their allegiance to the principles of the Order. Little by little, Freemasonry raised its head; one by one, lodges took heart; Brother by Brother, Craftsmen returned to their Altars.

After a period following almost twenty years of more or less complete eclipse, the sun of Freemasonry shone again, and the world was treated to a spectacle that has been a heartening lesson to millions and will be to counted millions yet to be born anew at the sacred Altar of Freemasonry, the strange sight of an Order many had thought dead, suffering from uncounted thousands of stabs to the heart, coming again to life to grow and thrive and attract to it then, as it had in the historic past, men of the highest character. It is for this that the Craft of today can offer thanks to the Great Architect for the Morgan affair.

Dreadful as it was to the men who lived through it, terrible in its consequences to the brethren who suffered, it demonstrated again – and it may be hoped and believed, once for all, that the underlying faith of Freemasonry, its Ancient Landmarks, its foundation upon Deity and the Great Light, together are stronger than any evil, more lasting than any calumny, more enduring than any human passions.

AD1827-Marquis Astolphe de Custine is sadistically gang-raped by a group of soldiers with whom he had made an assignation [rendevous]. ~cf. Judges 19:24-25.

Amazingly, with such an iniquitous history, the Church still claims jurisdiction over the souls of the world and Eternal Salvation, "No deity will save us, we must save ourselves. Promises of Immortal Salvation or fear of Eternal Damnation are both illusory and harmful." ~Humanist Manifesto II, Prometheus Books, 1973.

"Furthermore We teach and declare that the Roman Church, by the disposition of the Lord, holds the Sovereignty of ordinary power over all others, and that this power of jurisdiction on the part of the Roman Pontiff, which is truly episcopal, is immediate; and with respect to this the pastors and the faithful of whatever right and dignity, both as separate individuals and all together, are bound by the duty of hierarchical subordination and true obedience, not only in things, which pertain to faith and morals, but also in those which pertain to the discipline and government of the Church [which is] spread over the whole world, so that the Church of Christ, protected not only by the Roman Pontiff, but by the unity of communion as well as of the profession of the same faith is one flock under one highest shepherd. This is the doctrine of Catholic truth from which no one can deviate and keep his faith and Salvation." ~Pope Pius IX.

AD 1828-1909-Meridith, George, British poet and novelist. Cultivated readers put Meridith high above all other novelists of his time, and his house was a shrine of the higher literary men. About the middle of his career he became an atheist and supported the atheist leader Foote, who is imprisoned for blasphemy.

Edward Clodd says in his Memories (p. 153) that Meridith whom he knew well, wrote to him: "When I was quite a boy I had a spasm of religion that lasted six weeks, but I never since have swallowed the Christian fable."

AD 1828-1906-Ibsen, Henrik Johan, freethinker and Norwegian dramatist, whose well-constructed plays dealing with worldly realities, as well as psychological and social problems which won him recognition as the father of modern drama. A druggist's boy, working his way up, he rose to the position of one of the greatest dramatist of modern times.

His biographer, Aall, writes how he discarded orthodoxy and conventional thought and in his later teens was quietly skeptical until 1871, when he met George Brandes [Danish critic, 1842-1927].

Ibsen wrote, "The Emperor and The Galilaean," to express this newly acquired militant mood, and he remained agnostic and anti-religious to his death. "Bigger things than the state will fall," he later wrote Brandes, "All religion will fall."

English Parliament closes a loophole in its explanation of the capital crime of sodomy. It will no longer be necessary to demonstrate "The actual Emission of Seed" to condemn someone of buggery or rape.

AD 1828-1910-Leo Tolstoy, Russian nove list and profound social and moral thinker who is considered one of the greatest writers of realistic fiction of all time.

In 1828, Alexander Greaves publishes a New Testament with the lengthy title, The Gospel of God's Anointed, the Glory of Israel, and the Light of Revelation for the Gentiles: or, the Glad Tidings of the Service, Sacrifice, and Triumph of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, the Only Begotten Son of God; and of the gracious and mightily operative powers of the Holy Spirit, which were the first-fruits of that labor of Divine love: being a recent version, in two parts, of the Christian Greek Scriptures [commonly called the New Testament] in which is plainly set forth the New Covenant promised by God through Moses and the Prophets. ~History of the English Bible by F. Keith Mincey.

AD 1829-Pope Pius VIII, issues "Traditi Humiliati," on the 24th of May: considered by many Catholic authorities to be an aggressive attack upon Masonic principles and membership

The encyclical warns Church members against a secret society whose "Cunning purpose is to... Lead the students along the path of Baal," and calls for Catholics to "... Eradicate those secret societies of factious men who, completely opposed to God and to princes, are wholly dedicated to bringing about the fall of the Church, the destruction of kingdoms, and disorder in the whole world."

Pius VIII was a paralyzed old man who literally dribbled at the mouth as they wheeled him about the Vatican in his baby carriage.

The Catholic Relief Act permits British Catholics to be Members of Parliament.

AD 1829-1910-Nightingale, Florence, O.M., famous British hospital reformer. A rich English young woman who took up hospital work, especially during the Crimean War, and made such an impression that at the close of the war $250,000 was subscribed to found a Nightengale School for Nurses.

She revolutionized hospital life by imposing a more sterile environment and was loaded with British and international honors. She was a theist but very definitely anti-Christian, as is shown in the standard life of her by Sir Edward Cook (2 vols., 1913).

"The Church," she wrote, "Is now more like the Scribes and Pharisees than like Christ.. What are now called the essential doctrines of the Christian doctrines of the Christian religion Christ does not even mention" ~Florence Nightengale by Sir Edward Cook, II, 392.

AD 1830-End of the World: Margaret McDonald, a Christian prophetess, predicts that Robert Owen will be the Anti-Christ. Owen helped found New Harmony, Indiana.

The Roman Catholic Church, under Pope Pius VIII, drops its ban on usury [the lending of money for a fee] thereby opening the door to establish its own financial institute. The Church's involvement in foreign collusion, international scandal, and lawsuits will derive from how it handles its money [see AD 1887, 1957, 1963, 1978, and 2000].

The 1830's sees a wave of anti-Catholic fictional literature exposing the evil and hypocritical practices of the Catholic Church; novels with such titles as Secrets of Nunneries Disclosed revealed that convents were "Slave factories," "Popish brothels," and "Priests' harems." ~Ray Allen Billington, The Protestant Crusade, quoted in Grittner, 30.

As Grittner observes, "By attributing sexual deviancy to these 'Alien' groups, their opponents drew symbolic boundaries demarcating appropriate sexual roles, values and behavior. The construction of boundaries," in this case between Protestant and Catholic, "Was an exercise in power designed to affirm traditional cultural values." ~Grittner, 30.

AD 1830-Pope Pius VIII issues "Litteris Altero," 25 March, confirming earlier Papal condemnations of Freemasonry and condemns the influences of Freemasonry in education. It is sad to say that today in the so called age of new technology that we are still in the dark ages [an age of religious turanny] in regards to actual historical material used as research material in our academia and public schools.

Discoveries in archaeology are offset by a deplorable falsification owing to concessions to religious writers or other sectarian influence. Religious manipulations in our literature, news publications, and libraries has gravely increased the difficulty of obtaining the truth and facts regarding the education of the masses.

Recent issues of the leading encyclopedias have permitted very serious alterations of historical articles or invited clerical writers to contribute articles on subjects on which they can not be expected to be impartial or accurately informed.

Serious attempts have been made even to impose the new spirit of accommodation upon teachers of history in universities, colleges, and the public schools, causing hatred and lack of understanding among the various cultural and religious groups [Poynter tells of an amazing plot of this nature in his Roman Catholics and School History Books, 1930].

Protestant writers like Dr. E. Reich and Sir S. Dill have been generous in stating the truth, however, a number of historical writers, have used language in conformity with the old prejudices. This encourages theological writers to repeat their discredited claims that the Gospels brought a new and higher type of religion and ethic into the contemporary Roman world; that the Christians generally exhibited a superior type of character, which attracted thoughtful Greeks and Romans; and that the acceptance, in reality enforcement, of the Christian religion was followed by a social and moral improvement. In this respect Catholics have had a remarkable success in adulterating history.

They ignore completely the immense literature which tells the moral license and coarseness of life of the clergy, monks, and all that they say of monasticism is to give a description of the ideal of a Benedictine abbey or describe Francis of Assisi, and people of all classes; and they profess that it is a mark of liberality to follow Catholic writers on the work of Pope Gregory VII or Pope Innocent III, the Massacre of the Albigensians and the Hussites, the Inquisition and the Reformation.

Admirable as it is to trace neglected social, political, and economic factors in this stretch of history, the deliberate suppression of its many evil features falsifies history and the sociological appraisal of institutions. The same tendency is seen in the deliberate depreciation of the Arab-Persian civilization, which conceals the real source of the European Renaissance and confirms the preposterous claim that the Roman Church inspired it.

Pope Innocent III actively condemns the practice, which apparently shows that the Church knew of the performance of prostitution, but the Catholic Cathedrals had many nooks and crannies, perfect for furtive "Assignations" or for soliciting for prostitution [called the crime of poverty]: in fact, in Germany, many prostitutes are even called "Cathedral Girls."

The Church condemned the French Revolution and suppressed the terrible injustices the French people, which led to anarchy, and especially the concealment of what Lord Acton called the savagery of the Roman Church in its fight against progress from the fall of Napoleon to the 20th century. This falsification of history, at least by the suppression of facts and of relevant but distasteful contemporary documents, is one of the most unfortunate features of our modern culture.

The Italian public debt grew year by year, and famine and cholera swept the country. Brigandage was so rife that when a foreign priest visited Italy 9,000 papal soldiers had to protect him on his route. The comparative relaxation of academic requirements during the last quarter of a century is reflected in the conflict of science and religion, which is due in part to the broad acceptance of scientific teaching by educated Christians and in part to the reluctance of scientific men to discuss the very important remaining issues. Coincidental with a graver abuse than ever by the apologists of the teaching of Christian history, is the detriment of the truth.

The traditional conception of the Bible and of Christian Doctrines being no longer seriously defensible, the stress is transferred to social and moral values; and this is encouraged by the pragmatic spirit of the times. The Christian plea, that the Church created, or was one of the primary influences in creating, a superior civilization in Europe, is not supported by any facts now gleaned from archival historical documents and social effects.

Unfortunately, few professional historians venture to point out to the public that the facts which are given in academic works, which they seldom research, completely discredit the moral and social claims which the apologist makes, and indeed some historians, especially in America, under Catholic influence, suppress the unsightly facts and exaggerate those elements in the mediaeval chronicles, which enhance the status of the Church, e.g. the Church's first female martyr, Saint Thecla who is said, in the Roman Breviary, to have been ninety years old, when thrown to the lions, but even the lions, Tillemont recalls with irony: "Did not dare to violate her Virginity by too free a look."

The sociological value of a creed or an institution must be judged by its results, and not by a partisan selection. Non-Christian writers sometimes accommodate this selection of a few pleasant pages and polite reticence about the hundred malodorous pages; and the superficial literature of the millions, ignoring the fact that equally good results have been attained under all creeds and under purely humanitarian cultures, Buddhist, Confucian, or Modern, repeats that the Churches render an irreplaceable service in the maintenance of civilization.

The origin of Christianity is still one of conjecture of ancient history, yet the one, which is most widely avoided by professional historians. T. R. Glover's "Influence of Christ in the Ancient World," 1929, admits that, instead of a new light appearing miraculously in a world of moral darkness, the age assigned to Jesus witnessed almost the culmination of a great advance in life and thought over the whole area of civilization from the 7th century onward.

Christianity admittedly arose in maritime cities like Alexandria, Antioch, and Ephesus, where every ethical philosophy and religion, including the new ethic and religious liberalism of the dispersed Jews, was familiar. Not a single moral sentiment in the New Testament exists that is not found in previously exterminated cults, religious sects, and later Judaism and contemporary cults and moralists.

The Christian synthesis, instead of improving upon the contributory cultures actually lowered the value of the best moral elements it borrowed by associating them with doctrines that were as abhorrent to the Greek as they are to the educated modern eternal torment, bloody atonement, inherited sin, ascetic exaggerations, approaching End of the World, etc., and sacrificed the social ethic of the Stoic Epicureans with a morbid moral few men of intellectual strength such as Origen embraced it, and these few were generally persecuted as heretics.

The claim that the new religion was hindered in its progress by repeated general persecutions in which thousands or tens of thousands perished is based upon a mass of forgeries which are so crude that even Catholic experts on the subject like Father Delehaye, Mgr. Duchesne, and Dr. Ehrhard have exposed them. Only a few hundred Christian martyrs in the course of 250 years are identifiable. A Pagan writer wrote a book on the many notable men and women who were victims of Emperor Nero's insanity, and it is alleged that Christians used this concept, and indeed many of the martyred names, for their earliest Christian martyrologies.

The saying that "The blood of martyrs is the seed of Christians" is, in fact, doubly fraudulent, for the progress of the Church, as well as the number of martyrs, is grossly exaggerated. In the course of the 250 years from Saint Paul, its real founder, to the Pagan, Emperor Constantine, Christianity made not one-tenth the progress that Atheism made in fifteen years from 1918-1933.

The Church was not built upon the blood of Martyrs, but upon the blood of innocent victims; men, women, and children who refused to accept her dogmas, "That the Church of Rome has shed more innocent blood than any other institution that has ever existed among mankind, will be questioned by no Protestant who has a competent knowledge of history. The memorials, indeed, of many of her persecutions are now so scanty, that it is impossible to form a complete conception of the multitude of her victims, and it is quite certain that no power of imagination can adequately realize their sufferings." ~W. E. H. Lecky, History of the Rise and Influence of the Spirit of Rationalism in Europe, Vol. II, p. 32. London: Longmans, Green, and Co., 1910.

Estimates of the number of Christians in the Greek-Roman world at the end of the third century vary from 5,000,000, to the fantastic figure of 50,000,000 (Stäudlin). But even the elaborately calculated figure of 10,000,000 given by Schultze, "Geschichte des Untergangs des Griechisch-Römischen Heidenthums," two vols., 1892, is vitiated because he greatly overestimates the proportion of members to priests and Bishops... of the 500,000 people of Antioch, one of the most Christian cities, only one-fifth are Christians, he adds that they were so vicious that he doubted if a hundred of them would be saved, and in the previous year, Saint Augustine had found Rome overwhelmingly pagan in spite of truculent imperial decrees. ~Saint Augustine, Confessions, VIII, 2.

Mgr. Duchesne, "Early History of the Christian Church," 3 vols., 1904-29, admits, besides the spurious character of the martyrs, that the moral discipline of the early years was relaxed by the end of the 2nd century, and, as individualism with bases in lingering superstitions and accepted moral debasements. Hence very Saint Cyprian and other Fathers describe, a remarkable amount of vice and violence crept into the Church. The wealth and privileges, which the conversion of the Emperors brought to it in, the fourth century led to a further demoralization.

After the middle of the century we find every contemporary Christian leader, Saint Jerome for Rome, Saint Augustine for Africa, Chrysostom for the Greeks, and Salvianus for the whole of Christendom, bitterly complaining of the general depravity of the Catholic clergy and laity.

The apologist is here quite dishonest. He quotes Jerome's praise of a dozen ladies of Rome and conceals Saint Jerome's scorching indictment of the priests and people as a body; he expands on the piety of Augustine's mother and refuses to notice Augustine's painful accounts of the monks and the people. That Christianity converted the Greeks and Romans to a higher life is a fiction that is discredited by all contemporary evidence. The Greek-Roman world was not, in fact, converted to a new religion, but compelled to embrace it.

We have still in the Theodosian Code Imperial Decrees or rescripts of the years 341, 345, 356, 381, 383, 386, and 394, which were won by the Bishops from the Emperors. Emperor Theodosius was a strong champion of Orthodox Christianity, and he persecuted the Arians and discouraged the practice of the old Roman pagan religions.

In AD 390, he ordered the massacre of 7000 insurgent citizens of Thessaloniki, Greece, and was summarily excommunicated by Bishop Ambrose of Milan, who demanded his public penance before lifting the ban. The early Christians suppress all rival religions, order the closing of the temples, and impose fines, confiscation, imprisonment, or death upon any who cling to the older Pagan or polytheistic religions.

The Dark Age of six centuries, 450-1050, is attributed by apologists to the barbarians, and the fact that nearly all of these barbarians were Christians is overlooked, but the claim is decisively refuted by the equal barbarization of the Greek or Byzantine civilization, which the Huns and Goths did not devastate, and the fact that all attempts to sustain or restore civilization in Europe were made by Teutonic monarchs and thwarted by the Popes.

Moreover, the Arabs, who were at first as barbaric as the Goths and Vandals, created a high civilization in Syria and Spain in less than a century. ~ Prof. G.B. Adams, Civilization During the Middle Ages, 1922, Prof. L. Thomdike, Short History of Civilization, 1926.

Middle Ages, 1050-1550, claim for the Church the credit of having inspired the Guilds and the artistic and scholastic movements to sustain the legend of an Age of Chivalry; to give a deceitfully romantic account of the Crusades; to obscure the comprehensive corruption of the clergy, monks, and nuns by enlarging upon the virtue of an occasional and rare saint or strict abbey; to elucidate on the theory of the work of a few strict Popes like Gregory VII and Innocent III and suppress the actual general moral depravity to which those Popes and all contemporary witnesses testify; and to ignore or deny the excellence of the Arab civilization in Spain and Sicily, which really roused Europe to a sense of decency in their literature.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi architecture, and human rights.

"Down to the very close of the Middle Ages, the pages of history were disfigured by the decrees of Popes and synods, confirming death as the penalty for heresy... The great council of Constance, 1415, did not get away from this atmosphere, and ordered heretics punished even by the flames... And the bull of Pope Leo X, 1520, condemning Luther, cursed as heresy the Reformer's liberal statement that the burning of heretics is contrary to the will of the Spirit." ~History of the Christian Church, by Philip Schaff, Volume V, Chapter 10, §86.

In the Post-Reformation period there was no general improvement of character and no advance in the realization of social justice. Most of the vices of the Middle Ages persisted until the last century, when the growth of Rationalist criticism compelled the Churches to turn to moral and social interests; and during the first half of the century, when agitation for reform was most dangerous, the great majority of the pioneers and leaders were Rationalists, though the Churches still counted nine-tenths of the community. ~See McCabe's Social Record of Christianity, Thinker's Library, 1935.

There were many such assassinations in the Middle Ages by loyal fanatical Catholics who were jealous for the reputation of the Virgin Mary. In fact, threats and persecution even took place in the United States, "Who have their dungeon cells under their cathedrals, in which they claim, as inquisitors of their own diocese, to imprison free men in our republic? Foreign Popish Bishops! And the facts respecting a man being so confined and scourged, in the cells at Baltimore, until he recanted, have been published, and not to this day contradicted! ... Who are in the habit of uttering ferocious threats 'To assassinate and burn up' those Protestants who successfully oppose Romanism? The foreign Papists! I have in my possession the evidence of no less than six such inhuman threatenings against myself." ~Brownlee, p. 210-211.

Until the second half of the 19th century the Catholic Church still allied itself with feudal monarchs and supported them in their grisly struggle against reform, the Church combating against individual rights and sustaining hierarchal regimes because it suited their efforts to institutionalize and suppress.

From 1870 civil laws became increasingly robust, completely so in advanced countries by the end of the century, and reform proceeded on humanitarian lines and made more rapid progress than ever before in history.

The late intrusion into the work of Church leaders and organizations was admittedly a self-defensive measure. "The nearer to Rome, the worse the morals," was a common saying in those days. ~from the works of McCabe, Rationalists Encyclopaedia

AD 1830-The Mormon Faith is founded by Joseph Smith who has visions starting from the age of fourteen regarding another coming of Christ that occurs in the Americas. Joseph Smith, known as "The Prophet" has visions from 1827-1830 in which he is told that Christianity is corrupted and restoration to "True Christian Gospel" is necessary. "The rejection of 'The Law' by Christianity, therefore, was a departure from its Christ." ~The Jewish Encyclopedia, ed. Isidore Singer New York and London: Funk and Wagnalls, 1903, Vol. V., p.52.

Original tenets taught religious toleration. The Mormons believe that Jesus has already visited the New World and the North American Indians are one of the Lost Tribes of Israel. Joseph Smith was a member of the Free and Accepted Masons of Nauvoo, Illinois [becoming a member on May 5th, 1842] and resented the fact that his fellow brethren did not defend him when the community ostracized him for his beliefs and accepting the right of man to having more than one wife. "Biblical backing for Mormon behavior is easy to find, although Mark Twain is reported to have denied its legitimacy to a Mormon. The Mormon claimed polygamy was perfectly moral and he defied Twain to cite any passage of Scripture, which forbade it. 'Well,' said Twain, 'How about that passage that tells us no man can serve two Masters at the same time?'"

~Dennis McKinsey.

Other Masons of the Mormon Church were Hyrum Smith, Brigham Young [former Methodist and said to have had as many as twenty-seven wives and fifty-seven children], Heber C. Kimball and John C. Bennett. Only members of the Fraternal Lodge were allowed in the early years to advance within the church, the Mormons having accepted secret signs, handshakes and passwords similar to the Masons in order to identify themselves.

AD 1831-"In the seventh of Ezra we find the decree which we seek. It was issued by Artaxerxes, King of Persia, B. C. 457. In Ezra 6:14, the house of the Lord at Jerusalem is said to have been built 'according to the commandmen of Cyrus, and Darius, and completed by artaxerxes.' The Scripture counts this action one decree. That the later decrees were a continuation or completion of that of Cyrus, see Ezra 6:1-14. Taking of the prophecy concerning the 70 weeks is fulfilled...It is by the Canon of Ptolemy that the great prophetic period of the seventy weeks is fixed. This Canon places the seventh year of Artaxerxes in the year B.C. 457; and the accuracy of the Canon is demonstrated by the concurrent agreement of more than twenty eclipses." ~From 'The Great Controversy Between Christ and Satan,' by E.G. White, pg. 369.

Adherents believe Christ will come again, ...soon. The 'Beast' referred to in Revelations 13:1-10 is understood by this religious group to refer to the Papal power in Rome. The Adventists are alleged to have made robes with which to ascend to "Meet the Lord in the air." No substantial proof has been provided to prove this story, and for "Many years a large reward has been offered for proof that one such instance ever occurred..." ~The Great Controversy Between Christ and Satan, by E.G. White.

AD 1831-1912-Labouchere, Henry DuPre, British editor and politician of French extraction, he rose high in the British diplomatic service and then founded and edited a lively radical weekly, "Truth."

He was "A strict agnostic," his biographer Thorold says. When he lay slowly and placidly dying, a lamp in the room flickered, he raised his head and said, "Flames?...No, not yet," he muttered, sinking back. It is not included in the pious stories of "Infidel Death Beds." ~From the works of Fr. J. McCabe.

AD 1831-Antonelli: This man was Cardinal Secretary of State to Pope Gregory XVI and Pope Pius IX, 1831-1878, who is considered as a saint by many American Catholics was the son of a poor wood-cutter and he died a millionaire: he left behind $20,000,000, to an illegitimate daughter and a countess to fight greedy relatives for it.

He had refused to take priestly orders because he wanted freedom. His greed, moral laxity, looseness and complete indifference to the vile condition of the Papal States were known to everybody in Rome, yet the Vatican did nothing, and denies everything.

In the 11th edition of an encyclopedia we read of him: "At Antonelli's death the Vatican finances were found to be in disorder, with a deficit of, 45,000,000 lire. His personal fortune, accumulated during office, was considerable and was bequeathed almost entirely to his family... His activity was directed almost exclusively to the struggle between the Papacy and the Italian Risorgimento, the history of which is comprehensible only when the influence exercised by his unscrupulous grasping and sinister personality is fully taken into account." ~From the works of Father J. McCabe, Rationalist Encyclopedia.

It appears that the Church's policy is "Alms from the poor," not "Alms for the poor." Pope Pius XI declared in one of his speeches that the sum he got, after two or three years haggling, from the Dictator, El Duce, Mussolini as the price of his silence was fixed by him, and as low as he could possibly make it because the Italians, who would have to produce it, were his children. It was more than $90,000,000, and each Cardinal had his income doubled immediately. So much for the poor.

Pope Gregory XIV heads the Catholic Church for 15 years and is known as "One of the Greatest Pontiffs," 1831 A.D.

AD 1832-1904-Stephen, Sir Leslie, English biographer, critic, freethinker, and philosopher, born in London, educated at King's College, and at the University of Cambridge. Ordained a priest in the Anglican Church in which he repudiates his ordination in 1875. His brother, Sir James Fitzjames Stephen, baronet, a judge, professor of law, and author of works on law, also "Entirely abandoned his belief in the orthodox dogmas."

Stephen states his theological opinions in "An Agnostic's Apology," which appeared in "Fortnightly," a magazine, in 1876 and later on as a book in 1893. In 1864, upon returning to London, and began to write extremely critical essays for leading periodicals. Sir Leslie Stephen, LL.D., Litt.D. wrote countless essays which were collected under the title, "Hours in a Library," 3 vols. 1874, 1876, 1879. He was editor, from 1871 to 1882, of "Cornhill Magazine."

Stephen's achievement was his editorship of the first 26 volumes of "Dictionary of National Biography," 1882, of which he contributed nearly 400 biographies. His readings in philosophy and ethics led him to a position of extreme skepticism among his contemporaries and he devoted much of his time to philosophical writings: "The History of English Thought in the Eighteenth Century," 1876, and "The English Utilitarians" 3 vol., 1900, which were influenced by the works of the 18th century philosopher David Hume [and also the Utilitarianists, Jeremy Bentham and James and John Stuart Mill]. ~Stephen was especially interested in ethics and moral values and his Science of Ethics, 1882 was widely accepted as a textbook.

Freethinkers," says of Stephens, "I have never heard of him, or of his books. Let me see if he has any books listed as extant in the volumes of All The Books in Print. I find twenty-two books listed and a set of about fifteen volumes of his works, the latter costing about $400. Not one of those titles listed are either Free Thinking or An Agnostic's Apology. Anyone checking a listing of this man's works would not know that he was anything but a good Christian, for there is not mention that he ever wrote anything about Agnosticism, much less been the head of a kind of intellectual posture called the 'Agnosticism of the Leslie Stephen school.'"

Millennialism; End of the World; Pope Gregory XVI points toward the time of the "Plague of locusts," which has arrived in his Encyclical "Mirari vos arbitramur." ~Revelation 9:3

AD 1832-1918-Bancroft, Hubert Howe, freethinker and historian. The authority on Western America and writer of 39 volumes on its history has a library of 60,000 volumes. Howe expresses an uncompromising Deism and scorn of the Churches. In his work, "Retrospect," 1913, he states, "There is but little religion in the Churches, and that little graft is strangling," p.278.

End of the World: Joseph Smith, the founder of the Mormon movement [Church of Latter Day Saints], hears a voice and interprets it as implying that if he lived to the age of 85, Jesus would return. This would be the year 1890. Regrettably, by that year, Smith had been dead for almost a half century, and Jesus has yet to return.

"Religion is not the hero of the day, but the zero. In any exposition of the products of brains, the Sunday-School takes the booby prize... Man has asked for truth and the Church has given him miracles. He has asked for knowledge, and the Church has given him theology. He has asked for facts, and the Church has given him the Bible. This foolishness should stop. The Church has nothing to give man that has not been in cold storage for two thousand years. Anything would become stale in that time." ~Marilla M. Ricker.

AD 1832-Pope Gregory XVI, issues "Mirari Vos," on 15 August, an encyclical on liberalism and religious indifferentism. Religious indifferentism being defined as "... The fraud of the wicked who claim that it is possible to obtain the Eternal Salvation of the soul by the profession of any kind of religion, as long as morality is maintained."

Masonry is not mentioned, specifically. Italian historians have documented Pope Gregory XVI, as a notorious wine drinker [drunkard] and lover of erotic gossip, "... Absorbed himself in ignoble interests while the country groaned under misrule." Pope Gregory XVI will vehemently denounce freedom of conscience as an insane folly, and the freedom of the press a pestilent error, which cannot be sufficiently detested.

AD 1833-Robert Green Ingersoll, free thinker, writer, raised in an in an evangelical atmosphere, his father was Minister of the Congregational Church.

After witnessing the horrors and religious hatreds during the Civil War, on Christianity he wrote, "It offers no consolation to any good and loving man."

On the promise of a future life, "The poor barbarian weeping over his dead can answer the question as intelligently and satisfactorily as the robed priests of the most authentic creed."

Slavery is abolished throughout the British Empire.

The Webster Bible, is published in 1833, the work of Noah Webster, writer of the 1828 American Dictionary of the English Language. Noah Webster's work is basically an update of the King James Version with "Amendments to the language." Webster sought to make the King James Version more easily understood by his contemporary readers.

Viet Nam: "The political and military origin of the war of Vietnam has been described with millions of written and spoken words. Yet, nothing has been said about one of the most significant forces, which contributed to its promotion, namely, the role played by religion, which in this case, means the part played by the Catholic Church, and by her diplomatic counterpart, the Vatican." ~Viet Nam. Why Did We Go? The Religious Beginning of an Unholy War: The Shocking Story of the Catholic Church's Role in Starting the Vietnam War By Avro Manhattan. Avro Manhattan, 1914-1990, His works have been on the Catholic Forbidden List for over 50 years.

Lê Văn Khôi promises to protect Catholicism in the country and rebels take over southern Vietnam, with Catholics playing a large role. 2,000 Vietnamese Catholic troops fight under the command of the Catholic Father Nguyễn Văn Tâm. ~Indochina, Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 7.

AD 1833- "The Oxford Movement," Cardinal Newman sits on the revision committee of the Anglican Church, with his "Track 90," he literally denounces the authority of the Anglican Church. The Oxford members believed that the Church of England constituted a mere branch of the Holy Catholic Church, which the Roman Catholic and the Greek Orthodox Churches are also branches. Newman leaves England and is eventually made a Cardinal by Pope Pius IX.

The Church is reluctant to admit anything regarding its 'True History' and 'Originations.' However, Cardinal Newman, commenting on Dean Milman's "History of the Jews," groups a number of these Paganisms in Christianity, and says that Milman arrays facts "Admitted on all hands," to wit: "That the Doctrine of the Logos is Platonic; that of the Incarnation Indian [Buddha], that of a Divine Kingdom Judaic; that of angels and demons [and a Mediator] Persian; that, the connection of sin with the body is Gnostic; the idea of a new birth Chinese and Eleusinian; that of sacramental virtue Pythagorean; that of Trinity common to East and West; and that of the Rites of Baptism and sacrifice equally ubiquitous!"

~Newman, Essays, Critical and Historical, 7th ed, pg 231; as summarized by the Rt. Hon. J.M. Robertson in A History of Freethought in the XIXth Century, p. 145-6. London, 1929, from www.infidels.org

Buddha is canonized as a Christian saint [twice]. Saint Barlaam is the Buddha and Saint Joasaph is the Boddhisatta. The modern Bollandist says it was all innocent. They cannot go so far as to admit the truth—it is all deliberate Christian deceit and forgery.

Father Justin reasons from analogy thus, "By declaring the Logos, the first-begotten of God, our master, Jesus Christ, to be born of a Virgin, without any human mixture, we [Christians] may no more in this than what you [Pagans] say of those whom you style the Sons of Jove. For you need not be told what a parcel of sons the writers most in vogue among you assign to Jove... As to the Son of God, called Jesus, should we allow him to be nothing more than man, yet the title of 'The Son of God' is very justifiable, upon the account of his wisdom, considering that you [Pagans] have your Mercury in worship under the title of 'The Word,' a Messenger of God... "As to his [Jesus] being born of a Virgin, you have your Perseus to balance that." ~Justin, Apologia, I. ch. xxii; The Ante-Nicene Fathers, a Collection of the extant Writings of all the Founders of Christianity down to the Council of Nicaea, or Nice, in 325 A.D. American Reprint, eight volumes. The Christian Literature Publishing Co., Buffalo, N.Y., 1885.

AD 1833- Paul Bert, whose father educated him in a detestation of priests, and his own nature led him to the pursuit of science, idolized by the school masters and school mistresses in France. Being accused of a "Blind hatred" of priests, he replied, "The conquests of education are made on the domain of religion; I am forced to meet on my road Catholic superstitions and Romish policy, or rather it is across their empire that my path seems to me naturally traced."

Paul Bert declared that, "Modern societies march towards morality in proportion as they leave religion behind." He published his scathing Morale des Jesuites, of which he sold over twenty thousand copies in less than a year.

The book is dedicated to Bishop Freppel in a vein of masterly irony. His "Premiere Annee d'Enseignement Scientifique," was universally used in the Frenell primary schools. Upon notification of his death, French Chamber-member, M. Freycinet announced from the tribune, "I announce with the deepest sorrow the death of M. Paul Bert. He died literally on the field of honor, broken down by the fatigues and hardships which he so bravely endured in trying to carry out the glorious task, which he had undertaken. The Chamber loses by his death one of its most eminent members, Science one of its most illustrious votaries, France one of her most loving and faithful children, and the Government a fellow-worker of inestimable value, in whom we placed the fullest confidence. Excuse me, gentlemen, if because my strength fails me I am unable to proceed."

Bishop Freppel opposes the first vote on the ground that the deceased was an inveterate enemy of religion, but he was embarrassingly beaten, the majority against him being 379 to 45. ~Infidel Death-Beds by G.W. Foote and A.D. McLaren, The Pioneer Press (G.W. Foot and Co. Ltd) 61, Farringdon Street, E.C4

AD 1833-1886-Daniel Home, Scottish spiritualist, psychic, levitator, migrated to the United States as a child where he is possessed by devils due to poltergeists immediately after the death of his mother.

The Exorcism is unsuccessful and he gains a reputation as a psychic medium holding séances and causing objects to move across rooms, performing before the Czar of Russia and expelled by the Roman Catholic Church in 1864 for practicing sorcery.

In 1868 he is said to have levitated himself out a third story window of the home of Lord Adare, Buckingham Gate, London with three witnesses [cf. Simon Magus]. His writings include, "My Life" and

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

"Lights of Shadows of Spiritualism."

AD 1834-1919-Ernst Haeckel, world famous German zoologist and freethinker, outspokenly rejected all religion all his life and wrote the anti-religious "Riddle of the Universe," selling several million copies in a multitude of languages. Religious Catholic writers, untruthful about his scientific distinction, have slandered his works as well as his name for denying Christ and religion per se. although his voluminous scientific works have brought him four gold medals and seventy diplomas from scientific bodies all over the world, as well as having in Jena, Germany, streets and squares of the city named after him.

The religious factions even circulated a story that he had "Forged" the illustrations in his books, so much for Christians not 'Bearing false witness against their neighbors.'

The Spanish Inquisition officially ends. The Spanish Inquisition was, "An engine of immense power, constantly applied for the furtherance of obscurantism, the repression of thought, the exclusion of foreign ideas and the obstruction of progress." ~Lea, History of the Inquisition in Spain.

Pope Gregory XVI formally abolishes the Inquisition and its horrendous torture devices, which for centuries were used for:

- † Suppression of opposing viewpoints to the Universal Church.
- † Purification of subjects.
- † Commanding absolute obedience to the Roman Church.
- † Punishment and terrorizing for benefit of the Church.
- † Enriching the coffers of the Church, and its supporters.

Heinrich Hoessli, a Swiss milliner, publishes his two volume set of Eros: On the Love of Men, in German, which collects all the examples he could find of homosexual love in ages past; Greek, Roman, and Persian love poems and manuscripts, and is one of the first books in modern times to give a constructive perspective on homosexuality.

AD 1834-The Illuminati is again blamed for insurgent actions with the Italian revolutionary leader, Giuseppe Mazzini, being allegedly selected by the Illuminati to direct their revolutionary program throughout the world. He served in that capacity until he died in 1872.

However, some years before he died, Mazzini is alleged to have enticed an American general named Albert Pike into the Illuminati. Pike is fascinated by the idea of a one-world government, and ultimately he becomes the head of this "Luciferian Conspiracy."

Between 1859 and 1871, Pike is said to have worked out a military blueprint for Three World Wars and various uprising throughout the world, which he believed would bring the conspiracy to its ultimate stage in the 20th Century

AD-1835- Madam Blavatsky; Mysticism is the belief that beyond this visible material world there is a spiritual reality, a Supreme Being, which may be called God, that devout persons may experience through meditation, revelation, intuition, or other transcendental state that takes the individual beyond the normal consciousness. This type of religious philosophy has existed since the time of the ancient Greek philosophers Pythagoras and Plato.

Greatly expounded upon by the philosopher Plotinus in his "Enneads" in the 3rd century AD. In the 19th century, "Theosophy" is identified with the work of the "Theosophical Society," founded in 1875 by Helena Petrovna Blavatsky, a Russian immigrant, who received her calling in the United States.

The society, started in New York City, by Blavatsky and Henry Steel Olcott, became intensely interested in "Spiritualism." In 1878 they migrated to India and established a following at Adyar. In "The Secret Doctrine," published in 1888, Ms. Blavatsky defines the principles of the Theosophical Society.

The first principle being that there is an eternal and unchangeable principle about which there can be no knowledge, nor is any speculation regarding it achievable. Secondly, the Universe, as we perceive it, is an infinity in which smaller universes alternately make their appearance. All souls, or mortals, are identified with an "Over-soul," which is an aspect of the unknown or unknowable.

Every soul is compelled to go through a series of rebirths, or reincarnations, where the material body ceases to exist and the soul is reborn in another material form to continue its eternal quest for spiritual growth.

The society seeks a universal brotherhood of humanity and to study comparative religion, philosophy, and science, as well as to investigate the mysterious laws of nature and the inexplicable powers of man.

AD 1835-1894-Deraismes, Maria, French writer and first woman Freemason. Mme. Deraismes is one of the founders of the Feminist movement in France and President of the Society for the Improvement of the Condition of Women. Like most of the pioneers of the movement in all countries, she saw that Christianity was responsible for the suppression of women in Europe, and was a militant Atheist and President of various Freethought Societies.

England: the Sheriffs' Declaration Bill, Aug. 21, 1835, Jews are finally allowed to hold the ancient and important office of Sheriff.

Birth of Adah Isaacs Menken, the most famous sexpot of the Victorian age was the star of "Mazeppa," who flashed apparent nudity in the face of Emperor Franz Josef, and he liked it. She is also the lover in reality, or publicly held fantasies, of many famous men including numerous crowned heads and chiefs of government who was once paid by Dante Gabriel Rossetti to spend the night with the poet Charles Swinburne, giving him the flogging he sought, possibly in an attempt on Rossetti's part to convince the poet that women are desirable sex partners.

AD 1835-1910- Clemens, Samuel Langhorne, "Mark Twain" His skepticism is freely expressed in a number of works, "Eve's Diary," 1906, "What is Man?" 1909, "The Mysterious Stranger," 1918, etc., but is seen in its most dangerous form in his letters.

In a letter of August 28, 1908 in reply to a young man who has asked if he would include Jesus among the 100 greatest men of history. Yes, he says, if you mean men with influence in history, but Satan also. "These two gentlemen," he says, "Have had more influence than all others put together, and 99 percent of it was Satan's."

The creation of the Devil was "Worth very nearly a hundred times as much to the business as was the influence of the rest of the Holy Family put together." ~From the Internet: www.infidels.org

AD 1835-1919- Carnegie, Andrew, American industrialist, freethinker, and philanthropist, at the age of 33, when he had an annual income of $50,000, stated, "Beyond this never earn, make no effort to increase fortune, but spend the surplus each year for benevolent purposes."

Carnegie did not have a formal education, but was a self made man, as a youth working in Pennsylvania, he developed an interest in books and education which was the basis for his hard work. In the course of his life he gave away $350,000,000.⁰⁰, generally for social projects such as public free libraries.

Dr. Moncure Conway, who knew Carnegie, says that he was an "Agnostic," and a few references to his religion are confirmed in "Life of James Watt."

Carnegie refers to "The mysterious realm which envelops man" and says in regard to discussions on religion that, "We are but young in all this mystery business."

"The Truthseeker" of August 23, 1919, quoted a confession of faith of his in which, a few years before his death, he rejected "All creeds" and says that he was "A disciple of Confucius and Franklin." His perplexity of an Atheist and a deist is due to the fact that he shed religion without any serious interest in it and avoided the subject as much as possible. "There is no sadder sight in the world than to see a beautiful theory killed by a brutal fact." ~Thomas Huxley.

AD 1836-1886-Paramahansa Ramakrishna, Indian mystic, had an early childhood religious experience, remaining in a trance for three days. Believed that sexuality is an obstacle in obtaining mystical consciousness and remained celibate after a disastrous child bride experience. Convinced that, "Many paths lead to the same God." The essence of religious conviction lay in experience and not in Doctrine.

Homosexual Executions: The last execution for homosexuality in Britain, though the death penalty for homosexuals will remain on the books until 1861.

Christianity remains in favor of slavery, "The delegates of the annual conference are decidedly opposed to modern abolitionism, and wholly disclaim any right, wish, or intention to interfere in the civil and political relation between master and slave in the slave-holding states of the union." ~Methodist Episcopal Church, Statement of the General Conference, Cincinnati, May 1836.

AD 1837-Statistics relating to the murders committed by the Catholic Church, in the Name of God, reach as high as 68 million victims, which appears in a work: "Alexander Campbell, well known religious leader of the 19th century, stated in debate with John B. Purcell, Bishop of Cincinnati, in 1837 that the records of historians and martyrologists show that it may be reasonable to estimate that from fifty to sixty-eight millions of human beings died, suffered torture, lost their possessions, or were otherwise devoured by the Roman Catholic Church during the awful years of the Inquisition. Bishop Purcell made little effort to refute these figures.” ~Citing A Debate on the Roman Catholic Religion, Christian Publishing Co., 1837, p. 327.

A former Catholic priest, asserts in his book that it has been estimated that fifty million people died for their faith during the twelve hundred years of the Dark Ages alone. ~Citing Walter M. Montano, Behind the Purple Curtain, Cowman Publications, 1950, page 91.

AD 1838-The Rite of Memphis is founded by Jacques-Etienne Marconis de Nègre who applies the Egyptian Rites of the occult to Freemasonry.

AD 1839-“La Chiromonie” is published by Casimir Stanislas d’Arpentigny [born in 1798], he applies a systematic approach to palmistry. People seek answers; if they cannot find answers in their religion, then they will look into the occult and mysteries.

AD 1840-The Church of Carmel, also known as the Oeuvre de la Misericorde [Work of Mercy] is established by Eugene Vintras, [1807-1875] who is a charismatic and compelling preacher who attracts members from high society, is alleged to integrate sexual acts as part of his sacrament.

This religious sect is declared heretical by Pope Pius IX in 1848, Vintras already having served five years in prison. A priest writes leaflets accusing him of orgies and of having both male and female priests and the members are eventually excommunicated by the Pope.

Upon the death of Vintras in 1875 the membership is taken over by the Abbé Joseph Boullan [1824-1893] a mostly tarnished figure that had previously seduced a nun at the convent at La Salette, Adele Chevalier. The sexual implications continue, however it is alleged that Boullan had the audacity to extend his sacramental rites to other members of the animal kingdom.

Pope Pius IX, writing to the Emperor of Germany on 7th August, 1873, states: “Every one who has been Baptized belongs in some way to the Pope,” which is the Church’s claim to one’s soul if they should decide to change their Catholic mind later on in life. In other words, “Once a Christian, always a Christian,” which gives the Church the continued right to persecute you.

AD 1841-1899-Faure, Francois Felix, sixth President of the French Republic. Son of a worker who made a fortune in business and rose to high positions in politics as an anti-clerical Liberal. He was President of France, 1895 to 1899 and is responsible for many of the severe laws against the Catholic Church that were passed in those years in an attempt to control the corruption, political intrigue, and involvement the Church continually denies.

AD 1842-1927-Brandes, Georg Morris Cohen (1842-1927), Danish critic and biographer, who is regarded as one of the great systematic literary critics of modern times. Traveling widely in Europe, he returned in 1871 to lecture at the University of Copenhagen, but is denied the professorship of aesthetics by university authorities due to his Jewish parentage, his outspoken atheism, and his universally radical views, whereupon Brandes went to Berlin in 1877 and lived there for five years, writing and lecturing.

Although born and educated in Denmark, he resided in many countries and had such a remarkable knowledge of the literature of each that he was the closest approach to a “Continental.” Being a member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences and the British Royal Society of Literature, did not deter him in from professing freethinking and helping the cause against stifled religious perspectives. Both he and his brother Carl were outspoken Agnostics.

AD 1843-John C. Horsley of England designs the first “Christmas Card.”

Massachusetts repeals its 138 year old anti-miscegenation [inter-racial] law.

AD 1843-End of the World: Seventh Day Adventists, known also as Millerites [after William Miller, a Baptist minister], believes that the Second Coming is to be on 21 March 1843 or 21 March 1844. When the occurrence does not materialize, they are disappointed and change the date to 22 October 1844. The Jehovah’s Witnesses’ reckoning of time is inaccurate, and so is the Seventh Day Adventists’ use of the 2,300 days of Daniel 8:14 to arrive at their 1844 date is false. The Hebrew words translated “Days” in Daniel 8:13 & 14 are not “Years” as the Seventh Day Adventists published. The words translated “Days” in the King James Bible are actually two Hebrew words, “Ereb boqer,” which literally means “Evening and morning.”

Prior to The "First Disappointment" many followers sold all their earthly possessions in anticipation of the Coming [Matthews 24:29-31, Luke 21:25-28, Rev. 20:1-7] the second disappointment leads to a split in the membership. William Miller, the inadvertent founder of the sects of Jehovah's Witnesses and Seventh-Day Adventists, fixed the date of the Millennium on March 21, 1843, and his followers were afire with great enthusiasm, but still unsuccessful in seeing Christ descending from the clouds as expected.

On theology and science, "Theology still tries to interfere in medicine where moral issues are supposed to be specially involved, yet over most of the field the battle for the scientific independence of medicine has been won. No one now thinks it impious to avoid pestilences and epidemics by sanitation and hygiene, and though some still maintain that diseases are sent by God, they do not argue that it is therefore impious to try to avoid them. The consequent improvement in health and increase of longevity is one of the most remarkable and admirable characteristics of our age. Even if science had done nothing else for human happiness, it would deserve our gratitude on this account. Those who believe in the utility of theological creeds would have difficulty in pointing to any comparable advantage that they have conferred upon the human race." ~Bertrand Russell, Religion and Science, New York: Oxford University Press, pp. 108-09.

Miller decides he has miscalculated, and fixes a new date on October 21 of the same year, "On the appointed Day of Doom frenzied believers donned their robes, tucked an ultimate lunch in the folds, and took their lunch and took their places on the housetops, facing east. On the 22nd they ate their lunch and climbed down. Miller confessed his disappointment, but insisted 'The Day of the Lord is at the door.'" ~Borchardt, Frank. German Antiquity in Renaissance Myth. Pg. 69.

"It is not for you to know the times or dates the Father has set by his own authority. 8 But you will receive power when the Holy Spirit comes on you; and you will be my witnesses in Jerusalem, and in all Judea and Samaria, and to the ends of the earth." ~Jesus, Acts 1:6-8, NIV.

The Hungarian physician, Heinrich Kaan, publishes his story named Psychopathias sexualis, which reinterprets sins of the Flesh as psychological disorders. The theological terms "Deviation," "Aberration," and "Perversion," are established into medicine.

"Few theologians would care to pursue their research to its logical conclusion and finally assert, as did Thomas Paine, that the Biblical account of Jesus 'Has every mark of fraud and imposition stamped upon the face of it.'" ~George Smith, Atheism: The Case Against God, Buffalo, NY: Prometheus, 1989, pp. 203-204.

AD 1844-October 22nd: When Jesus does not return, Miller predicts this new date. In an event, which is now called "The Great Disappointment," and many Christians had sold their property and possessions, quit their jobs and prepared themselves for the Second Coming. Nothing happens, and the day came and went without incident.

AD 1844-1900- Nietzsche, Friedrich Wilhelm. His works proclaim his literary greatness and atheism. The Scorn of Christianity and glorification of the ideal man run through all his works. His mind gave way under the strain of his fierce indignation against stupidity and hypocrisy but the Catholic Church charges that this mental unbalance may be traced in his works is ludicrous.

They are masterly indictments of the developing faults of the new age which have so fatally revealed themselves since death. His chief mistake was to assume that Christianity, through its edicts, had "Introduced humanitarianism" into the world and to fail to hold the balance in his mind between the need for virility and the need to help the weaker members of our society.

The atheism of Nietzsche, 1844-1900, inspired Hitler to commit horrific acts, and this perspective is now supposed to show that atheism is a terrible worldview. But Nietzsche was not a spokesperson for atheists simply by being an atheist as Nietzsche disagreed with many of the views Hitler endorsed. One of Nietzsche's fundamental contentions was that traditional values, which are represented primarily by Christianity, had lost their power in the lives of individuals.

He expressed this in his proclamation "God is Dead." He was convinced that traditional values represented a "Slave morality," a morality created by weak and resentful individuals who encouraged such behavior as gentleness and kindness because the behavior served their interests.

Nietzsche claimed that new values could be created to replace the traditional ones, and his discussion of the possibility led to his concept of the 'Overman' or 'Superman.' ~Microsoft Encarta Encyclopedia, 1998.

Nietzsche would have despised Hitler's German nationalism, socialism, anti-Semitism, and in Hitler's open support of Catholicism, Nietzsche would have thought of an anti-Semitic National Socialist party that is openly religious. Nietzsche's rejection of the main facets of Hitler's worldview shows that Nietzsche's philosophy did not support Nazism.

AD 1844-1923- Bernhardt, Sarah, born Rosine Bernhardt in Paris on October 22, AD 1844, French actress and freethinker, who was the best-known stage figure of her time. The daughter of a courtesan, she was educated in a convent and at the Paris Conservatoire. Carel, in his "Histoire Anecdotique des Contemporains," 1885, p. 46, that Gounod [Charles Francois Gounod, 1818-93, French composer of opera and sacred music, is best known for his opera Faust] once asked Ms. Bernhardt her in her studio if she ever prayed. "I," she said, "Never! I'm an atheist."

To her repulsion Gounod went down on his knees there and then and prayed for her. Gounod, the favorite composer of the then modern Roman Catholics, was a known neurotic and inconsistent in his wisdom. He "Vacillated between mysticism and voluptuousness," says one of his biographers.

The Second Coming of Christ: Protestants, of various fellowships, experience the "Great Disappointment," which occurs due to the expected Second Coming of Christ not occurring [October 22, 1844 A.D.]

In The Queen vs. Millis, common law marriages [cohabitation] are now declared illegal in England.

AD 1844-Orthodox members of the Shi'ah sect of Islam believe that the 12th Imam [successor to Muhammad], disappeared in the year 878 and that he will one day reappear to save the world. Shortly after his disappearance, there were a succession of people who assumed the title of the "Bab" meaning "The Gate," or "The Door" and the "Bab" acts as the spokesmen for the Imam.

Revived in 1844 by a Persian [Iranian] named Mirza 'Ali Mohammad of Shiraz,' who proclaimed himself the "Bab."

The Bab predicted that a new prophet, or messenger of God [Allah], was soon to appear. The message spread quickly throughout Persia and provoked the opposition of the ruling Islamic sovereign. The Bab was executed in 1850, along with more than 20,000 of his converts in the persecution that followed. "In any case, the argument against the persecution of opinion does not depend upon what the excuse for persecution may be. The argument is that we, none of us, know all truth, that the discovery of new truth is promoted by free discussion and rendered very difficult by suppression, and that, in the long run, human welfare is increased by the discovery of truth and hindered by action based on error." ~Bertrand Russell, Religion and Science, New York: Oxford University Press, p. 250.

AD 1844-The Baha'i Faith is founded by Baha'u'llah, Bahai is Persian, meaning, "Of glory." Bahauallah, Arabic for, "The Splendor of God," became a follower of the Bab, and in 1850, upon the martyrdom of the Bab, became the leader of a Babi faction.

The Persian government, had persistently persecuted the Babists, and in 1852 carried out a general massacre in which an estimated 20,000 followers were killed. Bahauallah, his family, along with some of his followers were spared, but Bahauallah was imprisoned and tortured and eventually exiled to Baghdad to remain a political prisoner for the rest of his life. Today, a magnificent garden is constructed, Baha'i Gardens, in Haifa, Israel, in his memory.

There is a cuneiform tablet found near Baghdad in 1879, which fixes the day that Babylon fell, namely, Tishri the 16th, or October 6-7, but not the exact year. The Watchtower of August 15, 1968, page 490 claimed that the year was definite in the Nabonidus Chronicle, but a later Watchtower reversed this. ~Watch Tower 5-15-71, p.'s 315 & 316.

AD 1844-1879-Saint Bernadette Soubirous, in Lourdes, France, shepherdess, in the year 1858, she claims to have seen the Virgin Mary on eighteen separate occasions. She becomes a nun and is canonized in 1933. The church establishes an agency to authenticate miracles that occur at Lourdes.

Birth of Paul Verlaine, poet and lover of poet Arthur Rimbaud, later imprisoned for two years after shooting his lover. He wrote, "Sonnet to an Asshole," which begins, "Dark and wrinkled like a deep pink, it breathes, humbly nestled among the moss still wet with love..." ~Leather History Timeline, <http://www.leatherarchives.org/exhibits/deblasetimeline1.htm>

Birth of Edward Carpenter, the great English "Sexual Emancipator."

The birth of Friedrich Nietzsche, the philosopher who was not an devotee of Sado-Masochism, but listed among the four women in his life one married woman whom he recurrently flogged during sex, and who, dressed as a man, beat him senseless before the next sexual encounter. A photo of Nietzsche shows him as one of two gentlemen horses "Pulling" a cart on which Lou Andreas-Salome, not "The" married woman, crouches with a knotted whip raised.

AD 1846-1878-When Pope Pius IX, dies in 1878, but the Italians are so angry with his administration that they stop the consecrated funeral procession and attempt to throw his body into the Tiber River. Only the militia saves his body from a watery grave!

The great antagonist of President Lincoln, Pope Pius IX, had declared himself infallible on July 18, 1870. Just a few months later the French soldiers are pulled out of Rome and Italian patriots, led by Giuseppe Garibaldi, liberate and unify Italy, and the Papal States are gone forever! ~ From Fifty Years in the Church of Rome, by Charles Chiniquy, published by Chick Publications.

"How many legs does a dog have if you call the tail a leg? Four. Calling a tail a leg doesn't make it a leg."
~Abraham Lincoln, 16th President of the United States.

The Roman Church remains irritated at Americans leaving out Jesus in their Constitution and giving man inalienable rights, "The state [the U.S. Constitution] has not the right to leave every man free to profess and embrace whatever religion he may desire." ~Pope Pius IX, 1846-1878.

"You cannot bring about prosperity, by discouraging theft. You cannot strengthen the weak, by weakening the strong. You cannot help the wage earner, by pulling down the wage payer. You cannot further the brotherhood of man, by encouraging class hatred. You cannot help the poor, by destroying the rich. You cannot establish sound security, on borrowed money. You cannot keep out of trouble, by spending more than you earn. You cannot build character and courage, by taking away initiative and independence. You cannot help men permanently, by doing for them what they could and should do for themselves." ~Abraham Lincoln, 16th President of the United States.

AD 1846-1878-Pope Pius IX, in 1846, issues "Qui Pluribus," on 9 November, and calls for Catholics to wage war against heresy. It condemns those who put human reason above the Catholic faith, and those who believe in human advancement.

Attacking secret "Sects" and "Crafty" Bible societies who "Force on people of all kinds, even the uneducated, gifts of the Bible," it calls "Perverse" the belief that all religions are equal, and criticizes those organizations for the same faults the previous Papal pronouncements imputed to Freemasonry.

Pope Pius IX wanted a liberal constitution for the Italian people, and in 1849, granted individual freedoms to all of the Italians who were delighted. Later, Pope Pius IX would issue his fatuous warning to the world that Liberal sentiments were corrupting civilization and laid down that in no circumstances were men entitled to rebel against their "Legitimate" king.

So callous was the King's court that the Lazzaroni of Naples, the human vermin of Neapolitan society, roasted and ate, under the palace windows, the bodies of Liberals they had killed, and brigand-chiefs drank their blood from their skulls. Catholic writers suppress these facts of history today and the public mind is further exposed to Catholic lies.

The Jesuits revolted with Garibaldi and their Freemasons, and drove Pius IX from his throne, forced to remain in Gaeta for about a year. Upon his return to Rome [under the protection of Napoleon III's French army], it was the republic's army that would later be his "Army of the Empire," they returned with a French army, offering protection to the Pope, who changed, became the most fanatical absolutist, pursuant to the requests of the Jesuits. Was Pope Pius IX being punished?

This leads to another conspiracy theory involving the Jesuit hand in the death of Pope John Paul I who died "Mysteriously" after only thirty-three days in power, 1984, September 28, after making inquiries into what would be a world wide scandal regarding the Vatican Bank.

1860, Boullan is suspended, but reversed a short time later. In 1861 Boullan and Adele are jailed for fraud and he is again suspended from the priesthood, but the decision is again reversed. Upon release from prison he presents himself to the Holy Office [Inquisition] whereby no fault is found and he is released to return to Paris.

Upon his death, a document is discovered, and is alleged to have been written by him, declared appalling, it is now locked in the Vatican Library [applications for review of said document are refused]. Was Boullan protected because of something he knew about the Church? ~See In God's Name, by David A. Yallop.

A book on the Roman system, Les Congregations Romaines, 1890, was published by a Vatican official, by a strict Catholic, F. Grimaldi, in which it is so accurate that it was put on the Forbidden Index List.

AD 1846-Emily Bronte, "Vain are the thousand creeds that move men's hearts, unutterably vain, worthless as wither'd weeds."

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

AD 1846-Pope Pius IX, Pope Leo XIII, Emperor Wilhelm II, and King Louis XIV are all alleged to have had the 'Evil Eye,' an ability to squint and cause or inflict harm upon people.

"From within, out of the heart of men, proceed evil thoughts, adulteries, fornications, murders, thefts, covetousness, wickedness, deceit, lasciviousness, an evil eye, blasphemy, pride, foolishness." ~Mark 7:21-22.

The Christian Churches like to maintain a mystical power over its ignorant congregations, "Eat thou not the bread of him that hath an evil eye, neither desire thou his dainty meat." ~ Proverbs 23:6.

"He that hasteth to be rich hath an evil eye, and considereth not that poverty shall come upon him." ~ Proverbs 28:22, see also Mark 7:21-22.

This superstition goes back to established writers such as Horace, Virgil, Plutarch and Pliny who described the victims of the Evil Eye. Antidotes are church bells [to scare away the evil spirits], horseshoes, knotted ropes, and bright ornaments worn about the person. Pope Pius IX, because he was thought to have the 'Evil Eye,' women while kneeling for his blessing as he passed, would make a counter-acting sign under their skirts.

The changing of clothing, from female to male attire, and vice versa, was also considered a means of escaping the 'Evil Eye,' as is the use of incense and foul odors believed to be a method of protection against evil spirits. In Kos, also known as Cos, island, in southeastern Greece, in the Aegean Sea, off the coast of Turkey, the priests and bridegroom would dress in female attire in order to offset the evil spirits.

Pope Pius IX on Nov. 9th issues his "Qui Pluribus," which addresses Masonry, indirectly. In 1878, Pope Leo XIII, issued an Encyclical cursing Socialism, and the next year he imposed the medieval "Philosophy of Aquinas" on the Catholic world. In the following year he bellowed at the world, which was reforming its marriage-laws, that Divorce was a Mortal Sin.' except in the ingenious form in which the rich Catholics can get it from Rome.

In 1881 he pointed out, concerning the assassination of the Russian Tsar, that these appalling outrages were due to the decay of religion, and not, of course, to the bestiality of the Tsarist regime, and in 1884 he put Freemasonry [freethinkers] Under the ban.

In 1885 he issued the 'Immortale Dei,' which was applauded as a fine democratic appeal; and which has been shown that it is nothing of the kind. In 1888 he savagely attacked the claim of religious freedom and liberty of discussion [freethinkers are an anathema to the Church].

It is not until 1891, when he saw Socialism gaining ground rapidly at the expense of the Church, that he issued the one Encyclical, 'Rerum Novarum,' which Catholics now claim to have given them a lead in social reform; and the only "Revolutionary" sentence contained in it was the statement that the workers must have a living wage, which he refused to define, and which has been a platitude of liberal literature for over half a century. In his last beautiful messages to the world he retracted his one sincere claim to helping the poor, and died sputtering the most reactionary sentiments.

The insufferable Pope Pius IX restores all of the previous restrictions against the Jews within the Vatican state, and all Jews under Papal control are confined to Rome's ghetto, the last one in Europe until the Nazis recreate segregated Jewish ghettos in the 1930's. the celebrated Pope Pius IX is beatified in the year 2000, the last step before sainthood.

AD 1847-1921- Larkin, Professor Edgar Lucien, astronomer. Director of the Lowe Observatory in California. In an article in the New York Truthseeker Larkin said "Religion is totally useless in a universe based on law, and every creed and belief will be swept from the earth when men get out of infantile stages of growth."

AD 1848-The Jesuit Order, through its clandestine political and religious actions permeates our literature throughout history. Alexander Dumas wrote his "The Count Of Monte Cristo," in which the Count is represented by the Jesuit General [Monte=Mount, Cristo = Christ, or "The Count of the Mount of Christ"]. Alexander Dumas was speaking of the Jesuit General obtaining vengeance when the Jesuits were suppressed, many of them being consigned to an island, three hours sailing, West, off the coast of Portugal. The Jesuits finally regain their power and set about to punish the monarchs of Europe who had suppressed them, driving them from their thrones, including the Knights of Malta from Malta, via Napoleon.

Alexander Dumas, fought on the side of the Italian patriots to free Rome from the temporal powers of Pope Pius IX, exposing their secret group of leaders [A satire on the Jesuits regaining their power in France].

What the Church does is supposed to be “For the Greater Glory of God”—“Ad Majorem Dei Gloriam.” With the “Reformation,” came new doctrines of salvation by grace [through faith alone], stating that there was no need for the priesthood.

In order to go to Heaven, all one needs is salvation in Christ. -Romans 1:17.

This new interpretation strips Rome of its spiritual power and the priests will no longer be needed, because the people are receiving the word of God from a book, the “Bible.”

And so, with these great revivals breaking forth and the Reformation happening, Protestant nations break away from under the power and suppression of the Pope in Rome.

AD1848-Roman citizens had, due to the chronically foul condition of the Papal States, rebelled and set up their own Roman Republic, Pope Pius IX having fled in disguise. The revolutionary movement in Europe is crushed with the aid of the French destroying the Republic for the Pope. Pope Pius IX returns and makes the Papal States, “Once more the disgrace of Europe,” as Lord Clarendon publicly said.

In 1856 the European Powers, at the Congress of Paris, solemnly warned the Pope to reform his disreputable dominion, an incident which is not recalled in the public mind now that the Papacy is represented everywhere as a wise, august, and venerable guide on moral and political principles.

There is no reform, and the Papal provinces seethe with revolt and bloody reprisals. Cavour bribes France, with the gift of Nice and Savoy, to withdraw its support of the Pope, and the advance of Italy begins. The first plebiscite was taken by Italy in the conquered Papal provinces in 1860, and the Italian inhabitants vote overwhelmingly against the Pope.

Pope Pius IX, “Chung to his poor rag of earthly dominion while he vented his screeds of impotent passion and forgot bare morality in the lust for revenge.” ~from Bolton King.

It was in these circumstances, which Christian historian seldom if ever recalls today, though they are frankly described in the Cambridge History, that Pius IX directed his Jesuits to formulate in eighty propositions the fundamental principles of what was then called “Liberalism,” and is now the common attitude of educated men.

It is as difficult now to find a translation of this egregious document as to find a translation of the Papal Decree, which condemned and suppressed the Jesuits, and the one is just as much misrepresented by Catholic writers as the other. It was a comprehensive defiance of the demand for freedom of inquiry and conscience.

Even philosophy was not to be discussed without reference to revelation and submission to clerical authority. Such elementary propositions of modern life as the following were “Reprobated, proscribed, and condemned.” “Every man is free to embrace and profess the religion which, judging by the light of human reason, he believes to be true.”

The belief that “Eternal-salvation” could be attained, or hell escaped, in any religion besides the Catholic is reprobated with horror, and the familiar Papal claims to control education and marriage and dictate to the State are reaffirmed as the world smiles, and Rationalism spreads so rapidly in Italy that a priest historian said that, “After 1860 Italy seemed to be conquered by rebels against God.” ~Balan, Continuazione alla Storia Universale, II, 477-81.

After defending the Syllabus all over the world for a quarter of a century, Catholic writers realized their defeat and began to say that it was just an expression of the opinions of Pope Pius IX in his private capacity, not as an infallible Pope, knowing quite well that this distinction was not made until after the Vatican Council of 1870. Pius IX had spoken officially and dogmatically to the entire Church.

In the accompanying Encyclical he wrote: “All these wicked opinions and doctrines Pope Pius IX, in virtue of his apostolic authority, commands all sons of the Catholic Church to regard as reprobated, proscribed, and condemned.” As to the modern Catholic plea that the document is just an historical memento of poor Pius IX, whose heart was better than his head, it was enforced as Catholic teaching during his training as a priest in a London seminary and was a normal part of the manual used by the Jesuit Lehmkuhl, of theology.

AD 1849-1926-Luther Burbank, American horticulturist, botanist, and pioneer plant breeder, who developed more than 200 new varieties of plants. "As a scientist, I cannot help feeling that all religions are on a tottering foundation... I am an infidel today. I do not believe what has been served to me to believe. I am a doubter, a questioner, a skeptic. When it can be proved to me that there is immortality, that there is Resurrection beyond the gates of death, then I will believe. Until then, no!" ~Luther Burbank, 1926.

"And to think of this great country in danger of being dominated by people ignorant enough to take a few ancient Babylonian legends as the canons of modern culture. Our scientific men are paying for their failure to speak out earlier. There is no use now talking evolution to these people. Their ears are stuffed with Genesis." ~Luther Burbank.

"I very rarely speak in public, and, curiously, my two addresses are in churches." ~Luther Burbank.

AD 1849-Pope Pius IX, issues "Quibus Quantisque Malis," on 20 April, unavailable in an English translation, this pronouncement is considered by many to be anti-Masonic in essence.

AD 1850-China, Hung Hsiu-ch'uan: a civil service candidate, becomes influenced by the fundamentalist Christians and thinks of himself as being the divine "Son of God," as he sets about to reform China, helping to found the "Association of God Worshipers" in 1846. What occurs is one of the most tragic religious stories in the history of China with more than 20-30 million killed and 17 provinces being ravaged by the "Taiping Rebellion."

This is the most serious of any internal disturbance that takes place in China and weakening the Ch'ing Dynasty, which helps prepare the way for the oncoming revolutions of the 20th century. Nanjing falls in July of 1864 to the army of Gen. Tseng Kuo-fan, and Hung committed suicide rather than surrender.

AD 1851- "... The Church [so-called] of Rome has no right to rank amongst Christian Churches. She is not a Church, neither is her religion the Christian religion. We are accustomed to speak of Popery as a corrupt form of Christianity. We concede too much. The Church of Rome bears the same relation to the Church of Christ which the hierarchy of Baal bore to the institute of Moses; and Popery stands related to Christianity only in the same way in which Paganism stood related to primeval Revelation. Popery is not a corruption simply, but a transformation. It may be difficult to fix the time when it passed from the one into the other; but the change is incontestable. Popery is the gospel transubstantiated into the flesh and blood of Paganism, under a few of the accidents of Christianity." ~J.A. Wylie, LL.D. circa 1851 in, History of the Papacy.

AD 1854-1922-Born, Giacomo della Chiosa, later to become Pope Benedict XV; [1914-1922 during the First World War and helps to maintain the neutrality of the Vatican during hostilities] Archbishop in 1907 and Cardinal in 1914, it had become apparent to the Vatican that a diplomat would be necessary in the Papacy to preclude any involvement of the Church in the hostilities in Europe. "I am," he said in his Consistorial Allocution on January 22, 1915, "Commissioned by God to be his chief interpreter."

He didn't ask who was guilty nor did he make amends for the perpetrators who caused the loss of 10,000,000 lives and $50,000,000,000 and led to a good deal of Atheism, but his "Chief interpreter" merely "Denounced all injustice by whatever side it may be committed" and said that he would not "Involve the Pontifical authority in the controversies of the belligerents." He was sure that it would be "Clear to every unbiased thinker that in this frightful conflict the Holy See, without failing to watch it with close attention, is bound to a complete impartiality."

History will reveal very good evidence that the Pope maintained a treasonable correspondence with Germany through the Austrian Church and very seriously tampered with the loyalty of the Italian troops in the Vatican's efforts to spread Catholicism at the cost of Allied lives. But we have seen enough in our time of this kind of conduct on the part of God's chief interpreter in a world-crisis. ~From the works of Father Joseph McCabe.

It was through the efforts of Pope Benedict XV that many wounded soldiers were able to be exchanged with the assistance of neutral countries to recuperate away from the ravishes of war. Pope Benedict XV was instrumental in passing the Anti-Masonic Code of Canon Law [c. 2335] threatening with excommunication any Catholic who joins the Brotherhood of Masons. The Church still sees the Masons as a threat and punishes those who join this organization and go against its will [Church].

Formalization and recognition of the Immaculate Conception of the Blessed Virgin Mary, Mother of God. None of the ancient Church Fathers and doctors had knowledge of anything of the modern Roman dogmas of the Immaculate Conception, 1854, and Papal Infallibility, 1870.

CC [Catholic Catechism] 491, The Immaculate Conception, Mary, is like Jesus: "Through the centuries the Church has become ever more aware that Mary, 'Full of Grace' through God, [Luke 1:28] was redeemed from the moment of her conception. That is what the dogma of the Immaculate Conception confesses, as Pope Pius IX proclaimed in 1854, 'The most Blessed Virgin Mary was, from the first moment of her conception, by a singular grace and privilege of Almighty God and by virtue of the merits of Jesus Christ, Saviour of the human race, preserved immune from all stain of Original Sin.'" ~Pope Pius IX, Ineffabilis Deus, 1854: DS 2803.

It is not until 1965 that Pope Paul VI will rescind this Canon Law for American and Filipino Catholics [but not for Europeans or Italians: hypocrisy lives on].

Birth of English writer Horatio Forbes Brown who died in 1926. His executors burned most of his unpublished works, attempting to hide his sexual preference for sailors, footmen and other strapping members of the lower classes. One of his surviving poems depicts a boring society musicale in which every stanza ends with the line, "But I liked their footman John the best."

The virgin, Mary, is declared exempt from Original Sin, "In the first instance of her conception, by a singular privilege and grace granted by God, in view of the merits of Jesus Christ, the Savior of the human race, was preserved exempt from all stain of Original Sin." ~Constitution Ineffabilis Deus, 8 December, 1854, Pope Pius IX. "In conservative Christianity you are told you are unacceptable. You are judged with regard to your relationship to God. Thus you can only be loved positionally, not essentially. And, contrary to any assumed ideal of Christian love, you cannot love others for their essence either. This is the horrible cost of the Doctrine of Original Sin." ~Marlene Winell, Leaving the Fold, Oakland, CA: New Harbinger, 1993, p. 1.

AD 1855-Meatless Friday is proclaimed: and, again in 1905 [February 25th] meatless Friday is addressed by the Holy See. Working men and their families are allowed to consume meat [once a day] except on Friday. The Greek Unitarian Church adheres to abstinence during certain Feast Days and is not allowed to deviate without authorization from the Holy See [Anti-Pope Benedict XIV, 1425-1430].

The original Christian philosophy [originally derived from Apollonius' teachings], needed substantial modification due to the nature of Apollonius [a fashionable Prophet during the time of Jesus] being a vegetarian and one who also abstained from all forms of alcoholic beverages.

The early followers of the Universal Roman Catholic Church loved their meat and also often drank to excess, so the Roman Church re-invented their Jesus of Nazareth makeup to suit its own political and personal gains. Biblical redacting now shows this "New improved" character of Jesus to be both "A glutton and a wine bibber." ~Theosophy, Vol. 58, No. 1, November, 1969, Pages 14-22; Number 25 of a 36-part series.

There is much confusion, even today, as to whether Jesus was from Nazareth [a town which did not exist during his time], or a Nazarene, all of which confirms the disparity in the numerous authors of Scriptures. According to the Gospel of Matthew, Jesus was called "The Nazarene" because he allegedly lived in a city called Nazareth, which Luke later disouts, having different information relating to the Nazarenes, "But when [Joseph] heard that Archelaus was reigning over Judea in place of his father Herod, he was afraid to go there. Then after being warned by God in a dream, he left for the regions of Galilee, and came and lived in a city called Nazareth. This was to fulfill what was spoken through the prophets, 'He shall be called a Nazarene.'" ~Matthew 2:22-23.

Compare this with Luke's account, "For we have found this man... A ringleader of the sect of the Nazarenes." ~Acts 24:5.

"Many will follow their sensuality, and because of them 'The Way' of the truth will be maligned, 'The Way of the Nazarenes' was 'Persecuted,' 'Spoken against,' and 'Mmaligned.' It was blamed for causing 'No small disturbance.'" ~II Peter 2:2.

'Life of Apollonius of Tyana,' and the Pagans have made counter-charges of plagiarism against the writer of this Gospel. Upon the earlier accounts of Apollonius these charges have been held to be of sufficient importance to meet with efforts of refutation from eminent Christians; even as late as our day, Rev. Albert Réville did not think it beneath his dignity nor his great learning, to attempt in 1866 a refutation of 'This great and monstrous infidel slander.'" ~Tredwell, Sketch of the Life of Apollonius of Tyana.

AD 1856-1939-Sigmund Freud, M.D., LL.D., founder of analytic psychology [psychoanalysis] and freethinker, sees God as an "Illusion" that mature men and women should set aside. The personal God is seen as an infantile yearning for a protective Father-image instilling justice and fairness in one's daily lives [Freud is an addict who also gets a couple of his professors addicted]

The Catholic Church claims to represent the poor, and yet, it wasn't until the 19th century that she began to plead the cause of the slave, "The whole Bible was written by slave owners, and for slave owners. There is no hint of criticism of slavery anywhere in that book. Jesus made no objection to mistreatment of slaves. He indicated that selling of debtors into slavery would be continued his forthcoming Kingdom of Heaven as well as masters having the right to beat their slaves and put them to torture." ~Merrill Holste, Slavery and the Bible, article in the May 1986 issue of American Atheist Magazine.

He has a choice on writing about anger or about sexual problems, he chooses the latter. In his last work, "Der Mann Moses and Die Monotheistische Religion," AD 1939, he shows that, as most folk had understood, he was a thorough freethinker. In his last few years he was an Honorary Associate of the British Rationalist Press Association.

AD 1856-1929-Fermi. Professor Enrico, Italian criminologist and Socialist leader. He taught penal law at seven different universities from 1879 to 1896 and is classed with Lombroso.

He was leader of the Italian Socialists and editor of Avanti. During the latter term he was once asked by the author Joseph McCabe if he would be correct in saying that all Italian Socialists had given up the Catholic faith. "Yes," he replied, warmly "And they reject every religion under the sun."

George Bernard Shaw writes, in the preface to one of his plays: "At present there is not a single credible established religion in the world."

AD 1857-1930-William Howard Taft, 27th President of the United States, 1909-1913, and tenth chief justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, from 1921-1930. Taft was the only person in U.S. history to hold those two offices.

In a letter declining the presidency of Yale University, Taft states, "I do not believe in the Divinity of Christ, and there are many other of the postulates of the orthodox creed to which I cannot subscribe."

The U.S. government retains veto powers as President Taft negotiates the purchase of 410,000 acres of Catholic Church-owned Friar Land, long ago stolen from the indigenous people, although the distribution of this land to its rightful tenants is never fully carried out by the oligarchy of property-classed elitists.

French physician B. A. In 1857, Fountain Pitts, a Tennessee Methodist, gave a sermon in the Capitol. For him, the timing was simple and depended only on that useful measure, the symbolic day, which could be adjusted to make those counted in Revelation fit any theory. Apocalypse - the end of history - had already arrived: "The United States arose at the end Of 1290 symbolic days from the destruction of Jerusalem... This reached from the burning of the Temple on the 189th day of the year 68AD to the 4th July 1776. Making the starting point at the occasion of the daily sacrifice, which happened, according to astronomy, at sunrise, three minutes past five o'clock AM on the day the Temple was burnt, the 1290 days run out at a quarter to three o'clock, Pm, on the 4th day of July 1776; and, from the best sources of information, the Declaration of Independence was proclaimed at that hour on the Glorious Fourth." ~Genesis of Eden, Extract from: Jones, Steve 1996 In the Blood: God, Genes and Destiny, Harper-Collins, London.

With the Declaration of Independence, our fore fathers, denied the authority of the Roman Church, "The Declaration of Independence Was a denial, and the first denial of a nation, of the infamous dogma that

AD 1857- "The Secret Instructions Of The Jesuits," first published in 1857, is reprinted in the book, "Vatican Assassins." Some have argued on their authenticity, the fact remains that the author of "Vatican Assassins," as a scholar and divine, should be sufficient that he would not have given his name and influence to sustain a work of dubious authority, or designed to mislead the public.

A translation was also published in London in 1723, and dedicated to Sir Robert Walpole, who became Lord Orford, and who had the honor of being the Prime Minister of King George I and King George II. "At their first settlement, let our members be cautious of purchasing lands; but if they happen to buy such as are well situated, let this be done in the name of some faithful and trusty friend. And that our poverty may be the more colorable gloss of reality, let the purchases, adjacent to the places wherein our colleges are founded, be assigned by the provincial to colleges at a distance; by which means it will be impossible that princes and magistrates can ever attain to a certain knowledge what the revenues of the Society amount to."

VI. "Let no places be pitched upon by any of our members for founding a college but opulent cities; the end of the Society being the imitation of our blessed Savior, who made his principal residence in the metropolis of Judea, and only transiently visited the less remarkable places."

VII. "Let the greatest sums be always extorted from widows, by frequent remonstrations of our extreme necessities."

CHAPTER II: In what manner the Society must deport, that they may work themselves into, and after that preserve a familiarity with princes, noblemen, and persons of greatest distinction.

I. "Princes, and persons of distinction every where, must by all means be so managed that we may have their ear, and that will easily secure their hearts; by which way of proceeding, all persons will become our creatures, and no one will dare to give the Society the least disquiet or opposition."

II. "That ecclesiastical persons gain a great footing in the favor of princes and noblemen, by winking at their vices, and putting a favorable construction on whatever they do amiss, experience convinces; and this we may observe in their contracting of marriages with their near relations and kindred, or the like. It must be our business to encourage such, whose inclination lies this way, by leading them up in hopes, that through our assistance they may easily obtain a dispensation from the Pope; and no doubt he will readily grant it, if proper reason be urged, paralleled cases produced, and opinions quoted which countenance such actions, when the common good of mankind, and the greater advancement of God's glory, which are the only end and design of the society, are pretended to be the sole motives to them."

V. "Above all, due care must be taken to curry favor with the minions and domestics of princes and noblemen; whom by small presents, and many offices of piety, we may so far byass, (bias) as by means of them to get a faithful intelligence of the bent of their master's humors and inclinations; thus will the Society be better qualified to chime in with their tempers."

VII. "Princesses and ladies of quality are easily to be gained by the influence of the woman of their bed-chamber; for which reason we must by all means pay particular address to these, for thereby there will be no secrets in the family but what we shall have fully disclosed to us."

XV. "Finally, let all with such artfulness gain the ascendant over princes, noblemen, and magistrates of every place, that they may be ready at our beck, even to sacrifice their nearest relations and most intimate friends, when we say it is for our interest and advantage."

CHAPTER III: How the Society must behave themselves towards those who are at the helm of affairs, and others who, although they be not rich, are notwithstanding in a capacity of being otherwise serviceable.

I. "All that has been before mentioned, may, in a great measure, be applied to these; and we must also be industrious to procure their favor against every one that opposes us."

II. "Their authority and wisdom must be courted for obtaining several offices to be discharged by us; we must also make a handle of their advice with respect to the contempt of riches; though at the same time, if their secrecy and faith may be depended on, we may privately make use of their names in amassing temporal goods for the benefit of the Society."

CHAPTER IV: The chief things to be recommended to preachers and confessors of noblemen.

To Pope Pius XII. "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

VI. "Immediately upon the death of any person of post, let them take timely care to get some friend of our Society preferred in his room; but this must be cloaked with such cunning and management as to avoid giving the least suspicion of our intending to usurp the prince's authority; for this reason (as has been already said) we ourselves must not appear in it, but make a handle of the artifice of some faithful friends for effecting our designs, whose power may screen them from the envy which might otherwise fall heavier upon the Society."

CHAPTER VI: Of proper methods for inducing rich widows to be liberal to our Society.

I. "For the managing of this affair, let such members only be chosen as are advanced in age, of a lively complexion and agreeable conversation; let these frequently visit such widows, and the minute they begin to show any affection towards our order, then is the time to lay before them the good works and merits of the society. If they seem kindly to give ear to this, and begin to visit our churches, we must by all means take care to provide them confessors by whom they may be well admonished, especially to a constant perseverance in their state of widowhood, and this, by enumerating and praising the advantages and felicity of a single life: and let them pawn their faiths, and themselves too, as a security that a firm continuance in such a pious resolution will infallibly purchase an eternal merit, and prove a most effectual means of escaping the otherwise certain pains of purgatory."

IV. "Care must be taken to remove such servants particularly as do not keep a good understanding with the Society; but let this be done by little and little; and when we have managed to work them out, let such be recommended as already are, or willingly would become our creatures; thus shall we dive into every secret, and have a finger in every affair transacted in the family."

CHAPTER VII: How such widows are to be secured, and in what manner their effects are to be disposed of.

I. "They are perpetually to be pressed to a perseverance in their devotion and good works, in such manner, that no week pass in which they do not, of their own accord, lay somewhat apart out of their abundance for the honor of Christ, the blessed Virgin, or their patron saint; and let them dispose of it in relief of the poor, or in beautifying of churches, till they are entirely stripped of their superfluous stores and unnecessary riches."

XIII. "Let the confessors take diligent care to prevent such widows as are their penitents, from visiting ecclesiastics of other orders, or entering into familiarity with them, under any pretence whatsoever; for which end, let them, at proper opportunities, cry up the Society as infinitely superior to all other orders; of the greatest service in the church of God, and of greater authority with the Pope, and all princes; and that it is the most perfect in itself, in that it discards all persons offensive or unqualified, from its community, and therefore is purified from that scum and dregs with which these monks are infected, who, generally speaking, are a set of men unlearned, stupid, and slothful, negligent of their duty, and slaves to their bellies.

XIV. "Let the confessors propose to them, and endeavor to persuade them to pay small pensions and contributions towards the yearly support of colleges and professed houses, but especially of the professed house at Rome; not let them forget the ornaments of churches, tapers, wine, and things necessary in the celebration of the sacrifice of mass."

XV. "If any widow does in her life-time make over her whole estate to the Society; whenever opportunity offers, but especially when she is seized with sickness, or in danger of life, let some take care to represent to her the poverty of the greatest number of our colleges, whereof many just erected have hardly as yet any foundation; engage her, by a winning behavior and inducing arguments, to such a liberality as (you must persuade her) will lay a certain foundation for her eternal happiness."

XVI. "The same art must be used with princes and other benefactors; for they must be wrought up to a belief, that these are the only acts which will perpetuate their memories in this world, and secure them eternal glory in the next."

CHAPTER IX: Of increasing the revenues of our Colleges.

XV. "Let the confessors be constant in visiting the sick, but especially such as are thought to be in danger; and that the ecclesiastics and members of other orders may be discarded with a good pretence, let the superiors take care that when the confessor is obliged to withdraw, others may immediately succeed, and keep up the sick person in his good resolutions. At this time it may be advisable to move him by apprehensions of hell, and at least of purgatory; and tell him, that as fire is quenched by water, so sin is extinguished by acts of charity; and that alms can never be better bestowed than for the nourishment and support of such who by their calling profess a desire to promote the salvation of their neighbor.

XVI. Lastly, let the women who complain of the vices of ill-humor of their husbands, be instructed secretly to withdraw a sum of money, that by making an offering thereof to God, they may expiate the crimes of their sinful help-mates, and secure a pardon for them."

Chapter XI. How our members are unanimously to behave towards those who are expelled from the Society.

I. "Since those that are dismissed, do frequently very much prejudice the Society by divulging such secrets as they have been privy to; their attempts must therefore be obviated in the following manner. Let them be prevailed upon, before they are dismissed, to give it under their hands, and swear that they never will, directly or indirectly, either write or speak any thing to the disadvantage of the Order; and let the superiors keep upon record the evil inclinations, failings and vices, which they, according to the custom of the Society, for discharge of their consciences, formerly confessed: this, if ever they give us occasion, may be produced by the Society, to the nobility and prelates, as a very good handle to prevent their promotion.

VIII. Let the misfortunes, and unlucky accidents which happen to them, be immediately published; but with entreaties for the prayers of good Christians, that the world may not think we are hurried away by passion: but, among our members, let these things, by all means, be represented in the blackest colors, that the rest may be the better secured."

CHAPTER XIII. How to pick out young men to be admitted into the Society, and in what manner to retain them.

V. "Let them be allured, by little presents, and indulgence of liberties agreeable to their age; and, above all, let their affections be warmed with spiritual discourses."

VI. "Let it be inculcated, that their being chosen out of such a number, rather than any of their fellow collegiates, is a most pregnant instance of divine appointment.

VII. "On other occasions, but especially in exhortations, let them be terrified with denunciations of eternal punishment, unless they accept of the heavenly invitation."

VIII. "The more earnestly they desire admission into our Society, the longer let the grant of such favor be deferred, provided at the same time they seem steadfast in their resolution; but if their minds appear to be wavering, let all proper methods be used for the immediate firing of them."

CHAPTER XVII. Methods of advancing the Society.

I. "Let our members chiefly endeavor at this, always to act with humanity, even in things of trifling moment; or at least to have the outward appearance of doing so; for by this means, whatever confusions may arise in the world, the Society of necessity will always increase and maintain its ground."

VII. "The favor of the nobility and superior clergy, once got, our next aim must be to draw all cures and canonships into our possession, for the more complete reformation of the clergy, who wheretofore lived under certain regulation of their bishops, and made considerable advances towards perfection. And lastly, let us aspire to abbasies and bishoprics, the obtaining, which when vacancies happen, will very easily be effected, considering the supineness and stupidity of the monks; for it would entirely tend to the benefit of the church, that all bishoprics, and even the Apostolical See, should be hooked into our hands, especially should His Holiness ever become a temporal prince over all. Wherefore, let no methods be untried, with cunning and privacy, by degrees, to increase the worldly interests of the Society, and then, no doubt, a golden age will go hand in hand with a universal and lasting peace, and the divine blessing of consequence attend the Catholic Church."

VIII. "But if our hopes in this should be blasted, and since offences of necessity will come, our political schemes must be cunningly varied, according to the different posture of the times; and princes, our intimates, whom we can influence to follow our councils, must be pushed on to embroil themselves in vigorous wars one with another, to the end, our Society (as promoters of the universal good of the world,) may on all hands be solicited to contribute its assistance, and always employed in being mediators of public dissensions; by this means the chief benefices and preferments in the church will, of course be given to us by way of compensation for our services."

IX. "Finally, the Society must endeavor to effect this at least, that having got the favor and authority of princes, those who do not love them at least fear them."

AD 1857-1879-S. P. Tregelles, a British scholar affiliated with the Plymouth Brethren and later with the Baptists, writes a now famous commentary defending the Book of Daniel. Tregelles' text is the result of decades of laborious and exacting distinguished examination of Biblical manuscripts.

AD 1857-1942-Arthur Edward Waite, occult historian, mystic, author, born in Brooklyn, New York, spent most of his life in England. Raised a Roman Catholic, Waite believed that his religion offered an esoteric mystery that is lacking or forgotten in the Orthodox Church. Waite is creator of the Rider Pack, Tarot Cards and author of several books: "Brotherhood of the Rosy Cross" "Devil Worship in France" "Book of Ceremonial Magic" "Secret Tradition in Freemasonry" and "The Holy Grail"

Birth of Henry Scott Tuke, a British painter and grand master of idealistic boy painting. An athlete who took great pride in his splendid body and was obsessed with painting nude boys and experimented, and succeeded, in developing a special technique for capturing on canvas the effect of sunlight on naked bodies.

AD 1858-Maurice Joly, an anti-Semitic French attorney, publishes his work entitled, "Dialogues in Hell Between Machiavelli and Montesquieu," also known as "Policy of Machiavelli in the 19th Century."

Joly; because of printed accusations against Napoleon III, of France, is imprisoned for 15 months. "The Protocols" appears to be a plagiarized version of "The Dialogues," anti-Semitic and anti-Masonic. Protocol No. 15 speaks of having all the police agencies of the world under the auspices of a one World Masonic Lodge.

London: A conference is appointed between the two houses, and ultimately a compromise is reached by which either house might admit Jews by resolution, allowing them to omit the words "On the true faith of a Christian," in the Oath Bill. As a consequence, on Monday, July 26, 1858, Baron Lionel de Rothschild, a Jew, takes the oath with covered head, substituting "So help me, Jehovah" for the ordinary form of oath, thereupon taking his seat as the first Jewish member of British Parliament.

AD 1859-1909-Ferrer Y Guardia, Francisco, Spanish educationalist [self educated], son of a poor man who devoted himself to the reform of education, chiefly by ridding it of superstition, founded 50 Modern Schools in Spain, and incurred the mortal hatred of the Catholic Church's clergy.

As he was a philosophic Anarchist of the Tolstoi school, the government willingly obliged the Bishop's complaints and, after a gross travesty of a trial, had him shot, although he was a man of high character and ideals. ~See Martyrdom of Ferrer, J. McCabe, 1909.

AD 1859-1939-Ellis [Henry], Havelock, British psychologist, psychologist, freethinker and author, who was an early supporter of birth control and a pioneer researcher into the psychology and sociology of sex. Author of a seven-volume, "Studies in the Psychology of Sex," 1897-1928, which influenced all writing on the subject of sex thereafter.

His first volume, "Sexual Inversion," was published in London in 1897 and caused an uproar that resulted in a lawsuit that declared his work as banned and a "Wicked, bawdy, scandalous, and obscene book."

The clergy loathed him and made numerous attempts to trap and prosecute him. His agnostic views are explained in his "Affirmations," 1897, and "My Life," written in 1940.

AD 1859-Adrien Adolphe Desbarrolles publishes "Les Mysteres de la Main," "Journal de Chiromancie," "Revelations Completes," and "Les Mysteres de L'Ecriture" dealing with palmistry.

AD 1860-Pope Pius IX re-initiates the Church Tax worldwide called "Peter's Pence" [Strictly on a voluntary basis, but what good Catholic can deny the Pope's request?] It is the refusal to pay this tax, which causes the segregation of the new religious factions during the Enlightenment.

"Perhaps there was an organization in Phineas' day known as the N.A.A.C.P. [National Association for the Advancement of Canaanite People] who took exception with this teaching of segregation. Perhaps there were pulpits proclaiming a more tolerant and socially accepted view and government agency crusading for 'Affirmative Action.' We really do not know, but we do know from the Bible story in Numbers chapter 25 that the Israel people began to disobey God's Law, accept integration, cultural exchange and a type of interracial marriage, and thus were struck collectively by a plague. Phineas was the man who courageously fought against the racial treason even to the point of bloodshed, and he too was honored by God." ~Pastor Pete Peters, The Bible: Handbook For Survivalists, Racists, Tax Protestors, Militants And Right-Wing Extremists, ND, Scriptures For America, La Porte, Colorado, pp. 4-5.

AD 1860-1940-Bishop Gregorio Aglipay, Filipino, jailed as a child for failure to produce the requisite amount of tobacco for the government. Enters the seminary in Vigan and in 1890, is ordained a Catholic priest. Protests against colonial tyranny [Church and State] and joins Gen. Emilio Aguinaldo's movement for freedom from oppression. Archbishop Nozaleda on May 4th 1898 excommunicates him. This is the same Archbishop who denounced the right of religious freedom in the Philippines. After the Filipino-American War Aglipay becomes the Obispo Maximo of the Philippine Independent Church. Under the 'Patronato Real' system most of the religious and lucrative government appointments came by way of political influence and bribes, a system that has not changed in almost 500 years. "Few of them are distinguished for their piety or learning; some leave much to be desired and even are a source of scandal by their way of life."

A Protestant Englishman stated, "The majority of them are ignorant, to the last degree, proud, debauched, indolent: in a word, they unite the vices of the priesthood..."

Mabini declares, "The interest of the Catholic religion requires a radical change in conduct on the part of those who are to administer the parishes in the Philippines, whether they be friars or Filipino secular priests or Americans... The friar parishes and the Filipino secular clergy as a general rule only remember their parishioners when it is a question of collecting parish fees."

The Filipino politicians will carry on this tradition into the 21st century, remembering their constituents only during elections. ~The Filipino clergy: Yesterday and Tomorrow, by Costa and Schumacher.

Fortunately, our forefathers took a more rational look at religion, "It is, however, not difficult to account for the credit that was given to the story of Jesus Christ being the Son of God. He was born when the heathen mythology had still some fashion and repute in the world, and that mythology had prepared the people for the belief of such a story. Almost all the extraordinary men that lived under the heathen mythology were reputed to be the Sons of some of their Gods. It was not a new thing, at that time, to believe a man to have been celestially begotten; the intercourse of Gods with women was then a matter of familiar opinion. Their Jupiter, according to their accounts, had cohabited with hundreds: the story, therefore, had nothing in it either new, wonderful, or obscene; it was conformable to the opinions that then prevailed among the people called Gentiles, or Mythologists, and it was those people only that believed it." ~Thomas Paine, American free thinker, The Age of Reason.

Mythology is, "A body of material contained in tales about Gods and God-like beings, heroic battles and journeys to the Underworld, mythologem is the best Greek word for them, tales already well-known but not amenable to further re-shaping." ~Karl Kerényi.

AD 1861-1930-Nansen, Professor Fridtjof, D. Sc., G.C.V.O., D.C.L., Ph.G., F.R.G.S., famous Norwegian explorer and humanitarian.

Apart from his Arctic explorations he was professor of zoology and later of oceanography, at Christiania University. He was distinguished also for humanitarian work in Europe. An agnostic who proclaimed, "The religion of one age," he says, "Is the literary entertainment of the next." ~See Science and the Purpose of Life, p. 3.

AD 1861-1896-Jose Rizal, Jose Protasio Mercado, Filipino Patriot, physician, author, and poet, killed by the religious leaders of his time for wanting to be treated equal.

Constantly embarrassing the Dominican and Augustinian Friars for their loathsome and immoral acts, prevarications, deceitfulness, stealing of the lands of the poor, and forgery.

The friars were well known for their ability to make available documents fabricated and documented almost instantaneously. The most famous is the document claiming to be the last will and testament of Jose Rizal in which he condemns the Masonic Brotherhood.

The Church still refuses to make their alleged copy of the document available to public scrutiny. During his imprisonment, Archbishop Nozaleda even enlists the assistance of the Jesuits, the only order that Rizal respected, to induce him to issue a disclaimer regarding his retraction of Masonry.

Rizal was not married in a church and this was also used to persuade him [his wife being Catholic] A Friar, Balaguer, concocts a story of retraction by Rizal prior to his appointment with the firing squad so ridiculous and so unbelievable that he goes to great lengths to have it published in a Barcelona magazine "La Juventud."

Friar Balaguer never spoke with Rizal in his cell and was not privy to what happened prior to Rizal's execution. Rizal knowing the trickery of the Friars, and how they are known to mysteriously find letters from Masonic brothers after their death denouncing Masonry, hid a message in his shoes.

The Church, not knowing of this, printed articles that Rizal embraced God and the Church and denounced Masonry prior to his death. After his execution, Rizal's wife, after undergoing many difficulties with church authorities, finally claims the remains of her husband and discovers the notes. To this date the Church still has not obliged in requests to provide the documentation it claims regarding Rizal's re-conversion to Christianity. Even in his death Rizal embarrasses the Church, which preaches forgiveness, yet practices vengeance. It is now a known documented fact that:

- † Rizal was not allowed a Christian burial by Catholic Authorities.
- † Rizal was not allowed a coffin [only a mat covered his body]
- † Rizal was not allowed to be interred in a Christian cemetery
- † Rizal was not allowed to have any ceremony or prayers spoken over his body
- † Rizal was not allowed any masses performed on his behalf.
- † Rizal was not allowed any of the amenities allowed the followers of the faith [Catholicism].
- † Rizal was a God fearing man [not a church fearing man] although the alleged Christian followers had tarnished the teachings of Christ of whom they professed to follow, Rizal never lost faith in God.

The Church authorities, on the other hand, had obviously forgotten the words of their leader Jesus in speaking of forgiveness... by condemning to death one of God's children, in the name of God.

England eliminates the death penalty for male homosexual acts, but offenders are now subject to imprisonment for ten years to life.

Philippines: Rascism; The sycophantic Filipino government decrees that all parishes in the archdiocese of Manila be given to the Catholic friars, displacing numerous pious Filipino clerics, and the struggle over religious appointments intensifies, adding to Filipino resentment of the [European/White] friars, who occupy 817 out of 967 parishes by 1898.

AD1862-Sergei Alexandrovich, Greek Orthodox Monk, publishes his work, "The Protocols of the Wise Men of Zion" also known as "The Protocols of the Elders of Zion" or "The Protocols."

In 1905 it reappears again in a small town known as Tsarkoe Selo, a Russian summer resort. This work deals with a purported plan to control all mass media and eventually the world via an alleged Jewish conspiracy. It was intended to undermine and discredit the influence of Count Witte, minister to the Czar, and whose wife was Jewish.

U. S. Grant, an American general, and politician, while in command of the 13th Army Corps, headquartered at Oxford, Mississippi, becomes so exasperated of the Jewish camp-followers attempting to penetrate the conquered territories that he finally attempts to eject the Jews, "I have long since believed that in spite of all the vigilance that can be infused into post commanders, the special regulations of the Treasury Department have been violated, and that mostly by Jews and other unprincipled traders. So well satisfied have I been of this that I instructed the commanding officers at Columbus to refuse all permits to Jews to come South, and I have frequently had them expelled from the department, but they come in with their carpet-sacks in spite of all that can be done to prevent it. The Jews seem to be a privileged class that can travel anywhere. They will land at any wood yard on the river and make their way through the country. If not permitted to buy cotton themselves, they will act as agents for someone else, who will be at military post with a Treasury permit to receive cotton and pay for it in Treasury notes, which the Jew will buy up at an agreed rate, paying gold." ~U.S. Grant, in Letter to C.P. Wolcott, assistant secretary of war, Washington, December 17, 1862.

The historians at a congress [1862, in Duisberg] precluded political advantage as the sole motive for forgery simply because there were too many forgeries that had no political content whatsoever. An 11th century reformer, for example, complaining about the quasi-Pagan habit of sprinkling the already baptized with baptismal water promptly produced a letter of Pope Clement I, in the 1st century, to buttress his argument. ~Forgery, False Attribution, and Fiction: Early Modern German History and Literature by Frank L. Borchardt.

AD1863- The 'End to School Discrimination' in the Philippines is finally declared by Pope Pius IX, after 352 years of ruthless Spanish domination, the theft of indigenous native lands, and perpetual ignorance of the masses who seek to climb up out of poverty, as the sacrosanct [discriminatory] Catholic schools are finally declared open to the indigenous native clientele in the Philippines, a claim, which does not take into account the Church's historical assertion that the opening of colleges began for the benefit of their 'Little brown brothers.'

The first college founded is San Ignacio, which is later elevated to University status in 1621 by Pope Gregory XV. Our Lady of the Rosary [1611] is open for 242 years before the malevolent 'Holy Mother the Church' ever allows Filipinos to matriculate in its hallowed halls. Some of the religious institutions had already proceeded to admit the native Filipino, but the majority of the schools allow the students to harass their fair darker skinned classmates as being lesser intellectually and racially.

Many Filipinos are proud of their Christian Educational heritage from the Spaniards, but are naïve to the fact that the institutions were not founded for them, but for their Spanish conquerors, a fact suppressed by the religious institutions of Catholicism who thought of them as a lesser people. Even Rizal writes of the discrimination he was subjected to when attending their schools.

The Papacy claims that only the Universal Church can grant Eternal Salvation, "Also well known is the Catholic teaching that no one can be saved outside the Catholic Church. Eternal Salvation cannot be obtained by those who oppose the authority and statements of the same Church and are stubbornly separated from the unity of the Church and also from the successor of Peter, the Roman Pontiff, to whom, 'The custody of the vineyard has been committed by the Savior.'" ~Quanto Conficiamur Moerore, On Promotion of False Doctrines, Encyclical of Pope Pius IX, August 10, 1863.

AD1864-Pope Pius IX issues "Quanta Cura," on 8 December, condemning "Current errors," including the attack on Scientific Theory can explain all phenomena [naturalism]. The encyclical calls the liberty of conscience and worship the "Liberty of perdition" [utter destruction], attacking communism and socialism and not mentioning Freemasonry, directly.

All religions must continually transform themselves if they wish to survive; so what is the Church's present stance on the Scientific Theory? "Why is every utterance of the Pope considered to be worthy of worldwide attention and respect? It's like the fawning reverence that was accorded every banal platitude ever uttered by the late Mother Teresa. But the Pope is not exactly on the cutting edge of world events, or anything else, for that matter. It was only a little over a year ago, in October 1996, that Pope John Paul II announced that the Scientific Theory of Evolution could be said to be valid. That message was received with enthusiastic approval in many circles throughout the world. Warm congratulations were offered to John Paul, just as they had been in 1979. In that year he declared that the Roman Catholic Church had been mistaken when it sentenced a 70 year-old Galileo to house arrest (with threats of the tortures of The Inquisition) for insisting that the Earth orbits the Sun, not vice versa. Mistaken? No, not mistaken. A mistake is when you slip the wrong key into your front door. The Church's treatment of Galileo, one of the world's few geniuses, was viciously cruel and betrays the unenlightened, progress-impeding attitude that has dominated the Church since its inception. And they were as wrong as it is possible to be." ~Judith Hayes, The Papacy Comes of Age! The Happy Heretic, February 1998.

"It can therefore be said that, from the viewpoint of the Doctrine of the Faith; there are no difficulties in explaining the origin of man, in regard to the body, by means of the Theory of Evolution." ~Pope John Paul II, April 16, 1986.

Mestizo cleric José Burgos releases a manifesto calling for ethnic equality in the priesthood after the Pope's call for End to Discrimination in the racist Catholic Church of the Philippines.

No other religion, no other Church, can grant Eternal Salvation, "I alone [Pope Pius IX], despite my unworthiness, am the Successor of the Apostles, the Vicar of Jesus Christ: I alone have the mission to guide and direct the bark of Peter. I am the Way, the Truth, and the Life; they who are with me are with the Church: they who are not with me are out of the Church; they are out of the Way, the Truth, and the Life. Let men well understand this, that they be not deceived, or led astray by so distant Catholics, who desire and teach something quite different from what the head of the Church teaches." ~The Guardian, London, April 11, 1866.

AD1865-Pope Pius IX, issues "Multiplikes Inter," on 25 September, condemning Freemasonry and other secret groups. Masonic organizations are accused of conspiring against the Catholic Church, God and civil authorities, and blames revolutions and uprisings to Masonic activities.

Cross Dressing: Death of James Miranda Barry, 1795-1865, a Major General and Surgeon in the British Army with a highly distinguished career with a reputation as a rake who was known to flirt openly with the best looking women in the room. When a charwoman was preparing the body for burial it was discovered that the Major General was a female.

AD 1865-Albert Pike, who has been accused of many things during his lifetime is accused of founding one of the most racist organizations ever. Perhaps it is due to his Masonic relationship and the oath of secrecy. The Ku Klux Klan [KKK] membership is open to native-born, white, Protestant males, ages 16 years or older.

With secret rituals similar to other clandestine organizations, blacks, Roman Catholics, and Jews are excluded from the KKK and are made targets of defamation and persecution by this organization.

The Roman Catholic Church is believed to be a threat to the traditional American ways and values, and all non-Protestants, aliens, liberals, and striking workers are denounced as subversives to their cause.

AD 1865-1916-Gerard Encausse, Papus, Spanish physician, resided in Paris, member of the Order of the Rose-Cross, summoned in 1905 to perform before Czar Alexander III of Russia.

Writings are "The Tarot of the Bohemians" Traite Methodique de Science Occulte " La Kabbale" and "La Magi Et L'hypnose."

AD 1865-Was there a Jesuit Conspiracy to assassinate President Lincoln?

"I feel safe in stating that nowhere else can be found in one book the connected presentation of the story leading up to the death of Abraham Lincoln, which was instigated by the "Black Pope," the General of the Jesuit Order, camouflaged by the "White Pope," Pope Pius IX, aided, abetted and financed by other "Divine Righters" of Europe, and finally consummated by the Roman Hierarchy and their paid agents in this country and French Canada on "Good Friday" night, April 14, 1865, at Ford's Theatre, Washington, D.C." ~See The Suppressed Truth About the Assassination of Abraham Lincoln, by Burke McCarty.

Abraham Lincoln never joined a church, but once wrote a skeptical treatise, which friends burned in a stove, to save him from damaging his political career. America is seen as a country of militant Protestants proclaiming individual rights over the institutional authority of the Church. "The Bible is not my Book and Christianity is not my religion. I could never give assent to the long complicated statements of Christian dogma." ~Abraham Lincoln, 16th President of the United States.

President Abraham Lincoln regarding religious tolerance wrote: "The Protestants of both the North and South would surely unite to exterminate the priests and the Jesuits, if they could learn how the priests, the nuns, and the monks, which daily land on our shores, under the pretext of preaching their religion...are nothing else but the emissaries of the Pope, of Napoleon III, and the other despots of Europe, to undermine our institutions, alienate the hearts of our people from our Constitution, and our laws, destroy our schools, and prepare a reign of anarchy here as they have done in Ireland, in Mexico, in Spain, and wherever there are any people who want to be free." ~From Fifty Years In The Church Of Rome, by Charles Chiniquy, 1968, reprinted from the 1886 edition.

Abraham Lincoln says, "The Jesuits never forget nor forsake." Very few people are aware of Pope Pius IX and his involvement in the American Civil War. The following is a letter from the Pope Pius IX to Jefferson Davis in support of his policy regarding slavery. ~See Leviticus, Chapter 25, verses 44 to 46 for the basis of the Church beliefs and Timothy, Chapter 6, verse 1.

Pope Pius IX supports the Confederacy of America, which supports slavery against then 16th President of the United States, Abraham Lincoln. The Catholic Church claims it has always been against slavery, yet the Church neglects to articulate that it held slaves, supported slavery worldwide, and the poor Filipino is also treated as a slave [property], unable to leave the land, and receiving poor minimal wages, if any at all.

Again, the Papacy will reassert its power, and its authority over the world, "Therefore, relying on the clear testimonies of Sacred Scripture, and adhering to the eloquent and manifest decisions not only of Our predecessors, the Roman Pontiffs, but also of the general Councils, We renew the definition of the Ecumenical Council of Florence, by which all of the faithful of Christ must believe, That the Apostolic See and the Roman Pontiff hold primacy over the whole world, and that the Pontiff of Rome himself is the successor of the blessed Peter, the chief of the Apostles, and is the true Vicar of Christ and head of the whole Church and faith, and teacher of all Christians; and that to him was handed down in blessed Peter, by our Lord Jesus Christ, full power to feed, rule, and guide the universal Church, just as is also contained in the records of the ecumenical Councils and in the sacred canons." ~Pope Pius IX, 1826.

"I am for liberty of conscience in its noblest, broadest, and highest sense. But I cannot give liberty of conscience to the Pope and his followers, the Papists [Catholics], so long as they tell me, through all their councils, theologians, and Canon Laws that their conscience orders them to burn my wife, strangle my children, and cut my throat when they find their opportunity." ~Abraham Lincoln.

ILLUSTRIOUS AND HONORABLE PRESIDENT [Davis is not the President of the United States but of the newly formed Confederacy]

Salutations:

"We have just received with all suitable welcome the persons sent by you to place in our hands your letter, dated the 23rd of September last. Not slight was the pleasure we experienced when we learned, from those persons and the letter, with what feelings of joy and gratitude, you were animated, illustrious and honorable President, as soon as you were informed of our letters to our venerable brother, John, Archbishop of New York, and John, Archbishop of New Orleans, dated the 18th of October of last year, and in which we have with all our strength exerted and exhorted those venerable brothers that in their Episcopal piety and solicitude, they should endeavor, with the most ardent zeal, and in our name to bring about the end of that fatal civil war, which has broken out in those countries in order that the American people may obtain peace and concord and dwell charitably together. It is particularly agreeable to us that you illustrious and honorable President, and your people, were animated with the same desires of peace and tranquillity which we have in our letters inculcated upon our venerable brothers. May it please God at the same time to make the other peoples of America and their rulers, reflecting seriously how terrible is civil war, and what calamities it engenders, listen to inspirations of a calmer spirit and adopt resolutely the part of peace. As for us, we shall not cease."

Signed by: Pope Pius IX ~From the book, A Memoir of Jefferson Davis, by Varina Davis.

"I see a very dark cloud on America's horizon, and that cloud is coming from Rome." ~Abraham Lincoln.

After bewailing the state of the Church in Europe, Pope Pius wrote, "Nor are things any better or circumstances calmer in America, where some regions are so hostile to Catholics that their governments seem to deny by their actions the Catholic faith they claim to profess."

President Lincoln called the United States "The last best hope of earth." "This conflict will settle the question, at least for centuries to come, whether man is capable of governing himself, and consequently is of greater importance to the free than to the enslaved."

Southerners held an tenacious and resolute belief in their way of life, a widespread expectation of victory, and a strong popular will which sustained them to the bitter end; their Christian faith and the knowledge that even the Catholic Pope was on their side, favoring slavery.

One of the major Catholic losses is what is sometimes referred to as The Protestant Republic of the United States, whereby the Pope recognizes the Confederate States of America and not the United States of America [which does not mention Jesus Christ in its constitution].

When the Confederate states drew up their constitution, they added something the early colonial founders had voted to leave out, specifically, an invocation of the Deity. The South's unsympathetic new constitution began: "We, the people... Invoking the favor and guidance of Almighty God..."

The Southern clergymen and politicians even argued that the South was more "Christian" than the North, and believed themselves to be the new "Redeemer Nation."

The Vatican is so corrupt that the Papal treasuries are, at numerous times, all but depleted due to nepotism.

President Abraham Lincoln proposed that $400 be paid for slaves, including men, women and children. This was a large price in his days, and yet he showed how much cheaper it was to purchase than to carry on the war. Hope for the Confederate States lay in the military intervention of foreign countries and this letter gave "de facto" recognition to the Revolutionists. President Lincoln upon reading it exclaimed, "This letter of the Pope has entirely changed the nature and ground of the war." But the mentality of slaveholders was based on their 'Christian Values,' "So far from being a moral evil, slavery is a merciful visitation... It is the Lord's doing and it is marvelous in our eyes... It is by Divine Appointment." ~ Rev. J. C. Postell.

In the words of a Black slave, "We have men sold to build churches, women sold to support the Gospel, and babes sold to purchase Bibles for the poor heathen, all for the glory of God and the good of souls. The slave auctioneer's bell and the church-going bell chime in with each other, and the bitter cries of the heart-broken slave are drowned in the religious shouts of his pious master. Revivals of religion and revivals of the slave trade go hand in hand... Were I to be again reduced to the chains of slavery, next to the enslavement, I should regard being the slave of a religious master the greatest calamity that could befall me. For of all slaveholders with whom I have ever met, religious slaveholders are the worst. I have ever found them the meanest and basest, the most cruel and cowardly, of all others." ~ Frederick Douglass, Narrative of the Life of Frederick Douglass: An American Slave.

"I prayed for freedom twenty years, but received no answer until I prayed with my legs." ~ Frederick Douglass, former slave.

"It will not do to investigate the subject of religion too closely, as it is apt to lead to infidelity." ~ Abraham Lincoln, What Great Men Think Of Religion by Ira Cardiff.

"There was no place in the land where the seeker could not find some small budding sign of pity for the slave. No place in all the land but one, the pulpit. It yielded last; it always does. It fought a strong and stubborn fight, and then did what it always does, joined the procession, at the tail end. Slavery fell. The slavery texts [in the Bible] remained; the practice changed; that was all." ~ Mark Twain and the Three R's, Maxwell Geismar, p.109.

After the letter was published, President Lincoln was visited by his close friend, Charles Chiniquy who said, "My dear President, I answered, it is just that letter, which brought me to your presence again. That letter is a poisoned arrow thrown by the Pope at you personally; it is your death warrant."

"The hands that help are better far than the lips that pray." ~ Col. Robert G. Ingersoll, 19th century Free Thinker.

Catholics perceived their Church as against the 'Free Republic,' which ignored the powers of God, even in its Constitution. To isolate the Catholic men from the rank and file of the Northern armies, and coerce them into helping the cause of the rebellion, became the main object of the Jesuits. Secret letters were addressed from Rome to the Bishops in the States ordering them to weaken the armies of the United States.

The Bishops refuse; for they would be exposing themselves as traitors and be subject to being shot. The Pope is requested to acknowledge, at once, the legitimacy of the Southern Republic [Confederate States], and to take Jefferson Davis under his most excellent protection.

"My husband is not a Christian but is a religious man, I think." ~ Lincoln's wife, Mary Todd Lincoln, Toward The Mystery.

Chiniquy further states, "...That letter tells every Roman Catholic that you are a bloodthirsty tyrant fighting against a government which the infallible and Holy Pope of Rome recognizes as legitimate. The Pope, by this letter, tells his blind slaves that you are outraging the God of heaven and earth, by continuing such a bloody... And my dear President, this is not a fancy imagination on my part, it is the unanimous explanation given me by a great number of the priests of Rome, with whom I have had occasion to speak on that subject. In the name of God, and in the name of our dear country, which is in so much need of your services, I plead that you pay more attention to protect your precious life, and not continue to expose it as you have done till now."

President Lincoln spoke to Chiniquy regarding the Jesuit Order, "So many plots have already been made against my life, that it is a real miracle that they have all failed... But can we expect that God will make a perpetual miracle to save my life? I believe not. The Jesuits are so expert in those deeds of blood that Henry IV [king of France who was assassinated by the Jesuit Revuillac for giving liberty to his people], said that it was impossible to escape them, and he became their victim, thought he did all he could to protect himself. My escape from their hands, since the letter of the Pope to Jefferson Davis has sharpened a million of daggers to pierce my breast, would be more than a miracle... I know that Jesuits never forget nor forsake [never give up]. Man must not care how and where he dies, provided he dies at the post of honor and duty."

"Can aliens make treaties easier than friends can make laws? Can treaties be more faithfully enforced between aliens than laws among friends?" ~ Abraham Lincoln.

Given the opportunity to support equality and fight against slavery, the Roman Church took to supporting the Confederacy's cause, "O Lord our God, help us tear their soldiers to bloody shreds with our shells; help us to cover their smiling fields with the pale forms of their patriot dead; help us to drown the thunder of the guns with the shrieks of their wounded, writhing in pain; help us to lay waste their humble homes with a hurricane of fire; help us to wring the hearts of their un-offending widows with unavailing grief; help us to turn them out roofless with their little children to wander un-friended the wastes of their desolated land in rags and hunger and thirst, sports of the sun flames of summer and the icy winds of winter, broken in spirit, worn with travail, imploring Thee for the refuge of the grave and denied it... ~Mark Twain, The War Prayer.

"I am loath to close. We are not enemies, but friends. We must not be enemies. Though passion may have strained, it must not break, our bonds of affection. The mystic chords of memory stretching from every battlefield and patriotic grave to every loving heart and hearthstone all over this broad land, will swell the chorus of the Union when again touched, as surely they will be, by the better angels of our nature." ~President Lincoln's inaugural address.

Abraham Lincoln, upon the death of his son, Willie, states to Judge J. S. Wakefield, "My earlier views of the unsoundness of the Christian scheme of salvation and the human origin of the scriptures have become clearer and stronger with advancing years and I see no reason for thinking I shall ever change them." ~Abraham Lincoln, 16th President of the United States.

Abraham Lincoln was not a Freemason, although he applied for membership at Tyrian Lodge, Springfield, Illinois. After his nomination for the presidency in 1860 he withdrew his application because he felt that his applying for membership at that time might be construed as a political ploy to obtain votes.

He advised the lodge that he would resubmit his application again when he returned from the presidency. Lincoln never returned. The one fact that may be of most significance is one that many historians appear to have ignored completely, regarding the assassination, which is that April 14, 1865 was not merely any Friday, but Good Friday, the very day that Jesus was crucified.

On the death of the President, Tyrian Lodge adopted, on April 17, 1865, a resolution to stating, "...That the decision of President Lincoln to postpone his application for the honors of Freemasonry, lest his motives be misconstrued, is the highest degree honorable to his memory."

Americans lost a great leader in the death of Abraham Lincoln, "After twenty years of constant and most difficult research, I come fearlessly today before the American people, to say and prove that the president, Abraham Lincoln, was assassinated by the priests and the Jesuits of Rome." ~ Charles Chiniquy, French Canadian, ex-priest, in Fifty Years in the Church of Rome. In his book, he claims he was physically assaulted numerous times, even being stoned on occasion, by Papist mobs for speaking out. He ultimately became an independent Catholic Bishop and a revered founder of the Community Church movement.

John Wilkes Booth and the other conspirators, Chiniquy claimed, were devout Roman Catholics, and priests frequented Mrs. Surratt's boardinghouse, which served as the plotters' rendezvous hideout, with several priests actually still living there at the time of the assassination.

Mrs. Surratt's son, John Surrat, escaped the noose, unlike his devout mother, by fleeing to Canada where Catholic priests harbored him, but he he was finally discovered and returned for trial in 1867. John, believe it or not, is documented [pictures] as being retained in the Pope's Zouave guard at the Vatican.

Chiniquy claimed that the Roman Church, and its autocratic principles, favored the South, and wanted civil war to weaken America and its support of liberty and individual rights in general. The false claims that Lincoln had been born Catholic, Chiniquy states, were spread by the Jesuits to make it appear that Lincoln was an apostate and renegade, and thus deserving of the ultimate fate the Church saved for heretics, which was death.

It is interesting to note that: Guiseppe Garibaldi, the great Italian patriot and freedom fighter, defiant of Pope Pius IX and his despotic rule, was once considered for the top post in the Union Army by President Lincoln at the start of the Civil War.

Chiniquy claimed that the South would never have dared attack the North without assurances of covert assistance from the Holy Mother, the Church, however he did make such extreme claims, as that of Beauregard being chosen to fire the opening shot at Fort Sumter because he was Catholic, or that the Bishop of New York was responsible for the anti-draft riots and the failure of Meade, a Catholic, to pursue Lee after Gettysburg was due to the direct intercession of a Jesuit priest.

Even more intriguing is the fact, attested by sworn affidavits, that priests at the monastery near the town of St. Joseph in Minnesota, far beyond the reach of train and telegraph, were talking about the killings of both Lincoln and Seward some four hours before the attacks occurred, Chiniquy claiming that the clergy in Minnesota were "Intimate friends" with those dwelling at Mrs. Surratt's boarding house. ~See A History of the Great Conspiracy by General T. M. Harris, Patriot Pub. Co., Boston, 1890, a member of the military tribunal that tried the assassins.

The papacy had been humiliated, if not humbled, by the French General Napoleon, and the immoral excesses which caused the French Revolution. Pope Pius, having ascended to the throne as a liberal, became a bitter reactionary, and more than once, the French army had to save him from the Italians masses.

Chiniquy maintains that Jefferson Davis had offered $1,000,000.⁰⁰ if someone would "Kill the author of the bloodshed," referring to the Civil War, and further asserts that the money could be offered, but that, "...The Jesuits alone could select the assassins, train them, and show them a crown of Glory in Heaven..." Booth, he says was the tool of the Jesuits, being corrupted and directed by the Vatican, and in 1906 Chiniquy says that "The President, Abraham Lincoln, was assassinated by the priests and the Jesuits of Rome." ~From the works of Roger Norton on the Internet.

President Lincoln was a man who respected the poor, the impoverished, with total disregard to race, color, or creed. "In all the bloody history of the Papacy, perhaps in no one man, as in Abraham Lincoln, was there concentrated such a multitude of reasons for his annihilation by that system." ~Burke McCarty The Suppressed Truth About the Assassination of Abraham Lincoln, 1924.

The totalitarian Papacy considered Abraham Lincoln a major enemy, and that the Church for centuries had, "Been involved in numerous instances of the forcible removal of heads of state whom it condemned." ~An Inquiry into the Assassination of Abraham Lincoln by Emmett McLoughlin, published in 1963.

The Catholic Church claims to have promptly condemned racial slavery as soon as it began. In 1435, Pope Eugene IV condemns the enslavement of the black natives of the Canary Islands and orders their European masters to manumit the enslaved within 15 days, under pain of excommunication.

In 1537, Pope Paul III condemns the enslavement of West Indian and South American natives, and explicitly attributed that evil, "Unheard of before now," to "The enemy of the human race," Satan.

Papal condemnations of slavery are repeated by: Popes Gregory XIV in 1591, Pope Urban VIII in 1639, Innocent XI in 1686, Benedict XIV in 1741, and Pope Pius VII in 1815.

In 1839, Pope Gregory XVI says, "We, by apostolic authority, warn and strongly exhort... That no one in the future dare to bother unjustly, despoil of their possessions, or reduce to slavery Indians, Blacks or other such peoples." Pope Leo XIII in 1890, allegedly condemns slavery, and so states the Second Vatican Council in 1965. ~From the works of by Lane Core, Jr.

In actuality, no Pope, no Father of the Church, nobody of Catholic persuasion ever condemned slavery to the point of taking action against it until the 18th Century. Saint Augustine, the dominant visionary of western and Roman Christendom, expressly defended it as of "Divine Appointment," Read, "City of God, Book XIX, eh. XV," and Saint Thomas Aquinas and the numerous other scholastics followed Augustine. These pronouncements by the Popes are eloquent and only self serving as history will show that the Church through its friars and priests will be the one's to violate the acts repeatedly, using incarceration, forced labor, falsified documents to steal lands, and beating the indigenous peoples wherever they went.

The facts are that the Church abused the local masses wherever they went. Their dastardly acts have been well documented in Central America, South American, and the Philippines. During the Presidency of Abraham Lincoln, Pope Pius IX, in his letter of support of Jefferson Davis and his slavery position, makes it quite clear where the Catholic Church stood.

The Church still attempts to change historical facts to suit its fancy and to further its cause. The Vatican and Jesuit writers still boast of the model colonies they created in Paraguay and South America in the 17th century, but historians and sociologists agree that the main purpose was to exploit the natives, though the harsh discipline imposed on them was alleviated intermittently with festivals, they were in fact slaves, a fact that the Church still denies today. The first Spaniards who settled in South America admittedly sought only wealth, imposing their religion upon the indigenous people with much cruelty and a complete ignorance of economic law.

When the Jesuits arrived in Paraguay, in 1586, eager to swell the lists of converted natives which they flourished in Europe, they found the Indians regarded Christianity with abhorrence, and they got royal permission to organize agricultural colonies of their own, none of the inmates of which could be taken to work for laymen. Later they secured a permit to organize them in military service and exempt them from general taxation.

By the middle of the 17th century they had 300,000 Indian slaves creating wealth for them. They got exemption from civic inspections and refused to teach the natives Spanish, although the Church claims it built great schools. In reply to the criticisms that now multiplied they assured the authorities that the natives were happy, prosperous, and virtuous, and to the charge in Europe that they exploited the labor of the Indians, they replied that they "Did not wish to give ideas of cupidity [greed] to Christians."

The charges against the Jesuits were not simply the cries of other jealous traders, for the Bishop of Paraguay very severely denounced them, and in a most thorough and impartial recent study of the documents, "Der Jesuitenstaat in Paraguay, 1926, pg. 160, Dr. Maria Fussbinder finds their system "A mockery of Christianity" and a scheme of "Oppression, exploitation, slavery, poverty, misery, depopulation, demoralization, and corruption of the Indians."

In 1752 the Spanish King cedes part of Paraguay to Portugal, and on receiving proof that the Jesuits secretly urged their armed Indians, 15,000, to resist, Pombal moved the King to suppress the Jesuit Society.

The religious corruption continues as the Protestants were no angels in their stand regarding slavery, quoting Martin Luther who espoused the act of slavery.

"The Book of Jeremiah [that] is now one-seventh longer than the one that appears in some of the 2,000-year-old manuscripts known as the 'Dead Sea Scrolls.' Some verses, including ones containing a Prophecy about the seizure and return of Temple implements by Babylonian soldiers, appear to have been added after the events happened." ~Bible Project, Hebrew University in Jerusalem, Martin Luther's sedition is even more inaccurate, and reflects his own interests.

AD 1866-1946-H. G. AD 1869-12th of October, Pope Pius IX reorganizes the Penal Laws of the Church. Excommunication as punishment is done away with for many crimes [but not all]. In the 21st century it is still a crime to be a Mason in some European countries.

On Oct 12th the Pope issues “Multi Plices Inter,” and later “Apostolicae Sedis Moderatoni,” dealing with secret organizations and clarifying the procedure regarding censure in Canon Law, changing some Canons and establishing a list of new censures [unavailable in an English translation]. Authorities state that the document is related to Freemasonry.

Karl Maria Kertbeny, writing anonymously, uses the term “Homosexual” in a pamphlet calling for repeal of Prussia's sodomy laws, which is the earliest know use of this term. It began appearing in US medical journals in the 1890's and in general usage during the 1920's.

AD 1870-1879- Anthony Comstock, 1844-1915, is a self-appointed anti-vice crusader, devoting a lifetime to battling so-called wickedness, to purify America, and to protect its youth from sinful transgressions.

Armed with exhibits showing young lives wrecked by pornography, Comstock shepherded through the U.S. Congress with little opposition a stringent anti-obscenity law known as the “Comstock Law.” Pornography is outlawed, but so was anything that could be described as “Lewd, obscene, lascivious, or filthy,” terms even modern courts still find difficult to define.

Over the years, targets of Comstock's rigid definition of the obscene have been abortionists, sellers of contraceptive devices, and even those merely disseminating information about contraception, which includes medical doctors. In the 4th century, Augustine spoke out against contraception, “You [Manicheans] make your Auditors adulterers of their wives when they take care lest the women with whom they copulate conceive. They take wives according to the laws of matrimony by tablets announcing that the marriage is contracted to procreate children; and then, fearing because of your law [against childbearing]... They copulate in a shameful union only to satisfy lust for their wives. They are unwilling to have children, on whose account alone marriages are made. How is it, then, that you are not those prohibiting marriage, as the Apostle predicted of you so long ago [1 Timothy 4:1-4], when you try to take from marriage what marriage is? When this is taken away, husbands are shameful lovers, wives are harlots, bridal chambers are brothels, fathers-in-law are pimps.” ~Saint Augustine, Against Faustus 15:7, 400 C.E.

After his appointment as special postal agent in 1873, Comstock boasts that he seized thousands of pounds of obscene materials, and by the time of his death in 1915, Victorian ideals of propriety are changing and Comstock has become a parody of himself, but the Comstock Law and its impact on American culture outlived him.

AD 1870-Pope Pius IX of Rome keeps the Jews confined to the ghetto areas in wretched conditions and under arduous conditions until the last stronghold of Papal power finally falls to the Italian freedom fighters. The Jews in 2000 are to register their strong indignation to John Paul II when he asks for beatification of Pope Pius IX who appears, historically, anti-Semitic.

The liberating principles of the French Revolution in 1848, which included definitive rights, including, freedom of the press, brought the great institution of the Catholic Church to its knees, and newspapers everywhere began transmitting the truth regarding the authoritative Catholicism, which denies men rights without the permission of Her hierarchy.

Unhindered journalism became a major cause for the drive within the religious institution to adopt the principle of infallibility. According to Hasler, the Infallibilist Party "... Wanted to employ the infallible Pope to contain the forces of unbridled journalism."

Infallibility of the Pope declared. On May 25, 1870, the newspaper Unita Cattolica, which supported adoption of the principle of infallibility, writes, "The infallible Pope must counteract and cure the prevailing abuses of unbridled freedom of the press, thanks to which journalists daily spread lies and calumny. Every day the Pope can teach, condemn, and define dogma and Catholics will never be permitted to question his decisions."

With the adoption of the principle of Papal Infallibility by Pope Pius IX and freedom of the press branded inherently evil by him, the Roman Church immediately began to 'Restrain' the press with the Knights of Columbus, in the United States, created in 1882 to organize the Catholic laity into a closely controlled and responsive political and religious mechanism.

By 1914 the Knights of Columbus had evolved into a national organization capable of intimidating anyone and everyone who criticized the Catholic Church in any way, form, or manner, and during the period from August 1914 to January 17, 1917, the Knights succeeded, according to their own published report, in shutting down 60 of the 62 or 63 newspapers in the United States that published news critical of the Catholic Church, and had the brazenness and bravado to brag about it.

AD 1871-1886- The Kulturkampf: a cultural struggle ensues between the Catholic Church and Bismarck of Germany mainly in regard to the control of education. Successive annexations of other German provinces had greatly altered the proportion of Protestants and Catholics.

In 1867 Prussia had 14,000,000 Protestants to 7,000,000 Catholics; in 1871 the Empire had, through the inclusion of Alsace-Lorraine, 25,000,000 Protestants and 15,000,000 Catholics.

The Roman clergy, threatening to stir the Poles and Alsace-Lorrainers, made exorbitant demands, and the Liberals pressed for action. Bismarck suppressed the Catholic section of the Ministry of Worship, expelled the Jesuits, and passed the "May Laws," checking education and the training of priests. The Catholics reacted by organizing themselves politically in the Centre Party, and hundreds of their churches were closed and priests imprisoned. The "Persecution" was mild in comparison with the savage treatment by the Catholic hierarchy of the Protestants, Freethinkers, and Democrats. The struggle ended when the Catholics engaged to join with the Government in attacking Socialism. ~J. McCabe, Rationalists Encyclopaedia

In 1871, addressing a group of Catholic women, Pope Pius states that Jews, "Had been children in the House of God," but "Owing to their obstinacy and their failure to believe, they have become dogs... Almost inevitably, some part of him is aware that they are myths, and that he believes them only because they are comforting. But he dares not face this thought! Moreover, since he is aware, however dimly, that his opinions are not rational, he becomes furious when they are disputed." ~Bertrand Russell.

AD 1872- 1916-Grigori Efimovich Rasputin, Siberian mystic, faith healer, clairvoyant to Czar Nicholas II of Russia. Member of the Khlysty sect practicing flagellation and secret sexual rites, believed in the healing powers of prayer and that man's body is evil and the spirit is pure.

The son of Czar Nicholas had hemophilia and Rasputin is alleged to be able to stop the bleeding by hands on healing. His adversaries [Prince Felix Yusopov included] are jealous of his influence over the royal family and plan his assassination. Rasputin is poisoned, stabbed, and eventually shot. He was a strong adversary, even in dying.

Hands on healing is recognized, even in the early Church, a tradition which has not gone unnoticed by many current Christian charlatans, "Whereas therefore some men suffer, and others cure those who suffer, it is necessary, to know the cause at once of the suffering and the cure; and this is proved to be naught else than unbelief on the part of the sufferers, and faith on the part of those who cure them. For unbelief, while it does not believe that there is to be a Judgment by God, affords license to sin, and sin makes men liable to sufferings; but faith, believing that there is to be a Judgment of God, restrains men from sin; and those who do not sin are not only free from Demons and sufferings, but can also put to flight the Demons and sufferings of others." ~The Recognitions of Clement, About the Recognitions and Homilies. 5.3, Faith and Unbelief.

"It is possible to pay another man's debts on his behalf, but it is not possible to make a guilty man innocent by suffering in his place." ~Carl Lofmark, What is the Bible?

AD 1872- February 17th, Philippines, native priests are denied many of the benefits enjoyed by the Spanish Monks [White/Europeans], and advocate that the control of the local parishes be turned over to them. This resulted in an uprising in Cavite. Manuel Genato, a Batangas native, is implicated in this uprising and executed for his participation. Local church officials still claim we are the children of God, except some are allowed special privileges due to racial discrimination.

A Mutiny amongst the garrison at Cavite Arsenal results in the execution of religious nationalists, including the Mestizo, José Burgos, who had great influence on the Philippine national movement. So much for the Pope's call for equality. A substantial number of ilustrados leave the country. Filipino intellectuals in Spain later establish the Propaganda Movement, which seeks political representation in the Spanish Cortes and attempt to promote awareness of Tagalog culture and pre-colonial history. Masonic lodges play an important role in the nationalist movement, which may be why the Church finds them objectionable and excommunicates members.

AD 1872-Jehovah's Witness founded by Charles Taze Russell, 1852-1916. The "International Bible Students' Association," now known as Jehovah's Witnesses, this religious group was founded by Charles Taze Russell in 1872.

The publishing appendage of the association is named the "Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society," and was established by him in 1884. The Jehovah Witnesses believe in the "Second Coming of Christ," a precept already acknowledged by the Mormons who believe that the second coming has already occurred in North America [see AD 968]

"All the men of the Old Testament were polygamists, and Christ and Paul, the central figures of the New Testament, were celibates, and condemned marriage by both precept and example." ~Elizabeth Cady Stanton.

AD 1873-1897-The Inquisition for her beliefs and interpretations of God often threatens Saint Teresa of Avila. Theresa of Lisieux, a French Carmelite Nun at age 15, is eventually canonized in 1925.

AD 1873-Pope Pius IX, issues "Etsi Multa," on 21 November, in the encyclical Pope Pius condemns Masonry by clearly stating that Masonic groups are among the "Sects" from which, "The synagogue of Satan is formed."

AD 1874-"To desire eternal bliss is no proof that we shall ever attain it; and it has long seemed to me absurd to believe in that, which we wish for, however ardently. I regard all forms of Christianity as founded in selfishness. It is the expectation held out of bliss through all eternity, in return for the profession of faith in Christ and him crucified, that induces the erection of temples of worship in all Christian lands. Remove the extravagant promise, and you will hear very little of the Christian religion." ~Austin Holyoake.

AD 1874-1901-King Edward VII serves as England's Masonic Grand Master. Masonic history is continually injected into this piece due to the Roman Catholic Church's inability to persuade these freethinkers that Christianity is the one and only true faith. Masons believe, and have for centuries, that all men are entitled to their own religious beliefs.

AD 1875-1961-Carl Gustaf Jung, writer, psychologist, when asked about his belief in a God states, "I do not have to believe. I know!"

"Leave the matter of religion to the family altar, the church and the private schools, supported entirely by private contributions. Keep the church and state forever separated." ~General Ulysses S. Grant, speech to the Army of the Tennessee, Des Moines, Iowa, 1875.

AD 1875- In his Annual Message to Congress in 1875, President Grant pointed out that the tax-free property of Churches was at the time about one billion dollars; that, "By 1900, without check, it is safe to say this property will reach a sum exceeding three billions of dollars," and he adds, "So vast a sum, receiving all the protection and benefits of Government without bearing its proportion of the burdens and expenses of the same, will not be looked upon acquiescently by those who have to pay the taxes. In a growing country, where real estate enhances so rapidly with time, as in the United States, there is scarcely a limit to the wealth that may be acquired by corporations, religious or otherwise, if allowed to retain real estate without taxation. The contemplation of so vast a property as here alluded to, without taxation, may lead to sequestration without constitutional authority and through blood. I would suggest the taxation of all property equally, whether church or corporation." ~Messages and Papers of the Presidents, vol. vii, p. 334-5.

"On the authority of the Doomsday Book [of William the Conqueror], the possessions of the Church represented 25% of the assessment in the country [England] in 1066, and 26 1/2% of its cultivated area in 1086." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 5, 103.

AD 1876-1958-Pope Pius XII, Pope from 1939-58. In the book, "Hitler's Pope," John Cornwall's chronicles the life of Eugenio Pacelli, Pope Pius XII. Pacelli was arguably the most dangerous churchman in all of modern history. As Pontiff during World War II, not only did he fail to speak out against Hitler's "Final Solution," but he personally made the "Final Solution" possible!

No Catholic Nazis, to my knowledge, are known to have been excommunicated for their part in the exterminations of Jews before, during, or after WWII. Did the Pope really condone peace or just speak of it? On the holiest of Jewish holidays, Yom Kippur, in the autumn of 1931, Guy de Rothschild walked through the massive street gate at 19 Rue Laffitte, for the first time as an adult on adult business.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

The day was chosen carefully, what others might perceive as the beginning of a banking career, to a Rothschild it was entering into priesthood. At twenty-two, Guy was assigned letters to write, and one of his correspondents was a Cardinal Pacelli [the future Pope Pius XII], then in charge of 'Holy Office' finances, and who kept a small account at MM. De Rothschild Freres. ~From The Rothschilds and the Nazi Pope, By Clifford Shack. In 1933, Pope Pius XII will negotiate a treaty with Hitler, the "Reich Concordat," which ensures the Nazis would rise unopposed by the most powerful Catholic community in the world. Thus sealing, by Hitler's own admission, the fate of the Jews in Europe and perpetuating the hatred against them worldwide. Eugenio Pacelli [Pope Pius XII] is described during his pontificate, and after his death, as a member of the "Black Nobilit," the Black Nobility being a small group of aristocratic families of Rome who stood by the Popes following the seizure of their dominions in the bitter struggle for the creation of the nation/state of Italy.

In 1876, the Centennial was held at Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and the Sabbatarians displayed their control. Philadelphia was a 'Sunday City,' and so the gates of the Centennial were closed on that day. Philadelphia was so piously orientated, that on the Sabbath chains would be stretched across the streets to prevent stages and carriages from passing during that Holy time. ~Sabbath Superstition Robert Green Ingersoll

There can be few more miserable statesmen in the world than Eugene Pacelli, or His Holiness Pope Pius XII, who pledged his Church [in an Unholy Concordant with the Axis Powers] to a belief in the ultimate victory of Germany, Italy, and Japan in their attempts to conquer the free will of mankind and enslave the world by despots bent on forcing their conflagrations upon the innocent. In the ruin of all liberal, as well as Socialist and Communist, ideals which they would effect, no strong voice would be raised in protest, against an Unholy Alliance with a bestial greed that sought to attain its end by brutality almost without precedent in history.

Hitler's Gestapo would, as usual, loyally support the Vatican policy, so long as it acquiesced to his demands. The teaching of millenarianism, that Christ before the Final Judgment will come, visibly, to rule over the world, is a severe error condemned by Pope Pius XII.

"The most striking point in the eschatology of the ante-Nicene age is the prominent Chiliasm, or Millenarianism, that is the belief of a visible reign of Christ in glory on earth with the risen saints for a thousand years, before the general Resurrection and Judgment. It was indeed not the doctrine of the Church embodied in any Creed or form of devotion, but a widely current opinion of distinguished teachers, such as Barnabas, Papias, Justin Martyr, Irenaeus, Tertullian, Methodius, and Lactantius, while Caius, Origen, Dionysius the Great, [Bishop] Eusebius [as after wards Saint Jerome and Saint Augustine] opposed it." ~Philip Schaff, History of the Christian Church, Vol. 2 p.381, Peabody, MA: Hendrickson, n.d

AD 1877-Freemasonry: The symbolism and mystic verbiage which led some writers to trace it to ancient Egypt has actually been adopted within the last three centuries, and a widely accepted opinion is that the body is in some sense a survival of the ancient Roman unions of workers, which are said to have reached Roman Britain. The earliest documents, which are English, belong to the 14th century, and tell of a code of rules of conduct, which was read to applicants before initiation. Others besides working masons were admitted, but what precisely is meant by the description "Free" is disputed.

The religious aspect is more relevant here for the Catholic Church claims that they are a threat to society as well as the Church hierarchy. Until 1877, when the Grand Orient of France cut out references to the "Grand Architect" and required no belief in God or immortality, the Freemasons were, at least in profession, definitely religious in the sense that they required all initiates to believe in a supreme being.

The action of the French caused a schism, several Grand Lodges in the United States refusing to recognize the Swiss body because it supported the French. The rabid hostility to it of the Papal authorities also is comparatively modern, and is due to the fact that the Masons, which in the course of the 19th century helped destroy the dependency on a Catholic religious hierarchy [individual rights versus authority of the Church and State], in the greater part of France was largely organized in the Lodges.

It was the same in the revolutionary movement against Church and State in Latin America, Spain, and Portugal. Catholics are still forbidden under pain of Excommunication to join a Lodge, though the old anti-clerical fire has dimmed even in French Freemasonry.

AD 1877-1945-Edgar Cayce, a faith healer and clairvoyant, claims to have had a vision of a land and its peoples that existed before the Great Flood. These Atlantians are allegedly destroyed by a disaster similar to a nuclear holocaust, occurring in the years 50,000 BC, 28,000 B.C.E., and 10,000 B.C.E.

Many Atlantians escape the tragedy and settle in Egypt, Mexico, and Peru, and that is [allegedly] how the Pyramid structures are indigenous to all three countries.

AD 1878-1968- Sinclair, Upton, B.A., American author. Before he developed political aspirations, socialist, he was anything but respectful to the Churches.

Pope Leo XIII, in 1878, writes that the American Bill of Rights should never have been written because God did not give to man freedom of thought, action, or speech. The Vicar of Christ forgot that Christians should be, "Open to reason... Not hypocritical." ~James 3:17, RSV.

Yet, the Old Testament taught that we should "Reason together." ~Isaiah 1:18.

"... To argue with a man who has renounced his reason is like giving medicine to the dead." ~Col. Ingersoll's Works, Vol. 1, p.127.

The Encyclical, Immortale Dei, of Pope Leo XIII, 1878-1903, is no more than a inspirational utterance, translated, "The Constitution of Christian States," promoting the freedom of people to shape their own constitutions being no more truthful than that of Hitler or Mussolini. The title given to it in the English translation is a hoax, as the Pope's title is "On the Constitution of Catholic States," deceiving the American Protestants in a vain effort to gain their moral support.

It is actually addressed to France, its primary objective is to chastise the French for daring to choose a constitution, which places all religions on the same level by excluding the Catholic Church from political organizations, the law court, and the school, which is exactly what the American Constitution did.

"There are a score of great religions in the world, and each is a mighty fortress of graft." ~ See Upton Sinclair's Magazine, April 1918, and his Profits of Religion, 1919.

AD 1878-Pope Leo XIII, is said to have abolished the practice of castrating boys to keep their soprano voices in the Church choirs, a custom long practiced since the 6th century.

"In Italy the practice began of emasculating boys with good voices and retaining them as male sopranos, as the Italians, with their usual lack of Christian reticence about sex called them, the castrati. They were in every opera in the 18th century, but foreign visitors were never reconciled to them." ~From J. McCabe, Rationalist Encyclopedia.

According to the Christian Bible [New Testament], there is no sex in Heaven, and if man truly seeks Salvation, it would be best if he refrained from sex in this world, "Once married, a man is positively encouraged to desert his wife for Jesus' sake, for that is a virtuous deed [Matthew 19:29], but there is no possibility of Divorce, which is absolutely prohibited in Mark's Gospel [Mark 10:2-12] and is allowed by Matthew only 'For the cause of fornication,' [Matthew 5:31-12]. The New Testament sees Marriage as the only permissible outlet for sex, which is a thing of this world and does not exist in Heaven [Mark 12:25; Galatians 3:28]. If he possibly can, a man should also avoid sex in this world [even if he is married, I Corinthians 7:29]: Jesus himself teaches that the best thing a man can do is castrate himself [Matthew 19:12]. Saint John, the Divine, says that only men 'Which were not defiled with women' will be saved [Revelation 14:4]." ~Carl Lofmark.

The famous English weekly, "The Spectator," wrote about, "The shrill celestial whine of eunuchs," and by the end of the 18th century, they began to fade out of the opera-house. As the word "Celestial" indicates, they were also found in the choir of all churches that were proud of their music, particularly in the chapel of the Vatican Palace.

The Sistine Chapel, one of the greatest shrines of art as well as of virtue and piety in Rome, and the church, clung to their eunuchs when public opinion almost drove them out of opera. The plea seems to have been that there was some indelicacy, or risk of it, in having females in the church choir, so the priests chose to ignore the rather indelicate nature of the operation of emasculation, while they themselves continued their own nocturnal indiscretions. This fact was well known as the celibacy of the clergy.

"Eunuchs were in vogue as singers until comparatively recent times; they were employed in the choirs of Rome." ~See Grovels standard Dictionary of Music and Musicians, 1927, in the section titled Castrati.

An American reader wrote to a Catholic friend, who had doubts about the Church's creation of eunuchs, and consulted his pastor, who indignantly denied the statement, proclaiming it was one of the usual "Lies of

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

Freethinkers.” For an easily accessible authority, reliable on such a point, refer to the Encyclopedia Britannica.

In all editions, up to 1929, 14th edition, the article “Eunuchs,” after discussing the barbaric African custom of making eunuchs for the harem, says, “Even more vile, as being practiced by a civilized European nation, was the Italian practice of castrating boys to prevent the natural development of the voice, in order to train them as adult soprano singers, such as might formerly be found in the Sistine Chapel” ~Joseph McCabe, Rationalist Encyclopedia. “Though such mutilation is a crime punishable with severity, the supply of soprani never failed as long as these musical powers were in demand in high quarters. Driven long ago from the Italian stage by public opinion they remained the musical glory and the moral shame of the papal choir till the accession of Pope Leo XII, one of whose first acts was to get rid of them.” ~Father Joseph McCabe, Rationalist Encyclopedia.

A fact, long denied, is that Pope Pius IX, 1846-1878, the first Pope to be declared infallible by the Church, the only modern Pope for whom the first official stage of canonization was demanded, sat solemnly on his throne in the Sistine Chapel for 20 years listening to “The shrill celestial whine of eunuchs,” were deliberately suppressed by Church officials who demonize all those who challenge her authority. ~For those seeking the truth, “The revision of the Encyclopedia Britannica was undertaken with a view to eliminate matter which was objectionable from a Catholic point of view and to insert what was accurate and unbiased. The whole of the 28 volumes were examined, objectionable parts noted, and the reasons for their deletion or amendment given...” “As author of this book I can attest to the errors contained in most encyclopedias regarding religious artifacts, dates, and accomplishments, which are written in such a manner as not to offend the Catholics, irrespective of truth.” ~E. Christopher Reyes.

Pope Leo also reaffirms the Church’s stand against freedom of the press for “Purity of Faith.” An Italian Catholic priest, G. Berthelet, says of the election of the “Great” Pope Leo XIII: “If Pope Pius IX had foreseen the election of Leo XIII he would have excommunicated him, but if Leo XIII had foreseen that at his death the Cardinals would vote for Giuseppe Sarto, he would have excommunicated the lot of them.” ~See Storia en Rivoluzioni sul Conclave, published in 1904.

AD 1879-1955-Einstein, Albert, “The fairest thing we can experience is the mysterious. It is the fundamental emotion, which stands at the cradle of true art and true science. He who knows it not and can no longer wonder, no longer feel amazement, is as good as dead, a snuffed-out candle. It was the experience of mystery—even if mixed with fear—that engendered religion. A knowledge of the existence of something we cannot penetrate, of the manifestations of the profoundest reason and the most radiant beauty, which are only accessible to our reason in their most elementary forms, it is this knowledge and this emotion that constitute the truly religious attitude; in this sense, and in this alone, I am a deeply religious man.” ~Albert Einstein.

“The word God is for me nothing more than the expression and product of human weaknesses, the Bible a collection of honorable, but still primitive legends, which are nevertheless pretty childish. No interpretation no matter how subtle can [for me] change this.” ~Albert Einstein.

“I cannot conceive of a God who rewards and punishes his creatures, or has a will of the type of which we are conscious in ourselves. An individual who should survive his physical death is also beyond my comprehension nor do I wish it otherwise; such notions are for the fears or absurd egoism of feeble souls. Enough for me the mystery of the eternity of life, and the inkling of the marvelous structure of reality, together with the single-hearted endeavor to comprehend a portion, be it never so tiny, of the reason that manifests itself in nature.” ~From The World As I See It, by Albert Einstein, Philosophical Library, N. Y. 1949, pp. 1-5.

“I cannot accept any concept of God based on the fear of life or the fear of death or blind faith. I cannot prove to you that there is no personal God, but if I were to speak of him I would be a liar.” ~Albert Einstein. Einstein believed, “Science without religion is lame, religion without science is blind.” “I believe in the brotherhood of man and the uniqueness of the individual. But, if you ask me to prove what I believe, I can’t. You know them to be true but you could spend a whole lifetime without being able to prove them. The mind can proceed only so far upon what it knows and can prove. There comes a point where the mind takes a higher plane of knowledge, but can never prove how it got there. All great discoveries have involved such a leap.” ~ Albert Einstein.

AD 1880-1956- Henry Louis Mencken, one of the great writers and social critics of the 20th century. Author 28 books, founder of two magazines, and a Baltimore Sun columnist.

"... Got a firm conviction that the Christian faith was full of palpable absurdities, and the Christian God preposterous." He gave his religious teachings a definition: "Sunday school: A prison in which children do penance for the evil conscience of their parents."

Yet, he will become a responsible recognized biblical scholar. "Religion is fundamentally opposed to everything I hold in veneration-courage, clear thinking, honesty, fairness, and, above all, love of truth."

With regard to the Pope and the 'Catholic Rhythm Method.' A.k.a. "Rhythm and blues Method."

Martyrs of Uganda are burned to death by Mwanga II, the King of Buganda, who was miffed, by some accounts, when his own homosexual advances were declined by recent Christian converts. "The Bible contains six admonishments to homosexuals and 362 admonishments to heterosexuals. That doesn't mean that God doesn't love heterosexuals. It's just that they need more supervision." ~Lynn Lavner.

"It is now quite lawful for a Catholic woman to avoid pregnancy by a resort to mathematics, though she is still forbidden to resort to physics and chemistry." ~Henry Louis Mencken

Mencken deduced that theology was "An effort to explain the unknowable by putting it in terms of the not worth knowing." As to the higher clergy in the Romish Church, "Archbishop: A Christian ecclesiastic of a rank superior to that attained by Christ."

Mencken claimed, "The Catholic clergy seldom bother to make their arguments plausible: it is plain that they have little respect for human intelligence, and indeed little belief in its existence."

"Though each religion has its own peculiar growth, the seed from which they spring is everywhere the same." ~Max Muller, Origin and Growth of Religion, p. 48.

Mencken's most quoted definition is "Puritanism: The haunting fear that someone, somewhere, may be happy." ~H.L. Mencken, 1999, by John Patrick Michael Murphy.

AD 1881-Anti-Semitism spreads across Russia under Tsar Alexander III. The previous assassination of Alexander II of Russia is maliciously blamed on the Jews, and about 200 individual pogroms against the Jews follows. "Pogrom" is a Russian word meaning "Devastation" or "Riot."

AD 1881-1963-Pope John XXIII, becomes the first Pope to appoint a Japanese, Filipino, and African Cardinal.

AD 1881-Pope Leo XIII, June 29th, issues "Diturnum" regarding secret organizations and Masonry.

AD 1881-Brooke Westcott and Fenton Hort, British Scholars, publish an edition of the "Greek New Testament" which is based upon the interpretations of "Alexandrian Manuscript Aleph and B." The theory of Westcott and Hort regarding manuscript rendition is the basic premise that the older manuscripts are more likely to reflect the original literary work. This brought a torrent of "Ad Hominem" [personal] attacks upon the two.

AD 1881-1885-The English Revised Version of the Bible is published, again changing Scripture to abide by modern thinking.

A Christian Nation? Police investigator C.E. Howard Vincent voices his concern that the public might be offended should British Parliament enact statutes on which to prosecute sex crimes against children. Consul Wodehouse observed that, "It is notorious that the only girls of tender age to be found in these [brothels]... Are English or Belgian subjects."

The Catholic Church, evocatively known as "The Whore of Babylon," also comes in for a share of opprobrium; drawing upon discriminating centuries of Protestant-Catholic antagonism, that prostitution is not an English sort of crime at all, but rather "The filthy product of Pagan depravity." ~ Henry Mayhew, London Labor and the London Poor; A Cyclopaedia of the Conditions and Earnings of Those That Will Work, Those That Can not Work, and Those That Will Not Work, London: Griffin Bohn & Company, 1862, pg. 228.

AD 1882-1884- Mendel, The Abbot Gregor Johann, monk botanist and one of the founders of Mendelism. Mendel was no genius and his experiments on plant hybrids were completely forgotten when other botanists repeated them and added his name to the new theory of heredity.

It is, however, interesting to note that the references one constantly meets in scientific works to "The devout Benedictine abbot" are absurdity. The most authoritative biography of him [English version Life of Mendel, 1932] is by a relative of his, N. Iltis, which shows that Mendel was violently anti-Christian right up to the time when he entered the monastery and wrote a poem of "The gloomy powers of superstition, which now oppress the world."

He was very poor and he entered the monastery only because it offered a chance to study. As a priest he shirked his functions as far as possible, and even as abbot he bought Darwin's "Origin of the Species," and accepted evolution, which was then anathema to all Catholics.

AD 1882-Pope Leo XIII, issues "Etsi Nos," on 15 February, a Papal encyclical addressing the conditions then prevalent in Italy and slanders his opponents referring to a "Pernicious sect" at "War" with Jesus Christ the Savior and a sect he hold culpable for civil insurrection in Italy.

Many believe this so-called "Pernicious group" is the Brotherhood of Masons who refuse to bow to the Pope and the strong will of the Vatican.

President Barack Obama won't like this: In Pace vs. Alabama, the United States Supreme Court upholds a law that makes interracial adultery more serious than intra-racial adultery, arguing that interracial couples would produce genetically inferior offspring.

A respected Christian French doctor writes, "Repeated cauterizing of the [woman's] clitoris with red-hot irons destroys its sensitivity, children then become less excitable and less likely to touch themselves."

AD 1882-Many "Secret orders" are of a political or religious origin. The Roman Catholic Church having long denounced membership in secret societies, which it has felt are a threat to its religious teachings, organizes the Knights of Columbus, founded in 1882, as the Church's response to Freemasonry.

The Knights of Columbus, an International Fraternal Organization comprising of 1.5 million Roman Catholic laymen, was founded in by Father Michael J. McGivney to promote the ideals of charity, patriotism, unity, and fraternity among the Catholic immigrants and to offer them financial support by providing insurance to its members.

Another Christian benevolent society, the "International Order of the Alhambra," was founded in 1904 as a counterpart to the Masonic Order's, "Nobles of the Mystic Shrine."

In the 19th century, the Supreme Council of the Knights of Columbus, who still believe that the medieval knights were chivalrous, issued, and supplied free to the American public a pamphlet entitled, "Is the Catholic Church a Menace to Democracy?" Assuring the naive public, it is from the Jesuit theologians of the Church that the Fathers of the Revolution got their idea of democracy. On page 17 it has a short article "Did, Bellarmine whisper to Jefferson?"

To support this concoction of the ghost of Cardinal Bellarmine, head of the Inquisition, and the man who condemned the famous Astronomer, Galileo, as inspiring Thomas Jefferson, the most dogmatic materialist in American literature, the article gives a number of quotations from the works of Bellarmine, in the usual Catholic manner, with no references given so no one can verify the sources. Other Catholic writers couple the Jesuit Suarez, also of the 17th century, with the infamous Cardinal Bellarmine as co-discoverer of the Sublime Principles of Democracy declared by the American founding fathers.

Our founding Fathers warned us, "Hath your property been destroyed before your face? Are your wife and children destitute of a bed to lie on, or bread to live on? Have you lost a parent or a child by their hands, and yourself the ruined and wretched survivor? If you have not, then are you not a judge of those who have. But if you have, and can still shake hands with the murderers, then are you unworthy the name of husband, father, friend, or lover, and whatever may be your rank or title in life, you have the heart of a coward, and the spirit of a sycophant." ~By Thomas Paine, American Revolution patriot, Free thinker.

Has the Church forgotten their history and the fact that the early Greeks, 2000 years earlier, expounded the principles of democracy long before Father Suarez?

How is it that in the great fight for modern democracy, 1760-1860, the Vatican was the most determined supporter of the murderous anti-democrats? ~The Columbia Encyclopedia's, Crimes Against The Truth, by Joseph McCabe, to have abjured in our hands and also to have been given salutary penances for this. Having been sought about the truth of the matter, we say that the above-mentioned Galileo has not abjured in our hands, or in the hands of others here in Rome, or anywhere else that we know, any opinion or doctrine of his; nor has he received any penances, salutary or otherwise. On the contrary, he has only been notified of the declaration made by the Holy Father and published by the 'Sacred Congregation of the Index,' whose content is that the doctrine attributed to Copernicus [that the earth moves around the sun and the sun stands at the center of the world without moving from east to west] is contrary to Holy Scripture and therefore cannot be defended or held. In witness whereof we have written and signed this with our own hands, on this 26th day of May 1616." ~Cardinal Bellarmine, in a Certificate regarding the Roman Catholic Church's punishment of Galileo for holding the position that the Earth orbits the Sun.

Haldeman-Julius Publications, Girard, Kansas.

AD 1882-The Kosmon Bible, by Dr. John Ballou Newbrough, details many of the world's spiritual leaders during different periods of history and condemns the major religions as being inspired by "False deities." Known also as the Oahpe Bible.

AD 1883-1935- Lawrence, Thomas Edward, "Lawrence of Arabia" and author of The Seven Pillars of Wisdom. He changed his name legally to Shaw, 1927, and became a mechanic in the Air Force. His biographer V. Richards tells us that he was an atheist and had at an early date "shaken free of the half-dead sentiments of formal religion"

AD 1883-1945-Mussolini, Benito, Premier/Dictator of Italy, 1922-1943, the founder and leader, Il Duce, of Italian Fascism. Mussolini was an aggressive Atheist as well as republican until 1921. It is credibly reported that on a public platform he did what is falsely attributed to Bradlaugh, put his watch on the table and gave the Almighty a minute to strike him dead.

When the military and industrialist leaders who offered to finance his party required him to abandon these attitudes, his Atheism disappeared in a few months; and one of his first acts after the March on Rome in 1922, in which he did not take part, remaining in the provinces until its success was announced, was to present the valuable Chigi Library to the Pope.

What does Scripture say about respecting leadership? Either good or bad? "Thou shalt not... Curse the ruler of thy people." ~Exodus 22:28.

The Vatican, however, distrusted his sudden conversion, and for seven years refused to be reconciled, especially as the early Fascists were very largely anti-Papal. George Seldes offers a mountain of evidence to support his conclusions that, "... It was the Roman Catholic Church, which was fascism's main supporter," and, "It was the hierarchy which originated and propagandized the 'Holy Crusade against Godless Communism'. The hierarchy was as responsible as guns and planes in destroying the Republic. It monopolized schools. It propagated Fascism for 39 years." ~From the works of Joseph McCabe.

The Pope congratulated Mussolini on his escape from assassination, but is silent when he sent 10,000 opponents to jail, and boasted that Fascism had "Marched to power over the rotting corpse of liberty." After the violence and the murder of the Socialist Party Deputy Giacomo Matteotti in 1924, of which he may have had a hand, Mussolini moved to suspend the Constitutional Government. He proceeded to establish a dictatorship by forbidding the parliament to initiate legislation and by making himself responsible to the king alone.

That crime shook the power of Fascism, for more than half the adult Italians were, as the electoral figures prove, still Liberals, Socialists, or Communists, and from that date Mussolini's militarist and royalist supporters sought a reconciliation with the Church, so as to secure the Pope's influence, but the Vatican demanded too high a price. The Pope wants the full application of the Canon Law in Italy, the suppression of all non-Catholic cults, the control of all education, and a generous measure of temporal, royal power. In 1929 Mussolini is forced to compromise and signs an agreement by which the Pope receives €19,000,000 in cash, which he is rumored to have invested in America and lost in the ensuing depression, and State bonds, the sum, with accumulated interest, allotted to the Papacy in 1870, and independent power in the Vatican City, 108 acres of Rome, with its own postage, railway station, etc..

They sign also a Concordat by which the Pope obtained for them control of all schools and colleges below the universities, control of which both professors and Fascists heatedly opposed, the establishment of Catholicism as the State-religion, the endowment of the clergy, the protection of the property of monks, a law of religious [Catholic] marriage, drastic penalties on all criticism of the Church, the enforcement of the Church's Holy Days, relief from taxation for the clergy and Church property, and the expulsion of all ex-priests, who were very numerous in Italy, from the Civil Service.

This sordid bargain, hailed in the world's press as a beautiful reconciliation of the secular and spiritual powers, was followed by bitter recrimination on both sides. Why would the Vatican propagate and endorse Fascism?

"The first fascist newspaper, Arriba España, was published August 1, 1936. One of its directors was a priest representing the Church... On September 16 Arriba España said editorially that 'Catholicism will find Fascism its best collaborator.'"

And what is the Catholic Church's rewards? "Franco repaid the Roman Catholic Church by abolishing divorce, making religious marriages obligatory and restoring taxes for the benefit of the Church, all previously banned by the Republic."

On taxation, "The divorce between church and state ought to be absolute. It ought to be absolute. It ought to be so absolute that no church property anywhere, in any state, or in any nation, should be exempt from taxation, for if you exempt the church property of any church organization, to that extent you impose tax upon the whole community." ~U.S. Pres. James A. Garfield, in his address to Congress.

Most important, Franco turned the schools over to the Catholic Church. Seldes offers, "... Two short abstracts from nationally used catechisms taught to two generations of children, in the hope of producing a brain-washed people which would never rebel."

"In the second year of the war the Archbishop of Granada gave his imprimatur to the Catechism of the Jesuit priest Angel Maria de Arcos. This Catechism was so unbelievable, so obscurantist, incredible, outrageous, that when John Langdon-Davies wrote about it in a London liberal magazine he was attacked by numerous Catholic editors, accused of making the whole thing up. He sued for libel, established the veracity of the catechism, and won his case."

Here is what the children in many Eastern cities, including Granada, were taught:

Q. Is every Liberal government hostile to the Church?

A. Evidently, since whoever is not with Christ is against Him.

Q. Then there is no grade of Liberalism that can be good?

A. None: because Liberalism is mortal sin and anti-Christian.

Q. What of Communism, Socialism, Modern Democracy, Anarchism, and the like sects?

A. They are contrary to Catholic faith, to justice, and to virtue, and as such condemned by the Church.

Mussolini, who, to secure his own power, had sold the rights to win which half a million Italians had died in the 19th century, had to defend himself against his own followers, and the bold and caustic language he used caused the Pope to denounce him publicly as "A heretic," "Osservatore Romano," May 30, 1929. Against his statement that he had "Made no concessions."

Pope Pius XI claimed all the powers of a mediaeval Pontiff. This extraordinary document, showing that the Papacy has not altered a line of its claims, was concealed by the Press from its readers in Great Britain and America. A translation of parts of it is given, direct from the "Osservatore," in the Benedictine monk, Joseph McCabe's "Papacy in Modern Politics," 1937, p. 58. Mussolini made further concessions in 1931 and reluctantly began to attend church in 1932.

In the same year he wrote the opening part of the article "Fascismo" in the new "Enciclopedia Italiana," and in this he derided the Christian ideal of peace and glorified war as the agency which "Alone raises the energy of man to the highest pitch and impresses a seal of nobility upon the nations which have the manliness to undertake it;" while in the same year British newspapers printed only his public and passionate avowals that Italy sought peace and had no thought of aggression.

The Pope, keeping his part of the criminal bargain, said nothing, and permitted the Italian Church and hierarchy to bless the rape of Abyssinia. ~cf. Judges 19:24-25.

AD 1884-The Roman Catholic Church, under Pope Leo XIII, condemns Freemasonry, issuing “Humanum Genus.” Freemasonry: “...No longer making any secret of their purposes, they are now boldly rising up against God Himself. They are planning the destruction of the Holy Church publicly and openly, and this with the set purpose of utterly despoiling the nations of Christendom, if it were possible, of the blessings obtained for us through Jesus Christ our Savior. Lamenting these evils, We are constrained by the charity, which urges Our heart to cry out often to God: ‘For lo, Thy enemies have made a noise; and they that hate Thee have lifted up the head. They have taken a malicious counsel against Thy people, and they have consulted against Thy saints. They have said, ‘Come, and let us destroy them, so that they be not a nation.’”

“For as soon as the constitution and the spirit of the Masonic sect were clearly discovered by manifest signs of its actions, by the investigation of its causes, by publication of its laws, and of its rites and commentaries, with the addition often of the personal testimony of those who were in the secret, this apostolic see denounced the sect of the Freemasons, and publicly declared its constitution, as contrary to law and right, to be pernicious no less to Christendom than to the State; and it forbade any one to enter the society, under the penalties, which the Church is wont to inflict upon exceptionally guilty persons. The sectaries, indignant at this, thinking to elude or to weaken the force of these decrees, partly by contempt of them, and partly by calumny, accused the sovereign Pontiffs who had passed them either of exceeding the bounds of moderation in their decrees or of decreeing what was not just.”

“This was the manner in which they endeavored to elude the authority and the weight of the apostolic constitutions of Popes Clement XII and Benedict XIV, as well as of Pius VII and Pius IX. Yet, in the very society itself, there were to be found men who unwillingly acknowledged that the Roman Pontiffs had acted within their right, according to the Catholic doctrine and discipline.”

“The Pontiffs received the same assent, and in strong terms, from many princes and heads of governments, who made it their business either to delegate the Masonic society to the apostolic see, or of their own accord by special enactments to brand it as pernicious, as, for example, in Holland, Austria, Switzerland, Spain, Bavaria, Savoy, and other parts of Italy.”

“A good tree cannot produce bad fruit, nor a bad tree produce good fruit.” Now, the Masonic sect produces fruits that are pernicious and of the bitterest savor. For, from what We have above most clearly shown, that which is their ultimate purpose forces itself into view, namely, the utter overthrow of that whole religious and political order of the world which the Christian teaching has produced, and the substitution of a new state of things in accordance with their ideas, of which the foundations and laws shall be drawn from mere naturalism.” ~New Advent Catholic Website. www.knight.org/advent.

The threat from the Masonic Brotherhood is seen as a danger, not only from the perspective of the Vatican, but also from the viewpoint of European monarchies and governments. That Freemasons espouse freedom of religions as well as freedom from totalitarianism and dictatorial leaders cannot be denied in that Freemasons were participants in the liberation of France from its dictatorial king, the revolution of the Americans against the British, and the Filipinos against the monarchial totalitarianism of the Spanish.

The freedom to choose one's religion will not, however, be tolerated by the Church in that it still adheres to its precepts of ultimate global control and conquest by Christianity and resents the Freemasons espousing freedom to choose one's religion.

Pope Leo further states that Freemasons are unaware of the ultimate goals of their fraternity of Freemasonry and should not be considered partners in the criminal acts perpetrated by the organization of Freemasonry, condemning naturalism [The belief in all religions being equal], and their beliefs that,

AD 1885-1945-Adolf Hitler [Adolph Hitler Schicklgruber, the illegitimate son of Alois, a Jewish man], born in Braunau am Inn, Austria, the son of a customs official and a peasant Catholic girl. In 1877, at the age of 39, Alois Schicklgruber [Adolf Hitler] changes his name, effectively illegally, to Alois Hitler.

It remains speculative whether ‘Heil Schicklgruber’ would have resounded as far as ‘Heil Hitler.’ ~Hitler Rewrites The Bible, 2008, The Baptist Bulletin.

Hitler was a poor student who never completed high school, applying for admission to the Academy of Fine Arts in Vienna twice but rejected for lack of talent [some literary books on Hitler claim he was a painter, but he was only an obscure want to be painter, not an artist, as he lacked skill]. Once he takes power, Hitler will order the small town, in which he was born, a small Austrian town called Braunau, near to the German border, to be used as an artillery range, which will completely destroy the town hall and all the documents contained in it which will forever conceal his Jewish heritage.

Hitler painted two petite watercolor paintings while in Vienna in 1911 or 1912 when he was in his early 20's, fantasizing of a career as an artist [These paintings have become collectors items, recovered in a cellar in Iran, July 1999]. Hitler is thought to have given the paintings showing “Vienna Street Scenes” to the Iranian ambassador to Germany. Iran was supportive to Germany during World War II.

One painting shows a street in one of the older districts of Vienna thronged with people dressed in 18th and 19th century attire, one of them bearing a striking resemblance to the French Emperor, Napoleon Bonaparte, while the other depicts the old Rotunda building in Vienna, used for an international hall at the end of the 19th century, and no longer exists. He stayed in Vienna until 1913 [twenty-eights years of age], living on an orphan's pension, and later, on small earnings from pictures he drew.

A voracious reader, he developed anti-Jewish and antidemocratic convictions, blaming the loss of World War I on the Jewish bankers who he believed did not fund the country in order to win. During World War I [1914-1918], Hitler, volunteered to fight in the Bavarian Army. A dedicated soldier, he never promoted beyond private first class due to his superiors thinking him lacking in leadership qualities. Hitler climbs quickly to fame [with a few minor set-back of incarceration] by making promises to his people, which many believed, or wanted to believe after the humiliating surrender after WWI.

“... Every man must know that the New Movement can offer honor and fame in the eyes of posterity, but nothing in the present.” ~Adolf Hitler, Roman Catholic.

The war had made a lasting impression on this private as he fought in the trenches and was exposed to gas warfare [an event that would affect Germany's approach to warfare in WWII]. After Germany's defeat in 1918, Hitler returns to Munich, remaining in the army until 1920. He had an admiration for what he held to be superior individuals of his race and a loathing for the illiterate masses. He rose to power by blaming everything that went wrong with the country on the Jews.

In Hitler we see the fruits of the labors of Catholicism spreading hatred against non-Catholics. “As for those who believed that Hitler compromised with the suicidal poison of Judeo-Christianity, every man aspiring to political power for many centuries has had to pay lip service to it. The private correspondence of many of America's founding fathers showed that they despised Christianity, even though their public statements were designed to appease the religious fanatics. Even in the grudging allegiance paid to the Christian terror, both American founding fathers and Adolf Hitler waffled with terms like Nature's God and The Creator rather than using Christian names. The struggle in which we are engaged is easily divided into two different yet related concepts. One is the ancient struggle between reason and belief. Reason being the protector of freedom, and belief being the tool of the tyrants of Church and State. The other is between imperialists and those who are true to Nature's first and highest Law, the preservation of one's own kind. Imperialists, of course, work hand-in-hand with Universalist religion. Together they attempt to destroy the integrity of races and the integrity of the cultures, nations and religions rising from the race soul. The world is, and has long been, in flames because races, nations and cultures are forced to violate their Nature ordained instincts for self-preservation.” ~Martin Woollacott.

Hitler's “Gospel of Hatred” is accepted by the masses that are starving after Germany's loss in WWI and quick to want to blame someone for their morose financial condition. He discredits the churches and especially the synagogues with charges of fraud and wickedness imposing his own moral code. With over seventy five per cent of the German people Catholic or Christian, Hitler has little resistance in blaming the Jews for Germany losing the war [Didn't the Church proclaim for centuries that the Jews killed Jesus? See AD 150].

He ridicules the concept of human equality [Hitler's own mythological Darwinism] and claims racial superiority of the Aryan Race, a claim that the Germans are the highest form of human on earth. One Tibetan Monk, known as "The man with the green gloves" and an acknowledged psychic, was frequently visited by Hitler and was rumored to hold the keys to the Kingdom of Agartha.

Hitler's First Love: In 1931, a twenty-three year old young woman, named Geli Raubal is found dead from a gunshot wound in an apartment, which she shared in Munich with a German political rabble rouse, her uncle, Adolf Hitler, half-brother to her mother, Angela.

The cause of death is ruled a suicide. Hitler took up with Geli after his imprisonment for the Beer Hall Putsch, and during which time in prison he wrote his book. In 1919, Hitler met Dietrich Eckart, a wealthy publisher and editor-in-chief of an anti-Semitic journal, which he called, "In Plain German."

Eckart was also an occultist and a master of magic. As an initiate, Eckart belonged to the inner circle of the "Thule Society," as well as other esoteric orders [Thule was a legendary island in the far north, similar to Atlantis, purportedly the center of a lost, highly intelligent civilization, secrets of that civilization had not been completely lost, with those portions that remained being guarded by an ancient, advanced race, similar to the 'Masters' of Theosophy or the 'White Brotherhood.' Only the initiated could establish contact with these beings by means of a magical/mystical ritual. The 'Masters' or 'Ancients' allegedly would be able to bestow upon the initiated supernatural strength and energy with the ultimate goal being to create a race of Supermen of 'Aryan' stock who would annihilate all 'Inferior' races.]

After his release from prison, Hitler spent several years gaining in his oratory skills and political base while developing a relationship with his niece, Geli. "Even when I hate Uncle Adolf, he wins. If I fret over him; I'm obsessed by him; I can't get him out of my mind," she states. Geli expresses an exuberant teenage infatuation for her uncle.

In response, Hitler states, "I have fallen in love with you, and you have loathed and rejected me. And yet, I am seized by you. I am lost and in ruins. Even now my throat tightens. My heart cracks in two. You cannot destroy Germany this way."

Hitler introduces his niece to his friends, who will become some of history's dominant war criminals: Goering, Goebbels, Himmler, and Hess. Geli dislikes them, but acquiesces due to their loyalty to the "Fuehrer." ~From Hitler's Niece October 20, 1999, AP, By Ron Howard

Pope Pius XII signs a concordance with the Third Reich on July 20th 1933 to secure the religious practices of Catholics in German occupied territories, although as a "Master Race" Hitler believed the Aryans had the "Right to Rule" over all lesser nations they could subjugate.

The bank accounts, homes, properties, and other wealth of the "Lesser people" were confiscated and fifty years later documents will show the complicity of the Catholic Church in the transference of funds from the captured and subjugated lands to supposedly neutral countries and to Vatican Bank accounts. Hitler returns to Munich, Germany, in 1919, after treatment at a military hospital.

He undergoes a Reichswehr subsidized course of systematic political education for demobilizing soldiers that features Pan-German nationalism, anti-Semitism, and anti-socialism. The issues were prevalent in Bavarian politics following the repression of the Munich revolution of 1918-19.

Anti-Semitism had not played a prominent role in Bavarian politics prior to the revolutionary disturbances, and Herr Adolf Gemlich was pressed to send an inquiry regarding the importance of the "Jewish Question" to Captain Karl Mayr, the officer in charge of the "Reichswehr News and Enlightenment Department" in Munich. Mayr refers him to Hitler, who had distinguished himself politically by the passion of his radical nationalist, anti-Semitic views, and by his melodramatic speechmaking talents.

Hitler paid his first visit to the "German Workers' Party," eventually renamed, the "National Socialist Workers' Party," as a special agent of the Reichswehr. Hitler's attitude is quite docile in his letter to Gemlich, stressing the need for a "Rational" and "Scientific" anti-Semitism.

Some have interpreted the letter's call for the "Irrevocable removal [Entfernung]," which was not uncommon across Europe, having been practiced to one extent or another by the Roman Catholic Church for centuries as punishment to the Jews for the crucifixion of their "Savior."

For the Jews of German, this declamation is a precursor of the soon to be atrocities of the Holocaust. Hitler, at this point, meant "Segregation" or "Expulsion" rather than systematic liquidation. Hitler's first explicitly political writing impressed his Reichswehr superiors and he soon gains a reputation among the radical rightist and generally respectable nationalist traditionalist groups as a man who could help indoctrinate the masses against revolution and whose anti-Semitic rhetoric could help bring into disrepute the democratic Weimar Republic.

The masses loved his charismatic speeches. "The prerequisite for action is the will and the courage to be truthful," he stated. ~From-Eberhard Jückerl (ed.), Hitler. Sämtliche Aufzeichnungen 1905-1924 (Stuttgart, 1980), pp. 88-90. Translated by Richard S. Levy.

In a letter to Gemlich, on September 16, 1919, Hitler writes, "The danger posed by Jewry for our people today finds expression in the undeniable aversion of wide sections of our people. The cause of this aversion is not to be found in a clear recognition of the consciously or unconsciously systematic and pernicious effect of the Jews as a totality upon our nation. Rather, it arises mostly from personal contact and from the personal impression, which the individual Jew leaves—almost always an unfavorable one. For this reason, anti-Semitism is too easily characterized as a mere emotional phenomenon. And yet this is incorrect. Anti-Semitism as a political movement may not and cannot be defined by emotional impulses, but by recognition of the facts."

"The facts are these: First, Jewry is absolutely a race and not a religious association. Even the Jews never designate themselves as Jewish Germans, Jewish Poles, or Jewish Americans but always as German, Polish, or American Jews. Jews have never yet adopted much more than the language of the foreign nations among whom they live. A German who is forced to make use of the French language in France, Italian in Italy, Chinese in China does not thereby become a Frenchman, Italian, or Chinaman. It's the same with the Jew who lives among us and is forced to make use of the German language. He does not thereby become a German. Neither does the Mosaic faith, so important for the survival of this race, settle the question of whether someone is a Jew or non-Jew. There is scarcely a race whose members belong exclusively to just one definite religion."

"Through thousands of years of the closest kind of inbreeding, Jews in general have maintained their race and their peculiarities far more distinctly than many of the peoples among whom they have lived. And thus comes the fact that there lives amongst us a non-German, alien race, which neither wishes nor is able to sacrifice its racial character or to deny its feeling, thinking, and striving. Nevertheless, it possesses all the political rights we do. If the ethos of the Jews is revealed in the purely material realm, it is even clearer in their thinking and striving. Their dance around the golden calf is becoming a merciless struggle for all those possessions we prize most highly on earth."

"The value of the individual is no longer decided by his character or by the significance of his achievements for the totality but exclusively by the size of his fortune, by his money. The loftiness of a nation is no longer to be measured by the sum of its moral and spiritual powers, but rather by the wealth of its material possessions. This thinking and striving after money and power, and the feelings that go along with it, serve the purposes of the Jew who is unscrupulous in the choice of methods and pitiless in their employment. In autocratically ruled states he whines for the favor of 'His Majesty' and misuses it like a leech fastened upon the nations. In democracies he vies for the favor of the masses, cringes before the 'Majesty of the people,' and recognizes only the majesty of money."

"He destroys the character of princes with Byzantine flattery, national pride (the strength of a people), with ridicule and shameless breeding to depravity. His method of battle is that public opinion which is never expressed in the press but which is nonetheless managed and falsified by it. His power is the power of money, which multiplies in his hands effortlessly and endlessly through interest, and which forces peoples under the most dangerous of yokes. Its golden glitter, so attractive in the beginning, conceals the ultimately tragic consequences. Everything men strive after as a higher goal, be it religion, socialism, democracy, is to the Jew only means to an end, the way to satisfy his lust for gold and domination."

"In his effects and consequences he is like a racial tuberculosis of the nations. The deduction from all this is the following: an anti-Semitism based on purely emotional grounds will find its ultimate expression in the form of the 'Pogrom.' An anti-Semitism based on reason, however, must lead to systematic legal combating and elimination of the privileges of the Jews, that which distinguishes the Jews from the other aliens who live among us [an Aliens Law]. The ultimate objective [of such legislation] must, however, be the irrevocable removal of the Jews in general."

"For both these ends a government of national strength, not of national weakness, is necessary. The Republic in Germany owes its birth not to the uniform national will of our people but the sly exploitation of a series of circumstances which found general expression in a deep, universal dissatisfaction. These circumstances however were independent of the form of the state and are still operative today. Indeed, more so now than before. Thus, a great portion of our people recognizes that a changed state-form cannot in itself change our situation. For that it will take a rebirth of the moral and spiritual powers of the nation."

"And this rebirth cannot be initiated by a state leadership of irresponsible majorities, influenced by certain party dogmas, an irresponsible press, or internationalist phrases and slogans. [It requires], instead the ruthless installation of nationally minded leadership personalities with an inner sense of responsibility. But these facts deny to the Republic the essential inner support of the nation's spiritual forces. And thus today's state leaders are compelled to seek support among those who draw the exclusive benefits of the new formation of German conditions, and who for this reason were the driving force behind the revolution—the Jews. Even though [as various statements of the leading personalities reveal] today's leaders fully realized the danger of Jewry, they (seeking their own advantage) accepted the readily proffered support of the Jews and also returned the favor. And this pay-off consisted not only in every possible favoring of Jewry, but above all in the hindrance of the struggle of the betrayed people against its defrauders, that is in the repression of the anti-Semitic movement."

Respectfully,

Adolf Hitler.

It is sad to say that not a single apology in which any German Catholic; Cardinal, Archbishop, or Bishop has rebuked Christian Germany's crimes against man and against civilization for the atrocities committed against the world in WWII. The soubriquets of criminals, beastly villains, barbarous scoundrels, and infamous vile and despicable creatures were to be reserved for Russia.

What an appalling legacy for a federation of consecrated men during nine years of social savagery! The Church has little to be proud of! Instead of practicing peace, it has endeavored to conceal its actions and used bureaucratic circumlocutions in a feeble attempt to hide that, which is quite obvious. "Pogrom," in Russian means devastation.

The term is used to describe the organized or spontaneous massacres of Jews. In Russia the worst pogroms occurred in 1881, 1903, 1905, and during the civil war following the Revolution of 1917, Russia being comprised primarily of Orthodox Christians. "Mid-1800's estimates reported 80,000 slaves owned by Presbyterians, 225,000 by Baptists and 250,000 by Methodists. Anglicans probably owned most of the rest of the nearly 4 million blacks held in serfdom in the United States at the outbreak of the Civil War." ~Anne Gaylor.

Adolph Hitler felt that Christianity was wrong in its Biblical interpretations, believing that Jesus wasn't a meek and docile Savior who suffered and died on the cross to redeem all of humanity. To Hitler, Jesus was an angry, aggressive "Messiah," who was tough and could lead Germany to victory. Hitler's Jesus resembled Hitler in both his attitude and demeanor; a vengeful and powerful Jesus.

The Christian Messiah is too Jewish to suit Hitler who states, "My feeling as a Christian points me to my Lord and Savior as a fighter!" ~Adolph Hitler.

"I am completely convinced that I am acting as the agent of God by killing Jews. I am doing the work of the Lord Jesus. I am now a Catholic and will always remain so." ~Adolph Hitler, in Mein Kampf.

Hitler, the most infamous Catholic in all of history, has never been excommunicated by the Vatican for his atrocious crimes against humanity, and Mein Kampf has never been banned by The Church and Hitler never renounced his religion or left the Roman Catholic Church, and the Church in kind never abandoned him. It is alleged that Mein Kampf was written by the Jesuit Father Staempfle and then merely signed by Hitler. ~The Secret History of the Jesuits, Page 138.

The Catholic Church has banned great literature in the past, but Hitler's "Mien Kampf" has yet to appear on the Vatican's "Index of Forbidden Books."

Mussolini, and Nazi Concentration Camp officers, giving them veto power over those, which the Pope could appoint as Bishops in Germany, Spain and Italy.

The tyrannical rulers agreeing to surtax the Catholics in their countries and send the money to Rome in exchange for making sure the state could control the Church and the Church supporting literature-professing Hitler to be an atheist, as this is an embarrassing part of their history.

Upon seizing control of Germany's government, Hitler promised good relations with the Roman Catholic Holy See, which some interpreted as a hint on a future concordat [A Catholic Priest was largely responsible for placing Hitler in power]

"Ludwig Kaas [a close friend and adviser to Eugenio Pacelli, the future Pope Pius XII, addressed the Reichstag] acted in co-ordination with the German Bishops. Four days later, on March 28, the German Bishops rescinded their ban on Nazi party membership. On April 1, Cardinal Adolf Bertram of Breslau addressed German Catholics in a letter, warning them, 'To reject as a matter of principle all illegal or subversive activities.' To most Catholics, it looked as if the church wanted a modus vivendi with Hitler... The same impression was created a few weeks later when Hitler held a plebiscite to endorse his decision to pull Germany out of the League of Nations, which received the endorsement of the Catholic press and of several Catholic Bishops. When Hitler and the Church came to terms for a concordat, it cemented the impression that Hitler was a man the Church 'Could do business with... At a time when the heads of the major nations in the world faced the new Germany with cool reserve and considerable suspicion, the Catholic Church, the greatest moral power on earth, through the Concordat expressed its confidence in the new German government." ~Guenther Lewy, The Catholic Church and Nazi Germany.

"Still a member in good standing of the Church of Rome despite detestation of its hierarchy, he [Hitler] carried within him its teaching that the Jew was the killer of God. The extermination, therefore, could be done without a twinge of conscience since he was merely acting as the avenging hand of God..."

~Hitler's biographer, John Toland

AD 1885-Hitler's Nazi Germany merged the state with Church of Rome, and the German soldiers of the Wehrmacht proudly wore belt buckles inscribed with the following: "Gott mit uns," "God is with us." In a war, when we have one Christian nation against many Christian nations, who will win? "What happens when the same number of people pray for something as pray against it? How does God decide whose prayer to answer? Does the total number of people praying for or against something matter? How about the righteousness of the supplicants? Are positive prayers answered more frequently than negative ones? Does God take the positive ones and Satan the negative? Does the intensity of the praying have any effect on the outcome? Does the length of time one devotes to praying have any effect on the frequency with which one's prayers are answered? Do the words and phrases used in the prayer, either positive or negative, have any bearing on the success rate? Does the nature of the thing or things prayed for have any bearing on the prayer's success rate, either positive or negative prayers? Why or why not?" ~Robert A. Baker, Prayer Wars, Sceptical Briefs; <http://www.csicop.org/sb9709/baker.html>, September 1997.

Hitler's troops were often sprinkled with "Holy Water" by the Catholic priests as they were indoctrinated by both state and church to blindly follow all authority figures [political as well as ecclesiastical]. "Hitler, Goebbels, Himmler and most members of the party's 'Old Guard' were 'Catholics,' wrote M. Frederic Hoffet. 'It was not by accident that, because of its chiefs' religion, the National-socialist government was the most Catholic Germany ever had... This kinship between National-socialism and Catholicism is most striking if we study closely the propaganda methods and the interior organization of the party. On that subject, nothing is more instructive than Joseph Goebbels' works. He had been brought up in a Jesuit college and was a seminarian before devoting himself to literature and politics... Every page, every line of his writings recall the teaching of his masters; so he stresses obedience... The contempt for truth... 'Some lies are as useful as bread!' he proclaimed by virtue of a moral relativism extracted from Saint Ignatius of Loyola's writings..." ~Frederic Hoffet, L'Imperialisme Protestant, Flammarion, Paris 1948, pp.172 ss.

Hitler makes Jesus prayers mandatory in all schools under his administration under penalty of corporal punishment. Abortion was already illegal in pre-Hitler Germany, but Hitler went further by requiring all doctors to report to the government the circumstances of all miscarriages. He openly despised homosexuality and criminalized it. ~from The Religion of Hitler by John Patrick Michael Murphy, 1998.

Walter Schellenberg, former chief of the German counter-espionage, completed this confidence from the Fuhrer, after the war, "The S.S. organization had been constituted, by Himmler, according to the principles of the Jesuits' Order."

Hitler said in a 1922 speech. "It points me to the man who once in loneliness, surrounded by only a few followers, recognized these Jews for what they were and summoned me to fight against them. ... In boundless love, as a Christian and as a man, I read through the passage which tells us how the Lord rose at last in his might and seized the scourge to drive out of the Temple the brood of vipers and adders."

In "Mein Kampf," Hitler reiterates his position as he attacks what he calls the "Jewish Doctrine of Marxism."

Hitler writes: "Eternal Nature inexorably revenges the transgressions against her laws. Therefore, I believe today that I am acting in the sense of the Almighty Creator: By warding off the Jews, I am fighting for the Lord's Work." Hitler is only repeating the Christian sentiment so long prevalent across the centuries in the exploitation of a religious group perpetuated by the Church.

"The problem is that Hitler was all over the map when he talked about religion, including Christianity," says journalist Ron Rosenbaum, author of "Explaining Hitler: The Search for the Origins of His Evil."

"The eye of the Pagan philosopher was ever fixed upon virtue, the eye of the Christian teacher upon sin. The first sought to amend men by extolling the beauty of holiness, the second by awaking the sentiment of remorse." ~W.H. Lecky, European Morals, vol. ii. p. 4.

"How many evils have flowed from religion." ~Lucretius, De Renun Natua, 57 B.C.E.

When it was useful for him to appear Christian, he was, and this deception he learned to use in order to manipulate the masses to attain his goals. In private remarks he was more candid regarding his hatred of Christianity. Hitler said that an inner voice was calling him to redeem to redeem the German people and crush the Jews.

Christians continue to deny Hitler's Christianity but Hitler always called himself a Christian [usually when it suited him, politically]. "What people say about Hitler usually reveals more about their biases and beliefs than about those of Hitler," says Rosenbaum.

"The fantastic far-fetched doctrines of Christianity require absolute obedience, full compliance, and harmony in one conviction. One dissenter can cast doubt upon the Creed of millions. Thus the need for terror, fear and detestation; thus the persecutions; thus the torture chamber; thus the iron stake; thus the gallows; thus the forced labor camps; thus the banning of those individuals who pose a threat since their Christian God, in his omnipotence, chooses not to act speedily in the punishment of these wayward souls."

~E. Christopher Reyes, with apologies to Edward Abbey.

Many of the world's problems are "...Rooted in what we believe are the instructions we get from God to do things to people who are different from us...But just because people believe they're following God doesn't mean they're right...I do believe that even though Adolph Hitler preached a perverted form of Christianity, God did not want him to prevail." ~William Jefferson Clinton, President of the United States.

Hitler's hate was rooted in pseudo-scientific beliefs, and not Christian Doctrine or other religious faiths as he preached a racial hatred because it was easy to find the Jews guilty of not being true Germans as they were non-Christians, lacked German roots [persisted in speaking Hebrew], and he found it easy to use them as scapegoats for not giving full support to the war cause [full financial support during WWI].

Christians anxious to attack the Christian occult teachings of Hitler cite evidence that Hitler was a "Neo-Pagan terrorist" who hated God and envisioned himself as a god-like messiah. Atheists and agnostics blame Hitler's actions on his Roman Catholic upbringing and anti-Semites show evidence that Hitler may have actually been part Jewish. ~from Terry Mattingly www.tmat.net writer for the Scripps Howard News Service.

One cannot underestimate the effects of occultism on Hitler. Occult circles have long been known in the espionage world as covers for intelligence work and influence peddling. Hitler's spy system under Canaris and Heydrich were aware of these conduits, particularly from the direction of Britain, which had within its MI5.

A genius, probably next to that of Aristotle, the fanatical Christian Spaniards burned all of his works;

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

though Saint Aquinas was quite impressed by them, and Dante, in Canto IV, hailed him as one of the great figures of his age. Owing to the loss of many of his works and his need to avoid rousing the Moslem fanatics, who at one time also got him degraded and imprisoned, it is difficult to determine his precise position, but experts agree that he substituted a vague Pantheism or 'World Soul' for Aristotle's impersonal God and he did not believe in personal immortality.

The translation of some of his works into Latin by Michael Scotus for Emperor Frederic II presented a good deal of influence in the cities of North Italy, and was an important factor in the spread of skepticism, particularly as regards immortality, in them. ~See Renan, Averroes et l'Averroisme, 1852, and J. McCabe, Rationalists Encyclopaedia.

An intelligence agency, a department, known as the "Occult Bureau," cooperates with the Nazi secret societies, which were influenced by mystical and occult writers such as: Madame Blavatsky, Houston Stewart Chamberlain, Guido Von List, Lanz Von Liebenfels, Rudolf Steiner, George Gurdjieff, Karl Haushofer and Theodor Fritsch. Although Hitler later censured and ridiculed many of the occult, he did dedicate his book, "Mein Kampf," to his teacher Dietrich Eckart, a frequent visitor to Landsberg Prison while Hitler was writing "Mein Kampf."

With the help of Rudolf Hess, was General Karl Haushofer [founder of the Luminous Lodge or the Vril Society] a university professor and director of the Munich Institute of Geopolitics. Haushofer was inclined towards the esoteric as military attaché in Japan, he had studied Zen-Buddhism, and had gone through initiations at the hands of Tibetan Lamas. He became Hitler's second "Esoteric mentor." Haushofer's lodge's objective was to explore the origins of the Aryan race and to perform exercises in concentration to awaken the forces of "Vril."

Haushofer was also a student of the Russian magician and metaphysician, Gregor Ivanovich Gurdyev. Both Gurdjieff and Haushofer maintained that they had contacts with secret Tibetan Lodges that possessed the secrets of the "Superman." The lodge included Hitler, Alfred Rosenberg, Himmler, Goring, and Hitler's personal physician Dr. Morell. It is also known that Aleister Crowley and Gurdjieff sought contact with Hitler.

"The Jews are undoubtedly a race, but not human. They cannot be human in the sense of being an image of God, the Eternal. The Jews are the image of the Devil." ~Adolph Hitler, In his May 1923 speech at the Krone

Circus in Munich.

AD 1885-Hitler was baptized a Roman Catholic and attended Catholic schools and churches in Austria, and yet he wrote and stated [as he believed], that he was on a Divine Mission from God to destroy the Jews. He rejected Christianity, except when it served his purpose[s].

In April of 1938 Hitler further states, "I believe that it was God's will to send a youth from here into the Reich, to let him grow up, to raise him to be the leader of the nation so as to enable him to lead back his homeland into the Reich... In three days the Lord has smitten them... And to me the grace was given on the day of the betrayal to be able to unite my homeland with the Reich... I would now give thanks to Him who let me return to my homeland in order that I might now lead it into my German Reich. Tomorrow, may every German recognize the hour, and measure its import and bow in humility before the Almighty who in a few weeks has wrought a miracle upon us."

In August of 1940, an unusually large gathering of the German Bishop's met at Fulda, and drew up resolutions, which the Vatican ordered kept secret. The German press reported that it received copies of them, and they contained effusive congratulations to Hitler on his great triumph on the western front; to be published when it was completed with the fall of Great Britain.

The British Catholic press, Tablet, September 21, said that "Very important and positive decisions had been reached, which will result in a much closer re-approachment between the Church and the Reich," and it pointed out that the chief speaker, who closed the conference, Msgr. Garkowsky, was the Bishop appointed by Herr Goering to represent Catholics on the State Council.

But, Britain refused to be bludgeoned into surrender, and the Pope forbade publication of these "Very important decisions."

"We want to prevent our Germany from suffering, as Another did, the death upon the Cross." ~Adolf

In December the Catholic press, Herald, January 31, 1941, announced that their Bishops were to meet at Berlin "For exceptional purposes," and this announcement is coupled with a warning that unscrupulous rulers had a way of misusing ecclesiastical utterances.

On March 30th the Vatican radio reported that the Archbishop of Freiburg had warned German Catholics in a pastoral letter that there were anti-religious tendencies one very hand: that the Nazis had set up a National Church in Slovakia and proposed to do the same in Germany, and that their "Pagan tendencies" had found expression in Alsace, Austria, and Sudeten Germany. ~ From the work of Joseph McCabe The Pope Keeps To The Plot While The World Curses It, as Edited by E. Haldeman-Julius.

In the book, "Hitler's Secret Conversations 1941-1944," published by Farrar, Straus and Young, Inc., First Edition, 1953, we have the following quotes from the one of the twentieth century's most vicious and destructive tyrants.

July 1941: "National Socialism and religion cannot exist together.... The heaviest blow that ever struck humanity was the coming of Christianity. Bolshevism is Christianity's illegitimate child. Both are inventions of the Jew. The deliberate lie, in the matter of religion, was introduced into the world by Christianity... Let it not be said that Christianity brought man the life of the soul, for that evolution was in the natural order of things." ~Hitler.

On October of 1941: "Christianity is a rebellion against natural law, a protest against nature. Taken to its logical extreme, Christianity would mean the systematic cultivation of the human failure." On October of 1941: "The best thing is to let Christianity die a natural death... When understanding of the universe has become widespread... Christian doctrine will be convicted of absurdity... Christianity has reached the peak of absurdity... And that's why someday its structure will collapse... The only way to get rid of Christianity is to allow it to die little by little... Christianity the liar... We'll see to it that the Churches cannot spread abroad teachings in conflict with the interests of the State."

On the 19th of October, 1941: "The reason why the ancient world was so pure, light and serene was that it knew nothing of the two great scourges: the pox and Christianity."

21st of October, 1941: "Originally, Christianity was merely an incarnation of Bolshevism, the destroyer... The decisive falsification of Jesus' doctrine was the work of St. Paul. He gave himself to this work... for the purposes of personal exploitation... Didn't the world see, carried on right into the Middle Ages, the same old system of martyrs, tortures, faggots? Of old, it was in the name of Christianity. Today, it's in the name of Bolshevism. Yesterday the instigator was Saul: the instigator today, Mardochai. Saul was changed into St. Paul, and Mardochai into Karl Marx. By exterminating this pest, we shall do humanity a service of which our soldiers can have no idea."

13th of December, 1941: "Christianity is an invention of sick brains: one could imagine nothing more senseless, nor any more indecent way of turning the idea of the Godhead into a mockery... When all is said, we have no reason to wish that the Italians and Spaniards should free themselves from the drug of Christianity. Let's be the only people who are immunized against the disease."

14th of December, 1941: "Karl, [Marx], with noblest of intentions, wanted to attempt a synthesis between National Socialism and Christianity. I don't believe the thing's possible, and I see the obstacle in Christianity itself... Pure Christianity-the Christianity of the catacombs-is concerned with translating Christian doctrine into facts. It leads quite simply to the annihilation of mankind. It is merely whole-hearted Bolshevism, under a tinsel of metaphysics."

On April 9th he states, "There is something very unhealthy about Christianity."

27th of February, 1942: "It would always be disagreeable for me to go down to posterity as a man who made concessions in this field. I realize that man, in his imperfection, can commit innumerable errors-but to devote myself deliberately to errors that is something I cannot do. I shall never come personally to terms with the Christian lie. Our epoch in the next 200 years will certainly see the end of the disease of Christianity... My regret will have been that I couldn't... Behold." ~By John Baskette [but the information came from Marty Helgesen in a soc. religion.christian post].

In Hitler Memoirs of a Confidant, Hitler reveals himself through conversation to colleagues from a conference on economic policy. In it Hitler is reported to have spoken, glowingly, about raising the "Treasures of the living Christ," "The persecution of the true Christians and sanctimonious churches that have placed themselves between God and man and to turn away from the anti-Christian, smug individualism of the past," and, "To educate the youth in particular in the spirit of those of Christ's words that we must interpret anew: love one another; be considerate of your fellow man; remember that each of you is not alone a creature of God, but that you are all brothers!" ~Hitler's Table Talk And Other Extraneous Sources by Jim Walker, Turner, Ch. 23.

The "New World Order Religion," is what Hitler detested, but cooperated with Church officials when it benefited him. As we review history we see the close cooperation between Hitler and the Vatican in the slaughter of many innocents in Croatia, we see the true character of Roman Catholicism, and we can sense the danger humanity will discover for itself if the Vatican assumes dictatorial leadership of the global New World Order Religion.

Hitler intended to rewrite the Bible, remove all Judaism from the Bible, and had his emissaries sent all over the world to seek out the true Master race of Biblical times, which he believed to be the Aryan race. New quotations, and new Scriptural passages were created by his henchmen.

"The decisive falsification of Jesus' doctrine was the work of Saint Paul. He gave himself to this work with subtlety and for purposes of personal exploitation. For the Galilean's object was to liberate His country from Jewish oppression. He set Himself against Jewish capitalism, and that's why the Jews liquidated Him." ~Hitler, Table-Talk, p. 76.

"Christ was an Aryan, and Saint Paul used his doctrine to mobilize the criminal underworld and thus organize a proto-Bolshevism." ~Hitler, Table-Talk, p. 143. Few know that Hitler will seek to enjoin the services of Mexico in order to occupy American forces away from the European front, "Had they entered the war on the side of Germany the US would have invaded within weeks and taken the country. Mexico had (and has) a relatively small army and navy and both are ill-equipped to fight a modern war. Any other nation in the Americas would have faced similar circumstances; their small armed forces facing a huge US force within weeks of throwing into the war." ~article, Did Hitler Try To Incite Mexico To Invade The US During WW2, Barbara Tuchman's The Zimmerman Telegraph.

The Vatican also obliged in the mass extermination of Jews by turning the other cheek [pretending it knew nothing], because it served the Church's financial purpose at the time and it felt assured that the conspiracy would not be discovered.

While individual Catholics risked their lives to save the Jews from Nazi concentration camps and total annihilation, the Church, as a whole, did very little. Churchill said, speaking of Germany, in a carefully prepared broadcast: "As her armies advance whole districts are being exterminated. Scores of thousands, literally scores of thousands, of executions in cold blood are being perpetrated by the German police-troops. Since the Mogul invasion of Europe in the 16th century there has never been methodical, merciless butchery on such a scale or approaching such a scale."

The common decent, Christian, German soldier is also sickened by the infamies committed by the Nazi trained troops. A letter to his wife that was found on the body of a German soldier reads, "I hate the day when I was born in Germany. I am shocked by what goes on in our army in Russia. Vice, loot, violence, murder, murder, and murder. We destroy old men, women, and children and kill simply for the sake of killing . . . If I survive the Russian bullets and shells I will, in my present mood, perish from a German bullet." ~From, The War And Papal Intrigue: How The New Pope Talked Peace And Worked For War, by Joseph McCabe

The Catholic Conspiracy: "Roman Catholic intelligence operations assist thousands of Nazi war criminals such as Adolph Eichmann; Franz Stangl, commandant of Treblinka; Walter Rauf, inventor of the 'Mobile gas chamber'; Klaus Barbie, 'Butcher of Lyons';" and Ante Pavelic, the bloody tyrant of Croatia, to escape from justice via South American and other neutral countries.

"Intelligent men no longer believe in miracles; they were invented by the priesthood to humble the masses." ~E. Christopher Reyes, translation adapted from King Alfonso X [Alfonso the Wise; 1226-1284; King of Castile]

A little known fact: Pope Pius XII, personally authorized the smuggling of Nazi war criminals, which was directed by his political advisor Giovanni Montini, later to become known as Pope Paul VI. After World War I, the Roman Catholic states of Croatia and Slovenia united with the Eastern Orthodox states of Serbia to form the nation of Yugoslavia.

The Croats formed a terrorist group called the Ustashi, which was aimed at the Serbs, headed by Ante Pavelic, and financed by the Italians via Mussolini. King Alexander I of Yugoslavia, while visiting France in 1934, is assassinated in Marseilles by Pavelic's henchmen.

Pavelic is convicted in both the French and Yugoslav courts, but escapes to Italy where Mussolini gives him protection and refuses to surrender him. In 1941, the Nazis invade Yugoslavia and Pavelic joins them, with Hitler rewarding Pavelic by making him the head of the new "Independent State of Croatia."

"His [Pavelic] minister of religion was Andrya Artukovic, another Roman Catholic. Then began a war of suppression or extermination of all Serbs and Jews. Nearly 70,000 of the 80,000 Jews in the new state were killed or forced to flee, their property being confiscated. Official records and photographs show that Pavelic and Archbishop Stepinac were closely associated in governmental, social, and ecclesiastical affairs. Stepinac was appointed Supreme Military Apostolic Vicar of the Ustashi Army led by Pavelic. He was, therefore, in a position to know of the atrocities that were constantly taking place. In May, 1941, after innumerable massacres had been committed, Pavelic went to Rome and was received by Pope Pius XII, and on the same occasion signed a treaty with Mussolini." ~Boettner, Roman Catholicism.

John Loftus, an attorney who has worked for the Justice Department's Nazi Hunting Unit, and who is also an expert witness before Congress, along with Mark Aarons, international award winning investigative reporter with the "Austria Broadcasting Corp.," corroborate Boettner's historical facts in their book, "Unholy Trinity," p. 70-87.

Pavelic had many reasons for unease, among them the horrible massacres of the Serbs, Jews and Gypsies over the previous four years; 500,000 innocent civilians being slaughtered at his personal command. Many had been killed using extremely torturous methods; eyes being gouged out, limbs severed, intestines and other internal organs ripped from their bodies while still alive. Some were slaughtered like animals, while some were simply burned alive.

Scott and John Lee Anderson in their book, "Inside The League" by Dodd Mead and Co. 1986, provide more details of the atrocities committed upon the innocent. "The Ustashi competed among themselves on how many of 'the enemy' they could kill. In order to impress the 'Poglavnik/Pavelic' and to be promoted or singled out for 'heroism,' the groups would pose with their victims before cameras. Captured photographs show the Ustashi beheading a Serb with an axe, driving a saw through the neck of another, and carrying a head through the streets of Zagreb. The Ustashi are jovial and crowding together into the pictures. Some Ustase even collected the eyes of Serbs they had killed, sending them, when they had enough, to the Poglavnik for his inspection, or displaying them [and other human organs] in the cafes of Zagreb. The Pavelic can see no reasons why they should not be greeted by both the Church and British leaders as prominent Catholics in the struggle against 'Atheistic Bolshevism.' Aware that Pope Pius XII and his senior advisers still held charitable opinions of the Pavelic militant Catholics, the Pope receives Pavelic, but not without the British Foreign Office reacting in outrage, calling Pope Pius XII 'The greatest moral coward of our age.'"

More than 100,000 Orthodox Serbian men, women and children are killed by the Ustashi, the same year that Pope Pius XII met with Pavelic in Rome. 250 Eastern Orthodox churches are destroyed or given over to Roman Catholics for parishes and convents [Documents requesting and authorizing such transfers are now in the state prosecutor's office at Zagreb and Sarajevo, bearing the signature of the Roman Catholic Archbishop Stepinac].

On February, 1942, a "Te Deum" is sung in Stepinac's Church in Zagreb, the capital of Croatia at the time, with special honors being given to Pavelic. In a pastoral letter, Stepinac declared that in spite of complexities, what they were seeing in Croatia was the 'Lord's Work,' and called on his priests to support Pavelic. ~Roman Catholicism, by Boettner, p. 436.

During the war, Pavelic had forcibly converted tens of thousands of Serbian Eastern Orthodox, under penalty of death to Catholicism. Pavelic was able to keep his death camps operating as the war was ending even though the German death camps were being dismantled by the advancing Allied forces, but eventually Pavelic and the Roman Catholic priests who ran the death camps had to run for their lives.

The Yugoslav courts sentenced Stepinac to sixteen years imprisonment for his Nazi-Fascist collaboration [he only served 5 years of this sentence]. Charges for which Stepinac was found guilty, "A parade of prosecution witnesses testified at Zagreb, on October 5, 1946, that Catholic priests armed with pistols went out to convert Orthodox Serbs and massacred them, ... Most of the witnesses were Croat Catholic peasants and laborers.” ~Walter Montano, pages 237-238, of Behind the Purple Curtain.

“One witness said six hundred and fifty Serbs were taken into a Church under false pretenses, and then were stabbed and beaten to death by Ustashi members after the doors were locked. [The Roman Catholic] Archbishop Stepinac was convicted on all principal counts of aiding the Axis, the puppet Croatian regime of Ante Pavelic, and the terrorists Ustashi, and of glorifying the Ustashi in the Catholic press, pastoral letters, and speeches.” ~Walter Montano, pages 237-238, of Behind the Purple Curtain

The Roman Catholic Church is not to go down without a fight and denounces the sentence imposed against Archbishop Stepinac which is answered by the Vatican's “Ossevatore Romano,” censoring it as “Ignominious” and stating that the “Trial was a trial against the Catholic Church” [The Truth Hurts]. (Ibid., 238) While Francis Cardinal Spellman, Archbishop of New York [Spellman was involved in politics all of his life, trained by the Jesuits at Fordham and trained by Jesuits at the American College in Rome], says that Archbishop Stepinac was “A victim of the forces that seek to destroy men's freedom, ruin America, and dominate the world.” ~Ibid., 238.

He also stated that the aide, the Yugoslav Archbishop, had “Defended the cause of true liberty for his hungry and harassed people” through the war, adding that the person and principles of Archbishop Stepinac have been “Violated.” “The Roman Catholic Church is quite adept and accomplished at rewriting history, for it has plenty of experience. Archbishop Spellman, and the Vatican, white washed some of the most heinous crimes of the century, by a few words that resonate gloriously, profess to protect the faith, and even attempt to sound nationalistic and patriotic. The whitewashing of this Hitleresque genocide continues by the American Roman Catholic leadership as Bishop Charles F. Buddy of San Diego, California, wires President Truman requesting a straight forward fearless protest of the infamous persecution of Archbishop Stepinac and the Catholic Church in Yugoslavia. Liberty-loving Americans are not indifferent to the vicious travesty intended to discredit this great patriot who has valiantly championed the rights of his people.” ~from Behind the Purple Curtain, Montano, p. 239. For Hitler's beliefs in the justification of genocide refer to: 1 Samuel 15:2-3, Joshua 10:40, Deuteronomy 2:31-34, and for support of racism, see: Matthew 15:21-28 and Mark 7:24-30.

Now, we are told it is OK to “Champion the rights” of one people by “Annihilating” another people? The Roman Catholic Church continues to defend Archbishop Stepinac until his death in 1960 and even attempted to portray him as a Martyr, Cardinal Spellman, in New York, naming a parochial high school after him. ~from Roman Catholicism by Boettner, 437.

“God, who directs the destiny of nations and controls the hearts of Kings, has given us Ante Pavelic and moved the leader of a friendly and allied people, Adolph Hitler, to use his victorious troops to disperse our oppressors... Glory be to God, our gratitude to Adolf Hitler and loyalty to our Poglavnik, Ante Pavelic.” ~from A Woman Rides The Beast by Hunt, p. 301.

Is it no wonder that there is now a fringe group that believes that The New World Order of Anti-Christ is led by none other than Pope John Paul II?

With the Archbishop Stepinac daring to speak gloriously about the murderous campaign of genocide against whole populations [ethnic cleansing], which includes men, women, and children, how can one believe when one hears that the Roman Catholic Church has changed and yet the Pope is preparing for another genocidal campaign during the coming New World Order of Anti-Christ.

Pope John Paul II has already reinstated the old “Office of the Inquisition,” [in 1983], which is led by Cardinal Ratzinger. Why would the Pope revive the office that led the infamous Inquisitions from 1550-1850, a time period in which over 8 million “Born Again Christians,” were martyred [Protestants, Presbyterians, etc.]

A Hindu speaking to a “Born again” Christian, “Of course I am born again. And again... And again... And again.” ~Anonymous

Is the Pope preparing the membership for the Biblically prophesied holocaust [Revelation 13:16-18], when the “False Prophet” will cause all the peoples of the world to take the Mark of the Beast? The Church's policy regarding freedom of religion has been made quite clear; when they are in the minority, they want freedom from persecution; when in the majority they want the freedom to persecute. ~cf. Romans 16:17; II Peter 2:1.

AD 1885-The Catholic Church has demonstrated throughout their history that they have the capacity to persecute and has exercised this force religiously when in power. Mussolini, Hitler, Pavelic, and all the priests and Catholics that assisted them were all Roman Catholics, yet none were ever excommunicated, or even severely censured for their actions.

History is replete with Christian martyrs however you will not read of the lost souls who fought against Christianity in their futile efforts to retain their own god[s]. The Roman Church today proclaims freedom of religion [yet they will condemn all other religions but the Roman Catholic, which they state is the one and only True Faith]. The Church today proclaims freedom of the press, yet they still have their Forbidden Index of books no good Catholic should dare read.

Is there a New Christian World Order in the not too far horizon? Pat Robertson said, "If the Catholics and the Evangelicals would join together, they could make the right decisions for this nation, for the world." Pat Robertson also declared that the separation of church and state is not an American principle but is found in Article 53 of the constitution of the Soviet Union.

"The next time believers tell you that 'Separation of Church and State' does not appear in our founding document, tell them to stop using the word 'Trinity.' The word 'Trinity' appears nowhere in the Bible. Neither does 'Rapture,' or 'Second Coming,' or 'Original Sin.' If they are still unfazed [or un-phrased], by this, then add Omniscience, Omnipresence, Supernatural, Transcendence, Afterlife, Deity, Divinity, Theology, Monotheism, Missionary, Immaculate Conception, Christmas, Christianity, Evangelical, Fundamentalist, Methodist, Catholic, Pope, Cardinal, Catechism, Purgatory, Penance, Transubstantiation, Excommunication, Dogma, Chastity, Unpardonable Sin, Infallibility, Inerrancy, Incarnation, Epiphany, Sermon, Eucharist, the Lord's Prayer, Good Friday, Doubting Thomas, Advent, Sunday School, Dead Sea, Golden Rule, Moral, Morality, Ethics, Patriotism, Education, Atheism, Apostasy, Conservative [Liberalis in], Capital Punishment, Monogamy, Abortion, Pornography, Homosexual, Lesbian, Fairness, Logic, Republic, Democracy, Capitalism, Funeral, Decalogue, or Bible." ~Dan Barker, Losing Faith in Faith: From Preacher to Atheist, Madison, WI: FFRF, 1992, p. 109. Cf. Luke 6:31.

It is sad to say that many ministers are quite neglectful in their history. The fact being that the modern Soviet state came into being after the Russian Revolution of 1917. The Soviet Constitution has been rewritten several times, and more recent versions include the American approach to guarantees of freedom of speech, press, religion and assembly.

These provisions, as in the Philippine Constitution under its 1987 ratified Constitution, have not been obeyed by the government. Thomas Jefferson coined the phrase, "Wall of separation between church and state" in 1802, a full 145 years before the Soviet provision was written.

The Church proclaims forgiveness, yet still retains the assets acquired by ill-gotten means. "... They strengthen also the hands of evildoers, that none doth return from his wickedness: they are all of them unto me as Sodom and their inhabitants thereof as Gomorrah." ~Jeremiah 23:14.

What are the other world religions to think when they hear this? The Vatican-Nazi connection exposed the deep inner darkness of Catholicism and hopefully left us a little wiser regarding the true nature of the Roman Catholic system. Truth is definitely not her aspiration; rather, the Church appears to seek tyranny and dictatorship, under the cloak of religious truth!

Was God speaking of the Catholic Church in Rome when He said, "For your hands are defiled with blood, and your fingers with iniquity; your lips have spoken lies, your tongue hath muttered perverseness. None calleth for justice, nor any pleadeth for truth: they trust in vanity, and speak lies; they conceive mischief, and bring forth iniquity...The way of peace they know not; and there is no judgment in their goings: they have made them crooked paths: whosoever goeth therein shall not know peace." ~Isaiah 59:3-8.

Pavelic, masquerading as a monk, hid in a Catholic monastery, until he could escape from his crimes against humanity. A testimony to the Catholic hierarchy's "Justice" for all, and described in the words of Avro Manhattan in the "Vatican's Holocaust." ~page 9, Ozark Books, 1986.

"The uniqueness of the Independent Catholic State of Croatia lies precisely in this: that it provided a model, in miniature, of what the Catholic Church, had she the power, would like to see in the West and, indeed, everywhere. As such it should be carefully scrutinized. For its significance...is of greatest import to all the freedom loving peoples of the world." ~from Rebecca Sexton, former Catholics For Christ.

Whether or not Hitler would have attained power without the assistance of the Church, he did in fact attain it with the help of the Pope. Fritz Thyssen, a Roman Catholic and an industrialist, financed the Nazis, and the title for an article he wrote in the Arbeiterzeitung, "Pope Pius XII, When Nuncio, Carried Hitler to Power," clearly shows his inclinations.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

Is the Roman Catholic Church practicing the faith of Jesus or is it but an ancient Paganism adorned in Christian names, metaphors and stories? Is Roman Catholicism continuing where it left off in the Dark Ages when all who dared to disagree were confronted with an authority figure that would enforce penance for the heretics? Pope, John Paul II is the spiritual side of the New World Order, for the Roman Catholic Church, and some factions now declare the Pope as the False Church. -Revelations 13.

The Nazis made significant efforts on their interpretation of Jesus, similar to the 2nd through 4th century Christians, so as not to publicize the Jewish side of Jesus so they could continue to retain him for their God. So much so, that in 1941 Hitler tells his army adjutant General Gerhard Engel, "I shall remain a Catholic forever."

Hitler, influenced by the book, "The Protocols of the Elders of Zion," believed that the Jews having lost their opportunity to retain control of a land of their own were conspiring to dominate the world, and this was one of the reasons they retained their own language. Hitler grew up in Austria, in a culture where religious hatred of Jews was commonplace, Martin Luther, the first Protestant, stated, "All Jews should be driven from Germany."

Europe has not changed, Lech Walesa, won control of Poland on a platform of anti-Semitism. Hitler's last offensive of WWII was known as the "Battle of the Bulge," the code name Hitler gave this plan was "Christ Rose."

The name was changed to "Watch," on the Rhine because he assumed his enemies, Americans, English, and French, primarily Christians, would be able to speculate as to what it meant. At the end of WWII the Catholic Church [Vatican] was deeply engrossed in helping Nazis war criminals escape from Europe to South America, the most prominent being Adolf Eichmann.

In the Concordat of 1933, between Nazi Germany and the Catholic Church, religious leaders were willing victims to blackmail with Pope Pius XI agreeing not to interfere with the state as long as the state collected a religious tax from all church members. This tax remains in effect today. It is 9 percent of the base income.

America, through strict immigration laws, turned its back on the Jews. ~See A Criminal History of Christianity.

Reichsmarschall Herman Goering said of Hitler: "Only a Catholic could unite Germany." Nazi Party Secretary Martin Bormann's wife remarked, "I hope the children realize Charlamagne came to save us from the Jews." Facts that the Catholic Church conceals: When Hitler marched into Vienna on March 13, 1938, all the church bells in Austria rang, and a Swastika flag waved over the ancient Cathedral.

Two days later Cardinal Innitzer had a cordial interview with Hitler, and the Cardinal and four of his leading Bishops issued a manifesto calling for all the "Good" Austrian Catholics to vote for Hitler in the coming plebiscite.

They were now all Catholics in Church law... To support Hitler, calling him the man "Whose struggle against Bolshevism and for the power, honor, and unity of Germany corresponds to the voice of Divine Providence." The Cardinal even wrote "Heil Hitler" after his signature. In reply to Catholic complaints of Cardinal Innitzer's conduct, on April 1st, a Jesuit speaker on the Vatican Radio censors the Austrian Cardinal's statements, and regrets that he had not recognized "The wolf in sheep's clothing."

This brought German protests and the Vatican organ then declares that the radio talk was not official. ~For more information regarding this conspiracy, read the Catholic writer, C. Rankin, in his flattering biography of the Pope, Pacelli, in "The Pope Speaks," 1940.

The Vatican Church had successfully walked on both sides of the fence without receiving the ire of the western "Free" nations. In the summer of 1940, Hitler returns to Berlin, and all the church bells in Germany rang for one hour.

Upon hearing that World War II had begun, Hitler stated, "I fell on my knees and thanked Almighty God." Before lunch the schoolchildren of Germany were required to recite an invocation which began, "Fuhrer, my Fuhrer, bequeathed to me by the Lord..."

At Hitler's fiftieth birthday celebration, masses were held in every German church "To implore God's blessing upon Fuhrer and people," and the Catholic Bishop of Mainz called upon Catholics in his diocese to pray specifically for "The Fuhrer and Chancellor, the inspirer, enlarger and protector of the Reich." Pope Pius XI also sent his congratulations.

Upon the final decision to exterminate the Jews, Hitler specified they should be killed humanely, but without a twinge of conscience [for Hitler was a member in good standing with the Roman Church and accepted its teaching that the Jews were God's killers]. Hitler reiterates his feelings regarding his Christian upbringing often.

"My feeling as a Christian points me to my Lord and Savior as a fighter. It points me to the man who once in loneliness, surrounded by only a few followers, recognized these Jews for what they are and summoned men to fight against them and who, God's truth, was greatest not as a sufferer but as a fighter. In boundless love, as a Christian and as a man, I read through the passage, which tells us how the Lord rose at last in his might, and seized the scourge to drive out of the Temple, the brood of vipers and adders. How terrific was the fight for the world against the Jewish poison." ~Adolph Hitler.

In his closing speech at Nuremberg in September 1937, Hitler compared the clash between National Socialism and Jewish Bolshevism to the struggle between Christianity and Mohammedanism. During the speech, using his own logic and persuasion, Hitler felt he had "Proved" the Jewish world conspiracy and turned the Jews into Arabs.

AD1885-In the "Protocols of the Elders of Zion," the heads of the twelve tribes of Israel are said to have met with the Devil in a cemetery in Prague. Hitler's disciple, Aaron, is recognized as a specialist for his work in undermining Christianity by spreading freethinking and skepticism.

Hitler also insisting that the "Protocols" were not a forgery. Pope Pius XI's attitude regarding the killings was not blurred, while taking no definite stand on the German invasion of the Soviet Union, Orthodox Christians, he made it clear that he backed the Nazi fight against Jewish Bolshevism, describing it as "High-minded gallantry in defense of Christian culture." "Great Britain... Which [Hitler told Field Marshall Rundstedt] must be looked on, together with the Catholic Church, as one of the cornerstones of Western civilization."

"I (Hitler) can only be grateful to Providence that it trusted me with the leadership in this historic struggle... An historical revision on a unique scale has been imposed on us by the Creator."

When writing to Prime Minister von Kahr of Bavaria in 1920, Rudolf Hess, the man who was to become Deputy Fuhrer, stated, "I know Herr Hitler very well personally and am quite close to him. He has a rarely honorable, pure character, full of profound kindness, is religious, a good Catholic."

Hitler visited Berlin for six weeks in the summer of 1921, and came away condemning the mockery of family life and the decay of religion. The frequency of religious metaphors and symbology in his rhetoric reflects his childhood Christian upbringing and his religious intolerance: recollections of his experience as acolyte in Lambach monastery, when he was stirred to the depths by images of suffering and despair against a background of triumphant belief in salvation. "By defending myself against the Jew, I am fighting for the work of the Lord," Hitler declared in Mein Kampf. Hitler expounded the identity of Judaism, Christianity, and Bolshevism by reference to the Biblical Scriptures. ~Isaiah 19:2-3 and Exodus 12:38.

He felt that the Jews had been expelled from Egypt because they had tried to produce a revolutionary mood by inciting the rabble with Humanitarian phrases. . . From this it followed that Moses was the first leader of Bolshevism. . . Thus, Hitler argued that the Old Testament already provided a pattern of Jewish assault upon the superior, creative race [Arian], a pattern repeated again and again down the ages.

He, Hitler, would complete "... The work, which Christ had begun but could not finish." Hitler felt his party must build its leadership pyramid after the model of the church, "On a broad pedestal of... Political parish priests who stand in the midst of the people." The pyramid itself must "Rise above the tiers of the Kreisleiter and Gauleiter to the body of Senators and finally to the Leader-Pope."

He compared the gauleiters with Bishops, and future senators with cardinals, one of those present reported; and similarly he transferred the concepts of authority, obedience, and faith from the spiritual to the secular realms in a series of parallels by saying without a trace of irony, that he did not, "... Wish to contest the Holy Father in Rome his claim to mental—or is the word spiritual—infallibility on questions of faith, I don't know much about that. But I think I know a great deal more about politics. Therefore I hope that the Holy Father henceforth will not contest my claim. And here with I now lay claim, for myself and successors in the leadership of the National Socialist German Workers' Party, to infallibility. I hope the world will bow to that as quickly as it has bowed to the Holy Father's claim." ~Adolf Hitler.

The sub-liminal hatred of Christianity had finally taken root in the personage of Hitler who mastered crowd control, and a Hamburg schoolmistress wrote in April 1932 that she had witnessed scenes of "Moving faith" and Hitler struck her as a religious rather than political leader. His success with the masses was above all a phenomenon of the psychology of religion.

He spoke less to people's political convictions than to their spiritual state of mind. He achieved what he called, "An encroachment upon man's freedom of will." In his February 1, 1933, radio speech, "Proclamation to German People" Hitler began by saying "The Almighty has withheld his blessing from our people" since the loss of World War I in November 1918.

He spoke of a fostering of "Christianity as the foundation of our national morality, and the family as the basis of racial and political life," and went on to make a pious appeal (prayer) for God's blessing on the work. Speaking in early 1933 in the Berlin Sportpalast, Hitler prayed the following: "...Rock-hard conviction that sooner or later the hour will come in which the millions who hate us today will stand behind us and together with us will hail what we have jointly created, toilsomely struggled for, bitterly paid for: the new German Reich of greatness and honor and power and glory and justice. Amen!"

"Amen," a title of the Egyptian God who was Osiris' father, was invoked at the end of every Egyptian prayer.

One group frequently overlooked in the WWII mass killings are atheists. Adolf Hitler, in Mein Kampf, made plain his Catholic feelings on abortion, "I'll put an end to the idea that a woman's body belongs to her. . . Nazi ideals demand that the practice of abortion shall be exterminated with a strong hand."

Hitler sentences the so-called Aryan women who had abortions to hard labor after the first offense, to death after the second.

The seeds sown by Martin Luther would reach its climax in the Third Reich, when German Protestants showed themselves to be particularly receptive to Nazi anti-Semitism.

Adolf Hitler, an Austrian-born Catholic educated in Linz, who had arrived in Munich before the First World War, was the heir of an age-old tradition of Christian anti-Semitism which had changed into biological racism with Hitler's teaching of a Master Race. He propagated and borrowed freely from Christian liturgy, from the hierarchical structure of the Catholic Church and the demonological view of Judaism as a Satanic force, which had its roots in the Middle Ages.

In his early years as political agitator in Bavaria Hitler frequently played on his own messianic role as a militant Germanic Savior bearing a sword rather than a crown of thorns, who would drive the Jewish capitalists from the Temple of the Lord.

"The task, which Christ began but did not finish." ~Hitler told a Munich audience in 1926, I will complete.

In Mein Kampf, which Hitler had written, two years earlier, "That in defending myself against the Jews I am acting for the Lord." Without the irrational beliefs inculcated by centuries of Christian dogma and reinforced by xenophobic, nationalist and Germanic racial mythology, Hitler's anti-Semitism, and the reverberation, which it found throughout Europe, would have been impossible and inconceivable. ~from Richard E. Smith, Kansas Foundation member.

The progressively ruthless persecution and claims of superiority over the Jews was meant to gain the German people to this task of world domination. The Nazis established extermination camps to eradicate whole populations with the SS systematically gassing millions of Jews and thousands of Serbs, Gypsies, Roma and captured Soviets [this atrocity would come back to haunt them when the Soviets drove into Berlin, thousands of Berliners taking their lives rather than risk being captured by them].

Two Extermination Centers operated in concentration camps under the authority of the Auschwitz-Birkenau and Lublin-Majdanek [WVHA]. Five were operated in camps established by regional SS and police leaders: Sobibór, and Treblinka in eastern Poland; Kulmhof [Chelmo] in Western Poland; and Semlin, Serbia. It is estimated that over Six Million people perished in the Nazi camps. Walter Stein, a native of Venice and a British intelligence agent, became one of the world's foremost authorities on "Nazi Occult" activity outside of the party itself.

Stein soon became worried over developments in Germany, and Hitler's rise to power coincided directly with his initiation into "The Secret Doctrine," a gathering of the most elite and powerful Magés in the world at that time. The core of the Nazi party leadership was subject to powerful occultists. Stein realizing that although they had studied occultism together, Hitler had ventured beyond the shadowed path of dark magic.

Stein, knowing that Hitler's admission into "The Doctrine" could be disastrous for all those who opposed him, with his power and a cadre of dark mystics, Hitler's Nazi Germany had a secret weapon the Allied forces were not prepared to challenge. The Nazi mystics were aware of Walter Stein's presence, and in AD 1933 he was forced to flee to England, narrowly escaping forced service into Germany's "Nazi Occult Bureau."

Arriving in England, Stein informs Winston Churchill of the looming danger posed by Hitler's Cosmic Occultists. Action had to be taken to either diminish Nazi progress in Esoteric matters or realize a way to counteract it. Stein uncovered confirmation, while spying, Hitler's English intelligence network was quite extensive, and that there was little hope of an English counter-occult program remaining secreted from Nazi spies.

Churchill contacted President Roosevelt and asked the Americans for assistance, arranging a meeting between the President Roosevelt and Stein. President Roosevelt, skeptical, decided to allow no stone to be left unturned in his efforts to defeat the Nazis, and one of the President's most trusted advisors was placed at Stein's disposal for monitoring and analyzing Nazi Occult activity and initiate counter-measures. This group became known among its participants as "The Watch."

The Watch was a sundry collection of thirteen individuals, composed of high-ranking Military Intelligence officers and scientists, the exceptions being a Catholic Archbishop and a U.S. Senator, whose only resolve was to curb occult power and influence, as well as win a war.

Roosevelt kept the existence of The Watch secret, probably out of fear of embarrassment, even from the American government and military, to avoid the inevitable public backlash in the event that government-sanctioned occult research was ever exposed.

"Religion is based, I think, primarily and mainly upon fear. It is partly the terror of the unknown, and partly the wish to feel that you have a kind of elder brother who will stand by you in all your troubles and disputes. Fear is the basis of the whole thing, fear of the mysterious, fear of defeat, fear of death. Fear is the parent of cruelty, and therefore it is no wonder if cruelty and religion have gone hand-in-hand" ~Bertrand Russell, June 3, 1927.

In the next decade the Watch was consistently and chillingly successful in their pursuits so much so that only Stein was unshaken by discoveries that threatened the astuteness of the other members of The Watch. The conspirators used their influence and status to fund and conduct research into the occult, mysticism, astrology, and gradually expanding to all areas of paranormal and psychic investigation to keep the Axis occult power in restraint.

The Watch's wartime operations involved the assassination of many leading Nazi occultists and the recovery of valuable artifacts of mystical significance, including the famed "Spear of Destiny." "The Spear," which pierced the side of Jesus while on the cross, as described in John's Gospel, wielded by a Roman centurion, named Gaius Cassius, or Longinus [Longinus supposedly used the spear on Jesus to prove he was already dead, having seen other soldiers finishing off his fellow crucifixion victims].

Mystery surrounds the spear, which was already an ancient talisman of power, previous owners having included Joshua, Saul and Herod the Great. By 1945, The Watch had become a powerful organization while remaining hidden from the world. The end of the World War II was due in part to the success of The Watch's endeavors in knowing when Hitler would make strong military advances based on his astrological charts and in destroying Nazi occult power.

Debriefing Axis scientists and reviewing German military records, the conspirators learned that the visual sightings by Allied airmen of alleged German experimental aircraft, dubbed "Foo Fighters", was erroneous. Axis command records revealed that Luftwaffe pilots reported identical aircraft, and assumed them to be Allied experimental aircraft.

This evidence, along with similar intelligence uncovered from accounts during World War I and earlier, convinced the Watch that the phenomena of "Unidentified Flying Objects" warranted attention and further investigation. While continuing its occult and parapsychology research, The Watch began redirecting a large part of its manpower and resources towards the study of UFOs and other possible sources.

The U. S. government and military decided to initiate new programs to discretely investigate these strange phenomenon's after sightings became more frequent in 1947. October 19, 1999 – “The London Times,” Hitler’s “Stealth Aircraft” and “UFOs.” [Another “Alien Conspiracy?”] Hitler’s obsession with the occult and astrology is well documented, but evidence that his aerospace and rocket scientists were grappling with alien technology to build their own Nazi UFOs has now gripped the public’s scrutiny.

Maurizio Verga exposes how Werner von Braun and the Luftwaffe design teams could as having been guided by extraterrestrials, perhaps looting interstellar components from a crashed spaceship. Rumors of the Third Reich’s underground bases first surfaced in the late Forties, coinciding with the birth of UFO sightings. America’s “Operation Paperclip” was in full force, with the FBI assisting in the capture and relocation of Nazi war criminals into America to take advantage of their scientific expertise. Former Nazis gave America the space race edge, and von Braun’s experience in V2 rockets to Apollo 11 and the first manned moon landing helped the American space programs immensely.

AD 1885-The British Parliament at first tables the Criminal Law Amendment Act, which made all acts of “Gross indecency” between males, whether in public or private, an offense punishable by up to two years imprisonment.

However a rally that the Purity Campaign organizes in Hyde Park attracts a throng of thousands and on this wave of hysteria the law is rushed through Parliament. It becomes known as “The Blackmailer’s Charter,” and was the law under which Oscar Wilde was later tried and convicted.

The Birth of D. H. Lawrence, a man who has come to known as the high-priest of heterosexual love. But it is also known that at one time Lawrence had become so friendly with a handsome farm boy named William Henry that his wife Feieda adamantly refused ever to allow the young man ever to enter the Lawrence’s house. Whatever his sexual proclivities were, his astounding writing is the major concern of censorship in the U.S., and when the likes of Lady Chatterley’s Lover are finally cleared by American customs, the dam had already been broken.

6 July 1885, the Pall Mall Gazette, one of England’s premier daily newspapers, begins a series entitled, “The Maiden Tribute of Modern Babylon.” The series is an instant sensation; it not only rocks the conservative English society to its foundations, but sends shockwaves throughout Europe, France, Belgium, and into the United States. The public outcry that follows forces Parliament to enact specific legislation and leads to the establishment of local organizations and international networks, which survive to the present day. The topic of “The Maiden Tribute” is white slavery—the abduction, sale, and organized rape of so-called English virgins. ~White Slavery As Metaphor: Anatomy of a Moral Panic by Mary Ann Irwin.

AD 1886 (?)—The Dominicans, founded in 1214 and sworn to absolute poverty, denial of possessions and ownership of property, evade payment of taxes due on their estates and forge false receipts understating rents received by the pheasants who are forced to lease their own lands owned in the Philippines.

AD 1886—“The Secreta Monita,” in Edwin R. Sherwin’s book, “The Engineer Core Of Hell,” written in 1886, the “Secreta Monita,” is allegedly discovered in South America by a Mason.

The Freemasons believing that the Jesuit Order is their enemy, publish the document [First discovered in Holland and then reprinted in 1857 in England exposing the alleged true purpose of the Jesuit Order].

AD 1886—The Modern Standard Talmud Version is printed in Lithuania. Jewish Rabbis worked diligently to obtain thoroughness and accuracy in their translations. Although, in the New Testament, Jesus is said to have preached from The Jewish Talmudist, it is considered vile anti-Christ

AD 1887-1922—Charles I, Emperor of Austria 1916-1918, and as Charles IV, king of Hungary. Charles V resigns and becomes a monk and a gardener.

From the eighth century onward [after Charlemagne], the Popes began to see their fortunes from Catholicism quickly eroding. The European nations refusing to pay, “Peter’s Pence,” and the increase of Protestantism preaching individual liberties versus establishment religion further reduced their powers. The Pope claims two powers, spiritual and temporal.

With the splintering of his spiritual power, the Pope then lost his temporal power and he no longer had the ability to rule the people through the king of the country. Kings were breaking away from the archaic Catholicism forced upon them for centuries, as did King Henry VIII, 1491-1547, King of England from 1509-1547, and founder of the Church of England.

AD 1887-29 December, Friar Salvador Font, Member of the Board of Censorship, prohibits the importation of, circulation or distribution of Jose Rizal's book, "Noli." The penalty for reading, or having in one's possession Rizal's book, being at one time excommunication by the Church.

AD 1887-The Vatican Bank is founded. Originally known as the "Institute Per le Opere pi Religione," [Institute for Works of Religion or "IOR" for short].

Pope Leo XIII sets the groundwork for an institute that is one day to become involved in money laundering of stolen property, stolen monies, graft, and international intrigue [see AD 1957].

AD 1887-Pope Leo XIII, issues "Officio Sanctissimo," on 22 December, concerning Bavaria and contains a warning against Freemasonry being a "Contagion," and a "Sect of darkness."

AD 1888-James Lick, a freethinker, is remembered by the Lick Observatory, an astronomical observatory in near San Jose, California, with headquarters at the University of California, Santa Cruz. James Lick, an American industrialist and philanthropist, bequeathed $700,000 to the University of California for an observatory that would contain a telescope more powerful than any previously.

Nothing can be seen through the telescope which could be misconstrued to prove the astronomy of Joshua, the reason is that Christianity was opposed to astronomy, but the astronomers had the last word, and took revenge, and now there is not one star that glitters in all the vast firmament of the boundless heavens that has a Christian name. ~What Infidels Have Done By Robert Green Ingersoll

AD 1888-Henry Charles Lea writes in his publication, "The History of the Inquisition in the Middle Ages," "It was only sixty-two years after the slaughter of Priscillian and his followers had excited so much horror, that Leo I, when the here.sy seemed to be reviving in 447 C.E., not only justified the act, but declared that, if the followers of a heresy so damnable were allowed to live, there would be an end to human and Divine law. The final step had been taken and the church was definitely pledged to the suppression of heresy at any cost. It is impossible not to attribute to Ecclesiastical influence the successive edicts by which, from the time of Theodosius the Great, persistence in heresy was punished with death."

Pope Saint Leo I by his mere inaction to stop the tortures and killings proclaimed in the name of Jesus Christ the Lord endorses the words of the Emperor.

The birth of Thomas Edward Lawrence, Lawrence of Arabia, who is captured by the enemy, caned and raped by Turkish soldiers, and who so loved it that he hires Robert Bruce to flog him regularly after he returns to England.

AD 1889 (?) - Friar Jose Rodriguez also condemns Jose Rizal's book and publishes a series of periodicals to thwart the efforts of Rizal. Indulgences are granted to those who read the pamphlets of Friar Rodriguez. Orders are given for all to surrender any booklets, periodicals, or other paraphernalia by Rizal. No other man has caused more embarrassment to the Friars than Rizal.

The common people empathize with Rizal for they know he speaks the truth. Humorous, satiric, and witty he exposes the unfairness and corruption of the churchmen and their co-conspirators, government, in the Philippines.

A male brothel is discovered at 19 Cleveland St. in London England's West End. The scandal becomes the talk of society and many important figures, including Prince Albert Victor, second in line to the throne, are rumored to be drawn in.

Birth of Jean Cocteau, a French artist, writer, and filmmaker. One of the many traditions regarding polite Parisian pissour manners is known as the "Privilege du cape," which allowed a Frenchman who could not find a convenient pissoir [urinal] to approach a gendarme [policeman] and ask him to extend his cape so that he could take a leak behind it. One of Cocteau's favorite amusements is to choose a handsome young cop and pretend that he was drunk. With luck he could get his trouser buttons undone by the helpful gendarme -- and possibly more. Uncooperative victims often wound up with wet shoes.

AD 1889- "I am a Catholic and a Disciple of the God who hath a horror of lies. I seek the truth, all the truth, and nothing but the truth. Although our weak eyes do not see at once the uses of it, or rather see damage and peril, we must proclaim it fearlessly" ~by Mi del' Epinosis

AD 1890-Fragments of the "Greek Gospel of Thomas" are discovered and mention a twin [brother] to Jesus.

AD 1890-Pope Leo XIII issues "Dall'Alto Dell'Apostolico Seggio," on 15 October [known also as "Ab Apostolici"], it deals with the Freemasonry movement in Italy, condemning the existing course of public affairs in Italy as the realization of the "Masonic Program." This alleged agenda is said to involve a "deadly hatred of the Church" and the abolition of religious instruction in schools with the absolute independence of civil society from clerical influence [with subsequent anarchy].

"The facts are incontestable which have happened in the clear light of day; not separated one from another, but so connected together as in their series to reveal with fullest evidence a system of which they are the actual operation and development. The system is not new; but the audacity, the fury, and the rapidity with which it is now carried out, are new. It is the plan of the sects that is now unfolding itself in Italy, especially in what relates to the Catholic religion and the Church, with the final and avowed purpose, if it were possible, of reducing it to nothing."

"It is needless now to put the Masonic sects upon their trial. They are already judged; their ends, their means, their doctrines, and their action, are all known with indisputable certainty. Possessed by the spirit of Satan, whose instrument they are, they burn like him with a deadly and implacable hatred of Jesus Christ and of His work; and they endeavor by every means to overthrow and fetter it." -From the works of the Catholic Encyclopedia. The reader is encouraged to research other sources as this material is highly discriminatory and not wholly representative of the truth.

AD 1891- Francois Bérenger Saunière, 1852-1917, a small town parish priest, is removed from his position in 1885 and reinstated within a few months. He is witness to a discovery by the bell ringer Antoine Captier in 1891, and the documents are taken to Bishop Felix-Arsène Billard at Carcassonne who looks the other way to the small parish priests uncharacteristic and scandalous behavior.

Overnight the poor pastor becomes a rich man which some allege that he made his money from trafficking in Masses [selling Masses that would give one a significant reduction of penance in purgatory] Saunière continues digging about the parish upon his return digging up old tombstones and desecrating the dates on some of them, causing great dismay to the Church authorities who stripped him of his office and priesthood.

He not only refuses to divulge the names of his financial donors but also buys up the surrounding lands in the name of one Miss Marie Dénarnaud [his confidant and perhaps consort] and he refuses to leave the parish upon orders from the Church. The Church Authorities do not pursue this issue any further and the priest who hears his confession prior to his death, is traumatized by what he was told.

What was the secret? Another priest in a nearby area, Abbé Henri Boudet, commits similar crimes regarding defacing tombstones.

A third cleric, practicing in a nearby village and a friend of Saunières, Abbé Antoine Gélis is found murdered eight days after discussions about the discovered documents, and had also recently come into a great sum of money which could not be explained. Mysteriously there is no record of the murder in diocesan archives but a record remains in police and court records.

What is the secret of the document discovered? This same area of France is also noted for the famous Saint Vincent de Paul, founder of the Order of the Lazarist Fathers, and Jean-Jacques Olier, builder of Saint Sulpice, who both claim to have learned the mysteries of Alchemy. The Church makes several attempts to buy Saunière's property, to the point of dispatching Cardinal Roncalli [later to become Pope John XXIII]. St. Vincent, in order to avoid seeing his sexual organs, would undress in the dark. To him also, sex was a sin.

On 1835-February 14th, Joseph Smith, founder of the Mormon Church, attends a meeting of church leaders. He said that the meeting had been called because God had commanded it, and announced that Jesus will return within 56 years, i.e. before 1891, February 15th. ~History of the Church 2:182.

Jesus does not appear and the date is soon forgotten like many others.

AD 1892-It has been alleged that the priests of Tondo hired assassins to kill Jose Rizal upon his return to the Philippines, and the friars draw lots to murder him (?) [Poisoning is the alleged method of dealing with heretics. So much so that poison rings become common in Europe and monarchies were compelled to have "Food tasters" to protect themselves from being poisoned].

On January 15th 1893, Rizal presents Father Pastells with a statue of Saint Paul. During his exile, Rizal had debated with Fr. Pastells on religious matters. Fr. Pastells attributed Rizal's religious views to his Masonic affiliations, which is a misconception, many Christians hold.

Masonry is composed of a brotherhood of men from various religious backgrounds; therefore any religious views Rizal held toward his Christian fellows were his views and his views alone.

The New York Times becomes the first U.S. newspaper to use the word "Lesbian" in a news story: "Lesbian Love and Murder" about a suicide pact made by two young women after their parents forbid them to see each other.

In a letter to his good friend Blumentritt, Rizal writes, "I want to hit the friars, but friars who utilized not only as a shield, but also as a weapon, castle, fortress, armor, etc; I was forced to attack their false and superstitious religion in order to fight the enemy who hid himself behind it." ~Jose Rizal, Filipino revolutionary, free thinker.

Rizal believed that "Individual judgment" is a gift from God, and each one of us should use it like a lantern to show one the way and that, self esteem, if moderated by judgment could save man from unworthy acts. Fr. Pastells argued that man, not being perfect, is limited in his intelligence; hence he needs the guidance of God. Rizal did not argue that point, only the need for the Church.

AD 1892-Pope Leo XIII, issues "Inimica Vis," on 18 December, to the Bishops of Italy addressing Freemasonry in Italy and reiterating the Church's urgent necessity of combating the ends of Freemasonry, entreating the Bishops to work to convert "victims" of Freemasonry. It admonishes some of the Roman Catholic clergy for entering into or cooperating with Freemasonry. The Church again condemns Masonry during the reign of Pope Leo XIII in his "Custodi di Quella Fede."

"...Guardians of that faith to which the Christian nations owe their morality and civil redemption, we must dutifully discharge each one of our supreme tasks. Therefore, we must raise our voice in loud protestations against the impious war, which tries to take such a precious treasure away from you, beloved children. Already taught by long and sorrowful experience, you know well the terrible trials of this war, you who deplore it in your hearts as Catholics and as Italians We do not wish to exaggerate the Masonic power by attributing to its direct and immediate action all the evils which presently preoccupy us." ~Pope Leo XIII.

Every Sunday, the Christian ministry proudly proclaims America as a Christian nation. "It is contended by many that ours is a Christian government, founded upon the Bible, and that all who look upon that book as false or foolish are destroying the foundation of our country. The truth is, our government is not founded upon the rights of Gods, but upon the rights of men. Our Constitution was framed, not to declare and uphold the deity of Christ, but the sacredness of humanity. Ours is the first government made by the people, for the people. It is the only nation with which the Gods have nothing to do. And yet there are some judges dishonest and cowardly enough to solemnly decide that this is a Christian country, and that our free institutions are based upon the infamous Laws of Jehovah." ~Col. Robert G. Ingersoll, American Free Thinker.

The Church has today has about 1,000 Bishops, more than a quarter of whom are in the golden land, Italy, enjoying the fruits of the poor in sumptuous residences, and in one way or an other share the financial sunshine.

A moral history of them would be even more unsavory than that of the Popes and Cardinals. The rich Bishoprics and Archbishoprics of the medieval Church, which were often little princedoms until the end of the feudal system, were obvious prizes for the younger sons and bastards of princes and nobles, and a remarkable procession of them crossed the stage of European history to further corrupt the lives of the masses with extra vagant superstitions.

It is unfortunate that many third world countries owe their morality and civil redemption to a system that spread its laxity of moral standards and corruption and is reflected today in the beginning of this 21st century in the poverty of the people in those lands who still seek justice and equality from their religious leaders. In 1892 the Church will, again, explicate their stand regarding Masonry.

"However, you can clearly see its spirit in the facts which we have just recorded, and in many others which we could recall. That spirit, which is the implacable enemy of Christ and of the Church, tries all ways, uses all arts, and prevails upon all means. It seizes from the Church its first-born daughter and seizes from Christ His favored nation, the seat of His Vicar on earth and the center of Catholic unity. This war is directed at the same time against the heavenly and the earthly kingdoms, against the faith of our ancestors and the culture, which they handed on to us. It is thus doubly evil, being guilty of a divine offense no less than a human one. Is its chief source not that very Masonic sect which We discussed at length in the Encyclical 'Humanum Genus' of April 20, 1884, and in the more recent one of October 15, 1890, addressed to the Bishops, the clergy and the Italian people."

"Let no one be taken in by its attractive appearance or allured by its promises; do not be seduced by its enticements or frightened by its threats. Remember that Christianity and masonry are essentially irreconcilable, such that to join one is to divorce the other. You can no longer ignore such incompatibility between Catholic and mason, beloved children: 'You have been warned openly by our predecessors, and we have loudly repeated the warning.'" ~Given in Rome at Saint Peter's, the eighth day of December, 1892, in the fifteenth year of our pontificate, NewAdvent Catholic Website.

It is quite clear as to the intentions of the Church regarding Masonry. To Declare War against those who dare challenge its authority and to slander, condemn, and threaten with excommunication those who do not adhere to the Church's professed doctrine are not new tactics to the Church in its so-called Preservation of the Pure Faith. And yet, after all is said and done by this great institution it issues a retraction regarding Freemasonry in the 20th century by Pope Paul VI in 1965, but the retraction is only a partial renunciation in that Masons in Europe and Italy are not included.

AD 1892-Pope Leo XIII, issues "Custodi di Qualla Fede," on 18 December, to the people of Italy attacking Freemasonry. It instructs the citizens in how to work against Freemasonry in ways such as guarding Catholic homes against access, setting up Catholic schools and mutual aid societies, and establishing a Catholic press. It contains potent criticism of the Freemasons.

AD 1892- The Supreme Court's 1892, Holy Trinity Church v. United States decision, Justice David Brewer writes, "This is a Christian nation." Brewer's statement occurred 'In Dicta,' a legal term meaning the writing that reflects a judge's personal opinion, and not an official court pronouncement that sets legally binding precedent.

AD 1894-The Masonic movement in the Philippines is considered a subversive group and the Spanish government on the 31st of March of that year resolves to persecute them. The Gran Consejo Regional, Ambrocio Flores, announces that the friars have given him lists of suspected members of the renegade recalcitrants. Names of the accomplices were even published in the newspaper, "Lo Politica de Espana en Filipinas."

Pope Leo XIII on June 20th issues "Praeclara" denouncing Masonry. In March of 1895 Archbishop Nozaleda of Malolos communicates to General Blanco the "Perturbing center" of unrest in his local is the Masonic Lodge.

John Sholto Douglas, the 18th Marquis of Queensberry leaves a card at the Albermarle Club in London, England, addressed "To Oscar Wilde posing as a sodomite" [sic] perhaps triggering the incident that is soon to bring about Wilde's downfall. The Marquis is better known among other circles as the compiler of the governing rules of the sport of boxing.

"... The laws do not provide for religious freedom in the Philippines and the government should therefore take harsh action against the enemies of the Church." ~Roman Catholic Archbishop Nozaleda of Malolos, Philippines.

Many suspected Masons are deported [officials referred to this as a change of residence] and the unlucky few, who are caught, are imprisoned and tortured. At one time, this organization in the Philippines enjoyed the privilege of being a group of distinct freethinkers and freedom fighters, espousing the cause of the poor. Unfortunately, many now join this august body for personal reasons, amongst which is protection from their crimes against society.

A fact admitted by the Higher Order in the Grand Lodge, but of which at the time of this writing no action has been taken to rid themselves of corruption or the perceived impression of acts of criminality. The Church of Rome denies simple pleasures to the poor and non-Europeans, from their schools that cater to the Spaniards, to the social elite who enjoy the fruits of Spanish conquest, the masses are forbidden to voice their views.

What happened to Freedom of Religion and Freedom of the Press, which the Church espouses, it has followed for centuries? It denies basic human rights to the indigenous people of the Philippines in a policy of discrimination, which it denies.

“Carriages without horses shall go, and accidents fill the world with woe. Around the earth thought shall fly. In the twilight of an eye; ...Iron shall float in the water shall float, As easily as wooden boats.”

~The Story of Prophecy, 1881.

AD 1894-Pope Leo XIII issues “Praeclara,” on 20 June, an apostolic letter to the heads of state and nations of the world, which calls for a union with the Church of Rome warning against Freemasonry [Remember, Masons were involved in the French Revolution, the American Revolution, and the Philippine struggle for freedom].

French Captain Alfred Dreyfus is framed by anti-Semitic French officers, found guilty, and is given a life sentence at Devil's Island. The Catholic Church, French government, and the army unite to suppress the truth, but ten years later, Dreyfus is declared entirely innocent. The Dreyfus Affair becomes world-wide news for years.

AD 1895-22nd January, the Spanish government orders the arrest of all Masons. Masons are arrested and some deported. Belief in equality, brotherly love, and freedom are against the law (?) The Egyptian God Typhon represents a trilogy of destructive forces in the Masonic tradition that are represented in Freemasonry as: Destroyers of all virtuous things, they are Superstition, Fear, and Ignorance. Even the early Church Fathers recognized that knowledge [via education] is the key to overcoming superstitions and ignorance, “From all these things, therefore, it is concluded that all evil springs from ignorance; and ignorance herself, the mother of all evils, is sprung from carelessness and sloth, and is nourished, and increased, and rooted in the senses of men by negligence; and if any one teach that she is to be put to flight, she is with difficulty and indignantly torn away, as from an ancient and hereditary abode. And therefore we must labor for a little, that we may search out the presumptions of ignorance, and cut them off by means of knowledge, especially in those who are preoccupied with some erroneous opinions, by means of which ignorance is the more firmly rooted in them, as under the appearance of a certain kind of knowledge; for nothing is worse than for one to believe that he knows what he is ignorant of, and to maintain that to be true which is false. This is as if a drunk man should think himself to be sober, and should act indeed in all respects as a drunk man, and yet think himself to be sober, and should wish to be called so by others. Thus, therefore, are those also who do not know what is true, yet hold some appearance of knowledge, and do many evil things as if they were good, and hasten destruction as if it were to Salvation.” ~The Recognitions of Clement, About the Recognitions and Homilies 5.4, Ignorance the Mother of Evils.

A strong and righteous curse, especially when uttered by a person in authority, is believed to be an effective [unfailing] blight in its effect. ~Genesis 12, 25, 27; II Kings 2:24; Ecclesiastes [Sirach] 3:11.

AD 1895-1974-Perón, Juan Domingo, President of Argentina from 1946-55, and again from 1973-74, a most remarkable Latin American figure who brought significant changes to the nation's political arena. He traveled to Italy to study Alpine military methods and upon his return to Argentina in 1941, Perón, a recognized military expert who wrote five books on military history, and an admirer of the Italian dictator Benito Mussolini, joined other officers in a secret military lodge that staged a coup d'état in June of 1943. Perón, a widower, married his illicit lover, Mariá Eva Duarte, who became affectionately known as “Evita” to the masses of Argentina.

The death of Evita [1952], economic difficulties, WWII conspiracies, claims of corruption, increasing labor unrest, and his excommunication by the Roman Catholic Church weakened Perón's government, and in 1955 he was ousted by the military [see also AD 1963].

who secretly enjoyed male to male sex, was subjugated by his lesbian wife, and died because his strong macho image demanded that he fight in a boxing arena. Known for his image of the captured Sheik hanging from outstretched arms to a barred window, his manly chest bare, and his body equipped for whatever men/women desire. If the Christian movement only knew.

AD 1896-Cairo, an Egyptologist of German ancestry, discovers ancient documents containing: "The Gospel of Mary" [Magdalene] and "The Apocryphon" [Secret Book of John] These Gnostic writings appear to have been influenced by ancient Iranian teachings and Zoroastrian traditions. Christianity is not founded upon new beliefs but existing beliefs changed to accentuate the present acceptable values of existing cultures. The Church denies this by claiming, "Beware of false prophets." In "The Apocalypse of Peter" Christ explains to the Apostle Peter that those who act as if they have derived their power from God are "Waterless canals."

They do not understand the mysteries yet boast that they and they alone are knowledgeable of the truth. "Wherefore we must, above all things, hasten to the knowledge of the Truth, that, as with a light kindled thereat, we may be able to dispel the darkness of errors: for ignorance, as we have said, is a great evil; but because it has no substance, it is easily dispelled by those who are in earnest. For ignorance is nothing else than not knowing what is good for us; once know this, and ignorance perishes. Therefore the knowledge of truth ought to be eagerly sought after; and no one can confer it except the true Prophet. For this is the gate of life to those who will enter, and the road of good works to those going to the city of Salvation." ~The Recognitions of Clement, About the Recognitions and Homilies 5.5, Advantages of Knowledge.

Contradicting prevailing norms and cultural values this doctrine is not accepted by the ruling majority and is considered heresy and it is for this reason that these manuscripts were hidden for centuries. Do prevailing norms dictate the Truth? Unfortunately, even today, in this modern 21st century it does. Heresy is defined as, "A species of infidelity in men who, having professed the faith of Christ, corrupt its dogmas." ~Saint Thomas Aquinas

Therefore, heresy can only be committed by someone who considers themselves a Christian, but rejects the teachings of what is accepted by the Orthodox Christian Church. As stated earlier, All Religions Change, as do cultural practices. Religion via its hierarchical organization encumbers the individual to recognize its authority and through its sole recognition we must approach God. ~Note: Priscillian achieved the distinction of becoming the first Christian burned alive for Heresy in 385 at Treves.

Living off the taxes and donations of the working class and poor, "Orthodoxy cannot afford to put out the fires of Hell." ~Col. Robert G. Ingersoll.

The Catholic [Orthodox] Church built its authority upon a different interpretation of Scriptures, an interpretation, which laid ground to their future power, "If the New Testament accounts could support a range of interpretations, why did Orthodox Christians in the 2nd century insist on a literal view of Resurrection and reject all others as heretical? . . . When we examine its practical effect on the Christian movement, we can see, paradoxically, that the doctrine of bodily Resurrection also serves an essential political function: it legitimizes the authority of certain men who claim to exercise leadership over the churches as the successors of the apostle Peter. From the 2nd century, the doctrine has served to validate the apostolic succession of Bishops, the basis of Papal Authority to this day. Gnostic Christians who interpret Resurrection in other ways have a lesser claim to authority: when they claim priority over the Orthodox, they are denounced as heretics." ~Elaine Pagels, The Gnostic Gospels, New York: Vintage, 1989, pp. 7.

The Church has always fought in favor of its version of Orthodoxy [via conversion either by book or by sword] and the Pope claims authority as the self-proclaimed successor of Saint Peter to establish its version of truth. At various times in history, it has had varying degrees of power to resist or punish heretics [Crusades, loss of property, imprisonment, torture, or death]. This explains why throughout history lay people were tortured, crucified and burned at the stake for claiming to have spoken to God.

The last person recognized to be burned alive at the stake on orders directly from Rome was Giordano Bruno, a Catholic priest, executed in 1600 for his collection of heretical beliefs including Copernicanism and [probably more important] belief in an unlimited universe with innumerable inhabited alien worlds. Why would God want to speak to common man when his authorized representatives were available? This is tantamount to saying that the common masses were closer to God than the priesthood and puts them [the priesthood] in a delicate position of having to defend their position and existence.

AD 1897- "The Canon," published by William Stirling, describes esoteric teachings that govern the arts, sciences, music, astrology, and ancient cultures. It links the ancient gods along with their numerical values with their symbolic magnitude. A claim long denied by the Church but now acknowledged as having some relevance.

Magnus Hirschfeld and five friends found the Scientific-Humanitarian Committee in Charlottenburg, then a suburb of Berlin. Their goal was to abolish the anti-homosexual Paragraph 175 in German law, but the committee soon dissolved on June 8, 1933 to avoid being banned by the Nazis. Paragraph 175 was still in force.

AD1897-Léo Taxil, also known as Gabriel Jogand Pages, born Gabriel Antoine Jogand-Pages, 1854-1907, French practical joker, publishes his book, "Confession." The omnipresent paranoia regarding Freemasonry, along with the ravenous gullibility of the Catholics, proved bountiful grounds for one of the greatest literary hoaxes designed by the Atheist-satirist, Leo Taxil, who was educated by the Jesuits, but soon became a militant Atheist and anti-clerical propagandist. His book is alleged to contain the secret rites and rituals of the Masonic Brotherhood.

This expose includes satanic cults worshipping and other immoral acts purportedly committed by Masons. On April 19th, Taxil holds a public gathering in which he admits that the book is a fraud and that the hoax was perpetrated for publicity. Unfortunately, the book is later reprinted in Heredom, Volume 5, in 1996 as truth, much to the detriment of the Order.

Albert Pike in this book is declared as the First Luciferian Pope, Supreme Chief of all Freemasons of the Globe. The Fundamentalist, Pat Robertson, in, "The New World Order," does little to expose the truth but only perpetuates this ignorance for the benefit of raising monies for his cause [sound familiar?]. "Intellectual ambiguity can be very uncomfortable. It is always easier to be sure of something. A religion that neatly provides all the answers saves you the frustration and anxiety that inevitably accompany a struggle with difficult questions. Fundamentalism is especially dogmatic and detailed in describing a grand scheme. The Bible is offered as the inerrant word of God, revealing the path of history, a plan of Salvation, and predictions about the future. Reasons and justifications are given. And for questions that still remain, there is the ultimate comfort that comes with trusting that a benign father God had everything under control." ~Marlene Winell, Leaving the Fold, Oakland, CA: New Harbinger, 1993, p. 54.

Taxil authored many anti-religious skits and satires commencing when he was 25 years of age which included "A Humorous Bible," "The Skullcap and its Wearers," and "A Humorous Gospel, or the Life of Jesus." He was especially adept at ridiculing the sleazy lifestyles of the decadent Popes of his era, along with their sacred doctrines and religious taboos.

He functioned as secretary of the Anti-Clerical League in France, which boasted some 15,000 members, and edited the society's newspaper, Anti-Clericale. Earlier, he had published La Marotte [Fool's Bauble], an Atheist journal of humor and insult, and in 1880 founded a Society of Freethinkers.

One of Taxil's collaborators was another Atheist, a Dr. Karl Hacks, who wrote under the pseudonym "Bataille." In 1892, the two began issuing a serial publication known for its infamous title, "The Devil in the 19th Century," which was a satirical expose of Freemasonry and its alleged Satanism.

The work began by referring to Pope Leo XIII's encyclical letter, "Humanum Genus," whereby the Holy Father divided all of humanity into two warring camps; those who worshipped the one and only true Christian God, and those who served Lucifer, personification of evil, wicked, and debased. The hoax is exposed, and Hacks remarks that no sooner had he and Taxil read Pope Leo's encyclical than he perceived a news means of enrichment.

*"A rare opportunity to coin money out of the mass credulity and boundless stupidity of the Catholics
..."* ~Leo Taxil.

From this encouragement "The Devil," was created by Taxil and Hacks as they set to work, and their combined ingenuity knew no bound. "...Sometimes I fabricated the most incredible stories," writes Taxil. Their motives appeared to be entirely financially motivated.

"The Devil in the Nineteenth Century" is truly a collection of outrageous, unproven and amusing tales; the gist of the story involves continuous revelations regarding Freemasons and other secret societies and their efforts to establish a sort of "Luciferian" worship on earth. These efforts were established against a background of an alleged return to the fold of the Roman Catholic Church. Taxil also wrote a book on the life of "Joan of Arc," which he intended to incite animosity amongst the church hierarchy and its membership, but Taxil became so overwhelmed by reciprocating emotions of religiosity that it is said he burst into tears.

"I burst into sobs", revealed Taxil in his satirical publication, "Confession." "Pardon me, oh God! I cried out in a voice choked with tears. Pardon my many blasphemies! Pardon all the evil I have wrought! I passed the night in prayer, and resolved on the next day to seek absolution for my sins..."

Taxil immediately withdrew from public activities regarding the Atheistic organizations, and tendered his resignation of the Anti-Clerical League. Very few of his Atheist cohorts believed in Taxil's being "Born Again" and public display of religiosity, "... Yet everyone was puzzled to understand the strategic purpose of this retrograde movement..."

"Spirit of Spirit, if it be your will, give me over to immortal birth so that I may be Born Again, and the sacred spirit may breathe in me." ~Prayer to Mithras.

Some cried, "Ha! You can't fool us! You've been paid by the Vatican! How much, eh?" Taxil set to work in writing an expose, "Complete Revelations," which overflowed with both imaginary and alleged gruesome tales of devil worshipping, debauchery and sacrilegious rites pertaining to the Masonic Order. The Catholic contingency accepts these works as the true evidence of the evils and venomous rites being performed in secret and greets Taxil and his revelations with exultations, boasting that his works "... Combined positive and irrefutable proofs of the diabolical character of the Masonic mysteries."

By 1887, Taxil had connived his way into a private session with Pope Leo XIII, who informed Jorgand that he was an avid reader of the "Revelations," and Taxil leaves the Vatican with a Papal benediction as well as "The conclusion that he could imagine nothing so absurd that it would not be received in Catholic circles as authentic and indorsed by infallible authority..."

Centuries later, this same religious group will continue to condemn those whom it cannot prove guilty of any other crime other than that of denying the Pope his superior role in the world order. Masons continue to deny allegiance to any specific faith as a condition of membership and require only a belief in God. The Catholic presses are pleased to publish Taxil's deceitful literature for the Church was taken in by Taxil when he and Bataille-Hacks began their publication of "The Devil in the Nineteenth Century."

This fictitious story of Albert Pike, a Grand Master of Freemasonry, who resided in Charleston, South Carolina, whom the book called the "Satanic Pope," remains a controversial figure in the history of the craft. Pike served as a general in the Confederate Army and after the Civil War, he became interest in Masonry and ancient languages. Pike became Grand Commander of the Scottish Rite, and head of the Southern Jurisdiction in the United States.

Taxil and Bataille alleged that Albert Pike was head of a mysterious and secretive "Luciferian Conspiracy" known as the "New Paladian Rite," headquartered in Charleston, S.C. which also had alleged affiliated temples in Washington, Rome, Montevideo, Naples and Calcutta.

Taxil claimed to have invented a device where Pike could communicate with his Masonic disciples throughout the world at the touch of a button [years before the invention of the radio]; and alleged that the "Satanic Pope" had a bracelet by which he could summon Lucifer for consultations at any time. "One day Satan took Pike gently in his arms and made a trip with him to Sirius," wrote Taxil, "Traversing the whole distance in a few minutes. After exploring the fixed star, he was brought back safe and sound to his room in Washington..."

In the late 19th century, many people as well as the Roman Catholic Church believed these preposterous stories written by Taxil for sheer profit and enjoyment and total disregard to truth. The publication, "The Devil" told of a labyrinth of underground laboratories secreted beneath the cliffs of Gibraltar, which was staffed by mischievous demons, all under the leadership of a leader named "Tubal Cain." Satan's chemists are said to have worked around the clock formulating "Flues" and other epidemics to be spread amongst Christians, worldwide.

In Freiburg, Switzerland, Taxil alleged was to be found a Masonic temple hewn out of rock for the sole use of a "Satanic Mass" participated in by Masons of the local lodge. Naked men and women were said to engage in irreligious and erotic outrages, immorality rampant within the walls of this remote village, which included the stabbing of "Holy Wafers," which had allegedly been stolen by Jews from the Catholic Churches in defiance of God and all that was Sacred and Holy. This piquant pleasantry is not finished yet, for Taxil then presents Miss Diana Vaughn to society as a descendant of the Rosicrucian alchemist Thomas Vaughn.

The lady claims to have in her possession a signed contract between her famous ancestor and "Satan" himself, dating to March 25th 1625. Miss Vaughn was supposedly born in Paris on February 29, 1874 [that particular year there is no February 29th]. Miss Vaughn alleges that she was raised on Luciferian principles, and one day expressed doubt to her Satanic gurus as to the virtues of Cain and Abel as epitomes of diabolical virtue.

Her mentors immediately ascertained that, this youngster was possessed by the Christian Angel, Raphael, and that she was in need of immediate "Exorcism," lest she fall prey to the one, true Christian God. The "Exorcism" is performed, "The whole process of which," as described by Taxil, "... Is a clever travesty of the same ceremonial rite prescribed by the Roman Catholic Church for the expulsion of evil spirits...."

The Exorcism Ritual is a complete success and the "Angel Raphael" is driven out of the material body of Miss Vaughn. The Roman Catholic Authorities did not immediately grasp the insinuations and drama of this claim, and few, if any within official Catholicism, understood the humor and invidious intent of Taxil's degrading parody on Pope Leo's "Exorcismus in Satanam et Angelos Spostatas," issued by the Pope in 1890. Or, perhaps they did comprehend and were too embarrassed to comment further on this issue.

With her body restored to spiritual health, Miss Vaughn is placed in the care of "Asmodeus," one of the Satanic functionaries, and the demon approaches her in the outward appearance of a handsome suitor emitting a strong aroma of balsam. He escorts Miss Vaughn on various pleasure trips and short journeys to purgatory, at one time even whisking her away to the planet Mars where the two visit Schiaparelli's Canals and stroll amongst the pygmy inhabitants of the Red Planet.

As ridiculous as this may sound, one must realize that we are dealing with a superstitious world, which believes everything in print as the truth. In the ancient Greco-Roman world, it was quite common to curse or bind your enemy or rival by writing an incantation on a tablet and dedicating it to a god or spirit. These curses or binding spells, commonly called 'Defixiones' were intended to bring other people under the power and control of those who commissioned them. ~Curse Tablets and Binding Spells from the Ancient World Edited by John G. Gager

Throughout this mythical episode, Catholics everywhere sated themselves with such incredulous fabrications all spun by the straight-faced Taxil and his cohort in crime, Dr. Bataille. The Catholic Journal, "The Month," writes praiseworthily of Taxil's conversion to the Roman Catholic Church and his subsequent revelations regarding the evils of Masonry, noting that "An instance of conversion as that of Leo Taxil ought to at least encourage us to hope that there may be many such." Taxil instills hope in the Church's quest to quell the spread of Masonry.

He was in his glory and could not see an end, for he was blinded by financial gain. Taxil had fooled all of Christendom, stating, "My colleagues were aghast and exclaimed 'You'll spoil the whole joke with your nonsense!' 'Bah', I replied, let me be and you will see!'"

His name was associated with exposes on the virtues of conversion to Christianity and Taxil was highly regarded in the community for his forthrightness and heroism in standing up to Masonry. In the Christian world he was their hero.

Taxil continued to promote his "Complete Revelations" and "The Devil" until 1897, when public pressure demanded the persona of Miss Diana Vaughn, the so-called reformed Luciferian. So, Taxil called a press conference on April 19th; he mounted the platform before the assembled reporters and observers, and he confessed his hoax to the bewildered public before him. He thanked the clergy for their assistance in carrying out his conspiracy and attributed their cooperation due to their ignorance and imbecility, while he escaped amidst the confusion. This man had no morals, nor scruples, and this so-called revelation was just another form of attention gathering and publicity.

Taxil the Convert was still the same old Taxil, who had shammed and ridiculed religious believers before, but who did not convince the true believers. Christians did not want to believe that they had been taken advantage of in public, so much so, that one Catholic writer maintained that the man who called the press conference was really an impostor, and that Masons had kidnapped the real Taxil. Another insisted that Diana Vaughn failed to appear because the Freemasons had bribed Taxil into placing her in an asylum where she could not escape. "The Pelican," a Catholic magazine, unable to come to grips with the truth, still supported Taxil's revelations about devil-worshipping and the Masonic Order, insisting that Freemasons, Jews, and Luciferians as well as their comrades had carried out many of the atrocities described in the literature published by Taxil and Bataille.

It was further asserted that in July 1897, the Jews had absconded with consecrated wafers from a church in Silesia, Poland, whereupon the plot was uncovered by a Polish man of nobility and reported it to the authorities.

Thus ended one of the great literary hoaxes in all of history, with the Roman Catholic Church caught in a dilemma as to whether or not it should keep silent or divulge its complicity in an act of harassment and persecution against the Masonic Order, which it loathed. It was a battle of publication, public exposure, and wits, which the Catholic Church lost. Taxil returned to the anti-clerical movement, being recorded in the Catholic Encyclopedia as "One of the most notorious religious hoaxers of the 19th century."

There were no winners. The linkage of Freemasonry with some of the most bizarre Satanic Rituals and practices, in the minds of the Christian community not only challenges their imagination, but also cements what they have felt all along regarding secret societies. The "Protocols of the Learned Elders of Zion" is yet another specious collection of diatribe. The "Protocols" are claimed to be a master plan formulated at a secret meeting of Zionists in 1897, held in Berne, Switzerland. The meeting is allegedly concocted by Jews, Masons, Luciferians, the Illuminati, international bankers, and other so called "Un-Touchables," with the sole purpose of bringing about the decay and decline of all Christian civilization via initiation of a "New World Order."

The "Protocols" pledge being: "... To corrupt the young generation by subversive education, dominate people through their vices, destroy family life, undermine respect for religion, encourage luxury, amuse people to prevent them from thinking, poison the spirit by destructive theories, weaken human bodies by inoculation with microbes, foment international hatred and prepare for universal bankruptcy and concentration of gold in the hands of the Jews."

What the Catholic Church could not do by suppression, oppression, and subjugation, it now intends to do by mendacity, deception, and falsehoods. "Protocols" has been incendiary fuel for everyone who opposed the Jews and non-Christians, from the Nazis in WWII, to the fundamentalist Christians in the 20th century. Adolph Hitler gives credence to the "Protocols" in his book, "Mein Kampf," maintaining that there exists a Jewish plot against Christianity, which is conspiring along with Freemasonry.

"The notion of personal responsibility in fundamentalism is a curious one. You are responsible for your sins, but you cannot take credit for the good things that you do. Any good that you do must be attributed to God working through you. Yet you must try to be Christ-like. When you fail, it is your fault for not 'Letting the power of God work in you.' This is an effective double bind of responsibility without ability." ~Marlene Winell, Leaving the Fold, Oakland, CA: New Harbinger, 1993, pp. 70-71.

A cursory review of Masonry will show that all tyrannical, dictatorial or monarchial governments are against Masonry in that the Order believes in "Free Will," the right to choose which is in direct contradiction of authoritative leadership [this includes some religious orders].

The "Protocols" is actually a plagiarism of an earlier tract known as the, "Dialogues in the Underworld Between Machiavelli and Montesquieu," published in 1865 by Maurice Jouly as a satirical representation of Napoleon III and his authoritative government.

These "Dialogues" incorporated into the "Protocols," with their appropriate annotations and rewritings are of little importance as they are, like Taxil's creations, also historical forgeries perpetrated upon the public to spread vile innuendos regarding religious and political beliefs not acknowledged by another religious/political faction.

The truth is not always readily available to those who would seek it, much less have the courage to reveal it. Given human gullibility, it is not surprising that the fallacies published in the "Protocols," the disclosures of Taxil-Bataille, the myths of Barruel and Robison, and other the various assorted tales regarding the Masonic Order of Freemasonry and the Illuminati persevere to this very day. With little objectivity, research, or scholarly application having been accomplished regarding these associations it is no wonder that many are still in darkness as to their intent much less their accomplishments.

Little literature survives on the Illuminists, although there are over 10,000 pieces on Freemasonry. Taxil's hoax and satire of the Christians is still accepted as truth by segments of the unknowing Christian community, which has not been exposed to but bits and pieces of his works. New publications in right-wing circles still repeat bizarre stories of "The Devil in the 19th Century," and claim to link the disbanded Order of the Illuminati to events occurring today. After two hundred years from the founding of the Order, there is more fallacy than fact to represent the philosophy, accomplishments, and aspirations of the old Order and its demise.

Whether or not, Mr. Taxil made a speech where he "Confessed" to the concoction of a fictitious statement about Lucifer and attributed such statements to Albert Pike or not has never been fully established. Masons claim he made such a "Confession" and use this as "Proof" that any writings about Lucifer by high degree Freemasons are also fraudulent. Taxil's confession is published throughout the European press and the "Abbe de la Rive," Taxil's strongest supporter within the Catholic arena, repudiated everything Taxil wrote in the April 1897 issue of "Freemasonry Disclosed." One hundred plus years later it remains a quagmire as to who said what or issued contradictory statements and when.

The official publication of the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of Vancouver, the "B.C. Catholic," even going so far as publishing the alleged apology of Taxil and then having to publish a retraction and apology for reprinting Leo Taxil's lie in their June 19, 2000 issue. The "Freemasonry Watch" claims to have proven that the Order of Freemasonry worships "Lucifer," the "Devil."

Their collection of quotations being taken from non-Masons and biographers who do not only do not represent Freemasonry, but are often unaware or uneducated as to what Masonry is all about. But, this is what sells and makes money for these individuals.

Masonic writings fall into three categories: the writings of authors who are not Freemasons, the writings of authors who are Freemasons, and finally, the rules, regulations and edicts as published by recognized Grand Lodges, combined with the rituals as worked by these recognized Lodges.

Only the recognized lodges have any authority and only within the jurisdiction of the individual Grand Lodge. Therefore, the "Freemasonry Watch" collection of quotes, are not representative of any Masonic authority. Further inquiries into this matter may be obtained from searching the website, ~http://www5.50megs.com/freemasonry/luciferquotes.html.

You be the judge. The fact that the "Freemasonry Watch" interprets Masonic symbolism as "Luciferian," does not demonstrate that Freemasonry follows or promotes a similar interpretation. The writings of noted Masonic Authors, along with their interpretations of the "Symbols of Freemasonry," attest to the symbolic representations of Masonry as would the information disseminated by the Roman Catholic Church would be evidence of their interpretations regarding their icons.

"The Lost Keys of Freemasonry," by Manly Palmer, allegedly a 33rd degree, Master Mason, whose work published in 1923 was prefaced with the following, "At the time I wrote this slender volume, I had just passed my twenty-first birthday, and my only contact with Freemasonry was through the books commonly available to the public."

Manly Hall, the founder of the "Philosophical Research Society," in the Los Feliz area of Los Angeles, did not attain Masonic status until 1954, thirty-one years after he wrote the book. What information did he discover that would entice him to join this organization? Many have crucified this group by believing everything the Church and Nazi Hitler has printed about it.

However, those who have gone beyond hearsay will attest to the benefits of brotherhood they have elicited from the group and the good they have done throughout the world.

Albert Pike 33°, Sovereign Grand Commander Supreme Council 33°, in his references to "Lucifer," in his renowned book, "Morals and Dogma," makes a total of two references to Lucifer [pp. 321, 324]. In both cases he makes it very clear that he is referring to the Latin root [dictionary] meaning of the word "Lucifer," as the "Bringer of light." This pagan interpretation is clearly not referring to "Satan," the personification of evil, and known as "The Prince of Darkness," [John 8:44, 2 Corinthians 4:4], but to the angel "Lucifer," "Light bearer," who fell from grace.

Lucifer is more kindly regarded as the personification of the independence of man and his self-conscious mind, which seeks light through his efforts of continuous lives seeking enlightenment. In context he also makes it very clear that his book is a treatise on comparative religion and is not a book of Masonic Symbolology.

“Although Freemasonry is not a religion, nor has it ever claimed the prerogatives of religion, our opponents continue to believe that, since we don't define God, it cannot be their God. Freemasonry believes that men of all faiths can dwell together in peace. Freemasonry requires its members to believe in God but will not dictate those beliefs except insofar as they coincide with the teachings of Freemasonry. The teachings of Freemasonry involve Faith, Hope and Charity, Brotherly Love, Relief and Truth.” Many readers also delight in conspiracy theories and the short stories of Ambrose Bierce [AD 1842-1914], in which he keeps alive the mysticism of secrecy [Can Such Things Be? & Ghost and Horror Stories].

AD 1897-25th of January, Pope Leo XIII via “Officiorem Ad Munerom” reorganizes the Ecclesiastical Legislation pertaining to published literature. 1898-American Masonry is introduced to the Philippines with the landing of American troops. 1899 the Scottish Rite of Masonry is initiated in May of this year.

“To say... That the Free and Accepted Masons of the Philippines are subversives and seditious is of course absurd. The members of this association are distinguished Filipinos who have always been known for their law-abiding spirit They have never been run after by the Philippine government for trying to over-throw the Republic. In fact, very many hold high government positions, bolstering and strengthening the solidity of the nation.” ~Julio Cardinal Rasales.

“The Roman Catholic Church would find nothing incompatible in Masonry, which only asks for liberty, equality, and fraternity for every individual of mankind.” ~Marcelo H. del Pilar.

A charter is granted to the Triangulo Pilar, by the Gran Oriente Espanol, on the 5th of June. Organized by Fr. Buenaventura of Bathala Lodge No. 157 along with the assistance of Juan Castaneda of the Nilad Lodge No. 144 and Cayetano Topacio of Parwaw Lodge No. 224. Father Buenaventura is the first [and perhaps the only] priest to have founded a Triangulo, that later became a Masonic Lodge. Persecuted by the Spaniards Fr. Buenaventura flees to Hong Kong where he continues his activities.

Sir Henry Halford, one of the leading physicians of the nineteenth century, says, “Of the great number of those to whom it has been my painful professional duty to have administered in the last hours of their lives, I have sometimes felt surprised that so few have appeared reluctant to go ‘To that undiscovered country from whose bourne no traveller returns.’”

“We can only serve our country by telling the naked truth, however bitter it may be.” ~Jose Rizal, Filipino leader murdered by the Roman Catholic Church.

AD 1898-the American patriot Thomas Paine declares, “You will do me the justice to remember, that I have always strenuously supported the right of every man to his own opinion, however different that opinion might be to mine. He who denies to another this right, makes a slave of himself to his present opinion, because he precludes himself the right of changing it. The most formidable weapon against errors of every kind is reason. I have never used any other, and I trust I never shall.” [The Church denies reason as a means of interpreting Scripture, it being, they claim Divinely Inspired].

Thomas Paine, a pamphleteer of the Revolution, was an associate of the European Freemasons, including Nicholas Bonneville. Bonneville was considered a radical republican and head of a neo-Masonic group known as “Friends of Truth,” which was active during the French Revolutionary War.

“All national institutions of churches, whether Jewish, Christian or Turkish, appear to me no other than human inventions, set up to terrify and enslave mankind, and monopolize power and profit.”

~Thomas Paine in The Age of Reason.

Thomas Paine's “Common Sense,” published in January of 1776, reverberated the Masonic ideals that “We have it in our power to begin the world over again...” Paine argues, “What were formerly called revolutions were little more than a change of persons or an alteration of local circumstances... What we now see in the world ... Is a renovation of the natural order of things, a system of principles as universal as truth.” ~Thomas Paine, free thinker, American revolutionist.

With the French revolution complete, Thomas Paine turned his mighty pen to religion, and for this even the liberal and newly liberated French jailed him. In a French prison, Paine completed “The Age of Reason,” “But there are times when men ... begin to doubt the truth of the Christian religion; and well they may, for it is too fanciful and too full of conjecture, inconsistency, improbability and irrationality, to afford consolation to the thoughtful man. His reason revolts against his creed. He sees that none of its articles are proved, or can be proved."

Thomas Paine describes the Church's interpretation of the Holy Bible as "Laughable" and terms "Mystery, Miracle, and Prophecy" the "Foundations of fraud." ~from Martin Bryant Summer.

Thomas Paine wrote: "I believe in the equality of man, and that religious duties consist in doing justice, in loving mercy, and endeavoring to make our fellow-creatures happy." "It is necessary to the happiness of man that he be mentally faithful to himself."

"The word of God is the creation, which we behold." "Belief in a cruel God makes a cruel man." "One good schoolmaster is of more use than a hundred priests." "I believe in one God, and no more, and I hope for happiness beyond this life." "Man has no property in man," and "The Key of Heaven is not in the keeping of any sect!"

From the Pagan beliefs, Christianity will evolve, "These stories are far older than the Pentateuch. Persian: God created the world in six days, a man called Adama, a woman called Evah, and then rested. The Etruscan, Babylonian, Phoenician, Chaldean and the Egyptian stories are much the same. The creation stories of the Avesta, the Persian scriptures of the Zoroastrians will no doubt seem very familiar to those who only know the version copied into the later Biblical Eden story, 'The Avesta tells how the God Ormuzd created the world and its first two human inhabitants in 6 days and rested on the 7th. He created the Heavens on the 1st day, water on the 2nd, earth on the 3rd, plants on the 4th, animals on the 5th and the first man and woman on the 6th. Adama and Evah are the names of the first man and woman in the Zoroastrian Scriptures." ~Col. Robert G. Ingersoll, About the Holy Bible, 1894 American politician and orator.

Every good man should remember with gratitude the brave words spoken by Thomas Paine in the French Convention against the death of King Louis. He was the first to perceive the destiny of the New World. Paine having aroused the spirit of independence, gave every energy of his soul to keep the spirit alive. He was with the army sharing its defeats and its glory. When the situation became desperate, he gave them "The Crisis."

It was a pillar of cloud by day and of fire by night, leading the way to freedom, honor, and to victory. The writings of Paine are gemmed with compact statements that carry conviction to the dullest. Day and night he labored for America, until there was a government of the people and for the people. At the close of the Revolution, no one stood higher than Thomas Paine. Having done so much for man in America, he went to France.

Upon his arrival in France he was elected a member of the French Convention, selected about the same time by the people of no less than four Departments. He was one of the committee to draft a constitution for France. In the Assembly, where nearly all were demanding the execution of the king, he had the courage to vote against death. To vote against the death of the king was to vote against his own life. He said: "We will kill the king, but not the man. We will destroy monarchy, not the monarch." ~American free thinker, Robert Green Ingersoll.

This was the sublimity of his devotion to principle, for this he was arrested, imprisoned, and doomed to death. While under sentence of death, while in the gloomy cell of his prison, Thomas Paine wrote to President Washington, asking him to say one word to Robespierre in favor of the author of "Common Sense."

Washington does not reply. He writes again. Washington, the President, paid no attention to Thomas Paine, the prisoner. The letter was thrown into the wastebasket of forgetfulness, and Thomas Paine remained condemned to death. Thomas Paine, having done so much for political liberty, turned his attention to the superstitions of his age. He published "The Age of Reason," and from that day to this, his character has been maligned by almost every priest in Christendom. All his services were forgotten. No kind word fell from any pulpit. His devotion to principle, his zeal for human rights, were no longer remembered.

He showed that the prophecies of the Old Testament had no relation whatever to Jesus Christ, and contended that Jesus Christ was simply a man. In other words, Paine was an enlightened Unitarian. Paine thought the Old Testament too barbarous to have been the work of an infinitely benevolent God. He attacked the doctrine that salvation depends upon belief.

He insisted that every man has the right to think. After the publication of these views every falsehood that malignity could coin and malice pass was given to the world by the clergy. On his return to America, after the election to the Presidency of the United States, an infidel, Thomas Jefferson, was not safe for him to appear in the public streets. He was in danger of being mobbed.

Under the very flag he had helped to put in Heaven his rights were not respected. Under the Constitution that he had suggested, his life was insecure. He had helped to give liberty to more than three million of his fellow citizens, and they were willing to deny it unto him.

He is deserted, ostracized, shunned, maligned, and cursed. He enjoyed the seclusion of a leper; but he maintained through it all his integrity. He stood by the convictions of his mind. Never for one moment did he hesitate or waver. He died almost alone.

The moment he died Christians commenced manufacturing horrors for his deathbed. They had his chamber filled with devils rattling chains, and these ancient lies are annually certified to by the respectable Christians of the present day. The truth is, he died as he had lived. Some ministers were impolite enough to visit him against his will [Several of them he ordered from his room]. A couple of Catholic priests, in all the meekness of hypocrisy, called that they might enjoy the agonies of a dying friend of man.

"Belief in a cruel God makes a cruel man." ~Thomas Paine.

The Rev. Mr. Hargrove, a Swedenborgian or New Jerusalemite minister visited Mr. Paine and informed him that his sect had found the key for interpreting the Scriptures, which had been lost for four thousand years.

"Then," said Paine, "It must have been very rusty." The Rev. Cunningham, a visitor said, "Mr. Paine, we visit you as friends and neighbors; you have now a full view of death, you cannot live long, and whoever does not believe in Jesus Christ will assuredly be damned."

"Let me," said Mr. Paine, "Have none of your popish stuff; get away with you, good morning, good morning." The Rev. Mr. Milledollar attempted to address him, but he was interrupted in the same language. When they were gone he said to Mrs. Heddon, his housekeeper, "Do not let them come here again; they intrude upon me." They soon renewed their visit, but Mrs. Hedden told them they could not be admitted, and that she thought the attempt useless, for if God did not change his mind, she was sure no human power could. ~Rickman, p. 184.

Thomas Paine, rising in his bed, the few embers of expiring life blown into flame by the breath of indignation, had the goodness to curse them both. His physician, who seems to have been a meddling fool, just as the cold hand of death was touching the patriot's heart, whispered in the dull ear of the dying man: "Do you believe, or do you wish to believe, that Jesus Christ is the son of God?" And the reply was: "I have no wish to believe on that subject." ~from the Works of Robert Green Ingersoll.

He believed in one God and no more. It is still fashionable to denigrate this man, and yet Channing, Theodore Parker, Longfellow, Emerson, and all the liberal Unitarians and Universalists of the world have adopted the opinions of Thomas Paine.

"The religion that is afraid of science dishonors God and commits suicide." ~Ralph Waldo Emerson.

AD 1898-A. E. Waite, a writer on ceremonial magic, black magic, incantations, sorcery, and medieval grimoires writes his classical work on Goetia in "The Book of Ceremonial Magic."

AD 1899-Archbishop Bernardino Nozaleda is excommunicated by Father Gregario Aglipay of Manila, later to become Aguinaldo's counselor in religious matters, for violating the Council of Trent by not revealing the true conditions existing in the Philippines.

Aglipay supports a true separation of Church and State [liberation of the church powers from the civil authorities]. In the Philippines today, as in many other third world countries, the Church claims to represent the poor yet demands exemption from paying taxes, which those they allege to help must pay.

"I bring you this stately matron named Christendom, returning bedraggled, besmirched, and dishonored from pirate raids in Kiao-Chow, Manchuria, South Africa, and the Philippines, with her soul full of meanness, her pocket full of boodle, and her mouth full of pious hypocrisies. Give her soap and a towel, but hide the looking-glass." ~Mark Twain, Speech to the Red Cross, New York, December 31, 1899.

AD 1899-In a published letter to Cardinal Gibbons in 1899 the Pope sternly, in fact disdainfully, condemns what he called "Americanism;" by which he meant precisely that modification of the Roman teaching which apologists now put before the public as Catholic social and political ethic's.

Later Popes were more sensitive of American generosity, and the apologists are now permitted to say that these principles are not only sound American but sound Roman, because Jefferson, a dogmatic Materialist and Deist, with total disregard toward the Pope, and his blasphemers friend John Adams learned them from Catholic theologians [the Jesuits].

"Few theologians would care to pursue their research to its logical conclusion and finally assert, as did Thomas Paine, that the Biblical account of Jesus 'Has every mark of fraud and imposition stamped upon the face of it.'" ~George Smith, Atheism: The Case Against God, Buffalo, NY: Prometheus, 1989, pp. 203-204. cf. Thomas Paine, Age of Reason.

AD 1900-Karl Krafft, Swiss Astrologer, employed by the Nazis and their propaganda machine, suggested that General Montgomery's Astrological chart was stronger than Field Marshal Rommel's interpretations.

AD 1901-America, seeking to spread its power as previous European countries had done with their colonies, looks to the Philippines.

The Catholic Church uses its persuasion to convince Americans that we need new lands for security of our way of life and our need to occupy this land. General Arthur MacArthur is sent to protect American interests.

New York: The death of Mary Anderson, who lived her life as Murray Hall and had married two women.

AD 1901-Bible: The American Standard Version is published, later revised by the International Council of Religious Education producing the Revised Standard Version [RSX] in 1946-52.

AD 1902-Pope Leo XIII, re-establishes a commission to study the "Comma Johanneum" [an ancient manuscript on Scripture] more closely. A report as to its authenticity was disputed. The Roman Catholic Westminster Version of the New Testament, published in 1931, has the footnote to 1 John 5:7-8 after calling attention to its omission in the original Catholic texts: "Until further action be taken by the Holy See it is not open to Catholic editors to eliminate the words from a version made for the use of the faithful." In 1947, the same version republished as one volume, the interpolation is omitted, editor Cuthbert Lattey citing the Greek text published by Jesuit scholar A. Merk, which also omits it.

"We need not hesitate to declare our conviction that the disputed words were not written by Saint John: that they were originally brought into Latin copies in Africa from the margin, where they had been placed as a pious and Orthodox gloss on Version 8: that from the Latin they crept into two or three late Greek codices, and thence into the printed Greek text, a place to which they had no rightful claim." ~F. H. A. Scrivener, 4th edition, 1894, volume 2, page 407, A Plain Introduction to the Criticism of the New Testament.

"For there are three that bear record in heaven, the Father, the Word, and the Holy Ghost: and these three are one" are still included in the New King James Version. There are basically two classifications of Greek Bibles for our modern English Bibles today, those that agree with the two Catholic manuscripts, "Vaticanus" and "Sinaiticus," and those that agree with the "Textus Receptus."

"For one thing... [Codex] Vaticanus and Sinaiticus disagree with each other over 3000 times in the Gospels alone..." ~Barry Burton.

"It was written on fine vellum [tanned animal skins] and remains in excellent condition. It was found in the Vatican Library in 1481 AD. In spite of being in excellent condition, it omits Genesis 1:1-Genesis 46:28, Psalm 106-138, Matthew 16:2-3, the Pauline pastoral Epistles, Hebrews 9:14-13:25, and all of Revelation. These parts were probably left out on purpose." ~Ibid

Christian schools often tell their Bible students that Codices Sinaiticus and Vaticanus are older and better than any other ancient manuscripts, the implication being that they must, therefore be more accurate. But this conclusion is wrong; Codex Sinaiticus and Vaticanus are corrupt beyond measure. "... Why have those countries with a strong Church-State alliance displayed such an eagerness to enforce religious dogmas and eliminate dissent through the power of the state. Why has Christianity refused, whenever possible, to allow its beliefs to compete in a free marketplace of ideas? The answer is obvious, and revealing. Christianity is peddling an inferior product, one that cannot withstand critical investigation. Unable to compete favorably with other theories, it has sought to gain a monopoly through a state franchise, which means: through the use of force." ~George Smith, Atheism: The Case Against God, Buffalo, NY: Prometheus, 1989, p. 114.

"There is one notable thing about our Christianity: bad, bloody, merciless, money-grabbing and predatory as it is; in our country particularly, and in all other Christian countries in a somewhat modified degree, it is still a hundred times better than the Christianity of the Bible, with its prodigious crime, the invention of Hell. Measured by our Christianity of today, bad as it is, hypocritical as it is, empty and hollow as it is, neither the Deity nor His Son is a Christian, nor qualified for that moderately high place. Ours is a terrible religion. The fleets of the world could swim in spacious comfort in the innocent blood it has spiled.” ~Mark Twain, Reflections on Religion.

As a young man and years before his involvement with the Revision Committee, Hort had already developed a negative predisposition toward the Textus Receptus. At age twenty-three he wrote to an acquaintance: “... I had no idea till the last few weeks of the importance of texts, having read so little Greek Testament. and dragged on with the villainous Textus Receptus... Think of that vile Textus Receptus leaning entirely on late manuscripts; it is a blessing there are such early ones.” ~from Life and Letters of F.J.A Hort.

“This Codex [Vaticanus] was also produced in the 4th century. It was found over a thousand years later in 1481 in the Vatican library in Rome, where it is currently held. It is written on expensive vellum, a fine parchment originally from the skin of calf or antelope. Some authorities claim that it was one of a batch of 50 Bibles ordered from Egypt by the Roman Emperor Constantine: hence its beautiful appearance and the expensive skins which were used for its pages.” ~D. B. Loughran.

The Catholicized Codex Vaticanus is claimed by many to be the oldest and best Greek manuscript, yet Vaticanus omits:

- † All of I Timothy
- † All of II Timothy
- † All of Titus
- † Nearly all of Genesis. ~Genesis 1 to 46:29.
- † The last twelve verses of Mark's Gospel. ~Mark 16:9-20.
- † Our Lord's prayer on the cross. “Father forgive them..” ~Luke 23:34.
- † Our Lord's agony and bloodlike sweat in the Garden of Gethsemane. ~Luke 22:44.
- † The last four and a half chapters of Hebrews. ~Hebrews 9:14 to 13:25
- † Thirty three of the Psalms. ~Psalms 106–138.
- † Plus numerous other omissions.

Codex Sinaiticus, second of the “Odest and best” manuscripts, has a history. Scholars discern the hand of ten different scribes, making many, many alterations over a period of several hundred years. Tischendorf the discovered of Sinaiticus noted 12,000 alterations in the text. ~The New American Standard Version And The Deity of Christ By Cecil J. Carter, 1963.

The “Textus Receptus” in essence the name given to the majority of the Greek manuscripts. On May 18th Pope Leo XIII issues “Anum Ingressi” against Masonry. Let it be remembered that the Popes have committed every crime of which human nature is capable, and that not one of them was the friend of intellectual liberty, freedom of the press, or individual rights, that not one of them has ever shed one ray of light, although many have spoken of it.

The fascination with these two codices is especially perplexing considering these two codices contradict each other over 3000 times in the Gospels alone. ~read The Four-Fold Superiority Of The King James Version, By Dr. D.A. Waite.

The Bible is the greatest book never finished. Some of the changes are:

- † 1610, introduction of the King James Version. The Greek text used for the King James Version, which is the ‘Textus Receptus,’ took less than a year to be produced by Erasmus. The Received Text, Textus Receptus, [TR] “... Was not based on early manuscripts, not reliably edited, and consequently not trustworthy.” ~ Geisler/W. Nix A General Introduction to the Bible. Note: In his book, Missing In Modern Bibles - Is the Full Story Being Told? Pastor Jack Moorman has actually counted every word in the New Testament Greek Texts, both of the Received Text [Textus Receptus] and the Revised Text. Pastor Jack Moorman found that of the 140,521 Greek words in the Received Text, a total of 2,886 words were omitted from the Revised Text of Nestle-Aland and Westcott and Hort. These 2,886 words have affected 356 doctrinal passages! Quoted in The New American Standard Version Exposed! Is this the Word of God? by David B. Loughran.
- † It was common knowledge that King James was an overt homosexual with a preference for young boys. ~See Leviticus 20:13 for Biblical designation of this type of act.
- † 1611, edition had, “Then cometh Judas” at Matthew 26:36, now, “Then cometh Jesus.” Erasmus, the devout Catholic and originator of the alleged, “Inerrant,” Greek text later to be called the “Textus Receptus” dedicates his work to Pope Leo X.

- † 1612, there are over 30 different editions of the 'Textus Receptus' [referred to as: TR] and none are 100% identical. "The King James translators knew Greek less well than they knew Latin so they constantly relied on the Latin to get themselves through the Greek." ~Dr. Wallace. And, the Latin was the already the Catholicized version of Scriptures. The original King James Version had a calendar of annual Holy days which all believers were to follow such as: Purification of the Virgin Mary, Annunciation of our Lady, Innocents day, etc..
- † Early editions used either "He" or "She" at Ruth 3:15. Some historians believe that the 'Old Bard,' Shakespeare had a hand in the King James Version: in Psalms 46, the 46th word is shake, from the end of the scripture, ignore Selah, and counting backwards 46 words, the word is "Spear."
- † The 14th word is "Will." Go to the rear and count back to words 32 and 31 (14+32=46) and you will obtain the words, 'I am' Placing them all together and get his signature, "Will-I am Shake-spear." Coincidence?
- † 1613, The teaching that the King James translators had a perfect Greek text is even denied by the translators themselves. In the original edition of 1611 are marginal notes as follows: Note on Luke 17:36, "This 36th verse is wanting in most of the Greek copies."
- † Note on Acts 25:6 where their text reads: "When he had tarried among them more than ten days," they inserted the following marginal note: "Or, as some copies read, 'no more than eight or ten days.'"
- † 1616, There are no paragraph marks after Acts 20:36
- † Between 1611 and 1644 alone, there were 182 editions
- † 1629, edition omitted the Apocrypha
- † 1638, edition by Goad, Ward, Boyse and Mead
- † 1659, William Kilburne found 20,000 errors in six different editions made in the 1650's
- † 1660, marginal references introduced
- † 1683, Dr. Anthony Scargood added 7,250 references
- † 1727, thousands of errors are amended by the King's Printer
- † 1762, italics extended by Therold and Paris and modernized the English language
- † 1769, extensive revisions by B. Blayney
- † The 1795 edition, became known as the 'Murderers Bible,' which rendered Mark 7:27 as "Let the children first be killed," instead of 'Filled.'
- † Blayney's, 1769 edition, becomes the standard.
- † In 1851 the American Bible Society compared six different editions of the King James Bible and discovered over 24,000 variations between the editions of the same Bible translation, which alleviates the concept of an inerrant King James Bible when even the different editions of the King James Bible contain ten's of thousands of variant readings. 1873 the Cambridge Paragraph Bible edited by Scrivener. ~Bible Translations by Heinz Schmitz

- ✠ “Not to boast in another man's line of things made ready to our hand.” ~2 Corinthians 10:16.
The words of the wise are as goads, and as nails fastened by the masters of assemblies, which are given from one shepherd. ~Ecclesiastes 12:11.
- ✠ “For some with conscience of the idol unto this hour eat it as a thing offered unto an idol.” ~2 Corinthians 8:7, Bible Translations by Heinz Schmitz.

What does history say of this good King James who ordered his own Version of Scripture? He was homosexual, loved to torture women, and was not very brave in battle [he even soiled his pants when he saw the enemy approaching].

“The third major characteristic of God, 'Infinite,' is the catchall, the universal modifier of Christian theology. God is not merely a being; he is infinite being. God is not merely good; he is infinite goodness. God is not merely wise; he is infinite wisdom, and so on down the list. God is exaggeration run amok.”

~George Smith, Atheism, The Case Against God, Buffalo, NY: Prometheus, 1989, p. 68.

“He [King James of England] disdained women and fawned unconscionably on his favorite men.”

~Encyclopedia Americana, pp. 674,675

AD 1902-The Shrine Club is organized under the name, “Bamboo Oasis” in the Philippines [In the 21st century, the Church still sees these individuals as a threat to their domination of religion and now can no longer use death or torture, but merely excommunication to control their membership].

AD 1902-1961-Louis De Wohl, Austrian Astrologer, after reflecting on the advances of the Third Reich during World War II deduced that Astrological signs are influencing Hitler. De Wohl is enlisted in the British War Office as an officer for covert purposes of providing information based on Astrological Calculations. His predictions are accurate in the North African Campaign where Hitler would attack when two major malefics, Saturn and Uranus were in the Zodiacal sign of the nation in question.

AD 1902-Pope Leo XIII, issues “Annum Ingressi,” on 18 March, to the Catholic Bishops of the world reviewing the 25 years of his Pontificate and encouraging resistance to Freemasonry. The attitude of the Vatican has not always coincided with the attitude of the clergy or of the people.

An American, Bishop Carroll, wrote in a letter in 1794, “I do not pretend that these decrees [against Freemasonry] are received generally by the Church, or have full authority in these dioceses.” The Americans were too independent thinking, valuing individual rights, to give the Vatican full accord in their wishes, as many fighters for freedom were also Masons. ~from Freemasonry in New Catholic Encyclopedia prepared by an Editorial staff at The Catholic University of America, Washington, DC., McGraw-Hill Book Co.

AD 1903-The Weymouth Bible is published.

Anti-Jewish pogroms continue in Russia, causing hundreds of thousands of deaths during the first two decades of the 20th century.

“Let Catholic writers take care when defending the cause of the proletariat and the poor not to use language calculated to inspire among the people aversion to the upper [authoritarian, ruling] classes of society.” ~Pope Pius X, letter to the Bishops of Italy, 18 December 1903.

AD 1904-The birth, in New York City, of artist Paul Cadmus, who superbly portrayed lusty sailors, which caused the U.S. Navy much trepidation and had his painting destroyed for being “Inappropriate.”

AD 1905-The Russian secret police write a piece of fiction named the “Protocols of the Elders of Zion.” A Russian Orthodox priest, Sergius Nilus, publishes them publicly in 1905, promoting it as the record of “Secret rabbinical conferences whose aim was to subjugate and exterminate the Christians.”

The forgeries are still being circulated as they appear from time to time in Muslim media. Wal-Mart stocked them in their online bookstore until September, 2004.

Sigmund Freud, Austrian physician, publishes his Drei Abhandlungen zur Sexualtheorie where sadism and masochism are described as illnesses resulting from unfinished or faulty development of a child's personality. Psychoanalysis, a form of speculative philosophy with no empirical basis, becomes the dominating theory in psychiatry for the next 60 years.

To the Catholics, illness is caused by sinfulness and the presence of the Devil, “As for the demented, I hold it certain that all beings deprived of reason are thus afflicted only by the Devil.” ~Martin Luther, 1521.

AD 1907-Under Saint Pius X, September 8th, the "Pascendi Dominic Grecis" enjoins all previous prohibitions and censorship of books and doctrines in a 'Purity of Morals' effort to protect its membership under the guise of Purity of Faith.

"Henceforth it will be the task of this Sacred Congregation not only to examine carefully the books denounced to it, to prohibit them if necessary, and to grant permission for reading Forbidden Books, but also to supervise, Ex Officio, books that are being published, and to pass sentence on such as deserve to be prohibited. Its further task is to remind the Bishops of their sacred duty to combat the publication of pernicious writings and give information about them to the Apostolic See, in accordance with the Constitution Officiorum ad Munerum of 25 January, 1897" ~Acta S. Sedis, XLI, 432, from the Catholic Encyclopedia.

AD 1907-1945-Dietrich Bonhoeffer, an outspoken opponent of Adolf Hitler and the Nazi regime during WWII on their rise to power in 1933. Bonhoeffer joined the Confessing Church, which refused to go along with the Nazi attempt to impose anti-Semitism on the Christian churches and society.

Bonhoeffer spends two years as pastor of German-speaking congregations in London and is called back to Germany in 1935, where Bonhoeffer become director of a seminary of the Confessing Church at Finkenwald, Pomerania. This "Prohibited" enterprise was eventually closed by the Nazi Gestapo [internal security police]. At the start of World War II, Bonhoeffer joined in the political struggle to counteract Hitler's anti-Semitic religious efforts that led to his imprisonment in April 1943 in Berlin and to his death by hanging at the Nazi concentration camp at Flossenbürg, Germany on April 9, 1945.

AD 1907-Pope Pius X declares it is forbidden to publish, read or keep books, teachings, or recommend sorcery, practice soothsaying, magic spiritism or similar superstitious things. All Bishops, Apostolic Vicars, and Missionaries are obligated under the Congregation of Propaganda [Paragraph 34] to insure the implementation of censorship and approbation of all religious writings.

A further proclaimed effort to contain pernicious writings, protect the natural laws of man, prevent literary endangerment of the congregation, and curtail innovators [Modernists] and their new perspective on religious thought. "Who has made Germany famous, her priests, or her scientists?" ~Goethe.

AD 1908-1908: The Inquisition now becomes the Holy Office, which does not sound so foreboding.

AD 1909-Pius X, has decreed the establishment in every diocese of a board of censors and of a vigilance committee whose functions are to find out and report on writings and persons tainted with the heresy of Modernism. ~Pope Pius X, Encyclical, Pascendi 8 Sept., 1907.

The Fundamentalist Movement begins with the "Fundamentals," published in twelve volumes, which espouses the infallibility of Scripture and renounces the scientific research of Biblical lore.

The Bible Belt: Two Negro men are accused of oral sex with one another in Kentucky, but they are not convicted as the judge could not find any law on the civil books under which to find them guilty. The judge urged lawmakers to remedy this problem, and soon many states outlawed oral sex.

"Moreover, he [Moses] has rightly detested the weasel. For he means, 'Thou shall not be like to those whom we hear of as committing wickedness with the mouth with the body through uncleanness [orally consummated sex]; nor shall thou be joined to those impure women who commit iniquity with the mouth with the body through uncleanness.'" ~Letter of Bamabas, 10:8, 74 C.E., see Leviticus 11:29.

Some people think that the Bible has nothing to say about oral sex, but it does says that sex within marriage [man and woman] is Holy and good. It is commanded. ~1 Corinthians 7:3-5.

"There is virtually nothing, which the Christian will accept as evidence of God's evil. If disasters that are admittedly 'Unmerited, pointless, and incapable of being morally rationalized' [quoting Hick] are compatible with the 'Goodness' of God, what could possibly qualify as contrary evidence? The 'Goodness' of God, it seems, is compatible with any state of affairs. While we evaluate a man with reference to his actions, we are not similarly permitted to judge God. God is immune from the judgment of evil as a matter of principle." ~George Smith, Atheism: The Case Against God, Buffalo, NY: Prometheus, 1989, p. 86

"But I wonder why he [the heretic Jovinianus] set Judah and Tamar before us for an example, unless perchance even harlots give him pleasure; or Onan, who was slain because he grudged his brother seed. Does he imagine that we approve of any sexual intercourse except for the procreation of children?" ~Saint Jerome, Against Jovinian, 1:19, 393 C.E.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

And, “Moreover, he [Moses] has rightly detested the weasel [Leviticus 11:29]. For he means, Thou shall not be like to those whom we hear of as committing wickedness with the mouth with the body through uncleanness [orally consummated sex]; nor shall thou be joined to those impure women who commit iniquity with the mouth with the body through uncleanness.” ~Letter of Barnabas 10:8, 74 C.E.

Going against Scripture, the Catholic Church says, oral sex is okay for Catholics if they conclude their sexual union with regular sex, but the Jehovah's Witnesses forbid oral sex as sinful. ~1 Corinthians 6:13.

Some staunch Christians still stand by the old adage that sex is for procreation, and not recreation, “But I wonder why he [the heretic, Jovinianus] set Judah and Tamar before us for an example, unless perchance even harlots give him pleasure; or Onan, who was slain because he grudged his brother seed. Does he imagine that we approve of any sexual intercourse except for the procreation of children?” ~Saint Jerome, Against Jovinian 1:19, 393 C.E.

“For necessary sexual intercourse for begetting [children] is alone worthy of marriage. But that which goes beyond this necessity no longer follows reason but lust. And yet it pertains to the character of marriage... To yield it to the partner lest by fornication the other sin damnably [through adultery]... [T]hey [must] not turn away from them the mercy of God... By changing the natural use into that, which is against nature, which is more damnable when it is done in the case of husband or wife. For, whereas that natural use, when it pass beyond the compact of marriage, that is, beyond the necessity of begetting [of children], is pardonable in the case of a wife, damnable in the case of a harlot; that which is against nature is execrable when done in the case of a harlot, but more execrable in the case of a wife. Of so great power is the ordinance of the Creator, and the order of creation, that.. When the man shall wish to use a body part of the wife not allowed for this purpose [either orally or anally consummated sex], the wife is more shameful, if she suffer it to take place in her own case, than if in the case of another woman [Lesbianism].” ~Saint Augustine, The Good of Marriage 11-12, 401 C.E.

“For thus the Eternal Law, that is, the will of God Creator of all creatures, taking counsel for the conservation of natural order, not to serve lust, but to see to the preservation of the race, permits the delight of mortal flesh to be released from the control of reason in copulation only to propagate progeny.” ~Saint Augustine, Against Faustus 22:30.

Lies, fraud, deceit, dishonesty, and outright trickery were common among the Christian priesthood in the 4th century that, “St. Augustine found lying among the clergy so prevalent that he wrote two books [De Mendacio in 395 C.E. and Contra Mendacium in 420 C.E.], urging that it stop.” ~Gordon Stein, A Second Anthology of Atheism and Rationalism, p. 65.

The Catholic Church teaches that each act of sex must be open to life and that contraception is not permitted. “... Church teaches us that we can make God happy by being miserable ourselves; that a nun is holier in the sight of God than a loving mother with her child in her thrilled and thrilling arms; that a priest is better than a father; that celibacy is better than that passion of love that has made everything of beauty in this world. That church tells the girl of sixteen or eighteen years of age, with eyes like dew and light; that girl with the red of health in the white of her beautiful cheeks tells that girl, 'Put on the veil, woven of death and night, kneel upon stones, and you will please God.' I tell you that, by law, no girl should be allowed to take the veil and renounce the joys and beauties of this life.” ~Col. Robert Ingersoll, American free thinker.

In the Songs of Solomon we have a love poem:

- † Song 1:2, “May he kiss me with the kisses of his mouth! For your love is better than wine.”
- † Song 1:13, “My beloved is to me a pouch of myrrh, which lies all night between my breasts.”
- † Song 2:3, “Like an apple tree among the trees of the forest, so is my beloved among the young men. In his shade I took great delight and sat down, and his fruit was sweet to my taste.”
- † Song 2:6, “Let his left hand be under my head and his right hand embrace me.”
- † Song 3:1, “On my bed night after night I sought him whom my soul loves...”
- † Song 4:5, “Your two breasts are like two fawns, twins of a gazelle, which feed among the lilies.”
- † And Song 4:16, “Awake, O north wind, and come, wind of the south; make my garden breathe out fragrance. Let its spices be wafted abroad. May my beloved come into his garden and eat its choice fruits!”
- † In Song 7:7 we read, “I said, 'I will climb the palm tree. I will take hold of its fruit stalks.’

Oh, may your breasts be like clusters of the vine."

AD 1910-The Eugenic Record Office is founded in the United States and uses the research results of the Galton Laboratory of National Eugenics to design practical applications.

Eugenics is to be used as the "Scientific" basis upon which racism is fused to politics and religion.

The Holy Mother, the Church, passes resolutions to boycott the Encyclopedia Britannica, Watson's Magazine, the Protestant Magazine, the Menace, etc., attempting to act as Censor of the United States Mails.

At the annual convention of the American Federation of Catholic Societies, held at New Orleans, November 13-16, 1910, resolutions are passed calling for the passage of Federal laws to prevent the transmission by the United States mails of matter considered offensive to the Roman Catholic Church. In these resolutions post office employees are boldly called upon to destroy [without any warrant of law] any such mail in transit. The leading ecclesiastic at this convention was Archbishop Falconio, Papal Delegate to the Roman Catholic Church in America. ~From Papal Despotism, Chapter VIII of Romanism, by Father Jeremiah J. Crowley, 1912.

Several large parcels of printed matter mailed at the General Post Office in Chicago during the months of December, 1910, and January and February, 1911, never reached their destinations the destruction commenced immediately after the New Orleans convention.

The threat of exposure eventually frightened Rome and her Jesuitical Gestapo agents, and since then the mail has continued on its prescribed path unmolested, for Rome fears publicity! Advocacy of Freedom of the Press?

At the Columbus Ohio convention, a "Boycott" is declared against the 'Encyclopedia Britannica,' by Cardinal Farley, a principal under the Pope of Rome. And yet, there are still those today who will deny the influence of the Papacy in this modern era of mass communications.

Among the Klementi tribe in Albania, if a virgin swears before twelve witnesses that she refuses to ever marry, she is allowed to live as a man, carry weapons, and herding livestock. ~Note: Still true in the 21st century.

"No Catholic should purchase the eleventh edition of the Encyclopedia Britannica. No purchaser of it is bound to keep or pay for a work which falls so far short of the representation of the editors and publishers. It should be debarred from our public libraries, schools and other institutions. It should be denounced everywhere, in season and out of season, as a shameful attempt to perpetuate ignorance, bigotry and fanaticism in matters of religion." ~Cardinal Farley, Papal Despotism, Chapter VIII of Romanism, by Father Jeremiah J. Crowley, 1912.

Mr. Samuel Byrne, editor of the Pittsburgh Observer, pro Roman Catholic, addressing the Catholic editors at the Columbus convention, said, "I have come here for the purpose of very briefly suggesting one thing. It is this: That the Catholic editors of the country, concertedly and persistently, urge their readers to notify the proprietors and managers of the daily papers that unless they use instead of the European dispatches of the Associated Press, those furnished by the newly established Catholic International United Telegraph Agency, they will withdraw their patronage from them, either as readers or as advertisers, and will, moreover, boycott both the offending newspapers and those who advertise in them." ~Papal Despotism, Chapter VIII of Romanism, by Father Jeremiah J. Crowley, 1912, www.infidels.org.

The return of Halley's Comet is seen as an indication of the Lord Jesus' return, and one enterprising young man sells comet pills to protect people from comet gases.

AD 1911-A law is passed in the Netherlands prohibiting sexual contact between members of the same sex under the age of 21. The law sparks Dutch nobleman Jacob Schorer to form Nederlandsch Wetenschappelijk Humanitair Komitee, which is modeled after Hirschfeld's Scientific Humanitarian Committee in Germany. The Nederlandsch Wetenschappelijk Humanitair Komitee provided support to homosexuals until 1940 when Schorer destroyed its records to prevent them from falling into the hands of the Nazis.

AD 1912-Jeremiah Crowley: an Irish priest who later professed Protestantism, exposes the Jesuits, with their "Knights of Columbus," founded 1882 having been named after the explorer Columbus, whom he says Columbus was a Spanish Jew, a pirate, a deflowerer of young girls, and that Columbus was no Christian [Columbus is actually Portuguese].

That the purpose of the Knights of Columbus was to fulfill Jesuit politics and those political ambitions were to restore the temporal power of the Pope.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

The Scientific Humanitarian Committee polls candidates for the forthcoming Reichstag election in Germany to learn their view on gay issues and ninety-one out of the ninety-six who respond say that they favor homosexual rights.

AD1913-Homosexuals A Security Risk(?): Alfred Redl, the head of Austrian Intelligence, is exposed as a double agent who is also working for the Russians. Redl commits suicide the next morning. Authorities, upon searching his rooms find abundant indications that Redl had been a homosexual. The widely publicized case gives standing to the idea that homosexuals are security risks, and 37 years later, a U.S. Senator, Joseph McCarthy, uses the Redl case to raise similar homosexual fears.

AD1914-1918-World War I breaks out all across Europe. Nationalism, another word for prejudice is the principle contributor. Because of the atrocities committed during the war many people believe that religion has failed. It isn't God, but man in his ignorance that has failed.

Pope Benedict XV, 3 September 1914 to 22 January 1922, warns the world, in 1920, against, "The advent of a Universal Republic, which is longed for by all the worst elements of disorder," which is resented by some Jews because of Jewish sponsorship, and direction of such projects as the League of Nations and United Nations. And in effect, all Popes who have issued editions of the Index Expurgatorius, in which Jewish genocidal and anti-Christian writings are condemned, according to the Christian instructions of the Council of Trent.

Charles Taze Russell, whose public Bible studies form the foundation of the Watchtower Bible and Tract Society, says Christ had returned to earth in 1874 and would begin his visible reign in 1914. Jehovah's Witness literature later spoke of "The Creator's promise of a peaceful and secure new world before the generation that saw the events of 1914 passes away."

End of the World: 1914 is one of the important first estimates of the start of the War of Armageddon by the Jehovah's Witnesses. ~Watchtower Bible and Tract Society.

The Jehovah's Witnesses computed 1914 from prophecy in the Book of Daniel, Chapter 4. The writings refer to "Seven times."

The Watch Tower Society interpreted each "Time" as being equal to 360 days, giving a total of 2,520 days. This is further interpreted as representing 2,520 years, measured from the starting date of 607 B.C.E. This gives 1914 as the target date of Armageddon. When 1914 passed without incident, they changed their prediction; 1914 then became the year that Jesus invisibly began his rule. The years; 1914, 1915, 1918, 1920, 1925, 1941, 1975 and 1994, etc. are other dates that the Watchtower Society [WTS] or its members also predicted the End Times, "Battle of the Great Day of God Almighty" [Armageddon].

"Gnostics predicted the imminent arrival of God's Kingdom as early as the 1st century." The Shakers thought the world would be over in 1792, while the Jehovah's Witnesses pegged various years between 1914 and 1994 as an End Time date. ~2007 article in The New York Times.

AD1915-Free Thinkers abound throughout mankind's history, only their works are often secreted away somewhere less visible, "God is not all that exists. God is all that does not exist." ~Remy de Gourmont, 1858-1915, French novelist, critic, philosopher, free thinker.

AD1916- December 30th, Grigori Rasputin is poisoned, stabbed, and shot [murdered]. The Mad Russian monk is a famous sexual explorer who spent a number of years initiating young women into the reportedly Christian cult of flagellants before he settled into the royal court of Czar Nicholas and Alexandria. There is no evidence that his position in the Russian court either stopped, or impeded, his involvement with the female flagellants cult.

AD1917-Code of Canon Law: the Catholic Church incorporates the position of previous Papal Encyclicals into religious statutory law, the Catholic Church deeming that Freemasonry is a threat.

"Those who joined a Masonic sect, or other societies of the same sort, plot against the church or against legitimate civil authority, incur excommunication." ~Imposed by Pope Benedict XV, See also AD1854.

The Church is vehement in its struggle to have this group of freethinkers acquiesce to their rule and authority as Pope John Paul will proclaim the same again in the year 2000.

AD1917-The JPS Bible Translation [The Jewish Publication Society] Primarily based on the King James Version of the Bible.

AD 1917-1922-There some who say that say that Lenin, was half-Jew, and a Freemason, for Jewish Freemasonry is believed to be controlled by the Jesuit Order and responsible for implementing Communism in Russia. Civil war took place in Russia from 1917-1922, for 5 years, and made to appear that it was Yiddish [Jewish] in origin.

On the streets people were observed talking Yiddish; they had Yiddish signs; and it was sought after to give the impression to the world that this revolution was of Jewish origin. Conspiracy theorists will have you believe that both Lenin and Stalin were Freemasons and Jesuit trained. Upon the death of Lenin, Stalin will capitalize upon the Orthodox Christians and their belief that saints' bodies do not decompose by enlisting the services of Russia's most outstanding embalmers to preserve Lenin's body.

The new revolutionary government of the Soviet Union abolishes the sodomy laws of the previous tsarist regime.

Church Loses Power: The new Bolshevik government in Russia says it will now recognize only civil marriages.

November 2nd, Balfour Declaration. UK, the 7th world power works for Jewish Homeland in Israel. The 2520 year alleged Curse of the Law on the sons of Israel [of Leviticus 26 and Deuteronomy 28] ends. God no longer prohibits the sons of Israel from returning to the archetypal Promised Land, and no longer prohibits them from winning military battles etc. The Israelis have become the same as any other race.

AD 1918-Effective: Title XXIII, Censorship and Prohibition of Books, Article 1227.

The President and Governors of Jehovah's Witnesses are arrested and incarcerated on May 7th 1918.

There is no Freedom of the Press in Catholicism, only the Church can decide what one may read, "The Church has the right to rule that Catholics shall not publish any books unless they have first been subjected to the approval of the Church, and to forbid for a good reason the faithful to read certain books, no matter by whom they are published. The rules of this title concerning books are to be applied also to daily papers, periodicals, and any other publication, unless the contrary is clear from the Canons." ~Catholic Church Canon 1384.

The Church justifies this prohibition for the "Purity of Faith." "Catholic teaching holds that any Roman Catholic, any non-Catholic Christian, or any non-Christian of whatever other religion who receives God's Salvation receives it through the spiritual office of that one man in Rome and the merits of his Church of Believers." ~Malachi Martin, Rich Church, Poor Church.

AD 1918-Billy Graham, William Franklin Graham, Baptist Evangelist, in the early 1950's will introduce a new media for collections, the television, which will prove fertile ground for the tele-evangelists of the 20th century. Has the ministry already forgotten? "You cannot serve God and money." ~Matthew 6:24.

The 20th century ministry drive around in flashy cars, live in beautiful mansions, and wear their haughty sartorial splendor in defiance of the very book, which they teach. Jesus sums up His faith, according to the Christian Scriptures, with Matthew, where many Christians will be surprised to find that the first pillar of practice mentioned is in giving alms in charity. On December 12th, the Federal Council of Churches of America passes a resolution that the League of Nations is the political expression of God's Kingdom on earth and is "Of the Kingdom of God."

But Jesus also warns Christians to also avoid hypocrisy in the giving of alms. In other words, his Scriptural purpose is to help the poor, not one's self, which means that all the Christian Churches that collect monies and use these funds for personal gain [luxury cars, lavish homes, sumptuous churches, jewelry, etc.] are in actuality stealing from God. Jesus wore no jewelry, Jesus wore no fine robes, Jesus did not preach from an extravagant church. ~Matthew 6:1-4.

AD 1918-The fact that the Vatican attempts to impose its will upon its subjects cannot be denied. However, we are creatures of free will, free to choose one's vocation, free to choose what we read and study, and free to make decisions based on what we have knowledge of.

"As an individual, I worship my God in accordance with my own religious belief. But as the head of State, I can have no more to do with the Catholic Church than I can with a Protestant denomination, the Aglipayan, the Mohammedan, or another religious organization or sect in the Philippines. And no authority of any church has any right to interfere with the affairs of the government." ~Manuel Quezon of the Philippines

AD1919-Licio Gelli: born April 21, 1919 in Pistoia, Italy with no formal education beyond his teens, and is not a Catholic but is an Oberleutnant in the SS in Italy, working for the Nazis as a "Liaison officer" during WWII. After the war, he helped the Nazis in their flight to South America. His fee was 40% of their stolen money.

He had important contacts in South America and became a close friend of Juan Peron. Closure of his secret dossier was obtained by helping the Allied Forces. His area of expertise was information: secret dossiers on bankers, politicians, etc. In 1963, he joined an Italian Masonic Lodge, and soon formed another secret lodge "Raggruppamento Gelli," or "P2."

Through his friend, Umberto Ortolani, he gained affiliation with the "Knights of Malta," and the "Holy Sepulcher." In 1981, a raid on Gelli's home, in search of evidence of his involvement with Sindona, netted a list of 962 P2 members. Gelli is arrested, tried, and sentenced to 4 years in prison with a 16 billion lire fine. In 1982, Gelli returns to Europe to obtain Exocet missiles, on the black market for Argentina, in its Falklands War against Britain. He's arrested in Switzerland on a false passport attempting a $55 million transfer into his account in Uruguay.

Jehovah's Witnesses believe that from 1919, Jehovah's Witnesses were selected by God to be his Chosen People. Jehovah's Witnesses believe 1918 to be the time when Christ Jesus judged all world religions, teaching that after a period of 18 months, among all groups and religions, there was found only one that was humbly doing the will of Jesus Christ, the Savior. Jehovah's Witnesses claim the Bible Students who later became known as "Jehovah's Witnesses" in 1931.

End of the World: Meteorologist Albert Porta predicts that the conjunction of six planets will generate a magnetic current that will cause the sun to explode and engulf the earth on December 17th. If you're reading this, it didn't happen.

AD1920-Roberto Calvi, nicknamed "Il Cavaliere," "The knight," was born Apr. 13, 1920 in Milan, Italy and educated at Bocconi University. In 1947 he began working for the "Banco Ambrosiano," Archbishop Montini's bank, and in 1963 is promoted to Central Manager of Banco Ambrosiano. Sindona introduces Calvi to Bishop Marcinkus in 1971, both men being in the money laundering business. One of the branches of Banco Ambrosiano in Nassau has Bishop Marcinkus as one of its Board Members.

When the news of the Vatican Bank investigations reached him, he became certain that the new Pope was out to get him. On Jan 29, 1979, Judge Alessandrini, investigating the Banco Ambrosiano case is murdered and on Apr. 27, 1982, Roberto Rosone, the general manager of Banco Ambrosiano, attempting to clean the bank up was ordered assassinated. The attempt failed as Rosone was only wounded in the legs, but it is believed Calvi ordered the assassination. Calvi is found hanging from a bridge in a highly suspicious suicide scandal.

AD1920-Michele Sindona, nicknamed, "The Shark," was born May 8, 1920 in Sicily receiving a law degree from Messina University. During WWII, he bought food on the black market in Palermo and with Mafia. In 1957, Sindona is approached by the Gambino family and their Sicilian cousins, the Inzerillos, to launder money they were making in heroin trafficking.

Sindona buys his first bank shortly thereafter. Sindona continues to buy up banks, launder money for the Mafia, and to forge close financial links with the Vatican. He is chosen by Pope Paul VI as a financial advisor to the Vatican and to move Vatican money out of Italy. An actual satanic ritual is alleged to have occurred in the Vatican in the first days of the reign of Pope Paul VI. ~From The Keys of This Blood by Malachi Martin, who served in Rome as a Jesuit priest, where he was a close associate of, and carried out many sensitive missions for, the renowned Jesuit Cardinal Augustin Bea and Popes John XXIII and Paul VI.

The Church has for centuries turned the other cheek when it came to the abuses of the priesthood, "Suddenly it became unarguable that now during this Papacy, the Roman Catholic organization carried a permanent presence of clerics who worshiped Satan and liked it; of Bishops and priests who sodomized boys and each other; of nuns who performed the "Black Rites" of Wicca, and who lived in lesbian relationships... Every day, including Sundays and Holy Days, acts of heresy and blasphemy and outrage and indifference were committed and permitted at holy Altars by men who had been called to be priests. Sacrilegious actions and rites were not only performed on Christ's Altars, but had the connivance or at least the tacit permission of certain Cardinals, Archbishops, and Bishops... In total number they were a minority, anything from one to ten percent of Church personnel. But of that minority, many occupied a stunningly high positions or rank... The facts that brought the Pope to a new level of suffering were mainly two: The systematic organizational links, the network, in other words, that had been established between certain clerical homosexual groups and Satanist covens. And the inordinate power and influence of that network." ~Malachi Martin.

The clerical sexual abuse crisis, worldwide, shows that Roman Catholic Church well knows how to keep its dirty secrets. Certain doctrines, such as that of 'mental reservation,' give individual clergy members the "Right" to equivocate or even lie, even under oath, if it be, by any mental strain of the imagination, for the greater good of the Church. "The name of Christ has caused more persecutions, wars, and miseries than any other name has caused." ~John E. Remsburg, The Christ, 1910.

"... This brings us to our familiar resting place. The 'Goodness' of God is different in kind from goodness as we comprehend it. To say that God's 'Goodness' is compatible with the worst disasters imaginable, is to empty this concept of its meaning. By human standards, the Christian God cannot be good. By divine standards, God may be 'Good' in some unspecified, unknowable way - but this term no longer makes any sense. And so, for the last time, we fail to comprehend the Christian God." ~George Smith, Atheism: The Case Against God, Buffalo, NY: Prometheus, 1989, p. 87.

In 1973, Prime Minister Andreotti hailed Sindona as the "Savior of the lira," and the U.S. Ambassador names him "Man of the Year." Bank failures in Europe and the U.S. [Franklin National Bank of New York], along with massive losses for the Vatican Bank, cause an arrest warrant to be issued for Sindona who is warned by his friends and flees to Geneva. February 1980, Sindona is found guilty on 65 counts, including fraud, conspiracy, perjury, false bank statements, and misappropriations of bank funds. On January 1982, an indictment is issued from Palermo, Sicily, in which Sindona and sixty-five members of the Gambino, Inzerillo, and Spatola mafia families are charged with operating a $600 million [U.S. dollars] a year 'Heroin Trade' between Sicily and the U.S.

AD 1920-Karol Wojtyla; later to become Pope John Paul II, the first non-Italian Pope elected since 1573 [born in Wadowice, Poland]. Ordained in 1946, he earns a Ph.D. degree at Rome's Angelicum Institute and a Doctorate's in Theology at the Catholic University of Lublin on the works of Rosmini who wrote a five-point paper on the shortcomings of the Catholic Church

- † Social remoteness from the masses
- † Low standard of educations among the clergy
- † Disunity among the Bishop
- † Dependency of appointments by secular authorities
- † The Church's dependence [Rosmini calls it "Enslavement"] on wealth and capitalism.

Marked for sainthood after his death, Pope John Paul II's document on the Holocaust, "We Remember," states that the Catholic Church, in the past, objected to Jews only on theological grounds, not on racial ones, but the author Kertzer easily destroys this falsehood.

To quote again Oreglia's article, cleared by the Vatican secretariat of state: "Oh how wrong and deluded are those who think Judaism is just a religion, like Catholicism, Paganism, Protestantism, and not in fact a race, a people, and a nation!... For the Jews are not only Jews because of their religion... They are Jews also and especially because of their race." ~The Popes Against the Jews: Before the Holocaust by Garry Wills, New York Times, September 23, 2001.

AD 1922- Kurt Vonnegut Jr., American novelist whose breezy style and innovative subject matter has gained him a wide popularity. "Say what you will about the sweet miracle of unquestioning faith, I consider a capacity for it terrifying and absolutely vile." ~Kurt Vonnegut.

Author of 'Slaughter House Five,' 'Breakfast of Champions,' 'Slapstick,' and many other novels which have been made into movie.

The Christianized Adolf Hitler, "My feelings as a Christian points me to my Lord and Savior as a fighter. It points me to the man who once in loneliness, surrounded only by a few followers, recognized these Jews for what they were and summoned men to fight against them and who, God's truth! was greatest not as a sufferer but as a fighter. In boundless love as a Christian and as a man I read through the passage which tells us how the Lord at last rose in His might and seized the scourge to drive out of the Temple the brood of vipers and adders. How terrific was His fight for the world against the Jewish poison. Today, after two thousand years, with deepest emotion I recognize more profoundly than ever before in the fact that it was for this that He had to shed His blood upon the Cross. As a Christian I have no duty to allow myself to be cheated, but I have the duty to be a fighter for truth and justice.... And if there is anything, which could demonstrate that we are acting rightly it is the distress that daily grows. For as a Christian I have also a duty to my own people... When I go out in the morning and see these men standing in their queues and look into their pinched faces, then I believe I would be no Christian, but a very devil if I felt no pity for them, if I did not, as did our Lord two thousand years ago, turn against those by whom to-day this poor people is plundered and exploited.” ~Adolf Hitler, following the precepts of Martin Luther, in his speech on 12 April 1922.

AD 1922-Paul Casimir Marcinkus, born in 1922, later to become the Archbishop, nicknamed the “Gorilla,” is ordained a priest in 1947. He received a Doctorate in Canon Law from Gregorian University, Rome and was posted to the English section of the Vatican Secretary of State’s office.

In 1964 he became the bodyguard to Pope Paul VI, acquiring the nickname of the “Gorilla,” after he had accompanied the Pope on several trips as a personal translator and security advisor. Marcinkus, having no previous banking experience is appointed to Bishop by Pope Paul VI and made secretary of the Vatican Bank. In 1973 he is investigated by the investigative arm of the United States, the F.B.I. for ‘Direct involvement in money laundering of mafia money’ through the Vatican Bank.

Archbishop Marcinkus is seen on Sept. 29th, at 6:45 AM, in the courtyard near the Vatican Bank. He is told that Pope Jean Paul I had been found dead. Marcinkus’s residence is a twenty-minute drive away and he is not known to be an early riser, yet his presence in the Vatican at that hour has never explained.

AD 1922- Joseph Stalin, a Jew-hater, is educated by the Catholic Jesuits in Georgia, a country south of Russia and therefore not within the Emperor’s ban on the Jesuits of Russia, his Ukase, did not reach to Georgia. The Jesuits remained in Georgia, training Joseph Stalin, and brought him in after the Revolution, making him Secretary of the Communist Party in 1922, until he died in 1953. The Jesuits collaborated with their Russian Freemasonry brothers [Freemasonry was banned by subsequent Russian Leaders and only recently reinstated], Stalin was also a brother Freemason.

Professor Langer says of Pope Pius XI: “From the outset he took a strong stand against Communism.” He was. As a matter of fact, elected Pope in February of 1922, and served until 1939, and in April and May his representative, the Archbishop of Genoa, conspicuously courting the Red envoy Chicherin at the Genoa Conference.

The Catholics can always claim that they have spoken out against repressive regimes; true, but historians can always fall back on the fact that that is as far as it goes. During an audience with French nuns, Pope Pius XI decries the anti-Semitic laws of Germany and Italy as direct results of “Excessive nationalism,” speaking of a “Great question at present agitating the world under the name of nationalism, a nationalism in many ways exaggerated—an ill-conceived nationalism, which we have already had painful occasion to denounce as erroneous and dangerous.” ~Pope Pius XI, N.Y. Times, July 17, 1938, p. 1, 1.

Although the Catholic priests had been expelled from Russia for treachery in the Civil War, the Catholic Church receives permission from the Jesuit mission to be re-admitted; and it remains there, obviously on the best of terms with the Communists, until 1924, when the priests are again expelled for treachery. The facts appear to dispel the revelations entertained by Professor Langer. ~From the works of J. McCabe.

For decades the Church has been defending Pope Pius XI on his stand regarding the Jews, and the Holocaust of WWII, but Pope Pius XI himself, who served as a papal diplomat in Poland during World War I, dismissed reports of pogroms there as inventions of Jewish propaganda. He wrote to the Vatican secretary of state: “One of the most evil and strongest influences that is felt here, perhaps the strongest and the most evil, is that of the JEWS.” ~Quoted in The Popes Against the Jews: Before the Holocaust by Gary Wills, New York Times, September 23, 2001.

A petition is circulated to abolish Paragraph 175, Germany's sodomy law, which is presented to the Reichstag, but without victory. The petition is largely the work of Magnus Hirschfeld and his Scientific Humanitarian Committee, and is signed by such prominent intellectuals as Albert Einstein, Herman Hesse, Thomas Mann, and Leo Tolstoy.

AD 1923- The Mexican Government is forced to expel the Pope’s representative for “Direct intervention in Mexican affairs,” ~see Prof. Calcott, Liberalism in Mexico, 1931.

The Church has accumulated great wealth and has available funds for the purpose of intervening in governmental affairs, and the religious orders opened schools in defiance of the law.

In 1925 the Government, which had the solid support of the majority of educated Mexicans at the polls, and the workers, who are anti-clerical in the towns, began to close the parochial schools and to expel the Spanish priests and nuns.

The Bishops defy the law and radio to the world a cry of Catholic persecution. The American Catholics issued a booklet with an appeal to Wall Street for funds, American enterprisers wanted their government to annex Mexico and its great mineral wealth, and a long list of priests were said to have been martyred by the Mexican Government. Witnesses in Mexico at the time can testify that none were then executed, although many were later, for leading armed rebels, and that the expulsions, strictly legal, which were witnessed were conducted with the utmost of courtesy, although the wives of the Catholic ambassadors tried to provoke riots.

This fact was later learned in Cuba from articles in the Conservative, Havana's chief newspaper, by a Mexican Catholic journalist who was disgusted with the lies enumerated by his clergy. The worst phase of the struggle followed, the provincial Catholic Bishops and priests organized bands of armed rebels who committed appalling outrages.

A Catholic article in Liberty, August 24, 1935, distorted the facts, and was riddled by the Mexican Catholic, Moreno, in the Forum, who showed that all the brutality was on the side of the Cristeros, ignorant Catholic Indians led by priests. An American business man had a similar article in the World-Telegram of June 8, 1935; yet, on June 16, 15,000 American Rotarians in Mexico City paraded the streets insulting the Mexicans and denouncing the religious "Persecutions;" while Pope Pius XI repeatedly calls upon the Governments of the world to "Destroy Bolshevism in Russia, Spain, and Mexico."

During this time the electors solidly supported the Government, and even the peons, the vast majority of whom are illiterate Indians, renounced the Church in such numbers that governors of provinces, Chihuahua, Vera Cruz, etc., reduced the number of priests to 1 to 50,000 people, or compelled them all to work. An article in the Protestant International Review of Missions, January, 1937. ~from the works of J. McCabe, Rationalists Encyclopaedia

Pancho Villa, a revolutionist, who fought for the rights of the poor, equality, and non-discrimination for the dark skinned peasants continually embarrassed and eventually destroyed the Federal Army of Mexico with the help of the peasants who were endeared to him. Of Pancho Villa's intentions of expelling the long established ruling-class Spaniards, the American consul, says, "General [Francisco Villa], I don't question your motives, but I think you are making a grave political mistake in expelling the Spaniards. The government at Washington will hesitate a long time before becoming friendly to a party, which makes use of such barbarous measures."

Out of fear, the Christian obeys; out of fear he reads the Bible; out of fear he feels obligated to donate, "And we are called upon to worship such a God; to get upon our knees and tell him that he is good, that he is merciful, that he is just, that he is love. We are asked to stifle every noble sentiment of the soul, and to trample under foot all the sweet charities of the heart. Because we refuse to stultify ourselves, refuse to become liars, we are denounced, hated, traduced and ostracized here, and this same God threatens to torment us in Eternal Fire the moment death allows him to fiercely clutch our naked helpless souls. Let the people hate, let the God threaten; we will educate them, and we will despise and defy the God." ~Robert G. Ingersoll, The Gods, 1872.

"Señor Consul." "We Mexicans have had three hundred years of the Spaniards. They have not changed in character since the Conquistadores. They disrupted the Indian empire and enslaved the people. We did not ask them to mingle their blood with ours... They [the Spaniards] thrust on us the greatest superstition the world has ever known, the Catholic Church. They ought to be killed for that alone...I consider we are being very generous with them." ~Pancho Villa, See Devil's Dictionary, Ambrose Bierce, 1906 (reprinted), American author, wit and soldier, who joined Villa's rebel forces in 1913.

...Some, particularly obnoxious political enemies were, however, promptly eliminated with extreme prejudice in the penitentiary area. The Revolutionists, in possession of the 'Black Book' in which they set down the names, offenses, and properties of those who have been oppressed and robbed the poor people, are quick to take action.

dare to molest. Their pages in the black book will be opened when the Constitutionalist government is established in Mexico City; and there, too, he [Francisco Villa] will settle the account of the Mexican people with the oppressive Catholic Church. ~Translated by Eloy Rodriguez, See Devil's Dictionary by Ambrose Bierce, pg. 131-132. Pancho Villa's great passion was schools, which eliminate ignorance and superstition. Villa believed "... That land for the people and schools would settle every question of civilization."

Schools were an obsession with pancho Villa, and often he would say, "When I passed such and such a street this morning I saw a lot of kids. Let's put a school there."

Chihuahua had a population of under 40,000 people, and at different times Villa established over fifty schools there. "The great dream of his life has been to send his son to school in the United States, but at the opening of the term in February he had to abandon it because [being an honest man and unwilling to steal like previous corrupt political regimes] he didn't have money enough to pay for a half year's tuition..."

AD 1925-End of the World: The Jehovah's Witness, Watchtower Magazine reluctantly predicts after numerous false prophecies, "The year 1925 is a date definitely and clearly marked in the Scriptures, even more clearly than that of 1914; but it would be presumptuous on the part of any faithful follower of the Lord to assume just what the Lord is going to do during that year."

AD 1926-"Catholics may not support, favor, or read papers, which are edited by men whose writings are in notable opposition to Catholic Doctrine in faith and morals..." ~Pope Pius XI, in an Allocution dated December 20, 1926.

AD 1928-Opus Dei is founded by the Spanish priest, Josemaria Escriva. Vatican II will become dissatisfied with the means of attaining holiness which the members seek. Members deprive themselves of basic luxuries in order to show their willingness to sacrifice for God. Members are educated to abstain from sex, drugs, and alcohol, and to have a Christian attitude. An article gives a point-by-point description of Catholic techniques in boycotting an American newspaper and a censorship program for priests and laymen, "Father Mullaly tells with perfect candor how a priest and four or five Catholic laymen, with the help of an impressive letterhead bearing the names of prominent citizens, can terrorize any editor with the specter of a great wave of Catholic indignation." ~Charles J. Mullaly, in the Jesuit magazine, America, February 11, 1928, as described by Paul Blanshard

"Every city editor in the United States," Blanshard goes on to say, "Knows of the unofficial Catholic censorship of American news, but almost all publishers avoid discussion of the phenomenon because of the fear of Catholic reprisals. The Hierarchy itself has avoided public discussion of its boycott techniques in recent years, and has resorted more and more to quiet pressure ... As a result of this policy of siege and boycott, very few publishers in the United States are courageous enough or wealthy enough to deal frankly with Catholic social policy or stories of priestly crime... Frequently the Church succeeds in intimidating the most powerful newspapers by this policy of organized protest and boycott, and, in many cases, the facts suppressed have great social significance." ~Paul Blanshard

AD 1929-In a paper read before the Ninth International Congress of Psychology, held at Yale University on September 6, 1929, Professor Pleasant R. Hightower of Butler University makes this startling and significant report: Students of Bible Found Less Honest, "People have been saying for years that if you give children a knowledge of the Bible, they will walk the straight and narrow way. The result shows that they won't walk the straight and narrow way. It does indicate very definitely that mere knowledge of the Bible of itself is not sufficient to insure the proper character attitudes."

Professor Hightower's experiment was the result of a test given to more than 3,300 children, and proves beyond the possibility of a doubt that unless a child is taught and educated, he will not know. Dr. George Rex Mursall, chief psychologist of the Ohio Department of Welfare, examined comparable groups of boys in the Ohio Reform School at Lancaster and of supposedly law-abiding children outside. He found that the inmates of the reformatory had received fully as much religious training as those outside.

"It seems safe to state that there is no significant relation between religious training and delinquent or non-delinquent behavior." ~Dr. George Rex Mursall, Chief Psychologist, Ohio Department of Welfare.

This same conclusion was reached in a similar study of conditions among school children in England. In Bradford, England, the City Council appointed Mrs. E. M. Henshaw to investigate and report on juvenile delinquency. She discovered and reported that the Church schools have a substantially higher rate of delinquents than State schools, the rates being in State schools 6.6 per thousand; in Church of England schools, 7.5 per thousand; and in Roman Catholic schools, 15.3 per thousand.

She declares: "I think that children get fundamental ethical teaching in school, quite apart from religious teaching, in their contacts with real people as distinct from a superimposed dogma, religious or otherwise."

The report includes this statement: "There has in the past been some confusion between the terms 'religious training' and 'character training.' These two are not synonymous." ~From The Ten Commandments by Joseph Lewis.

AD 1929-The Lateran Treaty between Benito Mussolini and Pope Pius XI gives the Roman Catholic Church protection as a Holy See [the same recognition granted a foreign statehood] the Catholic religion is to be taught in all Italian high schools, Diplomatic Immunity [similar to a foreign entity], and exemption from paying taxes, which, in return, Mussolini also gives the Church a payment of 750,000,000 Italian Lire, plus another billion lire in state bonds.

Pope Pius XI denies that there never was a compact between the Axis powers [Germany, Italy, and Japan] and that it is just another lie to mortify the Church, yet, he cannot deny the contractual agreement he made with Hitler nor the commemorative medallion, which was ordered struck for the Japanese dignitary in support of their world interests [conquests].

Newspapers from 1929-1940 tell of the contract agreed upon by the Pope in support of the Nazis, Fascists, and the Japanese Emperor [The Japanese refer to him as 'Amaterasu,' the Sun God] The loyal Catholic Filipinos would be humiliated if they knew how their Church sold them out during the war for the promise of their Pope spreading the word of God through the rest of Asia, which ignores the brutalities of the Japanese for a few more pieces of silver. ~Read, Correspondence of the First Lord Acton, 1917, Vol. I, pg 55, or the Cambridge Modern History, Vol X.

Bernardino Nogara will handle the finances [Nogara will hold the top bank position regarding Vatican monies until 1954]. Vatican City is established as a sovereign land, previously known as the Papal States, States of the Church, and Pontifical States [The Pontifical States were granted to Pope Stephen II by Pepin The Short, King of the Franks in 754, which included almost one third of Central Italy at that time].

The Pontifical States lands are seized in 1797 by the Emperor Napoleon of France, and regained in 1801 by Pope Paul VII. In 1815, the Congress of Vienna placed the land under Austrian protection. Major lands belonging to the Papacy, 1970, are annexed by King Victor Emmanuel II, and the jurisdictional territories of the Pope are significantly reduced.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

The Pope is a voluntary prisoner at the Vatican in protest of this annexation until 1929 with the signing of the Lateran Treaty. The Papal States constituted the provinces of Central Italy, which the Popes owned and ruled from the time of Charlemagne to the nineteenth century.

Pope [Saint] Gregory I, 590-604, won extensive tracts for the Papacy in different parts of Italy, but royal power over one-third of Italy was secured, mainly by forged documents, from the ignorant and illiterate Frank Monarchs, Pepin and Charlemagne in the 8th century.

Pope Stephen III, 752-757, urged Pepin to usurp the French throne and then found him unwilling to come to Italy to wrest from the Lombards the provinces which the Pope coveted, sent to that profoundly ignorant Monarch a letter which purported to have been written by Saint Peter himself and sent miraculously from Heaven.

When the Lombards recovered the cities and territory, which Pepin gave to the Papacy, Pope Stephen IV, 816-817, got them back by, at the request of the Lombards, horribly mutilating and killing the two leading officials of his Court who were anti-Lombard.

The same official Pontifical Book which tells us that Stephen was "A chaste and holy monk," from such tributes are the biographies of the early Popes in the Catholic Encyclopedia compiled, tells us also that Stephen's successor, Pope Hadrian, a much greater man, is our authority for this horrible mutilating outrage. ~Duchesne's Edition, I, 487. It is regretful that a true picture of the history of Catholicism and its leaders is not available in any Catholic journal, as its leaders have maneuvered to control public influence by rewriting history to further their cause over truth and transparency.

But, the Lombards did not pay the price in full, and Pope Hadrian summons Charlemagne. It is admitted even by Catholic historians, since its contents are preposterous, that the document, the Donation of Constantine, which Hadrian now produced as the basis of his claims, was a forgery. This not only fatally weakened the very promising Lombard civilization but, by enriching the Papacy, made the Papal elections for centuries a series of sordid squabbles, and turned Central Italy for eleven centuries into "A battlefield of the transalpine and the stranger."

Incalculable misery and bloodshed were caused as the Popes appealed in turn to Franks, Germans, Normans, French, and even Danes and Hungarians, to recover their profitable dominion for them. But the most ironic feature of the story is that the Popes, who now pose as the moral social oracles of kings and States, left their own Kingdom, while it lasted, in the foulest condition.

Napoleon abolished their Temporal Power, but the Holy Alliance restored it; and there is not a dissentient voice among historians that it was, in the words of the British Ambassador, Lord Clarendon, "The opprobrium of Europe;" that Rome itself was, in the words of the austere French priest Lamennais, quoted approvingly by the Catholic Lady Blennerhassett in the Cambridge Modern History, X, 164, "The most hideous sewer that ever offended the eye of man;" and that the Popes, in defending it to the last, were, in the words of the Catholic Lord Acton, "Worse than the accomplices of the Old Man of the Mountains," and "Contrived murder and massacre on the largest and also on the most cruel and inhuman scale." ~Selections from the Correspondence of the First Lord Acton, 1917, I, 55.

The description, upon which the contemporary Italian historians and statesmen, Farini, D'Azeglio, Cantur, and Balbo, as well as recent experts on the period, Bishop Nielsen, Prof. Orsi, Prof. Croce, Bolton King, Thayer, Okey, etc., agree, may be read in the authoritative pages of the "Cambridge Modern History." Nowhere in Europe were there more banditry and crime, denser ignorance, more corrupt [clerical] officials, or more venal courts. There were more murders in a month than there had been in a year under the French, and there were "80,000 barbarous and conflicting laws."

There were at one time 6,000 rebels in the overcrowded jails, and men condemned to twenty years were chained to the wall and not released even for sanitary purposes. Sir Edward Dicey, "Rome in 1860," says that he found Rome "One of the most corrupt, debauched, and demoralized of cities."

Lady Blennerhassett quotes the worst features from the diary of Cardinal Scala; and Mgr. Liverani agrees in his book, "Il Papato e il Regno d'Italia," 1861. In 1856 Prussia, Russia, Austria, France, and England, the "Heretic countries," addressed a sharp admonition to these Popes, who are now the world's social oracles, to bring their Kingdom a little nearer the level of civilization! Such was the dominion for the loss of which Mussolini paid the Vatican €19,000,000.

And it had not been taken from the Popes even on the approved lines of conquest. Italy conducted a plebiscite in each province, and in an overwhelming majority the inhabitants voted for transfer from the Popes to the Kingdom of Italy. Catholic writers say that the Italian Catholics, under orders, abstained from voting.

The truth is that in the city of Rome itself 40,785, or four-fifths of the adult males, voted against the Pope, and only forty-six for him: in the Roman province 133,681, against him, and 1,507 for him. There was very little abstention. Yet the Italian Government awarded the Pope €120,000 a year, which no Pope would take until Pius XI, who accepted the accumulated sum and interest in order to enter into alliance with an unscrupulous adventurer and arch-murderer. ~Bishop Nielsen, History of the Papacy in the Nineteenth Century, 2 vols., 1906, W. even paid money to be childless, and have mutilated nature, not only killing the newborn, but even acting to prevent their beginning to live [sterilization].” ~Saint John Chrysostom, Homilies on Matthew 28:5, 391 C.E.

“Observe how bitterly he [Paul] speaks against their deceivers. . . . I would that they, which trouble you would cut the whole thing off” [Galatians 5:12]. . . . On this account he curses them, and his meaning is as follows: 'For them I have no concern, 'A man that is heretical after the first and second admonition refuse.' ~Titus 3:10.

“If they will, let them not only be circumcised but mutilated.' Where then are those who dare to mutilate [sterilize] themselves, seeing that they drawn down the Apostolic Curse, and accuse the workmanship of God, and take part with the Manichees?” ~Saint John Chrysostom, Commentary on Galatians 5:12, 395 C.E.

Msgr. Kaas, is sent to Rome to advise Pope Pius XI as to a agreement with the Nazi Doctrine and that he says of Hitler: “This man [Hitler], the bearer of high ideals, will do all that is necessary to save the nation from catastrophe.”

But, Hitler does not share the same opinion as the Catholic Church and declares the Church, “Negligible allies, as they had lost their power over men's minds in many parts of the world.”

The Vatican media appendage, 'Osservatore,' tells us that at the close of the cordial interview between the Pope and the Japanese emissary, Matsuoka, he presented him with a gold medal, which had been specially struck for the momentous occasion of Japanese and Vatican cooperation in allowing the Church to initiate Catholicism in Asian countries, and Matsuoka declares to the Italian press that his talk with the Pope was “The prettiest moment in my life.”

The Catholic Philippines, the only Catholic Asian country, is left ignorant of this, “Unholy Alliance,” having been sold out by their ‘religious father,’ who accords the Japanese full cooperation by not nullifying their atrocities against the Filipino people and murderous occupations of the Japanese across Asia, including the Philippines, a land, which had already been Catholicized 450 years earlier, and with this un-Holy alliance of the Pope and his “Yellow Brother,” the Japanese, being a closely kept secret from modern Catholics, the Holy Mother continues to portray herself as the enemy of evil and wrong-doing.

The representatives of the Vatican in Ambassador Manchukuo and Japan worked so amiably with the Axis army and the government that even as early as 1934 a French Catholic writer was able to boast that, “No Japanese prince or mission now passes through Rome without paying its homage to the Sovereign Pontiff.”

~See the speeches at the Chicago International Conference on Religion in 1934, edited by A.E. Haydon, Modert, World-Trends in Religion.

The day after Christmas, Matsuoka, who is a practicing Christian, says to the Japanese Diet, now Japan can take advantage of the war in Europe, that there will be peace only if America agrees that Japan should “Dominate the mainland and occupy a preferential position in Indo-China and the Dutch Indies,” and to, “Dominate the Western Pacific,” not for its own advantage, of course, but for “The good of humanity.” The Japanese occupation of the Philippines is supposed to instill upon the Filipino that the Vatican-Axis Treat would be for their own good and for the creation of an Asian Empire without American Imperialism, but the racist Japanese have no intention of surrendering the Philippines to independent sovereignty, although on paper they declare the same, and to this day the Philippine government has never voiced any displeasure regarding the Vatican Alliance with the Axis Powers during WWII.

The truth, regarding the brave Filipinos who stood up to the invading armies of tyranny will be hidden from the people, and after the war, those powerful financial forces will continue to rule. “Filipino politicians have a long history of practicing non-progressive evils, which target the rich as recipients of windfall profits.” ~E. Christopher Reyes 2, August, 2012.

By 1935 the “Nuremberg Laws” intended to insure the racial purity of the nation are aimed specifically at the Jews. “T4” is established by the Fuhrer’s Chancellery, the initials coming from the full address, which was Tiergartenstrasse 4, Berlin.

“Project T4” being fully integrated into the organizational structure of the Reich and falling under section 11b “Mercy-death” of the Chancellery of the Fuhrer. All that is needed now is a war to justify racial purity and ethnic cleansing of the Third Reich as the Christians, for centuries, have claimed the Jews killed their Savior, and this will merely be another reason to exterminate them as Martin Luther also despised them [Protestantism]. “Catholicism is contrary to human liberty. Catholicism bases Salvation upon belief. Catholicism teaches man to trample his reason under foot. And for that reason it is wrong.” ~Robert Ingersoll. January 30th, Hitler bans all Gay/Homosexual publishing in Germany.

Also in Germany, as Hitler rises to power, within two years a license of "Genetic Cleanliness" is now necessary for marriage, and a German cannot marry a Jew. Department II of the German Gestapo is created for the express function of hunting down and imprisoning homosexuals.

AD 1933- The Holy See will join with several American Universities to build a state-of-the-art telescope atop Mount Graham, a mountain in Arizona sacred to the Apaches Indians.

The 'Vatican Observatory' will deny that it's looking for a "Sign From Above" or that it plays a "Watchdog" role in astronomy, but admits to an "Apologetic purpose, in the sense of defending the Catholic Church's positive regard for science." Does this mean there could be aliens out in space? Will aliens be obligated to worship Jesus?

Whenever religion and science conflict, religion must always prevail, has been the maxim of the Roman Church for centuries, does this include extra-terrestrials? Did Jesus also die for their sins? Why then the necessity for the Vatican's cover-up of a project called 'Wormwood'? Does the Church intend to extend its blessings of the Gospels to non-humans?

AD 1933- The beginning of the Holocaust, Anti-Semitism and genocide across Europe is prescribed by a country whereby the Jews are rounded up by the Germans and their private properties are confiscated [art work, treasures, jewelry, bank accounts, etc.]. Later, a plea from the community to the Pope to intervene and/or investigate the killing of millions of Jews falls on deaf ears. The Roman Catholic Church ignores the stories by insisting that there is no proof.

Jehovah's Witnesses are also incarcerated and tortured in Nazi death camps. The eminent Catholic historian Lady Blennerhasset quotes with approval the statement of the distinguished French priest Lamennais that Rome, which he visited in the thirties, was, "The foulest sewer ever opened up to the eye of man."

Under the topic The Church and non-Christians, the Roman Catholic Catechism now recognizes the special and irrevocable relationship between God and the Jewish people. -Catechism of the Catholic Church: The Profession of Faith: Section Two, at: <http://www.christusrex.org/>

Section 839 states that Jews were, "The first to hear the Word of God." The Jewish faith "Is already a response to God's Revelation... To the Jews 'Belong the Sonship, the Glory, the covenants, the giving of the law, the worship, and the promises; to them belong the patriarchs, and of their race, according to the flesh, is the Christ... For the gifts and the call of God are irrevocable."

Much speculation has arisen regarding these times as to whether or not the Vatican cut a deal with the Nazis and Fascists in order to share in the gold and other ill gotten gains of these governments. Lawsuits have arisen over fifty years after WWII in an effort to reveal records the Catholic Church does not wish to be known. Pope Pius XI signs a concordance with the Third Reich on July 20th 1933 to secure the religious practices of Catholics in German occupied territories.

Mussolini begins the slaughter in Abyssinia and the Roman Church does nothing and says nothing; eventually Pope Pius XI, after the horrendous slaughter of men, women and children gives the Queen of Italy as Empress of Abyssinia the 'Golden Rose,' which is the highest mark of Papal approval. ~See J. McCabe's Appeal To Reason Library, Annual Register, 1934, p. 194, and the Catholic Universe, August 18, 1933.

"His Holiness Pope Pius XI has appointed as his Plenipotentiary His Eminence the Most Reverend Lord Cardinal Eugenio Pacelli, his Secretary of State. The President of the German Reich has appointed as Plenipotentiary the Vice-Chancellor of the German Reich, Herr Franz von Papen." "The Concordats concluded with Bavaria, 1924, Prussia, 1929, and Baden, 1932, remain in force, and the rights and privileges of the Catholic Church recognized therein are secured unchanged within the territories of the States concerned. For the remaining States the agreements entered into in the present Concordat come into force in their entirety. These last are also binding for those States named above in so far as they affect matters not regulated by the regional Concordats or are complementary to the settlement already made. In the future, regional Concordats with States of the German Reich will be concluded only with the agreement of the Reich Government." ~Father Joseph McCabe.

Catholic clerics who hold an ecclesiastical office in Germany or who exercise pastoral or educational functions must:

- † Have matriculated from a German secondary school.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

✠ Have studied philosophy and theology for at least three years at a German State University, a German ecclesiastical college, or a papal college in Rome.

The Bull nominating Archbishops, Coadjutors “Cum Jure Successionis,” or appointing a “Praelatus Nullius,” will not be issued until the name of the appointee has been submitted to the representative of the National Government in the territory concerned, and until it has been ascertained that no objections of a general political nature exist.

“Religious Superiors whose headquarters are within Germany must be German citizens. Provincials and other Superiors of Orders, whose headquarters lie outside Germany, have the right of visitation of those of their establishments, which lie within Germany. The Holy See will endeavor to insure that the provincial organization of conventional establishments within the German Reich shall be such that, as far as possible, German establishments do not fall under the jurisdiction of foreign provincials. Before Bishops take possession of their dioceses they are to take an oath of fealty either to the Reich Representative of the State concerned, or to the President of the Reich, according to the following formula: “Before God and on the Holy Gospels, I swear and promise as becomes a Bishop, loyalty to the German Reich ... It is understood that the Church retains the right to levy Church taxes.” ~From the Catholic Encyclopedia.

Once upon a time, it was written that giving money to the Church/Synagogue, was a sin, but all that has changed in the new editions of the Bible. Regarding Japan, the representatives of the Vatican in Manchukuo and Japan worked so amiably with the army and the government that by 1934 a French Catholic writer quoted was able to boast that “No Japanese prince or mission now passes through Rome without paying its homage to the Sovereign Pontiff.”

“The mission of the Yamata race is to prevent the human race from becoming devilish ... The one nation not subject to the universal law of decline is that which is ruled by a divinity and permeated by the spirit of the Gods... The fated time has come to effulge its benefits to the world.” ~Upton Close in his book,

‘The Challenge,’ translates an article in which Matsuoka had published in 1933.

The words of the Japanese diplomat, Matsuoka, are not very Catholic, but quite clear as to its intents. The following New Year, Japanese stores displayed gorgeous paint and pasteboard panoramas of Japan’s coming victory, the sinking of the American fleet. ~From J. McCabe, Rationalist Encyclopedia.

In 1937, during a Parliament of Religions at Calcutta, religious leaders commended themselves on the spread of their spiritual endeavors while the world prepared for war. The leaders encumbered in two volumes the feats of their accomplishments as the Japanese enslaved and debauched Manchuria and the north of China and were overtly congregating for their next orgy of violence.

Yet, not a single one of these silver tongued Asiatic religious leaders mentioned a single word about the atrocities that were transpiring across Asia, and soon to befall them. The criminal aspirations of the Japanese was far from being a secret as scores of patriotic societies publicly boasted of it and gloated over realistic pictures and panoramas exhibited in the stores of the cities, of the destruction of the American fleet. 150,000 Buddhist priests and monks had been bought by the government and the capitalists and were conducting an intensive campaign all over South Asia to create a ‘Fifth Column’ for the “Japanese Liberators.”

They had been bought in cash, just as the Vatican had been bought by Mussolini, and, like the Vatican, they looked for even greater profit when their job was complete. Nagasaki, bombed during WWII, contains a bastion of Catholic followers, and its bombing received more criticism from the Roman Church after the war than the invasion of their ‘Catholic Philippines.’

The Japanese people were energized to a fanatical enthusiasm by the military machinery whose plans of enrichment included exploiting a third of the non-Christian world as the religious fanatics created nests of traitors from French Indochina to the Persian Gulf. There were 10,000 Buddhist collaborators in Rangoon alone and there were others in key positions all over Burma and Ceylon.

For ten years the work had proceeded under the thin disguise of Buddhist concern for the spiritual interests of men. Yet in a Parliament of Religions held at Chicago, Illinois, in 1939, America was emphatically warned that these Buddhist priests had already grown corpulent on ‘Imperialist gold.’

"The Catholic Church is, if not 'the most evil thing in the world,' certainly the most treacherous and mendacious... The leopard does not change its spots, but it may have them white-washed." ~Father Joseph McCabe.

Fortunately, we have historical documents to prove that the Roman Church has not been maligned, the Word has not been desecrated, Catholics have not been portrayed wrongly, and that the Compact with Mussolini, the Concordat with Hitler, the Fanatical support of Franco, the Discreet arrangement with Japan, and so on, will show the world the true beast of Scriptural prophecy.

AD 1934-The Philosophical Research Society is founded by Manley P. Hall, dedicated to an idealistic approach to solving man's perplexing problems. A vast library of rare, limited edition, and scarce nonsectarian research materials is available to the public, now located in Los Angeles, California.

Russia: March 7th, Stalin restores criminal sanctions against homosexuality in the Soviet Union.

Nazi Germany: The homosexual [Gay] SS Chief Ernst Rohm, and many of his "Brown Shirts" are assassinated by rival Nazis with the approval of Hitler in the evening known as the "Night of the Long Knives."

AD 1935-It is almost enough to quote from the Papal organ, the 'Osservatore,' August 22, 1935, the fact that from the Eucharistic Congress at Teramo a telegram was sent to Mussolini in the name of 19 Archbishops and 57 Bishops saying: "Catholic Italy thanks Jesus Christ for the renewed greatness of the Fatherland made stronger by Mussolini's policy." ~From J. McCabe.

The Japanese emissary, Matsuoka earnestly assures Pope Pius XI, that Japan will not steal another acre of Chinese soil. Pacelli [Pope Pius XI] was naive enough to believe him, and the highly favored Catholic missionaries in Japan did not report to the Vatican that the entire country, including the Buddhist and Shinto priests, was joyously chanting the national anthem of domination of the East. A Catholic will not believe that the stealing of Jehol from China had already followed the stealing of Manchuria.

But in 1935 the sacred representatives of the Papacy in Tokyo would find it one of its first duties to report that, under cynically mendacious pretexts, the Japanese were moving south over China proper. By June, 1935, they had appropriated a further vast area of China. In November, 1936, they tried to set up a puppet government for five whole provinces besides Manchuria.

The Vatican media appendage, 'Osservatore,' tells us that at the close of their cordial interview, the Pope presented the Japanese messenger, Matsuoka with a gold medal, which had been specially struck for the momentous occasion of Japanese and Vatican cooperation in allowing the Church to initiate Catholicism in Asian countries, and Matsuoka declared to the Italian press that his talk with the Pope was "The prettiest moment in my life."

The Catholic Philippines, the only Catholic Asian country, would be struck with rage if they knew how they had been sold out by their own religious father, who accorded the Japanese full cooperation by not nullifying the atrocities and conquests of the Japanese across Asia, including the Philippines, the alliance of the Pope and his "Yellow Brother" being a closely kept secret from modern Catholics. As early as the beginning of the century Count Hayashi in his, Secret Memoirs, 1915, had written that Japan must be involved politically, worldwide.

Abraham, an instructor, and also an authority on population and birth control, was vice-chairman of the International Union of Family Organizations and vice-president of the Planned Parenthood Federation of America. During this period, abortion and sex outside of marriage were illegal in the U.S., and compulsory sterilization of so-called "Defective" people was permitted, or ordered, in 30 states, "A dangerous social policy," said the Stones.

Hitler will use similar social attitudes to call for the extermination of cripples, mentally infirmed, and old folks in Germany. work of demonical agency, and satanic device, that they may bring up a bad report upon the works of God, that they may mar this living creature, that imputing all not to the choice, but to the nature of our members, the more part of them may sin in security as being irresponsible, and doubly harm this living creature, both by mutilating the members and be impeding the forwardness of the free choice in behalf of good deeds. ” ~Saint John Chrysostom, Homilies on Matthew 62:3, 391 CE.

“Japan must keep quite and lull suspicion and wait her day; then not only put the meddling powers out but meddle herself.” ~Count Hayashi, Secret Memoirs, 1915.

AD 1935- In a letter, Sigmund Freud writes, “Homosexuals must not be treated as sick people...”

AD 1936- General Douglas Mac Arthur is accepted into the Brotherhood of Free & Accepted Masons of the Philippines on January 17th [Freemasonry]. He affiliates with Manila Lodge No. 1 in Manila. It is regrettable that the Philippine Masonry has not taken upon itself to maintain the high standards set by their predecessors.

Hitler's Nazi government passes the anti-Jewish Nuremberg Laws, which parallels earlier Catholic Church laws against Jews in the 4th century. Cardinal Hlud, of Poland, vehemently urges all Catholics to boycott Jewish businesses.

Regarding the War in Spain, “But a new element entered into the war: the Catholic Church. It sided with the rebels. The rebels had sworn to restore the Church to power. That was one reason for the Vatican's sympathy... The American press got its first facts fairly straight. Its errors were unintentional. But from the beginning of August 1936, the Catholic hierarchy in America... Began a crusade against the newspapers which truthfully reported events in Spain.” ~George Seldes.

“How effective the boycott against the Stern paper [Record publisher, Stern] was I do not know. But every newspaperman knows that the most powerful pressure group in America today is the Roman Catholic Church. I do not know whether it succeeded in curtailing the Record circulation or inflicting a financial blow through the withdrawal of advertising by Catholic business men. But on August 10, 1936, Publisher Stern wrote a humble letter to Cardinal Dougherty... [who] accepted the apology... I believe that every newspaperman in America who really values freedom of the press, no matter what his religious beliefs may be, will deplore this episode, and especially the Record's genuflections.” ~George Seldes.

“And now we behold the publisher of a chain of four newspapers, four of the very tiny minority of liberal, free, independent newspapers left in America, bowing before the pressure of the Church when in fact his editorials on Spain had been true, honest, favorable to the anti-Fascist movement in Spain and applauded by all fair, liberal and intelligent men ... Caught between the advertising pressure of big business on the one hand, and the political pressure of a religious organization on the other, the New York Post, Philadelphia Record, Camden Courier and Camden Post have had to make the usual compromises. I know of no better illustration of the fact that there is no completely free press in America.” ~George Seldes.

The Spanish War of 1936-39 is often, inappropriately, called a civil war, but this is a gross prevarication, perpetrated from the very beginning via mass propaganda, as it was not a civil war but a bold invasion by Hitler, Mussolini and Salazar fascists or what George Seldes refers to as the Fascist Internationale in league with the Roman Catholic Church, the Vatican.

Mussolini will land 200,000 infantrymen from his villainous Black Arrow Division in Franco-held seaports and Hitler will authorize Goering to send in the infamous Condor Legion to bomb thousands of innocent civilians, which involved an estimated 50,000 German aviators, and which had already been envisioned in Rome as early as 1934.

“Mussolini and two representatives of the plan ... Met there and even promised help in overthrowing the Republic and establishing a fascist type of government. They also met with Hitler that same year, and the confessions of the Nazis at the Nuremberg Trials confirm the plot... There was to be an uprising of treasonous Republic officers led by Franco, the invasion by the Italian and German forces and the promulgation of the lie that this was an uprising against a communist take-over of the Republic and a Christian crusade against atheistic communism.” ~George Seldes.

It is the Roman Church, which will create the, “Christian Crusade Against Communism,” beginning immediately after Pacelli's visit to America. “The New York Times, October 1, 1936, is informed from Rome that Pacelli has `Left for the United States of America to enlist the support of President Roosevelt and the U.S. Government for the anti-communist campaign the Pope has been waging for some time. The Holy See regards the spread of communist doctrine as the gravest and most threatening danger hanging over the world.”

When the Cardinal arrives in New York The New York Times headline reads, “Pacelli Reported Seeking Aid in U.S. in Anti-Red Drive...” and, another Catholic myth is born.

The Leftist German director Gustav von Wangenheim, 1895-1975, produces the film Bortzy [The Fighters], which depicts the Nazis as homosexuals. In reaction the irritated Hitler Nazi regime enacts a new and more stringent version of the notorious Paragraph 175, increasing convictions for homosexual activity in Germany.

End of the World: Herbert W. Armstrong, founder of the Worldwide Church of God, predicts that the Day of the Lord will happen sometime in 1936, and when his prediction fails, he makes a new estimation: 1975.

AD 1937-Birth of the most notorious Catholic in history. His Jewish father was Aloys Schicklgruber: born: June 7, 1837– January 3, 1903. Adolf Hitler, on May 22, 1904, at fifteen years of age is confirmed [Roman Catholic] at Linz Cathedral. Sponsored by one of Aloys’s pallbearers and former customs house colleague, “Adolf Hitler, son of the Catholic Church, died while defending Christianity. It is therefore understandable that words cannot be found to lament over his death, when so many were found to exalt his life. Over his mortal remains stands his victorious moral figure. With the palm of the martyr, God gives Hitler the laurels of Victory.” ~Spanish dictator, Francisco Franco, Knight of the Order of Christ, published on the 3rd of May 1945, the day of Hitler’s death; Reforma, 21st of July 1945.

AD 1938- Hitler brings back various century-old Catholic Church regulations, ordering all Jews to wear a yellow Star of David as identification.

AD 1939-Illuminati Conspiracy Theory: Hitler Invades Poland with the financial backing of the Rothschilds, Warburgs, and Krupps. Power is a game in which those in the know subjugate those without knowledge. The Illuminati represents this unknown power, domination, and mind control of the populace and demands fear and respect from those who allow themselves to fall into its trap in believing hearsay without proper research into the subject.

Pope Pius XII is called the “The greatest moral coward of our time” by the BBC for the Vatican’s untold involvement in WWII and clandestine accord with Hitler and Mussolini as well as the Emperor of Japan [who publicly claims to be the Son of God].

Heads of the Shinto and Buddhist religions are bought, literally, to support the conspiracy, and the Vatican promises that if it were given a monopoly of the Christian missions it would see to it that the Gospel is accommodated the noble design of exploiting the slave labor and vast resources of China, Indo-China, Thailand, etc! –Response to Hitler by the pitiable German Bishops, “We give our vote to the Fatherland but that does not signify approval of matters for which we could not conscientiously be held responsible.” ~Catholic Times, March 27, 1936, and the World Almanac of 1939, pg 236.

AD 1939- Rudolf Hess, German Nazi, launches a compilation of documents of Anti-Masonic literature and paraphernalia to discredit the Masonic Order. Secrecy causes fear amongst Dictators. The alleged Judeo-Masonic groups are threatening to take over the Third Reich and through the world order of Masons plan on taking over leadership of the world.

This propaganda is perpetuated by Hitler to invoke the wrath of the people against minority groups and organizations whom he feels pose a threat to his dictatorship. “The Protocols” becomes a revered book by the proliferations of anti-Semitism and anti-masonry.

Even the Most Reverend Father Pierre Charles of the Society of Jesus has cause to publish a denunciation of this work in the Nouvelle Revue Theologique in Belgium, January 1938. Conspiracy theories abound in these times to perpetuate the cause of Nazism and its New World Order under Hitler. With the occupation of France, in 1940, Bernard Faÿ becomes a propaganda enthusiast for the Germans. In 1943 he helps produce the film “Forces Occultes” that depicts a Frenchman who infiltrates the brotherhood and exposes their efforts to start the war.

The propaganda movie [Forces Occultes] illustrates Masonic symbols throughout, and Masons are portrayed as the villains of the state. Faÿ is appointed Administrator of the Bibliothèque Nationale and uses his position to research 170,000 members of France’s secret societies.

Many Freemasons are deported and over 117 are condemned to death. After the war Faÿ is sentenced to life imprisonment for his war crimes. Bernard Faÿ, a French historian, believes that the Masons were responsible for both the French and American Revolutions [they did play an active part in this respect] Fay believed that there is a twentieth-century plot now going on in Europe to promote war that is funded in either partially or wholly by the Masonic organizations to create a new world order.

With the support of the Third Reich many people are gullible to this propaganda. Hitler believes in Astrology and retains the services of Swiss Astrologer Karl Ernst Krafft while the English retain Austrian Astrologer Louis de Wohl.

AD 1939-1945-World War II breaks out across the world. Man had thought that after the 1st World War that there would be no other. False conceptions and lack of knowledge about people and the similarities contribute to the ignorance spread in propaganda materials spread by all sides. People in the Western Allied Countries are told the Germans have a bad leader while the Japanese are referred to as a bad race.

The Japanese believe that their pure blood is superior to all mongrel countries and that they are a greater people.

The Germans, under Hitler, feel that they are the master race, and have a Superior God [a cause promoted by rewriting Biblical Scripture, like the Catholics, to promote the interests of their leader] and a superior people [most probably just superior egos] The Japanese sign a treaty with the Germans in support of one another.

AD 1939-75-Francisco Franco rules Spain. A law for the suppression of Masonry and communism is enacted. Hundreds of Masons are executed. Masons are supporters of individual rights that are anathema to dictators, totalitarian governments, and autocratic religious institutions.

Christianity may proclaim to be truly a religion of peace and freedom, but until two centuries ago, it was regarded as anything but that. From its first acceptance by the malevolent Emperor Constantine, in the 3rd century, until the philosophical coup of that school headed by Voltaire, in the 18th century, the Church's most prominent divines believed no less steadfastly in the mission of their Jesus Christ than in the absolute duty of the magistrate to seek out and severely punish even the smallest hint of any religious non-conformity. ~The Case Against Sex Censorship: A Conservative View by Sean Gabb

Note: Peter Sutcliffe, the "Yorkshire Ripper," claimed to have killed in obedience to direct instructions from God Almighty.

AD 1940-The Vatican denies any duplicity with the Axis powers, however, the 1940 volume of the "Annual Register" appeared and that weighty and quite impartial authority says [drawing upon Vatican sources], that Ribbentrop told Pope Pius XII that "German soldiers would be in Paris by June and in London by August," which was on March 11, 1940. Shirer confirmed that some hard bargaining between the Vatican and Germany went on at this time, stating that Msgr. Orsenigo, the Nuncio at Berlin "had been quietly paying visits to the Wilhelmsstrasse for weeks" ~See Berlin Diary, pg. 234.

Women's Rights: Under political pressure from the Roman Catholic Church, the government of Quebec, Canada, withhold the vote from women until the mid 1940's.

The American papers which reproduced President Roosevelt's description of Mussolini's dastardly hostile actions printed "The hand that held the dagger plunged it into the back of its neighbor," and did not speak of the joy of the Italian Church. As if to excuse the Vatican in advance the Rome correspondent of the New York Times, June 12, quoted from Vatican sources, "Semi-official" this time, "...It seems that the attitude and responsibility of the Vatican are entirely separate from those of the Italian clergy and the Italian Catholics."

From Professor La Piana's article, on June 16, the Archbishop of Gorizia encouraged his people in a pastoral letter, one of several issued at that time, to support Mussolini. Hitler's Nazis confine the Jews to inner-city ghettos, another technique of the Holy Mother, the Catholic Church.

The blind Frenchman traitor, Petain [Henri Philippe Pétain, the French military and political hero of World War I], tramples on the last remnants of democracy in France, the Papal newspaper, the Osservatore Romano, July 8, hails the traitorous Petain's restoration of "The principle of authority," with enthusiasm and says that in this respect "The aims of the dictatorships coincided with those of the Church." ~From J. McCabe, Rationalist Encyclopedia.

End of the World: A Bible teacher from Australia, Leonard Sale-Harrison, holds a series of prophesy conferences across North America in the 1930's predicting that the End of the World will happen in 1940 or 1941.

Solidarity will lead to conquest of Non-Catholics, "The Roman Catholic motto is ourselves alone for fellow Roman Catholics. We must defeat all heretics [non-Roman Catholics] at the ballot box. The holy father states that negative tactics are fatal. The demands of the Holy Father [the Pope] are that the public services should be 100% Roman Catholic soon. Care must be taken that no suspicion may be raised when Roman Catholics are secretly given more government jobs than Protestants, Jews, and other heretics. ” ~Australian Archbishop Gilroy, 1940.

High Christian reverence for the corrupt and immoral Duce, Mussolini, “...Lift reverent thoughts to the ever victorious King and Emperor and to the undefeated Duce: may God bless and protect him.”
 ~Archbishop of Gorizia, 1940.

Cardinal Schuster, head of the Italian Church, visited soldiers in the barracks at Milan and “Distributed blessed medals to bring luck to the Italian armies,” in their future conquests.

The “Civilia Catholica,” similar to the Vatican as the “Osservatore,” is as a means of media dissemination, urged the soldiers to “Shed their blood for the cause blessed by their religion.”

On June 27th when France lay prostrate in the dust of the German invaders, thirty Italian Bishops gave away one of the reasons for their joy, and one that must have been very active in the Vatican. They urged the Duce to “Crown the unfailing victory of our army” by taking the Holy Land from French and British hands and putting it, on the religious side, under the Pope.

This, they said, would justly express “The harmony between the civilized people of Imperial and Christian Rome.” ~From the works of Fr. Joseph McCabe.

AD 1940- July 27th: Birth of the Reverend Troy Perry, Minister, strong activist, leather-man, and founder of the Metropolitan Community Church who devised an astonishing way to use the Gideon Bible now found in every hotel room as a ball weight.

AD 1941- Did Pope Pius XII really offer protection to the Jews? In October of 1941, the Italian paper, “La Vita Italiana,” bitterly complained that not only were there still Jews in Italy, but some of them were millionaires, and occupied very high positions in the government service. The paper went on to say: “The appointment [of the Jew, Signor Sacerdoti, who had just been appointed Director General of all the shipyards of Italy] again confirms the general conviction that Italian Jews are strongly favored and protected by the Catholic Church and that wealthy Jews in Italy are still very influential.”

Religious hatred prevailed then as it does now. At the same time I must point out, that in Italian, “Sacerdoti” means “Priests,” so, this protected Jew, was obviously a Roman Catholic, as well as a millionaire, and therefore, according to their interpretation, a fit person, to come under the Pope’s mantle of Charity: which did not cover the 69,999 Jews who were robbed of their possessions and cast out. ~From the works of the former Benedictine Monk, Father Antony, now Joseph McCabe.

According to Jehovah’s Witnesses, the Bible teaches a time period called “The time of the Gentiles,” but does not specify a time length; Jehovah’s Witnesses have nevertheless assigned the “Time of the Gentiles,” a length of 2,520 years. This number is arrived at by doubling another number found in Revelation, chapter 12, and changing the term “Days” to “Years.” In the Revelation account a woman gives birth to a son, “And she gave birth to a son, a male child, who is to rule all the nations with a rod of iron; and her child was caught up to God and to His throne. And the woman fled into the wilderness where she had a place prepared by God, so that she might be nourished for one thousand two hundred and sixty days.” ~Revelation 12:5-6.

The Nazi Holocaust results in the execution of over 6 million Jews [or possibly more], a similar number of non-Jews, such as Soviet prisoners of war, Polish intellectuals, and about a half million Roma [Gypsies]. Included are a few thousand Jehovah’s Witnesses and an unknown number of Catholic priests, and homosexuals. Of these victims, only the Jews and Roma are marked for total annihilation [extermination] by the Nazis. ~History of the Holocaust, Holocaust Memorial Center, at: <http://www.holocaustcenter.org/>

Vatican apology, “We would risk causing the victims of the most atrocious deaths to die again if we do not have an ardent desire for justice, if we do not commit ourselves to insure that evil does not prevail over good as it did for millions of children of the Jewish people... Humanity cannot permit all that to happen again.” ~Pope John Paul II, Address on the Occasion of a Commemoration of the Shoah, 1994-APR-7, 1994, 3: Insegnamenti 17/1, 1994, 897 and 893.

Orders 9066 and 9102, which is later upheld by the U.S. Supreme Court, empowering the U.S. military to transport 70,000 U.S. citizens [of Japanese descent] and 42,000 Japanese resident aliens from the West Coast to Relocation Centers away from coastal areas [which the U.S. felt vital to defense purposes].

The propaganda during this period portrays the Japanese [predominantly non-Christians] as a "Bad Race" whereas the Germans [predominantly Christians], are portrayed as having a "Bad Leader."

AD1941-45-The Financial Sins of The Church-The Croatian Catholic Church is closely entangled with the Ustase Regime, part of Yugoslavia, and in the early years of World War II, Catholic priests oversaw the forced conversions of the local population of Orthodox Serbs under the aegis of the Ustase underground movement. In the state of Croatia Franciscan friars distributed Ustasha propaganda. Several high-ranking Catholic officials in Yugoslavia are later to be indicted for their war crimes due to their involvement in atrocities committed against the non-Catholic inhabitants.

They include: Father Dragutin Kamber, who ordered the killing of nearly 300 Orthodox Serbs; the Bishop Ivan Saric of Sarajevo, also known as the "Hangman of the Serbs;" and Bishop Gregory Rozman, of Slovenia, who is a wanted Nazi collaborator.

A trial is held by the Yugoslavian War Crimes Commission in 1946 resulting in the conviction of a half-dozen Catholic Ustase priests, including the former Franciscan, Miroslav Filipovic-Majstorovic, who was a commandant of the Jasenovac concentration camp where the Ustashes tortured and slaughtered hundreds of thousands of victims [Serbs, Jews, and gypsies], Father Dragutin Kamber, who ordered the killing of nearly 300 Orthodox Serbs [although the total number is somewhere between 300,000 and 500,000 thousand victims], Bishop Ivan Saric of Sarajevo, known as the "Hangman of the Serbs"; and Bishop Gregory Rozman of Slovenia, a wanted Nazi collaborator.

In 1943, the Ustasha movement makes arrangements with the Croatian Catholic Church to send Father Draganovic [known as The Golden Priest] to Rome. The "Good Father" served as Secretary of the "Istituto San Girolamo," which is a seminary for Croatian monks. In reality, it was in fact a center for clandestine Ustasha activities. Father Draganovic also became Ustasha leader Ante Pavelic's unofficial emissary to the Vatican [In 1941 and in 1943, at a time when his unrestrained behavior was well known, Pavelic was granted two private audiences with Pope Pius XII.]

The collaborators at San Girolamo provided money, food, housing, and forged Red Cross passports for numerous Ustasha war criminals who escaped justice through an underground system of sympathetic Catholic priests, known as the "Rat-line," by which the Ustashes could move from Trieste, to Rome, to Genoa, and on to neutral countries such as Argentina.

A brutality permeated the air that saw the extermination of an estimated 500,000 people and even shocked some of the Nazis [The atrocities were appalling enough to induce bystanders of the Nazi "Sicherheitsdienst der SS", watching, to complain about them to Hitler. ~from www.rev1hank@aol.com]

William Gowen, a CIC Officer in Rome regarding the monastery at San Girolamo, writes on Feb. 12, 1947. "In order to enter this monastery, one must submit to a personal search for weapons and identification. The whole area is guarded by armed Ustasha youths in civilian clothes, and the Ustasha salute is exchanged constantly."

In a memo, dated Oct. 21, 1946, [declassified files of the U.S. Treasury Department] written by OSS agent Emerson Bigelow, it reports that money sent by Ustasha from Croatia to Rome after the war had been partly intercepted by the British, but that 200 million Swiss francs—the equivalent of $170 million [taken from the Serb, Jewish, and gypsy victims] today-was being held in the Vatican for "Safekeeping."

The Vatican is swift to dismiss the issue of its involvement in stolen funds and extermination of peoples declaring it not to be true [If the Vatican is so intense in defending its reputation, then why doesn't it open its records? As a rule, the Vatican releases church documents after 75 years have lapsed. "I am bound to silence," says the Rev. Marcel Chappin of the Vatican Secretariat of State, when hard-pressed to comment. Chappin stated that the Vatican has already published a voluminous account of its role in World War II, including a discussion of the controversy surrounding Pius XII].

On October 17th, 1947, as cited in the 1991 book, "Unholy Trinity," by the journalist Mark Aarons and former Justice Department Nazi-hunter John Loftus, according to the memo, a San Giralomo priest named Father Mandic was a "Liaison to the Vatican," who was involved in converting the Ustasha gold, jewelry, and foreign exchange into Italian lire. Other reports mention Ustashes meeting with other Vatican officials and even living in the Vatican itself.

January, 1947, The British Foreign Office reports that Pavelic himself, a wanted war criminal, "was living within the Vatican City." An earlier report by William Gowen, in October 1946, notes that Pavelic was already in Rome and in contact with Father Draganovic. Documents include accounts of the dreadful Usthas being hidden at the Pope's summer residence in Castle Gandolfo and having been seen driving around Rome in cars with Vatican license plates.

Recently declassified Golik memos report that Usthas ate at the Papal mess and Father Golik being declared to be in close contact with the Vatican. The Vatican's acceptance of the Ustasha before, during, and after the war is no secret.

The Spread of Christianity: In Canada; The right to organize publicly supported religious schools is only given to the Christian denominations, thus tax monies used to support a selected group of Christian denominations. The denominational schools could refuse admission of a student or the hiring of a qualified teacher on purely religious grounds. AD 1942-Lidice-a small village in the Czech Republic, northwest of Prague; where the good Christian Nazis murdered all the men in retaliation for the killing of a high ranking Nazi officer, Reinhard Heydrich, by Czech underground soldiers, five days earlier. The children, considered Aryan, were sent to Germany to be raised. The remains of the town were burned and leveled.

The Nazi leaders of Germany, at the Wannsee Conference, decide on "The final solution of the Jewish question," which is the attempt to exterminate every Jew in Europe. From July-28 to 31, almost 18,000 Russian inhabitants of the Minsk Ghetto in what is now Belarus are brutally exterminated.

This is in addition to 5,000 to 15,000 who had already been massacred in earlier pogroms in that city. This is just one of many such pogroms during World War II.

Father Luciano Guerra, the chief custodian of the Fatima Shrine [The Shrine to the Virgin Mary at Fatima in Portugal], confirms reports in the Portuguese magazine "Visao," that in 1942 the shrine had received 110 lbs. of gold ingots from Nazi Germany. He tells Corriere della Sera that he had been, "Unaware until recently," that the gold had been stolen from Jewish victims of the Nazis.

Father Guerra says the gold has "Disappeared" in 1970, before he takes charge of the Shrine, and goes to "An unknown destination." Jewish leaders have repeatedly called on the Vatican to open up its archives to prove or disprove these claims and to allow scholars to explore allegations that Pope Pius XII ignored the Nazi atrocities and that the Vatican has in its possession the stolen gold. ~Richard Owen, 6 April 2000.

The Most Blessed Father, Benedict Gaetani, was crowned Pope Boniface VIII in 1294, and was one of the most cruelest, bloodthirsty, sadistic, extravagant, corrupt, greedy, and licentious Vicar of Christ. Only the Devil could have blessed him with such a diabolical character and power. His papal tales of satanic madness are too numerous to quote here.

AD 1944-Less than sixty years ago, a woman is prosecuted for witchcraft in the United Kingdom.

A great American author writes of witchcraft and the horrendous atrocities perpetrated by the Catholic Church, in the name of God; "During many ages there were witches. The Bible said so. The Bible commanded that they should not be allowed to live. Therefore the Church, after doing its duty in but a lazy and indolent way for 800 years, gathered up its halters, thumb screws, and firebrands, and set about its holy work in earnest. She worked hard at it night and day during nine centuries and imprisoned, tortured, hanged, and burned whole hordes and armies of witches, and washed the Christian world clean with their foul blood. Then it was discovered that there was no such thing as witches, and never had been. One does not know whether to laugh or to cry." ~Mark Twain, Europe and Elsewhere.

Religion gone wrong. Japanese soldiers are ordered to commit 'Seppuku,' a form of ritual disembowelment suicide, by their superiors, and are expected to do so as a matter of honor, which they interpret as a greater honor than losing a battle. Some may also have done it as a matter of free choice, which is also for the sake of honor; considered better than dishonorably being taken a prisoner.

Russian soldiers climbing through the rubble and fighting from house to house, and street to street to join up with their British and American allies overrun the eastern sector of Berlin coming across an extraordinary phenomena, vast numbers of Tibetan corpses. Referred to by Maurice Bessy, Pauwels and Bergier in their, "Morning of the Magicians," 1960, the actual number of bodies is estimated at a thousand. They wore German uniforms, but without the usual insignia of rank.

The Nazi leaders were attracted to Tibet due to their secret doctrines and occult mysticism, which filtered through to the west. They believed, that members of the "Thule Order" and the "Luminous Lodge," as well as various other occult organizations, which would later be incorporated into the Nazi movement could help shape the Third Reich and thereby help shape the esoteric history of mankind.

It is in the archives of Tibetan monasteries that this history was preserved in its highest form, the Tibetan secret teachings being carried to the West by Helena Blavatsky, who claimed initiation at the hands of the Holy Lamas.

The Nazi movement organized a number of expeditions to Tibet without interruption until 1943. One of the assets of Nazi interest in Tibet is the Nazi Party's adaptation of a mystical symbols, known as the "Swastika." The swastika is one of man's oldest symbols, represented on pottery fragments from Greece, used in ancient Egypt, India, China, and also by the Navaho Indians of North America, even Arab-Islamic sorcerers used it. "The Party stands on the basis of Positive Christianity, and Positive Christianity is National Socialism... National Socialism is the doing of God's will... God's will reveals itself in German blood... Dr. Zoellner and Count Galen have tried to make clear to me that Christianity consists in faith in Christ as the Son of God. That makes me laugh... No, Christianity is not dependent upon the Apostle's Creed... True Christianity is represented by the party, and the German people are now called by the party and especially by the Fuehrer to a real Christianity... The Fuehrer [Hitler] is the Herald of a New Revelation." ~Dr. Hans Kerrl, Nazi Minister for Church Affairs.

The Nazis used the symbol, reversed, spinning in an anti-clockwise direction. Used as a solar symbol, the swastika is thought of as a spinning entity, the Buddhists believing the symbol attracted good fortune. The Sanskrit word "svastika" meant good fortune and wellbeing. Cabalistic lore and occult theory held that a chaotic force could be evoked, by reversing the direction of the symbol. The symbol appears as the national flag of Nazi Germany and the insignia of the Nazi party showing the occult nature of the Third Reich.

The Church condemned communism, and on May 31, 1940, when the question of an approach to Stalin was being discussed, the Catholic Herald had said, flamboyantly: "Far better to go down with our honor intact than clutch at a filthy straw."

Vietnam: After more than a century of war, Vietnam is once more free, or so it seemed. There are some in the conspiracy circle who now blame the Jesuits for the world conflagration of WWII. Now that WWII is over, most of Europe, Russia, North Africa, China, and Japan are near financial ruin, many believe due to Jesuit policies. Millions of "Heretics" had been "Extirpated," [utterly destroyed by ethnic cleansing or preservation of Divine doctrines]. The "Jesuit Hegelian Dialectic," will now be applied worldwide., but with a new name, it will be known as "The Cold War."

The thesis and antithesis would be "The Free World in the West" verses "the Communist Block in the East," good versus evil, with both sides being financed by the Jesuits' International Banking Cartel in London and New York, "Federal Reserve Bank," and the "Chase-Manhattan Banks."

The Conspiracy theory regarding Jesuit banking principles states, the destruction of the American Empire through the so-called ending of the "Cold War," would create an illusion of ending the Cold War which would legally enable Rome's Corporate Monopolies, federated together in New York City under the leadership of the "Council on Foreign Relations," to give Russia and China high technology and financial backing.

The giving of these necessities would perfect the War Machines of both economically communist and politically fascist giants for the purpose of invading North America, it containing the majority of the world's Protestants, Baptists, and Jews. According to Jewish tradition, "The following have no share in the world to come, but are cut off, and perish, and receive their punishment for all time for their great sin: the minim, the apioresim, they that deny the belief in the Torah, they that deny the belief in Resurrection of the dead and in the coming of the Redeemer, the apostates, they that lead many to sin, they that turn away from the ways of the [Jewish] community. Five are called 'minim':

- (1) He who says there is no God and the world has no leader;
- (2) He who says the world has more than one leader;
- (3) He who ascribes to the Lord of the Universe a body and a figure;
- (4) He who says that God was not alone and Creator of all things at the world's beginning.
- (5) He who worships some star or constellation as an intermediating power between himself and the Lord of the World. ~Yad, Teshubah, iii, 6-8, Heretics in Sanh, 90-103, Maimonides.

AD1945-Jesuit Conspiracy Theory: Russia is taken over by the Jesuits, through Joseph Stalin the Jesuits continue the political purges their installation of dictators loyal to the Pope, around the world [South America, Africa, but not Eastern Europe, the Orthodox nations, and the Buddhist nations], the purpose of the Cold War being to eliminate those millions of heretics, orthodox Buddhists, and Protestants to install in their country dictators that will carry out the Inquisition, which will be loyal to the Pope. "The Catholics have a Pope. Protestants laugh at them, and yet the Pope is capable of intellectual advancement. In addition to this, the Pope is mortal, and the Church cannot be afflicted with the same idiot forever. The Protestants have a Book for a Pope. The Book cannot advance. Year after year, and century after century, the Book remains as ignorant as ever." ~Robert Ingersoll.

The Czar is executed [Romanoff family which is related to the present Queen of England and her family but refused asylum in Britain] and the Orthodox Church no longer had a protector, because Church and State are one in Russia, thus giving the Jesuits free reign with their Bolsheviks, to kill-off the Orthodox leadership that was anti-Rome.

They kill 5,000 priests and nuns, during the revolution, of the Orthodox Church, beheading all the anti-Catholic, anti-Pope leadership of the Orthodox Church. After ridding the Romanoffs, they began to purge Russia of its Protestants, they purged it of its Lutherans; they burned down the Lutheran Church; imprisoned the Baptists, and sent them off to Siberia.

The Jesuits are given a formal re-entry into Russia in 1922, after the Bolshevik Revolution, and the "Russian College," is erected in Rome in 1929, so they can prepare Russian Jesuits to help rule Russia,

AD 1945-Discovery of the Nag Hammadi Manuscripts, nearly two thousand years old [Gospel of Thomas] The symbolism in the Gnostic texts question beliefs and traditions now held sacred by present day Christians. The texts question suffering, labor and death being derived from Original Sin. How can this be so in a perfect creation? How can God make mistakes? The texts also questions the Resurrection as symbolic and not literally. "Possession of books denounced as heretical was made a criminal offense. Copies of such books were burned and destroyed. But in Upper Egypt, someone, possibly a monk from a nearby monastery of Saint Pachomius, took the banned books and hid them from destruction; in the jar where they remained buried for almost 1,600 years." ~Elaine Pagels, The Gnostic Gospels, New York: Vintage, 1989, pp. xviii-xix.

Will man ever go back to using common sense? "The doctrine that future happiness depends upon belief is monstrous. It is the infamy of infamies. The notion that faith in Christ is to be rewarded by an eternity of bliss, while a dependence upon reason, observation and experience merits everlasting pain, is too absurd for refutation, and can be relieved only by that unhappy mixture of insanity and ignorance, called 'Blind Faith.' What man, who ever thinks, can believe that blood can appease God? And yet, our entire system of religion is based upon that believe. The Jews pacified Jehovah with the blood of animals, and according to the Christian system, the blood of Jesus softened the heart of God a little, and rendered possible the Salvation of a fortunate few. It is hard to conceive how the human mind can give assent to such terrible ideas, or how any sane man can read the Bible and still believe in the doctrine of 'Inspiration.'" ~Robert G. Ingersoll, The Gods, 1872.

AD 1945- The following report is from an October 1995 article in the Encarta Yearbook. Swiss Banks Uncover $34 Million That May Belong to Holocaust Victims after decades of denying charges that its banks still held assets that had been deposited by people who later became victims of the Nazi Holocaust, the Swiss Banking Association reversed its position and announced on September 12 that a search of its vaults had uncovered $34 million in dormant accounts that had been opened before the end of World War II.

In addition, the banking association announced that it planned to set up an independent central claims agency by the end of the year to oversee the seemingly abandoned accounts and to help Holocaust victims and their heirs recover lost assets. The Swiss banks reversed their position after a partial survey conducted by 12 of the largest banks in Switzerland turned up a total of $34 million in 893 accounts that had been opened before 1945 and had remained inactive.

While international Jewish organizations applauded the banks for finally conducting the long-sought search, they questioned the relatively low value of the discovered assets. According to these organizations and many analysts, the search should have turned up billions, rather than millions, of dollars in lost assets. Before and during the war, it was not uncommon for people to cross into Switzerland, at the risk of persecution by the Nazis, to deposit whatever assets they had in Swiss accounts. Switzerland's loose banking practices and tight secrecy laws were conducive to hiding assets from the Nazis. Swiss banks allowed people to open accounts and deposit assets in accounts identified only by number, as well as to set up accounts as corporations, under false names, and for third parties.

While these loose practices made it easier to hide assets in the years leading up to and during World War II, they made it nearly impossible to reclaim long-hidden assets after the war's end. Because many of these accounts lacked essential information, such as the actual name of the person to whom the assets belonged, it was extremely difficult for victims of the Holocaust or their heirs to claim the accounts after the war. In addition, Swiss banking laws kept these accounts and their records shrouded under tight secrecy, making attempts to reclaim the lost assets virtually futile.

In 1962, under pressure from international Jewish organizations, Switzerland passed a law ordering its banks to search for unclaimed assets that may have been deposited by or for persons who later became Holocaust victims. The search, which was heavily criticized by Jewish organizations and the international community for its lack of depth, turned up only $8.2 million in unclaimed accounts. About 1000 people recovered $6 million, and Swiss banks donated the remainder to Jewish charities.

Swiss banks, initially, focused their search on unclaimed accounts that had been opened under Jewish-sounding names. The search completely ignored numbered accounts, accounts that had been set up as corporations, and safety deposit boxes. Jews living in the postwar Communist countries of Eastern Europe, many of whom claimed to have assets in Swiss accounts, were not included in the search as they were not free to travel to recover lost assets. In addition, banks were not required to publicize their records or to use independent auditors as monitors.

Under the law, the search period ended in 1973. After 1973 it became even more difficult for people to track down lost assets that had been deposited in Swiss banks. Swiss bankers, hiding behind the country's tight secrecy laws, avoided search requests for lost assets and maintained they had done their duty in 1962. In addition, if they did agree to look for lost assets, the banks charged anywhere from $80 to $800 for searches that most often produced negative results.

The most recent discovery of assets is the result of increasing pressure being put upon Swiss banks from various sources. After the breakup of the Soviet Union and the downfall of communism, for example, Eastern European Jews and other victims of the Holocaust were able to join the fight to recover assets that they claimed had been stashed away in Swiss banks for decades.

In addition, Switzerland has been slowly abolishing its banking secrecy laws so that it can meet the standards of the international banking community. ~Source: Encarta Yearbook, October 1995.

Discussing the Nazi Holocaust, Hans Küng, once a prominent Catholic theologian, who is now banned from teaching by the Catholic Church, writes that, "Nazi anti-Judaism was the work of godless, anti-Christian criminals. But it would not have been possible without the almost two thousand years' pre-history of 'Christian' anti-Judaism." ~ Hans Küng, On Being a Christian, Doubleday, Garden City NY, 1976, Page 169.

AD 1946- The Shoah [Holocaust] finally ends as the Allied Forces, predominantly of a Black Division, over-run the Nazi death camps.

A parade of prosecution witnesses at the mass murderer Stepinac's trial in Zagreb testified on October 5, 1946, that Catholic priests armed with pistols went out allegedly to convert Orthodox Serbs and massacred them. In one instance, one witness said 650 Serbs were taken into a Christian Church under false pretenses, and then were stabbed and beaten to death by Ustashi members after the doors were locked.

Stepinac is convicted on all principal counts of aiding the Axis, the Nazi puppet of Ante Pavelic, and of glorifying the Ustashi in the Catholic press, pastoral letters, and speeches.

AD 1946- Emperor Hirohito publicly renounces any claim to divinity, after centuries of Japanese Emperors claiming all Japanese Emperors were descendents of the Sun God.

The last of the vestiges of an Imperial Divinity dies. Kings, Queens, Monarchs are, after all, people just like you and I... And there is no such thing as Divine Birth.

For centuries the Japanese had worshipped their emperors as the earthly representations of 'Amaterasu, 'the Sun God. Although World War II ended the year before, anti-Semitic pogroms continue, particularly in Poland, with the deaths of many Jews, "Let's be clear that the Vatican is not a homeland for the Catholic people. Rather, it is the headquarters for the Catholic Church. While the Pope fielded an army and controlled significant territory, at this point in history, the Vatican is an independent nation in name only. If you doubt that, try to find any native citizen." ~Jeffrey Kay.

AD 1946- Pope Pius XII declares the bikini bathing suit as immoral. The Pope will say nothing against the mass persecution of the Jews and their struggle for independence, or the Afrikaners struggle for racial equality, or the Russian suppression of a whole nation, nor the indiscretions of its clergy.

The Roman Church claims to speak for the Catholic moral majority, yet does little for moral values, and, when it does, it will take months of meetings, congregations, and seminars to decide that molesting children is not morally correct in the year 2002.

"We believe that the rulers of a Catholic country have the right to restrict the activities of those who would lead their people away from their allegiance to the Catholic Church... They possess the right to prevent propaganda against the Church. This is merely a logical conclusion from the basic Catholic tenet that the Son of God established one religion and commanded all men to accept it under pain of eternal damnation."

~Father Francis J. Connell, Associate Professor of Moral Theology at the Catholic University of America, who is extraordinarily frank when writing in the American Ecclesiastical Review, January 1946.

"Israeli diplomats are quietly gritting their teeth: one observer suggests their little land is 'Keeping its powder dry' against the day the Vatican attempts again to beatify Pope Pius XII, who signed concordats with both Mussolini and Hitler and is responsible for the loss of not only hundreds of thousands of lives, but also millions [if not billions] of dollars in stolen treasures. It is not quite the worst honor bestowed by [Pope] John Paul II. Take the late Archbishop of Zagreb, Alojzije Stepinac. Stepinac was a close crony of Ante Pavelic, Croatia's new fascist dictator and a puppet of Hitler. His program for Croatia included anti-Semitic statutes, the forcible conversion of wider Yugoslavia to Roman Catholicism, and a program of genocide against Jews, gypsies, and, indeed, the Serbs. In Croatia, the Catholic hierarchy was aware of this program from the start: and in many of the atrocities clergymen played a significant part in tortures and concealment of treasure." -by jr10rg@aol.com.

The Catholic Church, to cover up the past atrocities of its malignant leadership, continues to deny any wrongdoings and names a high school, in America, after one of its own mass murderers, the malevolent Archbishop Stepinac.

AD 1946-The New English Bible is commissioned by the Church of Scotland.

"All that is necessary, as it seems to me, to convince any reasonable person that the Bible is simply and purely of human invention, of barbarian invention, is to read it. Read it as you would any other book; think of it as you would of any other; get the bandage of reverence from your eyes; drive from your heart the phantom of fear; push from the throne of your brain the coiled form of superstition, then read the Holy Bible, and you will be amazed that you ever, for one moment, supposed a being of infinite wisdom, goodness, and purity, to be the author of such ignorance and of such atrocity." ~Robert G. Ingersoll, The God, 1872. In 1946, Pope Pius XII informs a group of American editors that freedom of the press, "... Does not allow a man to print what is wrong, what is known to be false, or what is calculated to undermine and destroy the moral and religious fiber of individuals and the peace and harmony of nations."

The Pope, as self-proclaimed supreme religious leader of the world, considers himself the supreme judge of what is wrong, false, ethical, moral, religious, peaceful and harmonious encompassing all aspects of the existence of mankind in this mundane world.

The Pontiff's meticulous statement, therefore, grants reporters, editors, news agency owners, and publishers only those rights approved to them by the Pope. Thus, any reporter, editor or publisher who defies the Pope becomes eligible for condemnation, ostracizing, or excommunication. Thus spoken, the Pope establishes the ground rules for the Knights of Columbus in their crusade early in the early 20th century to wreck havoc on all American newspapers that do not conform to the dictates of the Vatican.

The Roman Church sanctions the murder of non-Catholics in Europe, "A parade of prosecution witnesses testified at Zagreb, on October 5, 1946, that Catholic priests armed with pistols went out to convert Orthodox Serbs and massacred them... Most of the witnesses were Croat Catholic peasants and laborers. One witness said six hundred and fifty Serbs were taken into a church under false pretenses, and then were stabbed and beaten to death by Ustashi members after the doors were locked. Archbishop Stepinac was convicted on all principal counts of aiding the Axis, the puppet Croatian regime of Ante Pavelic, and the terroristic Ustashi, and of glorifying the Ustashi in the Catholic press, pastoral letters, and speeches."

AD 1947-Publication of The Phillips Bible.

AD 1947-The Roswell Incident: July 4th, Roswell, New Mexico, Roswell Army Air Field [RAAF], are there other living creatures in the universe [aliens] with similar capabilities [intelligence] such as man? Did God make man and no other like him?

"The decline in American pride, patriotism, and piety can be directly attributed to the extensive reading of To Pope Pius XII. 'I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians.'" ~Mahatma Gandhi so-called 'Science Fiction' by our young people. This poisonous rot about creatures not of God's making, societies of Aliens without a good Christian among them, and raw sex between unhuman beings with three heads and God alone knows what sort of reproductive apparatus keeps our young people from realizing the true will of God." ~Jerry Falwell, Can Our Young People Find God in the Pages of Trashy Magazines? No, Of Course Not! Reader's Digest, Aug. 1985: 142-157. Contributed by Larry Reyka.

In 1980, a book titled, "The Roswell Incident" is published, with the book's coauthors, Charles Berlitz and William L. Moore, labeling the army's weather balloon explanation a "Cover story." [MJ-12 documents] In 1994 the Air Force admitted that the recovered material from Roswell was in reality, from a United States spy balloon.

Part of "Project Mogul," it was meant to monitor anticipated nuclear tests by the Soviet Union. In 1997 an Air Force report attempted to explain the inconsistencies that stories of the alien bodies may have come from civilian witnesses who saw a "Parachute crash test" using dummies, a severely injured airman parachutist, and charred bodies from an airplane crash during the 1950's. The religious implications are enormous. "In the beginning, God created man...."

Did God create other men? Did God create other creatures? Interpretations regarding the Scriptures may have to be re-evaluated if there is sufficient evidence to warrant the belief in extra-terrestrial beings.

In October 1995, in a news release by "Ecumenical News International," a Roman Catholic priest, and theologian, has called on his church to consider the possibility of the "Evangelization of Extraterrestrial Beings." This is prompted by the recent discovery of a Jupiter-sized planet orbiting a star in the constellation Pegasus only 40 light-years away from earth, the planet has been named "51 Pegasus."

Piero Coda, a theology professor in Rome, told the Vatican, "If life were to be found on the planet, then it would also have been contaminated by 'Original Sin' and would require salvation."

However, a professor at the Pontifical Gregorian University contradicts him by stating that extraterrestrial beings might not need redemption. "We know that earthmen sinned, but we know nothing of beings in other worlds."

The Catholic evolutionist, Pierre Teilhard de Chardin addressed similar uncertainties decades ago, "A mankind which proclaims that it is alone, or in a special position, in the universe reminds us of the philosopher who claims to reduce the whole of the real to his own consciousness, so exclusively as to deny true existence to other men... But just as the human soul is not alone, but essentially legion, on the surface of the earth, so it is infinitely probable that the conscious layer of the cosmos is not confined to a single point [our mankind] but continues beyond the earth into other stars and other times... How, then, is it that, against all probability, this particular mankind was chosen as the center of the Redemption? And how, from that starting-point, can Redemption be extended?" ~Creatinism or Evolution? by E. T. Babiniski, The Sinfulness of Extraterrestrials.

AD1947-Rushdie, Salman, British novelist of Indian descent whose book "The Satanic Verses," published in AD 1988, was banned in most Islamic countries. Born in Bombay [Mumbai], India, and educated at the University of Cambridge, his publications include: "Grimus," 1974, "Midnight's Children," 1981, and "Shame," 1983. "Midnight's Children," is the winner of the Booker Prize in 1981. Rushdie also wrote a commentary on his travels in Nicaragua, "The Jaguar Smile," 1987, and in 1990 his children's book "Haroun" and the "Sea of Stories" was published.

In 1995, on the 7th of September, a literary panel discussion in London, with the subject of "Writers and the State," was the first scheduled public appearance of any kind for Rushdie since 1989, when the Iranian leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini pronounced a fatwa [death sentence] upon the writer for his novel, "The Satanic Verses." [In 1989 Iran's Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini declared that Rushdie and everyone involved with the book's publication shall be put to death, and the Khomeini's followers have offered a bounty, which has reached $5 million in 1992 for Rushdie's death].

The book deals with the rudiments of Islam and other religious and collective rites in Rushdie's native India. Muslims in India, and elsewhere, felt the book had blasphemed their faith, and insurrections broke out following the book's publication in 1988. His book consequently becoming the center of one of the most highly publicized literary controversies in recent years.

Religious law declares that “Fatwas” can be lifted upon the death of the promulgator, but despite the death of Khomeini months after the religious leader called for the death of Rushdie and all those associated with The Satanic Verses, the “Fatwa” has lingered on. Its victims, include an Italian translator of the book who was knifed in 1991, and a Japanese translator who was fatally stabbed that year.

The bounty for Rushdie has risen to as high as $5 million as the European Union and representatives of the British government have been feverishly pressing the Iranian government to lift the sentence.

AD 1947- According to U.S. Army intelligence documents, U.S. agents hunting escaped Nazi war criminals after World War II purposely avoided capturing one man because it, “would deal a staggering blow to the Roman Catholic Church.” This man was none other than the Croatian leader, Ante Pavelic, head of the Croatian Ustashi government for four years during the height of the war.

The Sept. 12, 1947 memorandum signed by three agents of the Rome detachment of the U.S. Counter Intelligence Corps (CIC), states: “Pavelic’s contacts are so high and his present position is so compromising to the Vatican, that any extradition of Subject [Pavelic] would deal a staggering blow to the Roman Catholic Church.”

Pavelic headed a list of known war criminals that the Allies had agreed to return to Yugoslavia for trial. However, when he was located, he was under the protection of high Vatican officials who claimed that he could not get a fair trial if returned to Yugoslavia. Because of the danger of exposing the Vatican’s role in Pavelic’s war crimes, CIC agents recommended that the Vatican “Views of Pavelic be appreciated and no direct police action be taken against him.”

Pavelic is then allowed to join many other lesser Catholic war criminals who follow the Vatican’s underground escape route to safety in Latin America. During Pavelic’s reign, he and Roman Catholic Croatian prelate Archbishop Stepinac, used ‘Friendly’ persuasion to convert 200,000 Orthodox Serbs to Roman Catholicism. Their method of ‘evangelistic persuasion’ was very effective: Convert or Die! Of which 700,000 chose to die.

These recalcitrants were horribly butchered, mutilated, burned [sometimes in their own churches] or cruelly shot to death after being forced to dig their own graves. A war correspondent reported seeing a basket of human eyeballs once displayed on Pavelic’s desk, and Ustashi soldiers were sometimes seen wearing necklaces of human tongues.

AD 1948- Pope Pius XII updates the “Index of Forbidden Books.” Excommunication prevails for violators of this papal decree. The Church continues its disapproval of Freedom of the Press. Censorship is no longer extended to non-Catholics nor to the world per se.

“This pressure [of the Catholic Church on American journalism] is one of the most important forces in American life, and the only one about which secrecy is generally maintained, no newspaper being brave enough to discuss it, although all fear it and believe that the problem should be dragged into the open and made publicly known.” ~George Seldes, 1890-1995, Journalist and Dean of Investigative Reporters.

End of the World: The state of Israel is founded. Some Christians believe that this event is the final prerequisite for the Second Coming of Jesus. Various End of the World predictions are also made in the range from 1888 to 2048.

AD 1949- Paul Blanshard will report on his extensive study of Catholic censorship and boycott in a book entitled, American Freedom and Catholic Power. He discovered, “The censorship system of the Roman Catholic Church in the United States is neither a spasmodic nor an intermittent phenomenon. It is a highly organized system of cultural and moral controls that applies not only to books, plays, magazines and motion pictures, but to persons and places... [the Church] holds the power of economic life and death over many authors, publishers and producers who must rely upon American Catholics for patronage and support.”

“Writing for a penny a word is ridiculous. If a man really wants to make a million dollars, the best way would be to start his own religion.” ~Scientology founder L. Ron Hubbard, 1949.

Blanshard depends heavily on the writings of Catholics in good standing, including Canon law. He observes: “Catholics are taught that the Roman Catholic Church is the supreme guardian and purveyor of truth, that the Pope has infallible judgment in moral matters, and that union of minds requires not only a perfect accord in the one Faith, but complete submission and obedience of will to the Church and to the Roman Pontiff, as to God Himself.” ~The words are those of Pope Leo XIII in his Chief Duties of Christian Citizens ...

To Pope Pius XII, “I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians.” ~Mahatma Gandhi

"The Church is not afraid of the truth," states Father John C. Heenan in his Priest and Penitent, "... But She is very much afraid that a clever presentation of falsehood will deceive even the elect." The Church teaches that journalism is 'Immoral' if it is opposed to Catholic standards, and that, "... No one has a right to publish such literature any more than one has a right to poison wells or sell tainted food."

South Africa passes a law prohibiting interracial marriage.

Church involvement in politics: Hungarian Cardinal Mindszenty is sentenced to life imprisonment for "High treason."

AD 1950- The Assumption becomes an official article of faith in Christian doctrine. Mary, the mother of Jesus, is declared the exception to Original Sin by Pope Pius XII.

Mary is the Queen of Angels, whose soul is instilled with the grace upon the moment of her conception, free from lust or slavery to the devil [New Doctrines keep popping up to try and justify anachronistic religious teachings].

Bible Belt: Christian Brotherly Love: Mississippi makes publication of "General information, arguments, or suggestions in favor of social equality or intermarriage between Whites and Negroes" a crime.

After a year of revolution in China a marriage law sets age limits and allows widows to remarry. Prospective marriage partners must be checked for "Correct" thinking with the ruling Communist party. "In fact, if Christ himself stood in my way, I, like Nietzsche, would not hesitate to squish him like a worm."

~Che Guevara, Cuban revolutionist.

"The Ages of Faith, which are praised by our neo-scholastics, were the time when the clergy had things all their own way. Daily life was full of miracles wrought by saints and wizardry perpetrated by devils and necromancers. Many thousands of witches were burned at the stake. Men's sins were punished by pestilence and famine, by earthquake, flood, and fire. And yet, strange to say, they were even more sinful than they are now-a-days." ~Bertrand Russell, A Debate on the Existence of God: Bertrand Russell on God and Religion, Buffalo, NY: Prometheus, p. 208.

AD 1951- Rene Guyon criticizes the United Nations for not including Sexual Rights as a Basic Human Right.

AD 1952- Alan Turing, the mathematical genius, and acclaimed breaker of the Nazi WWII Codes, is also highly praised as "The man who saved England" reports the theft of his property by a hustler, but when the police realize why the thief was there Turing is arrested and prosecuted. He is chemically castrated by the authorities, hounded by the press, and commits suicide in 1954.

AD 1953- On June 2, 1953, Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II is not only 'Crowned' but also 'Anointed' as Monarch of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and also of Northern Ireland.

She is asked to make certain solemn promises to God and the people that she will, "Maintain the Laws of God and the true profession of the Gospel."

She also undertook, "To maintain in the United Kingdom the Protestant Reformed Religion established by law," and "To govern the peoples of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland according to their respective laws and customs."

The Queen receives, as a defense of this promise, the Holy Bible as, "The rule for the whole life and government of Christian Princes."

It is understood through this ceremony that the laws and customs of the United Kingdom are to be found in the Holy Bible, and that they are not to be altered, but that the people are to be governed by them alone, and at one point during the ceremony, the Orb from the Crown Jewels is presented to the Queen, accompanied by the words: "Receive this Orb set under the Cross, and remember that the whole world is subject to the Power and Empire of Christ our Redeemer."

April 23rd, U.S. President Eisenhower issues orders prohibiting employment of gays/homosexuals in government agencies.

August: David Davidson writes a book titled, "The Great Pyramid, Its Divine Message." In it, he predicts that the World would End in 1953-August.

AD 1954- The Bilderberg Group: Among the originators to the Group was Prince Bernard of Holland, a card-carrying member of Hitler's infamous SS group. Their affiliate organizations are the "Trilateral Commission" and the "Council On Foreign Relations."

This is a group of 115-120 of the most powerful men and women on Earth. Eight are from Western Europe and the remainder from North America. One third are from government and politics, and the remaining two thirds from industry, finance, education, and communications. They are chosen based on their knowledge, standing, and experience.

They meet in secret four days every year. Joseph H. Retinger, known as "L'Eminence" [His Grey Eminence], is one of the founders of the organization. Retinger, a Roman Catholic, was seen by many as an agent of the Vatican, often officiating as a liaison between the Pope and the Father-General of the Jesuit order. Retinger suggested to Premier Georges Clemenceau, a blueprint for the unification of Eastern Europe, involving the merging of Austria, Hungary and Poland as a "Tripartite Monarchy," under the administration of the Jesuit Order.

Clemenceau, doubtful of the Vatican motivated plan, rejected Retinger's proposal. Retinger also had an active war career. He is the political aide to General Sikorski, and serves for the London-based Polish Government-in-exile. In addition, at the age of 58, he parachuted into German-occupied territory outside Warsaw for some sabotage missions. His peace dividend was to be under the control of supernatural, and powerful organizations. He believed that such organizations would be immune from short-term ideological conflicts erupting between governments.

Prince Bernhard of Holland supported Retinger's proposal for an international meeting. Consequently, they formed a committee to organize a plan. In 1952, Bernhard approaches the Truman administration and briefs them about the meeting. Despite a positive reception, it was not until the Eisenhower administration when the first American counterpart group was formed.

The two key role-players in the US group were General Walter Bedell Smith (Director of the CIA) and C. D. Jackson. Both (European-American) groups working interactively set out to fulfill Retinger's initial plan. From the outset, the American group was heavily influenced by the Rockefeller family, the owners of Standard Oil-competitors of Bernhard's Royal Dutch Petroleum. From then on, the Bilderberg business reflected the concerns of the oil industry in its meetings.

The Catholic influenced country of Vietnam is supported by the U.S., which is paying 80% of the total French-Indonesian war. The French government itself stated that the U.S. had spent a total of $1.785 billion for their war. But the end of that same year, the U.S. in fact had paid $2 billion to keep French colonialism in power. The military and the Catholic lobbies in Washington set to work, resolute to persuade the U.S. government to prevent a free election and Pope Pius XII, who convinces the State Department that the U.S. must support their effort or communism will surely take over, gives full support to this efforts. Cardinal Spellman, the Washington-Vatican go-between, is the principal spokesman for both. The policy of Pope Pius XII and Secretary of State, John Foster Dulles, is eventually accepted, and implemented.

AD 1954-Reverend Sun Myung Moon, Korean, who has previously been excommunicated from the Presbyterian Church in 1948, for teaching his own doctrine, founds The Unification Church. Reverend Moon is incarcerated in the United States in 1984 for income tax evasion.

AD 1954-Viet Nam: the fifth largest Catholic population in Asia, after the Philippines, India, China and Indonesia, began in the early 16th century. Christian atrocities in Viet Nam: The Catholic Leader Ngo Dinh Diem is made president of South Vietnam. Diem sees to it that U.S. Aid, food, technical and general assistance is given only to his devout Catholics, and not to the also starving Buddhists.

Buddhists and villages are ignored or required to pay for the food aids that are given to Catholics for free [would American Catholics been so free with their money, food, and aid if they had known how it was being sold and distributed?] The only religious denomination to be supported by this regime is Roman Catholic. The Vatican's spokesperson in the United States would later on call the U.S. forces in Vietnam, "Soldiers of Christ."

Diem promulgates a presidential order that reads, "Individuals considered dangerous to the national defense and common security may be confined by executive order, to a concentration camp."

With stated intentions of fighting communism, thousands of Buddhist protesters and monks are imprisoned in "Detention Camps."

"There is in every village a torch; the teacher, and an extinguisher- the clergyman." ~Victor Hugo.

Out of protest dozens of Buddhist teachers, male and female, as well as monks, pour gasoline over themselves and burn themselves alive. During this period of terror, 1955-1960, at least 24,000 are wounded, mainly in street riots, while another 80,000 people are executed. 275,000 are detained [or tortured], and another 500,000 are sent to concentration or detention camps.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

AD 1956-Publication of the French Dominican Bible: English Translation.

The last of the U.S. laws making epilepsy a disqualification for marriage are at last removed.

“Man is truly a religious animal. He is the only animal, which can declare Gods. He is the only animal who will kill for these Gods. And, he is the only animal who will die for these self-created Gods.” ~E. Christopher Reyes.

AD 1957-Lamsa Translation: based on ancient Aramaic, Semitic Peshitta Texts [fifth and sixth centuries]. Man now seeks translations from the original manuscripts and parchments to avoid centuries of corrupted texts in Scriptural translations by religious groups.

The parchments were, in many cases, old skins from which pagan manuscripts had been partially erased before the “Word of God,” was written on them by Christian pens. The Jews were right. If you want to get to the truth, you must seek it through ancient writings. Corruption of later Bibles leads only to the propagation of blind followers of the specific cult or religion.

In the Crittenden Report, the U.S. Navy concludes that homosexuals serving in the military do not create a security risk, but the staunch Pentagon denies the existence of this report for twenty years.

AD 1957-Money Laundering, the Mafia: the Catholic Church representative Michele Sindona, whose nickname is “The Shark,” is approached by the Sicilians, the Gambino family and their cousins, the Inzerillos, to launder money they were alleged to have made in heroin. Shortly after this meeting, Mr. Sindona buys his first bank.

Through the 1960's, Sindona continues to purchase banks, to allegedly launder money for the Mafia, and forges close financial links with the Vatican. He is chosen by Pope Paul VI to act as the financial advisor to the Vatican and to transfer some of the Vatican money out of Italy.

In 1973, the Italian Prime Minister Andreotti salutes Sindona as “The Savior of the Lira,” and the U.S. Ambassador names him “Man of the Year.”

However, the fame is short lived, for in 1974, for massive financial losses are suffered by the Vatican Bank, and an arrest warrant is issued for Sindona. Legal suits follow, and in 1974, Sindona turns up in the U.S. where a long battle for his extradition had began. He retains the law firm of John Mitchell to represent him, and is found guilty “In Absentia” on 23 counts for misappropriation of funds. A Milan court also sentences him to 3-1/2 years in prison.

It is alleged that in anger that Sindona sanctions a contract on the life of the Chief Prosecutor, Assistant U. S. District Attorney, Robert Kennedy, brother of President John Kennedy, at his extradition hearings, as well as on former employees who knew too much [it appears that the latter sanctions were carried out]. On July 11, 1979, Giorgio Ambrosio, who was the attorney who had been investigating Sindona and gathering evidence against him for five years is also assassinated. Ten days later, two other men, closely associated with the investigation, are also gunned down.

On February of 1980, Sindona finally goes to trial on charges stemming from the failure of the Franklin National Bank. Sindona is found guilty on sixty-five counts [including fraud, conspiracy, perjury, false bank statements, and misappropriations of bank funds, etc.], on March 27th. While awaiting sentencing, he attempts suicide by slashing his wrists and taking a heavy dose of digitalis. He recovers from this attempt and on June 13, 1980 is sentenced to 25 years in prison and a fine of $200,000.

He is given an additional 2-1/2 years for arranging his own kidnapping. In January 1982, an indictment is issued from Palermo, Sicily, in which Sindona and 65 members of the Gambino, Inzerillo, and Spatola mafia families are charged with running a $600 million a year heroin trade between Sicily and the U.S. On October, 2000 the Italian Police, arrest 21 persons who they believe to be involved in a Sicilian Mafia on-line banking scheme with connections in major foreign banks including the Vatican Bank of Institute for Religious Works (IOR).

The main perpetrator is identified as Antonio Orlando, the previous owner of a financial company with links to a Mafia clan based in the southern Italian city of Palermo's Noce District. Orlando had succeeded in penetrating the computers of several banks and siphoning off some 264 billion lire [115 million U.S. dollars].

The money was first sent to Emilia Romagna, Italy's northern region where it was then channeled abroad by the gang members who had contacts in major foreign banks including the IOR [Vatican Bank]. Police were able to infiltrate the operation by the use of an undercover agent posing as a bank employee, who managed to gain the trust of the Mafia members. Among those under investigation are four employees of the Bank of Sicilia, Sicily's largest bank, and two employees of Italy's largest phone company, Telecom Italia. Just before the Mafia members were arrested, it was discovered that they were also planning to net some Two Trillion lire (900 million U.S. dollars) from the Bank of Sicilia.

As of this writing, the Vatican is still claiming no knowledge and having no complicity in this case. The head of the parliamentary anti-Mafia commission, Giuseppe Lumia, stated the bust shows how dangerous the Mafia has become internationally by using the Internet for illegal operations.

This is not the first time IOR [Vatican Bank] has been implicated in major criminal cases, though it has always insisted it has been an unwitting victim. At the turn of the 1980s, the Vatican bank, led at the time by American-born Msgr. Paul Marcinkus, later to become Bishop and Archbishop, was a key player in this nation's biggest post-war banking scandal, revolving around the forced bankruptcy in 1982 of Milan's Banco Ambrosiano.

AD 1958-Both Federal and Chicago authorities charge Kris Studios with censorship violations, but the owner, Renslow fights back, surprising the prosecution. His defense uses the simple stand that nudity is not obscene. In support his attorney shows photos of nude male sculpture in the courthouse where the case is being held. Kris was found not guilty, prosecution appealed and eventually the same decision came from the US Supreme court.

Into the 20th century, the Roman Church still attempts to control mankind's thinking, "The [Roman Catholic] Church doesn't believe in Book Burning, but it believes in restricting the use of dangerous books among those whose minds are unprepared for them." ~Francis J. Lally, American Roman Catholic Monsignor, Mike Wallace Interview, Fund for the Republic, 1958. cf. Forbidden Index.

Thinking is an anathema to the Christian faith, "The Church has through the centuries, understood that ideas are really more dangerous than other weapons. Their use should be restricted." ~Francis J. Lally, American Roman Catholic Monsignor, Mike Wallace Interview, Fund for the Republic, 1958.

AD 1959- The U.S. Supreme Court rules in favor of allowing distribution of D. H. Lawrence's novel, Lady Chatterley's Lover. The book still remains on the Roman Catholic Forbidden Index List.

Great Britain: The Obscene Publications Act 1959, not intended as a liberal measure, it was announced in its preamble as "An Act to strengthen the law concerning pornography."

AD 1960- "I believe in an America where the separation of Church and State is absolute, where no Catholic prelate would tell the president (should he be Catholic) how to act, and no Protestant minister would tell his parishioners for whom to vote; where no Church or Church school is granted any public funds or political preference, and where no man is denied public office merely because his religion differs from the President who might appoint him or the people who might elect him." ~President John F. Kennedy, Roman Catholic.

AD 1962-Publication of: The Living Bible.

Evangelical Protestants become the most vocal participants in the ongoing definitional debate of what constitutes sex. Contrary to popular stereotypes that distinguish conservative Christians as sexually repressed, Protestant evangelicals do not turn away from the sexual liberation movement begun in the 1960s; they simply made it their own, publishing sex manuals, running sex workshops and holding counseling sessions to instruct husbands and wives on the best techniques for a sexually satisfied marriage.

AD 1962, 1964, and 1983-The New Jewish Version Bible, due to the corruption of the Biblical Scriptures throughout the ages we now have an attempt to get back to the original Scriptures via the old parchment documents, manuscripts, and ancient translations.

AD 1962-65-Vatican Council II by "Congregation For The Doctrine of Truth" replaces the 1820 modified "Congregation of the Holy Offices" that deals with the Ancient Inquisition practices. Pope Paul III last reviewed the practices of the Inquisition and their judgments in 1542.

January 1st, Effective this date Illinois repeal its sodomy laws and behavior between "Consenting adults in private" is no longer subject to criminal prosecution.

AD 1963-The Financial Sins of the Church: Lico Gelli-an Oberleutnant in the SS in Italy and working for the Nazis as a "Liaison officer" during WWII. Gelli worked as a mercenary hiring out to anyone who could afford him.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

After the war, he helps Nazis fleeing to South America, charging them 40% of their money. He develops influential contacts in South America and becomes a close friend of the dictator Juan Peron.

The Ex-Gestapo Chief Klaus Barbie, who settled in Bolivia, and Geffi become his business partners. While spying for the communists, he assisted Vatican officials as well as the U.S. intelligence. In exchange for this assistance part of his fee for spying for Italy was the closure/removal of the file the secret service had on him. His specialty was information: secret dossiers on bankers, politicians, war criminals, etc.

In 1963, he joins a Masonic lodge, and forms another secret lodge, the "Raggruppamento Gelli," otherwise known as "P2." The "P" stood for Propaganda, an historical lodge of the 19th century. First he brings in retired senior members of the armed forces, and through them active service heads.

His tangled web eventually covers the power structure of Italy with his aim being right-wing control. P2 is to function as a state within a state.

If the Communists are elected to power, there will be a coup [He is alleged to have the active support and encouragement of the CIA]. The list of prominent members is a secret known only to Gelli with two of the members in P2 being Michele Sindona and Roberto Calvi. Through his friend, Umberto Ortolani, he gains affiliation with the Knights of Malta and the Holy Sepulcher.

In early 1979, Mino Pecorelli, a journalist [who had earlier published the list of Freemasons] began blackmailing Geffi regarding the $2.5 Billion theft of oil revenues from the Italian government and starts publishing small bits of information, including information on the Freemasons.

On March 20, 1979, Pecorelli is gunned down. In 1981, a raid on Gelli's home recovers a list of nine hundred sixty two P2 members. The ensuing scandal brings down the Italian government. Two months later, Gelli is arrested, tried, and sentenced to four years in prison and a 16 billion lire fine. His lawyers file an appeal and he is promptly out on bail and in the banking business, again.

In 1981 Gelli lives in Montevideo, Uruguay and appears to be extorting large sums of money from Calvi. Calvi's wife states that Gelli refuses to identify himself by name when calling, but calls himself by his special code name "Luciani, the surname of Pope John Paul I." In 1982, Gelli returns to Europe from South. He enters Switzerland on a false passport and is arrested attempting a $55 million transfer into his account in Uruguay.

In 1983 he escapes from a Swiss prison, and in 1984, is living on a ranch a few miles north of Montevideo, Uruguay. Gelli is also in close proximity in the weeks just before the Pope's death.

AD 1963-Roberto Calvi-In 1947 he goes to work for the Banco Ambrosiano in Milan [Archbishop Montini's Bank], and in 1963 is promoted to Central Manager, Banco Ambrosiano. Calvi and Sindona are friends. Sindona introduces Calvi to Bishop Marcinkus in 1971. Like Sindona, Calvi is alleged to have laundered Mafia money and bought up banks.

One of the branches of Banco Ambrosiano in Nassau has Marcinkus on its Board of Directors. Banco Ambrosiano and the Vatican Bank are inter-related thereby enabling them to perform illegal joint operations [Calvi being the Paymaster General of P2].

In 1977, with Sindona in exile and fighting extradition from the U.S., he begins blackmailing Calvi to take a more active interest in his predicament. Sindona begins a public washing of Calvi's spurious background that eventually leads to an official investigation of Calvi. In 1978, while vacationing and searching for prospective business opportunities in South America, Calvi learns of Pope Paul VI's death.

Aware that the new Pope will be angry about Calvi's role in the 1972 takeover of the Banco Cattolica del Veneto, Calvi realizes he is in a dangerous position. News of the Vatican Bank investigations reaches Calvi and he becomes convinced that the new Pope has a vendetta to get him. Gelli and Ortolani are presently in nearby South America.

On Jan 29, 1979, Judge Alessandrini, investigating the Banco Ambrosiano case, is murdered, and on Apr. 27, 1982, Roberto Rosone, the General Manager of Banco Ambrosiano attempting to clean the bank records is ordered assassinated, but the attempt fails, and Rosone is only wounded in the legs. It is alleged that Calvi ordered the sanction.

On June 17th, the body of Roberto Calvi is found hanging under Blackfriars Bridge in London, in what is to be called the "Acrobatic Suicide," as both his hands are tied behind his back. Within days a $1.3 Billion loss is discovered in the Banco Ambrosiano Milan [In all of these financial matters, the Great Pope John Paul II still denies any complicity, yet refuses to open the books for examination or to reveal the true owners of the Vatican Bank and its board members]. Pope Paul II, 1464-71, was "Wholly given over to sensual pleasure." ~Bishop Creighton.

Some Catholics are still angered over the American Constitution not mentioning their Jesus, "To Hell with the U.S. Constitution." ~Father Bernard Leeming, from America Magazine, July 23, 1963.

AD 1964-For the first time in history a Pope of Rome sets foot in America, Cardinal Spellman is rewarded by a visit from Cardinal Montini, now Pope Paul VI, fellow Vatican Nazi war crime collaborator.

U.S. courts allow importation of Danish magazines showing full frontal male nudity if they are official publications of nudist organizations. International Nudist Sun becomes the most popular all male title, many others feature only women or both men and women.

AD 1964-The Anchor Bible, a multi-voluminous publication with references to the original manuscripts in Hebrew and Greek is published.

The Second Vatican Council accepts the teaching of the Bible in the language of the local inhabitants as well as the Holy Mass in the language [other than Latin] so that it may be better understood.

AD 1964-Nov. 21st Pope Paul VI issues his "Unitatis Redintegratio" denouncing Masonry.

AD 1965-Pope Paul VI issues the "Nostra Aetate" on Oct 28th against Masonry and secret organizations. Pope Paul VI reorganizes the Holy Office and renames it the Congregation of the Doctrine of the Faith, which the future Pope Benedict XVI will be in charge of.

AD 1965-John Patrick Cody, Cardinal of Chicago, Illinois. In 1970, Cardinal Cody invested $2 million, illegally, in Penn Central stocks. A few days later the company went bankrupt. Cody had also similarly left his former posts, the diocese of New Orleans and Kansas City, heavily indebted. He kept "Secret dossiers" on priests and nuns suspected of disloyalty, summarily dismissing his "Problem priests," closed schools, and funneled money to a "Woman friend."

His fellow clergy became so disenchanted with him that they formed a religious trade union, the "Association of Chicago Priests," to voice their dissatisfaction to Rome. Rome is petitioned repeatedly with their complaints and concerns, but Cardinal Cody had spent much time in Rome building alliances and working at the North American College and at the Secretariat of State and had also ingratiated himself with Pope Pius XII and the future Pope Paul VI.

In the early 1970's, the Vatican Bank's investments in the U.S. stock market were being funneled through Continental Illinois Bank in Chicago [A fact they cannot deny but only suppress to the news media]. Cardinal Cody and Bishop Marcinkus being friends and working closely together on many banking transactions. Cody funneled a lot of Chicago money to Rome, some of it being sent to Poland to help the revolutionist efforts of a Mr. Wojtyla, the soon-to-be Polish Pope, John Paul II.

Cardinal Cody's problems reached Pope Paul VI who offered him a post in the Roman Curia, which he declined. Pope John Paul II allowed Cardinal Cody to stay on in Chicago till his death, perhaps due to his remunerations. In January 1981 the "Chicago Sun Times," ran a story delineating the serious financial crimes Cardinal Cody is alleged to have committed.

AD 1965-Among the innovations of the Vatican Council is the "Nostra Aetate Decree," which repudiates the Catholic teaching that the Jews were collectively responsible for the death of Jesus and opens the way to Catholic and Jewish dialogue.

AD 1965-Masonry-After seven Popes and sixteen denunciations regarding Masonry, Pope Paul VI, at the Second Vatican Council, quietly announces that Roman Catholics will no longer be excommunicated for joining Masonry in America or Britain. However, the Vatican continues to ban Masonry in France, Italy, and other European countries [I am at a loss as to why the Church ban prevails in some countries and not others].

Like Eusebius, Origen is also deceitful regarding the Trinity, "In Origen's works, as preserved in the Greek, the first part of the verse [Matthew 28:19] is cited three times, but his citation always stops short at the words 'The Nations,' and that in itself suggests that his text has been censored, and the words, which followed, 'In My name,' struck out." ~Conybeare, Textual Criticism of the New Testament.

In 1960, The British and Foreign Bible Society published a Greek Testimony, and the alternative rendering for Matthew 28:19 was phrased "En to onomati mou," "In My name," and Bishop Eusebius was cited as the authority.

"In the case just examined [addition of Matthew 28:19 to Scripture], it is to be noticed that not a single manuscript or ancient version has preserved to us the true reading. But that is not surprising, for as Dr. C.R. Gregory, one of the greatest of our textual critics, reminds us: 'The Greek Manuscripts of the text of the New Testament were often altered by scribes, who put into them the readings, which were familiar to them, and which they held to be the right readings.'" ~Canon and Text of the New Testament, 1907, pg. 424.

The "Dignitatus Humanae" Declaration on Religious Freedom is issued. "Go, therefore, and make disciples of all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost, teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have enjoined upon you." ~Matthew 28:19-20.

"On their part, all men are bound to seek the truth, especially in what concerns God and His Church, and to embrace the truth they come to know, and to hold fast to it."

"The Vatican Council declares that the human person has a right to religious freedom. This freedom means that all men are to be immune from coercion on the part of individuals or of social groups and of any human power, in such wise that no one is to be forced to act in a manner contrary to his own beliefs, whether privately or publicly, whether alone or in association with others within due limits."

The Church still denied a Church burial to a Filipino Mason in the year 2000. "Truth, however, is to be sought after in a manner proper to the dignity of the human person and his social nature. The inquiry is to be free, carried on with the aid of teaching or instruction, communication and dialogue, in the course of which men explain to one another the truth they have discovered, or think they have discovered, in order thus to assist one another in the quest for truth."

"Moreover, as the truth is discovered, it is by a personal assent that men are to adhere to it." If this is so, then why does the Pope still adhere to the Supremacy of the Church over the Eastern Orthodox via Papal Supremacy [descendency from Peter and the Jesus Documents]? ~Made available to the net by Paul Halsall (halsall@murray.fordham.edu)

AD 1966-The New Jerusalem Bible is published. The Index of Forbidden Books is abolished by the Vatican, although the Church of Rome still reserves the right to ban any literature, which it does, through various types of censorship, to the furtherance of its Doctrines.

AD 1966-1976-The English Version Bible by The American Bible Society is published.

AD 1966-The Vatican declares that the list of "Index of Forbidden Books" is no longer binding and the Catholic Church upon its members lifts the threat of excommunication [Yet the list still exists]. Pope Paul VI, regarding marriage vows and the clergy, June 24th, reaffirms in 1967, the Decree of Celibacy. ~This is based on the Church's interpretations of Corinthians 7:6-7, and Matthew 19:12.

Many ancient cults believed and already practiced "Sacred Marriage," a means whereby the participants could attain 'Divinity' through fertility acts. It is this relationship of sex, serpent, and fertility that explains the Catholic Church's strong position against sex. "Eve" being the "Mother of life" destined to bear children for death due to her attempt for Eternal Life.

The biggest scam the world has ever known? "Selling Eternal Life is an unbeatable business, with no customers ever asking for their money back after the goods are not delivered." ~Victor J. Stenger.

AD 1968-After the Second Ecumenical Council, Vatican II, there began clerical questioning of the Church's condemnation of Masonry. In Spain, a book is printed, "La Masoneria Despues del Concilio," "Masonry after Vatican II," The author is a Jesuit Priest, Father J. A. Ferrer Benimeli, whose thesis was that regular Freemasonry should not be condemned. He condemned irregular Freemasonry only, since it was atheistic and anti-clerical. ~from The Freemason at Work, by Harry Carr; Lewis Masonic; Ian Allen Regalia; Terminal House, Shepperton, Surry, U.K., pg. 278.

AD 1967-Nudity=Pornography(?): The United States Federal Court for the District of Minnesota upholds a landmark decision affirming the right of all persons to receive materials dealing with the nude male figure. The Sexual Offenses Act, removing criminality from sexual relations between consenting adults, an action, which had been recommended by the Wolfenden Report in 1958, finally becomes law in England and Wales.

Religion gone wrong? In the 1960's, Buddhist monks, particularly Thích Quảng Đức, in South Vietnam gain Western praise in their protests against President Ngô Đình Diệm by lighting themselves ablaze and burning to death.

AD 1968-Bishop Luciani is requested to write a report regarding artificial contraception for the Pope's consideration. His conclusion is that the Pope should approve an anovulant pill developed by Professor Pincus and that this should become the Catholic birth-control pill. "I am supposing, then, although are not lying [with your wife] for the sake of procreating offspring, you are not for the sake of lust obstructing their procreation by an evil prayer or an evil deed. Those who do this, although they are called husband and wife, are not; nor do they retain any reality of marriage, but with a respectable name cover a shame. Sometimes this lustful cruelty, or cruel lust, comes to this, that they even procure poisons of sterility [oral contraceptives]... Assuredly if both husband and wife are like this, they are not married, and if they were like this from the beginning they come together not joined in matrimony but in seduction. If both are not like this, I dare to say that either the wife is in a fashion the harlot of her husband or he is an adulterer with his own wife." ~Saint Augustine, Marriage and Concupiscence, 1:15:17, 419 C.E.

The "Humanae Vitae," is published on July 25th, 1968, with the position of the Church remaining unchanged as pertains to the artificial contraception [Only abstinence and the rhythm method is acceptable].

In 1972, the Banco Cattolica del Veneto, the "Priests Bank," in which the Vatican Bank owned 51 percent interest, is sold by Vatican Bank President, Bishop Paul Marcinkus, to Roberto Calvi of Banco Ambrosiano in Milan.

Bishop Luciani's investigation of Marcinkus and Calvi leads to another name, Michele Sindona, a Sicilian banker, with a head office in Milan. Sindona who met Pope Paul VI when the Pope was still Archbishop Montini of Milan.

Upon Montini becoming Pope, Sindona becomes a lay financial advisor to the Vatican. Bishop Luciani learns of the sale of the BCDV [owned 51 % by the Vatican] had engaged in an illegal transaction which would profit the three principals involved, although the Vatican will deny any complicity in the case. The Bishops and clergy of the Veneto are particularly angered, but can do nothing as Bishop Marcinkus and Sindona are close to Pope Paul VI.

The Pope notices and appreciates Bishop Luciani's loyalty in not making an issue over the sale of the BCDV. In 1973, Pope Paul VI confers upon him the rank of Cardinal (of Venice), and Luciani publishes "Illustrissimi," a succession of letters on moral points, addressed to various literary and historical characters.

These first appeared as magazine and newspaper articles. On Aug. 27, 1978 Luciani is elected Pope. He takes the name of his two predecessors, becoming John Paul I (JPI), while Cardinal Jean Villot, Pope Paul's Secretary of State, is asked to remain temporarily for the new Pope.

An immediate investigation into the financial operations of the Vatican is launched with emphasis on the "Istituto per le Opere di Religione," [IOR] aka the "Vatican Bank."

An appeal is made by an open letter published on Aug. 31, 1978 in "Il Mondo," an economic periodical, to clean up the Vatican Bank. At the top of the list of reforms the Pope wished to make were "Altering radically the Vatican's relationship with capitalism and alleviating the suffering that had stemmed directly from 'Humanae Vitae.'" ~Pg 170, 1941 Doctoral Dissertation, of JPI.

On Sept. 1978, Mino Pecorelli, a journalist and disgruntled P2 member runs an article, "The Great Vatican Lodge," surrendering the names of 121 assumed Masons. The list is largely comprised of Cardinals, Bishops, and high-ranking prelates. On Sept. 27, 1978, Pope John Paul I decides to give Cardinal Cody of Chicago the opportunity to resign due to ill health in order to save face.

His financial books leave much to be desired and verge on blatant fraud. Sept. 28th, between 9:00 PM and 4:30 AM of Sept. 29th, Pope John Paul I is allegedly murdered.

The Roman Catholic Bishops in the year 2001 will again vote against tubal ligations and vasectomies in America as this would have a tendency to curtail the desired increase in Catholics in America. The Church declares this type of family planning an "Intrinsically Evil" birth control as the Church states, "It is necessary that each and every marriage act remain ordered per se to the procreation of human life." Procreation, not Recreation may continue to be the order of the day.

The Church seeks to control mankind from cradle to grave further stating, "The laws of Christ are difficult to accept." Invoking the name of Christ for their odious proclamations I believe they have again gone too far in attempting to control the minds of man. I have already shown, historically how the Church has changed scripture, now they have Jesus resurrected, again, to speak out against birth control. In the late 1960's, Sister Claire Murphy, teaching school as a lonely missionary in Nigeria, during the Biafra War, received a package from her church.

"The Vatican had sent me a whole cupboard full" of birth-control pills, Sister Claire recalled with a thin-lipped smile. "It was O.K. to protect the nuns against rape by the soldiers, but not the girls in our school."

AD 1969-The "Illuminati" continues to pervade the minds of contemporary thinkers. "None Dare Call It Conspiracy," can be interpreted as an introductory course to "Contemporary Conspiracy Theory 101" which was predated by Bruce Robert's 1969 publication, "Skeleton Key to the Gemstone File." It is an interesting study, in logical fallacy [attempts to show a continuous and sound reasoning method], and communism.

Although, only mentioning Freemasonry casually, several claims have been made, that have allowed subsequent novelists to build further undocumented accusations against Freemasonry. Further information may be obtained from: www.freemasonry.bc.ca/anti-masonry/papalencyclicals.html It is alleged that Karl Marx was retained by a mysterious group that called themselves, "The League of Just Men," to write the 'Communist Manifesto,' as a demagogic provocation to appeal to the masses in a denunciation of the wrongs that existed in society.

In actuality, the "Communist Manifesto" was in circulation for many years before the fame of Marx and his anarchist handbook. Karl Marx merely reorganized and codified the insurrectionist plans and principles set forth seventy years earlier by Adam Weishaupt, the founder of the "Order of Illuminati," in Bavaria.

It is widely acknowledged by serious scholars of this subject that the "League of Just Men," was simply an extension of the "Illuminati," which was forced into secrecy and meeting underground after it was exposed by a raid in 1786, conducted by the Bavarian authorities which saw it as a right wing militant group.

The primary similarity between Weishaupt's "Illuminati" and Karl Marx's Communism was a belief that there was room for improvement in this world. The "Illuminati's" goal was to attain the highest possible degree of morality and virtue and to lay the foundation for the reformation of the world by the association of good men to oppose the progress of moral evil is not replicated in the "Communist Manifesto's" call for an abolition of class, private property ownership, religion, and incorporating the "Forcible overthrow of all existing social conditions."

No documentation is made to the serious scholars of this period. In John Robison's "Proof of a Conspiracy," published in 1797, research into the alleged causes of European revolutions is discredited shortly after its publication. This "Extension" is neither defined nor documented in "The Anti-Masonry FAQ."

In reference to Cecil Rhodes' first will, written at age 24, Frank Aydelotte's, "American Rhodes Scholarships," is quoted, "The confession of faith enlarges upon these ideas. The model for this proposed 'Secret society' was the 'Society of Jesus,' otherwise known as the Jesuits, though he mentions also the Masons." The reason for mentioning Masonry is not given.

Cecil Rhodes was a Freemason, from 1877 until his death in 1902, and his philanthropic credits speak for themselves. Rhodes left most of his fortunes to the University of Oxford for the establishment of the Rhodes Scholarship Fund. It should be noted that the originator of this type of "secret society," was Adam Weishaupt, the so called "monster" who allegedly founded the "Order of the Illuminati," on May 1st 1776, for the purpose of a conspiracy to control the world.

The role of Weishaupt's Illuminists in such horrors as the "French Reign of Terror" is disputable as the King of France was a tyrant who loved to spend the monies of the people on his frivolous parties, and the techniques of the Illuminati have long been alleged as models for communist methodology. Weishaupt also used the structure of the "Society of Jesus," the Jesuits, as his model and rewrote his Code in Masonic terms, using symbology and secret ciphers.

Is there such a thing as a "secret society" which is undefined and unclarified as to its intents and purposes? The use of secret groups to affect change in society is as old as civilization itself and certainly did not originate with Weishaupt.

Labeling Weishaupt a "Monster" is an "Ad Hominum" is an irrelevant attack. The Illuminati's role in the French Revolution is unsubstantiated [some members being for and some against the revolution], and is a dubious theory promoted by John Robison and the Jesuit Abbe Barruel in the 1790s.

The links between the Illuminati and Communism are specious, spurious, speculative, conjectural, and unsubstantiated, with no references or documentation being provided. This group calls itself the "Bilderbergers." See The Anti-Masonry FAQ for information on the Bilderberg Conference. ~from None Dare Call It Conspiracy by Gary Allen and Larry Abraham. AD 1970 (?)-Prohibition against Masonry discontinued in Spain.

AD 1970-The New American Bible is translated from the Ancient Hebrew and Greek by American Roman Catholics.

AD 1970-First Women of the Church proclaimed naming Saint Catherine of Siena and Saint Teresa of Avila.

AD 1970-The Waldensians, forbearers of the evangelical movement, merge with the Presbyterian Congress.

AD 1971-"In Madrid, September 15, 1971, Primate Cardinal Enrique Tarazon presided at a Congress of the entire Roman Catholic Hierarchy, with 94 Bishops and 151 Priests present. . . . Although a two-thirds' vote was necessary to pass resolutions, and this one did not pass, it is significant that it received a large majority of the vote . . . The majority confessed it had sinned in supporting the wrong side (the fascist side) in Spain and asked to be forgiven. 'We humbly recognize,' said the resolution, 'and ask pardon for it, that we failed at the proper time to be ministers of reconciliation in the midst of our people divided by a war between brothers . . .'"

In 1971, and again in 1972, 1983 [and succeeding years], a preponderance of Spain's 94 Bishops and 151 Priests attending voted 60% or more for the Roman Catholic Church's apology but never officially passed it, and by taking this laissez faire action, Cardinal Tarazon most likely prevented widespread killing of priests and nuns upon Franco's death in 1975. "FDR admitted his error in 1939 -- but it could not be published in his lifetime. He said to his Ambassador to Madrid, Claude Bowers, who had told the truth about the great world campaign of falsehood against Spain and had urged American help: 'We have made a mistake, you have been right all along ... 'He wrote this confession by FDR in 1954. Secretary of State Sumner Welles in his book Time for Decision, 1944, wrote: 'Of all our blind isolationist policies the most disastrous was our attitude on the Spanish Civil War.' President Harry Truman wrote in his Memoirs: 'I believe it was a mistake for me to support the Neutrality Action in the first place.'"

George Seldes documents the leading role of the Vatican in the destruction of the Spanish Republic with the documented murder of 100,000 liberal democrat prisoners by Franco was undoubtedly made easier by Pope Pius XI. Referring to the uprising against the Roman Church throughout Spain in July, 1936, Pius XI attacked the, "...Ruination, destruction, villainies, barbarities by the savage forces whom it is impossible to dignify with the words human beings." Dehumanization always makes mass murder seem less reprehensible.

AD 1972-The United States Supreme [with much opposition from major church leaders] rules that Birth Control is legal in America. The Black International boasts that it renders a unique service to the state because it is the only Church or institution that condemns, and very fiercely condemns birth control.

"The Black Internationals [Catholic priests] are, as usual, out of date. For they share that distinction with the criminal leaders of the Italian [Mussolini], Japanese, and Germans [Hitler], in wanting the proliferation of their faith by use of soldiers and the excuse of over-population to cover their imperialist greed. The Black International wanted more contributors to its treasury and, as priests have admitted, to beat rival Churches by out breeding them. The clerical opposition to birth control is, in fact, such an obvious piece of priest-craft and has so little foundation even in their own weird and archaic theology that they confess, the Catholic laity in America are to an alarming extent ignoring their sulfuric orders and restricting their families: which makes their "social" argument look rather anemic." ~From the former Catholic priest, Joseph McCabe.

AD 1972-The Banco Cattolica del Uneto [also known by the clergy as "the Priest's Bank"] due to its policy of granting the ecclesiastic low interest loans [the Vatican Bank owns a 51% interest in this institute] is sold by then Vatican Bank President, Bishop Paul Marcinkus, to a Mr. Robert Calvi of Banco Ambrosiano in Milan, Italy.

The information I have discovered was researched from the notes taken from:
<http://marlowe.wimsey.com/~rshand/streams/masons/mpolitics.html> on the website.

As much as possible I have attempted to omit the conjecture, allegations, and rumors and still retain the essence of the events, which occurred regarding the deposits, money laundering, and accountability of the Vatican in financial dealings. The 'Vatican Bank Scandal' reaches such international notoriety with its penetration of banks and bank failures involving billions of dollars worldwide that many countries and organizations join in the investigative process, so much so that it even attracts the attention of the United States and its covert operations team, the CIA.

"So telling a lie becomes a sin if you tell it to take advantage of a person, but if you tell a lie to do a good thing for him that is not a sin. Even God tells lies very often; you can see this throughout history." ~Rev. Sun Myong Moon, in Master Speaks, March 16, 1972, England, revealing the extent of his respect for truth, i.e., which is none.

The P2 [PII] Lodge, in Italy, with its high ranking members, and its dealings with the Vatican Banking Scandal is bared by way of a covert group, "...The Agency, through some of its priest 'assets' in the Vatican, had placed six bugging devices in the Secretariat of State, the Vatican Bank and the Apostolic Palace, where the Pope actually lived and worked. The devices were sufficiently powerful to enable conversations to be overheard within rooms with walls thick enough to withstand artillery-fire. Working from 'safe houses' in high-rise buildings overlooking the Leonine walls of the tiny city-state, CIA operatives had recorded often highly confidential discussions about Papal plans."

As of the writing of this book the Vatican has made numerous attempts to distance itself from the investigations and going so far as to issue disclaimers as to its actual involvement.

However, "The Agency's surveillance had increased since 5 July 1979, when Walesa [Future President of Poland] telephoned the Pope asking whether John Paul would approve of the name 'Solidarity' being used for the fledgling union. Walesa had explained that he had selected the word from the Pontiff's Encyclical, "Redemptor Homis" – a treatise devoted to the redemption and the dignity of the human race. At its core had been an appeal for 'acting together'. The significance of Walesa's request was not lost on the Pontiff – or on the 'Department D's electronic eavesdroppers.'" ~Gordon Thomas, Journey into Madness

“The Italian Masonic Lodge P2 ‘Provided a means of furnishing anti-Communist institutions in Europe and Latin-America with both Vatican and CIA funds. Calvi [the individual who was found hanging under Blackfriars Bridge in London in 1982], also claimed that he personally had arranged the transfer of $20,000,000 of Vatican money to Solidarity in Poland, although the overall total sent to Solidarity is believed to have exceeded $100,000,000. Prior to his indictment for murder [of an Italian investigator], Michele Sindona was not only P2’s financier, but the Vatican’s investment counselor as well, helping the church to sell its Italian assets and re-invest in the United States. His services for the CIA included passing funds to ‘friends’ in Yugoslavia, as well as to the Greek colonels prior to their seizure of power in 1967. He also channeled millions of dollars into the funds of the Christian Democrats in Italy.”

*“In March 1981, Italian police raided the villa of Licio Gelli, the ultra-right leader of P-2. Although his files had vanished the index was discovered. Some of the headings included the Opus Dei, “Giulio Andreotti, currently Italian Foreign Minister and alleged...to be a member of the Priore de Sion. And they included the organization known officially as the Sovereign and Military Order of the Temple of Jerusalem – the organization, that is, which today claims a direct lineal descent from the Knights Templar.” ~Baigent, Leigh & Lincoln, The Messianic Legacy.*

“A list of [P2] members drawn up by Gelli contained the names of nearly a thousand of Italy’s most powerful men. One prosecutor’s report later stated: ‘Lodge Propaganda Due is a secret sect that has combined business and politics with the intention of destroying the country’s constitutional order.’

*“Among the names were three members of the Cabinet (including Justice Minister Adolfo Sarti; several former Prime Ministers including Giulio Andreotti who had held office between 1972 and 1973 and again between 1976 and 1979; forty-three Members of Parliament; fifty-four top Civil Servants; 183 army, navy and air force officers including thirty generals and eight admirals (among them the Commander of the Armed Forces, Admiral Giovanni Torrissi); nineteen judges; lawyers; magistrates; carabinieri; police chiefs; leading bankers; newspaper proprietors, editors and journalists [including the editor of the country’s leading newspaper, Corriere Della Sera]; fifty-eight university professors; the leaders of several political parties; and even the directors of the three main intelligence services.”*

“All these men, according to the files, had sworn allegiance to Gelli, and held themselves ready to respond to his call. The 953 names were divided into seventeen groupings, or cells, each having its own leader. P2 was so secret and so expertly run by Gelli that even its own members did not know who belonged to it. Those who know most were the seventeen cell leaders and they knew only their own grouping.”

“Of the many political groupings in Italy, Gelli’s files showed that only the Communist Party had no links with P2.” And, of course, in the 21st century, the Church still conceals this part of history.

Furthermore, it was found that, “Magistrates sifting the documents from the Villa Wanda [from whence Gelli had fled] found hundreds of top secret intelligence documents. Colonel Antonio Viezzer, the former head of the combined intelligence services, was identified as the prime source of this material and was arrested in Rome for spying on behalf of a foreign power.”

Colonel Viezzer, “Fascist, torturer of partisans in the Second World War, friend and adviser of Peron, of Argentina, and coordinator of right-wing corruption in Italy – was an agent of the Russian KGB.” “From the beginning Lodge P2 was a KGB-sponsored program aimed at destabilizing Italy, weakening NATO’s southern flank, sweeping the Communists into power in Italy and sending resultant shock waves throughout the western world.”

*“With the failure of the ministers, generals and admirals to cooperate with investigators, NATO was forced to support the attitude of the corrupt Freemasons in Italy’s armed forces. Officials in Brussels and Washington suggested discreetly that it was not the right moment to create a vacuum of power in the Italian army, navy and secret services.” ~from Stephen Knight, The Brotherhood.*

“The P2 was more than a subversive political organization. The documents collected by the parliamentary commission show it was a kind of full-service international organization influencing everything from arms sales to purchases of crude oil.” ~From Pino Ariacchi, Sociologist at the University of Florence

“Propaganda Due or P2 was “a lodge originally formed by the Italian Grand Orient as a lodge of research. In 1975 an Italian fascist named Licio Gelli was made the Venerable Grand Master of P2, and the following year that lodge was disavowed and suspended by the Grand Orient of Italy, so whatever it was, P2 ceased to be an official Masonic organization.”

It is noteworthy, but seldom mentioned, that the Masonic Brotherhood having been made aware that this lodge was not following the rules of their Order disavowed itself from their corrupt practices prior to P2's revelations which attracted attention around the world. Many have capitalized on the Masonic lodge involvement, writing books and other literature for the sole purpose of exploiting the brotherhood without delving into the facts, and those who did become aware of this non-involvement, have chosen to keep it secret. "...Gelli brought in Michele Sindona, the leading financial advisor to the Vatican. Then, in 1977, Sindona brought in Roberto Calvi, head of the Banco Ambrosiano in Milan, which was closely associated with the 'Papal Bank,' one of its major shareholders '...Calvi brought to the table his most valued contact, the Istituto per lo Opere di Religione, the Institute for Religious Works (the 'IOR'), a financial institution often erroneously referred to as the 'Vatican Bank.' The IOR belongs not to the Vatican city-state, but to the Pope alone." One must not forget that the Pope enjoys diplomatic immunity as the Vatican enjoys international recognition as a city-state, similar to that of any other country in the world. The Roman Catholic Church is the only religion recognized by an Ambassadorship in the United States. "...The Banco Ambrosiano helped to set up foreign shell companies, including ten in Panama, which were controlled by the Papal Bank. Then the Banco Ambrosiano loaned these shells up to one and a third billion dollars. The Papal Bank also put in funds of its own, but not one in Rome will even hint at the amount or purpose of these extensive fundings."

The American Archbishop Marcinkus, head of the IOR, invokes the Italian Concordat, which guarantees Vatican sovereignty "when he learned he had been indicted by the Italian government." This decision was supported up by the Italian Supreme Court, "...The Papal Bank agreed to pay and paid over to the Banco Ambrosiano the incredible sum of 244 million dollars, while denying any guilt, or even any material involvement, in the great fraud. Together with the reputed loss of 450 million dollars, this means that the affairs between the Papal Bank and the Banco Ambrosiano cost the Catholic Church almost 700 million dollars, over ten times the 1987 operating loss that Catholics all over the world were asked to make up with extra donations..." ~from John J. Robinson, Born in the Blood.

In 1983, the Pontiff sends Archbishop Luigi Poggi to Moscow to initiate discussions at the Kremlin on the likelihood of coming to a mutually acceptable agreement over Poland and its struggle for freedom: the Pontiff declaring that he would personally control the political radical and anarchist Walesa, if the Church was given more freedom. ~Paraphrased from the works of Gordon Thomas, Journey into Madness.

AD 1973-David Berg, also known as Moses David, guru of the "Children of God" or the "Family of Love," or just plain "The Family," predicts in the "Endtime News!" that the United States will be destroyed by the Comet Kohoutek. ~from McIver #2095.

A self-proclaimed Saint is born, "Out of all the Saints sent by God, I think I am the most successful one already as it now stands. When it comes to our age, we must have an automatic theocracy to rule the world. So, we cannot separate the political field from the religious. My dream is to organize a Christian political party including the Protestant denominations, Catholic and all the religious sects. We can embrace the religious world in one arm and the political world in the other. The whole world is in my hand, and I will conquer and subjugate the world. I have met many famous so-called famous Senators and Congressmen, but to my eyes they are just nothing; they are weak and helpless before God. If the U.S. continues its corruption, and we find among the Senators and Congressmen no one really usable for our purposes we can make Senators and Congressmen out of our members." ~Rev. Sun Myong Moon, in Master Speaks, May 17, 1973, detailing his anti-democratic plans for the USA.

AD 1974-The growing ambivalence of the Catholic Church's perception regarding Freemasonry becomes official when Franjo Cardinal Seper, Prefect of the Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith, sends letters to John Cardinal Krol of Philadelphia and others regarding the force and meaning of Canon 2335 of the 1917 Code of Canon Law. The Cardinal, prompted by Ecumenical commitment, states that the Canon still remains in force, but since penal laws are subject to strict interpretation, Excommunication would only be applicable to those Roman Catholics who joined organizations, which actively plot against the Roman Catholic Church.

Since Masons have not plotted against the Roman Catholic Church, the letter is interpreted to mean that the Cardinal's statement signaled that the ancient strictures against Roman Catholic membership in Masonry have been removed. ~From Origins, 3 October 1974, Vol 4, pg. 236, letter from Franjo Cardinal Seper, Prefect of the Vatican Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith, to John Cardinal Krol of Philadelphia. Origins is a Catholic periodical dealing with Church matters, published by the Catholic News Service, 3211 Fourth St. N.E., Washington, D.C. 20017 -1100.

Religion gone wrong. From 1994 to 1997, the religious Order of the Solar Temple's members become so obsessed that they begin a series of mass suicides, which eventually leads to 74 deaths. Goodbye letters are left by members, stating that they believe their deaths will be an escape from the "Hypocrisies and oppression of this world." Records later seized by the Quebec police show that several members had personally donated over $1 million to the cult's demonic leader, Joseph Di Mambro.

The Rapture is upon us. Christians cite I Thessalonians 4:16 as the basis for this claim, however, the verse before, I Thessalonians 4:15, undoubtedly shows that the dead in Christ rise first, which same event, the first resurrection, occurs after the return of Our Divine Lord Jesus Christ and after the defeat of the Anti-Christ. Those that rule and reign with Christ for a thousand years are those that are believed to be martyred during the reign of the Antichrist. ~Revelations 20:4-6.

AD 1975-The End of the World: According to the Jehovah's Witnesses group will later claim 1984 as the Revised Rapture date. ~from Kyle pg.93.

The Watchtower Society, "According to reliable Bible chronology Adam was created in the year 4026 B.C.E., likely in the autumn of the year, at the end of the sixth day of Creation."

Jehovah's Witnesses believe that the year 1975 is a promising date for the End of the World because it is the 6,000th anniversary of Adam's creation. Exactly 1,000 years was to pass for each day of the creation week, but this prophecy has also failed. The current estimate is that the End of the World, as we know it, will happen precisely 6000 years after the creation of Eve, but there is no way of knowing when this will happen.

AD 1977-"Le Cercle d'Ulysse" [The Circle of Ulysses] by Jean Delaude proclaims to be about a secret organization capable of challenging the Roman Catholic Church and taking on the Vatican in the near future [The Priory of Sion] Other works encouraged by the Priory are "Rennes-le-Château: Capitale Secrete de l'histoire de France" this organization proclaims to know the truth about Jesus and the establishment of the Church.

End of the World: Fundamentalist cult leader William Branham predicts the Rapture will take place no later than this year and just before the End, Los Angeles will fall into the sea after a devastating earthquake, the Vatican will finally achieve its long sought after dictatorial powers over the world, and all of Christianity would become unified.~from Babinski pg.277.

End of the World; Implied in Hal Lindsay's revision. First said 1948+40=1988; Later Israel did not have land until 1967 War; 1967+40=2007; Rapture seven years earlier. Also now says generation from 60-80 yrs. Puts it also at 2040, 2047.

AD 1978-Religion gone wrong. Jonestown Massacre; Reverend James Warren Jones [Jim Jones], cult leader of the People's Temple in San Francisco is charged with diversion of church funds for personal use and moves his group to Guyana, off the coast of South America. Nine hundred and nine [914] members [274 Children] allegedly commit suicide or are killed. It is sad to say that his followers sought a spiritual leader and were misled by him through his interpretations of Scripture.

AD 1978-Pope John Paul I departed after only serving 34 days as Pope. Born Albino Luciani on 17 October 1912, becomes Pope John Paul I, a Pope that the people could approach and identify with. He refuses the Tiara, a symbol of his Earthly Powers, he refuses to be carried with pomp upon the throne, a symbol of his realm, and he spoke in the first person singular representing himself as the pastor and not the ruler.

Due to the suddenness of his death there have been those who have tried to ascribe his demise to satanic groups, cults, or secret organizations [literature such as "In God's Name" & "The Brotherhood" have been published, but their only interest is financial gain and not the truth], On Aug. 27, 1978, Albino Luciani is elected Pope on the fourth ballot [a compromise selection] taking the name of his two predecessors, becoming John Paul I (JPI). Cardinal Jean Villot, Pope John Paul's Secretary of State, is asked to remain by the new Pope and to begin an immediate exploration into the financial operations of the Vatican Bank, placing particular emphasis on the Istituto per le Opere di Religione [IOR aka the Vatican Bank].

On Aug. 31, 1978. Il Mondo (a periodical dealing with economic issues), in an open letter to the Pope, makes a request to the Pope to tidy up issues dealing with the Vatican Bank. Reforms the Pope wished to make were changing the Vatican's relationships with capitalists. Mino Pecorelli, a journalist, publishes an article, "The Great Vatican Lodge," revealing the names of 121 "Alleged Masons."

To Pope Pius XII. "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

The list was comprised of Cardinals, Bishops, and high-ranking prelates. The list includes Jean Villot, his Secretary of State, Bishop Paul Marcinkus, head of the Vatican Bank, and Pasquale Macchi, his personal secretary.

The Pope learns that Jean Villot has been among those favoring a relaxation of the canon rule that any Roman Catholic who becomes a Freemason is automatically excommunicated. For centuries the Church has spoken out against this "Brotherhood" due to its refusal to acknowledge the Catholic Church [no longer the Roman Church, as American Catholics find this terminology distasteful], as the one and only "True Church of God."

On Sept. 27, 1978, Pope John Paul I makes the assessment to give Cardinal Cody of Chicago the opportunity to resign due to ill health. If he refuses, he is to be assigned a coadjutor. On Sept. 27, Pope John Paul I asks Cardinal Baggio to take the position he vacated in Venice, but Baggio refuses [Baggio's name is on The Great Vatican Lodge list of Freemasons].

On Sept. 28, the Pope discusses the Vatican Bank circumstances with his Secretary of State, Jean Villot who has submitted his preliminary report regarding the issue. The Pope has no intention of leaving Marcinkus [with no previous banking experience and was investigated for money laundering of the Mafia by the FBI in 1973] in the Vatican Bank. Marcinkus [also known by the nickname, "Gorilla"] is to be removed without delay.

On September 28th and September 29th, Pope John Paul I is found dead. He had been Pope for 34 days [Pope Leo XI served for only 17 days and is believed to have been poisoned]. Marcinkus is present in the Vatican courtyard at 6:45 AM [which led to speculation that he may have had a hand in the death of the Pope since Paul Casimir Marcinkus was not known to be an early riser]. On Sept. 28, 1981, Pope John Paul II will promote Bishop Marcinkus to the position of Archbishop and Pro-President of the 'Pontifical Commission for the State of Vatican City.'

He will also retain his position as head of the Vatican Bank. Rumors abound with a probable method of murder being a tampering with the Pope John Paul I's medications [liquid Effortil or Cortiplex injections]. Security was lax and the time of death was never established [an autopsy was not performed], the death certificate is not signed, indicating heart failure as the probable cause, and embalming is performed within 14 hours of the body being found [although Italian law states it is not to be done within 24].

Jean Villot, is Secretary of State to Pope Paul VI, and interim Secretary to Pope John Paul I, but was to have been replaced. After John Paul I's death, Villot assumes the role of Camerlengo (chamberlain), practically acting as head of the church. Immediately following the Pope's death, Villot is removed from the Pope's bedroom along with the bottle of medicine, papers he [the Pope] was holding in his hands, his will, glasses and slippers [These articles are never to be seen again]. Villot takes control of the events immediately following the Pope's death, issuing statements to the press [and to others that were not factual]. Two of the most important decisions were that there was to be no autopsy and the conclave to elect the next Pope would occur at the earliest possible date [October 14].

The early gathering of this conclave deflected attention away from the untimely and suspicious death of Pope John Paul I and onto the anticipation and suspense of who the next Pope would be. The only other Pope to have served for a lesser time is Pope Leo XI, in March 1979, Villot, passed away, Pope Leo XI who served for 17 days was suspected of being poisoned.

AD 1979-Pope John Paul II states, "...Salvation does not coincide with economic and political liberation." South American revolutionists [Marxists] are attempting to reinterpret Scripture and to use the Church as a vehicle of social renewal and class struggle to free the poor from exploitation by the ruling classes. Ironic isn't it? The very organization that professes no belief in God is now attempting to use religion as a means to gain political advances.

Pope John Paul II is referred to by the Latin phrase "De Labore Solis," which means from "The Sun labor," which describes his laboring for his flock. Pope John Paul II has traveled to more countries than any other Pope in history, and according to Saint Malachy there are only two Popes remaining to the end. Saint Malachy [Malachi] makes the following prophecy concerning the last Pope, "During the last persecution of the Holy Roman Church, there will sit upon the throne, Peter the Roman, who will pasture his flock in the midst of many tribulations; with these passed, the City of the Seven Hills will be destroyed; and the awful Judge will then Judge the peoples. ~Saint Malachy, p. 143.

Despite all its efforts, the Church still cannot convince all of the masses that Salvation is obtainable, "I cannot imagine a God who rewards and punishes the objects of his creation, whose purposes are modeled after our own; a God, in short, who is but a reflection of human frailty. Neither can I believe that the individual survives the death of his body, although feeble souls harbor such thoughts through fear or ridiculous egotism." ~Albert Einstein, New York Times, April 19, 1955.

"Most frighteningly for [Pope] John Paul [II], he had come up against the irremovable presence of a malign strength in his own Vatican and in certain Bishops' chanceries. It was what knowledgeable Churchmen called the 'Superforce.' Rumors, always difficult to verify, tied its installation to the beginning of Pope Paul VI's reign in 1963. Indeed Paul had alluded somberly to 'The Smoke of Satan which has entered the Sanctuary'... an oblique reference to an enthronement ceremony by Satanists in the Vatican. Besides, the incidence of Satanic pedophilia — rites and practices — was already documented among certain Bishops and priests as widely dispersed as Turin, in Italy, and South Carolina, in the United States. The cultic acts of Satanic pedophilia are considered by professionals to be the culmination of the Fallen Archangel's rites." ~Malachi Martin, Windswept House: A Vatican Novel, 1996. Malachi Martin served in Rome as a Jesuit priest, where he was a close associate of, and carried out many sensitive missions for, the renowned Jesuit Cardinal Augustin Bea and Popes John XXIII and Paul VI.

In his book, Martin, vividly describes a diabolical satanic ceremony called "The Enthronement of the Fallen Archangel Lucifer" supposedly held in Saint Paul's Chapel within the Vatican, but linked with concurrent satanic rites here in the US, on June 29, 1963, hardly a week after the election of Pope Paul VI. In this novel, before he dies, a Pope leaves a secret account of the situation on his desk for the next occupant of the throne of Peter, a thinly-disguised John Paul II.

AD 1981-End of the World: The Reverend Sun Myung Moon predicts the establishment of the "Kingdom of Heaven," "Rapture" is to occur this year. ~from Kyle pg 148.

AD 1981-"Declaration on Catholic Membership in Masonic Associations," the letter of 1974 is blamed for giving "Rise to erroneous and tendentious interpretations." By this declaration the Congregation is saying that the old Canon rules relating to Freemasonry remain in force. ~from Origins, 12 March 1981, Vol 10, No. 39, p. 610; similar Declaration issued 17 February 1981, cited as (cf. AAS 73 [1981] pp. 240-241), published in L'Osservatore Romano, 9 March 1981.

AD 1981-In May of 1981 a Turkish, political dissident, tries to kill Pope John Paul II in Saint Peter's Square in the Vatican City. This act reinforces a belief among many Italians that their country is the target of subversion from a foreign element. A corruption scandal involving hundreds of public servants, allegedly members of a "Secret society," erupts and brings down the government. For the first time in the 35-year history of the Italian Republic a non-Christian Democratic Premier is elected.

AD 1981-Alberto Rivera, reveals the oath he took as a professed Jesuit priest [as given to a minor ranking Jesuit who is about to be elevated to a higher position], "My son, heretofore you have been taught to act the dissembler among the Roman Catholics to be a Roman Catholic, and to be a spy even among your own brethren: to believe no man, to trust no man. Among the reformers, to be a reformer; among the Huguenots [French Protestants] to be a Huguenot; among the Calvinists, to be a Calvinist; among the Protestants [those who protest and disagree with the Roman Catholic institution], generally to be a Protestant: and obtaining their confidence to seek even to preach from their pulpits, and to denounce with all the vehemence (violent emotion) in your nature our Holy Religion and the Pope; and even to descend so low as to become a Jew among the Jews, that you might be enabled to gather together all information for the benefit of your order as a faithful soldier of the Pope."

"You have been taught to insidiously plant the seeds of jealousy and hatred between states that were at peace, and incite them to deeds of blood, involving them in war with each other, and to create revolutions and civil wars in communities, provinces and countries that were independent and prosperous, cultivating the arts and the sciences and enjoying the blessings of peace; To take sides with the combatants and to act secretly in concert with your brother Jesuit who might be engaged on the other side, but openly opposed to that with which you might be connected; Only that the church might be the gainer in the end in the conditions fixed in the treaties for peace, and that the ends justify the means."

"You have been taught your duty as a spy, to gather all statistics, facts and information in your power from every source: to ingratiate yourself into the confidence of the family circle of Protestants and heretics of every class and character, as well as that of the merchant, the banker, the lawyer, among the schools and universities, in parliament and legislatures, and in the judiciaries and councils of State, and to 'be all things to all men', for the Pope's sake, whose servants we are unto death."

"You have received all your instructions heretofore as a novice [one who has no training], a neophyte (a newly ordained priest), and have served as a coadjutor (worked as a helper), confessor and priest, but you have not yet been invested with all that is necessary to command in the army of Loyola and in the service of the Pope."

"You must serve the proper time as the instrument and executioner as directed by your superiors; for none can command here who has not consecrated [made secret or Holy] his labors with the blood of the heretic; for 'Without the shedding of blood no man can be saved.'

"I, _____, now, in the presence of Almighty God, the blessed Virgin Mary, the blessed Michael the Archangel, the blessed St. John the Baptist, the Holy Apostles, St. Peter and St. Paul and all the saints and sacred hosts of heaven...." "I, furthermore, promise and declare that I will, when opportunity presents, make and wage relentless war, secretly and openly, against all heretics, Protestants and Liberals, as I am directed to do. 'That when the same cannot be done openly, I will secretly use the poisoned cup, the strangulation cord, the steel of the poniard [a dagger] or the leaden bullet, regardless of the honor, rank, dignity, or authority of the person or persons, whatever may be their condition in life, either public or private, as I at any time may be directed so to do by any agent of the Pope or superior of the brotherhood of the holy faith, of the Society of Jesus.'" ~From Double-Cross, by Alberto, Part 2, 1981.

There are those in select political and religious circles who irreverently refer to the Pope as the "Black Pope," black referring to the hidden agendas and evil activities of the Vatican and who they believe controls the Church, the Jean-Baptist Janssens, their present leader being Jesuit General, Count Hans Kolvenbach, a Dutchman, who resides in Rome, at the headquarters of the Jesuits, located at the Church of Jesus, and also headquarters of the Knights of Malta.

The Jesuit General and other high-ranking Jesuit Generals, are said to be sorcerers, Luciferians, who do not believe in Satan. They believe in Lucifer the "Light Bearer," who rebelled against Elohim, the God in Hebrew Scriptures.

Alberto Rivera, says he was invited as a top Jesuit, at the time, to a "Black Mass," which is a parody of the Catholic Mass, with members dressed in black capes. Jean Lacoutre, a French communist, is another Jesuit General, there are six White men, and one Black man. And that's his General staff, "Professed," 4th degree members. A professed Jesuit is obligated by the "Jesuit Oath." It is believed by those who subscribe to the "Jesuit Conspiracy," that the Jesuits wrote the "Protocols," because they have implemented every protocol in that book. Alberto Rivera believes that it was the Jews who aligned with the Pope and published the "Protocols."

"For all the impious errors the Christians commit they show their greatest ignorance in making up a being opposed to God, and calling him 'Devil,' or, in the Hebrew language, 'Satan' ... It is blasphemy to say that the greatest God has an adversary who constrains his capacity to do good." ~Celsus, 2nd century

Pagan critic of the Christians, Pages, The Origins of Satan, p. 141.

The conspiracy theory states that these select members will create "Amusements" to distract the populace from their true intentions. They're the elite in government and behind professional sports. The owner of the Pittsburgh Steelers is a Knight of Malta. The owner of the Detroit Lions is a Knight of Malta. Many top owners of ball clubs, are Knights of Malta, getting the people excited in sporting events while they're creating a tyrannical system. ~ Jean Lacoutre, Jesuits: A Multi-Biography, 1995.

In addition to the Oath, the Jesuits have a guidebook entitled "Secreta Monita," disclosed to the world only twice: once in the 1600s and once in the 1800s.

AD 1981-The Vatican, in March of 1981, resurrects the entire issue of Freemasonry when it again warns Catholics that they risk ex-communication for affiliating with the Masonic lodges. This statement is issued by the "Sacred Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith," formerly known as the "Holy Office," and is known historically as the "Inquisition." The Papacy thus upholds the condemnation by eight of its previous Popes in the Church's battle against Freemasonry, who condemned the craft in over 400 Bulls and other documents due to the resistance of the Masonic Order to proclaim Christianity as the One True Faith of Jesus Christ, the Lord.

The Church's purported power and authority has long been proclaimed "But the ways in which this garment may be spotted are these: 'If any one withdraw from God the Father and Creator of all, receiving another teacher besides Christ, who alone is the Faithful and True Prophet, and who has sent us twelve Apostles to preach the 'Word;' if any one think otherwise than worthily of the substance of the Godhead, which excels all things; these are the things, which even fatally pollute the garment of baptism. But the things, which pollute it in actions are these: murders, adulteries, hatreds, avarice, evil ambition. And the things, which pollute at once the soul and the body are these: to partake of the table of Demons, that is, to taste things sacrificed, or blood, or a carcass which is strangled, and if there be aught else, which has been offered to Demons. Be this therefore the first step to you of three; which step brings forth thirty commands, and the second sixty, and the third a hundred, as we shall expound more fully to you at another time.'" ~The Recognitions of Clement, About the Recognitions and Homilies, 4.36, The Garments Unspotted.

All appear to acknowledge the charge of Pope Leo XIII, that Masonry was aiming at "The overthrow of the whole religious, political and social order based on Christian institutions, and the establishment of a state of things based on pure naturalism...."

The spurious super-naturalism, which substitutes the irrational for the supernatural, and the prodigy for the miracle, pervades the pseudo-historical romances of the Gnostic Gospels and Acts. These surpass the Catholic traditions in luxuriant fancy and incredible marvels, and "Demonic Possessions," says one who has mastered this pseudo literature, "And Resurrections from the dead, miracles of healing and punishment are accumulated without end; the constant repetition of similar events gives the long stories a certain monotony, which is occasionally interrupted by colloquies, hymns and prayers of genuine poetic value. A rich apparatus of visions, angelic appearances, Heavenly voices, speaking animals, defeated and humbled demons is unfolded, a super-terrestrial splendor of light gleams up, mysterious signs from Heaven, earthquakes, thunder and lightning frighten the impious; fire, earth, wind and water obey the pious; serpents, lions, leopards, tigers, and bears are tamed by a word of the Apostles and turn upon their persecutors; the dying martyrs are surrounded by coronets, roses, lilies, incense, while the abyss opens to swallow up their enemies." ~History Of The Christian Church: Chapter XI: The Heresies Of The Ante-Nicene Age, § 117. The System of Gnosticism. Its Theology.

The Bible is said to be inerrant, without any contradictions, and is the Inspired Word of an Infallible tribal deity, and since the Resurrection of Jesus Christ, Lord, and Savior of mankind, is supposed to be the most significant occurrence, which ever happened in the universe, and represents a fact upon, which the entire Christian Doctrine of Salvation rests, one would expect God to see to it that this event is accurately portrayed and plainly recorded. God had no difficulty and even takes the time to Inspire a high level of precise detail and information in the following areas:

- † God devotes 36 verses of specific detail on how to decorate and furnish an important ceremonial tent in Exodus 26.
- † God devotes 42 verses of specific detail on how he wants priests to dress in Exodus 28.
- † God devotes 46 verses of specific detail on how priests are to be consecrated in Exodus 29.
- † God devotes 85 verses of specific detail on how offerings are to be made in Leviticus 1- Leviticus 4.
- † God devotes 38 verses of specific detail on how to deal with mildew, in Leviticus 13:47-59; Leviticus 14:33-57.
- † God devotes 39 verses of specific detail on how the Temple was furnished in 1 Kings 7:13-51.

Yet, God is imprecise, vague, and less wordy in his Resurrection. ~Gospel Inconsistencies: The Risen Jesus Appears To The Eleven Disciples, <http://agnosticireview.com/jesusappear.htm>

"If the Resurrection of Jesus cannot be believed except by assenting to the fantastic descriptions included in the Gospels, then Christianity is doomed. For that view of Resurrection is not believable, and if that is all there is, then Christianity, which depends upon the truth and authenticity of Jesus' Resurrection, also is not believable." ~Bishop John Shelby Spong, Resurrection: Myth or Reality? San Francisco: HarperCollins, 1994, p. 238.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

Some of the conservative factions within the church, being led by Archbishop Marcel Lefebvre, claim that some prelates within the Catholic Church are secretly members of the Order. The function of organizations such as the Illuminati during the Enlightenment was often received as being only a minor role or passing reference in historical writings of that period.

Albert Soboul in "The French Revolution, 1787-1799", mentions the lodges only superficially, but states, "The really significant feature of the Masonic movement in France at this time was that it had no ideological unity and no revolutionary fervor."

A more thorough account of the Masonic involvement with Enlightenment and post-Enlightenment history of Europe as well as in the American Colonialism era has yet to be compiled as many historians take sides in either negating the significance of the Orders in their period or offering too much control to too few in the history of mankind regarding the issue of secret societies and their influences. A cursory look at their membership will quickly show one the intellectual capacity of those who were members of these organizations and their contributions to society and their countries as a whole.

From the struggling revolutionists of France to those of America and the Philippines, Masons have stood for freedom of thought in religion as well as in politics. James Billington, in "Fire in the Minds of Men" devotes considerable wording to Masonry and Illuminism and their role in the "Revolutionary politics" of their times. The most decisive segments are titled "The Occult Origins of Organization."

His tracing the roots of Atheist attitudes and Freethinkers through the lodges and sects of the time show the seldom reveal fact that the majority of the populace were NOT devout Christians as we perceive them today, but deists, believing in God, and not necessarily the Roman Catholic Church. Christian groups today continue to be alarmed against this imaginary Illuminists world domination threat. Vernon Stauffer's "New England and the Bavarian Illuminati," originally published in 1918, has been re-printed in 1967.

"Culture of Civilization," is published in Brussels, reprinted from the original Adam Weishaupt's analysis of Kantian philosophy, the same year Laforestier's extensive history of the Order, "Les Illumines de Baviere et la Franc-Maconnerie Allemande," was reprinted in Switzerland by Slatkine, Inc.

Very little information is revealed in historical indexes and abstracts about the Illuminati. ~There are few English-language biographies on Weishaupt, Nicoli, Knigge or other leading Illuminists. Some information on the Order may be found in John Lepper's "Famous Secret Societies and Mythology of Secret Societies," by J.M. Roberts. Nesta Webster, in her "Secret Societies and Subversive Movements," reprinted from a 1924 edition, published in 1967 by the Christian Book Club, gives some insight. Her 1920 article titled "Illuminism and the World Revolution," appeared in The Nineteenth Century, is a refinement of the Order's history, mixed copiously with much misinformation and her personal prejudice. There are four copies of the English translation of Barruel's Memoirs, known to exist and circulate in the public libraries in the United States. Regrettably, reading these volumes can be a tedious task, due to the typographical style of the period and to the Abbe's constant raving about the "Sophisters of Impiety and Anarchy." Robison's "Proofs of a Conspiracy" was reprinted by the right wing, John Birch Society, in 1967, when the group began to connect "Illuminism" with what it interpreted as an "insiders" coalition. A group considered a behind-the-scenes type. Thomas Paine's "History of Freemasonry" is known to exist in the Rare Book Collection at the Library of Congress. The Atheist, scholar, and propagandist Joseph McCabe also wrote "A History of Freemasonry," published in 1949. McCabe dealt chiefly with the Papal condemnations of Masonry, and writes little of the subject of Illuminism; his essays being more a polemic against Catholic censure of the Masonic lodges, with less detail regarding their history.

Some allege that the Order of the Illuminati has its roots in Atheistic convention with some of the lodges in Italy having become vehicles for the formation of authoritarian, right-wing coups. In May of 1981, the Italian government discovered a plot within lodge "Propaganda Due" to seize control of the state. High ranking intelligence officers, military figures, members of parliament, bankers and "leading Italians" were implicated in this plot.

AD 1982-Evangelical Minister Pat Robertson predicts the End of the World will occur in the fall of 1982. Needless to say, he was wrong. ~from Boyer pg. 138.

AD 1982-The New King James Bible is published. The Bible in use by the Protestants, Puritans, and Calvinists, until it went out of print in 1644, was the Geneva Bible. The first Geneva Bible [Old and New Testaments] being published in English in 1560 in what is now Geneva, Switzerland. Previously, in 1533, Geneva forbade its citizens from reading the Bible in either German or French, and even ordered all translations burned.

Used notoriously by William Shakespeare, John Bunyan, John Milton, and so did King James I of England

[King James I disclaimed any knowledge of the Geneva Bible, though he quoted the Geneva Bible in his writings].

As Professor Eadie states, "... His virtual disclaimer of all knowledge up to a late period of the Genevan notes and version was simply a bold, unblushing falsehood, a clumsy attempt to sever himself and his earlier Scottish beliefs and usages that he might win favor with his English churchmen."

The "Divine Right of Kings" means that a king's power comes from God, that the king is answerable to no one but God. This lack of responsibility and accountability extended to baneful kings. The reasoning being, if a king was evil, he was a punishment from God. The citizens should then suffer in silence. If a king was good, he was a blessing sent from God.

The Church despises thinkers, philosophers, and rationalists, "Reason is the greatest enemy that faith has; it never comes to the aid of spiritual things, but more frequently than not, struggles against the Divine Word, treating with contempt all that emanates from God." ~Martin Luther.

The marginal notes by John Knox and John Calvin expressed the following views, "When tyrants cannot prevail by craft they burst forth into open rage," which annoys King James. James also enjoyed killing animals. He called it "Hunting." "Who will venture to place the authority of Copernicus above that of the Holy Spirit?" ~John Calvin, citing Psalm 93:1 in his Commentary on Genesis.

"People give ear to an upstart astrologer [Copernicus] who strove to show that the earth revolves, not the Heavens or the firmament, the sun and the moon. Whoever wishes to appear clever must devise some new system, which of all systems is of course the very best. This fool wishes to reverse the entire science of astronomy." ~Martin Luther, Catholic monk, Works, Volume 22, c. 1543. cf. Joshua 10:13.

Once he killed an animal, he would literally roll about in its blood. Rumors have circulated that he practiced bestiality while the animal lay dying. James was a sadist as well as a sodomite: who enjoyed torturing people, and preferred young boys to women. While King of Scotland in 1591, he personally supervised the torture of poor wretches caught up in the witchcraft trials of Scotland. James would even suggest innovative tortures to the examiners. History has it that King James was also a coward and that on January 7, 1591, the king was in Edinburgh and emerging from the toll-booth, a contingency followed.

"At a conservative estimate, ten million witches were killed throughout Europe... The decline of witch-belief was... Entirely the product of religious skepticism... The Catholic Church did not reform itself on this matter; it was forced by outside pressure to reform. To be sure, the Protestant Churches were no better in this regard; it is simply that they had less time, only two or three centuries, to engage in the torching of witches. After all, John Wesley, the founder of Methodism, stated quite correctly that disbelief in witches meant a disbelief in the Bible." ~S. T. Joshi.

Duke of Lennox and Lord Hume fell into an argument with the laird of Logie and pulled their swords, and James seeing the steel flashing, fled a refuge, which turned out to be a skinner's booth, where he, to his shame, "fouled his breeches in fear." With his own hand, dated February 10, 1604, he ordained: "... That a translation be made of the whole Bible, as consonant as can be to the original Hebrew and Greek, and this to be set out and printed without any marginal notes, and only to be used in all churches of England in time of Divine Service."

James then incorporated rules that made it impossible for anyone to transcribe an honest translation of the Bishop's Bible by incorporating words to God as giving approval of the Anglican Church. ~From Global Insights and James I: The Fool As King, Ross House, 1976, and Queen James by James White.

AD1982- A body is found suspended from London's Blackfriars Bridge on the morning of June 17, 1982. The corpse is weighted with 14 pounds of bricks and stones, and the victim's hands are tied behind his back. Strangely enough the coroner pronounces the event a suicide. The body is that of Roberto Calvi, who was head of the Banco Ambrosiano, the largest privately owned financial institution in Italy. An inquest is demanded by Calvi's family, and a financial and political scandal is discovered that will rock the Catholic community worldwide. When investigators began probing into the Calvi "Suicide" they discover a deficit of approximately $1.3 Billion from the Banco Ambrosiano.

The missing money is later traced to accounts owned by the Vatican. The Banco Ambrosiano is also involved with an underworld figure known as Licio Gelli, who is the alleged head of a defector secret Masonic Lodge named P-2 [Propaganda Due].

The P-2 membership roles include many leading financial figures as well as political names and government figures. Ensuing investigations reveal Gelli's organization has links in the Italian Intelligence Ministries. Senior military staff members and top names in the nation's media are also implicated. Forty-eight members of the Italian Parliament are revealed as secret members of this organization as well as four Cabinet Ministers. Roberto Gelli, sometimes referred to as, "The Puppet Master," had fashioned a "State within a state" in which ruling members were known only amongst themselves.

Gelli had arrogantly declared that "The doors of all bank vaults open to the right," a figurative claim regarding the penchant of the "Big Money" interests to fund the causes that Gelli was known to operate. Having been active in the Fascist Black Shirts Battalion [during the Spanish civil war] where landed gentry and the church supported General Franco, and during World War II serving as a key link to the German SS Division headed by Hermann Goring, he brokered deals with Italians the British and even the Soviet KGB. His main labors centered on reviving the Fascist movement order in modernize Italy.

Using his connections in the Italian secret service, he obtained sensitive intelligence files on important citizens. This gave him the freedom to "Blackmail" his way into the ruling circles of the country. P-2 [Propaganda Due] is the result of that effort. The Vatican connection to the Gelli-Calvi affair arose from its association with Benito Mussolini, who in 1921 organized the Italian Fascists [Fascio di Combattimento] into a political movement. Upon becoming Prime Minister, Mussolini parleyed an agreement with the Vatican eventually settling "The Roman Question," which had arisen in 1870 [The Papal States].

Criminal figures and the Mafia will also become involved in the financial schemes of the Vatican with Albino Luciana, elected Pope John Paul I, becoming intent on putting a stop to the dirty activities of the Vatican Bank [IOR], as well as the tenure of Roman Catholic Bishop Marcinkus. Conspiracy theories abound as to how to explain that thirty days after his election to the papacy, Pope John Paul I suddenly found dead in his bed, and Carol Wojtyla, the first non-Italian Pope in centuries, becomes Pope John Paul II, implementing his own programs.

It's "Business as usual" as the Vatican Bank [Institute for Religious Works], receives official diplomatic recognition from the U.S. government. Over $12,000,000 in American covert ops funds are funneled through the Vatican Bank to aid the Solidarity Trade Union in Poland [the Polish Pope's homeland], and help to ensure the breakup of the Soviet Union as well as the Church's position in post-Soviet Europe. The Supreme Headquarters Allied Powers Europe (SHAPE); proposed by CIA Director Allen Dulles as Magnitude, which reflects on how "Connected" Gelli is with influential circles has as their Supreme Commander, Alexander Haig, who had become White House Chief of Staff under the United States President, Richard Nixon.

Haig assures Gelli of continued funding for his "Black Operations." Along with Franz Stangl of the "Treblinka Extermination Facility." Members of the Waffen SS "Galician Division" are relocated as well. At the culmination of World War II, the Vatican uses its resources to provide fake passports, money, and relocation assistance to their Christian Nazi war criminals. Another covert program, is named, "Operation Gladio," and is implemented in 1956. This is a joint undertaking between the Central Intelligence Agency [CIA] and the European secret services. Licio Gelli becomes one of the organizers of the "Gladio" network with over 5,000 operatives and contacts. <http://www.atheists.org/catalogue/special.html>

This covert operation uses American taxpayer money to operate an organization of great magnitude. The Western allies form a European wide network under the authority of the Both Calvi's Banco Ambrosiano and the Vatican's Istituto per de Riligione [IOR] became participants in money laundering. Under American Bishop Paul Marcinkus, of the IOR, money flows through the Vatican's [Holy See] ledgers from various sources, including cash from "Stay Behind" funding. The Italian Prime Minister Silvio Berlusconi becomes an instrument for organized crime figures and the Mafia who also become involved in these financial schemes.

Albino Luciana [soon to be elected Pope John Paul I], becomes intent on putting a stop to the dirty activities of the Vatican Bank [IOR], as well as the tenure of Roman Catholic Bishop Marcinkus. Conspiracy theories abound as to how to explain that thirty days after his election to the papacy, John Paul I suddenly found dead in his bed. Carol Wojtyla, the first non-Italian Pope in centuries, becomes Pope John Paul II, implementing his own programs.

It's "Business as usual" as the Vatican Bank [Institute for Religious Works], receives official diplomatic recognition from the U.S. government. Over $12,000,000 in American tax payers' money is used for the covert ops funds, funneled through the Vatican Bank, to aid the Solidarity Trade Union in Poland [the Polish Pope's homeland], and help to ensure the breakup of the Soviet Union as well as the Church's position in post-Soviet Europe. Banco Ambrosiano becomes financially unstable and in trouble. Calvi begins skimming funds flowing through Banco Ambrosiano to support the bad loans, and even agrees to "launder" drug money for the Mafia. He seeks financial help from the secretive Catholic group known as Opus Dei [God's Work], and travels to London to order to meet with the group's treasurer to sell a minority stake in Banco Ambrosiano.

Having angered many people in his line of work, and the skimming operations in 1992, a Mafia defector tells investigators about Calvi having murdered people on the orders of a British drug dealer named Francesco DiCarlo. The plot begins to unravel when Calvi's family innocently requests a second inquiry into his "Suicide." Licio Gelli had already "Disappeared" from a Swiss prison several years previously where he had been held after the discovery of the P-2/Calvi/IOR scandal. The implication of the Vatican, murders, drug money, lawsuits, and foreign espionage are still with us today. Court documents have been made public since July of 1998 and the great loss of finances from various banks tracing the flow of money from the Corleone Mafia family to investments in the Vatican Bank.

The British "Daily Telegraph" observed, "The Holy See resisted all attempts by magistrates investigating the crash to force the now-retired Marcinkus to submit to Italian justice over the crash." A new investigation by Italian authorities into Calvi's murder reveals a "Vatican finance figure" [Telegraph] was present at the meeting where the plan to murder Calvi was discussed.

What is the Vatican's involvement in the Calvi affair? The Eminent Cardinal Michele Giordano, Archbishop of Naples is placed under investigation for usury, extortion, and membership in a criminal group. The prosecutors and members of Italy's Finance Guards unit serve Cardinal Giordano with a warrant at his "Palace."

Threatened with a diplomatic incident and claiming that his residence, being an office of the papacy, enjoyed diplomatic immunity and extraterritorial status. Investigators are still able to obtain the sought after paper documents and computer disks needed to implicate the Cardinal. The Cardinal Giordano's brother, Mario Giordano, arrested a week earlier in connection with another probe of Banco di Napoli, and two other bank officials including a former manager have been charged with extortion and running an illegal usury operation with interest as high as 400%. Investigative officials have traced to the Cardinal and his administration checks totaling more than 250,000 pounds cashed by his brother Mario.

AD 1982-Prof. G. A. Wells wrote: "My fundamental theses remains the same namely, the earliest references to the historical Jesus are so vague that it is not necessary to hold that he ever existed; the rise of Christianity can, from the undoubtedly historical antecedents, be explained quite well without him; and reasons can be given to show why, from about AD 80 or 90, Christians began to suppose that he had lived in Palestine about fifty years earlier."

"Despite the efforts of innumerable scholars over the past three hundred years, not a particle of hard conclusive evidence has been produced confirming any part of the life of Jesus. The prevailing mood of doubt and skepticism has been expressed by Rudolf Bultmann: "One can only emphasize the uncertainty of our knowledge of the person and work of the historical Jesus, and likewise of the origin of Christianity."

"*As evidences of Christ's historical existence and Divinity these writings are of no value. They are all anonymous writings or forgeries, and of very late origin. In 1996, "Clergy who are not willing simply to reject or ignore scholarly criticism on the New Testament are faced with a serious problem... they can hardly tell their congregations that what has been proclaimed as Christian truth for nearly 2,000 years is little better than moonshine..." Professor Emeritus in German, he quotes from many German scholars, suggesting that he turned to this line as a side effect of his German studies.

His two earliest books, on Herder & Gilparzer, were published in 1959 and 1969. And Religious Postures: Essays on Modern Christian Apologists and Religious Problems is dated 1988.

replace the archaic doctrines today practiced as religion the masses will cling to what they have.

AD 1982-Financial Sins of the Church: John Patrick Cody, Roman Catholic Cardinal of Chicago, Illinois in 1965. Fr. Andrew Greeley states that Cardinal Cody was a very difficult man to get along with and a very demanding administrator. In 1970, Cardinal Cody invested $2 million in Penn Central stocks and days later the company went bankrupt. Cody had left his former posts, the diocese of New Orleans and Kansas City, in debt. He kept dossiers on priests and nuns suspected of disloyalty, summarily dismissing "Problem" priests, closing many schools, funneling money to a "Woman friend." Cardinal Cody in diverse ways made himself very unpopular with the clergy, so much so, that they formed a trade union, calling themselves, "The Association of Chicago Priests."

Rome is petitioned repeatedly with their complaints and concerns – to no avail. Cardinal Cody had spent much time in Rome, working initially in the North American College and subsequently in the Secretariat of State and had ingratiated himself with Pius XII, who had at one time [WWII] pledged his Church to a belief in the ultimate victory of Germany, Italy, and Japan, and the future Pope, Paul VI.

In 1970 the major portion of the Vatican Bank's investments is in the U.S. stock market and is funneled through Continental Illinois Bank in Chicago. Cardinal Cody and Bishop Marcinkus are friends and work closely together on many banking transactions.

Cardinal Cody funnels a lot of Chicago money to Rome, some of it being used in Poland, and much appreciated by Mr. Wojtyla, the soon-to-be Polish Pope, John Paul II. By 1976, financial problems dealing with Cardinal Cody become so well known that Pope Paul VI offers him a post in the Roman Curia in order to remove him from his seat [Cardinal Cody refuses the offer]. In July 1978 [weeks before Pope Paul VI's death] Cardinal Cody is asked to accept a coadjutor [a Bishop who would actually run the Diocese]. The Cardinal would be permitted to stay on as titular head, but angrily refuses.

When Pope John Paul I becomes Pope, Cardinal Cody realizes this Pope might insist on his removal and/or replacement, where his predecessor had relinquished. This was the intention of John Paul I. Pope John Paul II, however allows Cardinal Cody to stay on in Chicago till his death. On Jan., 1981, a Federal Grand Jury serves Cardinal Cody with a number of subpoenas, demanding to see his financial records, but he refuses. In September when he still had not cooperated, the Chicago Sun Times ran a story outlining a large array of serious crimes the Cardinal is alleged to have committed. On April, 1982, Cardinal Cody dies and with him the investigation into his wrongdoings is quashed.

AD 1983-The Roman Catholic Church functions under the new Code of Canon Law, this new Code, revised Canon 2335, of the 1917 Code, incorporates it into new Canon 1734, "One who joins an association which plots against the Church is to be punished with a just penalty; one who promotes or moderates such an association, however, is to be punished with an interdict."

This Canon no longer imposes Excommunication on Catholic Masons, or even cites Masons directly. The 1983 Code does differentiate between simple lodge membership, the punishment for which is a "Penalty," and that of promoting or holding office in such an organization, the punishment for which is an "Interdict." [a punishment or vindictive penalty by which the Roman Catholic faithful, remaining in communion with the church, are forbidden certain sacraments and are prohibited from participation in certain sacred acts. It is a formal censure. Those bound by a personal interdict are forbidden to celebrate or assist at divine services, and are denied ecclesiastical burial].

Where Masonic groups have been determined to have plotted against the Church, Catholic officers of those lodges will be subject to stiffer penalties than will regular members who are Catholic, yet the Church has never shown where any lodge plotted against it. ~From Interdict, New Catholic Encyclopedia, prepared by an Editorial staff at The Catholic University of America, Washington, D.C., McGraw-Hill Book Co.

Pope John Paul II re-institutes the Inquisition, now the Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith, formerly the Congregation of the Holy Office, which is headed by the future Pope Benedict XVI, sometimes referred to as Shared Congregation of the Roman and Universal Inquisition, formerly, "Secretariat of the Congregation of the Holy Office of the Inquisition."

Is the Pope preparing to assert his 'Right of the Sword' or his duty to put apostates to death? [Listen to a Catholic Apologist explain how the Pope has the right to condemn people to death]

AD 1983-David Dodge and Tom Dunn, while searching for evidence of government corruption in public records stored in the Belfast Library, Maine, discover the library's oldest authentic copy of the Constitution of the United States, printed in 1825, this document included a Thirteenth Amendment.

The intent of this "Missing" Thirteenth Amendment was to prohibit Attorneys of the Bar Associations from serving in government as an "Elite" class of people. ~Matthew 6:24.

Was this Constitutional Amendment removed unlawfully? Dodge and Dunn have since uncovered additional copies of the Constitution with the "Missing" Thirteenth Amendment printed in at least eighteen separate publications in ten different states and territories over four decades from 1822 to 1860. This missing Thirteenth Amendment had been ratified by the thirteen states and is therefore an authentic Amendment to the American Constitution, and may have been removed from the American Constitution during the tumult of the Civil War.

Since the Amendment has never lawfully repealed, it is still the Law today, and reads as follows: "If any citizen of the United States shall accept, claim, receive, or retain any title of nobility or honor, or shall without the consent of Congress, accept and retain any present, pension, office, or emolument of any kind whatever, from any emperor, king, prince, or foreign power, such person shall cease to be a citizen of the United States, and shall be incapable of holding any office of trust or profit under them, or either of them."

~www.bankofwisdom.com.

The American Revolution provided a precedent and inspiration for people all over the world to overthrow their European monarchies. Protestantism was running rampant with its ideals that Kings and Popes were not infallible. Monarchies and banks almost succeeded in destroying the United States, so much so that in 1794, in the 'Jay Treaty,' the United States government agreed to pay 600,000 pounds sterling to King George III, of Great Britain, as reparations for the American Revolution.

The Senate ratified the treaty in a secret session and ordered that it not be published. Benjamin Franklin's grandson published it anyway, the exposure and resulting public uproar so angered the Congress that it passed the "Alien and Sedition Acts," 1798, so federal judges could prosecute editors and publishers for reporting the truth about the government.

Why would our Senators agree to pay reparations to the loser? And why would they agree to pay 600,000 pounds sterling, eleven years after the war ended? The title of "Nobility" may no longer apply in today's political system, the concept of "Honor" however, remains relevant [i.e. Honorable].

For those with this designation [title] were exempt or had an "immunity" from lawsuits, which were not afforded to all citizens. The Protestant forefathers saw mankind as equals with no differences in rights and privileges, something monarchs and the Church differed with. ~From The Missing Thirteenth Amendment, by David M. Dodge, in his research dated 08/01/ Titles of Nobility and Honor.

AD 1983- The Holy See drops penalties of Excommunication against the Masonic Brothers [Brethren] in the Philippines [Although Excommunication for membership still exists in some European countries]. The Church further reiterates that after knowing the irreconcilable differences between the Catholic Church and Masonic philosophy, one should consider once and for all where he wishes to stand. "One cannot be a Mason and a Catholic at the same time." ~anonymous—see AD 1990.

After all the pain and sorrow brought to the Philippines by that malevolent faith, Christianity, "But now that system is gone supposedly in the name of the Separation of Church and State," President Arroyo stated. "And that is why I would like to instruct our Department of Education to allow [non-government organizations] of various religions [actually preferring Catholicism] to teach values formation once again in our public schools." ~Catechism Returning To Public Schools: The Philippine Star, July 13, 2004, by Marichu Villanueva.

AD 1983- Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith issues a statement declaring that "The Church's negative position on Masonic associations, therefore, remains unaltered, since their [Masons] principles have always been regarded as irreconcilable with the Church's doctrine... Catholics enrolled in Masonic associations are involved in serious sin and may not approach Holy Communion."

The Congregation draws a distinction between penal law and morality, holding that Catholics cannot be Excommunicated or punished for merely being Masons, insofar as the particular Masonic group to which they belonged does not attack the Church. However, the Congregation holds that it is nonetheless immoral to belong to Masonic groups because Freemasonry is, in their view, antithetical [adverse] to the teachings and authority of the Church [notice, not against the teachings, Biblically, of God]. ~from Origins, 15 December 1983, Vol 13, p. 450, original document cited as (cf AAS LXXVI (1984), 300).

Preaching abstinence and purity of morals, ministers, preachers, priests, Bishops, etc., are vibrant with piety from the pulpit, and yet, have mistresses in private.

“Bossuet, the famous Bishop of Meaux, who wrote works of classic piety, is now known to have had a secret wife or mistress. And the Catholic Church has no monopoly of this hypocrisy. I have found Protestant leaders and preachers of very unctuous exterior to have an extremely human scent for dollars and drinks.” ~From the works of the former Benedictine monk, J. McCabe, Rationalist Encyclopedia.

AD1985- United States Bishops Committee for Pastoral Research and Practices publishes a report entitled “Masonry & Naturalistic Religion.” While one can no longer be Excommunicated for being a Mason, it is none the less sinful to belong to such Masonic organizations, being as the principles of Masonry are irreconcilable with those of the Church, and the basic rituals of Masonry embody a naturalistic religion, active participation in which is incompatible with Christian faith and practice. Those who knowingly embrace such principles are “Committing serious sin.”

American Churches are more tolerant of Freemasonry as expressed in a letter from Bishop Fiorenza of the Houston-Galveston diocese, in which he says: “... In the historical view, Freemasonry in Europe and Latin America has opposed the Catholic Church and has been virulent in its anti-clerical attitude. To a great extent, however, this mentality is not typical of Freemasonry in the United States There is a concern that certain Freemasonry groups display all the elements of a religion, but forbid the mention of Jesus Christ within the Lodge. This, too, is not exemplified in Masonic groups in the United States but is found in other parts of the world. Most Masons in this country join for social and business reasons. In general, there has been no conflict between Freemasonry and the Catholic Church in this country. Both organizations have existed in harmony in the United States....” ~from L'Osservatore Romano English Edition, 5 December 1983, Article entitled Sacred Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith—Declaration on Masonic Associations, pg. 12.

AD1985- 11 March, “L'Osservatore Romano,” includes an article which argues that Masonry establishes a relativistic metaphoric concept of morality unacceptable to the Catholic Church and its Doctrines. ~L'Osservatore Romano, the English edition, 11 March 1985, Reflections a Year after Declaration of Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith—Irreconcilability between Christian Faith and Freemasonry, pg. 2.

The Catholic Church is reluctant to admit any past mistakes as reflected by its history and its unhurried declarations of past inaccuracies. In their mind, everyone is wrong but them. This attitude still pervades an oligarchy, which is consumed in its desire to have the Masonic Brotherhood condescend to its claim of being the one and only true religion of the world and to deny the religious freedom that this organization espouses.

The Catholic Church has not gotten over the audacity of the early American Fathers in denying Her Grace authority over the new nation, “‘The Declaration of Independence’ was a denial, and the first denial of a nation, of the infamous dogma that God confers the right upon one man to govern others.” ~Col. Robert G. Ingersoll, Individuality.

AD 1987- Many Catholic parishes train girls as well as boys to be servers at Mass until the Vatican issues a discriminatory ruling against the use of altar girls in 1987.

AD1988-The End of the World per Hal Lindsey's bestseller “The Late, Great Planet Earth,” suggesting that the “Rapture” would take place 40 years [one Biblical generation] after Israel gains statehood. ~from Abanes pg. 85.

Edgar C. Whisenant lists 88 Reasons Why the Rapture Will Be in 1988, but when Christ fails to reappear, he predicts the Rapture will now be in 1989; a book produced in Georgia places the Rapture on October 8, 1992, at 12:55 p.m. Eastern Daylight time. When the Rapture does not occur, Whisenant says he merely miscalculated by a year. His sequel, 89 Reasons Why the Rapture Is in 1989, sells just a fraction of the numbers that the original version registered.

“The argument that the literal story of Genesis can qualify as science collapses on three major grounds: the creationists' need to invoke miracles in order to compress the events of the earth's history into the Biblical span of a few thousand years; their unwillingness to abandon claims clearly disproved, including the assertion that all fossils are products of Noah's flood, and their reliance upon distortion, misquote, half-quote, and citation out of context to characterize the ideas of their opponents.” ~Stephen Jay Gould, The Vendict on Creationism, The Skeptical Inquirer, Winter 87/88, pg. 186.

AD1988- Edgar Whisenant predicts that the “Rapture” [End of the World] will take place at 10:55 a.m., on September 15th. ~from Abanes pg. 94.

AD 1989-The New Revised Standard Bible is published.

“Once a ruler becomes religious, it [becomes] impossible for you to debate with him. Once someone rules in the name of religion, your lives become Hell." ~Colonel Moammar Qaddafi, at the General People's Congress in Tripoli in October, 1989.

AD1990-The Catholic Bishops Conference of the Philippines [CBCP], declares that Filipino Masons are not to be given full Catholic privileges.

“... Any Catholic publicly known as a Mason may not be given Holy Communion nor be allowed to stand as a sponsor in Baptisms, Confirmations, and Weddings; may not be admitted into religious organization, an may be denied funeral rites unless signs of repentance-renunciation of Masonry before his death is shown. Where funeral rites are allowed by the Bishop, no Masonic services shall be allowed in the Church or cemetery immediately before or after the Church rites in order to avoid scandal.” ~Malindang Tribune, by Tim Ruben, August 28-September 3, 2000.

The Catholic Church still persecutes in its own inimitable way. No longer able to torture, ban, or condemn it now uses ostracization to compel those who disagree with its hypocritical doctrines.

AD1991-End of the World: Nation of Islam leader Louis Farrakhan predicts the Gulf War will be, “The War of Armageddon ... the Final War.”

AD1992-Members of a white supremacist group of Aryan Nations believe it is the final Apocalyptic Race War they had long been waiting for when the LA riots break out in response to the verdict of the Rodney King trial. ~from 20/20, NBC, Dec 12, 1999.

AD1992-The rock singer, Rollen Stewart, a Born Again Christian, who made himself famous by holding up “John 3:16” signs at sporting events, believes that the Rapture will take place on September 28th. Stewart goes berserk, setting off stink bombs in churches and bookstores and writing apocalyptic letters in a mission to make people get right with God. He is now serving a life sentence for kidnapping. ~from Adams pgs. 18-20.

AD1992-Lee Jang Rim, leader of the Korean Doomsday cult “Mission for the Coming Days,” also known as the “Tami Church,” predicts that the Rapture will occur on the 20th or 28th of October. Lee is convicted of fraud after the prophecy fails. Lee’s cult was part of the larger “Hyoo-Go,” Rapture movement, which took Korea by storm in 1992. ~from Thompson pgs. 227-228, McIver #2747.

In South Korea, 20,000 Christians leave school or quit jobs to await the End of the World.

AD1993-The Southern Baptist Convention votes overwhelmingly on an issue that they felt threatened their religious beliefs, and finally decide that membership in Freemasonry is a matter of personal conscience and does not threaten the sanctity of the church. Masonic Information Center of the United States issues a statement on Freemasonry and Religion. Freemasonry is not a religion, Freemasonry is open to men of all faiths, Freemasons believe in one God, Freemasons take an oath on an open volume of the Sacred Law [The Bible to the Christian, Torah to the Jews, and Qur-an to the Muslim] in which they proclaim the pain of an honest man of the thought of violating his word.

AD1993-Branch Davidians: an American, Christian, religious movement whose members were killed in a fire that destroyed their headquarters near Waco, Texas. A fire marking the end of a 51-day siege by United States federal agents, the Branch Davidians traces its origins to the Davidian movement, a small splinter group of Seventh-Day Adventists founded by Adventist leader Victor Houteff in 1934, Los Angeles, California.

Houteff retained the Adventist belief that the “Apocalypse,” along with “Second Coming of Christ,” were imminent and would be preceded by worldwide catastrophes and war. Houteff taught that the kingdom of the Ancient Israelite monarch David would be re-established in Palestine. After splitting from the mainstream Adventists, Houteff led his followers from Los Angeles to Waco, Texas, where the small religious sect established the communal Mount Carmel Center.

Houteff died in 1955, and the Branch Davidian movement broken up into various groups. In the mid-1980s Vernon Howell, a convert, became leader of a faction of the Davidian movement and adopted the symbolic name “David Koresh.” David signifying the “Kingdom of David” to be restored in Palestine [Koresh, is the Hebrew form of the name of Cyrus the Great, the ancient Persian king who played a messianic role in the history of Ancient Israel by freeing the Jews from their Babylonian Captors. ~Isaiah 45:1-7.

In the late 1980s Koresh began practicing polygamy, which he differentiated as taking spiritual wives. Spiritual leaders throughout history have had a way of twisting words [like politicians] to serve their self-serving interests. Accusations of various kinds of abuses were leveled at the group by anti-cult activists, and the United States federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms [ATF], arrived to search the complex for illegal weapons.

The ATF and FBI raid of February 28, 1993, escalated into a firefight between federal agents and the Branch Davidians, who interpreted the attack as the beginning episode in their dooms day scenario. A fire broke out, and 80 Branch Davidians died, which the U.S. government agents claimed was caused by occupants of the military headquarters, while some of the survivors and their supporters believe that the structure caught fire as a result of the federal assault with smoke grenades. In the mid-1990's surviving Branch Davidians, 45 people, remained committed to their faith. Other sects within the larger Davidian movement, having never affiliated with David Koresh, continue as well.

End of the World: Eighty die in an FBI induced fireball after former 7th Day Adventist and Bible cult leader David Koresh tells followers he is the Messiah and the Apocalypse has begun.

AD1994-When confronted with historical facts, Christian Apologists claim that history is long, long ago, and that the Church has changed. Has it? A U.N. tribunal on Wednesday convicted a Christian Rwandan pastor and his son of genocide for calling in Hutu gangs to kill minority Tutsis who had sought refuge in a church during the 1994 slaughter in the tiny central African country.

"A court in Rwanda has sentenced two Roman Catholic priests to death for their role in the genocide of 1994, in which up to a million Tutsis and moderate Hutus were killed. The priests were convicted of involvement in two massacres. In one, they were accused of organizing the killing of about 2,000 Tutsis by bulldozing the church in which they were sheltering at Nyange in the western Kibuye region. The bulldozer driver was sentenced to life imprisonment. Different sections of the Rwandan church have been widely accused of playing an active role in the genocide of 1994 [in which about four up to five millions were massacre] but this is the first time priests have been sentenced to death inside Rwanda." ~BBC News, April 4, 1998.

Elizaphan Ntakirutimana, 78, and his doctor son, Gerald Ntakirutimana, 45, are both convicted of genocide, complicity in genocide, conspiracy to commit genocide and crimes against humanity for their part in the killings at a Seventh-Day Adventist complex in Kibuye, Rwanda, on April 16, 1994. ~Tutsi Genocide in Africa by Sukhdev Chhatbar, Associated Press Writer February 19, 2003.

"In January, [Dan Quayle] spoke at a training conference of religious-right activists in Fort Lauderdale, whose theme was 'Reclaiming America,' and before the event began he stood at attention as the crowd of more than two thousand rose, faced a flag with a cross on it, and, with hands on hearts, recited in unison, 'I pledge allegiance to the Christian flag, and to the Savior, for whose Kingdom it stands, one Savior, crucified, risen, and coming again, with life and liberty for all who believe.'" ~Christian Soldiers, New Yorker magazine, July 18, 1994.

Victorian Catholic priest, Father Gerald Ridsdale [1929-] becomes Australia's most notorious pedophile after receiving 18-year sentence for child sex abuse.

Feelings against women priests continue into the 20th century in the Church of England, as elsewhere, "Priestesses should be burnt at the stake because they are assuming powers they have no right to. In the medieval world that was called sorcery. The way of dealing with sorcerers was to burn them at the stake. It's illegal now but if I had my way that is what would happen to them. In medieval times, I would burn the bloody bitches." ~Church of England vicar Rev. Anthony Kennedy, March 9, 1994, as reported in the Times, regarding female C. of E. priests. Christian loathing continues, "I would shoot the bastards if I was allowed, because a woman can't represent Christ. Men and women are totally different, that's not my fault, and Jesus chose men for his disciples." ~Church of England vicar Rev. Anthony Kennedy, March 9, 1994 regarding female C. of E. priests.

AD1995-Leonardo Dicaprio, the Hollywood movie star, admitted he was a Freemason in an interview with the German television network RTL. When the interviewer asked whether or not Leo had to pay dues or what did he do, the star got upset and ended the interview.

The RTL network had a psychiatrist study Leo's reaction and determined that he was under great emotional and psychological pressure, attributed to the "blood oaths" that were allegedly taken during his initiation. Cinematic proof of his initiation can be found in the 1995 movie he starred in called "Total Eclipse," A film portraying the true story of 19th century French poets, Arthur Rimbaud and Paul Verlaine.

The "Gay" sub-plot of "Total Eclipse" was an alleged intentional cover up for Leonardo's acceptance into the Masonic Order. Born on November 11th, 1974, he would have been almost 21 years of age in 1995 at the time the film was shot, twenty-one being the required age for a man to become a Mason. The film was released on November 3rd 1995, in the U.S., eight days before Leo's 21st birthday, with key scenes within the movie showing Leo's rehearsal for going through the first three degrees of Freemasonry. For further information regarding the symbols used in Masonry read Captain William Morgan's "Illustrations of Masonry," published in 1830.

AD1995- The Southern Baptists, a denomination founded on the Biblical right to own slaves apologizes in June 1995 for their pro-slavery, pro-racist, pro-segregationist past. Measured from the date Southern Baptists began waving their Christian banner for slavery, 1845, to the date they apologized, 1995, it took them longer to apologize for supporting slavery than it took the white South African government to apologize for their segregation policy known as apartheid.

It took the Baptists longer to apologize for the abuse of black men than it took the Japanese Emperor to apologize to the Asian nations who suffered at the hands of Japan during World War II. It took the Baptists longer to apologize than it took the U.S. government to apologize to the 120,000 Japanese-Americans sent to prison camps during World War II.

It took the Baptists longer to apologize than it took the U.S. government to apologize to the native Hawaiians whose government was forcibly overthrown in 1893.

It took the Baptists longer to apologize than it took an Israeli president to shake hands with the head of the Palestinian Liberation Organization. Religious beliefs are tough and slow to change, but a transformation in the right direction has been made in recognizing men [all men] as having rights.

"In the South, there were standard and much quoted texts on Negro inferiority, patriarchal and Mosaic acceptance of servitude, and of course Saint Paul on obedience to Masters. In the events which led up to the War, both North and South hurled texts at each other. Revivalism and the evangelical movement generally played into the hands of extremists on both sides. When the war actually came, the Presbyterians, from North and South, tried to hold together by suppressing all discussion of the issue; but they split in the end...Only the Lutherans, the Episcopals, and the Catholics successfully avoided public debates and voting splits; but the evidence shows that they too were fundamentally divided on a basic issue of Christian principle." ~J. W. Silver, Confederate Morale and Church Propaganda.

The Southern Clergymen were responsible for prolonging the Civil War and increasing the futile struggle in support of the right to own slaves. Both North and South claimed vast numbers of 'Conversions' among their troops and a tremendous increase in churchgoing and 'Prayerfulness' as a result of the fighting. "Other products of the Civil War that clergymen are not as boastful about include a tremendous outbreak of syphilis and gonorrhea among Northern and Southern troops, as well as diarrhea, the diseases of which killed more soldiers than were killed in battle." ~Buick Davis, The Civil War: Strange and Fascinating Facts (New York: Wing Books, 1960), formerly published under the title, Our Incredible Civil War, chapter 26, Sex in the Civil War. See also, Richard Zacks, History Laid Bare: Love, Sex and Perversity From the Ancient Etruscans to Warren G. Harding (New York: Harper Perennial, 1995), "The Sexual Side of the Civil War, 1862-1867," pp. 350-55. On deaths due to diarrhea, see Kenneth C. Davis, pp. 231-32, "Civil War Religion," Civil War History, 6 (1960).

AD1996- Bishop Fabian Bruskewitz, of Lincoln Nebraska, issues a decree declaring "Contumacious Persistence" in membership in several specific liberal Catholic organizations, including Freemasonry, will result in excommunication from the Roman Catholic church for members of the Lincoln Diocese. The Church does not respond, hence, this decree is not valid in the forty-nine other states in America.

AD1996- Pope John Paul II issues a statement declaring James [Matthew 13:55-60, and Mark 6:3] is NOT a brother of Jesus and that Jesus is the only child of Mary. On October 24th 1996, Pope John Paul II releases a statement to the Pontifical Academy of Sciences supporting the theory that man developed through the gradual process of evolution. Without mentioning the name of Charles Darwin, the Pope states, "...Fresh knowledge leads to recognition of the theory of evolution as more than just a hypothesis."

"I think the whole narrative in [Gospel of] Mark is a secondary explanation... The account of the proceedings before the Sanhedrin in Mark 14:55-64 must be reckoned as a faith legend." ~Bultmann.

Pope John Paul II is extremely diligent in not removing God from the creation process by further stipulating, "...If the human body has its origin in living material which preexists it, the spiritual soul is immediately created by God." The Pope's statement revises the 46-year-old Papal position of extreme skepticism concerning evolution.

In 1950, Pope Pius XII had issued a letter entitled 'Humani Generis' in which he argued that evolution is not wrong to believe in.

"... Evolutionary theory is not in itself necessarily wrong, however it provides a weapon with which atheists and Communists can attack the idea of God's role in Creation." ~Pope Pius XII, 1950.

AD 1996-April 23rd, Rev. Jesse Jackson, always eager for publicity, and two associate pastors [Riley & Goode], along with seven members of Westwood Hill Baptist Church, Virginia, destroy the gravestone at the memorial garden of Arthur Sedrick Ward, a Mason, teacher, and loving father. Rumors had spread by a local church member that evil spirits dwelled in the cemetery-plot where the honorable Mr. Ward was buried, and the Rev. Jackson proceeds without the permission of the deceased's family to destroy the plot. Ignorance and Prejudice still shows its dreadful control in the twentieth century.

AD 1996-On the massacre of thousands of people in Rwanda, as reported in Aktuell, Germany on October 10th admits the culpability of Catholics in Africa.

"Anglican as well as Catholic priests and nuns are suspect of having actively participated in murders. Especially the conduct of a certain Catholic priest has been occupying the public mind in Rwanda's capital Kigali for months. He was minister of the 'Church of the Holy Family,' and allegedly murdered Tutsis in the most brutal manner. He is reported to have accompanied marauding Hutu militia with a gun in his cowl." ~BBC News April 19, 1998.

"In fact there has been a bloody slaughter of Tutsis seeking shelter in his [Catholic] parish. Even two years after the massacres many Catholics refuse to set foot on the threshold of their church, because to them the participation of a certain part of the clergy in the slaughter is well established. There is almost no church in Rwanda that has not seen refugees, women, children, and the old being brutally butchered facing the crucifix. According to eyewitnesses clergymen gave away hiding Tutsis and turned them over to the machetes of the Hutu militia. In connection with these events again and again two Benedictine nuns are mentioned, both fled into a Belgian monastery in the meantime to avoid prosecution."

"According to survivors one of them called the Hutu killers and led them to several thousand people who had sought shelter in her monastery. By force the doomed were driven out of the churchyard and were murdered in the presence of the nun right in front of the gate. The other one is also reported to have directly cooperated with the murderers of the Hutu militia. In her case again witnesses report that she watched the slaughtering of people in cold blood and without showing response. She is even accused of having procured some petrol used by the killers to set on fire and burn their victims alive..." Pope John Paul condemns the actions of the clergy in 1994 and in 1998 the facts are later substantiated by the BBC when it airs: "Priests get death sentence for Rwandan genocide!" —As reported on the BBC NEWS April 19, 1998.

Few Americans are aware of this 20th century atrocity, which the Catholic Church covered up, "Sister Maria Kisito, who received 12 years, and her Mother Superior, Sister Gertrude, who received 15 years, were convicted of aiding in the slaughter of some 7,000 people who sought refuge at their convent in southern Rwanda. Prosecutors argued that they called in Hutu militiamen to drive people out of the convent knowing they would be killed, and later provided gasoline that militiamen used to set fire to a garage in which about 500 Tutsis had taken refuge." ~Washington Post, June 9, 2001.

AD 1997-September 26th, President Boris Yeltsin of Russia declares the state religion to be Russian Orthodox and places restrictions on all religious groups that have not established themselves within the last fifteen years thereby making the only other recognized religions Jewish and Muslim.

AD 1997-"The Sunday Times," of December 14th, Pope John Paul II asks a contingent of astronomers to find the "Fingerprints of God" amid the chaos of the cosmos, writes Jonathan Leake. The Vatican is jointly constructing an astronomical observatory on Earth to help search for other planets and star systems capable of supporting life.

Located at Mount Graham in Arizona, it will consist of two telescopes designed for astronomical survey work having the ability to pick out the clouds of dust and gas that can give rise to planetary systems. The most ambitious astronomical project in the Catholic Church's history, the Vatican, and its Jesuit partners, will invest at least £3 million pounds in an infrared telescope to search space in tandem with a £2 million optical system [The Jesuits convinced the Pope to contribute the money].

AD1997-Religion gone wrong. The 'Heaven's Gate' suicides occur between March 24th and March 26th [39 deaths], during a window of time that the cultists had predicted a UFO trailing behind Comet Hale-Bopp would pick up their souls [they would graduate] and save them from the imminent Apocalypse.

The rumor started when an amateur astronomer, Chuck Shramek, mistook a star for what he thought was a "Saturn-Like Object" following the comet. With the assistance of the Internet and the Art Bell show, the false rumor that a UFO or asteroid was trailing the comet spread like wildfire. ~from Alnor pgs. 13, 38. Note: Male members of the cult underwent voluntary castration in preparation for their genderless life they believed awaited them after the suicide.

What is the Roman Church's views regarding 'Extra-Terrestrial Beings?' The "Yellow Book" page says this: "John Paul II and the Vatican were reportedly given a full briefing on our 'Alien' subject by the Reagan administration. It has been reported that members of the Vatican have attended 'Alien' landing and contacts at a designated safe site within Area 51 during the years 92, 94, 96, 97 and 98."

But Majestic apparently went beyond speculation, and enlisted the Catholic Church to actively aid its cause. In 'Annex B, point 15,' of the 'Majestic Twelve Project 1st Annual Report,' there is this entry: "At the request of Panel member, Cardinal Francis Spellman met with the President to discuss the containment within the Catholic Church and its hierarchy of religious speculation if mass sightings occur. Such containment was successful during the 1947 sightings when Cardinal Spellman met with the Secretary of War on 29 June. The President has been briefed on Defense Plan 4P, which was written in part by the Panel member."

AD1998-This is a good year for Doomsday predictions [666+666+666=1998]. Hon-Ming Chen, leader of a Taiwanese cult "God's Salvation Church," also known as "Chen Tao," or "The True Way," claims that God will come to Earth in a flying saucer at 10:00 am on 31 March. Chen chose to base his cult in Garland, Texas, because he thought it sounded like "God's Land."

God will have the same physical appearance as Chen himself, and on March 25, God is to appear on Channel 18 on every TV set in the US. ~from Shemer pg. 204, McIver #2199.

AD1998-End of the World: Author Marilyn J. Agee uses Biblical calculations to predict the dates of two Raptures in her book "The End of the Age," proclaiming, "I expect Rapture One on Pentecost Day [May 31] in 1998 and Rapture Two on the Feast of Trumpets [September 13] in the year 2007."

Given that 666 times three equals 1998, some Christian prophets see this as a prophetically significant year.

AD 1998-Eli Eshoh uses numerical games to illustrate that the Rapture is to take place this year. He explains the apparent failure of the June 6th Rapture by claiming that it did occur, but the number of raptees was so small it was not noticed.

Christianized South America, Brazil: Six people, including three children, are beaten to death by United Pentecostal Church of Brazil members who believe they are possessed by the Devil.

AD 1998-Larry Wilson of the "Wake Up America Seminars," predicts the Second Coming in "The Tribulation" is supposed to begin in 1994 or 1995, and during this period an asteroid will hit Earth. ~from Robbins p.220.

AD1998-End of the World: "Centro," a religious group in the Philippines, predicts the End of the World.

~from Ontario Consultants on Religious Tolerance.

AD1998-End of the World: The "Year of the Rapture," is claimed by Donald B. Orsden in his book, "The Holy Bible-The Final Testament: What is the Significance of 666?" ~from McIver #2986.

AD 1998-Jan 8th, thirty-one members of a splinter group of the "Solar Temple" cult led by a German psychologist, Heide Fittkau-Garthe, are arrested by police on the island of Tenerife, Canary Islands, accompanied by fears that the cultists were planning a mass suicide. They are convinced that the World will End at 8:00 pm on this day and the cult members' material bodies will be picked up by an alien space ship.

~from Hanna pg. 226 and FACTNet.

AD 1999-In August, the Archbishop of Canterbury causes a religious stir after raising doubts over the Resurrection of Christ. In his millennium message, Dr George Carey, leader of the world's 70 million Anglicans, tells the Mail on Sunday, "We cannot know Jesus was raised from the dead..."

"The story of the Roman soldiers falling asleep is too feeble and clumsy to merit serious refutation; and that the soldiers were bribed to say they slept is, if possible, more preposterous still. The penalty while doing sentry work would be death, and it requires a rather liberal bribe to induce a man to offer himself for instant execution. If there be any such bravo on record, I have not heard of him, and I cannot quite see what use the bribe for which he gave his life would be to him, even if he took it with him into his coffin." ~W. S. Ross, Did Jesus Christ Rise from the Dead? An Anthology of Atheism and Rationalism ed. Gordon Stein, Buffalo, NY: Prometheus, 1980, p.210.

One reason scholars like Archbishop Carey claim we cannot know Christ is because, to many scholars, the story of Jesus is not a factual portrayal of a historical master who walked the earth 2,000 years ago. "It is a myth built upon other myths and God Men, who in turn were personifications of the ubiquitous Sun God mythos," said Acharya in "Origins of Christianity."

"Scholars' efforts to eliminate Paganism from the Gospels in order to find a historical Jesus have proved as hopeless as searching for a core in an onion..."

In The Occult Christ, Ted Andrews said, "More than twenty claims exist concerning individuals invested with Divine Power to contest the verdict that Jesus Christ was the 'Only Son Sent of God.'" ~from the works of D. Christie Sinton Amoune.

On September 10, the year 5760, in the Jewish calendar began. Two hundred and forty years remain until the year 6000 i.e., until the "Seventh day" of Hebrew religious history, begins.

Among the Hindus, whose religion predates Christianity by up to two thousand years, Aletheia states that the concept of redemption and Resurrection was prevalent long before Christianity. "Krishna came upon earth to redeem man by his sufferings," Aletheia states. "He is represented hanging on a cross, the tradition being that he was nailed thereto by an arrow."

Long before Christ, Krishna is called the "Lord of Lords" and "The Redeemer," who, "Rose from the dead, and ascended bodily into Heaven so that all men saw him..." "Krishna, whose history so closely resembles our Lord's, was also like him in his being crucified." ~Dr. Inman, Ancient Faiths, vol. 1, p. 411.

This might explain why, when Pope John Paul II arrived to deliver a public mass in New Delhi in November of 1999, he is met with hostility. "It's bad timing." Hindu activist Raju told a New Delhi reporter Uli Schmetzer. "It's like the Caliph of Mecca coming to visit the Pope in Rome on Christmas Eve." Many Indians see Christianity as "Westernized Hinduism," hence, they see the Pope as a man who was trying to sell their own religion back to them.

AD 1999-According to an pamphlet on astrological occurrences circulating in India, the world is to meet its doom by a series of severe natural disasters on May 8th. This prediction causes many Indians to panic. ~from the BBC News.

Outer Dimensional Forces: Founded by the reclusive Orville T. Gordon, 90, the ODF believes that the United States is in for trouble. Gordon, or Nodrog as he is known, explained in an interview that the CIA attacked the Outer Dimensional Fores 20 years ago, and the group's Heavenly allies will flood the United States very soon, whisking the ODF faithful safely away from their fenced-off Texas compound. ~Apocalypse Really Soon: ABC news, Jan 5, 1999.

AD 1999- "The Head of God," by Dr. Keith Laidler puts forth the theory that the "Knights Templars," were practitioners of a cult of the head of Jesus. Dr. Laidler's theory claiming that Jesus Christ's head was severed after his crucifixion and literally fell into the hands of the Templars who venerated it as part of their cult. This head, Laidler claims is buried in the apprentice Pillar at Rosslyn Chapel in Scotland.

AD 1999- Archbishop Emmanuel Milingo, Tales of [his] miraculous cures from cancer, AIDS and other terminal illnesses abound in Italy. Thousands converge on his services to witness people, reputedly possessed with demons, writhing in agony on the floor while Milingo conducts his mass exorcism, dancing, singing and shouting. ~from the London Telegraph, 2/7/99.

Milingo, speaking of the Catholic Church, stated, "Now the third dimension [of evil] is the most dangerous. It is subtle and most terrible. . . I could not believe when I discovered this third dimension of evil. The third dimension is people who follow instructions in satanic sects. . ."

"Now with this third dimension, I'm sorry to say, our Church belongs to it. I'm very sorry, I could not understand myself, and even now I don't understand. But the only consolation I have is that, well, Judas Iscariot was one. Together with Jesus for three years, he never changed, then I understand that the third dimension of evil existed not only now, but it existed even then. Because nothing could change the heart of Judas Iscariot — nothing."

The case against biblical inerrancy is revealed by two incompatible stories of the demise of Judas Iscariot: Matthew 27:5-10, which itself also confuses Jeremiah 18:1-3 with Zecharia 11:12-13 vs. Acts 1:18-19.

Milingo, author of "Face to Face With the Devil," travels around the world preaching and healing. He has publicly accused fellow Catholic clergymen of harboring Satan's minions: "The Devil in the Catholic Church is so protected now that he is like an animal protected by the government; put on a game preserve that outlaws anyone, especially hunters, from trying to capture or kill it. The Devil within the Church today is actually protected by certain Church authorities from the official Devil-hunter in the Church, the exorcist. So much so that the exorcist today is forbidden to attack the Devil. The Devil is so protected that the one who is the hunter, the exorcist, is forbidden to do his job."

Statements like these understandably caused a furor in the Italian press, gaining front-page headlines. Three days after his speech Milingo gave a press conference to clarify his remarks, causing a second outburst of sensational media coverage.

To the question, "Are there men of the Curia who are followers of Satan?" the prelate replied, "Certainly there are priests and Bishops. I stop at this level of Ecclesiastical hierarchy because I am an Archbishop, higher than this I cannot go."

It should be noted that the only ranks higher than Archbishop in the Roman Catholic Church are those of the Cardinals and the Pope himself. Il Tempo and other major daily papers reported that Milingo used a statement by Pope Paul VI to back up his charges. In 1972, Paul surveyed the wreckage to the Church after the Second Vatican Council and was widely reported to have said, "From somewhere or other, the smoke of Satan has entered the temple of God." Milingo added, "I have not heard that anyone has seen him leave. We must pray that he will go away."

Nary a word of this made it into the American media, until it was reported in the Winter 1997 issue of The Fatima Crusader, a conservative pro-Marian Catholic newsletter associated with the group that sponsored the Fatima 2000 Congress.

The story was picked up by William F. Jasper and reported in The New American, the organ of the John Birch Society, a right-wing political group, in the issue of March 3, 1997. Milingo's remarks have been strangely ignored by the American press. "The New American" claimed that a Lexis/Nexis data search found not a single mention of his Fatima 2000 Congress statements, and were informed by an Associated Press researcher that Milingo was considered "A big old mouth" that was always spouting "A lot of insanity," because of his outspoken opinions about such things as the existence of Satan and of miracles.

In The Fatima Crusader article, Malachi Martin, a scholar, Vatican insider, and best-selling author, said, "Archbishop Milingo is a good Bishop and his contention that there are Satanists in Rome is completely correct. Anybody who is acquainted with the state of affairs in the Vatican in the last 35 years is well aware that the prince of darkness has had and still has his surrogates in the court of St. Peter in Rome." He said more members of the clergy becoming aware of the situation, and that Archbishop Milingo was "merely like that actor in the movie Network, who got fed up and said, 'I'm not going to take it anymore.'"

AD 1999-Father Charles L. Moore appears on the Art Bell show on November 26th-27th in 1998, claiming he knows the "Third Secret of Fatima." According to Father Moore, the prophecy states that an asteroid will strike the earth on June 30th causing the End.

AD 1999-Nastrodamus aficionados can rest easy now. In his Quatrains, Nastrodamus claims the End of the World:

*"L'an mil neuf cens nonante neuf sept mois
Du ciel viendra un grand Roy deffraieur
Resusciter le grand Roy d'Angolmois
Avant apres Mars regner par bon heur."
"The year 1999, seven months,
From the sky will come a great King of Terror:
To bring back to life the great King of the Mongols,
Before and after Mars to reign by good luck."*

Quatrain X.72. It didn't happen. July passed, and the inevitable dates of postponement begin [extended to August 13th], and still no fulfillment, then the 30th of September 30, "sept mois," then the 10th of October, the end of the 7th month in the Hebrew calendar, and finally October 22, the end of the seventh month of the Zodiac. People are now saying the year of 1999 plus 7 months [i.e. July 2000].

Some say that the prophecy referred a meteor that exploded over New Zealand in early July and others say it was the total eclipse of August 11th.

AD 1999-'Jerusalem Post' – October 19th, 1999, Vatican to open their Holocaust archives. A joint commission of Jewish and Catholic scholars is to examine the Roman Catholic Church's "Secret Archives" to study the political activities of the Catholic Church during the Holocaust. Aimed at reducing decades of Jewish suspicions that Pope Pius XII, who headed the Church during World War II did not act forcefully enough to save the millions of Jews from Nazi genocide. The findings of this commission could affect the process of beatification of Pius XII.

Holocaust, attempting to distance their Holy Vatican Father from World War II involvement. But, like most wars, it, too, was a religious war. A war to rid the world of "heretics." The Chick tract, "Holocaust," describes Rome's basic plan to use Hitler, Mussolini and Franco to reestablish a Catholic dominated Europe as twenty million "Heretics" died in their bloody attempt.

When that failed, the Pope brazenly tried to claim that the blood on his skirts was from trying in vain to save the victims. But only highly placed Catholics in the U.S. government prevented the truth from coming out during the post-war hunt for war criminals as these intelligence memos reveal. Today, Rome has pulled in her once deadly talons and claims to represent herself to the world as a lovable and courageous defender of human rights.

The Nazis failed to gas and butcher all the heretics, failed to destroy all documentations of torture and inhumanity, failed to secure the support of the world leaders in their systematic genocide of a peaceful people, and now, her greatest supporter [the Holy Mother, the Church] is using saccharinistic effluence, ecumenical flypaper, to distance itself from what the world now has access to, the truth.

The truth prevails: Dr. George Carey Archbishop of Canterbury, on July 31 causes shock-waves after announcing in his millennium speech: "... We cannot ... Know [that] He (Jesus) was raised... From the dead." In the same speech the supreme Anglican Archbishop confesses that Christianity contributed to the Holocaust on the Jews, which played "A part in the victimization of the Jews in the Middle Ages and in Nazi Germany," and that Christianity, "Is a stumbling block" to peace in Northern Ireland.

The archbishop further added that Christianity "Contributed to the oppression of women, to policies of imperialism, slavery and the repression of free speech..." ~Reuters, July 31, 1999.

How many deaths can be attributed to the religion of the Prince of Peace? "Since the rise of Popery 50,000,000 people had been put to death in various ways for their religion by the end of the 19th century." ~Professor Arthur Noble

The former Sisters of Mercy nun, Nora Wall, 1948, nicknamed "Sister Anti-Christ," becomes the first woman in Ireland to ever receive a maximum life sentence for rape.

In response to a Vatican document on the Holocaust, "We Remember: A Reflection on the Shoah." Many in the Jewish community berate the document for failing to address the Vatican's "Official Silence" during the Holocaust and for its defense of the inaction of Pope Pius XII as French Bishops, had already apologized for their silence during the deportation of Jews, and German Bishops, and who stated the Church did not do enough to fight Nazism and their genocide program.

The committee is headed up by Seymour Reich, the new chairman of the International Jewish Committee for Inter-religious Consultations [IJCIC], and Cardinal Edward Cassidy, head of the Pontifical Commission on Religious Relations with the Jews.

The joint commission is to include three Catholic and three Jewish scholars. Jewish scholar, Prof. Robert Wistrich of the Hebrew University, has already stated that even before the commission meets, he has serious questions about whether it will be able to examine all of the relevant documents. Wistrich said it is unclear to him whether the commission will examine only the 11-volume work already published by the Vatican on the subject, or whether it will be allowed to examine all material contained in the "Closed Vatican Archives."

"The Holy See and World War II," an eleven volume work, the product of a Vatican study carried out in the 1980s by four Jesuit priests following the publication of "The Deputy," a 1963 play by Rolf Hochhuth, which portrayed Pope Pius XII as too fearful to publicly confront the Nazis and their crimes against humanity. Although the Vatican will not break its rule that records remain sealed for 75 years and will not open its archives to the general public, it will allow "Specific scholars" to examine "Specific records," as stated by Cardinal Cassidy.

Another observer of Jewish-Vatican affairs noted it is not just a question of what documents the Vatican allows the scholars to see, but also whether or not it will allow them to publish such documents. In the past, the observer said, the Vatican has refused to allow publication of sensitive documents.

American newspapers estimate that evangelist Billy Graham's Christian empire, which has over 10 million followers, grosses $100 million annually; money, which according to Scripture, is supposed to be raised to help the poor. Who's stealing from God? U.S. evangelist Pat Robertson's Christian empire, including his television station, diamond mine, and university, is worth $312 million. Finance author Avro Manhattan claims the Catholic Church in 1999, "Will have indirect or direct control over one third of all sources of wealth in Western society."

Church of the Final Testament Started in the early 1990's by a former Russian police sergeant named Sergei Torop who was dismissed from the force after he had a series of religious visions, the group holds particular fascination for former Communist Party members.

Torop, who took the name Vissarion, rejects prohibitions on suicide. He tells his followers he is Jesus Christ, and looks the part with flowing dark hair and wispy beard. Currently building a "City of the Sun" on Siberia's Mount Sukhaya, the Vissarionites are estimated to be the largest cult-like group in Russia with thousands of followers.

Russian politicians have recently warned that the Church members may commit mass suicide as the millennium approaches. ~Apocalypse Really Soon: ABC news, Jan 5, 1999; with special thanks to Stephen Willis and Todd Strandberg and Richard Landes.

Order of the Solar Temple; Since 1994, more than 74 members of the Order have committed suicide in Canada, Switzerland and France, leaving behind rumors of gunrunning in Australia and money laundering in Canada and Europe.

Whether the group is a cold-blooded hoax that milks its victims of their money and then disposes of them or a more genuine suicide cult remains unclear. The Order was founded in 1977 by Luc Jouret, then 30, a Belgian born in Zaire who believed he was a third reincarnation of Jesus Christ and that his daughter Emmanuelle, whom he said was immaculately conceived, was the cosmic child.

Although he killed himself, the Order continues to exist. The cult teaches that life is an illusion and after death followers will be reborn on a planet revolving around the dog star Sirius. ~Apocalypse Really Soon: ABC news, Jan 5, 1999.

Rev. Jerry Falwell, "In a speech about the concern people have over the new millennium, The Rev. Jerry Falwell said the Anti-Christ is probably alive today and is a male Jew. Falwell also told about 1,500 people at a conference in Kingsport, Tennessee, on Thursday that he believes the Second Coming of Christ probably will be within 10 years." ~Williamsburg, Va., Associated Press, January 15, 1999; Falwell: Antichrist May Be Alive.

AD 2000-Pope John Paul II states, "People must not attempt to impose their own truth on others." The Church ignores Masonry in accepting all faiths by condemning them. In his approach to reconciliation the Pope states that if a branch of Masonry is not set against the Church, the established government, or parochial education, then a Roman Catholic might become a Freemason.

A Canon Law against joining Freemasonry by the clergy remains. On March 12th 2000 the Pope makes a plea for the forgiveness of the sins of the Roman Catholic Church. A tremendous leap forward, inasmuch as the Church rarely admits doing wrong much less declaring to the world their centuries of having committed sins. A violent clash will break out in Rome between police and demonstrators protesting the Pope's meeting in the Vatican with the Austrian ultra-national Joerg Haider, who is anti-immigrant and who is known to have often praised the policies of the Nazis.

The Vatican also unsuccessfully tried to pressure the Italian government to cancel or postpone the weeklong gap pride festival, which Pope John Paul II called an affront to the Holy Year. Pope John Paul II also hoped to visit Russia and in the Apostolic Letter he issued he voiced disappointment that he was unable to repair the 1,000 year old schism with the Orthodox Church, with relations with other religions actually worsening after another key document was issued.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

The 'Lord Jesus Document' asserts the primacy of Catholicism over all other religions and claims that the salvation of man is only possible through the Catholic faith. Known for centuries [notorious] for blatant forgeries, the Roman Church, through Pope John Paul II, is still arrogant enough to demand that all faiths yield to his alleged supremacy, which angers not only the Orthodox Christians, but the Jews and Protestants as well. Pope John Paul's appeal to the world governments to cancel all Third World debt and pass a sweeping amnesty for prisoners was more or less also equally ignored.

The Pope would have the hard working tax payers in free countries support the despots who steal from the poor in their developing countries, after all, it's the rich who enjoy tyrannical regimes, not the poor, and the rich who will continue to enjoy the riches of the world's hard working Christians and non-Christians alike. A lot of Christians will stay awake waiting for Jesus [End of the World] during the well-known Y2K episode in 2000.

Evidently, only Christians who didn't bother to read the whole Bible struggled and failed in guessing these erroneous dates were insomniac, since Jesus said "No man knows the day or the hour" of His return... Not even the Son; but only the Father.

It's all about the money. The Great Pontiff, John Paul II apologizes to the Jews, but clings to the billions of dollars stolen by the Roman Church via the Nazis and secreted away in the Vatican bank in secret accounts, claiming diplomatic sovereignty and immunity, which releases the Pope from further discussion on the matter rather than bringing forth the truth. It is alleged that some of this money is used after WWII to help many Nazi criminals escape Europe and hide in South America [The Odessa File]. ~See: lawsuit, Alperin v. Vatican Bank, filed in November 1999 by Serb, Jewish, and Ukrainian Holocaust survivors against the Vatican Bank seeking return of Nazi loot from wartime Yugoslavia has run into an apparent Wall of Silence. Tom Easton and Jonathan Levy, who represent the 28 plaintiffs suing the Vatican Bank have asked a Federal Magistrate in San Francisco to order the Vatican Bank to divulge information about itself including its ownership.

On Christian love, "You say you're supposed to be nice to the Episcopalians and the Presbyterians and the Methodists and this, that, and the other thing. Nonsense! I don't have to be nice to the spirit of the Anti-Christ. I can love the people who hold false opinions but I don't have to be nice to them." ~Pat Robertson, 700 Club, January 14, 1991.

Christian logic: "Gandhi was a non-Christian his entire life; Jeffrey Dahmer [serial killer] allegedly become a Christian shortly before his murder in prison. Thus, according to traditional Christian doctrines, a very noble man burns in Hell forever, while one of the worst serial murderers ever known gets to enjoy Eternal Paradise. Do you really think that an omniscient God could not devise a better scheme of Divine justice than this?" ~Jeffery Jay Lowder.

Regarding the Jesus Document, a written letter from Jesus, "The historian Eusebius records a legend, which he himself firmly believes concerning a correspondence that took place between Our Lord and the local potentate [Abgar] at Edessa. Three documents relate to this correspondence: (1) The Letter of Abgar to Our Lord; (2) Our Lord's answer; (3) A picture of Our Lord, painted from life. This legend enjoyed a great popularity, both in the East, and in the West, during the Middle Ages. Our 'Lord's Letter' [Jesus Document] was copied on parchment, marble, and metal, and used as a talisman or an amulet." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 1, pg. 42.

A copy of an Epistle [allegedly] written by King Abgarus to Jesus, sent to him at Jerusalem by Ananias, the swift courier, "Abgarus, ruler Of Edessa, to Jesus the excellent Savior who has appeared in the country of Jerusalem, greeting. I have heard the reports of thee and of thy cures as performed by thee without medicines or herbs. For it is said that thou makest the blind to see and the lame to walk, that thou cleansest lepers and castest out impure spirits and demons, and that thou healest those afflicted with lingering disease, and raisest the dead. And having heard all these things concerning thee, I have concluded that one of two things must be true: either thou art God, and having come down from heaven thou doest these things, or else thou, who doest these things, art the Son of God. I have therefore written to thee to ask thee that thou wouldest take the trouble to come to me and heal the disease, which I have. For I have heard that the Jews are murmuring against thee and are plotting to injure thee. But I have a very small yet noble city, which is great enough for us both." ~Prolegomena: The Life and Writings of Eusebius of Caesarea: Testimonies of the Ancients Against Eusebius, Chapter XIII, Narrative Concerning the Prince of the Edessences.

The [alleged] response from Jesus to the ruler Abgarus by the courier Ananias, "Blessed art thou who hast believed in me without having seen me. For it is written concerning me, that they who have seen me will not believe in me, and that they who have not seen me will believe and be saved. But in regard to what thou hast written me, that I should come to thee, it is necessary for me to fulfill all things here for which I have been sent, and after I have fulfilled them thus to be taken up again to him that sent me. But after I have been taken up I will send to thee one of my disciples, that he may heal thy disease and give life to thee and thine." ~Prolegomena: The Life and Writings of Eusebius of Caesarea: Testimonies of the Ancients Against Eusebius, Chapter XIII, Narrative Concerning the Prince of the Edessenes

But it is not accurate that pious Eusebius innocently believed that these forgeries were genuine, for they were all shamelessly forged by the virtuous Bishop Eusebius himself, "Who vouches that he himself translated it from the Syriac documents in the archives of Edessa." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 1, pg. 610.

The Church says these documents were, "Accepted by Eusebius without hesitation, and used by Addison in his work on Christian Evidences as genuine." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 6, 217.

Saint Jerome says of Eusebius and the other conceivers of religious truth he again says, that they "Presume at the price of their soul to assert dogmatically whatever first comes into their head." ~Saint Jerome, Epist. li, 7; id. p. 88.

"While the Godhead of our Savior and Lord Jesus Christ was proclaimed among all men by reason of the astonishing mighty-works which He wrought, and myriads, even from countries remote from the land of Judaea, who were afflicted with sicknesses and diseases of every kind, were coming to him in the hope of being healed, King Abgar sent him a letter asking Him to come and heal him of his disease. But our Savior at the time he asked Him did not comply with his request. Yet He deigned to give him a letter in reply. ...Thou hast in writing the evidence of these things, which is taken from the Book of Records which was at Edessa; for at that time the Kingdom was still standing. In the documents, then, which were there, in which was contained whatever was done by those of old down to the time of Abgar, these things are also found preserved down to the present hour. There is, however, nothing to prevent our hearing the very letters themselves, which have been taken by us from the archives, and are in words to this effect, translated from Aramaic into Greek."

"These things were done in the year 340. In order, moreover that these things may not have been translated to no purpose word for word from the Aramaic into Greek, they are placed in their order of time here. Here endeth the first book." ~Historical Encyclopedia, vol. 1, 13; Ante-Nicene Fathers, vii, 651-653.

With respect to the other testimonial letters, it is recorded that, "Abgar had not yet received answers to these letters when he died, having reigned thirty-eight years." ~Ante-Nicene Fathers, vol. 7, pp. 657-741, 706.

The pious conjurations of the Fathers forged another official Letter, in the name of what the Church calls "A fictitious person," in one Lentulus, the created pretended predecessor of Pilate as governor of Judaea, to the Roman Senate, giving a description of the personal appearance of Jesus Christ, and closing with the words, "He is the most beautiful of the sons of men."

This letter, says the Catholic authority, "Was certainly Apocryphal [a lie, or mythological]," as it was first printed in the Life of Christ, by Ludolph the Christian; though it is thought to be traceable to the time of Diocletian. ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 9, 154.

Eusebius himself fraudulently "Subscribed to the [Trinitarian] Creed formed by the Council of Nicaea, but making no secret, in the letter which he wrote to his own Church, of the non-natural sense in which he accepted it." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. v, 619.

Saint Jerome says, "Eusebius is the most open champion of the Arian heresy," which denies the Trinity. ~Saint Jerome, Ecclesiastical History, vol. viii, 2; Nicene & Post-Nicene Fathers, vol. i, 323-324.

Jesus Christ is declared by Saint Cyril of Alexandria, an Early Father of the Church, to have been "The ugliest of the sons of men," a tradition also declared by Fathers Justin Martyr and Tertullian; to offset, which evil notion there was forged "A beautiful Letter, purporting to have been written by Lentulus to the Roman Senate." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 6, 235.

Yet, Saint Augustine, "Mentions that in his time there was no authentic portrait of Christ, and that the type of features was still undetermined, so that we have absolutely no knowledge of His appearance." ~De Trinitate, lib. vii, ch. 4.5; CE, vi, 211, n.

So gross and flagrant is the clerical habit of pious lies and pretenses "To The Glory of God," that Saint Augustine [about 395 A.D.], wrote a admonitory treatise to the Clergy called 'De Mendacio,' [On Lying], which he found necessary to supplement in 420 C.E., with another book, 'Contra Mendacium,' [Against Lying].

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

It took three years of negotiating and politicking with the other members of this massive religious group before the Pope could come forward with his statement and few people are comprehensive of what he has done. Pope John Paul II has not come to grips with the massive mind control tactics which were used by this great institution and which did not always act on behalf of the congregation or the betterment of its members. It takes a great man to admit a mistake and a greater man to admit the mistakes of his faith. He meets and confers with the main religious clerics of this time and admits the errors of the Church and seeks to make amends through making this a better world for all people to live in peace and harmony regardless of cultural class, religion, or economic status, yet he still adheres to concealing facts, which affected the lives of millions of unfortunate souls.

November 28, 2000 [from Reuters], The Vatican's bank has asked a U.S. court to throw out a lawsuit charging it with laundering gold [money laundering] and other assets stolen by a Nazi puppet regime, arguing that the Vatican has immunity because it is an independent state, a claim which does not denounce the fact that the Church has laundered money, and has the ill gotten money sequestered from the Jews in secret numbered accounts.

"A lawsuit, Alperin v. Vatican Bank, filed in November 1999 by Serb, Jewish, and Ukrainian Holocaust survivors against the Vatican Bank seeking return of Nazi loot from wartime Yugoslavia has run into an apparent "Wall of Silence." Tom Easton and Jonathan Levy, who represent the 28 plaintiffs suing the Vatican Bank have asked a Federal Magistrate in San Francisco to order the Vatican Bank to divulge information about itself including its ownership."

"Easton and Levy have stated that a veil of secrecy surrounds the operation of the Vatican Bank also known as the Institute for Religious Works. The plaintiffs' attorneys say that literature suggests the reigning Pope in his personal capacity owns the Vatican Bank. According to Jonathan Levy, the question of ownership of the Vatican Bank is the threshold issue in the case, "There may be certain defenses available to the bank if it is owned by the Vatican City state but if it is owned by an individual or individuals the situation is completely different."

"The Vatican Bank however has refused to provide information about its ownership claiming in legal papers filed yesterday in San Francisco that plaintiffs' request is burdensome, premature, and in the public domain. The plaintiffs' attorneys and expert witnesses however claim information about the Vatican Bank's ownership is a closely guarded secret. "If the information is out there, and so easily accessible, why don't they just produce it?" counters Easton and Levy, "We've researched this issue for over year and have yet to find a definitive answer. We would like to know just who we are dealing with here."

"The concentration camp survivors bringing the lawsuit, some of whom are in their eighties, hope the answers to the Vatican Bank's ownership are forthcoming soon so the lawsuit may proceed." The Pope has attempted to open his heart and his faith for all to see and he insinuates that he hides nothing for the world to condemn him for. I believe he can serve as a shining example to be emulated by all religious groups who profess to believe in God and the forgiveness of others if he follows through with his claims.

I am not condoning what happened in the past, however it takes a great man to admit publicly the wrongs committed by his Church and hopefully within his lifetime the Pope will also open up the financial records of the Church and the names of those who were accessories to the flight of so many criminals after the war so that the relatives of the Jews, gypsies, and Serbs who suffered great losses during World War II can claim the monies due them.

If Pope John Paul II does not, then he will only continue to perpetuate the wrongs of the Church to which he himself declared to reveal and ask forgiveness from the world. Will the Pope be a true leader we can look up to and emulate? Father Luciano Guerra, the chief custodian of the Fatima Shrine [The Shrine to the Virgin Mary at Fatima in Portugal], confirms reports in the Portuguese magazine "Visao," that in 1942 the shrine had received 110 lbs. of looted gold ingots from Nazi Germany. He told Corriere della Sera that he had been "Unaware until recently" that the gold had been stolen from Jewish victims of the Nazis.

Antonio Louca, a Portuguese historian, claimed the ingots had been made from gold objects taken from Dutch Jews sent to Nazi camps. Father Guerra said the gold had "Disappeared" in 1970, before he took charge of the Shrine, and had gone to "An unknown destination."

Jewish leaders have repeatedly called on the Vatican to open up its archives to prove or disprove these claims and to allow scholars to explore allegations that Pope Pius XII ignored the Nazi atrocities. ~by Richard Owen, 6 April 2000.

As of this writing the Vatican still refuses to open its records and statements regarding their Nazi complicity during WWII and the Nazi gold and Nazi war crimes. According to the most recent estimates, the total amount of stolen assets and treasures transferred/stolen out of Croatia by the Ustashe at the end of the war was at least $250 million U.S. Based on conversion tables provided by the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics, this would translate into $2.325 Billion U.S. dollars in 1999.

"We make no charges against the Vatican, but we keep building a very damning picture," says Elan Steinberg, who is Executive Director of the World Jewish Congress. Easton and Levy, a law firm, have stated that a veil of secrecy surrounds the operation of the Vatican Bank, also known as the Institute for Religious Works [IOR].

The plaintiffs' attorneys state that literature suggests the reigning Pope in his personal capacity owns the Vatican Bank. According to Jonathan Levy, the question of ownership of the Vatican Bank is the threshold issue in the case, "There may be certain defenses available to the bank if it is owned by the Vatican City state but if it is owned by an individual or individuals the situation is completely different."

The Vatican Bank however has refused to provide information about its ownership claiming in legal papers filed yesterday in San Francisco that plaintiffs' request is burdensome, premature, and in the public domain. The plaintiffs' attorneys and expert witnesses however claim information about the Vatican Bank's ownership is a closely guarded secret. "If the information is out there, and so easily accessible, why don't they just produce it?" counters Easton and Levy, "We've researched this issue for over year and have yet to find a definitive answer. We would like to know just who we are dealing with here." ~In the Ottawa Citizen, published 10 Sept. 2000.

A report by the American State Department also accuses the British, whose troops were in the area at the time, of accepting stolen gold in return for the freedom of Ante Pavelic, who was the head of the Ustashe in the Nazi Fascist regime. After his arrest by the U.S. Army's 5th Corps in 1945, Mr. Pavelic is alleged to have handed over up to $3 million U.S. in gold coins [Only a small part of an estimated $50 million U.S. in Ustashe gold smuggled out of Croatia]. The British Foreign Office has denied any involvement with the Ustashe incident but insists that military intelligence records relating to Mr. Ante Pavelic can never be made public. ~This information was first published in the Ottawa Citizen on 10 September 2000 in an article by Tom Rhodes.

Based on an 1997 U.S. Department of State Report that the disappearance of finances and treasures implicating the Roman Catholic church [Vatican] and church officials a class action suit is filed by, "Two Ukrainian organizations, The Ukrainian Union of Nazi Victims and Prisoners and The Organization of Antifascist Resistance Fighters, representing over 300,000 Ukrainian World War II victims of Nazi and Fascist aggression announced the filing of a class action lawsuit alleging complicity in war crimes by the Vatican Bank and the Franciscan Order.

The lawsuit was filed on November 15, 1999 in the United States District Court in San Francisco, California. Case No. C 99-4941 MMC. "The Serbs were brutally liquidated in a state sponsored killing spree aimed at cleansing Croatia of adherents to Eastern Orthodox Christianity and the foundation of an ethnically pure, Roman Catholic state. Prime movers in this ethnic cleansing were militant Franciscan Monks, many of whom held military and civil commands in wartime Croatia." ~By Dr. Stein [stuart.stein@uwe.ac.uk].

As Tom Easton [of the law firm Easton and Levy] prepared to file the suit in San Francisco in November of 1999, numerous Serbs across the country are offering names of possible initial plaintiffs. Several offered up the name George Zivkovich of Barstow, California who was previously interviewed for a story about his life as an eight year-old inmate of the Jasenovac Concentration Camp in Croatia where the Holocaust claimed at least 500,000 Serbs, Jews and Gypsies liquidated. The commandant of the death camp at Jasenovac was a Franciscan monk by the name of Fr. Miroslav Filipovic.

The Catholic conspiracy to eradicate other faiths continues in the 20th century as according to 1948 testimony by Dr. Nikola Nikolic, a Croatian camp survivor, "In the four months Fr. Filipovic was commandant of the camp he put to death 40,000 Serbs, Jews and Gypsies, and was given the name 'Fra Sotona' (Brother Devil) by his victims." ~By William Dorich

Pope John Paul II reveals to the Christian congregation in 1994 that the Birth Of Jesus, did not occur on December 25th. The word, however, does not receive excessive world publicity as on 23 December 2000 in The Freeman Newspaper, in the Philippines, Brother Soc Fernandez, citing the Catholic Encyclopedia, claims that Saint Justin of Jerusalem [AD 120, martyr who believed that the relationship between man and woman is spiritual and not sexual]. Justin affirmed that Jesus' birth is December 25th [lack of adequate dissemination of information still plagues the Church].

However, little is known or said of the 6th century monk named Dionysius Exiguus [Denny the Dwarf] who is responsible for our present BC-AD system of dating: "...His mathematics was not as good as his piety." ~From the Catholic Encyclopedia. Alternative sources are recommended for a full picture [a more candid representation of history]

A need to claim a history and to hang on to old beliefs is an anathema to progress in one's religious pursuits if one seeks the truth. The Roman Catholic Church's revealing the Truth has been a slow and painful process. Slowly but surely within the next century the Church will be forced to reveal the full Truth of the true teachings of Jesus. With Information Technology fast becoming more readily available to the layperson it is already becoming an easy tool for the discovery of Truth.

The revelations that will be revealed in the near future regarding the secrets of the Bible will astonish and astound many believers of the New Testament. I foresee a transformation from the old archaic thinking to a new more philosophical perspective on how man perceives God and religion in the future. I foresee a momentous change in the Church. I foresee the Catholic Church undergoing a significant change and its survivability wholly dependent on how and when it initiates this change.

I also foresee a major change in the all ministries of Christian Doctrine throughout the world. Hopefully this change, will be far-reaching, and done in a peaceful manner, as it is a necessity for the betterment of mankind and the survival of Christian religions, as we know them today. What could be so devastating to religions in the near future?

The Truth, the Truth that has for centuries eluded the greatest minds of this world due to the deliberate eradication of sacred documents, manuscripts, and revered books that some religious institutions have for centuries refused to let their members read, Truth concealed and hidden from the public in obscure libraries all over the world, Truth that ministers know but fail to reveal to their congregations regarding the teachings of Jesus. "To such an extent are the origins of the Christian Religion wrapped in obscurity, due to the labyrinthine confusions, contradictions and forgeries of its early records, that it is quite impossible to extricate, with any degree of confidence, a thread of historic truth from the tangle..." ~Jesus of the Essenses.

Truth that has been kept from the Christian community for the betterment of the institutions and not its congregation will reveal itself. Who will be the religious leaders of tomorrow? Those who profess Religious Doctrines of mental reservation or equivocation or perhaps circumlocutions to conceal and distort the truth?

In one particular case a priest claimed he did not really have sex with a young girl, it was only a "Reserved embrace," because he never attained orgasm. The various religious groups have developed a technical theological vocabulary in order to further their cause [In Res Turpis is the term used by the Church for sexual abuse]. Or will the "New Religious Order" be those who will perpetuate religious falsehoods to increase their financial status?

In one case a respected priest claimed he did not really have sex with a young girl, and that it was only a "Reserved embrace" since he never attained an orgasm. "In res turpis" is the general term for sexual abuse, and there is even rumored that a book exists which defines such terms, what they actually mean, and how they are to be used within the Church. Many religious institutions are more concerned in concealing the truth than protecting the honor and souls of their flocks. Even the Catholic Church's public records [Official Catholic Directory] are not always honest. Published annually, the OCD provides data on the 50,000 or so clergy in the United States.

Those who have committed crimes against the Church or society are often said to be "On leave," "Inactive," or "On assignment outside the diocese." Access to this book is often denied to the public. Priests are also bound under the "Seal of confession," not to reveal what has been told to them. In the allegation of former Archbishop Sanchez, it was made public that the "Forcible rape of a child," is far less a sin for a priest to commit than breaking the “seal of confession,” by reporting it to religious superiors. [The public, however, is bound by civil and criminal law to report child abuse].

The Church can forgive anyone for murder, rape, or any other heinous crime, and is then bound to keep it secret [forever]. The Church is not immune to shredding or destroying evidence to perpetuate its existence and jealously guards its secret documents to maintain the “Faith” for its members. Witness the centuries of documents lost, misplaced, or destroyed regarding the Inquisitions and the tortures perpetrated upon thousand of innocents in the spread of Catholicism.

Today, even the notary must be a priest if it involves the reputation of another priest, Canon 483 Paragraph 2. One may not enter without either the bishop's or the both the chancellor and vicar's permission. Persons concerned [i.e., accused priests, not their accusers] have the right to receive copies of documents “which are of their own nature public and which concern their own personal status.”

But it is not permitted to remove any document except for a short time, Canon 486-8. In addition, there is also intended to be an historical archive, Canon 491 §2. For the good of the Church the Church mandates that “Each year, documents of criminal cases concerning moral matters are to be destroyed whenever the guilty parties have died, or ten years have elapse since a condemnatory sentence concluded the affair. A short summary of the facts is to be kept, together with the text of the definitive judgment.” ~Canon 489.

One lawyer who handles many cases against the clergy stated that sometimes the Church will produce documents they claim are from the “Secret Archives,” other times denying that such archives exist. This is a travesty of not only justice but of a religion that claims to profess the teachings of a man who represents truth and equality. Do we expect more from our teachers than we do from our religious leaders. Since only clerics have access, one would have to take their word for it. In many cases, their claims are not to be believed, and the documents produced are usually worthless.

Remember that no priestly predator has ever been excommunicated. As a last resort the Vatican can request the records be as safe as the Pope and Curia can possibly make them, buried deep within the entrails of the Vatican Secret Archives [The Holy See is a recognized Sovereign State, and is under no legal obligation to produce records for anyone]. The Egyptian tomb inscriptions, for several thousand years insisted on justice and a hereafter for those who led a good life in this material world towards that end.

The modern struggle for social justice grew with the spread of skepticism and had, considering the relative proportion of skeptics and Christians until less than a century ago, a remarkable number of skeptical leaders.

It will, before long, be recognized as a platitude of history that the period, AD 450-1850, was one of deep injustice between the old Pagan order and the new Christian regime. Positivists and other non-Christians, who insist that the preaching of justice by so powerful an organization as the Church must have promoted it in a high degree, rarely evince a close study of the question whether in fact it did. One needs little reflection to see where the preaching of justice fails as long as you leave it to your hearers to say what is or is not just, especially when the preacher belongs to the class, which would, on a strict application of justice, have to give rather than receive.

Abstaining from paying taxes by supporting tyrannical regimes, which support their exemptions has been the norm and not the exclusion of the Catholics. Pope Gregory I, the greatest slave owner in Europe, was as eloquent about speaking of justice as the anti-Semite Martin Luther was exhorting the nobles to shoot down the rebellious peasants “Like mad dogs.” Pope Leo XIII, vaguely demanding a “just wage” for the workers and refusing to define it when asked to do so.

There are no human rights in Christianity, “It is quite unlawful to demand, defend, or to grant unconditional freedom of thought, or speech, of writing or worship, as if these were so many rights given by nature to man.” ~Pope Leo XIII, Great Encyclical Letters, 16.

Pope Leo XIII in 1902 recanted his “Charter,” and ordered Catholic workers to quit talking about the rights of Labor! Pope Leo talks just as fervently about justice as did the English Bishops who opposed the Reform Bill or education, or the Catholic Bishops who blessed the vile persecutions of democrats in Spain and Italy in the last century and unctuously blessed Fascism in our time. Our pragmatic age is more interested in facts; and they make a mockery of their preaching and espousal of justice. ~from the works of J. McCabe, Rationalists Encyclopedia-A frank and straightforward representation of Catholicism and its historical impact upon civilizations worldwide.

End of the World: The Church of Latter Day Saints [Mormons] "I know these are unpleasant things. It is not a pleasant thing even for me to stand here and tell you that this is written in the Scriptures. If the Lord has a controversy with the nations, He will put them to the sword. Their bodies shall lie unburied like dung upon the earth. That is not nice, is it, but should we not know it? Is it not our duty to read these things and understand them? Don't you think the Lord has given us these things that we might know and we might prepare ourselves through humility, through repentance, through faith, that we might escape from these dreadful conditions that are portrayed by these ancient prophets? That is why I am reading them. I feel just as keenly as you do about the condition, and I pray for it to come to an end, but I want it to come to an end right... So I pray every day of my life that the Lord will hasten His work; and while all this has to take place, I hope He will hasten it, that it may soon come to an end, that peace may come; and so I repeat, as I said in one of the talks some time ago, I am praying for the end of the world because I want a better world. I want the coming of Christ. I want the reign of peace. I want the time to come when every man can live in peace and in the spirit of faith, humility and prayer." ~President Joseph Fielding Smith, Signs of the Times, pg. 154-155, 175.

The lawsuit, filed in the U.S. District Court in San Francisco, seeks restitution of several hundred millions of dollars in looted property and assets taken in World War II Croatia by the clerical-fascist Croatian Nazi regime, which the suit charges was subsequently deposited in the Vatican Bank and other institutions."*

Pope John Paul II has refused to reveal the names of any of the Board Members or return any monies ill gotten from WWII. "The original lawsuit was filed by U.S. attorneys Tom Easton and Jonathan Levy on 15 November 1999 in the San Francisco U.S. District Court on behalf of four Jewish and Ukrainian Holocaust victims. On 21 January 2000 the class action lawsuit was amended and re-filed to include the Jasenovac Research Institute, a non-profit organization committed to the study of the Holocaust in Yugoslavia, and three additional individuals as class-representative plaintiffs: Vladimir Brodich, a Serbian-American currently living in Arizona, whose family was dispossessed and murdered in wartime Croatia; William Dorich, a Serbian-American living in California who lost seventeen members of his family in the town of Vojnic; and Igor Najfeld, a Yugoslav Jew currently living in Vermont but born in wartime Croatia. Dr. Najfeld's family's business and property was stolen by the Croatian State authorities and fifty-six members of the Najfeld's family were slaughtered in the Croatian death-camp complex known as Jasenovac."

"Following the Nazi invasion and dismemberment of Yugoslavia in April 1941, the independent State of Croatia was established as a clerical-fascist state under the rule of the Croatian fascist party, the Ustashe. Some 700,000 Serbs, Jews, Romas and other anti-fascists were killed in the Jasenovac death-camp complex, while many, more were killed in smaller camps or in local massacres. While the Ustashe regime set about to racially exterminate all Serbs, Jews and Romas living within its borders, it also carried out a systematic policy of plundering the assets of these three nationalities. These looted assets, the property of millions of people, were never recovered. The bulk of it was smuggled out of Croatia at the end of the war to the Vatican, and from there, to still other destinations."

"There is no statute of limitations for claims against these crimes. There are two reasons for this: the 1968 international convention regarding the non-applicability of statutes of limitation for war crimes, and the concealment of vital information regarding the culpability of the accused parties in these crimes."

Another law firm, Zimmerman and Reed of Minneapolis, has filed a similar lawsuit seeking restitution for Holocaust victims from Yugoslavia on 27 January 2000. It is expected that still other law firms will join these two suits or file additional suits in the coming months. The JRI will offer its support to all such efforts and encourage others to do the same. The lawsuit, which the JRI has joined, is based on evidence contained in recently declassified government documents from the United States, Britain and Argentina. Several of the declassified U.S. military intelligence reports obtained by the JRI clearly state that the majority of these looted assets were deposited in the Vatican 'For safe-keeping.'"

The June 1998 U.S. State Department 'Supplement' to its 1997 Report on 'Nazi Gold' contains a crucial chapter documenting the Vatican's role in the transfer of stolen assets entitled, "The Fate of the Wartime Ustasha Treasury."

"Still newer reports are to be released in the coming months, including one from Argentina expected to detail the transfer of millions of dollars in gold from the Vatican to Argentina as payment for the emigration of Croatian Ustashe and other Nazi war criminals."

"According to the most recent estimates, the total amount of stolen assets transferred out of Croatia by the Ustashe at the end of the war was at least $250 million. Based on conversion tables provided by the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics, this would now be worth $2.325 billion in December 1999 dollars. It is the position of the Jasenovac Research Institute that this entire amount plus interest must be paid to the remaining survivors and their heirs, and to the heirs of all victims of the Ustashe genocide. This amount would only be a partial accounting for the crimes of genocide committed in wartime Yugoslavia by the Ustashe and other fascist forces; however it would provide the initial foundations for better relations in the future for the peoples of the region. Several new plaintiffs have stepped forward since the re-filing to ask to be added to the suit. Among them is Eva Deutsch-Costabel, a Yugoslav Jew born in Zagreb and currently living in New York whose family's two businesses and home were stolen by the Ustashe regime and whose father was arrested and murdered. U.S. attorneys Easton and Levy are seeking additional plaintiffs for the case. To be added as a plaintiff to the lawsuit one needs to be either a survivor of the Ustashe regime or a relative or heir of a victim of Ustashe crimes."

"If you are such an individual and you wish to become a plaintiff, or if you have vital information regarding this case, you are encouraged to contact either the Jasenovac Research Institute or the law firm of Thomas Easton at 707-464-4513 or tomeaston@earthlink.net. The Jasenovac Research Institute urges everyone who is concerned with the search for justice for the victims of the Ustashe Holocaust to help us in our efforts to achieve a successful outcome of this historically important case." ~by jrjorg@aol.com

Over the past few years, the Vatican has recognized the financial and moral trauma caused by the exposures of its involvement in bank failures and has made attempts to repair the damage to its reputation and the credibility of the Vatican Bank {IOR}, culminating in the March 1st 1990, reform of the bank under the control of Pope John Paul II, which is part of his program of changes pertaining to papal finances.

However, refusal to make public documents of its past dealings with war criminals and Mafia underground figures involved in stolen Nazi gold, plundered treasures from WWII war victims, and laundering drug money has not reinforced the support it needs to regain credibility and respectability to show to the world its efforts to wash its hands of any clandestine affairs in the financial institutions.

AD2000-July, American Atheists, Tennessee State Director, Carletta Sims is challenging draft legislation, which would place the slogan "In God We Trust" on a new rendition of the state flag. House Bill 220, introduced by Rep. John Mark Windle, would amend the state code by adding the religious motto on a, "...Perpendicular bar of blue vertically, that is to say, from top to bottom of the flag or banner..." ~cf. I Timothy 6:10.

"It's just another effort to find a way to sneak religion onto public symbols, buildings and anything else identified with the power of government," said Ms. Sims. "This bill doesn't address any of the real problems in Tennessee like the environment, education or transportation. It's all about 'feelgood' religion and public posturing."

Sims adds, "It's inappropriate to embellish the flag – a government icon and symbol – with a phrase that threatens the principle of church/state separation."

Ms. Sims noted that the new flag would be placed in all government buildings and offices. The presence of "In God We Trust" and the inclusion of the "Under God" phrase in the Pledge of Allegiance are often cited by Christian conservatives as proof that this country was founded on Christian religious beliefs. The religious slogan, though, was not the original national motto.

It was Thomas Jefferson who suggested "E Pluribus Unum," "One out of many," and that phrase was officially adopted by the Founders, in 1782; five years before the constitutional convention of 1787, nearly a century later. "In God We Trust" was promoted as a replacement slogan, part of a larger effort to declare the United States officially a "Christian Nation."

The Rev. M.R. Watkinson persuading the Secretary of the Treasury in 1861 to introduce "In God We Trust" as a motto for the coinage, thus supporting his contention that "There is but one God" and that America was a Christian nation. Congress complied with the passage of the Coinage Act of April 22, 1864, and the words were ordered placed on coins "When and where sufficient space in the balance of the design" would permit.

In 1955, President Eisenhower, in the midst of a cold war-era crusade against "Godless Communism," signed Public Law 140, which ordered that the religious phrase be placed on all coinage and paper currency. The year before, Congress had unanimously ordered the inclusion of "Under God" in the nation's Pledge of Allegiance.

The practice of using government symbols and buildings to affirm religious belief continues today. In July of the year 2000, the U.S. House of Representatives approved a resolution encouraging display of the "In God We Trust" motto on public buildings. Similar measures have debated at the state and local level.

In August of last year, for instance, American Atheists Colorado State Director Margie Wait helped in an effort where the Jefferson County School District voted to not post the "In God We Trust" motto in classrooms, saying that to do so would violate the "Separation of Church and State." ~csims@atheist.s.org, or the web site of the Tennessee State Director at <http://www.atheists.org> or: <http://www.atheists.org/public.square/coins.html> "God on our Coins," extensive background on the religionized national slogan, including testimony of former American Atheist's President Jon G. Murray before the U.S. Congressional Committee Subcommittee on Consumer Affairs 9/14/88. cf. I Timothy 6:10.

AD 2000-2nd of September, Jewish religious leaders throughout the world voice their disapproval of the beatification of Pope Pius. Religious freedom, freedom of the press, and freethinking were not the high notes of Pius XI's reign [1846-78].

Pius XI, is admired because he introduced expert accountants into the Vatican, as at that time the attitude towards finance was so slovenly, graft ridden, and so general that although in recent decades the income has been hundreds of millions of dollars a year, the treasury was empty at the death of Pius X, and almost empty at the death of Benedict XV.

Admiration is hardly the sentiment with which in such circumstances we regard the action of Pius XI, but whatever improvement there has been the secrecy is still strictly maintained. It is, in fact, very doubtful if the Vatican draws up, even for the information of the Pope and the Secretary of State alone, a balance-sheet, which shows the total annual income. Is it no wonder that Christian third world countries reflect the savor of their religious beliefs and idols in graft ridden economies?

His Eminence, the Pope, was at no loss to infuse brutal force when he felt it served the purpose of maintaining his power in the Vatican [see AD 1846 and the Evil Eye] John McLeod, of the Herald [United Kingdom] says of the beatification of Pope Pius IX, "...Pope Pius IX was beatified. This scarcely affects the late Supreme Pontiff, who died, after all, in AD 1878, but it does mean he is now, officially, Blessed Pius IX, and in a decade or four is likely to be declared a Saint. The choice of [Pope] Pius IX for this dubious honor has excited widespread incredulity and derision. Pio Nono Giovanni Maria Mastai-Ferretti, was one of the nastiest men ever to be Pope. Within four years of accession, in AD 1846, he had lost most of the Papal territories, and was exiled for a time to Gaeta. There he made ringing denunciation against the 'outrageous treason of democracy', and in AD 1868 even forbade Italian Catholics to vote. The standing of the Catholic Church in Italy has never recovered." Democracy was not Pio Nono's thing."

In 1864, the Pope issues his infamous "Syllabus of Errors." Eighty were cited: they included socialism, democracy, liberty of conscience, freedom of the press, Freemasonry and rationalism.

The Syllabus of Errors has never been abolished: the Rome of Pope Pius IX was chillingly described to William Gladstone by a correspondent: "There is not a breath of liberty, not a hope of tranquil life: two foreign armies: a permanent state of siege, atrocious acts of revenge, factions raging, universal discontent: such is the papal government of the present day." Concluding his Syllabus, Pope Pius IX charmingly declared it a great error to say that the "Roman Pontiff can and should reconcile himself with progress, liberalism, and modern civilization."

Pope Pius IX will mark freedom of the press and freedom of association as intrinsically evil and the Catholic hierarchy will never accept the concept of freedom of the press, although throughout the lands, such as the Philippines, they will help celebrate an event they deny even to their own members [via the Forbidden Index]. "All countries censored books; Protestant authorities labored to keep 'Papist' works from the eyes of the faithful... In the Catholic world, with the trend toward centralization under the Pope, a special importance attached to the list published by the Bishop of Rome, the Papal Index of Prohibited Books. Only with special permission, granted to reliable persons for special study, could Catholics read books listed on the Index, on which most of the significant works written in Europe since the Reformation have been included." ~R.R. Palmer, A History of the Modern World, p. 90.

"In AD 1869, Pio Nono convened the Vatican Council, determined to concrete his ultra-montanism. This Council, if memory serves, promulgated the Doctrine of the Immaculate Conception, the unbiblical tenet that the Virgin Mary was, like Christ, entirely sinless. Rather more important to Pius IX was the decree of "Papal Infallibility," passed in 1870. The Pope has henceforth been held infallible when he pronounces, ex cathedra, on a matter of faith or morals... Such definitions of the Roman Pontiff are irreformable of themselves, and not from the consent of the Church."

"The result of this was only a tide of exasperated and, at times, oppressive anti-Romanism across Europe. It is his anti-Semitism, though, which has left the name of this man to rot. Pope Pius IX revived Rome's ghetto, and forced the city's Jews to live in it. Laws suppressed their education and their employment. More shocking still, he connived in the kidnapping of a little Jewish boy, Edgardo Mortara, seized by the papal police in Bologna on the pretext that the child had been Baptized in extremis by a servant-girl. Edgardo was six years old. He was slammed in the House of Catechumens and forcibly instructed in the Roman faith. Pio Nono personally adopted him. The Mortaras begged in vain for his return. Granted an audience, they were told by the Pope himself that they could have their son back at once, if they converted to Roman Catholicism. The wretched Edgardo was confined to a monastery and eventually ordained priest: he died in AD 1940, allegedly insane. [Pope] Pius IX preceded him by many years, narrowly avoiding a last humiliation: as his coffin was borne to his tomb in Lorenzo, a furious mob tried to seize the Pope's remains and hurl them into the Tiber. The Papal cadaver was saved only by the swift intervention of the Italian militia."

Why does Pope John Paul II wish to honor such a man? Cynics suggest it is an attempt to appease ultra-conservative Catholics, otherwise incensed by the simultaneous beatification of Papa Roncalli, Pope John XXIII, who died in 1963, and whose Second Vatican Council, among other things, abolished the "Tridentine Latin Mass." Pope John XXIII remains a folk-hero in Italy and the celebration last Saturday swamped media criticism of John Paul's elevation of Pio Nono.

"Of the three Popes, John XXIII was the first victim; he fled and was brought back a prisoner; the most scandalous charges were suppressed; the Vicar of Christ was only accused of piracy, murder, rape, sodomy, and incest." ~Edward Gibbons, The Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire.

"The terror of the Ustaches in the Balkans was not the systematic extermination program of the Nazis, but the hideous butchery. Thousands were shot, or had their throats slashed, or were burned alive. In Bjevolar, in April 1941, 331 Orthodox believers were hacked to death with axes after being made to dig their own graves. Their priest's son was the second-last to die: the priest himself was skinned alive, after his hair and beard were torn off and his eyes gouged out. That same Sunday a pastoral letter from Archbishop Stepinac was read in all Catholic pulpits, calling on the clergy and flock to collaborate in the work of Ante Pavelic. Franciscan priests enthusiastically assisted in the killing. One Father Bozidar Bralow, who invariably toted a machine-gun, was seen dancing round the heap of one hundred eighty murdered Serbs."

"It has been reliably calculated that 487,000 Orthodox Serbs and 27,000 gypsies were slaughtered in Croatia between AD 1941 and AD 1945. Of the little land's 45,000 Jews, about 30,000 perished [two thirds] some 20,000 in Ustache death-camps and the rest in the Nazi gas chambers."

"The Bishops' failure to dissociate themselves from the regime, to denounce it, to excommunicate Ante Pavelic... was due to their reluctance to lose the opportunities afforded by the 'Good Occasion' to build a Catholic power base in the Balkans," writes John Cornwell. The BBC said in February AD 1942 that the 'worst atrocities are being committed in the environs of the Archbishop of Zagreb. The blood of brothers is flowing in streams. The Orthodox are being forcibly converted to Catholicism and we do not hear the Archbishop's voice preaching revolt. Instead it is reported that he is taking part in Nazi and Fascist parades." [Pope] John Paul II declared him Blessed Alojzije Stepinac in AD 1998. Of the newly honored Pio Nono, Seymour Reich, Chairman of the International Jewish Committee for Inter-religious Consultations, remarked quietly last week: 'If saintliness is seen as the goodness, wisdom, and courage to behave righteously, and right wrongs regardless of when they occur, then [Pope] Pius IX's conduct falls far short of Saintliness.' In the Balkans, Stepinac's mountain of skulls has already begotten its continuing terror."

In the 21st century Bosnia and Croatia are on the verge of bankruptcy, bank moneys have disappeared, public officials are murdered in broad daylight, deposed public officials deny any culpability or accountability for their actions, and their former head of government is being tried at the Hague with "Crimes against Humanity."

And yet, the Pope will continue to ask developed countries to forgive the debts of third world countries, knowing that, yes, it is the poor that suffer, but it is the corrupt officials that prosper. The Roman Church represents the rich and infamous as it does nothing to bring to justice those who steal from the poor, rather, it asks us to forgive. Let the Church forgive, that is their job, let the developed countries demand justice and accountability for moneys loaned to developing countries.

AD 2000-Saturday, July 29th, Nicholas II, the last Tsar [Czar] of Russia, executed by the Bolsheviks in 1918, is recommended for sanctification in preparation for Sainthood by the Russian Orthodox Church, Archpriest Gueroguy Mitrofanov, a Holy Synod member of the Canonization Committee proclaimed. Known as "Bloody Nicholas" the Czar ordered the killing of 4,600 demonstrators [striking workers] in Saint Petersburg Square [1905] during his reign.

No historian has a lenient word for the Tsarist regime. The government and Church reeked of corruption. They had oppressed the people murderously for 1,000 years. And if some describe the abortive revolution of 1905, they still give no idea of the horrors that preceded it and the savage oppression that continued until 1910 or later.

The defeat of Russia, by Japan led to a shocking disclosure of the corruption of the officials and the noble class culminating in a widespread revolt, and the reprisals were appalling, lasting several years. The jails had an accommodation for 107,000 prisoners, but by 1910 they had 180,000 mostly political prisoners. Boys and girls who attended a radical lecture or read any underground journals were arrested. Youths and girls over 15 were shot on the street or stripped and flogged, with the brutal knout [a whip used for flogging], in the jails, and the young women, mainly university students, were raped by their gross jailers. Suicides in jails rose to 160 in one month, and typhus was rife.

It is material to remember that even the young radicals of 1917 had passed through this diabolical ordeal a few years earlier; and it is not immaterial to add that the British and American press and the churches almost entirely ignored the savagery that was occurring for years.

Papers that were in 1913 to pour out volcanic rhetoric over enormously exaggerated stories of Bolshevik outrages were silent about the monstrous and real outrages perpetrated at the order of educated and religious men from 1904 to 1912. Outrages amounting to savagery did not begin until several months after the revolution, and these were committed not by the mob in the cities, but by the armies, especially the anti-Bolshevik Russian troops in the field.

Most of the works were written in the 30's, when not much notice was taken of the lies of the Catholic Press and the Pope's strident call for "The extinction of Bolshevism." The Bolsheviks, in their retribution against the millenium long suppressive Church authorities, instituted civil marriage, made divorce easier, and declared children born out of wedlock legitimate.

So outraged were the people that the Royal Family's healer, Grigori Rasputin, who was known to have excessive influence over the Romanovs, a heavy drinker, and who indulged excessively in orgies, was poisoned, stabbed and finally shot to death.

AD 2000-Ten days of negotiations ended in Emmitsburg between the Roman Catholic and Orthodox [Eastern Church] after being unable to resolve the issue of Papal Primacy [Roma locuta est, causa finita—Rome has spoken, the case is closed] Papal Primacy and the Infallibility of the Pope is contradictory to the Orthodox faith.

The Eastern churches are made up of individual self-governing churches with authority vested in the Holy Synod. The split with the Roman Catholic Church came with the adoption of the Trinity by the Western Church and the separatist Orthodoxy refusing to accept the new doctrine. Historically, Eusebius signed a document, which addressed the Trinity, a dogma to which he strongly disagreed with, “Our concern here is only with Nicaea as it affected Eusebius... His own account of the matter is transmitted to us... In the letter he addressed to his diocese an explanation of his actions at the Council, for with some misgiving he had signed the document bearing the Revised Text of the Creed he had presented... But being satisfied that the Creed did not imply the opposite Sabellian pitfall... He signed the document.” ~Wallace Hadzill, Eusebius of Caesarea, 1960.

Early Church leaders signed documents, even if they completely disagreed with them to keep the peace, which is how the Church leader, Bishop Eusebius, approved the bizarre Trinity dogma, “The Nicene Council followed, in the summer of 325 C.E. Eusebius, of course, attended and was profoundly impressed by the sight of that majestic gathering... He occupied a distinguished position in the Council; he was its spokesman in welcoming the Emperor... On the next day, as if yielding to those representations, and moved by the express opinion of Constantine, he signed the Creed, and even accepted the anathematism appended to it, but did so, as we gather from his own statement, by dint of evasive glosses, which he certainly could not have announced at that time. While then he verbally capitulated in the doctrinal decisions of the Nicene Council... He did so reluctantly, under pressure, and in senses of his own... He knew that he would be thought to have compromised his convictions, and therefore wrote his account of the transaction to the people of his diocese, and, as [Saint] Athanasius expresses it ‘Excluded himself in his own way.’” ~William Bright, Preface to Burton's Text of Eusebius Ecclesiastical History.

“There are two ways of being deceived. One is to believe what is not true and the other is not to believe what is true.” ~Søren Kierkegaard

AD 2000-The official publication of the Roman Catholic Vancouver Archdiocese, “The B.C. Catholic,” on August 28th publishes a retraction of their interpretation of an historical record regarding the Masonic brotherhood.

Their June 19, 2000, issue of, “The B.C. Catholic,” contained an article by the Rev. Msgr. Pedro López-Gallo entitled, “Plotting Against the Church Bears Penalty.” It contained, among other misrepresentations, the following errors: Regarding the origins of Freemasonry: “Its origins date back to the 12th century, when the English masons established a religious fraternity.”

End of the World: January 1, 2000; William Cooper, head of a militia group in St. John's Arizona, predicted that on this date the secret chambers of the Pyramid at Giza will be opened. Its secrets will be revealed and Satan will become a public figure. The American militia will engage in a massive war at this time. This, and the previous prediction, are the only two that we have been able to find which agree on the same day. Of course, it is an obvious date to select, because most people believe that the next millennium begins then. It doesn't; it starts one year later on 2001-January-1.

End of the World: Dan Millar estimates this date, May 31, 2000, as that of the Second Coming of Jesus Christ. Four events happen on that day, a Thursday. The sidereal day is reset. It is also the Jewish New Year, using the Canaanite calendar that was in use within ancient Israel prior to the Babylonian Captivity. It is the time of the Jewish “Feast of Jubilees,” according to a message given by the Virgin Mary to Father Stefan Gobbi. This feast occurs only once every fifty years. This date is also the Autumn Equinox.

The Great Conjunction of Jupiter and Saturn in front of Taurus and the coming back of the Star of Bethlehem like 7.B.C.E. Some people expect a supernatural event comparable to the birth of Jesus on May 31, 2000.

End of the World: According to Weekly World News of 1997, November, 18, the CIA has caught a space alien who had crash-landed on June-20 in a New Mexico desert. He is from a species that is considerably more developed, both mentally and spiritually, than mankind. He is only survivor of the destruction of his world, a planet some 200 light years from Earth. He reports that God is “Furious with His creations everywhere.”

“Nearly all peoples have developed their own creation myth [e.g. Epic of Gilgamesh], and the Genesis story is just the one that happened to have been adopted by one particular tribe of Middle Eastern herders. It has no more special status than the belief of a particular West African tribe that the world was created from the excrement of ants. All these myths have in common that they depend upon the deliberate intentions of some kind of supernatural being." ~Richard Dawkins, The Blind Watchmaker, New York: W.W. Norton, 1986, p. 316.

Apparently none of the species that he created turned out at all well. So, God is systematically working his way across the galaxies, setting fires to the planets and exploding them one by one. Earth will be next! English Freemasonry, before 1646, was composed of trade guilds, and they were not of a religious nature, merely a fraternal organization. The oldest document extant pertaining to the Order dates from 1390, and not the 12th century, "Its goal was to destroy the Church...."

The Free And Accepted Masons [F & AM] and recognized Freemasonry Organizations have never declared a goal of destroying the Roman Catholic Church. It serves Church Authorities well if they have an adversary who has declared "War" against them as they have proclaimed "War" against the brotherhood. Monarchs resented Freemasons as freethinkers, they believed all men had God ordained rights, which the Mother Church resented, and believed further in the rights of people to choose his or her own religion. The Masonic Order is, "...Later abolished by King Edward VI."

The first statutes of King Edward VI's reign, "I Edw. VI, c. xiv.," gave to the king "... All chantries, colleges, and free chapels, all lands given for the finding of a priest forever, or for the maintenance of any anniversary, obit, light or lamp in any church or chapel, or the like; all fraternities, brotherhoods, and guilds [except those for mysteries and crafts], with all their lands and possessions."

In 1548, statute "Two and Three of King Edward VI's, Chapter XV," prohibited price fixing by guilds of Bochers, Bruers, Bakers, Poulterers, Cooks, Costermongers, or Frewterers.

It also prohibited any restrictions on where a "Fremason, roughmason, carpenter, bricklayer, playsterer, joyner, hardhewer, sawyer, tyler, pavyer, glasyer, lymburner, brickmaker, tylemaker, plumber, or laborer," if he was an English citizen, could work. This clause was repealed the following year at the urging of the London Company who feared an influx of workers from the countryside.

In other words, Edward VI, or more accurately his regent, Edward, Duke of Somerset, was supportive and responsive to stonemasons and their guilds, while also restricting the privileges and properties of the Church. Freemasonry was not abolished. ~Robert Freke Gould, History of Freemasonry, Vol. I. John C., Yorston Publishing Co., Philadelphia; 1902. pp. 372-375.

In order to dispel the membership the Roman Catholic Church proclaims that the Freemasons are, "...Practicing Atheism..." Insofar as is practiced today [and since its establishment], regular and recognized Freemasonry has never practiced Atheism.

Canon 2335 states, "Who adhere to the Masonic sect that plot against the Church or the Civil authorities are automatically excommunicated, reserved to the Apostolic See."

The Church finds it difficult to condemn man for what he "Thinks" therefore has sought denunciation by claiming the brotherhood to be against "All that is Holy or against civil society in general." This in effect will place governmental agencies at their disposal in helping to rid themselves of an organization that refuses to bow to their will.

Canon 1374 replaces and supersedes Canon 2335, which reads, "Those who join a Masonic sect or other societies of the same sort, which plot against the Church or against any legitimate civil authority, incur 'Ipso facto' and Excommunication simply reserved to the Holy See."

Just because someone does not agree with you does not mean that they wish to ruin you. Furthermore, "One who joins an association which plots against the Church is to be punished with a just penalty; one who promotes or moderates such an association, however, is to be punished with an Interdict [Code of Canon Law, Latin-English Edition]." ~Canon Law Society of America, Washington, D.C., AD 1983, page 497.

"A declaration of Nov. 26, 1983, explains that Masonic associations are included in this Canon, c.1374, under a more general heading, which could include any other association conspiring against the Church. Therefore, the Church's negative judgment in regard to Masonic associations remains unchanged since their principles have always been considered irreconcilable with the Doctrine of the Church and membership in them remains forbidden."

The Commentary in The Code of Canon Law on the 27th of November 1983, referring to Canon 1374, that had replaced Canon 2335, reads: "While the former excommunication of Catholics who joined Masonic societies has not been repeated in this Code, a sanction can be imposed on those who join in associations that work against the Church, and an interdict can be placed on those who promote or run such groups."

Whether Masons fall within these strictures must now be determined by authorities within the particular churches."

It is this interpretation that Catholic authorities use to refuse last rites and/or Christian burials to the brethren of the Masonic Order [such as in the Philippines]. The "The B.C. Catholic," regarding Masonry, further states, "... They turned to look for a natural type of religion, termed deism" [A belief in God, but not in Revelation].

Freemasonry is not Deist for Freemasonry does not require the denunciation of "Revelation," nor the "Trinity," nor the "Perpetual Virginity of Mary," in that these matters are personal and for the individual to resolve as well as the fact that Freemasonry is not a religion, natural or otherwise. Its membership compiled of individuals who profess a faith in God and in the goodness of man toward his fellow man.

The Church further states that, "... The 'Risorgimento,' an armed movement the aim of which was to deprive the Church of its possessions and destroy the temporal kingdom of the Popes, was led by Giuseppe Garibaldi..."

The regular and recognized Freemasonry organizations were not associated, in any form, with the Risorgimento. The Risorgimento was as much a literary movement as a military one, and Garibaldi merely led the Italian Legion faction in fighting for the Risorgimento; he did not lead the Risorgimento.

Both Garibaldi and the Risorgimento offered their aid to Pope Pius IX, but were refused. The goal of the Risorgimento was the elimination of the French from their lands and later, the Austrians [Hitler was born in Austria]. They sought after a unified Italy, and the unification of Italy under some form of representational democracy versus autocratic rule.

The Church alleges that Albert Pike is responsible for the writing of the book, "Morals and Dogma," which is known as the "Masonic Bible." There is no such thing as a "Masonic Bible." The Masonic Lodges convene with a Bible, which has no particular relationship to masonry other than its members believe in God.

In the preface to Pike's book, "Morals and Dogma," he states, "The teachings of these Readings are not sacramental, so far as they go beyond the realm of Morality into those of other domains of Thought and Truth." "Every one is entirely free to reject and dissent from whatsoever herein may seem to him to be untrue or unsound." ~Albert Pike, Morals and Dogma, page iv.

The following are a few excerpts, which the Church alleges it obtained from Albert Pike's book: "Yes, Lucifer is God. For the Eternal Law is that there is no light without shade, no beauty without ugliness, no white without black, for the absolute can only exist as two Gods: darkness being necessary to light to serve as its foil, as the pedestal is necessary to the statue and the brake to the locomotive. "Thus, the "Doctrine of Satanism" is a heresy; and the true and pure philosophic religion is the belief in Lucifer, god of light and god of good, struggling for humanity against Adonay, the God of Darkness and Evil."

A skeptical reading of "Morals and Dogma," will reveal that one cannot locate the previously mentioned passages nor any reference to the said "particulars" alleged by the Church. Pike never claimed that Lucifer is God, and this entire quote is now known to be a documented forgery by Léo Taxil who publicly confessed before an audience of journalists and clerics on April 19, 1897 that he and his writings were a fraud perpetrated upon the public in general and the Catholics in particular to amass financial profits. The bottom line is it sold books.

The Abbé de la Rive, who had reprinted many of Taxil's lies, recanted everything that had originated with Léo Taxil in the April 1897 issue of his anti-Masonic publication, "Freemasonry Disclosed." Further denouncements, two of which are particularly noteworthy, are that of the Abbé Hemmer in the religious weekly "Semaine Religieuse de Paris," 1900, page 214, and that of Canon Mustel in, "Histoire d'une Mystification," Paris, 1901.

AD 2001-Islamic Fundamental Terrorists attack America and thousands are killed as airliners are flown into the World Trade Center in New York City, and the Pentagon in Washington D.C. "Faith cannot move mountains [though generations of children are solemnly told the contrary and believe it]. prepared to kill and to die for it without the need for further justification. ” ~Richard Dawkins, The Selfish Gene, New edition, New York: Oxford University Press, 1989, p. 198.

The infusion of religious propaganda to the extent of depriving one of his or her rights continues in Pakistan under the Blasphemy Act: 295-C, “Use of derogatory remarks, etc; in respect of the Holy Prophet. Whoever by words, either spoken or written or by visible representation, or by any imputation, innuendo, or insinuation, directly or indirectly, defiles the sacred name of the Holy Prophet Mohammed [PBUH-Peace Be Unto Him] shall be punished with death, or imprisonment for life, and shall also be liable to fine.” And in 298-C we have, “Persons of Qadiani group, etc, calling himself a Muslim or preaching or propagating his faith: Any person of the Qadiani group or the Lahori group [Who call themselves Ahmadis or any other name], who directly or indirectly, poses himself as a Muslim, or calls, or refers to, his faith as Islam, or preaches or propagates his faith, or invites others to accept his faith, by words, either spoken or written, or by visible representation or in any manner whatsoever outrages the religious feelings of Muslims, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years and shall also be liable to fine.”

“This crime called blasphemy was invented by priests for the purpose of defending doctrines not able to take care of themselves.” ~Col. Robert G. Ingersoll, American Free Thinker.

Tolerance and respect for other religious beliefs is what is needed, not absolute suppression and indifference. October 2, 2000, Dr. Younus Shaikh, professor, during a lecture, made some remarks, considered derogatory, against the Holy Prophet [Peace Be Upon Him], which fall under Section 285-C PPC [of the Blasphemy Act].

- ❖ Prophet Mohammed (PBUH) was a non-Muslim until the age of 40.
- ❖ He had not been incisioned (khatna) till the age of 40.
- ❖ The Holy Prophet (PBUH) was married, for the first time at 25. At that time he was neither a prophet nor a Muslim, therefore his “Nikah” was not solemnized.
- ❖ At 40 his “Baghal” (armpit) and “zer-naaf” [under-naval] hair were not removed.
- ❖ His parents were non-Muslims.

President of Majlis-e-Tahafiz-e-Khatam-Nabawat, Islamabad, along with Qari Abdul Waheed Qasmi, Nazim, Majlis Tahafaze Khatam-e-Nabowat, Islamabad and Mufti Khalid Mir, therefore felt after hearing him and going through the petition, and reading the application extremely sad and immediately convened a meeting. During the meeting it was decided that a case against the blasphemer Dr Shaikh Younus should be registered. It was therefore, requested that a case be instituted against the accused that he may be punished accordingly.

End of the World: January 21, 2001; Sun Magazine reported in its 1997, October, 14 issue that Noah's Ark has been discovered intact in undamaged form on a slope near Mount Ararat in Turkey. Inside were a group of 6 copper-gold-silver scrolls, each 12 inch square. Scroll 2 reveals that the sun will superheat the earth, melting both polar ice caps, and creating a world-wide flood.

Scroll 3 reveals that Doomsday is set for 2001-JAN-31. Good people who repent of their sins will be saved; cruel tyrants will be cast into the burning fires of Hell.

Charles Spiegel, a retired psychology professor, preaches from a small town near San Diego CA., that the ancient land of Atlantis will emerge from the Caribbean circa 2001 CE. Shortly thereafter, 1000 extra-terrestrials from “Myton,” in 33 spaceships, will land there and bring new knowledge to humanity.

Because there was no year zero [0], the true millennium will not start until January 1, 2001. Most prophetic watchers still have their sights set on 2000. If the date passes uneventful, they'll soon realize their error and refocus on this year.

AD 2001-Tom Economus, a statistician who has collected information and data regarding abuses of the clergy claims: Four out of ten Catholic nuns have reported having experienced some type of sexual abuse, (a rate equivalent to that reported by American women in general).

A study by Catholic researchers, supported by major religious orders, has found, that sisters have known sexual abuse less in childhood, dispelling what the authors call an "Anti-Catholic" canard that girls fled to convents to escape sexual advances.

During their "Religious life," approximately 30% of the nation's 85,000 nuns experienced some type of "Sexual trauma," ranging from rape to exploitation to harassment, with a total of 40% reporting a least one experience of that kind. NCR, 1/15/99. T

The Wisconsin Psychological Association's survey found offenders distributed among the following professions:

- † Psychiatrists 34%
- † Psychologists 19%
- † Social Workers 13%
- † Clergy 11%
- † Physicians 6%
- † Others 14%.
- † Marriage Counselors 4%

The Center for Domestic Violence found that 12.6% of clergy said they had sex with church members and another 47% of women clergy were harassed by their male clergy colleagues. The Presbyterian Church stated that 10-23% of clergy have had "Inappropriate sexual behavior or contact" with clergy and employees.

The United Methodist research, 1990, showed that 38.6% of Ministers had sexual contact with church members and that 77% of church workers experienced some type of "Sexual harassment." The United Church of Christ found that 48% of the women in the work place have been "sexually harassed" by male clergy.

The Southern Baptists admit that 14.1% of their clergy have sexually abused members. In the Roman Catholic Church, there are over 800 priests that have been removed from ministry as a result of incriminating allegations made against them.

Of the 1,400 insurance claims on the books, the Roman Catholic Church has paid out over $1 Billion Dollars [U.S.], in liability costs with an estimated $500 million dollars still pending. One noted expert claims that there are over 5,000 priests with some type of allegation filed against them. If this is true, there may be as many as 1,000,000 victims of clergy sexual abuse and between 4-6 million indirect victims in the U.S. alone.

Institutional churches proclaim themselves to be the moral backbone of society infusing the word of Jesus, yet they have failed us. They cover up their own sins while exhorting us to reveal our own through "Confession," and public testimonials. We need a moral and civil accountability.

Has the Roman Church truly represented the poor? In an effort to change their image, Philippine Bishops call upon the 'Church of the Poor,' to refocus its endeavors and "...Give priority to those socio-political issues that are not national in scope, but local-from illegal logging to drug trafficking, from environmental-damaging mining to the protection of indigenous peoples' rights, and many others." ~Jose J. Magadia, SI, Newsbreak, Jan. 2002.

"The rich must always steal from the poor so that they may give to their rich cronies as they give mere token hand-outs to the poor; keeping the poor forever in the debt and gratitude of the ruling oligarchy." ~E. Christopher Reyes.

Jack Van Impe Ministries sponsors the largest Evangelical Christian program devoted to End-Time prophecy. In his home page, he discusses his book "On the Edge of Eternity," in which he predicts that the year 2001 will "Usher in international chaos such as we've never seen in our history."

malaria, and hunger afflicting entire populations throughout the [African] continent...By the year 2001, there will be global chaos.” Islam will become much larger than Christianity. [That would take a sudden growth spurt; Islam is currently followed by 19% of the world's population vs. 33% for Christianity]. A one-world church will emerge; it will be “Controlled by demonic hosts.” Temple rituals [presumably including animal sacrifice] will resume in Israel.

AD2001-Caen, France. A sixty-seven year old Roman Catholic Bishop, Pierre Pican, is tried for sexually assaulting young boys in his parish. Bishop Pican is also being tried for failing to bring to light the indiscretions of abbot Rene Bissey, who was sentenced to eighteen years in prison on eleven counts of rape and sexual assault of minors.

Pican's attorney is pleading the issue of secrecy surrounding the confessional. Church officials reluctantly admitted, that of the 25,000 priests in France, alone, there are currently nineteen being investigated for rape or sexual misconduct with minors [With another thirty priests already convicted in recent years, eleven are serving prison sentences] Bishop Pican admitted in court he annually throws away about one hundred anonymous letters claiming pedophilic deeds.

“The Roman Catholic Church has removed 218 priests from their positions this year because of child sexual abuse allegations, but at least 34 known offenders remain in church jobs.” ~Reuters, June 9 2002.

On 31 July, 2003 the “Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith” condemns same sex deviants who seek marriage, yet, in contrast, there is no Vatican condemnation of priestly pedophiles

AD 2001-The Church of England in an authorized catechism written by Canon Edward Norman, on commission to the Archbishop, states, “Homosexuality may well not be a condition to be regretted but to have divinely ordered and positive qualities...Homosexual Christian believers should be encouraged to find in their sexual preferences such elements of moral beauty as may enhance their general understanding of Christ's calling...Homosexuality is not in general chosen: it is an expression of sexuality, which derives from conditions of inherited impulses or of early infant experience.” ~Source: AFP, as printed in The Freeman newspaper, 13 June, 2001, pg. 25.

What does the Catechism of the Catholic Church say regarding “Homosexuality?”

2357. “Homosexuality refers to relations between men or between women who experience an exclusive or predominant sexual attraction toward persons of the same sex. It has taken a great variety of forms through the centuries and in different cultures. Its psychological genesis remains largely unexplained. Basing itself on Sacred Scripture, which presents Homosexual acts as acts of grave depravity.” ~Cf. Genesis 19:1-29; Romans 1:24-27; 1 Corinthians 6:10; 1 Timothy 1:10.

“Tradition has always declared that 'homosexual acts are intrinsically disordered.' [CDF, Persona humana 8.] “They are contrary to the natural law. They close the sexual act to the gift of life. They do not proceed from a genuine affective and sexual complementarity. Under no circumstances can they be approved.”

2358. “The number of men and women who have deep-seated homosexual tendencies is not negligible. They do not choose their homosexual condition; for most of them it is a trial. They must be accepted with respect, compassion, and sensitivity. Every sign of unjust discrimination in their regard should be avoided. These persons are called to fulfill God's will in their lives and, if they are Christians, to unite to the sacrifice of the Lord's Cross the difficulties they may encounter from their condition.”

Marcion agreed with Paul that there was, “Neither male nor female.” ~Galatians 3:28.

Compare Marcion with Biblical teachings, “Of the woman came the beginning of sin, and through her we all die.” ~Ecclesiastes 25:22.

2359. “Homosexual persons are called to chastity. By the virtues of self-mastery that teach them inner freedom, at times by the support of disinterested friendship, by prayer and sacramental grace, they can and should gradually and resolutely approach Christian perfection.”

2396. “Among the sins gravely contrary to chastity are masturbation, fornication, pornography, and homosexual practices.” The Hebrew texts shows that the act in Genesis was not masturbation but “Coitus interruptus,” but the Christians changed earlier Scriptures, “And Onan knew that the seed [semen impregnating the ova] should not be his, when he went in unto [had sex with] his brother's wife [incest was accepted and expected at that time], that he spilled it on the ground, lest that he should give seed to his brother.” ~cf. Genesis 38:9.

“When the temptation to masturbate is strong, yell 'Stop!' to those thoughts as loudly as you can in your mind. Then recite a portion of the Bible or sing a hymn." ~Mormon Guide to Self-Control.

The ancient theology of the Egyptian God, Min, was that masturbation was a singularly special ritual that occurred in public. The Pharaoh was expected to demonstrate that he could ejaculate, and thus ensure the annual flooding of the Nile, and those who wanted a bountiful harvest would masturbate [onanism] over their fields—giving an entirely new meaning to the Genesis myth of Onan, for in context with Min, God of fertility in animals, crops, and people.

Sumerian and Babylonian, and even Egyptian thought, to "Spill one's seed upon the ground" was an offering to the Gods for Fertility and Reproduction, what Onan was fighting for was his own advance in wealth, not to bring up "Grains" for his dead brother since the brother could not guarantee how the "New stalks" would handle their responsibilities or respect the Gods of old.

By the end of the 2nd century, Christian beliefs regarding sex were being solidified, "Because of its Divine Institution for the propagation of man, the seed is not to be vainly ejaculated, nor is it to be damaged, nor is it to be wasted." ~The Instructor of Children, 2:10:91:2, 191 CE..

Sexuality is for everyone, both mortals and Gods. ~Genesis 15:8.

In the Catholic Church, if you had a masturbation, you would have to go Confession before receiving the Holy Communion. In the Magisterium of the Church, in the course of a constant tradition, and the moral sense of the faithful, have declared that masturbation is an intrinsically and seriously disordered act.

The decent Christian believer must flee sexual immorality and cleave to Christ, honoring him with his physical body. Fornication is thus a result of sinful human nature [Galatians 5:19] and unsuitable for God's Holy people. ~Ephesians 5:3, Thessalonians 4:3.

There is a distinct absence of any mention of masturbation in the Bible, which is surprising considering how widespread it is now, and most likely practiced when the Bible was written. The story of the Biblical Onan is not about masturbation but coitus interruptus, in which Onan refused to fulfill his [Levite] duty as a brother in law to ensure offspring for his dead brother; his refusal to impregnate his brother's wife displeases the Lord. ~ Genesis 38:8-9, Deuteronomy 25:5-10, Ruth 4:5. Note: Onan spilled his seed upon the ground which Jews deem as sinful.

Saint Paul compares masturbation to trying to unite Jesus with a prostitute. ~1 Corinthians 6:15-16.

"Do not yield your members to sin as instruments of wickedness, but yield yourselves to God as men who have been brought from death to life, and your members to God as instruments of righteousness." ~Romans 6:13.

Saint Thomas Aquinas, writing in 1200 C.E., states that masturbation was a worse sin than sex with your mother [or if you were a girl sex with your father], is worse than rape and worse than adultery.

Have No Fear! Read the Bible.

God says, "That it is not good for the man to dwell alone." ~Genesis 2:18.

Paul's solution to one's lack of control is marriage [a lifetime covenant]. ~Corinthians 7:8-9.

But, Paul believes that Jesus is returning, and is waiting for the return of his Savior, who is coming within his lifetime, therefore, there is no time for sex, and so Paul tells us, "To the unmarried and the widows I say that it is good for them to remain single as I am." ~ 1 Corinthians 7:8-9, 1 Corinthians 7:36-37, ESV.

Man and woman were created to become one together, both physically and emotionally [of one-flesh when the two become one] ~Genesis 2:24.

- ❖ Masturbation is not a sin. God provided masturbation for man, and physically stimulating one's self to orgasm, in privacy, is not a sin. ~God speaks of it in Leviticus 15:16, 18; Bruce Puddle, New Zealand Minister, Fearfully and Wonderfully Made.

- ❖ Paul also supports the principle of frequent sexual attentions. ~1 Corinthians 7:5.

- ❖ Proverbs, allegorically, tells us to satisfy our thirst for sex from our own fountain, not to do it with anyone else; then, when we marry, we may enjoy it to the fullest with our wife. ~Proverbs 5:15-20.

- ❖ Without the stipulation of masturbation, man's hormones could drive him outside his ability to resist the real temptation to commit sexual sin upon another person. ~1 Corinthians 10:13.

What do the Early Church leaders and the Bible say of "Homosexuality?" "Four types of this form of criminal wickedness can be distinguished in an effort to show you the totality of the whole matter in an orderly way: some sin with themselves alone [masturbation]; some by the hands of others [mutual masturbation]; others between the thighs [interfemoral intercourse]; and finally, others commit the complete act against nature [anal intercourse].” ~Saint Peter Damian, The Book Of Gomorrah.

Note: “It was the 1st Century AD Jewish philosopher, Philo Judaeus of Alexandria who indelibly lay the sin of Sodom at the door of the homosexual. As uncomfortable with the thriving homosexuality they encountered in the Ancient Mediterranean world, the early Church fathers were quick to adopt Philo's interpretation of the sins of Sodom. At the beginning of the Christian era, there was nowhere in Europe where homosexuality was penalized, or bared by the law. It was openly practiced, and even glorified by the Greeks, Romans, and, as it was by most peoples of the Mediterranean.” ~Gay Chronicles: From The Beginning Of Time To The End Of World War II as compiled by Len Evans.

“It is well that they should be cut off from the lusts of the world, since 'Every lust wars against the spirit' and 'Neither fornicators, nor sodomites will inherit the kingdom of God.'” ~Saint Clement of Rome, First Epistle To The Corinthians, 96 A.D.

“Some polluted themselves by lying with males. The Greeks, O King, follow debased practices in intercourse with males, or with mothers, sisters, and daughters. Yet, they, in turn impute their monstrous impurity to the Christians.” ~Saint Anistides, Apology, 125 A.D., www.catholic-defense.com.

“And likewise also the men, leaving the natural use of the woman, burned in their lust one toward another; men with men working that which is unseemly, and receiving in themselves that recompence of their error which was meet.” ~Romans 1:27.

“Thou shalt not lie with mankind, as with womankind: it [is] abomination.” ~Leviticus 18:22.

“The woman shall not wear that which pertaineth unto a man, neither shall a man put on a woman's garment: for all that do so [are] abomination unto the Lord thy God.” ~Deuteronomy 22:5.

Deuteronomy is the basis for the torture and burning at the stake of Joan of Arc.

If only the Church were to follow their own preachings, one might claim that they are imparting a needed morality upon the masses, but history tells us otherwise. Decadence of all manners has not been reduced by these religious despots who have forced their will upon the naïve masses, who claiming to represent the Lord, Jesus the Christ, are the very ones who savor the lusts and immoral crimes of centuries past with no remittance for transformation into a more pious life in the present.

History has shown that Pope 'Saint' Damasus, Pope Sergius III, Pope John XIX, Pope John XXIII, Pope Leo the Great, Pope Benedict IX, Pope Alexander VI, Pope Sixtus IV, and the list goes on and on with the vile and wicked traditions of the self proclaimed Vicars of God, who passed judgment on the people while they reconciled themselves to immoral acts and sumptuous life styles. It is not for us to pass judgment on others, for if there be a God, let Him judge.

AD 2001-The Rogue Valley Historical Seventh-day Adventists, with a small congregation of about 40, considered a “Renegade” by the larger Adventist denomination, distributed a 94-page book, “The National Sunday Law,” that claims to reveal the true identity of the 'Anti-Christ,' a sinister figure who is proxy for the devil. “The Pope is the Anti-Christ,” says the group, and is so convinced that they has purchased space on a high-profile advertising billboard in Oregon proclaiming the same.

The vibrant sign sits along Interstate 5 outside of Medford, Oregon. Roman Catholics and the Archdiocese of Portland, are furious, and they are demanding removal of the billboard which was legally rented from Outdoor Media Dimensions. The Portland Archdiocese has called for removal of the sign, focusing its wrath not only on Larry Weathers but the billboard rental company, Outdoor Media Dimensions.

AD 2001-What have we discovered regarding one of the most highly regarded religious institutions in the world? It does not practice what it preaches regarding: freedom of religion, freedom of speech, full disclosure regarding its finances, Transparency of its banking involvements.

The Church continues to deny human and civil rights to all those who do not condescend to recognition of its claimed absolute power.

The Roman Catholic Church throughout the centuries has been both secretive and protective of its prerogatives to command moral and spiritual authority over its members, denying those the freedom of conscience to either accept or deny its religious tenets. This right or freedom of choice has only been in the 20th century publicly acknowledged by Pope John Paul II.

The condemnations of freethinkers and in the most radical form, Atheists, has been upheld by Pope Clement XII's "In Eminenti," by Pope Pius IX's "Quanti Cura," and by Pope Leo XIII's "Humanum Enus." The last, which may be of particular interest to Freemasons, deals with the forgiveness of those who affiliate with the Order without the threat of excommunication [In specific countries]. The following information and definitions were gleaned from the website: www.freemasonry.bc.ca/anti-masonry/papal_encyclicals.html

The name, "Bulla," is derived from the "Bulla," which is a double sided, lead seal, attached to a document by two cords with the heads of the Apostles Peter and Paul on one side and the Pope's name on the other, that first appeared under Pope Paschal II, anti-Pope 1099-1118. Papal papers containing legal decrees of permanent legal force, were originally termed privileges, and by the early 13th century had evolved into two noticeable groups: solemn privileges and the letters.

Solemn Privileges: are distinguished by the enlarged letters on the first line, the phrase, 'in perpetuum,' at the end of the address and the threefold "Amen."

Letters: fell into two categories, one in which the bull is fastened with silken cords, litterae cum serico, which brought benefit to the recipient, and the other, fastened with a hempen cord, litterae cum filo canapis, which contained either orders or papal delegation in a dispute.

Solemn Privileges: were discontinued by the end of the 13th century due to their task partially replaced by an elaborate "Litterae cum serico" and the development of the "Papal bull," which is distinguished by the superscription "Ad perpetuam rei memoriam." "That the matter may be perpetually known."

In the official language, papal documents have been referred to by various names: there are "Constitutions," which are decisions addressed to all the faithful and which determine some matter of faith or discipline; "Encyclicals," which are letters sent to the Bishops of Christendom, and whose purpose is to guide them in their relations with their members; "Decrees," pronouncements on specific aspects affecting the general welfare of the Church; "Decretals," "Epistolae decretales," which are Papal replies to a particular difficulty submitted to the Holy See, but having the force of precedents to rule over all analogous cases. "Rescript," a form applicable to almost any form of Apostolic Letter, which has been elicited by some previous appeal, while the nature of a "Privilege" speaks for itself.

However, all of the various means of correspondence and communications down to the fifteenth century, seem to have been expedited by the Papal chancery in the shape of bulls authenticated with leaden seals [perhaps to disclaim forgeries], and it has become common practice to apply the term "Bull" even to the very early Papal letters of which we know little more than the essence.

Papal Allocution: is a solemn form of address or speech from the throne of the Papacy delivered by the Pope only in a secret consistory at which the Cardinals alone are present. Such allocations, delivered in secret, are usually published at a later date, for the purpose of making transparent the attitude of the Holy See on a given issue.

Encyclical: "Litterae Encyclicae," is a circular letter [For dissemination within the Church authorities]. In contemporary times, this usage has been confined almost exclusively to definite papal documents which differ in their technical form from the ordinary style of either "Bulls" or "Briefs," and which in their superscription are unambiguously addressed to the Patriarchs, Primate, Archbishops, and Bishops of the Universal Church in communion with the Apostolic See.

In the Catholic Encyclopedia it states, "... It is generally admitted that the mere fact that the Pope should have given to any of his utterances the form of an encyclical does not necessarily constitute it an 'Ex-Cathedra' pronouncement and invest it with Infallible Authority." ~Catholic Encyclopedia.

Ecclesiastical Letters: "Litterae Ecclesiasticae," are publications or announcements of the organs of

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

Ecclesiastical Authority, e.g. the Holy Synods, more specifically, of Popes and Bishops, addressed to the faithful in the form of letters.

Papal Constitutions (Constituere) are ordinations issued by the Roman pontiffs and binding those for whom they are issued, whether they be for all the faithful or for special classes or individuals. According to the Encyclopedia, The binding force of pontifical constitutions, even without the acceptance of the Church, is beyond question."

Letters: emanating from the Pope, though all designated constitutions, receive more specific names according to their form and their subject matter. As to their form, pontifical constitutions may be either Bulls: used for the more important and permanent decrees and begin: Pius, or the name of the Pope, Episcopus, Servus Servorum Dei, and Briefs: headed by the name of the ruling pontiff: Pius PP. X.

Constitution: if used in a restricted sense, denotes a statute, which the Pope issues in solemn form either to the whole Christian world or to part of it, with the intention of permanently binding those to whom it is addressed. When the Papal Letters are addressed to the Bishops of the entire Church, they are "Denominated Encyclicals."

This is the usual form employed by the Popes for treating questions regarding Doctrine and Discipline. When Pontifical enactments take the form of responses they are called, "Decretal Epistles." If they are issued, "Motu Proprio" without a request having been made to the Holy See, they are called "decreta," though this name has a more general significance. "Ordinances," are issued to individuals concerning matters of minor or transient importance, and are called, "Rescripts."

AD2001-Vatican City: the dilemma of the Vatican regarding contraceptive devices in the new millennium remains unclear with the use of the "Morning After" pill by rape victims, which is receiving controversial publicity worldwide. The Church is claiming that this is tantamount to abortion, stated a senior Vatican official, Tuesday, 20 Feb., expressing the Church's opposition to the distribution of the "Pill," to Kosovo refugees by U.N. aid workers. "Who is he who cannot warn that no woman may take a potion [an oral contraceptive] so that she is unable to conceive or condemns in herself the nature which God willed to be fecund? As often as she could have conceived or given birth, of that many homicides she will be held guilty, and, unless she undergoes suitable penance, she will be damned by eternal death in hell. If a woman does not wish to have children, let her enter into a religious agreement with her husband; for chastity is the sole sterility of a Christian woman." ~Caesarius of Arles, Sermons 1:12, 522 CE.

The Vatican called the pill an "Abortion technique" that should not be confused with contraceptives. It can choose new definitions to support its own use of the Pill while denying its use to the members [treating the members as children, unable to make any decisions regarding their personal habits or preferences].

The position stated by Monsignor Elio Sgreccia, vice president of the Pontifical Academy for Life, reflected the Vatican's strong opposition to abortion and its concern that rape victims might end their pregnancies.

The Church officials rejected any comparison with the distribution of contraceptive pills to nuns in the Congo in the 1960's, which he called a "Legitimate Defense" against the "Possibility of Rape." Vatican critics cite the justification of the Congo turmoil in the 1960's as an example of the Church's willingness to bend its rules against the use of contraception.

The Vatican, CWNews.com, "The morning-after pill does not exist. This is an abortion." This statement is issued by Bishop Elio Sgreccia, the Vice-President of the Pontifical Academy for Life, in response to reports that UN authorities are issuing "emergency contraceptives" to women in Kosovo, to be used "In cases of rape."

The effect of the "Morning-after pill" is to make the womb inhospitable to the unborn child, Bishop Elio Sgreccia pointed out that nuns working in dangerous areas and mentally handicapped women may be given the Contraceptive Pill as a defense against rape.

Contraception, via self mutilation of one's genitalia, is still the means used by Origen, one of the early Church Fathers, "If anyone in sound health has castrated [sterilized] himself, it behooves that such a one, if enrolled among the clergy, should cease [from his ministry], and that from henceforth no such person should be promoted. But, as it is evident that this is said of those who willfully do the thing and presume to castrate themselves, so if any have been made eunuchs by barbarians, or by their masters, and should otherwise be found worthy, such men this canon admits to the clergy." ~Council of Nicaea I, Church Canon 1, 325 CE.

Father Gonzalo Miranda at the Pontifical Academy of the Regina Apostolorum, Secretary of the Institute of Bioethics at Rome's Catholic University, said that the use of the Pill is sanctioned in such cases, if the woman runs "A serious and imminent risk of rape."

Father Miranda further stated, "In such cases the act of taking the Pill... Is not a true act of contraception from the moral point of view, but only an act of defense."

Nuns taking the Pill as a "Defense" in trouble spots around the world was openly authorized [as in the case of the Congo by Cardinal Pietro Palazzini], even if the Pope's authorization of the prelate himself was not publicized.

Three years ago, the question was raised again in the case of nuns working in Bosnia with Pope John Paul II side-stepping the issue and in a letter to the Bishop of Sarajevo, effectively left the decision up to the conscience of the individual.

"Moral: A peerless maxim enumerated by God in his Holy Bible, such as that of Deuteronomy 23:1, if your testicles are crushed or your male member missing, you must never enter a sanctuary of the Lord." ~Rev. Donald Morgan, Atheologist.

AD 2001- In a Bishop's Conference in the Philippines, Friday, March 21st, the Vatican publicly admits the sexual abuse of nuns by priests in twenty-three countries, Vatican spokesman Msgr. Hernando Coronel said in a televised interview [Sexual abuse, rape, abortions, and denial of civil and human rights has been the hallmark of Catholicism for almost eighteen hundred years, and only now is being made public]. With the advent of computers and Internet Technology it will now become more difficult for religious leaders to conceal their crimes.

AD 2001- Who protects the poor? Not the Church, as many Catholics think. Jaime Cardinal Sin of the Philippines proclaims, "...The Church has neglected the poor for a long time, which has caused them to be exploited by selfish interests in society. It is not enough that we give them help. The Church has to live simply and with the poor in mind. The Church must listen to the cries of the poor. We may not wait for another crisis to break out before we open our eyes."

It only took 1800 years for the Church to open its eyes. Now we must wait and see if the Church will act upon these words or merely deliver more pontifical rhetoric.

In late 2002 and early 2003, mass hysteria about alleged attacks of vampires sweeps through the African country of Malawi. Mobs stoned one individual to death and attacked at least four others, including Governor Eric Chiwaya, based on the belief that the government was colluding with vampires. Bram Stoker's Dracula has been the definitive description of the vampire in popular fiction for the last century. Its portrayal of vampirism as a disease, contagious demonic possession, with its undertones of sexual lust, blood, and death, struck a chord in a Victorian Europe where tuberculosis and syphilis were common. Bram Stoker's vampire mythology is also adapted in many later works. Vampirism can be traced back to Corpses swell up as gases from decomposition accumulate in the torso and blood tries to escape the body, which caused people to believe that the body was that of a well fed vampire.

AD2005- Upon the death of Pope John Paul II [April 2, 2005], Cardinal Joseph Alois Ratzinger becomes Pope Benedict XVI; nicknamed "The Enforcer" or the "Panzerkardinal," a.k.a. "God's Rottweiler," the son of a Bavarian police chief, he is known as a member of the Hitler Youth in Germany, elected as their propaganda leader, which Catholic Apologists now claim he was forced to join as were many other youths during the period, but Ratzinger held the official status of Grand Inquisitor, which he was not compelled to do.

January, 2005, it was reported that an attacker had bitten a number of people in Birmingham, England, fueling fear of a vampire roaming the streets; local police stated that no such crime had been reported, and this case appears to be another urban legend. October 22, 2011; End of the World. For those whom Jesus has already "Pre-destined" to save will rise up and float away, but the lucky ones won't necessarily be your typical God-fearing church-goers. ~Note: Date setters ignore, Matthew 24:36.

The Roman Catholic Church believes in many false doctrines, which are actually contrary to the Bible, and are unknown to the early Church, such as:

1. Peter as the Rock. ~The Roman Church will see fit to reinterpret Scripture to augment Peter's position, Matthew 16:18. cf. 1 Corinthians 3:11, Peter is not God, who is the Rock, read Deuteronomy 32:4, Psalm 18:2, Psalm 18:31, Isaiah 28:16, Psalm 118:22, Matthew 21:42, 1 Corinthians 3:11, 10:4, Acts 4:11-12, 1 Peter 2:4-8, Ephesians 2:20, Revelation 21:14.
2. Peter as the First Pope Not In Scripture? ~Matthew 8:14-15 [married], 1 Corinthians 9:5, 1 Peter 1:18; he was poor, Acts 3:6; Peter never assumed the title of Pontifex Maximus [Chief Bridge Maker Between Heaven and Earth] as the Pope has today, John 1:51.
3. Low Moral Standards. ~The Roman Church supported slavery until it became fashionable not to in the 19th century. Pick up any newspaper and read of the priestly Pedophilia, which is often covered up by the Vatican.
4. Other Mediators Between God and Man. ~1 Timothy 2:5.
5. False Gospel, Wrong Message of Salvation. ~1 Corinthians 15:1-4, Isaiah 8:20, Romans 1:16, Galatians 1:6-9, 2:16, Ephesians 2:8-10, Philippians 3:9, Romans 3:20-28, Titus 3:5.
6. Confession of Sins to Priest to Obtain Absolution of Sins. ~Catholic Canon law 870 and 888. cf. Acts 8:22, 10-43, 16:30-34, Mark 2:5-11. Saints Chrysostom, 350 C.E., and Basil, 350 C.E., wrote vehemently [strongly] about confessing sins to God only.
7. Penance. ~Acts 16:31, 1 John 1:9, 2:2, Romans 3:24-28.
8. Priests. ~1 Timothy 2:5, 1 Peter 5:1, Ephesians 6:18.
9. Sign of the Cross [Crossing Oneself], 300 C.E. ~Numbers 21:4-9; John 3:14; Psalm 22:16; Ezekiel 9:4; A practice, which is not found in the Bible; Jesus never crossed Himself, nor did His Apostles.
10. Names of Blasphemy, 350 C.E. ~The Holy Father is not the Pope, nor the priest; John 17:11, Matthew 23:9, Psalm 111:9, Revelation 17:3, cf. Romans 4:1, Spiritual Father.
11. Infant Baptism, 370 C.E. ~No baby is sprinkled [as in Catholic baptism] in the Bible. How can a baby fulfill Acts 8:36-37? 1 Peter 3:21? Romans 6:1-5? Cf. Galatians 2:21, Acts 17-19. Children don't suffer, Matthew 18:1-10; Matthew 19:14. cf. Psalms 137:9, New American Bible.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

12. Prayers to Saints, 375 C.E. ~Ephesians 1:1, Phillipian 1:1; cf. Contacting the dead, which is forbidden in Deuteronomy 18:10-11. Saint Philomena was proclaimed a saint by Pope Leo XII, and Pope Gregory XVI blessed one of her images. Rome later admitted that she never existed and in 1961 struck her off the list of saints.
13. The Mass, 394 C.E. ~John 19:30, Galatians 2:21, Matthew 27:51, Exodus 26:31, Hebrews 7:27, Hebrews 9:25-26, Hebrews 10:10-14, 10:19, 1 Peter 3:18.
14. Mary Veneration, 431 C.E. ~Acts 19:24-27. Mary worship did not become an official doctrine of the Roman Church until 431 C.E., at the Council of Ephesus. Cf. Acts 1:14, Jeremiah 7:18, 44:17-19, 44:25. Mary is not a Perpetual Virgin until 451 C.E., see Matthew 1:25. that, "Mary ascended into Heaven in a bodily form," was not made official, and infallible until 1951 by Pope Pius XII. Cf. John 3:13.

17. Purgatory, 593 C.E. ~Hebrews 1:3, 2:15, Romans 8:1, John 5:24, II Corinthians 5:8, and in II Maccabees 12:40-46, which refers to Adultery, one goes straight to Hell, no Purgatory.

Note: The Council of Constantinople in 381 C.E., voted unanimously to remove all images from the Churches. To allow statues, paintings, and Holy amulets, the Catholic church removes the second Commandment against the making of graven images from the list of Ten Commandments in Exodus 20:1-17, which also presents the Church with the problem of not having only nine Commandments, which is then resolved by dividing God's Commandment number ten into nine and ten.
19. Imposed Celibacy of Priests and Nuns, 1079 C.E. ~Genesis 2:18, 1 Timothy 3:2, 1 Timothy 4:1-3, 1 Corinthians 7:2, 1 Corinthians 9:5, Matthew 8:14, Luke 4:38.

Torture was further reinforced by Popes Alexander IV, Clement IV, Nicholas IV, Boniface VIII and others from 1254-1303. "The Catholic Church has the right and duty to kill heretics by fire and sword." ~Dr de Luca of the University of Rome, who was commended by Pope Leo XIII in 1901. 26. Human Tradition is Elevated to Or Above the Word of God, 1545 CE. ~Colossians 2:8.
27. 15 Apocrypha Books Added to the Old Testament Bible, 1546 C.E. ~The Jews never received these books, and they were rejected by both Jews and all Christians up till 400 C.E., and Jesus never quoted from the Apocrypha, Jesus preached from the Torah [quoting 260 times from 35 out of 39 Old Testament books].

31. Who Gave Us the Bible? God or the Roman Catholic Church? ~The Old Testament Canon of 39 books of Scripture was established by 400 B.C.E., well before the Roman Catholic Church was started, as seen by the Dead Sea Scrolls containing all Old Testament books except Esther. Cf. John 21:25, II Timothy 3:16-17.

AD2012-End of the World: The Mayan calendar, of December 21st. "According to prophecy the fifth sun of the fifth world of the Mayan calendar moves into ascension on December 21, 2012. This date represents a gateway of planetary development that will open humanity to new ways of living and a new world of opportunity. Ancient traditions have foretold that our successful passage through this gateway depends on 'The fifth root race,' a new stock in the human gene pool, destined to help us through the exciting massive changes ahead." ~Atwater, quoted in Margaret Emenecker on Indigo Children and Other New World Issues By Margaret Emenecker. Ancient Mayan history posed a threat to Christianity, so history must be destroyed, "We found a great number of books... And since they contained nothing but superstitions and falsehoods of the Devil we burned them all." ~Roman Catholic Bishop Diego De Landa, after burning priceless books of Mayan history and science, July 1562. In 2005, La Voz De Aztlan reported, "... Many of the Old and New Testament Biblical prophecies of the end-times correlate amazingly with religious beliefs of the Mayas and other indigenous civilizations of the Western hemisphere."

The Mayan calendar has many divisions of time: months of 20 days, years of 360 days, katun of 7200 days and a baktun of 144,000 days. The Mayan calendar started on 3114-August 13 B.C.E., with the birth of Venus. The Mayans expected the world to last for exactly 13 baktuncycles. They anticipated the end of the world near the Winter Solstice of 2012.

The year 2012 marks an unusual astronomical configuration, one so rare it occurs only in 30 out of every 26,000 years. December 21, 2012 is also the Winter Solstice, which some say will provide us with a view that will not be witnessed again in any of our lifetimes. The Sun will conjunct the intersection of the Milky Way in the ecliptic, giving mankind a view of the Sacred Tree as called by the Maya, giving us view of the Tree of Life.

Both of these scenarios may be possible as one scientific explanation, and one religion. What man does not know, and probably will not know is what will happen after this end date until it actually occurs. Another theory suggests that a Magnetic Field shift will occur about this time, and that the calendar is based on pole shifts, which have occurred repeatedly throughout the Earth's history. ~See Mayan Prophecy - 2012: The End? <http://www.arnageddononline.org/mayan.php>.

Followers of New Age spirituality have long turned to indigenous religions for wisdom and inspiration, so it has not escaped their notice that something big happens in 2012: the ancient and complex Mayan calendar, studied by astrology, spirituality and history buffs alike, has chugged along for 1,872,000 days, and its cycle stops [and restarts] on Dec. 21, 2012. ~Doomsday 2012? by Holly Lebowitz Rossi.

"The world collapses, but then it gets reborn," says David Carrasco, professor of Latin American religions, Harvard University [The Maya also believe the same thing happens when the Sun rises and sets each day]. The indigenous peoples defended their land, and it were not for the assistance of the warring chiefs, the New World would not have been conquered.

The native priesthood performed secret acts, which looked to the conservation of indigenous spiritual inheritance, were secret, and those who participated in them were mercilessly pursued and killed by the Spaniards, who considered them demoniacal practices that were a crime against the "True Religion." Along with other sacerdotals [the power of priests], called Napuctun, Ah Kauil Chel, Nahau Pech and Natzin Yubun Chan, Chilam Balam, the miracle worker, predicted the coming of the new religion, a new belief, for which, after the brutal conquest, his prophesy is interpreted as a warning of the arrival of the Spaniards and Christianity.

The ancient works speak about a Great Deluge, and also of a burning resin, that destroys the men of wood because these were not aware of, nor praised their creators.

In the Holy Heaven, Joramis is the name of the Spirit of the Second Warrior, said: "Our Holy Father the Word: Bolay is his name," and he met the second Heaven, where the dust of the feet of the Sustinal Grace is. "All was created by 'Our Father God,' and by his 'Word;' in that place where there had not been sky nor land was his Divinity, who became a single cloud by itself, and He created the Universe. And His Divine and great power and majesty shook the Heavens."

The work [Language of Zuyida], ends with the famous prophecies about the arrival of a new religion, attributed to Chilam Balam and other miracle workers. "This knowing reached us in spite of the bonfires of the Spaniards, of the destructive fury of men. Because the word of the 'Chilam Balam' is not solitary: it is the expression of an entire people, their soul, and their life. Distant, enigmatic, the oracle's Mayan voice continued reading the message of time for us, inscribed in the Heavens among the stars." ~Prologue of J.M. Le Clézio in his French version of Chilam Balam of Chumayel.

End of the World: Michael Drosnin, author of "The Bible Code," allegedly found a hidden message in the Pentateuch [the first five books in the Bible, aka Books of Moses] that predicts that a comet will crash into the earth in 2012 and annihilate all life.

Church of the Final Testament Started in the early 1990s by a former Russian police sergeant named Sergei Torop who was dismissed from the force after he had a series of religious visions, the group holds particular fascination for former Communist Party members.

Torop, who took the name Vissarion, rejects prohibitions on suicide. He tells his followers he is Jesus Christ, and looks the part with flowing dark hair and wispy beard. Currently building a "City of the Sun" on Siberia's Mount Sukhaya, the Vissarionites are estimated to be the largest cult-like group in Russia with thousands of followers. Russian politicians have recently warned that the Church members may commit mass suicide as the millennium approaches. ~Apocalypse Really Soon: ABCnews, Jan 5, 1999.

The Order of the Solar Temple: Since 1994, more than 74 members of the Order have committed suicide in

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

Canada, Switzerland and France, leaving behind rumors of gunrunning in Australia and money laundering in Canada and Europe. Whether the group is a cold-blooded hoax that milks its victims of their money and then disposes of them or a more "Genuine" suicide cult remains unclear.

The Order was founded in 1977 by Luc Jouret, then 30, a Belgian born in Zaire who believed he was a third reincarnation of Jesus Christ and that his daughter Emmanuelle, whom he said was immaculately conceived, was the cosmic child. Although he killed himself, the Order still exists. The cult teaches that life is an illusion and after death followers will be reborn on a planet revolving around the dog star Sirius.

Jerry Falwell also told about 1,500 people at a conference in Kingsport, Tenn., on Thursday that he believes the Second Coming of Christ probably will be within 10 years. ~Williamsburg, Va., Associated Press, January 15, 1999; Jerry Falwell: Antichrist May Be Alive.

AD2013-Pope Benedict XVI quits. Unable to keep track of the multiple of lies he transmitted [e.g. He was never a Nazi; he did not know of the Pedophile priests; he knew nothing of the homosexual priests at the Vatican, he was not aware of the Vatican Bank Mafia money laundering scandal, etc.], the Pope elected to resign his station as leader of the world's Catholics [Following his 14th birthday in 1941, Ratzinger was conscripted into the Hitler Youth, as membership was required by law for all 14-year-old German boys after December 1939, and rose to the position of Propaganda leader]. As Prefect of the Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith [formerly the Inquisition], in charge of enforcement, Cardinal Ratzinger had all notifications of priestly indiscretions sent to his office, which makes him responsible for knowing of the pedophiles and homosexuals within their ranks. ~Note: In 2001, Ratzinger convinced Pope John Paul II to place the Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith in charge of all investigations and policies surrounding sexual abuse in order to combat abuse more effectively.

"I can see Himmler as our Ignatius of Loyola." ~Adolf Hitler, Libres propos, Flammarion, Paris 1952, p.164, referencing one of his encomiums to Saint Ignatius.

Pope Benedict's replacement is Pope Francis I, a Jesuit from Argentina, South American. "I learned much from the Order of the Jesuits," said Adolf Hitler... "Until now, there has never been anything more grandiose, on the earth, than the hierarchical organization of the Catholic Church. I transferred much of this organization into my own party... I am going to let you in on a secret... I am founding an Order... In my 'Burgs' of the Order, we will raise up a youth, which will make the world tremble... Hitler then stopped, saying that he couldn't say any more..." ~Hermann Rauschning former national-socialist chief of the government of Dantzig Hitler m'a dit, Ed. Co-operation, Paris 1939, pp.266, 267, 273 ss.

"Between 1555 and 1931 the Society of Jesus [i.e., the Jesuit Order] was expelled from at least 83 countries, city states and cities, for engaging in political intrigue and subversion plots against the welfare of the State, according to the records of a Jesuit priest of repute [i.e., Thomas J. Campbell]. Practically every instance of expulsion was for political intrigue, political infiltration, political subversion, and inciting to political insurrection." ~J.E.C. Shepherd, Canadian historian, 1987.

Are Humanists a threat to 21st century America? "That paragon of humorists, Art Buchwald, in a column entitled 'Hunting Down the Secular Humanists,' writes: 'What makes them so dangerous is that secular Humanists look just like you and me. Some of them could be your best friends without you knowing that they are Humanists. They could come into your house, play with your children, eat your food and even watch football with you on television, and you'd never know they have read Catcher in the Rye, Brave New World, and Huckleberry Finn.... No one is safe until Congress sets up an Anti-Secular Humanism Committee to get at the rot. Witnesses have to be called, and they have to name names.'" ~Corliss Lamont, The Philosophy of Humanism, Seventh ed., New York: Continuum, 1990, p. xi.

Religious groups request their state legislators to initiate a compulsory Sabbath Day in which all Americans will be compelled to worship [go to church on Sunday]. "If we concede to the State power and wisdom to single out 'Duly constituted religious' bodies as exclusive alternatives for compulsory secular instruction, it would be logical to also uphold the power and wisdom to choose the true faith among those 'Duly constituted.' We start down a rough road when we begin to mix compulsory public education with compulsory Godliness.” ~Supreme Court Justice Robert Houghwout Jackson, dissenting opinion in Zorach v. Clauson, 343 US 306-1952..

Help for Churches via our government: A study by the Council for Secular Humanism estimates that the U.S. government subsidy of religion, through preferential tax treatment of the Churches, in the tax code, and direct funding at more than $71 Billion per year.

Still doubt the power of the Roman Church in today's mass media? In March, of 2013, Cardinal Mahony, of Los Angeles, is allowed to leave the country to vote for the next Pope after admitting he concealed evidence of child molestations, and failed to report the priests who molested children in the Los Angeles Archdiocese. If Mahony had been a public servant [i.e. school teacher], he would have been terminated from his post and charges brought against him in a court of law, but nothing, as of this date, has been done regarding his protection of child molesters.

AD2016-End of the World: Weekly World News describes a find by a Professor Lloyd Cuningdale of Salt Lake City who was excavating with his students at the site of the famous Donner party disaster of 1847. The latter were a group of settlers bound for California who became trapped by snow in the Sierra Nevada Mountains.

Cuningdale and students have found a time capsule left by the settlers, which contains many predictions for the future. They predict that nations will abandon traditional methods of conflict and resort to the use of biological warfare. In 2016, one such disease will spread over the earth and kill all of the humans on the planet.

AD2017-The “Prophet Gabriel” supposedly told the Sword of God Brotherhood, that the “Dying time” will come this year, and only members of their cult will survive. Everyone else will “Perish in hellfire.”

AD2033-Believed by many authorities to be the next date set by cults for their Doomsday prophecies. It is the 2000th anniversary of the Crucifixion of Jesus.

AD2034-End of the World: John Denton, Bible Research & Investigation Co. Takes the view that both covenants must be of equal time [the problem with this view is that the first covenant started at Sinai. The promises to Abraham are completely separate from the first covenant. Galatians 3 and Hebrews 8].

AD 2037-Psychic Jeane Dixon in her book “The Call to Glory,” says, “The years 2020-2037, approximately, hail the true Second Coming of Christ.” The Battle of Armageddon is to take place in 2020. ~from Dixon p.170, 172.

Creation and Doomsday will Come to Pass only once, and after the great battle of Armageddon, the End of the World, “The War of the Sons of Light with the Sons of Darkness,” the supernal impetus of the Sun God would triumph. ~Black, Matthew. The Scrolls and Christian Origin, Pg 3.

AD 2047-End of the World: According to The Church of BLAIR, the human race will probably be terminated at 3:28 AM, Soho, England time, in 2047, SEP. 14! The church teaches, with tongue firmly in cheek, that if the human race does not discard their plastic conformity, then the Gods will withdraw their protection. The Gods don't want us to worship them; they don't want sacrifices or even offerings. They just want us to rid itself of our excessive “Normalcy.”

At that point, Astro-Lemurs [extra-terrestrials similar in shape to lemurs, but with rainbow colored bodies] will attack the entire human race and beat them to death with gigantic burritos. Mankind has been warned.

AD2060- End of the World: The Fall of Babylone as prophesized by Sir Isaac Newton. In Newton's own words, he was convinced that, “The Holy Prophecies” of the Scripture are nothing else than “Histories of things to come.” ~Yahuda MS 1.1, folio 16 recto.

Beginning in the 1670;s and continuing to the end of his life in 1727, Sir Isaac Newton considered several commencement dates for the formal institution of the apostate, imperial Church. Earlier commencement dates include 607 and 609 C.E.. Newton's famous concepts of absolute space and time were fundamentally based on his notion of God's omnipresence and eternal duration.

As Newton grew older, he pushed the time of the end further and further into the future. In Yahuda MS. 7 Newton twice gives 800 C.E. [Charlemagne is crowned Christian Emperor of Rome in the West by Pope Leo III at St. Peter's in Rome] for the beginning of "The Pope's Supremacy." ~Statement on the date 2060, Stephen D. Snobelen, March 2003; updated May 2003 and June 2003.

Newton, like many other historicist prophetic commentators of his age, believed that the prophetic time periods 1260, 1290, 1335 and 2300 days actually represent 1260, 1290, 1335 and 2300 years using the "Day-for-a-year principle," which Newton believed represent the time span of the apostasy of the [Catholic] Church. Newton wrote that this Apocalypse would be followed by a 1,000-year reign by the saints on Earth.

"... A penchant for the occult was not Newton's only quirk. He is reported to have laughed just once in his life-when someone asked him what use he saw in Euclid. He took to decorating his rooms in crimson. He stuck a knife behind his eyeball to induce optical effects, nearly blinding himself. He was a Catholic-hating Puritan who secretly subscribed to the Arian heresy, which denied the Divinity of Christ. Newton was also given to endless feuding. He seems to have had only two romantic attachments, both with younger males, and suffered a paranoid breakdown after the second came to rupture." ~Source: Isaac Newton's Hidden Agenda of Mysticism and Alchemy.

End of the World: "This I mention not to assert when the Time of the End shall be, but to put a stop to the rash conjectures of fanciful men who are frequently predicting the Time of the End, and by doing so bring the sacred prophesies into discredit as often as their predictions fail." ~Sir Isaac Newton.

"God said, Let Newton be! And all was light." ~Alexander Pope, 1688, on Sir Isaac Newton.

The Prophetic Time Periods of Sir Isaac Newton:

- † The time period 1260 days appears in Daniel 7:25 (as "A time and times and the dividing of time" [=a year, two years and a half year], Daniel 12:7 (as "A time, times, and an half" [=a year, two years and a half year], see Revelation 11:3 [1260 days], Revelation 12:6 [1260 days] and Revelation 13:5 [42 months]).
- † The time period 1290 days, which appears in Daniel 12:11.
- † The time period 1335 days, which appears in Daniel 12:12.
- † The time period 2300 days, which occurs in Daniel 8:14.

"In the Book of Daniel you will find the time period 1260 days. And it appears there as 'A time, times, and a half', and that means a year, two years, and a half a year. In other words, 1260 days or 42 months. Newton interpreted the days as years, so that gave him 1260 years. The 1260 date (also) does appear in the Book of Revelation." ~Stephen Snobelen, Bible Network News. These Biblical references can be found in Daniel 12:7, Revelation 11:3, 12:6 and 13:5.

Before Jesus' Second Coming, the Jews would return to Israel according to the predictions made in Biblical Prophecy, and the Holy Temple would be rebuilt. Slightly before, or around the time of Christ's return, the Great Battle of Armageddon would take place when a series of nations [the "Gog and Magog" confederacy of Ezekiel's prophecy] invade Israel.

Christ and the saints shall then intervene to establish a worldwide 1000-year Kingdom of God on earth. Citing the prophet Micah Newton believed this Kingdom would usher in a time of peace and prosperity, a time when people would "Beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning-hooks" and when "Nations shall not lift up a sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more." ~Micah 4:3. "I will not define time, space, place and motion, as being well known to all." ~Sir Isaac Newton; Principia Mathematica.

"Plato is my friend, Aristotle is my friend, but my best friend is truth." ~Sir Isaac Newton; Quaestiones Quaedam Philosophicae (Certain Philosophical Questions), 1664.

AD2240-Although many predicted judgment days have already come and gone without incident, the fact that several others fall relatively close to the Maya's astrologically derived end-time has been the cause of some special attention given to this particular date in the near future. Both the Jewish and the Islamic faiths have specific end-time dates arriving within 229 years of the Mayan prediction in 2012. The Jewish date is in October of 2240 while the Islamic date falls in the "Year of the Haj," in 2076.

The Jewish faith maintains that each one thousand years marks one day for God. Both the Jewish calendar and the Old Testament of the Bible state that on the seventh day of God, everything that belongs to Him shall be returned to Him. Likewise, many Christian prophets have claimed that He shall return on the third day of God, which could be anytime between January 1, 2001 and December 31, 3000, each day of God again being represented by a thousand years. ~December 21, 2012: Judgment Day By David Brooks

AD 4,500,000,000-The End of the World. The sun will expand into a red giant star, absorbing Mercury, Venus, Earth, and perhaps Mars. This will be the true End of the World, which will have ceased, as we know it, long before this event occurs.

"Truth is what it is, not what we wish it to be." ~E. Christopher Reyes

Mass Deception of the people :

Even today, in the 21st century, man is still afraid of the powers of the Church. Noted scholars are afraid of being called a liar, being labeled as spreaders of false teachings, and described as one who has perverted the name of Jesus Christ and God. How shameful it is that the very ones that commit the crimes are the ones who will do the accusing, because few know the truth or have access to the truth. How long will this deception continue?

In Biblical times kings and pharaohs would wear brightly colored robes encrusted with jewels and garments made with threads of gold or silver to give them the appearance of glowing and being god like. -Acts 12:21-24. This deception worked well in a time when the masses were ignorant and knew only what they were told. "Reason is the Devil's greatest whore; by nature and manner of being she is a noxious whore; she is a prostitute, the Devil's appointed whore; whore eaten by scab and leprosy who ought to be trodden under foot and destroyed, she and her wisdom... Throw dung in her face to make her ugly. She is and she ought to be drowned in baptism... She would deserve, the wretch, to be banished to the filthiest place in the house, to the closets." ~Martin Luther, Erlangen Edition, v. 16, pp. 142-148.

The common people saw someone who appeared "Godlike" and assumed he or she was a god. And the rulers were not the ones to deny that they were not Gods. Nor were they high priests.

A covenant had been struck whereby one controlling order would not openly criticize the other controlling order. Today the ministers scream out concerning the heathens and those who will spread lies regarding the good works of God. What about the bad works of the ministry? Who will be the one to see that they also practice what they preach? Who will be the one to tell the truth about Jesus?

It appears the churches have not, for it is not within their financial interest to do so. This deception has existed for almost two thousand years. Knowledge cannot be kept from the people forever. We have huge libraries and books available to everyone and the masses are now more knowledgeable in most religious matters.

"If I could live a thousand years, let me live it in truth that I may not deceive my fellow man." ~July 2000, E. Christopher Reyes

The printing press made the Guttenberg Bible accessible to the masses and the Bible available to those who wanted the knowledge contained therein. Once Bibles were translated and written one letter at a time by scribes, some of who could not even read. They just copied what they saw. In some cases they copied what they were told to copy.

While the Catholic monk, Martin Luther, called the art of printing "The last and best gift of Providence," the Catholic Rowland Phillips, in a sermon preached at St. Paul's Cross, London, in the year 1535, unpleasantly remarks, "We must root out printing or printing will root us out."

The Bible was slowly changed to reflect the tenets of the particular religious sect. Errors were made and future translations would reflect those errors and sometimes compound the errors. Contrary to popular opinion, many of the ancient scribes could neither read nor write, and were merely employed for copying and transcribing for decorative purposes.

The hieroglyphs on the massive pyramids are an example. Once an error is made it could not be corrected, for it is cut into stone to stand for time immemorial. For this reason it took centuries to translate the hieroglyphs on the pyramids because archeologists did not know if the hieroglyphs were referring to the same person or someone else whose name was written similar to what was all ready found. Errors compounded their efforts to translate the ancient writings.

The High Priests of Egypt were amongst the few who could read the hieroglyphs and in later centuries due to the increased number of deities recognized even they lost the art of reading the older inscriptions on the temples. The language of the Egyptians changed, as did the "Pictographs" on the great pyramids built for posterity.

As the language changes, so does their Gods. The priests became less versed in the knowledge of the old gods. The priests became less knowledgeable of the older hieroglyphs cut into stone for posterity. The early priesthoods sought perpetual submission through fear from their followers, and "Original Sin" [Psalm 51:5] was an invented interpretation of the Church, created to protect its own financial interest.

When the Christian Churches discovered that fear alone was not enough to convert the heathens, they took matters into their own hands, and declared themselves the Hand of God, which would impose punishments upon mankind in the name of God, "Whatever good you would do out of fear of punishment, or hope of reward hereafter, the Atheist would do simply because it is good, and being so, he would receive the far surer and more certain reward, springing from well-doing, which would constitute his pleasure, and promote his happiness." ~Ernestine L. Rose, A Defence of Atheism, 1878, Women Without Superstition, ed. Annie Laurie Gaylor, Madison, WI: FFRF, 1997, p. 85.

Claiming to speak for a God, a God, which no one has ever seen, nor can they prove, nor disprove his/her existence, these self-proclaimed Holy priests set about putting to writing what they felt man should or should not do. Sacrifices, rituals, and superstitious acts were created to instill in the masses a sense of fear if they did not obey. "As to the common people... One has to be hard with them and see that they do their work and that under the threat of the sword and the law they comply with the observance of piety, just as you chain up wild beasts." ~Martin Luther, 1521.

Fear, with its entourage of myths, superstitions, and relying upon fabricated miracles; stories which are further augmented by zealous priests hoping to convert the Pagans, and hence, their coffers, "... Speaking of the legends of the miracles of saints, says, 'It must not be supposed that these absurdities were produced as well as nourished by ignorance. In most cases they were the work of deliberate imposture. Every cathedral or monastery had its tutelary saint, and every saint his legend, fabricated in order to enrich the churches under his protection, by exaggerating his virtues, his miracles and consequently his power of serving those who paid liberally for his patronage.' No impartial person can doubt its essential truth... The religious history of several centuries is little more than a history of the rapacity of priests and of the credulity of laymen... But legends of this kind... Must not blind us to the fact that the period of Catholic ascendancy was on the whole one of the most deplorable in the history of the human mind... A crowd of superstitions, attributed to infallible wisdom, barred the path of knowledge, and the charge of magic or the charge of heresy crushed every bold inquiry in the sphere of physical nature or of opinions... True inquiry had been cursed by the Church. A blind unquestioning credulity was inculcated as the first of duties, and the habit of doubt, the impartiality of a suspended judgment, the desire to hear both sides of a disputed question, and to emancipate the judgment from unreasoning prejudice, were all in consequence condemned. The belief in the guilt of error and doubt became universal, and that belief may be confidently pronounced to be the most pernicious superstition that has ever been accredited among mankind... Not till the education of Europe passed from the monasteries to the universities, not till Mohammedan science and classical freethought and industrial independence broke the scepter of the Church did the intellectual revival of Europe begin... The monasteries diffused, wherever their influence extended, habits of credulity and intolerance that are the most deadly poisons to the human mind... It is difficult to look upon Catholicism in any other light than as the most deadly enemy of the scientific spirit..." ~Lecky, The Middle Ages, Ch. IX, Part I.

What better way to hold the souls of the devout than through their children and the sin of first man? Babies cannot ask for forgiveness when they know not, so it was the responsibility of the parents to act on behalf of their children to ask forgiveness. ~cf. Psalms 137:9, KJV.

Yet the adults can commit sin after sin and receive the blessings of the church via confession and offerings. Pieces of paper were sold on the church steps granting forgiveness to those who could afford. This and the Papal taxes was the beginning of questioning of authority, the questioning of the rights of the Church to speak for God. Martin Luther claimed the Popes' idea about letting souls out of their torture for money, or special prayers, was an "Invention," and felt strongly enough about it to start his own religion over it.

"The various religions are like different roads converging on the same point. What difference does it make if we follow different routes, provided we arrive at the same destination?" ~Mahatma Gandhi.

Today politicians get richer at the expense of the poor. They claim to be religious, but only if the religion does not curtail them from robbing from the public coffers. In third world countries around the world, dictators rule their people with an iron hand [with a silk glove on it] and are seen on the news worshipping the god of the people.

Nevertheless, this worshipping does not stop them from killing, stealing, and committing all types of atrocious and unpublished crimes. If our religious leaders do not follow the word of God, how can we expect the followers to do so? If our religious followers can get caught up in double talk to justify their actions that are not always honorable, how can we expect otherwise from the congregation? [The religious leaders throughout history were not even bound by their own rules]

That the earth was flat was another teaching. Pythagoras taught it was round in BC 582, but the early church fathers could not understand this.

If the earth were round half the people would fall off and surely die. So, the Church decided that the earth was flat and those that disagreed with the beliefs of the Church were punished for their heretic thoughts [a heretic being anyone who disagrees with established Church thinking].

The Church decided that the sun revolved around the earth. All those who disagreed were soon convinced to think otherwise. "At Poltersberg [Germany], there is a lake similarly cursed. If you throw a stone into it, a dreadful storm immediately arises, and the whole neighboring district quakes to its center. 'Tis the devils kept prisoner there." ~Martin Luther, 1521.

The superstitions of the early Church Fathers were many. Remember, many came from poor families and could barely read or write [even many of the Cardinals and Bishops were illiterate. And, as if that was not enough, many did not know their own religious dogma].

"Amongst so many Bishops," says Fleury, "There was not one critic, who knew how to discern true from false Records."... "It is well if there was one amongst them who could write his own name." ~Jortin, Jortin, 1698-1770.

Anyone who contradicted that which the Church thought truth was is tried for heresy. All those who went against the teachings of the church and its interpretations of the Bible were penalized severely. ~Isaiah 11:12, Psalms. 24:2, 136:6.

But, what if the world is round, as also stated in the Bible? [Isaiah 40:22] Then, why is 8th century [BC] Scripture ignored? Did the church err? The Church claimed authority from God and spoke for God and God does not make mistakes! The Church proclaims itself to be the Last Authority on all matters, inerrant in its decisions and its beliefs.

Unfortunately, for the Church it is not God, nor can it be God, nor can it speak for God. Therefore the Church does make mistakes and has made mistakes. The egos of men have preceded the authority of God. The concept of the early Fathers was simple, "One World, One God, One Representative!" The Sovereign Pontiff, in Babylon, was believed to be "Incapable of Error," and, in consequence, there was "The greatest respect for the sanctity of old edicts;" and hence, no doubt, also the origin of the custom that, "The Laws of the Medes and Persians could not be altered."

The King of Babylon, as Sovereign Pontiff, is adored in like manner as the Pontiff in Rome. Professor Gaussen, quoting Strabo, and Herodotus [who is not a very credulous historian], "The kings of Chaldea wore on their feet slippers which the kings they conquered used to kiss."

Symmachus, the last Pagan representative of the Roman Emperor, as Sovereign Pontiff, addressing one of his colleagues or fellow-pontiffs, on a step of promotion he was about to obtain, says, "I hear that Your Holiness [sanctitatem tuam] is to be called out by the sacred letters." ~Wilkinson.

What we have is a group of men who profess to know all and speak for all. Common sense should dictate to the masses what religion should or should not do. The smooth talking clerics cannot always defend the actions of the church when it is doing wrong. When man began to question the wealth, power, and lustful escapades of the cleric, the religious order could not explain why they could sin and it was not to be called sin. They could not explain the extravagant palatial surroundings of the Vatican and the jewelry they bought for their parading about the city.

So grandiose and ostentatious are the Vatican surroundings that Praetextatus, in the 4th century, says to Pope Damasus, "Make me Bishop of Rome, and I will be a Christian tomorrow." ~Praetextatus, an eminent Pagan senator.

The Protestant movement had begun. Believers in God [non-believers in the Church] were to make their mark in the pages of history. I believe a travesty has been perpetrated upon the poor by the oligarchies of religious institutions. Are their teachings truly the teachings of God or the Church [man]? For those few free thinkers, and their numbers are increasing daily, there is one and only one God, and the Church does not speak for him. For the rest it is the mundane world of persecution, ignorance, guilt and hatred.

Their world will be limited to what someone else tells them is the truth and what someone else tells them what to think, and what someone else tells them what is happening around them. Kept in eternal darkness and ignorance, never to know the fullness of God's gift, nor freedom, freedom from oppression, shame, and original sin. The Church should be the light that guides the way to learning, not the shroud that covets darkness and ignorance.

"Who controls the past, controls the future. Who controls the present controls the past." ~George Orwell

Kings and other royal members made use of their claim that all regal or noble members of society were descendent of God. Pharaohs and Kings would later on in history make use of this assumption to proclaim that God ordained them to rule and no one, not even the High Priests could challenge their 'Divine Right' by way of 'Divine Birth' to rule. Could the Church say that God had not spoken to the King?

The Church claimed that God had spoken to them authorizing the Church to have dominion over the people. The king merely took that one step further by stating God has given them the right to rule through birth. A rivalry would ensue that would challenge the dictates of the powers of both. For the king to challenge the Church's claim to rule over his land would weaken his claim as well as the Church's claim to rule the subjects in this world.

A war on who is considered the rightful heir to rule would only divulge the truth. Two powerful factions at war with each other would only weaken each other. Therefore an uneasy peace prevailed upon the lands. But, this was an uneasy truce that was challenged periodically by both monarchs and the church in an effort to assert their will upon the other. Eventually war broke out and in some countries the Church was even banned from collecting taxes or even taking money out of the country. Again, it was the people who suffered the most from these excursions into rights of authority.

After having reviewed the chronological data it soon becomes quite evident that members in power did not find it beneath them to alter the Sacred Scriptures. One such man was King James. King James VI of Scotland, later to become King James I of all England was a man who believed in the Divine Right of kings to rule. This means that he believed that his power to rule was "God Given."

If God gave him [kings] the power to rule, then what right does the Church or the Pope have to tell him what to do? His reign is supreme over all. It is quite evident isn't it? No man can tell the King what to do! God supersedes the rights of all men in this material world.

With God's given powers he felt absolute in any decisions that he made. No man could dictate to him what is right, or what is wrong. Right or wrong, one does not dispute the king. King James wished to rule supreme over his domain and the Church posed an impasse to him.

"You can fool some of the people all of the time, all of the people some of the time, but you can't fool all of the people all of the time." ~Abraham Lincoln, 16th President of the United States of America.

Who was King James VI of Scotland?

The Church, for his reprehensible acts and low moral values, chastised him. His morals and life style left much to be desired, to say the least. His response was to gather together at that time all the theologians, philosophers, and poets and with their aid rewrite the Holy Bible. No one, least of all the Church, was going to dictate to him what to do. Those portions of the Bible, which coincided with his way of thinking, were left intact. Other portions were either deleted or modified.

King James I desired peace at any price, not truth at any price, with constant threats to his kingdom from within and without he sought to bring about a stability that would let him continue to rule without further expenditures of armament and war. We now have man, once again, changing the word of God. The name of this later to become well known version of the Bible is known as the King James Version of the Bible, or the KJV.

The King James Bible has sometimes been referred to as the “Noblest Book in the English Language,” and the 1611 Version is the only English translation acknowledged by the Anglican Church. This beautifully written book used the language common in its time with eloquence in the English language seldom matched. Perhaps it is this poetic style, which so captured the awe of the public and later of various denominations.

The Anglican Bible omits the two books of the Old Testament, The Book of Maccabees, due to their being anti-Nasorean. The King who defied the Church! The King who wanted and demanded a separation of Church and state! The King who made a separation with the Church and the state! The King who would not be dictated to by any religious oligarchy! The King who would seek the counsel of spiritual advisors to change the very words, which were in conflict with his lifestyle!

This new version of the Bible will contain no less than 1,200 errors, which, as usual, will be explained with the same irrational rhetoric used for centuries. The Old Testament of the King James Version was translated from German-style Hebrew [Yiddish, Old German] using the Babylonian Aramaic square letters and not using the ancient Paleo-Hebrew.

So, in a technical sense the Codex Cairensis and the Codex Leningradensis are not in real Hebrew at all but rather in the Babylonian Aramaic script with an old German articulation and not old Hebrew at all! ~Note: There is no evidence that the Hebrew text was preserved by God in one volume from 135 AD to 900 AD.

The King James Bible is authorized by a King who was:

- ‡ A known bisexual
- ‡ A king who murdered his young lovers
- ‡ A king who victimized helpless women
- ‡ A king who believed in Divine Right, his right, to rule, given to him by God.
- ‡ A king who deceived his people by purposely confusing the interpretation of the Holy Scriptures.

Kings, Queens, and Pharaohs throughout history have shared this belief in Divine Right. Who can argue with the king when he says God has given him certain immutable rights [Divine Rights]? Surely one does not argue with the king if he or she wishes to live!

There was an unspoken truce between self-proclaimed Divine Kings and the Roman Church or between the king and the priesthoods in various parts of the world. James Stuart in his introduction to his version of the Bible leave no doubt as to his feelings regarding the Mother Church states: “...If on the one side, we shall be traduced by Popish Persons at home or abroad, who therefore will malign us because we are poor instruments to make God's Holy Truth to be more and more known to the people, whom they desire still to keep in ignorance and darkness...”

King James wanted to have an appearance of authority and respectability and becomes involved in Masonry, declaring himself Grand Master, and being initiated into the Lodge of Scoon and Perth in 1601. This struggle between the powers ordained by God and those of balance of power between king and church would be waged in the houses of worship and in the Great Cathedrals throughout Europe. Sometimes the kings or queens would win in this challenge of their authority, other times the church would win.

It was a balance, which did not go unchallenged by strong rulers nor ignored by the weak ones either. It was like a pendulum, which swings back and forth, always changing, never static. But, most definitely, the rules governing the imposition to rule one's subjects were never ignored. In all cases, the people suffered whenever there was a struggle in this fragile relationship.

“I never met a man with a good enough memory to be a good liar.” ~Abraham Lincoln

“Truth is immutable, immovable and perfected in Beauty. Therefore, I despise error.” ~From The Gospel According to Thomas, Evangelium Veritatis

To Pope Pius XII, “I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians.” ~Mahatma Gandhi

Faith Versus Religion:

Religion has fascinated me throughout most of my life. And, I wondered about the religions that were supposed to help the poor and downtrodden and only threatened them with excommunication. Religions that coerce the poor and feeble into rites, rituals, and affairs they know little or nothing about.

The rich can marry within this spiritual surrounding, divorce, and re-marry, all within the sanctity of the church. But, the poor cannot. Is this justice? Is this a true religion? Or is it just another type of "Political/religious persuasion" using the name of God for financial gain or prescribed conduct acceptable by the elitist church members?

Does the religion follow the true dictates of its founder? Has it avoided corruption through the centuries and not deviated from the practices acknowledged by its original creator? In many cases the answers are, "No!" Most religions do not follow the dictates of their founders, and "No," many of today's religions have not avoided deviation from the practices preached by their founders.

Where has man gone astray in believing that a group of people know what's best for them when they themselves do not follow the religious concepts they preach? I was soon made aware that religion was first of all political and secondly, religious. Due to this, the Church will protect its clergy before it protects its congregation. "Practice what I preach and not what I do," has today become the standard for many religions. Unfortunately I cannot follow nor acknowledge this precept. Hence, the need to seek the truth, "...and the truth will set you free." ~John 8:32.

The Bible speaks of false images and idolatry [John 18:21, Acts 15:20, I John 5:21, Ex. 20:4, Daniel 3:18.] Yet, today we have many religious groups praying to images, with the consent of their religious oligarchy under one guise or another.

"Truth cannot change to satisfy the whims of a few political and religious despots!" ~by E. Christopher Reyes, 2001.

"Thou shall have no graven images; you shall not bow down to them; you shall have no other gods before me." It is quite clear what is requested of us, yet many choose not to follow the Bible, but the interpretations of a priestly craft that seeks to appease us in exchange for remuneration. If one feels closer to God through icons, pictures, statues, or artifacts, who am I to say that they are wrong? Or, anyone else for that matter!

"At Lyons the chief treasures shown to the public were some milk and hair of the Virgin Mary. This was Lyons' set-off to the rival attraction at Soissons, a neighboring town, which had secured one of the milk-teeth shed by the infant Jesus. There seems to have been enough of the milk of the Virgin, some of it was still exhibited in Spanish churches in the nineteenth century -- preserved in Europe to feed a few calves. There was hair enough to make a mattress. There were sufficient pieces of the 'True Cross' to make a boat. There were teeth of Christ enough to outfit a dentist [one monastery at Charroux had a complete set]. There were so many sets of baby linen of the infant Jesus in Italy, France and Spain, that one could have opened a shop with them. One of the greatest churches had Christ's manger-cradle. Seven churches had his authentic umbilical cord, and a number of churches had his foreskin [removed at circumcision and allegedly kept as a souvenir by the Virgin Mary]. One Church had the miraculous imprint of his little bottom on a stone on which he sat. Mary herself had left enough wedding rings, shoes, stockings, shirts, girdles, etc., to fill a museum; one of her shirts is still in the Chartres cathedral. One church had Aaron's rod. Six churches had the six heads cut off John the Baptist. Every one of these things was, remember, in its origin, a cynical blasphemous swindle. Each of these objects was at first launched upon the world with deliberate mendacity. One is almost disposed to ask for an application to the clergy of the law about obtaining money under false pretenses." ~From the works of Joseph McCabe in the Rationalist Encyclopedia.

Lecky, one of the most authentic and scrupulous of historians, reviewing the history of the frauds and forgeries of the Catholic Church, said: "Making every allowance for the errors of the most extreme fallibility, the history of Catholicism would on this hypothesis represent an amount of imposture probably unequalled in the annals of the human race...the immense majority of the acts of the martyrs are transparent forgeries of lying monks.” ~From The Ten Commandments by Joseph Lewis

Religion should be of one's choosing and not imposed upon them. What is the difference between what I say and what is practiced? Freedom of choice! Freedom with knowledge! Freedom in truth! Freedom from persecution for one's beliefs! Religion should be a teaching by which one can live by and not just talk about. Many followers today talk of their religion yet practice none.

Man has interjected his beliefs into the works of the Bible, Sacred Scriptures, and other religious texts that have been handed down, and the words of God, are now the words of man. Helping a few at the spiritual detriment of the many. Before I precede any further I must state that I believe in the Bible, but not in the Church. I believe in God, but not as preached by most organized religions today. I believe that man, the individual, must seek knowledge to better himself, but not at the expense of his fellow man.

The institutionalization of truth has not always been for the betterment of man but for the ruling oligarchies. I believe that we are here to help each other, not take advantage of our fellow brother. Most people are born into a religion and do not have a choice. The choice is usually their parents. Religion is a very important aspect in one's life that should not be taken lightly. I believe we all need religion. We should pick our religion with all the respect and caution one would use in choosing a husband or wife. One should select a religion one can follow and practice and not just a religion to say he or she belongs. Whose faith does God recognize? -Colossians 3:10-11.

“There is nothing so powerful as truth.” ~Daniel Webster

“All beings love the truth, for truth is the mouth of the Father, and his tongue is the Holy Spirit. He who is united with truth is conjoined to the mouth of the Father by his tongue when he receives the Holy Spirit.” ~From The Gospel According to Thomas, Evangelium Veritatis.

Descendents of God?

For centuries the kings, queens, and pharaohs of Egypt claimed to be descended from God and claimed Divine Birth. This claim to having the very blood of God running through one's veins gave these individuals the right to rule over the lesser classes. Also, for this reason many kings, queens and pharaohs inter-married. That is they married their own brothers and sisters.

If one claims to be descended from God, one cannot marry a commoner. This would weaken the blood and one's claim to being a God. From centuries of inter-marriage we now have hemophilia that is also known as the “Blue Bloods Disease,” a disease that originated from the royal families and their incestuous relationships. Cleopatra of Egypt convinces Caesar that he is a god and Caesar has a coin struck with his image [Roman Denarius] that is referred to in the New Testament. ~Mark 6:37, 12:17, 14:5; Matthew 18:28, 20:2, 22:17; Luke 7:1, 10:35, 23:2; John 6:7, 12:5, and Acts 6:6

In Roman times, only gods are allowed to have their image struck on coins. The image of Caesar on a coin so infuriates the Roman Senate that they plot to kill Caesar. He has become too arrogant and too powerful. Cleopatra, who is married to her brother Ptolemy XV, is eleven years old at the time of her marriage and isn't even twenty-two years of age when she decides to share her life with Caesar. All religions change as they develop new doctrines.

It is of necessity that the religious orders change their doctrine to maintain stability if they are to promote philosophical as well as spiritual well being for their flock. As more and more people will become aware of the Truth in history, religions will be challenged to do better. Good enough is no longer good enough. Punishment meted out to those who brave the inequities of their faith and seek change for the betterment of all cannot be met with the old proverbial Inquisition type tactics of long ago but with catharsis, a purging of the soul by revealing the wrongs in order to set oneself on the right path. Tactics of name slandering and false accusations will not help the faith. Tactics of denying one's wrongs will not help the faith.

Now the question is, “Who does one believe? Who does one follow?” The answers are not necessarily the same, and this struggle is an additional burden to the poor and uneducated masses. For few people understand their religion and are dependent upon the clergy to translate/interpret the scriptures for them.

To Pope Pius XII, “I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians.” ~Mahatma Gandhi

Centuries ago, their only access to the teachings of our Lord was on the steps of the Great Cathedrals on the days of Worship. Select verses were read aloud to those who cared to listen. Few owned a Bible, much less could read and understand it. People want to hear what they want to hear. But, not what is necessarily right for them.

If the good people wish to follow the dictates of their chosen religion, so be it, but do not condemn others who do not follow their practices. I do not purport to accept the religious tenets of any specific religion in this work for I know there are some very good religious groups. I cannot say one is better than another. The decision is yours. "Seek and thou shall find." Affiliate with a religious order that helps you to become a better person without guilt, without invasion of your personal rights, without depriving you of spiritual enlightenment, and without condemning you to poverty.

All religions are good religions if they help develop the individual to do good. For, whose prayers does the Good Lord listen to? Whose prayers does God answer? Does he listen to the Jew, the Muslim, the Baptist, the Protestant, the Mormon, or, the Catholic?

Does any one religion have a monopoly over God? Is one religion better than another that it can pass judgment over that which it does not know either? Is religion for the masses or for the self-appointed chosen few? To me religion is a personal thing.

Many religions claim to be the one true religion, but I seriously doubt that God waited thousands of years to specify one religion as the True Faith. Nor, will God deny those who have lived by the Golden Rule although they may not belong to a particular congregation or religious group. If the religious group claims this, then one should first look at their accounting books and see how much they receive in tithes and offerings and how the monies are distributed, all in the name of God. Religion is a personal thing and should be treated respectfully by others. ~cf. Luke 6:31.

The Golden Rule by Religions:

1. CHRISTIANITY: 'All things whatsoever ye would that man should do to you, do ye even so for them: for this is the Law and the Prophets.'
2. JUDAISM: 'What is hateful to you, do not do to your fellowmen. That is the entire law; the rest is commentary.'
 BRAHMANISM: 'Do naught unto others, which would cause pain if done to you.'
3. BUDDHISM: 'Hurt not others in ways that you yourself would find hurtful.'
4. CONFUCIANISM: 'Surely it is the maxim of loving kindness: do not do unto others that you would not have them do unto you.'
5. TAOISM: 'Regard your neighbor's gain as your own gain and your neighbor's loss as your own loss.'
ZOROASTRIANISM: 'That nature alone is good which refrains from doing unto another whatsoever is not good for itself.'
6. ISLAM: 'No one of you is a believer until he desires for his brother what he desires for himself.'
7. DEISM: 'All men are endowed by their Creator with the right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.' ~Research courtesy of Hank Shiver on the Internet.

History has shown us what happens when one religious group claims supremacy over another. How many wars have we fought over the teachings of men centuries gone? How many battles have been fought in the name of God?

How many more hostilities will we fight over interpretations that we are only now becoming more familiar with through new archeological findings? I believe that all religions that teach tolerance of other faiths share more similarities than dissimilarities. Is it worth fighting over the small infinitesimal differences? For centuries the Church has condemned the quest for man to learn about God. Through various means the scriptures were kept secret to all but a few. What can man discover in the next thousand years that he does not already know regarding God? Will we treat each other any better?

Will this new knowledge make this world any better? With the modern weaponry at our disposal, man now has the power to destroy the world a thousand times over. Will it be over religious views? Will it be one religious group trying to force its interpretations of Scriptures upon another?

Many religions claim to be the one and only true religion. If this were so, does this mean that only the followers of their religious group can attain the blessings of God? They would have you think so. Will God not listen to the prayers of his creations? Where would their religion place the Great Prophets who came before their religion?

Did not the major religions of the world begin 4000, 2000, and 1430 years ago? Have not miracles been performed in the Jewish, Catholic, and Muslim religions? Is this not a sign that God recognizes the needs of man and not the needs of the religious organizations? Religious organizations are by nature immutable. That is they challenge the authority of man by the authority [or alleged authority] of God.

Church leaders speak of having a revelation wherein God has spoken to them and told them to preach, follow the tenets of their god, and espouse the religious views of their doctrine. Did God also tell them to get rich off of his congregation? They will condemn those who do not agree with the inspired words of the religious group in one form or another. Forgiveness is often spoken of, but seldom practiced. Those who dare challenge the authority of church groups today, the 21st Century, will still expose themselves to the verbal tirade of the church.

Pastors, priests, and clergy have a good thing going for themselves and do not want anyone rocking the boat. But, even Jesus in his times saw through the falsehoods of the priesthood and told the truth. Seek the truth and you shall always be with God. For God is the truth. Have no fear, for God is near. One need only have faith in God. True Faith precedes all the religions that have followed.

No religion? You need not worry if you have no religion. Do you have a faith? Do you have a faith in God? One need not worry if he or she has faith in God. Having no religion does not denote a lack of faith in God. It only signifies one is still seeking the truth and has not found a religious organization that advocates truth. Does your religious group tell you what to read? Does your religious group have to tell you what is good and what is evil? One must strive not to harm others. One must work hard to help others. One must endeavor to live life with prudence and moderation.

The material world spoken of in the Scriptures is your body. Many organizations speak of the material world as gold and riches. You cannot take gold and riches with you into the next world, nor can you take your material body. Take care of your body and do not abuse it. Many people drink alcoholic beverages and smoke. Alcohol in moderation can be good for the digestive tract. A drunken stupor is not. Smoking was first introduced to the Europeans by way of the Americas. It was not an every day occurrence and used only for special occasions. The Native Americans did not smoke continuously every day, but merely for ceremonial purposes. Smoking for recreation is not good for your body. Read the label. How much more explicit can the manufacturer be?

The Priesthood and Tithes:

The priestly classes have for centuries been adding and subtracting from Holy Scripture to satisfy their own lust for power and fame. In Luke 10:4 [also Matthew 10:9] Jesus sends the apostles out to preach the word and says, "...And leave your purses behind." Many religious groups, cults, and organizations seek alms, tithes and financial offerings.

Many times the congregation does not even know where their money goes. What does Luke 10:4 mean to me? [For tithes see also the conflict in New and Old Testament versions: Leviticus 27:30-33 and Hebrews 7:4-14 vs. Hebrews 7:12, 8:13]

The Scriptures tell of preachers who are told by Jesus not to take any money with them when they venture forth to preach and do not bring any money back. Of course these words are still in many Bibles, but few churches will preach this doctrine given to the original apostles.

The deviation from Scripture is for the benefit of the self proclaimed authorities. I can understand the need to raise money to help those who are in need of assistance. What I disagree with is the method of using guilt feelings and false information allegedly from the Good Book. Tithes and offerings are from the Old Testament, not the New. Human sacrifices are from the Old Testament and not the New Testament. The churches of today appear to bounce back and forth through the pages of history looking for that which will appease their interests. What is advantageous for the church may not be for its congregation. Times do change, and Jesus made us aware of a need for change. ~Leviticus 18:21, 20:2-5; Jeremiah 32:35 and II Kings 23:10.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

"Truth is where your heart is and not your mind." ~June 2000-E. Christopher Reyes

To ask for money by priests or clergy is not the crime but in the manner in which it is being done today is. A full accounting should be made of all monies raised so that the congregations does not give charitable contributions to benefits they would not normally approve of. If a person is to give, let it be from the heart and with full knowledge and not in secrecy or with condemnation. Not with double books to conceal the true collections and false benefactors.

Too often religious organizations have taken monies from their congregations only to have the monies diverted to the self-interest funds of the ministers and preachers to further support their wicked ways. I see the evangelists on electronic media pleading for money every Sunday and the poor amongst them give and give. If they do so with full knowledge, so be it. Only the tribe of Levi was authorized to accept money, yet today, all the Christian ministries scream for money as they continually rewrite Scriptures to benefit themselves. "Why should the residence of a preacher be untaxed? Useful citizens must pay taxes on their homes. Yet the Preacher actually and notoriously the least useful member of the community, lives in a tax-free dwelling." ~E. Haldeman-Julius, The Church Is a Burden, Not a Benefit, In Social Life.

But, do not chastise them for not giving more when the ministers wear expensive clothes and jewelry and spend the meager funds of the congregation on fancy cars and their secret vices.

Modern Economic Sinfulness: "You who delight in gold and ivory and jewels, do you see your loved [possessions] when night comes on? And you who give way to soft clothing, and then depart from life, will these things be useful in the place where you are going? And let the murderer know that the punishment he has earned awaits him in double measure after he leaves this [world]. So also the poisoner, sorcerer, robber, swindler, and arsenokoiters, the thief and all of this band... So, men of Ephesus, change your ways; for you know this also, that kings, rulers, tyrants, boasters, and warmongers shall go naked from this world and come to eternal misery and torment." ~The Acts of Saint John. Note: The men of Ephesus practiced sorcery.

Pity the society that obeys unquestioningly the laws of man as if they were the words of God.

Separation of Church & State:

Many countries purport to have a separation of church and state. How can this be so if churches are given tax exemption in real property, businesses, and other assets?

If a private corporation contributes heavily and sponsors a candidate in exchange for tax exemptions the people would say there is a conflict of interest. Yet, the church does this and the politicians smilingly say there is no conflict of interest. The poor and middle class are expected to take up the slack when the church does not pay taxes. How else will the roads and other infrastructures be paid? Where is the separation of church and state?

How can a rich group being given special favors and the poor paying for it out of their diminutive earnings be called Separation of Church and State? Where is the separation when a man must work hard to pay his taxes plus those of a religious group he may or may not want to support? Where is the separation of church and state when a religious group can involve themselves in the political affairs of their country and still demand not to participate in the tax paying scheme? Is this group entitled to a political voice if it does not pay its fair share like the rest?

How can this group claim to represent the poor when it first asks for exemptions that the poor must pay for through lack of proper medicine and education because the middle class are over taxed? As in all cases the rich know how to get around paying taxes all over the world. Its not how much you make, but how much you keep.

Where is the separation of church and state if legislators cannot pass laws that contradict their personal religious beliefs and cannot pass laws for the good of the people? Where is the separation of church and state when religious leaders do not have to pay taxes, yet want to participate and have a voice in governmental affairs pertaining to who gets the monies appropriated?

"I don't need to hear the words of man to tell me what God says to my heart." ~June 2000, E. Christopher Reyes

Where is the separation of church and state if politicians continually ask for endorsements from the congregations of large churches to help their elections? Where is the separation of church and state when some religious organizations are given more in government subsidies than others? Where is the separation? Where is the equality that is preached? Where is the religion that says it helps the poor? Too quick are they to pass legislation that protects their own private agendas, but leave to another time matters that will help the masses. Religious leaders cater to the political elite in order to perpetuate their tax-exempt status. How can they claim to represent the poor when they first represent themselves?

Where is their faith? It appears it is in their hip pocket [their wallet.] If this is true, then do not tell the voters there is a separation of the church and state when in reality there is none. If this is true, do not tell me you are helping me when you will not even carry your own fair share of the burden of supporting the government. If this is true, then a change is certainly in order. A change should be made through participatory government with the masses taking a more active part in the management of government beginning at the local level all the way through to the federal level. No longer should the people simply turn over their fate to others with the false assurance that they will be taken care of here as well as in the hereafter.

Religious groups and institutions are taxed in Mexico and no significant drop in attendance or participation has been recorded. Auditing shows how much is collected, how much is spent for charitable work, and how much of the collected funds are spent in the country collected. Truth and Full Disclosure is good for the masses. How many religious institutions do you think are capable of surviving Truth and Full Disclosure? A knowledgeable society is an educated society.

Only through education can one truly learn to control his destiny. Only through education can one attain full freedom of choice. The choice is that of the individual in choosing one's religion. The choice is that of the individual in choosing his or her representative by their actions and not by their promises. The choice is that of the individual having a true voice in his or her destiny. Individual rights were not recognized in ancient times.

The Church and the State rights preceded all individual rights. Seek the truth and you will find the liberation of your soul as well as peace of mind. Is the destiny of the individual preordained by outside influences? I would say not. Does the individual have any control over his or her future? Without a doubt this very issue is the crux of the matter in disputes with the ruling entities for centuries. Is it inevitable that some of us were meant to suffer? Who will be the deciding factor, the individual or his religious group? Do not depend upon others to have done your learning for you. It is up to you to seek the truth that you may have spiritual freedom as well as financial autonomy. Is the will of man set in granite? [Pre-destiny?] Not hardly! Only if you are passive in relinquishing your future into the hands of strangers who sometimes put their ambitions before your happiness and well being.

As you have seen in this book, I have no qualms as to revealing the names of those with whom I disagree with in religious as well as philosophical matters, and have even gone to great lengths to give you the names of the authors and the names of the books of which I wholeheartedly disagree with. It is only through enlightenment [acquisition of knowledge or gnosis] that we can ever hope to attain a world of peace and brotherhood whereby man can live in harmony with his neighbor.

True Freedom of the press is essential in any society that wishes to make continuous advancements in all fields of endeavor. For it is only within the totalitarian or dictatorial governments that freedom of the press and freedom of religion is curtailed, restricted freedoms being a necessity to limit not only knowledge but also the thinking of the masses.

When the communists took over main land China, one of the first things they did was to close down all teaching institutions. When the schools finally reopened it was under the authority and direction of the communist party that rewrote history to glorify itself and its leaders. I know many will disagree with my viewpoints and my religious perspectives. That is their right as it is my right to my own religious convictions.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

“When lying lips attempt to skew the facts and say that wrong is really just and right, you never need to fear to tell the truth, for truth can stand alone in any light.” ~Hess

Some of the books I have read chastising the religious orders were written by atheists. And although I have knowledge of the sins of the church I cannot negate the good they have also done. The atheists have also not been honest in their presentation of religious groups. With the lies and deceit of the atheists who have set out to completely disclaim the existence of any God I feel it incumbent upon myself to reveal how these individuals have had a falling out with the religious institutions. I personally believe that if your religious group is not acting properly or morally then find another. I firmly believe in God and in miracles. I still believe in the goodness of man and of God Almighty.

Just because I have had experiences with more than my fair share of Irreligious Religious Groups who practice to deceive and dishonest people does not make everyone bad. The evil perpetrators will get their just reward. Patience!

They often portray themselves as being God fearing, yet they are destroying the very principles they profess to believe in each time they take a solicitation for increasingly money. They hold high positions in public offices, yet ask for more money like the common beggars in the streets. Their greedy desire for more money has no end. The more they acquire in material wealth the more they are wanting. Their avarice is insatiable. One must have patience. In the mean time one must do what they can to promote the truth in thought word and deed. By making the truth known the evildoers shall be overcome. Can this be so wrong?

“There is enough truth to be shared by all.” ~E. Christopher Reyes

Where Do We Go From Here?

Numerous wars have been declared in the name of God, then why not Peace? Taliban troops are destroying the images of Buddha in Afghanistan and the Irish are blowing up children in protest of British rule... all in the name of God? Who are we trying to fool? Surely, God did not intend for us to destroy each other in reverence to him. ~cf. Psalms 137:9, KJV.

Are we that far apart in our religious views? Organized religions, as we know them today have fallen down on the job. The Bible warns us of false prophets [Matthew 7:15, 24:24] and I believe that most organized religions today have adulterated the works of the Bible to advance their cause, and I doing so in many cases it is not for the good of man but for the good of the particular church or minister. Ancient Scholars were appointed to transcribe and change the scriptures for the ulterior motives of the leaders to such a point that the original thoughts were almost lost.

The ancient Prophets did not set about to profit, directly, from preaching the word of God, but to maintain control. They preached their Laws of God to help themselves, to make this world a better world for the priests to live in. Their thoughts were for the betterment of self, not man. It was not an easy task. Rejection, ostracizing, and crucifixion is what awaited those who dared to challenge the religious status quo. With all the changes throughout the centuries I believe there is still much truth in all Bibles.

The bonds of religion and archaic cerebral incarceration no longer bind us. But, what will we do with this newly found knowledge? Will we use it to better mankind and ourselves or continue to degenerate the faiths of others while claiming ours to be the one and everlasting faith of God, a faith that will deny the true words of Jesus and his Apostles, a faith that denies the prophets, and denies the truth, can it be a faith of God?

If the Great Prophets would return today, which would they say is the True Church of God? The church that allows the clergy to sin while it turns the other cheek, or the church that allows its priests to make vows that they will not be kept, or the Church that looks after its congregation after it puts their needs first by using the words of ancient prophets to relieve their congregations of their purses? Jesus was condemned for casting out the money changers who did business in the synagogue. He cast out the whores, and, he cast out the prostitutes who also resided in the synagogue.

The rabbis were infuriated. Who was this young man who would dare come into the Temple and change the way things were being done? Who was this man who would dare change the way things had been run for centuries? Who was this man who challenged the authority of religion? The priests had interpreted Scripture to help their own carnal needs. But, whom were they really fooling? They had adulterated the word of God and because the congregation did not speak out they assumed this as acceptance of their wicked ways.

What Jesus did benefited the people, not the priesthood. What Jesus did was to put to practice what they were preaching. What Jesus did was tell the truth. Jesus must die. For Jesus was a threat to the religious oligarchy. Jesus must die. For Jesus believed in the accountability of the priesthood. Jesus must die. For Jesus will not be happy with the status quo and the inequities in the system. Jesus must die.

The history of man has shown us that in his quest for spiritual beliefs he has at times been prone to exaggerations. What qualifies a person to be deified? Julius Caesar was deified by the Roman Senate soon after his death, 15 March 44 B.C.E., and subsequently venerated as "The Divine Julius."

The word "Savior" was affixed to Julius' name, its literal meaning being "One who sows the seed," i.e., Julius became a Phallic God. Julius Caesar was hailed as, "God made manifest and Universal Savior of human life," and his successor Augustus was called the "Ancestral God and Savior of the whole human race." ~Man and his Gods, Homer Smith, Little, Brown & Co., Boston, 1952.

The "Divine Julius" as "Roman Savior," and "Father of the Empire" was considered "God" among the Roman rabble for more than 300 years. Julius Caesar was the deity in some Western presbyters' texts, but was not recognized in the Eastern or Oriental writings.

Hard to believe? Next time you visit our Nation's Capitol, look up and you will see a deified George Washington painted on the ceiling. Is it a charismatic leadership that soon constitutes a huge following? Is it the need for the group to keep their leader alive in the hearts of the congregation? Whatever the reasoning world religions are in for a test. Be it positive or negative it is up to the respective religions to decide that issue for themselves. Electronic mass media is upon us. And with it comes the ability to access research sources worldwide. Can religion, as we know it today survive the onslaught? I feel it can. I hope it can. But, only with truthfulness and the openness of seeking truth can it survive this challenge to their basic tenets once taught as truth.

Religious organizations, by nature, must be immutable, that is they challenge the authority of man by the authority [or alleged authority] of God. Church leaders speak of having a revelation wherein God has spoken to them and told them to preach, follow the tenets of their god, and espouse the religious views of their doctrine. Did God also tell them to get rich off of his congregation? They will condemn those who do not agree with the inspired words of the religious group in one form or another. Forgiveness is often spoken of, but seldom practiced.

Will man be denied the Kingdom of God because he does not belong to a particular religion, or will he be denied because he does not practice the true meaning of the Word of God? Will man be denied because he was not born into a particular religion or because he never had the opportunity to hear the divine words? Whatever the acclaimed reason it appears that a deeper interest is working here. That of the religious group or authority and not that of God!

With the advent of computers and the Internet communication highway, access to new and varied sources is almost instantaneous. What really happened almost two thousand years ago? Can the Christian faiths continue to denounce the new revelations discovered, after having borrowed from every known Pagan cult in history? For centuries the major emphasis has been placed on the messenger and the message has been long forgotten. Are religious groups that far apart that they must continue warring against each other? In the next ten years major transformations will take place changing how we see religion.

The struggle for the pocket books of mankind will undoubtedly continue, but hopefully with enlightenment. For man will not struggle in darkness forever. Eventually he will see the light and realize what has happened and he will want to make a change to intensify his knowledge. Will the gods of the past suffice? Will the superstitions carry on in the next millennium?

Can man pay homage to God without the frills, secrecy, and manipulations now observed? The truth is so dangerous to certain members that they have killed, murdered, and maimed others, all in the name of God.

How long can they continue to conceal the truth? Can they now conceal the truth from the world? Seek and thy shall find...and the truth shall make you free.

The Censorship of Books [Censura Librurum] and the curtailing of the freedom of the press are a self-manifested means of authority run amuck. Under the guise of doing something for your good, what is best for man, declaration of pernicious writings, literary dangers, threatening innovators or modernists, a moral necessity, destruction to faith and morality, purity of morals, defamation of the sanctity of the inspiration of holy scriptures, purity of faith, protection of the public, safeguarding our children, and many, many more pedantically orientated terms created by the religious oligarchy to preserve their continuance and authority, we the ethical society have been made to suffer. Censorship must be kept to a minimum. ~cf. Psalms 137:9, KJV. We are all different, we think differently, we act differently, and we interpret things differently. Censorship, be it Ecclesiastical, spiritual or civil [Censura Proevian; by examination, before printing, or Censura Repressiva; repression after printing] must be used judiciously and most sparingly. The fact that countries can impose and do impose restrictions as to freedom of the press is quite evident to maintain the government in power.

Censorship for religious purposes, or any purpose, is suppression of free will and individual rights to choose what the individual feels is right for himself without the intimidating forces of a clerical or political class asserting menacing influences for those who do not follow their doctrines. We are not children who need to be led around with a noose to our necks to insure compliance. Call it what you may, censorship has never been to the advantage of the individuals who do not think as a coordinated group [organization] Who will censor the censors? Who will stand up to the abuses of the religious elite?

Who will protect the poor when these same authorities are the ones who repress? Church leaders have attempted to exonerate themselves by obfuscation, denial of truths, and by appealing to higher authorities and stigmatizing those who disagree. ~Deuteronomy 18:20, Luke 6:26.

However, one must remember that the Christians wrote the New Testament and it was the Christians that corrupted it [Lawmakers, Lawbreakers] The burning of books at Ephesus, Alexander, and throughout the Dark Ages to force their will upon others cannot be denied. Declaring as apocrypha all ancient writings disagreeing with their tenets [including the works of their own Saints].

The Secret Books of Mark and John being used and quoted until the 4th Century when the leaders found it beneficial to change their Doctrines. Suddenly the works of the Apostles are Censura Repressiva. In 325 the writings of Arius, "Thalia" being declared heretical and condemned and the apocryphal writings via "Mon Solum Repuddianda Sed Etiam Damnanda," later to be known as the Index to Forbidden Books or the Roman Index. Ancient books were required to be approved prior to publication or printing.

The Holy See with an iron hand deciding who and what was to be printed and sold to the world. To safeguard the Purity of Faith and to Protect the souls of the Faithful. Who is protecting the souls of the clergy and their immorality and lasciviousness? Who is to be their judge? Should not the masses be entitled to the same judgment [God] and not those of man?

A priest ascertained from his colleagues the percentage of Catholics in 36 American penitentiaries and the result extends to the whole of America and forced Christian morality... [48.50 percent in Joliet, 46.92 in San Quentin, 57.31 in Auburn, 63.64 in Wethersfield, etc.] Analysis by the Rev. L.B. Lehmann brings out the fact that in 28 states, in which Catholics compose a mere 17 percent of the population, yet they represent 33 percent of the criminals. "Kill every male among the little ones, and kill every woman who has known man by lying with him. But all the young girls who have not known man... Keep alive for yourselves." ~Moses, relaying God's orders to his people, Numbers 31:17-18.

Where is this Christian morality the Church speaks of so often? The Queensland Australia State Schools Defense Fund issued a leaflet quoting the figures from the official publications and showed that in Victoria in 1936 the Catholic prisoners numbered 2,164, whereas since the Catholics are only 18 percent of the population, their ought to have been only 754 Catholic prisoners if their moral quality was equal to that of non-Catholics. ~From Fr. Leo Kalmer, Crime and Religion, Father Kalmer is a Catholic prison chaplain, see also Questions and Answers by Haldeman-Julius, pg. 87.

As Catholics in Queensland had just published a new demand for the preferential treatment of their schools, the Protestants retorted humorously that they ought themselves to receive preferential treatment in the matter of taxation because they maintain extra police and jails to look after Catholic criminals. ~From the works of Father Joseph McCabe.

Those who claim inerrancy and yet continually change Scriptural interpretations impose their dictates upon the weak, ignorant, and unsuspecting public. It has never entered our psyche that we would be told untruths.

The Church declared as heretical John Wycliff [1412], John Hus [1415], and Ulrich [1484] for merely translating the ancient Latin into common everyday language so the masses could read the Bible.

Their primary crime in being that these arrogant fellows did not get prior permission from the Church [via the Holy See] before publishing their works. Saint Ambrose [340 C.E.] submitted his writings to the Bishop of Piacenza at Sabinus, for prior approval and corrections. Gemmadius sent his "De Scriptoribus Ecclesiasticos" to Pope Gelasius I [492] for pre-approval, and Godfrey of Viterbo sends a copy of his work "Pantheon" to Pope Urban III [1186] for examination. The Church does not like to be circumvented in these matters.

Approved books are declared "Corrected Copy" [actually purged, corrupted, tarnished], and made available only to good Christians. Even Universities had to oblige the Church in these matters. In 1342 the University of Paris is required to adhere to Church thought and submit a list of books used and sold at the university. Saint Boniface in 745 has his writings to the Apostolic See declared heretical and condemned by the Roman Synod.

Visiting Germany in the 8th century, Saint Boniface found that none of the clergy honored their vows of celibacy. Paul speaks of celibacy, which he considers the doctrine of Demons, "Men who forbid marriage." ~1 Timothy 4:3.

Saint Boniface writes to Pope Zachary, 741-52, "Young men who spent their youth in rape and adultery were rising in the ranks of the clergy. They were spending their nights in bed with four or five women, then getting up in the morning... To celebrate mass."

Bishop Rathurio complained that if he excommunicated unchaste priests "There would be none left to administer the sacraments, except boys. If he excluded bastards, as canon law demanded, not even boys [would be left]." ~De Rosa, op. cit., pp. 404-05.

The writings of Saint Boniface are ordered to be collected and burned, but Pope Saint Zacharias intercedes and has his works sent to the Pontifical Archives instead [even the writings of the Saints and Popes are not exempt from the changes in liturgy and condemnation. What happened to the inerrancy of the Popes in religious matters?].

Nothing is left to the free will of man for interpretation. Pope Gregory IX condemns some of the great Greek writers, such as Aristotle, in 1231.

Aristotle is blacklisted until all of his writings can be evaluated and approved [The Provincial Synod of Paris had already declared the works of Aristotle forbidden]. Mature adults should be the judge of what is good for them and not the Church. If man needs guidance and clarification on a religious matter, so be it. Let him seek the religion of his own choosing for illumination and not let it be forced upon him.

"I am a Catholic and a disciple of the God who hath a horror of lies. I seek the truth, all the truth, and nothing but the truth. Although our weak eyes do not see at once the uses of it, or rather see damage and peril, we must proclaim it fearlessly" ~Mi del' Epinosis

Conclusion:

To many Christians, the acceptance of the new religion by Emperor Constantine is nothing less than a sign from God, "This is the hand of God working in history." ~Shaye I.D. Cohen: Samuel Ungerleider Professor of Judaic Studies and Professor of Religious Studies Brown University.

With the advent of the printing press and the availability of Bibles to all men came the reduction of the powers of the Church as it now found itself unable to control what its followers could read. The early followers thought they were doing God's work by reading his words. Regrettably, this was not so.

As stated previously, the Church wanted its followers to read the Church's words. The advent of the Forbidden Books Index could not outlaw the Bible from the people, but it tried, by restricting the reading of all Bibles to the only book accepted by the Church.

Early interpreters of the Bible were intent on bringing the true word of God to all of his assemblage but found themselves condemned by the religious leaders and even threatened with excommunication or death. If they should be fortunate to die of natural causes the Church did not let that slow it down in digging up the bones of the deceased and having them burned. Such contemptuousness and arrogance by the Church was a vain effort to perpetuate its own version of Scriptures and to maintain the population in mass ignorance.

We now know that the Bible has been misinterpreted and or willfully altered by various religious groups throughout history for their own political as well as religious gain, and these interpretations are still the cause of much misunderstanding today.

The first-born son of Abraham being Ishmael or Isaac being a controversial point in the interpretation of early Scripture, the Trinity of Jesus Christ being the divisive point in major Christian faiths, the perpetual virginity of Mary discussed by world religious leaders and to which religion is the true faith to follow. None can declare for none know the Truth or dare declare it.

Of Matthew 28:19, the so-called Trinity, “One would expect this name to be that of Jesus and it is surprising to find the text continuing with ‘The Father, and the Son, and the Holy Ghost,’ which are no names at all. The suspicion that this is not what Matthew originally wrote naturally arises. In ‘Father, Son and Holy Ghost’ we have the Trinitarian formula... Which was associated with Christian Baptism in the 2nd century, as evidenced in the Didache, chapter seven.” ~The S.P.C.K. published in 1964, Volume One, of the Clarified New Testament.

Various factions throughout history have destroyed much of the Truth in an effort to conceal and obfuscate those practices, which differed from those of the conquerors. What is the Truth? That is up to each of us to seek. To know that there is a God who will help us in our quest so long as we do well to our fellow man and help each other. To know that there is another life. A far simpler life, a life in which we can share an eternity is something many will debate but few can contradict religiously or philosophically.

To make war in the name of God, to lie, cheat, and acquire vast riches illegally is not the way of God. Many politicians as well as clergy of various denominations have adulterated the word of God in order to benefit from the words of prophets and spiritual guides throughout history. But, to read, study, and learn the Truth will not only benefit the individual, but also all who encounter this person and risk being enlightened. For this person has no religion; this person has no prejudices; this person has only a faith in God and a willingness to do good.

The early Church set about on a propaganda campaign to spread its teachings throughout the world. Nothing significantly wrong in that so far, as many new religions, even today are quite guilty of the same for purposes of proliferation of their faith. However, is the guilt necessary?

Are we so backwards that we must still threaten and cajole members to attend church? The Church has seen fit to force its will upon man in phases:

1. The Church took this campaign of proliferation one step further, by Atrocity Accusation. They claimed all Non-Christians were guilty of crimes and atrocities perpetrated upon innocent Christians. Hence, we have the advent of the Crusades, murder in the name of God.
2. Hyperbolic Inflation, where Christians are told that they are doing this all for God, or in the name of Christ. The future of Christianity is uncertain and heathens must be obliterated from the face of this earth if Christianity is to survive.
3. Dehumanization or Demonization [Devil worshipping, Satanism, evil, wicked, immorality, or sinful practices]. The Jews are included in this early historical list of evils as the Christians blame them for the death of their Savior. Early Crusaders used them to sharpen their swords for the Big Event on the way to Jerusalem. ‘If it can be shown, by clear and indisputable evidence, that the history of Jesus Christ [as commonly received among Christians] is a forgery and a fiction—that he was not the son of a virgin called Mary, the wife of Joseph the carpenter, who conceived through the power of the holy ghost, and ceased not to be a virgin even after she had become a mother—that he did not converse with the Jewish doctors in the temple—nor preach to the populace in Jerusalem and elsewhere—nor perform miraculous cures—nor hold communion with the devil—nor, in point of fact, do any one act that pious enthusiasts and ignorant devotees have ascribed to him; and further, that neither a god nor a man called Christ was crucified by Pontius Pilate, the Procurator, and therefore could not by possibility have arisen from the dead three days after an event which did not happen, and ascend into heaven, as is vulgarly supposed,—if, we repeat, it can be clearly proved that the foregoing assertions about the birth, life, death, and Resurrection of Jesus Christ, are idle tales, having no foundation whatever in truth—mere fictions stolen from the mythological fables of ancient nations,—the very root of the Christian system will be as naught! "Therefore, as the fire devoureth the stubble, and the flame consumeth the chaff, so their root shall be as rottenness, and their blossom shall go up as dust." " ~From: The Existence of Christ

Disproved, by Irresistible Evidence, in a Series of Letters, From a German Jew, Addressed to Christians of All Denominations. London: Henry Hetherington, 14, Wine Office Court, Fleet Street. A. Heywood, Manchester. J. Taylor, Smallbrook Street, Birmingham. &c. &c., 1841.

4. Polarization, a schism between those who are for Christianity and all others are seen as opposed. Those who are not for Christianity must be against it.
5. Divine Sanction or God is On Our Side. God help us in our battle, or God be with you/us in our/your tribulations against the oppressors, etc. If God is with us, then we could not be wrong. Remember the Nazi belt buckles? "Gott mit uns" "God is with us."
6. With the introduction of the computer, we are now faced with phase six, Mega-Propaganda. Religious groups, fanatical cliques, and any subversive entity can now have access to a world distribution center to enjoin others to take up their specific cause, from Neo-Nazis to any group, which espouses a cause. We now have the Catholic Apologists who still attempt to tell us what history was trying to say, totally disregarding what actually happened. We have a Pope who refuses to admit that the Church laundered money, denying all accusations while he attempts to hide bank documents.
7. A systematic research of history will show the Egyptian God, 'Ra,' the 'Sun-God,' and the ancient veneration of the golden corn as being representative of the life giving 'Rays of the Sun,' along with its Babylonian counterpart, the 'Queen of Heaven,' with her golden locks, the Roman complement "Ceres," with golden tresses, all with references to the 'Sun' and its 'Magical Life Giving Properties of Rejuvenation,' that the Christians are truly 'Children of the Corn.' The symbolic ritual of the Egyptian Osiris consisted primarily in the celebration of a Eucharistic rite, in which the believers and followers of Osiris ate the flesh of their God in the form of the wheat-cakes [Eucharist] and drank his blood in the form of barley-ale. ~cf. Matthew 26:26, Mark 14:22, Luke 22:19, I Corinthians 11:24, Romans 6:5, John 5:40, John 6:33, John 10:10, John 10:38, John 20:31. Note: The Jehovah's Witnesses' Watchtower Bible is derived from the Egyptian Alexandrian Codex.

There is no Christian ritual in existence today, which has not borrowed from a previous Pagan belief. The seventh and final phase is restructuring. Can the Christianized Pagan religion reform and still survive in the 21st century? Only time will tell, as the new millennium brings on advanced technology and an information highway which defies censorship and other means of suppression. No doubt this book will enlighten many, while others, fundamentalists, will stick to their beliefs, so mote it be. I only wish the truth to be made known so posterity will not have to suffer under a corrupt regime of priest-craft which long ago should have been retired.

"Nothing can be more clear than this, that the oft quoted historians [Tacitus, 56-120 C.E.] [Suetonius, 69-140 C.E.] have spoken of Christ upon vague rumor, without attaching any importance to the tale, and therefore, their testimony by no means offers a safe satisfactory guarantee of the existence of Christ, whether as God, legislator, or impostor. If that existence had been an indubitable fact, it is hardly credible that from the times of Tertullian [160-220 C.E.], authors who had seriously discussed the question and examined the origin of Christianity, should have written that the worship of the Christians was that of the 'Sun,' and by no means connected with a man who had formerly existed. Those persons who pretend to the character of the philosophers, and make of Christ a reformer, or an impostor, only display their ignorance of ancient history, and are brought to such an erroneous conclusion because they have not enough of faith to believe in Christ as a god; and on the other hand, not had an opportunity to compare his fabulous history with the solar legend; hence they do not see in his character what it really is—a sacerdotal fiction." ~See: A History of Freethought in the Nineteenth Century, J.M. Robertson, vol. 1, 76.

Of Emperor Nero and the burning of Rome, "... A vast multitude [Christians], were convicted, not so much of the crime of incendiarism [fire] as of hatred of the human race. And in their deaths they were made the subjects of sport; for they were wrapped in the hides of wild beasts and torn to pieces by dogs, or nailed to crosses, or set on fire, and when day declined, were burned to serve for nocturnal lights." ~Tacitus, Annals XV.44.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

Many Christian writers have indulged in the creative writing of the burning of Rome. Why? Because it glorifies their persecution, and survival in a tempestuous world made up of Pagans, and other un-Christian like creatures. "Whichever hypothesis we adopt, one thing remains certain: of all the Christian authors who wrote before and after Tacitus up to the year 1000, Severus Sulpicius is the only one to make use of the version implicating Nero, and, if we admit the authenticity of the passage of the 'Annals,' we have to find some explanation for the 'Conspiracy of Silence', which surrounded it during the first ten centuries of the life of the Church." ~Gerard Walter, Nero, George Allen & Unwin, London, 1957, chapter IX, The Fire of Rome, p. 174.

The greatest hoax in the history of mankind, "When we take account of these many possible interpretations of [Tacitus'] Annals, xv, 44, all of which are as probable as, if not more probable than, the customary Christian explanation, the narrative of Tacitus cannot be quoted as a witness to the historicity of Jesus. We may say, indeed, that history has hitherto treated the passage, in view of its importance, with an absolutely irresponsible superficialness and levity..." ~The Witnesses to the Historicity of Jesus, by Arthur Drews, 1865-1935, Tr. Joseph McCabe, Watts, 1912. Amo reprint, 1972.

Pope Pius XI in 1929 denies that there ever was such a compact between the Axis powers and that it is just another lie intended to mortify the Church, yet Hitler said of the Catholic Church, "Negligible allies, as they had lost their power over men's minds in many parts of the world."

The Concordat and Treaty were editorially discussed in every major paper in the world, especially the Catholic papers, which hailed this agreement as a brilliant triumph of Papal diplomacy, the Vatican supporting the Axis powers til it finally saw the light and realized that Hitler would lose, after the introduction of America into the war. It sounds highly implausible that a Catholic, today, should not know that the Vatican City, with all its privileges [radio, correspondents, newspapers, etc.] only began with and were founded by that treaty of collaboration with Hitler, Mussolini, and Emperor Hirohito [referred to as Tenno Heika, meaning "son of heaven"], in an attempt to force Catholicism upon the world.

This is reflective of the Church's policy which has not changed in over 1800 years. It will do anything to see that Catholicism spreads, at any cost. It will negotiate covenants with any entity, at any price if it feels it is to the advantage of the Church. It will barter with the devil if it feels it necessary.

What will the future bring us regarding religion? Will the Church continue to maintain it alone represents the poor while it cajoles governments to proliferate the Catholic perspective, while the Church continues its tax-free status? "It is an absurd fiction that the Churches are useful. They are nothing more than propaganda centers for superstitious faiths and doctrines. Church members have a right to believe in and propagate their various doctrines. But they should pay every item of the cost, of this propaganda, including fair taxation for all church property." ~E. Haldeman-Julius, The Church Is a Burden, Not a Benefit, In Social Life.

With billions of dollars worth of real-property in the United States alone, it is the middle class and poor who must make up the deficits in higher taxes to recompense the public coffers for taxes lost each year. Who does the Church truly represent?

Would you steal from God? The Christian ministry does so every Sunday. Tithes, offerings, blessings, were all meant for the poor, and not for new a Mercedes, or another estate home; "'Would you tax God?' asks a defender of church tax exemption. Well, if there were a God he should be able to pay his own way and support his own business. If not, then he should do like other business men and close up shop." ~E. Haldeman-Julius, The Church Is a Burden, Not a Benefit, In Social Life.

"In the United States, Federal and State Constitutions ordain separation of State and Church, forbid the establishment of any religion, and prohibit grants of money in support of it. But withal, so inveterate is the force of grafting habit, so prone yet the politicians to cater to 'The Church' upon the specious pretext that the Church and religion are of some utility for "moral" purposes and as 'The Big Policeman' for the restriction of vice and crime,- the politicians not being familiar with the 'Moral record' of the Church, that the Church evades the principle and often the letter of the law, and is yet largely supported and kept alive by the people through the secular State. Some nine billions of dollars of deadhand and deadhead property thus escapes taxation in the United States, and the idle and vicious priestcraft and its system are supported by the State its constitution and laws notwithstanding. For every dollar of tax-exempt property, the taxpayer pays double. The vast majority of the people supports thus a small but vocal minority, which but for such public favors would soon perish off the land, for its own membership could not and would not keep it going if it had to pay the taxes, the burden of which it now shifts to the unbelieving or indifferent majority. The system is unjust and undemocratic, is immoral." ~Forgery in Christianity by Joseph Wheless.

"In most European countries the civil authority restricts in three ways the right of the Church to receive donations: by imposing forms and conditions; by reserving the right to say what institutions may receive donations, and by requiring the approval of the civil authority." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 5, 117.

All the major religions of the world are only a few thousand years old, yet God has existed for more than millions of years. What were the religions of ancient man? Was his God less than the God we have now? Are they not the One and the same God? Does it really matter?

The need for man to have a God is based on the realities or cruelties of life, as we know it yesterday, today, and tomorrow. We will always have the poor amongst us as we will always have problems to solve each and every day as sure as the sun appears on the horizon each day. This should not stop us from trying. In order to become a better person, an advanced people, an improved civilization. We strive to conquer outer space and have yet to conquer our own limitations and ourselves.

What does the future have in store for us? That is up to each of us to decide. We are what we let ourselves become.

Our nation, our world, or ourselves, what will be will be what we let happen and we can hold no one else responsible but ourselves. We must join hands, all faiths, all religions, and all dedicated sects to make this a better world so that we may live together peacefully. We must set aside our petty differences and religious and political views to subscribe to a better world through joint efforts for humanity and not individuals, groups, political parties or nations. Because all are created in God's image, all are equal. Offenses against one are an offense against all. If we succeed in helping each other, then there will be no need for us calling each other by our national or religious names for we will all be one, Mankind!

Pope John Paul apologized to the Jews in March of the year 2000, yet refuses to release the ill-gotten gains from the Jewish Holocaust to the survivors. He now travels around the world apologizing to the Arabs and the Eastern Orthodox. A political sham aimed purely at obtaining converts.

In 1983, John Paul II re-institutes the Inquisition, now the Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith, formerly the Congregation of the Holy Office, sometimes referred to as the, Shared Congregation of the Roman and Universal Inquisition. Originally, "Secretariat of the Congregation of the Holy Office of the Inquisition. For what purpose is this body resurrected? Does the Roman Church now intend to make another attempt to save The Protestant Republic of the United States?

Has the leopard changed its spots? In the 21st century, the Law of God, conserved in the latest Edition of the 'Holy Canon Law,' orders murder for the relief of the unbelievers, as these infamous "principles are in their own nature irreformable; ... Owing to changed conditions [forced upon it by secular civilization] are to all practical intents and purposes obsolete ... The custom of burning heretics is really not a question of justice, but a question of civilization!" ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 14, 769.

Few Americans will ever know the verdict of the great historians that "The banners of the Church were rarely seen on the side of the people," but they were few who had never heard of the fires of the Inquisition which paralyzed the rights of individuals for centuries and the feudal monarchies, which the Church sustained in Europe for ages.

It is regrettable that even today, in the 21st century that history is still besmirched by Catholic doctrine and logic. So impressionable is this body of self declared representatives of God that they still influence and corrupt the thinking of the next generation.

"In dark ages people are best guided by religion, as in a pitch black night a blind man is the best guide; he knows the roads and paths better than a man who can see. When daylight comes, however, it is foolish to use blind, old men as guides." ~Heinrich Heine. Gedanken und Einfalle.

The Dark Ages, when the Church reigned supreme should have been known as the Light Ages when man prospered.

The Vatican refuses to open its financial records and has not been able to distance itself from financial scandals that continue to rock the world.

The Papacy, implicated in money laundering and Mafia connections does little to show the world transparency in its financial dealings. Today, Poland, homeland of John Paul II, is known as the drug capitol of the world in money laundering of drug dealings. Is this merely coincidental or is there a Vatican connection? I would like to think not. But, with the Vatican failing to be transparent and forthright with the media and its membership, what alternatives do we have?

After paying out hundreds of millions of dollars in fines, which the Papacy tried to suppress in the 1980's, is it no wonder that Catholics are losing faith in their leader?

The Church does not represent the poor, but the rich and powerful. Hitler, a Catholic, was never Excommunicated for his wanton killing of millions of Jews across Europe. His book, Mien Kampf, condoning hatred of non-Christians, was never placed on the Forbidden Index List. Is there another dictator in the making, waiting to slaughter those of other faiths, because he also was raised on the subliminal hatred taught by Christianity?

Authoritarian governments and their despot leaders worldwide are not condemned by the Church for their looting of national treasuries. Catholic dictators are quite in abundance in Christian third world countries. How can the Church represent the poor if it seeks to continue its tax-free status in countries run by dictatorial or tyrannical powers? Which comes first, the needs of the poor or the richness of the Church? The hypocrisy lives on as the religious apologists keep asking forgiveness in the hope that their sins will be forgiven while they continue to enrich themselves off the sufferings of the naïve poor.

The Pope asks the developed countries to forgive the financial burdens of these third world countries. Why should the taxpayers of developed countries support the totalitarian and dictatorial whims of third world despots? Yes, they stole from their countries, but is this an obligation of innocent Catholics, Jews, Muslims, Baptists, Methodists, etc. to bow to the wishes of a Pope by letting these now rich dictators live out their lives in luxurious splendor? If their country does not wish to prosecute, then let the Church dig into its sumptuous coffers and leave the guiltless of the world alone.

Corruption begins at the local level in Third World countries and the Roman Church now asks the honest workers of the world to support these despots in their criminal acts by letting them be forgiven their debts? The World Bank admits that 20-30% of the loan [funding] to third world countries disappears. Is this fair? Can the Pope speak also for the non-Christian sector? Let all mankind work to help his fellow man, and let those who do evil pay for their evil. Not the working people of free and developed countries, and not the innocent and uninformed tax payers.

"The only danger in truth is you will then know what you must do." ~By E. Christopher Reyes

"The thoughts of the gods are not more unchangeable than those of the men who interpret them. They advance-but they also lag behind the thoughts of men.... The Christian God was once a Jew. Now he is an anti-Semite." ~Jacques Anatole

"Martyrs have been sincere. And so have tyrants. Wise men have been sincere. And so have fools."
~Joseph McCabe

“The Doctrine which, from the very first origin of religious dissensions, has been held by bigots of all sects, when condensed into a few words and stripped of rhetorical disguise, is simply this: I am in the right, and you are in the wrong. When you are the stronger, you ought to tolerate me; for it is your duty to tolerate truth. But when I am the stronger I shall persecute you; for it is my duty to persecute error.”

~Thomas Babington Macaulay

“When I was a child, I understood as a child; I thought as a child, but when I became a man, I put away childish things.” ~Saint Paul in I Corinthians 13:11.

I Make No Promises

*And in my dreams I called out to my maker,
“Oh Lord! Why have you made my life to suffer?”
“Wouldst't thou take me now to end my struggle?”
“I've lived all my life in pain and suffering.
Please hold me in your arms to feel your glory.”*

To Pope Pius XII, “I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians.” ~Mahatma Gandhi

Man's Search for Spirituality: by E. Christopher Reyes, Dimiao, Bohol, 6305

And then, a voice! It spoke to me so softly.

"My son! My son! It's not time for you to go."

"You've struggled all your life with your heavy load."

*"I make no promises, but to bless you in this world,
And to bless you in the world that's yet to come."*

*"I crippled you as a child, yet you struggled,
To hold those things which bring happiness and joy."*

"I crushed your back, and yet you stand upright, Amongst all the creatures, both strong and slight."

*"I sapped your arms of strength, and yet you reach out,
To hold all my children and give them strength."*

"Cancer knocked you to your knees and made you cry."

"Yet, still you struggled to survive."

"I haven't lost my faith in you, my son."

"All the things I did to you will serve a purpose."

*"I make no promises, but to bless you in this world,
And the next, which is yet to come."*

*"I crippled your legs to see if you would stand tall,
Like the great men who stood here long ago."*

"I crushed your back to see if you would sit up proudly."

"With all mankind and souls around the world."

*"Your arms I weakened to see you struggle,
To help my children from their pains of agony."*

"With each sickness you gained more strength."

"Your soul is now stronger for the chores ahead."

*"I make no promises, but to bless you in this world,
And the one that's yet to come."*

"No! I cannot take you now my son."

"You're not ready for the world that's yet to dawn."

"Your days in this world are not ended.

Many tasks have I lain before your stead."

"All that I ask is that you never give up hope."

"And, you'll succeed, where in the past you stumbled."

*"I left your mind alone for you to notice,
The fight between all that's right or wrong."*

"So! Stay my son! And enjoy the little pleasures, Of life's sweet songs, 'tween creatures large and small."

"I make no promises, but to bless you."

"In this world, and the one that's yet to come."
