Is that credit be given where credit is due.

"Am I therefore become your enemy because I tell you the truth?" ~Galatians 4:16, Holy Bible.

*"We are dying today from the fact of not having anyone who knows how to lay down his life for the Truth." ~Pierre Teilhard de Chardin, S.J., quoted in The Jesuits: The Society of Jesus and the Betrayal of the Roman Catholic Church by Malachi Martin, author of Vatican and The Final Conclave, pg 286, 1987.*

Dedication

This book is dedicated to those brave individuals who refuse to be led blindly through life,

And seek enlightenment in order to listen to God's advice.

And to all those who have suffered at the hands of those who proclaim

To be the instruments of the God whose name

Is our Lord. In his infinite wisdom, may He look down upon us

And forgive those who profane and discuss

His name by using it to make man to suffer.

In our quest for knowledge we seek a God to buffer

Us from the everyday pain and prejudices to make life softer.

We need not agree on each and every one

Of the many aspects of the Scriptures of when life began,

Suffice it to say the intention of God is to lessen the errors

And sufferings of the begotten creatures for our character;

Not to inundate us with pedantic rhetoric from the pulpits;

Nor the lies of the priests for their benefits.

Man, in all his inquisitiveness is abundantly obsessed by a pit

Of damnation and less on the spiritual world that is righteous

And fair in its treatment of all of God's creatures thus.

May this abundance of righteousness some day spread to all of us

In this material world that we may also treat our brother illustrious

As equals and in fairness, in justness and in fairness.

The evils we do, we do not in God's name, but our own.

E. Christopher Reyes, 28 February, 2003, rev. Jan. 2011.

"This book will never be published-in fact it couldn't be, because it would be a felony to soil the mails with it, for it has much Holy Scripture in it of the kind that... Can't be properly read aloud, except from the pulpit, and in family worship." ~Mark Twain in reference to the Holy Bible.

Throughout his life Mark Twain would challenge the very foundations of religion, aristocracy, and the halls authority, and his rewards will be a profound denunciation of almost all of his works by those who feel threatened, not by falsehoods, but, by the truth, which comes forth from the mouths of his characters in his now famous writings.

"Oh, what a tangled web we weave... When first we practice to deceive!" ~Sir Walter Scott.

Introduction:

For centuries man has laid waste lands and their inhabitants under the assumption that they, the conquerors, were inspired and being led by a superior God or Gods as the conquered people are forced to accept their vanquishers as the supreme rules and their conquerors gods as the almighty successors to their own or face further humiliation and death.

The advent of Christianity did little to change this status quo of conquered and vanquished. History is replete with the efforts of the early Christians to force their new god upon the inhabitants of conquered lands. Kings and other monarchs proclaiming that all un-Christianized lands and peoples were fair game to be conquered and subjugated by the new so-called pious world leaders. The new lands will thence become the property of the new leaders and the people the subjects of the new church.

This travesty of friend and foe [Christian and Non-Christian] in the division of lands is subject to debate today in most third world Christian countries. Foreign lands have been stolen from the indigenous peoples by the Church, [Church, in this book, unless otherwise specified refers to the Roman Catholic Church and its representatives], via the early Christian friars with the approval of their Popes, and the support of the national governments.

"Religion is a means of forcing mankind to accept institutional doctrines, often abandoning the truth, for the benefit of the institution, and seldom mankind." ~E. Christopher Reyes

Agrarian documents are forged by Church leaders to give the lands away as rewards to their friends, relatives, and all those who support the Catholic cause as the Pope will often times turn the other cheek. The affects of this mass appropriation of property are quite evident in the poorer countries today, especially in Latin America and the Philippines. In this modern 21st century era, have we really progressed when we now have countries using their armies to declare war on their neighbors because they are not of the same faith?

"Rome held out to men the possibility of becoming pure and sinless saints [ontological perfection], and those who attained this perfection reached sainthood and were qualified to enter Heaven at the hour of death. Those who did not become perfect and absolutely sinless in the flesh would need to go to Purgatory after death and thus be made completely just and qualified to enter Heaven." ~The Great Issues of the Reformation, Present Truth.

Is God a Christian, a Muslim, or a Jew? This and other issues are addressed in this book in an effort to show that we have more in common with each other in the belief of a Supreme God than we have in disagreements. More over, those differences are not worth fighting wars over. The pages of the Bible have been changed to accommodate the prevailing attitudes and interpretations of those in power to such an extent that its true meaning has been almost lost to this generation.

What Christian faith today will dare read from the very book that Jesus preached from? [The Torah] I may be wrong in my interpretation of Scripture, but so also may the various other dominant religious sects in their interpretations, some having translated from the King James Version or other documents not written in the original language and already adulterated by the priest-craft.

"It ain't those parts of the Bible that I can't understand that bother me, it is the parts that I do understand." ~Mark Twain [Samuel Clemens]

I have only sought to seek the Truth and in doing so, I have concluded that all religions are good if they help mankind [not just the leaders and not only the followers of the specific religious group] Religion is founded on the precept of change. This desire to bring about the changes desired but out of reach of the common man leads to a concept of a being beyond the perception of mankind.

God is represented as some entity that man cannot describe, for if he could he would have a God with set parameters and therefore not be all encompassing in all aspects of man's life. Being representative of the "All" this entity would be omnipotent, omniscient and omnipresent. It would have no bounds and therefore no limitations to solve the dilemmas of mankind. Something, which few men think about when they become terrorists and proclaim to do God's work. Why would an omnipotent God need man to do his work?

The Gnostics believed that each of us is his or her own expert on God. Each of us will seek knowledge to his or her own capacity and to the extent that he [or she] will become as one with God. Each of us has a different capacity in wanting to know the Truth.

To this endeavor I have written this book to help each of you find God in his or her own way. No one is entirely right, no one is entirely wrong. What matters is that we promote the common good of mankind in the name of God and not attempt to wage war in the name of God. The people, who are being misled, now deserve the Truth.

"I can live with the heretics and infidels for I know whereof they speak: it's the [Christian] liars that cause me great consternation." ~E. Christopher Reyes

For daring to reveal the truth, the author, on January 31st is forced to leave the Philippines, abruptly, after and Order is issued for his arrest for 'Failure to adapt to the prevailing norms and customs of the community.' Truer words have never been spoken as the author refuses to cow-tow or yield to corrupt officials in Dimiao [located in Bohol, Philippines].

To those Christians who dare read this book, which challenges their veracity, I have done their homework for them, that is looked up Scripture, which can set their mind at ease so they can ignore the truth, that one must not concern oneself with details, and numbers, and focus on their supposed inspired Word of God, "...Not to occupy themselves with myths and endless genealogies..." ~1 Timothy 1.4.

"Avoid foolish questions, and genealogies. In these the Jews particularly delighted; they abounded in the most frivolous questions; and, as they had little piety themselves, they were solicitous to show that they had descended from godly ancestors... Of their frivolous questions, and the answers given to them, by the wisest and most reputable of their rabbins, the following is a specimen, Rabbi Hillel was asked, 'Why have the Babylonians round heads?' To which he answered, 'This is a difficult question, but I will tell the reason: Their heads are round because they have but little wit. ...'" ~Epistle to Titus: Books of the New Testament Gospels

But, "Chronology is important. Without chronology it is not possible to understand history, for chronology is the backbone of history. We know that God regards chronology as important, for He has put so much of it into His Word. We find chronology not only in the historical books of the Bible, but also in the prophetic books, in the Gospels, and in the writings of Paul." ~A Chronology of the Hebrew Kings, Grand Rapids: Zondervan, 1977, p. 7.

Throughout the history of man, there has always been that quest for wanting to know that which we sometimes say is unknowable. Who was the first man? Is there a God? Why should there be a God? Can one prove whether or not there is a God? Is there another life after death?

What will happen to me when I die? Can man ever know or gain knowledge into those aspects of his life which seem unreachable? How can man protect himself against the forces which he has no control? What is in the future for mankind? Where do the good go after death? Where do the bad go? Is there really a life after death for us plain mortals?

A darkness pervaded the early life of man and in that darkness was brought not only fear of being unable to see the dangers around him, but also a darkness which filled his mind with horrible thoughts as to what could happen to him since he was without knowledge. A darkness that brought on fears, fear of not knowing, and fear of being at the mercy of the elements of disaster, catastrophe, pestilence, and disease. Ignorance is without knowledge. Man did not know, but man wanted to know. Where will he gain this knowledge? How will he gain this knowledge? Who will give him this knowledge?

"The right to search for truth implies also a duty, one must not conceal any part of what one has recognized to be true." ~Albert Einstein

Man's Quest for Knowledge vs. Institutionally Imposed Knowledge :

"If you tell a lie big enough and keep repeating it people will eventually come to believe it." ~ Joseph Goebbels, Adolf Hitler's Nazi Catholic crusader.

This quest for knowledge or alleged knowledge brought about the beginnings of a class of people later to become the soothsayers, cultists, sorcerers, shamans, wizards, magicians, and priests who would act as intermediaries between the known and unknown, between man and his god. These so called intermediaries cultivate a God of reciprocity who helps man so long as man worships Him. The priests attempt to explain the nature of things and function to help man, but over time came to help them.

Often times their actions helped themselves and/or their religious organizations to become institutions of indisputable power. "There is a beast in every man, which can be stirred by the accumulation of too much power." ~E. Christopher Reyes

This left mankind in the clutches of religious institutions that did whatever was necessary to perpetuate their powers, their definitions of God, and their beliefs. A select group [oligarchy] will dictate to man what beliefs are, a select few who cannot even follow their own laws. Man was in search of a God, a God who is both omnipresent and omnipotent.

"It is the fate of those who toil at the lower employments of life, to be rather driven by the fear of evil, than attracted by the prospect of good, to be exposed to censure, without hope of praise; to be disgraced by miscarriage, or punished for neglect, where success would have been without applause, and diligence without reward." ~Samuel Johnson, 1755

Man is in search of a God will cure the evils of this world and who is more powerful than any ruler on earth is. Man is in need of spiritual guidance and uplifting against the disasters that occur in this mundane world and the wrongs that are perpetrated by his fellow man. Man has put his faith in those who claimed to have this knowledge, but the religious institutions were also searching.

They were in search of man, who in his ignorance, would follow blindly without mental reservation or equivocation into whatever nadir the institution would ascend or for that matter descend. They needed followers and would devise dogma, doctrine, and ritual, to convert man to their stated propose. Free thinkers are the anathema to the Church. "Mankind is born free, and it is only through the insidious process of religious indoctrination that man is made to feel the penitentiary of mental enslavement and obedience to strangers [the priest craft]." ~E. Christopher Reyes

Free thinkers are those who will not follow blindly, considered enemies of the Church, and must be destroyed at all costs. It is a sad part of our religious history that the glory of the religious institutions should have been the days when they ruled in the Glory of God, without reservation, speaking of the greatness that awaits us in the hereafter, and the suffering of those who dedicated their lives to that end receiving a better life in the hereafter. Unfortunately, what we have is a period when the Church abused its authority. The Church maltreated those whom it promised to help, the weak, the poor and those who believed blindly in the authority of their Church leaders, for to do otherwise would show vulnerability "... Tried them, which say they are Apostles, and... Found them liars." ~Revelations 2:2.

"I seek only truth, justice, and the way of God, not man." ~E. Christopher Reyes

The Dark Ages:

The days when the Roman Catholic Church reigned supreme over Europe should have been its most glorious days. Days when the people prospered, when religion flourished, and the sciences would make advancements to help mankind. Unfortunately, the days of the unquestionable supreme rule of the Church is known as the Dark Ages.

An Age existed when the Church leaders controlled all knowledge, an age when the Church leaders will declare to the masses what is or is not the Truth, an age when all scientific progress came to an almost abrupt halt, and a most deplorable time when men of science were forced to adapt the counsel of Saint Paul and state, "It is better to go to Church than to be burned," being most fearful of their self-righteous Church leaders.

The Church attempted to control the thoughts as well as the thinking of their Christian followers, but could not control the thinking of those of the new religion that was overtaking the Arab world in the 7th Century. Paul is in fact, traditionally regarded as the devotee who twisted the simple Jesus into a Hellenistic transcendent entity; and there are those who also propose that the Jerusalem group did not regard Jesus as being Divine!

Paul, who may have also come in contact with followers of Mithraism in Tarsus, either unconsciously or unintentionally may have restructured the prevailing mystery beliefs because he was drenched in the religious frenzy of those religions. ~Note: Mithraics see the death of their God as purely symbolic, not literal.

The Prophet Muhammad also had a vision, and his vision did not take into consideration so much the thinking of the Christian world, as it did the corruption of man and his actions as a whole against mankind. Offering a prayer to God once a week, as practiced in the Jewish and Christian faiths, was not enough, and contrary to what Paul says, that there can be no repentance for sin after baptism. ~Hebrews 6:4-6.

The Pagans already had Baptisms and sacred rites, "[T]he nations, who are strangers to all understanding of spiritual powers, ascribe to their idols the imbuing of waters with the selfsame efficacy... For washing is the channel through which they are initiated into some sacred rites... At all events, at the Apollinarian and Eleusinian games they are Baptized; and they presume that the effect of their doing that is their Regeneration and the remission of the penalties due to their perjuries." ~Tertullian, On Baptism, ch. 5; Ante-Nicene Fathers, vol. 3, p. 669.

"Notwithstanding the attempts that have been made to prove that Eleusinian Baptism signified Rebirth, or to envisage it as a bridal-bath, a death-mystery, or an image of the Resurrection, such possible interpretations cannot be grounded on the attestations that have come down to us." ~Wagner.

Many Christians would be astounded to hear, "Whipped, insulted, crowned with thorns, and nailed to a cross, at the Qumran monastery, not in, or near the city of Jerusalem, as has been supposed by so many, for so many years, Jesus only a relatively few hours after his crucifixion, did indeed get off that cross, by himself, under his own power." ~The Modern Case Against The Gnostics as presented by Marvin Olasky in World, May 20, 2008, Volume 21-Number 20.

Man was becoming corrupt and treating his fellow man with impudence and with total disregard for life. God, through an angel, speaks to Muhammad and tells him that man must now offer more prayers and seek salvation by acting properly [within the laws] that he then delineates to the Prophet. Mohammad's vision did not acquiesce to the Catholic Church, and the Prophet's vision did not ask permission to spread this new word of God.

The faith of Muhammad encouraged man to seek the Truth, versus discouraging the asking of questions, and encourages man to find one's self with God. This dichotomous difference made one faith succeed in the sciences of mathematics, medicine, and astronomy while the other fell further and further behind into an abysmal crevice that it could not extricate itself. "When a dogma contradicts a scientific assertion, the latter has to be revised!" ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 13, pg. 607.

When the Christians finally ceded to the knowledge that was pervading other cultures, it did so only reluctantly, to the point of rewriting the works of others, to be claimed by Christian authors, and the great libraries of other ethno-cultural groups were still being destroyed in an effort to thwart the successes of other faiths over Christianity.

"Good people can do good and bad people can do evil. But for good people to do evil, that takes religion."

Unfortunately, the new revelations came with a price, and that price was the new separatism that rose from the ranks of Christianity itself, Protestantism. The new archrival was not the Islamic faith but a new faith developing from within which condemned the favoritism, loose morals and partisanship that was occurring from within the Church.

"Somehow, everybody knows that Christianity is the Church and the Church is a power-structure, an apparatus for limiting freedom in belief and morals." ~The Rev'd Don Cupitt, Dean of Emmanuel College, Cambridge University.

The new leaders were condemning all within who were taking liberties in their translations of Scripture. The Christian Church would claim, "Jesus said..." or "God says..." when in fact neither is the Truth. Who can argue with the Church, who dares argue with the Church, a Church that vehemently set out to change all that is being taught, or written, contrary to its teachings? These days of "Resurrection of Truth," are known as the "Days of Enlightenment."

When mankind removed the shackles of religious tyranny to seek knowledge, and in seeking knowledge set about on a path of discovering the truth. The newly formed Catholic Church stood for the destruction of all doctrine [contrary to their thinking], obliteration of all books that stated anything to the contrary, and an annihilation of all those who stood in its way.

"Biblical language... Is designed to make lies sound truthful and murder respectable, and to give an appearance of solidity to pure wind." ~George Orwell.

What is the purpose of the Catholic Church, peace or conquest? Is the Church to fulfill the words of the Bible: "Think not that I am come to send peace on earth, but a sword." ~Matthew 10:34.

Records, still in existence, show the destruction of the souls sacrificed in the name of God, some already obliterated from the records by the religious institutions. The search for a better way of life led to religious leaders throwing off the shackles of a strong institution and reverting back to ancient scriptures that had as yet been untouched by religious authorities. It was just a matter of time before the Church would decry this newly founded religion as heresy and set about to destroy it also. And, to proclaim this new faith as heresy, therefore not within the protection of Jesus Christ, their Lord.

The Catholic Church has previously renounced any affiliations with the Hebrews, denying the genealogy of Jesus; Jesus being born of a virgin, and yet still proclaiming his descendency from the House of David on the other hand; Jesus is descendent of the House of David in complete contradiction to the Jewish prevailing norm of matrilineality, that is, the child following the descendency of the mother.

Even the Church does not believe in Biblical genealogies, "The Church... Does not attach decisive influence to the Chronology of the Vulgate [corrupted Catholic Latin translation by Saint Jerome], the official version of the Western Church, since in the Martyrology for Christmas day, the creation of Adam is put down in the year 5199 B.C.E., which is the reading of the Septuagint. It is, however, certain that we cannot confine the years of man's sojourn on earth to that usually set down... Various explanations have been given of chapter 5 [Genesis] to explain the short time it seems to allow between the Creation and the Flood... The total number of years in the Hebrew, Samaritan, and Septuagint differs, in the Hebrew it being 1656, in the Samaritan 1307, and in the Septuagint 2242, ... According to Science the length of this period was much greater than appears from the genealogical table... In any case, whether we follow the traditional or critical view, the numbers obtained from the genealogy of the Patriarchs in chapter 11 must be greatly augmented, in order to allow time for such a development of civilization, language, and race type as had been reached by the time of Abraham.” ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. iii, 731-3. Note: Some historians believe that Abraham/Ibrahim could be identical with the Persian Zarathustra/Zoroaster. Note: In the genealogy in the Book of Matthew we are missing four names that are listed in the Hebrew Bible. The Book of Matthew is allegedly written by Paul of Tarsus.

Many want to know who created this world, “Truly I say unto ye all this day, things are not always as they appear to the one beholding, for one says the world came into being by itself, without a God and without a Creator, and another says the world came into being by fate, and still another says by providence, but I tell ye, all three speak not the word of Truth, as not one speaks of the True Origin of the World, for no man knoweth of the origin, lest the Son of Man revealeth the Mystery.” ~The Essene Humane Gospel of Jesus, Translated From The Original Hebrew And Aramaic Texts, Typesetting by: Followers of the Essene Way [F.E.W.]

In the Sacred Book, we have, before Adam of Light had withdrawn in the chaos, the authorities saw him and laughed at the prime parent because he had lied when he said, “It is I who am God. No one exists before me.” When they came to him, they said, “Is this not the God who ruined our work?” He answered and said, “Yes. If you do not want him to be able to ruin our work, come let us create a man out of earth, according to the image of our body and according to the likeness of this being, to serve us; so that when he sees his likeness, he might become enamored of it. No longer will he ruin our work; rather, we shall make those who are born out of the light our servants for all the duration of this eternal realm.” ~The Nag Hammadi Library: On the Origin of the World, The Untitled Text, Translated by Hans-Gebhard Bethge and Bentley Layton.

In the Book According to Matthew the father of Joseph is Jacob, whose father is Matthan, whose father is Eleazar. In the Book of Luke the father of Joseph is Heli, whose father is Matthat, whose father is Levi. How can this be?... Was Mary married to two Josephs? Things like this constitute a grave problem for somebody who looks objectively and open-mindedly to the New Testament.

Some say that Luke gives the genealogy of Jesus through his mother Mary. But this makes no sense, because it is clearly written in Luke 3:23; “And Jesus himself began to be about 30 years of age, being [as was supposed] the son of Joseph, who was the son of Heli, who was the son of...” which clearly gives the genealogy of Joseph, and the name of the Virgin Mary is not even mentioned. ~Why Don't The Jewish People Recognize the New Testament? by Elijah Silver From Site: www.geocities.com/Metzad/Notstmnt.htm.

Therefore, Jesus does not fulfill prophecy, for the Messiah must be descended, on his father's side, from King David, and Jesus does not have a father since he is the product of a Virgin Birth. ~see Genesis 49:10, Isaiah 11:1, Jeremiah 23:5, 33:17; Ezekiel 34:23-24.

The third chapter of Luke traces Joseph's genealogy, not Mary's. If Jesus' lineage is traced from Mary's genealogy, as in Luke 3:27, which lists Shealtiel and Zerubbabel in his genealogy, and which also appear in Matthew 1:12 as descendants of the cursed Jeconiah, and Mary descends from them, it would disqualify her from being a Messianic progenitor. Mary is not from any legitimate Messianic family, nor can Mary even trace herself back to King David, which does not help the Christian Jesus, since tribal affiliation goes only through the father, not mother. ~Cf. Numbers 1:18; Ezra 2:59.

Besides, Joseph is descended from Jeconiah. ~Matthew 1:11.

The New Testament therefore not only contradicts the Old Testament, it also contradicts itself, since we now have two different genealogies with at least one being wrong. These difficulties are already recognized in the time of Paul who ignores this serious matter and consequently writes to Titus: “But avoid foolish questions and genealogies and strivings about the Law, for they are unprofitable and vain.” ~Titus 3:9. See also I Timothy 1:3-4.

Of course, the Christians completely ignore the fact that, In Matthew 1:18 we read, “Now the birth of Jesus Christ was on this wise; When his mother Mary was espoused to Joseph, before they came together, she was found to be with child of the Holy ghost,” which means that the embarrassed Joseph wanted to leave Mary, because she was already pregnant with somebody else's child, but then an angel came to him [verse 20] and says, “That what is conceived in her is of the Holy Ghost.”

It is clearly written in the New Testament, and firmly understood by Christianity, that Joseph is not the father of Jesus, hence, what is the point of attempting to prove that Jesus is descended from King David by giving the genealogy of Joseph who is definitely not his father? ~Matthew 1:1.

According to Scripture, Joseph falls under the curse of that king that none of his descendants could ever sit as king upon the throne of David. ~Jeremiah 22:30; 36:30.

“And there shall come forth a shoot out of the stock of Jesse [Davidic Dynasty], and a branch out of his roots shall bear fruit." ~Isaiah 11:1.

Could Jesus be the heir to the throne of King David and yet not be of the Hebrew faith? The Christians now claimed a history, as did the Jews, but without the Jewish flavor. The Christians now claimed a supreme being in Jesus Christ [as did all recognized religions of the time believing their god had supernatural powers], but without his Jewish name, and the Christians now claimed a bastion of an organization to promote their faith [Institutionalization].

Nevertheless, this Institutional Knowledge could lead man astray in its perpetual endeavors to effect a system that promotes its own self-gratification and financial rewards. The separatism from the Jewish heritage [denial of its Jewish history/roots] will have grave consequences almost two thousand years from its embarkation as the true faith of Jesus Christ the Lord and the Dark Ages will represent an era when the Church will persecute, torture, and murder all those who stand in its way. An Era when the Church condemns, destroys, and burns all literature that stands between it and its proclaimed Doctrinal Beliefs [beliefs that will change with the passages of time].

"The bill for establishing religious freedom, the principles of which had, to a certain degree, been enacted before, I had drawn in all the latitude of reason and right. It still met with opposition; but with some mutilations in the preamble, it was finally passed; and a singular proposition proved that its protection of opinion was meant to be universal. Where the preamble declares, that coercion is a departure from the plan of the holy author of our religion, an amendment was proposed by inserting 'Jesus Christ,' so that it would read 'A departure from the plan of Jesus Christ, the Holy author of our religion;' The insertion was rejected by a great majority, in proof that they meant to comprehend, within the mantle of its protection, the Jew and the Gentile, the Christian and the Mohametan [Mohammadan, Islam], the Hindoo [Hindu] and Infidel [agnostics, atheists, doubters] of every denomination." ~Thomas Jefferson, in reference to the Virginia Act for Religious Freedom, supports religious liberty for all people, not just Christians.

An Era when a religious institution sets about on a World Conquest to convert or annihilate, an Era in which the Church would attempt to change the annals of history by rewriting, editing, or omitting facts in order to acknowledge one and only one true faith. No one stood in its way until Muhammad appeared, and then the Islamic faith gained an unknowing ally in the Protestant movement.

This revision of history by Church leaders has lasted far into the 20th century and perhaps will continue into the 21st century unless those who seek the Truth will act to make the facts known to all men.

Let our progeny make their own choice as to their religious convictions based on Truth, and not myth, legend, or fairy tales. A belief without guilt or prejudice will be the faith of tomorrow. This book is about Truth that, through the centuries, avoids destruction: hidden, to evade rewriting to protect or promote the political, financial, and religious aspirations of the few.

"Has the world become a better place due to religion, or has it become a better place in spite of religion? One forgets that two of the world's chief mass murderers once thought of becoming Christian priests [Stalin and Hitler]. And Pol Pot had an entire staff of Catholic ministers to confide in" ~E. Christopher Reyes.

What great gifts can we attribute to the Holy Mother the Church?

Some of the Roman Catholic Heresies and Inventions, and the Dates of their Adoption:

- ✠ Infant Baptism, 250 C.E. "Prominent among the early departures from the divine order was the substitution of infant baptism for that of believers. This practice originated in the 3rd century, and grew out of the Doctrine of Original Sin. It was contended that baptism was regeneration in the sense of washing away Original Sin; that infants were depraved by Original Sin, and could not be saved without this washing away of that sin, and therefore they baptized infants that they might be saved." ~J. W. Shepherd, The Church, The Falling Away and The Restoration, p. 59. Cf. Old Testament, Numbers 14:33-34.
- ✠ Prayers for the dead; about 300 CE.
- ✠ Making the sign of the cross came about most likely during the murderous reign of Emperor Constantine, the Pagan; honorary Christian Bishop, about 300 C.E.

- † Confessionals; 390. The New Testament teaches that one's sins must be confessed; but such a thing as secret confessions before a priest in order to receive this absolution [forgiveness] was not practiced until the year 390, at which time there was a place appointed for the sinner to stand and mourn their sins during public service, from which they were excluded. This practice continued with additions to it. Often, some were required to do penance during their whole lifetime with some being given ten, fifteen, twenty years of penance. The priests would then absolve [forgive] them their sins and they were received back into communion.
- † The Council of Trent, in 1215, would declare, "The Church has always understood that an entire confession of sins was always appointed by the Lord, and that it is of Divine requirement necessary to all who have lapsed after baptism. Because our Lord Jesus Christ, when about to ascend from earth to Heaven, left his priests, his Vicars, to be, as it were the presidents and judges, to whom all mortal sins into which Christ's faithful people should fall should be brought, in order that, by the power of the keys, they might pronounce sentence of remission or retention."

Does God Have a Religion?

I do not profess to know all the Truth. But, what I do know is that God has no specific religion and those that profess to be the one and only “True Faith” representing God, do so at the detriment of all the other faiths that allege to teach man to do good. Where were the faiths that profess to be the one and only true faith four or five thousand years ago?

A miracle is not from God to any specific religion, and it will only be through the understanding of religion and acceptance of other religious beliefs that man will attain True Knowledge. Knowledge that God stands by us all, ready to help, ready to guide, ready to lead us into a better life and a healthier emotional future, and asking nothing in return but our faith in him and a desire to do good by our fellow man. Who does one turn to in their hour of need?

Who does one trust? Man has for millenniums turned to the religious leaders, seeking their help and in return for their assistance this elitist group would ask for alms, tithes, gifts, blessings, sacrifices, and various other offerings. Millenniums ago these offerings were human sacrifices and the people soon learned to fear this group.

The Church Fathers recognize the gross proclivity [inclination] to lie abundantly to the simple-minded flock and is reluctantly compelled to say, “Whoever saw so impudent a man? What shall I say to this fellow? Fie for shame man, a minister of fables, a minister of lies! Foolish ignorance, shameless malice, so ignorant, so witless, lewd wretches, Jewish, heathenish, shameless, blasphemous villains, false ministers, false harlots, ye lie falsely, yea, ye lie for advantage, ye are impudent liars, lewd liars, heaps of lies, nothing but lies, and all is lies” ~Harding, Defens. ApoLcf. Jeremiah 48:10.

To Pope Pius XII, “I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians.” ~Mahatma Gandhi

For, without this support, who knows what evils will befall one if they did not give in to the demands of this priestly faction, which purports to know what is forbidden for us to know?

History will show the evilness created under the name of religion, and in the name of God, with his proclaimed ‘Son’ as our ‘Savior.’

“The most evil thing in the world today is the Roman Catholic Church.” ~From You Can't Be Too Careful, by H. G. Wells.

The worse thing a Christian can do is read the Bible, for in doing so he [or she] would see the hypocrisy of the new paganism called Christianity. Their leadership thrives on the ignorant and the superstitious, and yet, many still ask me why I still believe in God. Because, I believe in miracles, I believe in a humane God, I believe in a better world than man has shown me. This book will attempt to trace the superstitions of mankind and why we believe in what we believe.

Spooky creatures, evil spirits, ghosts, goblins, and other superstitions help reinforce the necessity of spiritual guidance and protection of the clergy, “A large black monstrous apparition with horns on his head, cloven hoofs... An immense phallus and sulfurous smell.” ~The Council of Toledo ratifying the Devil, 447 C.E.

The male organs of generation are sometimes found represented by ancient signs of the same nature, which might properly be called the symbols of symbols. One of the most remarkable of these is a cross, in the form of the letter ‘T,’ which thus served as both the emblem of creation and generation, before the Christian Church adopted it as their sign of salvation; a lucky coincidence of ideas perhaps, which, without doubt, facilitated the reception of it among the illiterate faithful.

“I am the Lord thy God, the Holy One of Israel. Before me there was no God formed, neither shall there be after me. I, even I, am the Lord, and besides me there is no Savior.” ~Isaiah 43: 3, 10-11.

History will show man living in continuous fear of these people whose power has no limits. A power, which was abused, and because of the abuse of this power and authority, corruption became a common occurrence, but who would dare challenge the Authority of God purported by these self ordained leaders? This book is about the Institutionalization of Religion, the removal of religious thinking from the individual, the imposition of Institutional Doctrines, and the radical product based upon a millennium of superstitions, which we know today as Christianity.

A world founded on individualism is a threat to this Religious Institutionalism as history will reveal a dichotomy in individual rights versus a worldwide religious bureaucracy dictating to mankind serves no one but the institution itself.

“The religious institutions of man would do well to follow what they preach. Perhaps man would then have a chance at universal peace and brotherhood.” ~E. Christopher Reyes, Feb. 2001.

Religion is about those who have sought to have dominion over the souls of man [for a price], and about the Bureaucratization of Religion whose efforts started centuries ago with the truth that is all but forgotten. From a God who sought revenge, to a God who is forgiving, history is rewritten as the thoughts, attitudes, and cultures of man ethnicity and social perspectives change. It is about the creation of a powerful elitism that threatens to asphyxiate the very tenets it claims to support.

It is about what we believe to be the truth. For centuries, the priests ruled almost every aspect of man’s existence, from the time he got up in the morning until he went to sleep at night.

Man lives in constant fear of the unknown. And his religious leaders keep him in that fear, never to feel freedom, never to experience autonomy over one’s life, never to know the truth, from birth till his passing away. Fear is the very reason man seeks a higher authority in which to turn to when desperate times materialize and it is this fear, unfortunately, that is preyed upon by a religious establishment.

After centuries of abuse from their religious leaders there came a time when man stood up against those who abused the faith for their own carnal gratification and financial gain, and man began to realize that only through seeking the Truth would he ever really be free from himself. Free from his own internal fears and lack of esteem to pursue the true nature of God. He challenged the thoughts and authority of the Church and he challenged the powers of the Monarchies. He challenged the authorities to rule himself, for it had become obvious what was happening around him.

"The more stupid, the easier he can be governed! The easier to govern, the better he may be exploited. The more exploited, the poorer he gets. The poorer he gets, the richer and mightier the domineering classes get, the more riches and power they amass, the heavier their yoke upon the neck of the people." ~The God Pestilence, 1883, by Johann Most.

Corruption is just as rampant today within the Church with the clerics exceeding their powers of influence in taxing the poor at every opportunity and surrounding themselves in a luxurious milieu as it was centuries ago by living in castles of the rich or provided by the rich, exempt from paying taxes, acquiring rich jewelry and clothing, and passing on many of these unearned benefits on to their friends and relatives who supported their cause. The clergy will declare themselves unerring and incapable of making mistakes as regards religion, although their private lives will be most decadent and immoral, definitely not to be emulated, yet justified by a diatribe upon those unfortunate that dare challenge them in any form.

"The Catholic Church is, if not 'The most evil thing in the world,' certainly is the most treacherous and mendacious." ~From the works of the former Benedictine Monk, Dr. Joseph McCabe.

The ignominious clergy declare themselves, "God Ordained" and therefore allegedly do the bidding of God, acting as God on earth. The clergy deceive the people into thinking that the priesthood and no others had the powers to converse with God, and only through worship of God in a Temple of God can one be close to God. The early Gnostic conception of a Church without Walls was totally against the Catholic dictum and for this they were hunted down and destroyed like animals. The Gnostics believed that each individual was the only true source as to what God was to him/her. Since no man has ever seen God, who is to say what God is like?

This was blasphemous in the eyes of the new Church. This God Ordained Power is also the reason the Church challenged those who professed to have visions, perform miracles, or claim to have spoken to spirits or God himself. With the followers, seeking miracles and Divine Inspiration the Church reluctantly acknowledged the powers of others, but only if they professed Catholicism, and only if they acknowledged the primal powers of the Church. This line of succession must be adhered to in order to maintain control over the flock. Does God ordain clergymen? The early Gnostics claimed to practice rites handed down to them by God through early Disciples.

The Church Fathers could not argue with this, and therefore would later claim to have their own direct descendents through Saint Peter, the alleged favorite apostle of Jesus. But, other Christian groups will claim other leaders, such as Paul, James, etc. What we have is twelve apostles and twelve different set of teachings of what their Savior allegedly said. So there can be only one ostensible "True Church," the others must be eradicated, which is what the next thousand years of Christianity will focus on. Total annihilation, and not love or forgiveness. Total obliteration, and not true worship or mercy. Total destruction, and not adoration and absolution.

The self-appointed Church leaders, through majority rulings, that glorious formula of auto-sanctification will rewrite older Gospels to substantiate their contemporary views, "It seemed good to the Holy Ghost, and to us..." ~Acts, 15:28.

None of Jesus' contemporaries wrote of him, "It is amazing that history has not embalmed for us even one certain or definite saying or circumstance in the life of the Savior of mankind... There is no statement in all history that says anyone saw Jesus or talked with him. Nothing in history is more astonishing than the silence of contemporary writers about events relayed in the four Gospels." ~Frederic W. Farrar, 1831-1903, Trinity College, Cambridge, The Life of Christ, Cassell, London, 1874.

If the Vicar of Christ represents God, then who can possibly be closer to God, than the priesthood, who claim to be his right hand and sole representatives through their proclaimed right of descendency? If God wished to speak to man, then would it not seem reasonable that God would speak first to those who represent him here on earth, the clergy, and especially those in 'His' Church?

Then, why is it throughout history that whenever God spoke to man, he has always chosen one of the poor to send his message out to mankind and not the clergy? If Christianity proclaims to be the true faith, then why do Miracles occur in all faiths? Many modern day religious leaders claim the infallibility of their church, claiming that theirs is the "Only True Church of God." If this is so, then what religion was God five thousand or twenty thousand years ago? All the major religions that we know of today did not exist then. Where were these religious institutions one thousand years ago, or three thousand years, or perhaps five thousand years ago?

What will they be preaching thousands of years hence? Will they also fall by the wayside like the many before them? Who will carry the torch in the future?

Bureaucratically instilled religion has long ago passed its zenith and is waning as the truth slowly pervades the minds of man. God will still be here long after these religious institutions decline, for the masses have been deceived and are continually looking for a religion that will not twist the words of God for the self-ordained and financial benefit of the few.

To whom will the people turn to in the 21st century? Who will be the proclaimed representative of the poor and lower classes in this next millennium? Who will dare step forward to accept the torch of truth and true religious separation of Church and State [autonomy]? Who will help those in need, the widow woman and the starving masses? Who steals hundreds of millions of dollars from one religion and yet denies it in the 21st century? Whose followers condemn all but their own to Eternal Hell, fire, and damnation?

During the time of Jesus, there existed a poverty and starvation, which cannot truly be described, but Josephus, in the 1st century attempts to portray these horrors, "For the wealthy, he says, it was equally dangerous to remain. For under pretense that they were going to desert, men were put to death for their wealth. The madness of the seditions increased with the famine and both the miseries were inflamed more and more day by day... Many, indeed, secretly sold their possessions for one measure of wheat, if they belonged to the wealthier class, of barley if they were poorer. Then shutting themselves up in the innermost parts of their houses, some ate the grain uncooked on account of their terrible want, while others baked it according as necessity and fear dictated... Thus women snatched the food from the very mouths of their husbands and children, from their fathers, and what was most pitiable of all, mothers from their babes. And while their dearest ones were wasting away in their arms, they were not ashamed to take away from them the last drops that supported life. And even while they were eating thus they did not remain undiscovered. But everywhere the rioters appeared, to rob them even of these portions of food. For whenever they saw a house shut up, they regarded it as a sign that those inside were taking food. And immediately bursting open the doors they rushed in and seized what they were eating, almost forcing it out of their very throats."

~Church History, Book III, Catholic Encyclopedia, From Nicene and Post-Nicene Fathers, Second Series, Vol. 1, Chapter 6.

"The most important truths are likely to be those, which... Society at that time least wants to hear."

Who Represents the Poor?

The poor are getting poorer and the rich are getting richer, yet Ministers walk about with large precious stones on their fingers. Their clothes are of the finest threads and yet, the poor have little to eat each day, much less to wear. Religion has become a means of getting rich and not of imparting faith in a higher order. Let these so called ministers and religious prophets open up their financial books and let the people see how their monies are dispersed amongst God's poor.

It seldom leaves their personal pocket books or bank accounts. Full disclosure is the only way to demonstrate the truth and not suppress what the various ministries claim is in their hearts, full disclosure of the Bible and its interpretations without man's attempt to benefit himself at the expense of others, and full disclosure to benefit all of God's children and not just their elitist few.

The poor are taxed, but not the Church. Can this be the teaching of a religion that proclaims to represent the poor? A religion that would have others shoulder its burden. Jesus himself claimed, "Give unto Caesar that which is Caesar's." ~Mark 12:14-17.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

Scripture makes it perfectly clear that Jesus did not give money at the Synagogue for the benefit of clergy, but to pay taxes to the Romans. When shown to Jesus, a gold coin with Caesar's impression upon it, they said to him, "The Roman Emperor's people demand taxes from us." Jesus said to them, "Give the Emperor what belongs to the Emperor, give God what belongs to God, and give Me what is Mine." ~Gospel of Thomas.

Jesus did not speak out against taxation of religion by government, but merely the figure of Caesar on a coin that depicted Caesar as a God [only Roman Gods were allowed to be depicted on Roman currency]. Who gave these self-righteous people such authority to interpret the Bible to enrich themselves? Some monarchs will claim it is God himself through "Divine Intervention" or "Divine Right." ~For centuries, the Roman Church supported the right of kings via 1 Timothy 2:2.

It is called Divine Birth for those of nobility who claim their powers from birth. Historians have documented the rivalry of these two groups, Divine Birth versus Divine Right. Divine Birth claiming a priori to those who claimed they are accepting the baton of holy continuity. Who can dispute this stated authority from God from either side? Leaders sprang up because they promised to protect the poor and the underprivileged. Have they? After thousands of years of persecution under authoritarian rule by various religious groups, have the poor really made any significant advances? Whose fault is it?

Many will have you believe it is the fault of the poor. They believe those who said they would help. They sought only to help themselves.

From political leaders to religious leaders the outcome has been the same, a direct exploitation of the masses for the benefit of the few. Little has changed since the advent of Jesus regarding the religious leaders and their attitudes towards the poor who suffer under the yoke of religions and the whip of the political oligarchies, which controls them.

"Politics is for people who have a passion for craving life, but lack the passion for living it." ~Tom Robbins.

The Power of the Almighty Church:

From the church leaders, a completely new language develops from their holy men to obfuscate, confuse, and deny the "True Word of God" to the ignorant masses who innocently accept all that they are told and what they read. Pedanticism [the use of large polysyllabic terms] would conceal the truth, and Bureaucratism would protect the administration from those seeking the truth. Ignorance would perpetuate the falsehoods upon mankind searching for God for centuries.

What is the true purpose of religion? I dare say it is supposed to help all of mankind and not the individual or institution that works for its own financial gain. Did Jesus not admonish his followers to, "...Leave your purses behind!" ~Luke 10:4.

They were to take no food, money, or shoes. Did Jesus intend the shepherds to become wealthy from the flock? For centuries the various religious orders, churches, and spiritual sects have kept a close watch over their Scriptures. When the Scriptures are arbitrarily changed, they are no longer the word of God, but the words of man. Changes were made to substantiate the decisions of the contemporary rulers and religious oligarchy. When changes were made by the church, the nobles oblige [monarchs or privileged rich] were obligated to surrender their family bible and procure a newer interpretation.

To avoid having to do this chambers or secret reading rooms were constructed to hide these valuable manuscripts and sacred religious works. The remnants of many European castles today still hold these chambers hidden away by secret passages or moving walls. A concerted effort had been made throughout history to destroy all literature that does not agree with the particular sanctions of the ruling priesthood [most religious faiths] as to what is acceptable or not acceptable within the specific interpretations of Scripture as pertains to the ruling religious oligarchy.

It was an all or none acceptance of ancient books, scrolls, manuscripts, and other paraphernalia. So much so, that it has often been rumored that the original intentions of the Roman Catholic Church in instituting the First Crusade was not to rescue Jerusalem from the infidels, but to seek and destroy the Book of Jasher [The Upright Book]. ~Refer to Joshua 10:13 and II Samuel 1:18 and other Sacred Scrolls now in conflict with the interpretations of the new ruling Church Authorities.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

The Nag Hammadi discoveries and the findings of other sacred documents long hidden [Dead Sea Scrolls] have shed new light on our present day interpretations of Scriptures and what the early followers proclaimed as their beliefs. Religious institutions will always claim as heretical all Scripture that does not agree with their particular accepted beliefs.

Yet, we shall see that the Accepted Beliefs have changed throughout history. What else would one expect...it's self-preservation! Who is to say who is right or who is wrong? Full disclosure of truth will present all the Scriptural literature before the self-proclaimed religious members and let them decide which way they wish to progress.

Why must one religious group be wrong or the other group right? Why must one religion have a supreme last say so on scripture to the exclusion of all others? [Proclaiming to be the one and only True Faith] Some will also say that isolated fanatical groups wanted to smite the recently found religion by writing the newly found Scriptures. If this is so, then let the documents speak for themselves.

The Truth will prevail. What is so secret and dangerous that the religious institutions do not wish their members to have access to the newly found documents discovered? What ever happened to freedom of the press? One individual prays on his feet, another kneeling, another prone. Yet, they all pray. Is there a right or wrong way to pray? Some call him God; some call him Allah, while others may call him Jehovah.

Repeatedly in the New Testament we find clear indications that this glorious Name of our God is the Name of our Lord Jesus Christ. That blessed Name is filled with revelations of the character of our God. The souls of God's people have been thrilled through the passing centuries with, Jehovah Nissi, Jehovah Shalom, Jehovah Tsidkenu etc. ~The New American Standard Version And The Deity of Christ By Cecil J. Carter, 1963.

The preface to the New American Standard Version, of 1963 states, regarding that Name: "It is felt by many who are in touch with the laity of our churches that this name conveys no religious or spiritual overtones. It is strange, uncommon, and without sufficient religious and devotional background. No amount of scholarly debate can overcome this deficiency. Hence, it was decided to avoid the use of this name in the translation proper." ~Editorial Board, Lockman Foundation.

"As priest-craft was always the enemy of knowledge, because priest-craft supports itself by keeping people in delusion and ignorance..." ~Thomas Paine, The Life Works of Thomas Paine, vol. 9, p. 106.

For years, the Church denied the right to pray except within the confines of the Church's edifices. We now accept prayer as an Individual Right [long denied by religious associations] as acknowledged by most religious sects, to be practiced in almost any environment or social milieu. Prayer is now accepted as an Individual Right that cannot be denied by any religious institution or government [with a very few exceptions] Man, after centuries, can now pray to his or her God without permission or without having to be in a temple of God. For God is everywhere.

That the Church set about to destroy and conceal the Truth is difficult to deny. [Although, it still tries to justify its actions in the interest of Purity of Faith.] The Church will take upon itself self-proclaimed power and authority to judge books and other writings of individuals and cause not only the burning of literature and destruction of once sacred scrolls, but also the condemnation of the authors. Persons who wrote or transcribed Scriptural manuscripts [if they were still alive], at the time of the Inquisition, he or she would often find himself or herself imprisoned or excommunicated [a fate worse than death?]

Many are tortured if they did not agree with the major ruling religious institution of the time or agree to stop espousing their own personal beliefs. Even after death the Church will seek out their remains and have them disinterred from their graves, their bodies to be desecrated by burning their bones, and spreading the ashes to the winds [four corners of the world] so that their souls would meander about never finding peace in the hereafter.

In the year 2000, Pope Paul II apologizes to the world and the Jewish Faith in particular for the wrongs imposed upon them for centuries. This is merely a publicity contrivance to look good in the eyes of the world, for the Pope, at the same time is adamant in refusing to reveal Church records showing the complicity of Catholic leaders in the mass robbery of Jewish properties, art objects, and bank accounts during WWII, along with the Vatican involvement.

The Vatican also refuses to surrender the monies [ill gotten gains] it acquired during this period. Are these the actions of a religious institution or a political oligarchy bent on getting rich?

"There are three kinds of lies in this world: lies, damn lies, and statistics." ~By Mark Twain

Barnabas, the Truth and the Catholic Church:

Perhaps much of what I am trying to say can best be expressed in the words of the disciple Barnabas from "The Gospel of Barnabas," another Gospel not recognized by the Roman Catholic Church, "As God liveth, even as the fire burneth dry things and converteth them into fire, making no difference between olive and cypress and palm; even so, our God hath mercy on every one that worketh righteously, making no difference between Jew, Scythian, Greek, or Ishmaelite." ~Barnabas.

God acknowledges all his creations. God seeks out the faithful and not specific religious sects that proclaim to identify with him. God makes no distinction between the religious creeds of man. Religious institutions have corrupted the name of God and his words to man. Does God need to make a distinction between Christians, Jews, and Islamic? Can any one religion truly claim to be the one "True Church of God" with these words inscribed by one of the disciples of Jesus [Barnabus], and who conversed with Peter and Paul? That Paul and Barnabas had communicated with each other, preached together, and at one time traveled together is well documented. ~Acts 14:1-2.

It is ironic that all three major religions: Christians, Muslims, and Jews accept Abraham as the essence of a man of unshakable faith [The Jews tracing their ancestry from the twelve Hebrew tribes, descended from the twelve sons of the patriarch Jacob: Asher, Benjamin, Dan, Gad, Issachar, Joseph, Judah, Levi, Naphtali, Reuben, Simeon, and Zebulun. Mohammed is ridiculed for his lack of knowledge regarding the chronology of the prophets in Scripture.]

Each of the religions borrows [regenerates] from the past and adds or subtracts from it in an endeavor to explain that, which it does not understand. Clearly now the intent of the early religious leaders was not to preach truth but to preach their own interpretation of Scripture.

To perpetuate a religious doctrine that guaranteed a fruitful livelihood in this world and the hereafter, "Truth" had to take a back seat to the new religious leaders and their versions of what Truth is to be. Truth is stifled to later deny those who also differed from the beliefs of the self-ordained, and truth is secreted away as the Church of God gives man a choice of life or death, the religion of Jesus Christ or no religion. Believe what is told to you or suffer the consequences, there are no individual rights, no appeals, no free will is allowed. Sadly, the right [authority] to deny religious freedom is to be proclaimed in the name of God!

Please note: With the Roman Catholic Church, there are no rights. No Roman Catholic so much as put a finger to the Bill of Rights or the American Declaration of Independence.

The right to maintain Spiritual Purity is proclaimed as the Churches' right to deny us access to the Truth [Freedom of the press, freedom of religion, freedom of free thought regarding the role of God in one's life.] All of these are proclaimed, but none are imposed, for the Church wants to increase its affiliations and to appear as being a supporter of the masses, who it will later condemn to death if they do not obey unhesitatingly.

To the Church, everything revolves around mankind, and this mundane world, "To assert that the earth revolves around the sun is as erroneous as to claim that Jesus was not born of a Virgin."

The blood stained annals of history live with us today to reveal the Truth by a self-proclaimed authority that professed forgiveness but practiced intolerance, fanaticism, and bigotry. A faith that preaches clemency but practices persecution, a religion that preaches abstinence but is consumed in wickedness and lascivious acts.

A religion that wanted to conquer the world but fell short of its goals due to graft and corruption within its ranks. Contrary to what the Church espouses, the early Christian leaders were not learned men [many Cardinals and Bishops being illiterate as revealed by the Papal Degree in 1215]. ~See also Acts 4:13 regarding unlettered Apostles.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

They, in effect force their own ignorance, personal beliefs, superstitions, local myths and fallacies upon the masses, that the world is flat, that monsters dwell in the four corners of the world [Thereby insinuating that the world is both flat, and square], that the earth is the center of the Universe; all in the vain attempt to force the masses to believe anything and everything that the Church says is the “Gospel Truth.”

- ✦ The Holy Mother the Church will one day call those heretics who disbelief that the world is motionless, that it does not move, “... The world also is stabilized, that it cannot be moved.” ~ Psalm 93:1.
- ✦ “Fear before him, all the earth: the world also shall be stable, that it be not moved.” ~1 Chronicles 16:30.
- ✦ Ignorance is bliss, and, “The distinction between devotion and superstition has always been unclear, but there was little blurring here. Although they called themselves Christians, medieval Europeans were ignorant of the Gospels. The Bible only existed in a language they could not read. The mumbled incantations at Mass were meaningless to them. They believed in sorcery, witchcraft, hobgoblins, werewolves, amulets, and black magic, and were thus indistinguishable from Pagans. Scholars as eminent as Erasmus and Sir Thomas More accepted the existence of witchcraft. The church encouraged superstitions, recommended trust in faith healers, and spread tales of satyrs, incubi, sirens, cyclops, tritons, and giants, explaining they were all manifestations of Satan.” ~William Manchester, A World Lit Only by Fire- The Medieval Mind and The Renaissance, Little, Brown & Company, 1992.

Going so far as to proclaim that they [the Church] can commit no wrong, they cannot err, they can do nothing that is against the word of God. I have attempted to put into chronological order the events, which helped shape the religious thinking of man as pertains to a belief in a God, the power struggle of religious factions, and particularly the events influencing the Bible and those events influenced by the Bible and not to denigrate any particular religion. “Early Christians hammered out rules to govern their duties to the State. They forbade certain professions: the actor who had to play the part of Pagan Gods, the teacher forced to teach Pagan mythology in public schools, the gladiator who took human life for sport, the soldier who killed, the policeman and the judge.” ~Philip Yancey.

The three main evolutionary religions are Jewish, Christian, and Muslim, all believe in the Old Testament. It is highly implausible that no one except the four interested partisans, who are supposed to have written the Gospels, should ever have referred to the miracles performed by Jesus.

The historian, Flavius Josephus, who was a Jew, and lived in the community where all the miracles by Jesus are said to have occurred, and wrote a history of the period; makes no mention of even the existence of Jesus. But in his manuscript an anonymous hand inserts between the account of the Sedition of the Jews against Pontius Pilate, and that of Anubis and Pauline in the Temple of Isis, a purple patch relating to Jesus, which is definitely proven a forgery. ~ Antiquities, Book 18, 3. Note: In Three Acts of Pilate, Jesus heals via the Hellenistic Asclepius.

Josephus, is made to say, “About this time appeared Jesus, a wise man [if indeed it is right to call Him a man; for He was a worker of astonishing deeds, a teacher of such men as receive the truth with joy], and He drew to Himself many Jews [and many also of the Greeks. This was the Christ]. And when Pilate, at the denunciation of those that are foremost among us, had condemned Him to the cross, those who had first loved Him did not abandon Him. [For He appeared to them alive on the third day, the Holy Prophets having foretold this and countless other marvels about Him.] The tribe of Christians named after Him did not cease to this day.” ~ Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. VIII, pg. 376.

Greek works are quite popular and used for Christian inspiration in writing doctrines, which are often based upon Greek literature and mythology. To Bishop Gaudentius, “Therefore we transport foreign merchandise into our country with much labor. And I know not with how grateful countenances my countrymen welcome me, bringing to them the rich spoils of Greece, and unlocking hidden treasures of wisdom with the key of our language. But may God grant your prayers, that no unlucky eye nor any livid aspect may meet us, lest, by an extreme kind of prodigy, while those from whom he is taken do not envy, yet those upon whom he is bestowed should repine [express rejection]. Truly it is right to point out the plan of our translation to you, who have read these works also in Greek, lest happily in some parts you may think the order of translation not kept.” ~ Rufinus, Presbyter of Aquileia, in his Preface to Clement's Book of Recognitions.

“Dear reader, do not be alarmed at the parallels between... Magic and ancient Christianity. Christianity never claimed to be original. It claimed... To be true!” ~ New York Times Book Review, Pierson
 To Pope Pius XII, “I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians.” ~Mahatma Gandhi

“Clearly the Christians have used... Myths... In fabricating the story of Jesus' birth... It is clear to me that the writings of the Christians are a lie and that your fables are not well-enough constructed to conceal this monstrous fiction.” ~Celsus, On The True Doctrine, 178 C.E.

“To confute the opposer... One argues as one pleases, saying one thing while one means another... Origen, Eusebius [et al] write at great length... Sometimes it is true, they are compelled to say not what they think but what is useful.” ~Saint Jerome, 380 C.E.

Origen of Caesarea, 185-154, concluded that many places mentioned in the Gospels never existed and that many of the Gospel stories were not literally true. ~cf. Luke 4:28-30.

Even the self mutilating Christian fanatic, Origen, denies the validity of this saying of Josephus, “I would like to say to Celsus, who represents the Jew accepting John somehow as a Baptist, who baptized Jesus, that the existence of John the Baptist, Baptizing for the remission of sins, is related by one who lived no great time after John and Jesus. For in the 18th book of his Antiquities of the Jews, Josephus bears witness to John as having been a Baptist, and as promising purification to those who underwent the rite. Now this writer, although not believing in Jesus as the Christ, in seeking after the cause of the fall of Jerusalem and the destruction of the temple [said that it was 'To avenge James the Just'], whereas he ought to have said that the conspiracy against Jesus was the cause of these calamities befalling the people, since they put to death Christ, who was a prophet, says nevertheless being, although against his will, not far from the truth, that these disasters happened to the Jews as a punishment for the death of James the Just, who was a brother of Jesus [called the Christ], the Jews having put him to death, although he was a man most distinguished for his justice.” Over two-thirds of the New Testament is quoted in his writings. ~Origen, Contra Celsum, I, xlvii; Ante-Nicene Fathers, Book iv, 416.

“Of the family of the Lord there were still living the grandchildren of Jude, who is said to have been the Lord's brother according to the flesh.” ~Church History, Book III, Catholic Encyclopedia, From Nicene and Post-Nicene Fathers, Second Series, Vol. I, Chapter 20, The Relatives of our Savior.

The New Testament asserts that the Romans forbade the Jews to carry out capital punishment, yet, Jesus saw a woman who was about to be stoned for adultery by the Jews, and Stephen was martyred for his faith by stoning from the Jews not long after Jesus' death. So, who actually killed Jesus? The Romans?

Was Saint John inspired when he called the Jews the children of the Devil? Why would an Apostle despoil the people of Jesus? Jesus who preached on the Synagogues steps from the Hebrew Torah! And wasn't the Virgin Mary also a Jew? ~John 8:44.

“The blessed and glorious ever-virgin Mary, sprung from the royal stock and family of David, born in the city of Nazareth, was brought up at Jerusalem in the temple of the Lord. Her father was named Joachim, and her mother Anna.” ~Ante-Nicene Fathers/Volume VIII/Apocrypha of the New Testament/The Gospel of the Nativity of Mary, Chapter I.

James, the brother of Jesus, is seen as a threat to the Roman Church, “The role of James, the brother of Jesus, has always been seen as a threat by the Roman Catholic Church, and from its earliest times the Church has controlled history by removing information about this highly important figure. As recently as 1996 Pope John Paul II issued a statement declaring that Jesus was Mary's only child and that therefore James was not his brother after all. The Pontiff made this strange and completely unsubstantiated statement despite Biblical evidence and much scholarly opinion to the contrary.” ~The Times, London, 30 August 1996.

It is not credible that a Jew would show such respect towards Jesus, a Jew, who was known among his own people as a seditious person; and talk about his teaching as “The truth.” These are expressions, not of a Jew, but of a Christian; the language and the grammatical usage are definitely a forgery in a time when all books were written on animal skins, to which fresh pieces could easily be fastened [and they often were] to the benefit of the new faith. Neither Philo, nor the two Plinys, nor any other writer of the age, mentions the name of Jesus, much less the “Ten thousand other wonderful things” mentioned by the interpolator of Josephus. Tacitus wrote a History, and made no mention of Jesus.

However, a forged ‘Introduction,’ entitled “The Annals of Tacitus,” was found in a Benedictine Monastery at Hirsefelde, in Saxony, in 514. These “Annals” are not found in any other copy of the “History of Tacitus,” and not one writer from the time of Tacitus to the above date has mentioned the existence of this work. Beatus Rhenanus is not known to call them ‘Annals’ until 1533.

To Pope Pius XII, “I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians.” ~Mahatma Gandhi

The Annals of Tacitus are not miraculously discovered until the 15th century, "In another way the soul of literary research was Poggio, 1380-1459, a papal secretary and later Florentine chancellor. During the sessions of the Council of Constance, 1414-18, he ransacked the monasteries and institutions of the neighborhood, made valuable 'Discoveries,' and 'Saved many works' from the 'Cells' [ergastula]. He found and transcribed Quintilian with his own hand, had the first copies made of Lucretius, Silius Italicus, and Ammianus Marcellinus, and, probably, he 'Discovered' the first books of the 'Annals' of Tacitus." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, article on Humanism, 1910.

All members of a monastery were under the authority of an abbot [from the ancient Aramaic 'abba,' meaning 'Father']. He was assisted by a prior and a sub-prior. There were several officials known as obedientaries: a lead singer, chief librarian, bursar, and individuals in charge of the kitchen, bakery, infirmary, and other operations. The novice-master was in charge of those studying to become monks or nuns. ~From Compton's Interactive Encyclopedia, 1998, The Learning Company, Inc., article on Islam.

The Church is known to have offered large sums of money for the discovery of ancient manuscripts, which bears testimony to the Divine Authority of the Church, in consequence of which the supply was equal to the demand, as it generally is, and many manuscripts were forthcoming from the needy [and greedy] monks. Among these manuscripts are the "Annals" of Tacitus, composed by a late Papal secretary, Poggio Bracciolini, receiving the price of 500 gold sequins, and rewritten by a monk at Hirschfelde, in imitation of a very old copy of the "History" of Tacitus. Tacitus is considered a biased historian who often manipulated his data, and his alleged reference to Jesus may have been affected by this bias. ~Note: All recorded history is biased and manipulated history

In the New Christian history, Tacitus is represented as saying that, "...One Christus was put to death under Pontius Pilate, and had left behind him a sect called after him." The forged writings are sent to his friend and employer, Niccoli, with a letter in which the following occurs: "Everything is now complete with respect to the little work, concerning, which I will, on some future opportunity, write to you; and, at the same time, send it to you to read in order to get your opinion on it." After its discovery, it is safely deposited in the Library at Florence.

Christian apologists vehemently defend the works of Tacitus, "[Tacitus'] interpretation of facts... Whether unconsciously or through deliberate fervid intention, is often invidious, but the actual facts, which he records are generally accurate, so accurate that they involuntarily contradict his sinister innuendoes." ~Grant, Gran. Tac., 20.

"The nefarious and mendacious writings of anonymous monkish authors have been noticed and exposed even by Catholic historians, The late Cardinal Newman, in his 'Grammar of Assent,' Pg. 289, says, referring to the opinion of Father Hardouin: 'Most of our Latin classics are forgeries of the monks of the 13th and 14th centuries.' Such a statement, coming from one of the heads of the Church, is more than significant...." ~Historian, W. Oxley

The Christians added the New Testament, and the Muslims added the Holy Koran. The major common tenets proclaimed that those that sin against man, sin also against God. Those that seek repentance and atonement need only practice what they preach rather than condemn those who do not follow their particular teachings.

God is not a religion, but a faith. Faith in a power mightier than man's, faith in a splendor more magnificent than any of man's dreams, faith in the righteousness and the goodness of our fellow brethren and a willingness to help those in need.

I hope that one will someday enjoy religious freedom without the guilt imposed by religious institutions after reading this book. Religious guilt, imposed upon the intellect of the individual in order to gain their financial support in the religious institution is based on antiquated religious beliefs. I dare say publicly the loss of faith that many, worldwide, are experiencing today is due to the loss of respect for many of the major religious institutions.

Man has an ever-endless quest to seek knowledge and to be closer with God. Man needs a faith and religion is supposed to help him, not deter him. He needs to know that there is a higher order to which he can appeal to when he is downtrodden and can turn to no one else. He needs confirmation that God lives in us, that God is with us through all our trials and tribulations, and that God does truly exist by performing miracles when we are in doubt.

Today, many claim a belief in God; yet do not attend services of any particular religion. Religion should not be relegated to the back burners of our lives. It should be in the forefront as part of our daily thoughts and actions. I know some will welcome the knowledge that I will present while others, such as religious groups may feel threatened and despise what I have done.

What I present will definitely challenge all that you have been taught and practiced as the true way of your faith. The facts will speak for themselves. Or, should I say, "The facts should speak for themselves." For history reveals itself as what the ruling entities say it is. Politicians have used religion to forward their own self-interests and some religious institutions have done no better. I did not write history I merely present it as it happened as truthfully as I have been capable of doing by research and resources available to me at this time.

That the Church set out to systematically destroy all documents not agreeing with what they said is the Truth is an historical fact. The poignant part is that so many had to suffer for their errors. How many more will suffer for the mistakes of a religious institution? How long will these organizations remain stationary in their beliefs in the hope of converting a world that is steadily progressing towards the truth? ~[See AD2000]

"I can accept the truth, it's the continual changes man makes that confuse me." ~E. Christopher Reyes, June 2000.

Winners Write History, Not the Losers:

The Church claims innocence in never having killed anyone, of course historians do not tell us that the Church often permitted or sanctioned tortures, burnings, and killings of non-believers, "The Church, 'says [Martin] Luther, has never burned a Heretic'... I reply that this argument proves not the opinion, but the ignorance or impudence of Luther. Since almost infinite numbers were either burned or otherwise killed, Luther either did not know it, and was therefore ignorant, or if he was not ignorant, he is convicted of impudence and falsehood, for that Heretics were often burned by the [Catholic] Church may be proved from many examples." ~The Story Of Religious Controversy Chapter XXIII by Joseph McCabe, former Catholic Benedictine priest, now an atheist, who lived from 1867 to 1955.

The losers will have their libraries burned, their gods desecrated, and their people enslaved physically or mentally [if not both] by the new ruling class. Kings as well as religious leaders to promote their interests have made significant changes to the written history of men, to glorify themselves, and to advance their self-serving interests. Some may ask, "What do you stand to gain from this?"

Nothing! I merely impart the truth that you and future generations will not be bound like a slave to false tenets. That you, as a human being, will be free from the shackles of doubt, and free from persecution, and superstition, as well as the freedom to grow spiritually and mentally to become an independent, positively focused, contributing member to society. Early ethno-cultural minority groups accepted Christianity and with it the laws of their conquerors.

They gained respect for Christ as the Savior and in return lost their lands and cultural ways. In the third world Christian nations, this dichotomy of wealth can be directly attributed to the Roman Catholic Faith whose corrupt representatives took more than they gave. The representatives of the Church, at first reluctant to travel to the ends of the earth, and later too eager to share in the spoils of newly discovered lands and peoples.

The monks and friars destroy the gods, cultures, and religious artifacts of the newly conquered people, and in return gave them a pseudo-belief in a Christian God. After which they further proceeded to steal their lands via falsifying documents and other criminal acts in which the inhabitants had little recourse to protect themselves as they did not understand the new laws imposed upon them in their land.

Today the populace is much more educated than their counterpart centuries ago, and if a royal member of society were to claim that he was a descendant of God, people would probably ridicule him today. But, such was not the case centuries ago. Monarchs passed laws accepting others of nobility as being of Divine Birth so that these claims would be reciprocated. With the absolute powers of the king and the Church no one could challenge them without severe punishment being inflicted upon their person.

Fear was the driving force to gain members, keep members, and a means of getting members to act according to church dictates, If all of their efforts [the priest-craft] were to help man, then there would be no need to write this book. The word, Fear, in ancient Scripture meant to respect, not terror. Our language is dynamic and not static and changes with the times. We now have words in the dictionary that were not even conceived of fifty years ago due to the advent of new technologies. God is there to help us, not to terrify us. He will hold us responsible for our actions when our fellow man will not. He will hold us accountable for our actions when our fellow man cannot.

He will hold us liable for our dealings when the laws cannot. The views expressed are my own. The [selective] interpretations given are selected by me to emphasize the contradictions in history and the religious thinking of man so that you may see the Truth. I have found one tenet fundamental to most modern institutionalized religions, and that is, "Thinking is forbidden." Religious leaders do not wish their members to reflect on their teachings.

God said it, that settles it, is the attitude the church wants us to accept. What if God did not say it? What if the early church leaders corrupted the Book and merely said it was the truth? What if what we accept as the truth today is not in fact the truth? Are you willing to read on and decide for yourself? Can you accept the Truth? The early church leaders forced man to accept everything they said as the truth. This I cannot accept for I have searched for the truth and I have found that when given the opportunity, man will deceive his fellow man, and this includes some of those in the ministry. If you disagree with any political or religious faction, so be it.

You may be pleasantly surprised to find that your religion has more similarities than dissimilarities to the other main religious factions in this world. Rather than enlighten the individual the clergy have taken it upon themselves to condemn and ostracize the un-believers, those not of their faith.

Rather than to seek the Truth they have sought to curtail the learning, enlightenment, and the freeing of their members and others, if possible, by deterrents known as denial of freedom of the press, knowledge, and freedom in thinking. Rather than seeking truth they stifle the minds of their followers by declaring their interpretations of religion as the only truth. Rather than allowing their followers to read other interpretations they condemn all other Bibles.

Rather than seeking enlightenment these religious groups condemn all others as heretics and infidels. I believe that all people are entitled to their own opinion and views regarding both political and religious subjects. I do not believe in communism, but rather than condemn the individual who believes in such, I would suggest they do more research on the subject to learn its history, basic policy, and study countries now employing communist ideals. A comparative analysis then would be in order. The same applies to religion. Do the followers of a specific religion show a basic goodness or do they condemn other religions when they know not the religious beliefs of another? This is known as ignorance, without knowledge.

"Every God worshipped devoutly in the hearts of men is the one true God." ~Roderick Macleish

Are the Christian Churches Truly Tolerant of Other Faiths?

We all pray to the same God, in different mannerisms, in different languages, in different ways. It is through the corrupt interpretations of the priestly craft that people have made war upon other people.

That man has taken the sword [virile arms] or gun against his fellow man. For what, to make his fellow man think and act like him, to become like robots to our religious convictions? The true meaning of knowing God and understanding God is in our thoughts and hands. What we think and what we do. Can we truly be followers of God when our actions are contrary to his will?

The only difference today is that in expressing my views one should keep in mind that not so long ago I would have been condemned for thinking such thoughts. I thank the Lord that I was not born sooner, or perhaps I have been, if one believes in Transmigration of the Soul or Reincarnation, which are both spoken of the Bible.

Today, I may still be ostracized for expressing my thoughts and not agreeing with the prevailing religion of the land and perhaps be excommunicated [if I were a member of a particular Church] Biblical censors have been around for centuries trying to inculcate into their followers their beliefs and no other interpretation but theirs will suffice. I believe this is wrong. Who are we to pass judgment on the beliefs and religious practices of others? The truth shall prevail. Through the search for Truth we will be free to decide for ourselves which way is best for us.

Most religions preach fairness, justice, and equality, many just don't practice it. All the major religions teach a universal beginning. All the dominant faiths espouse the belief that there is another world that we will abide in forever if we follow the ways of God. I did not write this book to prove one religion superior over another. I did not write this book in an effort to prove there is no God. I did not write this book to condemn others. We all share many fundamental Truths, and many of us do not know it. By reading history and the Truths of man in his effort to find God, one will find his or her own God. Be it Jehovah, God, Allah, or Spiritual Advisor, we are all one in believing that there is a higher order somewhere. In our hearts, our minds, or our dreams, it makes little difference. It is not worth fighting over that which cannot be proved nor disproved.

Because some can prove there are lies in the Bible, they have turned to Atheism. "The magnitude of a lie always contains a certain factor of credibility, since the great masses of people [...] more easily fall victim to a big lie than a little one, since they themselves lie in little things, but would be ashamed of lies that were too big." ~Adolf Hitler, Mein Kampf.

"The character and sufferings of the early Christians are mendaciously represented, the fine qualities of the Romans are miserably slandered, the utter viciousness of the mass of the Christians after [the Pagan Emperor, worshipper of the Sun, Sol Invictus] Constantine is concealed, the triumph of Christianity, is described as spiritual, and not a word said about the score of imperial decrees, which forced it upon the Romans, and the subsequent lapse into barbarism is concealed under vague and untruthful generalities... This tradition of lying is carried over the whole Christian Era... There is hardly a single aspect of the history of the last nineteen centuries as to which Christian literature is not radically untruthful... It is a veritable orgy of historical lies." ~Father Joseph McCabe, 1867-1955, former Catholic priest, and a phenomenal writer, The Forgery of the Old Testament and Other Essays, Prometheus, 1993 (1926-1927), p. 122.

The false histories rewritten by the zealous Christian victors declared the Jesus debate lasted, "Three hundred years," but despite the fact that we'd like to believe them, and assume they told the truth, they lied. Lying, to the Christian ministry is alright if for their Church. Authorship of the "Gnostic Gospels" commenced in 324 C.E., in response to the rewritten Constantine Bible. Constantine was deeply disgruntled over this book competing against his own series [newly edited/revised], and he banned them, prohibited them, and searched them out and destroyed them for satire against Jesus was now deemed Heresy [Penalty: Death]. These, now unauthorized editions, represented the only conflict the Alexandrian Greeks could offer against the sword and the canonical books of Constantine Bible.

Digging below the Christian legend of the so-called vision of Emperor Constantine [In Hoc Signo Victor Seris: In this sign, you shall conquer] we discover that it was in fact a dream reported some four years later by Constantine to his secretary Lactantius, and the Christian 'Sign of the Cross' is an even later interpolation [the Cross was not a Christian symbol at the time of the battle, nor would be official until the 6th century]. ~On the Death of the Persecutors, chapter xlv; Ante-Nicene Fathers. vii, 318.

Of course, the other side, Christian die-hards continue to deny any and all Pagan influence in their Christian beliefs. "Any idea that what we call the Christian sacraments were in their origin indebted to Pagan mysteries or even to the metaphorical concepts based upon them, shatters on the rock of linguistic evidence." ~Nock's Early Gentile Christianity and its Hellenistic Background, New York, 1964, p. 132.

Man has changed that which was written. Because man is not infallible, I have put my faith in God. Are we the only creations of God? Only if man thinks along anachronistic terms, in that God only created man in HIS image. If God can create a likeness of himself, then why only man here on earth? God created other creatures of this earth, why not other creatures in this galaxy or universe? Only time will tell with man's excursions into out space. I can accept a Creator who relishes creating. A Creator who wishes us only to respect each other [his creations] as we would respect him.

"God likes to fool us: Catholics are forbidden to doubt 'The legitimacy of papal elections,' in which fallible mortals choose an infallible Pope. The copious historical evidence that the chain of Apostolic succession was broken more than once during the Middle Ages is just one of those tricks, like fossil evidence of evolution, that God sometimes uses to tempt the evil ones, the rational, in revealing themselves." ~The Globe

"Rather than love, than money, than fame, give me truth." ~Henry David Thoreau

HISTORY OF RELIGION

Scientists and freethinkers challenge the literal translation of the Bible. To the point of utter rejection due to the multitude of discrepancies and historical ambiguities. Natural science having disproved many aspects of Biblical lore due to its historical inaccuracies and the Church reluctantly condescending to this fact have only led to confusion over this issue.

"The Church, far from hindering the pursuit of the sciences, fosters and promotes them in many ways." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 13, 609, which negates the fact that it is the Church throughout history, which persecutes science [Copernicus, Galileo, etc.]

But, one need not lose faith due to inaccuracies perpetuated in a book handed down for centuries by word of mouth before being committed to writing. Our generation is now conceived in a monotheistic creation derived from polytheistic faiths long forgotten. Generations are being lost to those who do not believe in a God. The fact that miracles can and do happen in complete contradiction to existing laws of nature and of man should at least put that seed of doubt in one's mind that a God could exist.

Even if one does not believe in the existing structures of organized religions of today it should not negate the fact that man exists only through the merciful hand of a creator. To this endeavor I have written this book. Not to disprove God, but to show man's constant effort to prove or disprove the existence of God. A chronological history of events pertaining to the Bible is an attempt to show where many, throughout history, have tampered with the Bible [allegedly in the Name of God]. In order to do this we must understand the philosophy behind the written word.

The intent is not to slander the word of God, but to bring one closer to God. Simply put, God means us to do well and to do right by each other. Throughout the history of man this thought has prevailed in various religions throughout the world by way of myths, legends, and religious folklore, being handed down for generations by word of mouth, from father to son, mother to daughter, eventually being written down. The thought prevalent in all major religions is a simple request but one that many find difficult to follow. "Do unto others, as you would have them do unto you."

The history of religion dates back to the first written images of man in his attempt to find a purpose, carvings in the walls of caves, and chiseling small figures to carry with him for protection against evil forces. Man has continuously felt the presence of his god and wished to carry this presence with him. Many religions have built upon the remnants of prior religions. Myths and legends are merely the portrayal of the accounts in man's history of events that may at one time have been reality.

"What dastardly evils delve further into the ominous realm of incarcerating man's convictions than that book, which, created by the priesthood, professes to assist mankind?" ~E. Christopher Reyes.

The essence of which is carried or passed on from generation to generation, losing its dating or chronology of events with the passage of time. In the ancient Sanskrit we have gods traveling through space and time upon their Vimaanas [Sanskrit for soaring apparatus]

Researching religion one will find the old Gods are assimilated in one way or another into the new god, the new faith, or the new culture. Basic beliefs and religious tenets are sometimes adopted almost word for word.

Conquering armies will return not with their god, but with a new god, a god that takes on some of the good aspects and qualities of the conquered god. The earliest adventurers, navigators, and conquistadors traveled to the remotest parts of the world in their quest for gold, riches, and sometimes, what is seldom written was their quest for the "Tree of Life." ~Genesis 2:9, 3:22, Rev. 2:7, 9:20, 22:14. Note: Gold was once considered the skin of the Gods.

What else do you believe could compel a man to leave his home, family, and friends for an adventure that he may never return? To travel to the far corners of the earth where demons and monsters lurked beneath the deep abyss of the dark blue seas? For this would a man leave the known world [remember, the Church preached the world was flat and if you traveled too far you would fall off] to travel to places where he may never come back? To be consumed by the creatures of the vast oceans? Was all of this just for the love of money and riches? There has to be another motivating factor.

The Spaniard Cortez yearned to find the "Fountain of Youth" that was spoken of by the indigenous natives, a fountain that would keep him young forever. In the Bible we have Adam and Eve partaking of the apple from the alleged "Tree of Knowledge," lest they also partake of the "Tree of Life" they are expelled forever from the Garden of Eden. ~Genesis 2:9, 3:22, Rev. 2:7, 22:19. Note: In the Jewish Midrash, Lilith is Adam's first wife. Cf. Genesis 1:27 and Genesis 2:18.

"The account shows, however, that the Gods dreaded education and knowledge then just as they do now. The church still faithfully guards the dangerous 'Tree of Knowledge,' and has exerted in all ages her utmost power to keep mankind from eating the fruit thereof. The priests have never ceased repeating the old falsehood and the old threat, 'Ye shall not eat of it, neither shall ye touch it, lest ye die.' From every pulpit comes the same cry, born of the same fear, 'Lest they eat and become as Gods, knowing good and evil.' For this reason, religion hates science, faith detests reason, theology is the sworn enemy of philosophy, and the church with its flaming sword still guards the hated tree, and like its supposed founder, curses to the lowest depths the brave thinkers who eat and become as Gods." ~Robert G. Ingersoll, The Gods, 1872. cf. Psalms 18:7-11.

The Devil is correct, "According to this account the promise of the Devil was fulfilled to the very letter, Adam and Eve did not die, and they did become as Gods, knowing good and evil." ~Robert G. Ingersoll, The Gods, 1872, cf. Genesis.

From the Sacred Book we have: Eve is the first virgin, the one who without a husband bore her first offspring. It is she who served as her own midwife. For this reason she is held to have said: "It is I who am the part of my mother; and it is I who am the mother. It is I who am the wife; it is I who am the virgin. It is I who am pregnant; it is I who am the midwife. It is I who am the one that comforts pains of travail. It is my husband who bore me; and it is I who am his mother. And it is he who is my father and my Lord. It is he who is my force; What he desires, he says with reason. I am in the process of becoming; yet I have borne a man as Lord." ~The Nag Hammadi Library: On the Origin of the World, The Untitled Text, Translated by Hans-Gebhard Bethge and Bentley Layton.

Think your Bible hasn't been tampered with? Then look up Lilith, Adam's first wife [and also believed to be the first Vampire]. Ancient vampire tales can be found amongst the ancient Chaldeans in Mesopotamia, near the Tigris and the Euphrates rivers, and the Assyrian writings on clay or stone tablets. The Lilith controversy is based on Genesis 1:27, which says, "Male and female created he them," but, in Genesis 2:18-22 it now says, "God made Eve from the ribs of Adam." The ancient Greeks believed in the strigoe or lamiae, who were monsters who ate children and drank their blood. Lamia, as the mythology goes, was the lover of Zeus; but Zeus' wife, Hera, fought against her. Lamia was driven insane, and she killed her own offspring. At night, Lamia was said, she hunted other human children to kill as well. ~Vampires: The Mythological Neck Sucking Vampire.

A legend known by both Greeks and Romans concerns the wedding of a young man named Menippus. At the wedding, a guest, who was a noted philosopher called Apollonius of Tyana, carefully observes the bride, who is said to be extremely beautiful, and of which Apollonius accuses the wife of being a vampire, and according to the story [as it was later told by a scholar named Philostratus in the 1st century C.E.] the wife even confessed to vampirism. Allegedly she was planning to marry Menippus merely to have him handy as a source of fresh blood to drink. ~Vampires: The Mythological Neck Sucking Vampire

Genesis has been changed to exclude Adam's first wife who was an obstinate woman and wouldn't obey Adam. ~Adding and subtracting from Scripture: cf. John 15:15, Hebrews 1:1-2, John 16:12-13, II Timothy 3:14-17, I Corinthians 13:8, II Corinthians 11:13-15, Matthew 11:13, Acts 20:20-27, II Peter 1:3, Deuteronomy 12:32, Proverbs 30:5-6, Isaiah 8:20, Acts 17:11, Galatians 1:6-9, I Thessalonians 5:21, I John 4:1, etc., etc.

The Bible states that Judas committed suicide due to his guilt; suicides in vampire folklore were very likely to come back as vampires, and this may have helped contribute to the belief that vampires originated with Judas, and which some believe may also be the reason for the vampire's repugnance to silver, as Judas betrayed Christ for 30 pieces of silver. ~cf. Matthew 27:3.

In the Dead Sea Scrolls it says, "And I, the Sage, declare the grandeur of his radiance in order to frighten and terrify all the spirits of the ravaging Angels and the bastard spirits, Demons, Liliths, owls and [jackals...] and those who strike unexpectedly to lead astray the spirit of knowledge..." -IQpsAp, Dead Sea Scrolls.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

It appears that Lilith, a Goddess, in the early Hebrew tradition, before the Goddess Earth Mother, was thrown out in favor of the the Sky Father, Jehovah.

Baptism was practiced in ancient [Hasidic or Essene] Judaism, first as a means of penitence, as is learned from the narrative of Adam and Eve, who, in order to atone for their sin, stood up to the neck in the water, fasting and doing penance; Adam, in the Jordan for forty days, and Eve, in the Tigris for thirty-seven days.

Some hold that the origin of the Adam and Eve myth, in Genesis, is an older motif similar to the Sumerian myth in which the Goddess Ninhursag [the mother of all living creatures] creates a beautiful garden full of lush vegetation and fruit trees, called Edinu, in Dilmun, the legendary Sumerian earthly Paradise, a place which the Sumerians believed to exist to the East of their own land, beyond the sea.

"Men, beware of fire, it is naught but deception and imposture. You see it nearby, whereas it is far off; you see it far off, whereas it is nearby. Fire is magic and alchemy, it is blood and torture. Do not forgather around the altars where the fire of sacrifice burns. Keep away from those who slaughter God's creatures, believing that they please the Creator; dissociate yourselves from those who immolate and kill. Flee from the appearance of fire." ~From an obscure prophet named Elkesai. A. Maalouf, The Gardens of Light, New York, 1999. pp.19-20.

"The legends concerning the tree of golden apples or figs, which yields honey or ambrosia, guarded by dragons, in which the life, the fortune, the glory, the strength and the riches of the hero have their beginning, are numerous among every people of Aryan origin: in India, Persia, Russia, Poland, Swede, Germany, Greece and Italy." ~De Gubernatis.

Ninhursag charged Enki, her lover and husband, with controlling the wild animals and tending the garden, but Enki became curious about the garden and his assistant, Adapa, selected seven plants and offered them to Enki, who ate them. In other versions of the story he seduced in turn seven generations of the offspring of his Divine marriage with Ninhursag. ~Paulinus Minorita, Compendium.

The story of "The Tree of Life" has been relegated to the back burners in most religious teachings today. Five hundred years ago brave men set out to challenge the monsters that lurked beneath the oceans and the distant corners of the known world for the chance to discover this fabled foliage. What would you be willing to sacrifice for immortality? "That sense of something supernatural in the serpent, which appears to have been universal among peoples in a primitive state of culture, and still survives in some barbarous or semi-barbarous countries." ~ W. H. Hudson, Far Away and Long Ago.

Kings and Queens had nothing to lose but a small amount of money in the outfitting of ships and crews. If the crew did not return, the early seamen were not from the well to do or elite families, nor known for their good manners, nor religious piety. If they lost a few ships, new ones would replace the old ones. However, if the crew miraculously returned, then they [the monarchs] would share in the discovered wealth. Much to gain and little to lose is the attitude that prevailed.

New people would be conquered and converted all in the name of God. New lands would be pillaged and their inhabitants made to pay tribute to increase the wealth of the kings. Cortez, with the blessings of the King of Spain and Pope Leo X, sets out to seek gold and riches, but most of all he sought the "Fountain of Eternal Youth." What king would deny him riches if he found no gold but succeeded in finding the Fountain of Youth?

Man has all ready partaken of the Tree of Knowledge. But, the Tree of Life has been denied to him. Early adventurers saw a way, not only to become rich but also to live forever to enjoy it. With the blessings of the Pope in Rome and their kings these fortune hunters set out to make a new life for themselves with the possibility of becoming rich and living forever to enjoy their newly gained wealth.

It is greed and avarice from the beginning in a world of materialism, with a flamboyant court system where kings rule supreme by taxing the poor so that the poor can barely survive from day to day, is it no wonder that men would venture out into the unknown with such fantasies of becoming rich and living eternally? The kings and queens of the great empires of Europe saw religion as a means of subjugating the masses of their newly found lands and retaining most if not all the pristine wealth for themselves.

It is much easier to subject a people by religion than to spend money one does not have in huge armies in order to restrain them while you rob them of their lands and treasures as well as their respect for their Gods. The injustices and cruelties of this world would be explained and reasoned away by the Church telling the masses that it is God's way and they would be rewarded in the Next World, if they obeyed in this world.

How ingenious they were with words.

The very words of Jesus have been perverted to help the few amass large fortunes and retain power. In other cases religion has helped some to obtain power. "My Kingdom is not of this world" refers to the followers of Jesus belonging to a select group, "The followers" as distinguished from "The world," the Romans, the Pagans who refuse to believe. ~John 18:36.

The Romans are of the world and are even called "The beasts." "Look, the Kingdom of God is in your midst." - Luke 17:20-21.

The Kingdom of God is in all of us as preached in the ancient Gnostic Gospels. These Gospels have long preached this Truth [from AD 70 onwards, and some of these writings pre-date Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John] but, unfortunately, many have been explained away as heresy. Why? Did not the same authors of Matthew, Mark, and John write some of these very works discovered as the Dead Sea Scrolls?

Why then does the Church accept some of the books of the Apostles as Gospel, but not their newly found books as parts of the New Testament? Are they forgeries? The Church declares some if not most of these early writings as apocryphal [dubious, false, or spurious]. Did the church, have any other choice considering they had already declared what is the truth?

Ignorance, superstitions, and falsehoods ruled in the early years of the newly found religion and this is authenticated in history by the fact that few religious leaders could either read or write and many preached contradictory teachings.

In the 1st century books used to be divided into the following criteria:

1. Books to be read in church.
2. Books to be read individually, but not in meetings.
3. Books that should not be read at all.

Saint Athanasius, who died in 237 A.D., used the word 'Apocrypha' referring to the third criteria, stating the word 'Apocrypha' means 'False.' Today, various religious leaders from all over the world have already authenticated the newly found books and cannot deny the relevance to their specific faiths.

In whose interest does it serve to keep these revelations a secret? Christian faiths will soon be in a transition, for the Dead Sea Scrolls reveal a new Jesus, a new faith, and a new religion that is not preached today. To be quite truthful, if the Church could have its way it would destroy these new Gospels, many of which they have already been aware of for centuries.

The secrets of the inner Church are many, and sad fully many have died for having secrets from the Church, for theirs [the Church] has not always been a fruitful relationship with its members. Lies and deception will be told and exposed from the early history of man. Facts will be presented as facts because we have documentation. Lack of documentation or verification as not being a forgery will be presented as alleged, said, rumored, thought, believed, assumed, or suspected.

There is a sufficient amount of evidence remaining to justify the charges brought against the greatest religious institution in the world.

I was amazed to say the least when the leader of this great organization came forth and asked forgiveness for the sins of his Church. The path has been cleared, and now we await the march in the new era. Will the Church now seek to rectify its errors or will it resume its old ways in chastising, ridiculing, and admonishing those who seek the truth?

Pope John Paul has revealed a strength never revealed in the prior existence of the Church. His courage will only be revealed in the next decade, for few Catholics who listened to his speech of March 12, 2000, knew what he was saying. He reveals to the masses the history of the Church, from whom they borrowed and whence it was used. It takes an enormous amount of bravery to admit a mistake and we have here a spiritual leader who appears to want to meet with other world religious leaders face to face and admit his mistakes and the mistakes of his religious faith.

"How much more the benefits, we would receive from life, if we would but speak the Truth." ~ E.

Christopher Reyes, August 2000.

The true purpose of conquest of strange lands is wealth and the forced conversion of conquered peoples to the new faith is to subjugate these newly found peoples in strange lands and countries to convince them that theirs, the conquerors god, was far superior to them because their God was superior to the conquered ones.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

The conquered people accepted the new gods and with force or persuasion accepted or adopted the ways of the conquerors. Religion to the world's ancient leaders was merely a tool to be used to their advantage to pursue the goals of the conquerors. Emperor Constantine himself did not accept the new Christian Faith until on his deathbed, and only then because he thought perhaps the Christians might be right after all. It was like an After-Life Insurance policy to him.

In the new world with the acceptance of a new God would come the acceptance of new Laws. With the acceptance of the new Laws would come the acceptance of whatever fate the conquerors would mete out to the conquered because theirs was a lesser species or subservient race. It was prejudice wherever they went. All non-Christians were treated with derision, all non-Christians were treated as a lesser species, even when the indigenous groups converted they were still treated as inferiors, such as the natives in the Philippines and the Native Americans [Indians] in America. So, religion was not the only problem, it was racism. Even after Christian conversion the indigenous populace were still treated as inferiors.

The conquerors felt themselves superior to all whom they dominated. In many countries of the world today this prejudice still exists in the fairer inhabitants [European stock] feeling superior to the darker complexioned natives. It is visible and perpetuated in cosmetics being sold to lighten one's skin. It is evident on the television programs and in the hiring practices of multi-national corporations. Height 5 feet 6 inches or taller, what has this to do with job qualifications? Light complexion, why? Everywhere you look prejudice rears its ugly head. We are all people.

We are all children of God. We are all the same inside. When will we learn to respect each other for what we are and not what we think others should be? In all parts of the world prejudice still finds an abode. It will remain long after our children and our children's children are gone. All we can ask is that it be exposed wherever it hides its wickedness so that the truth can reveal itself.

Hopefully the History of Religion will reveal to you why people think what they do, by showing you when and how the thoughts of man regarding religion were changed and why. With this knowledge [Gnosis] you will then be free to mature into a more productive individual, capable of helping yourself as well as your fellow man to become better people in the eyes of the Lord as well as man without the feelings of guilt from religion.

History is only the written record of man's deeds and not the beginning of mankind. Man was capable of thought long before he was capable of transmitting his thinking into writing [like a child understanding but not being able to communicate] We can only hypothesize and suggest what it was like in the beginning. By understanding the roots of the beliefs of man, the origination of God, and why God has to exist in the mind of man, you will not be bound nor dominated by archaic thinking nor your thoughts held constrained by the thinking of others. ~Genesis 1:1, "Bereshith bara elohim..." "In-beginning created Gods the-Heavens and-the- earth."

You will be a free thinker capable of deciding what is best for you without inheriting the guilt and sins from the past. You will be emancipated from the burdens of previous generations burdened with the confusion of changes instituted by organizations bent on furthering their cause. You will be uninhibited in your quest for Truth.

"It pleases the Lord greatly to hear the truth flow from your lips like the gentle dew from the morning flowers." ~E. Christopher Reyes, June 2000.

The Chronology of Man's Quest for Spirituality

BC 25,000,000-First primates make their appearance upon the earth. Anthropologists agree that there is a distinct difference between the various skeletons of early man that are discovered, however homo-sapiens are a distinct or unique difference from their nearest cousins the apes.

Many believe in what is now known as the missing link theory. What happened in history to make man so noticeably more advanced than all the creatures on earth? Some novelists attribute this distinction to visitations from aliens from outer space. A rarity indeed, but where is the proof? Man? Some believe in evolution others in creation.

You decide. Something did happen long ago to change man, that much we do know. What and how is the evolutionary process that follows. The word Adam in itself is infused with uncertain [superstitious] religious theories as to its derivation. Language being what it is we know that language per se is changing and never static.

Therefore what a word means today may mean something entirely different tomorrow, figuratively speaking. Adam in ancient Hebrew, Sabeian, Assyrian, and Semitic is generally interpreted as coming from Adamah or Ha-adamah [of coming from the ground, clay, soil, or red or ruddy complexioned. I am inclined to go with red clay as clay is generally of red coloration].

The ancient Egyptians recognized the various races and cultures and the Pharaohs are generally painted red, while other [common] peoples are painted yellow or black.

BC 2,500,000-Evidence indicates a common human ancestry of man's originating in Africa from the emergence of a human-like species in Eastern Africa some 5 million years ago. From Hadar, Ethiopia, the 3.18 million year-old remains of "Lucy" are unearthed in 1974.

BC 600,000 to 200,000-A wide spread of human-like species all across Asia, Europe, and Africa. Fire use develops. The earliest true human being in Africa, Homo sapiens, dates from more than 200,000 years ago. A hunter-gatherer capable of making crude stone tools, Homo sapiens banded together with others to form nomadic groups; eventually nomadic San peoples spread throughout the African continent leaving crude weapons, signs of having discovered fire, and rudimentary pictographs.

BC 450,000-Space Aliens(?) On Nibiru, a distant member of our solar system, life faces slow extinction as the planet's atmosphere erodes. Deposed by Anu, the ruler Aralu escapes in a spaceship and finds refuge on Earth. He discovers that Earth has gold that can be used to protect Nibiru's atmosphere. ~Zecharia Sitchin, Earth Chronicles.

BC 445,000-Space Aliens(?) The Anunnaki [gods] come to earth as translated from Sumerian texts. Ancient man feels a need for describing matters that are not within his purview of knowing. History is only the first recorded words of man. Pictographs are the only knowledge we have of early man's desperate attempt to reveal that he believed in a Supreme Being(s).

The Sumerian storm god is Iskur and Hadad [called Ba'al, the "Lord," who is represented as the bull. Ba'al's sister is the virgin Anat] is the Thunder God. Nin-gis-zi-da is the "Lord of the True Tree" or "Tree of Life."

Essenes associated thunder with the voice of God and His commands, and Jesus by calling his band, "Sons of Thunder" suggests that they are doing God's bidding.

According to the pygmies of Gabon, in West Central Africa, God kept back the eating of a specified tree, and if eaten, man would turn into an animal.

Space Aliens(?) Led by Enki, a son of Anu, the Anunnaki land on Earth, establish Eridu -Earth Station I, for extracting gold from the waters of the Persian Gulf. ~Zecharia Sitchin, Earth Chronicles.

BC 432,000-The Crowning of the first Earthly King and the coming of the Deluge according to Mesopotamian beliefs are handed down through history to be eventually transcribed by Berossos, a Chaldean priest, in Greece, 289 B.C.E.

BC 28,000-First signs of religious beliefs of man are carved and painted upon rocks, caves, and religious charms. Scientists are still in a quandary as to how old the oldest writings are regarding early man's belief in god(s). Early civilizations thought that the sun was a god, being the primary source of all life, they were frightened when a total eclipse brought to a halt the sun's light, the giver of life and security.

Although total eclipses lasted only a few minutes, many of the people were fearful that the End of the World had arrived and were only reassured that the sun would continue to shine by their religious leaders [for a price, of course]. ~ Matthew 16:27-28 [Jesus fails to make good on his promise to return during the lifetime of his disciples], Matthew 24:34-35, Mark 9:1, 13:30 and Luke 9:26-27.

The Sun alone is born of an immaculate virgin, who conceived him without carnal intercourse, and who still remains a virgin, either the beautiful Dawn, or the dark earth or night. The Roman Catholics represent the Virgin with the child in one hand, and the lotus or lily in the other, but sometimes with ears of corn.

In the Vedic hymns the Dawn is called the "Mother of the Gods," and is said to have given birth to the sun. "The Worship of the Virgin," the 'Queen of Heaven,' the 'Great Goddess' the 'Mother of God,' etc., which has become one of the grand features of the Christian religion [the Council of Ephesus 1431 C.E.] having declared Mary, the 'Mother of God,' her 'Assumption' being declared in 813 AD, and her 'Immaculate Conception' in 1851, was almost universal for ages before the birth of Jesus." ~ See Doane, Bible Myths p. 326. cf.

To Pope Pius XII. "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

"The pure Virginity of the celestial mother was a tenet of faith for 2,000 years before the Virgin now adored was born." ~Dr. Inman, Ancient Faiths, vol. 1, p. 159.

The sun and all the solar deities are said to rise from the East, which originated the custom of praying towards the East; and this practice is still to be seen in the English Church, but has been dropped by the Roman Church [after the Reformation]. The bright morning star, actually the planet Venus, rises immediately before the sign of 'The Virgin' is entered. This is the star, which informs the magicians and the shepherds who watched their flocks by night that the Savior of mankind was about to be born. ~Doane, Bible Myths.

In the old Vedic cosmology the world was round and supported on columns; that of the Hindus was convex, and was supported on elephants which stood on an immense tortoise. "The sun to rule the day, and the stars to rule the night," [the originator was a planet worshiper].

End of the World: In the Hindu legend of the flood a rainbow appears on the surface of the subsiding water, the ark or ship resting on the Himalayas. "I am become death: the destroyer of worlds." ~Bhagavad-Gita.

The Biblical story of a world-wide flood, which occurred on Mt. Ararat, in Eastern Turkey, has been supported for centuries. Unfortunately, ruins of Sheruppak have now been discovered, and dated to within a few years of the Biblical date for Noah's Great Flood. Sheruppak was the home of Utnapishtim, the Sumarian Noah. Sorrowfully, this flood covered only a few square miles in a relatively flat country in Mesopotamia, and Utnapishtim's hand hewn ark only held possibly only eight people, and very few animals, because it was only large enough to hold that many without sinking. There are pictures of it built of wood and other pictures of it built of reeds, so that doesn't help us with that problem. ~Article: Bible Creation Story Conformity Now Required at Southern Adventist University! Cf. Epic of Gilgamesh.

7th Day Adventists believe that God's Creation week and the origin of life on Earth took place only recently, a few thousand years ago, and that there was no life on Earth prior to that time.

BC 25,000 to 10,000-Rock paintings of North and South Africa.

BC 11,200-Babylonian stones record gifts of land and are inscribed with the symbols of Venus, the moon, and the sun. At early dawn, on December 25th, the astrologers of the Arabs, Chaldeans, and other oriental nations, greeted their "Infant Savior" with gold, frankincense, and myrrh as He was acclaimed with: "Hail, Orient Conqueror of gloomy night!" And, "Will the powers of darkness be conquered by the God of light?" by the shepherds.

"They started to salute their God long before the rising of the sun; and, having ascended a high mountain, waited anxiously for the birth, facing the East, and there hailed his first rays with incense and prayer." ~Dupuis, Origin of Religious Belief.

Jesus is said to have been visited by the 'Magician Sun' worshippers, the Persian Magi [Ator, Sator, and Peratoras], and the myth of the fair and light complexioned 'Virgin Mary' is born, stolen from the history of the Babylonian deists, from their fair haired 'Queen of Babylon,' also known and referred to as the 'Queen of Heaven,' another title to be borrowed for the 'Virgin' of Christianity, as both Jesus and Mary being of Hebrew descent, dark complexioned, and dark haired, will take on the physical attributes of the old fair skinned Pagan gods, which is difficult to understand why they are always portrayed in the opposite milieu until one realizes where the affinity towards 'Fairness' is realized.

Babylonian history and creation through the "Enuma Elish" tell of the Storm God, Marduk [Amar-utu, the young bull of the Sun God], defeating the Sea Monster Tiamat and creating the earth and sky by cutting the Serpent in half [the separation of Heaven and earth].

Marduk also gains control of the tablets that assign the various responsibilities to the Gods. ~Cf. Isaiah 51:9, Job 26:12, Psalm 74:13, 89:10, II Esdras 6:52, II Baruch 29:3-8, Jonah 2:1.

In the Christian Bible, John of Patmos has a Messianic vision in which, "A woman clothed with the Sun," crying in travail, gives birth to a man-child, with Satan standing poised to devour him ~see Revelation 12:1-5.

"The seer of Patmos, identified with the Apostle, is granted a series of visions meant to reassure the Christians of Asia amid the persecutions and trials of the end of the 1st century." ~Pope Benedict XVI on Revelation, August 2006.

Where is Heaven and How Many Gods Are There? Biblically we have:

- ✦ “In the beginning Elohim [the Gods, translated from the Hebrew text, more than one God] created the Heaven and the earth,” reads the ancient Hebrew revelation, and “Made the firmament, and called the firmament Heaven.” ~Genesis 1: 7, 8.
- ✦ “And God said, 'Let there be a firmament in the midst of the waters, and let it separate the waters from the waters.' And God made the firmament and separated the waters which were under the firmament from the waters, which were above the firmament. And it was so. And God called the firmament Heaven. And there was evening and there was morning, a second day.” ~Genesis 6-8.
- ✦ “I am He, before Me no God was created, neither shall there be after Me.” ~Isaiah 43:10.
- ✦ “Thus saith the Lord, the King of Israel and his redeemer, the Lord of hosts, I am the first, and I am the last, and beside Me there is no God.” ~Isaiah 44:6.
- ✦ “I am Yahveh that maketh all things; that stretcheth forth the Heavens alone; that spreadeth abroad the earth by myself.” ~Isaiah 44:24.
- ✦ “I am the Lord, and there is none else.” ~Isaiah 45:18.
- ✦ Heaven, Job [a fictitious Biblical character] says, “Is strong, and as of molten brass.” ~Job 37:18, describing the strongest metal known to man at this time
- ✦ “Know therefore this day, and consider it in your heart, that the Lord, He is God in Heaven above, and upon the earth beneath; there is no other.” ~Deuteronomy 4:39.
- ✦ This Jewish God, is one, as it is written; “Hear Israel, Y-H-W-H is our G.d, .Y-H-W-H is one.” The King James translation translates this as, “Hear Israel, the Lord our G.d is one Lord.” ~Deuteronomy 6:4.
- ❖ “See now that I, even I, am He, and there is no god with me.” ~Deuteronomy .32:39.

Brass is one of the strongest substances known in those days, therefore the author is merely trying to make a point by referring to the strongest metal he has knowledge of. Marduk, the Babylonian 'sky-god' and creator of Heaven and earth, forged the immense dome of heaven out of the hardest metal, resting it upon a wall surrounding the earth. For the Egyptians, the Heavens were an arched iron ceiling [canopy of Heaven] from which the stars were suspended by cables.

To the ancient Greeks and Romans, the 'Sky-father,' Zeus-pater, Jupiter, set up a great vault of crystal, to which the fixed stars were attached, the sun and planets being suspended movably by brazen chains. Olympus's high head pierced the visible sky, and on its lofty summit awful Zeus held his court. The Romans called the vaulted ceiling or covering of the earth 'Coelum.' ~From Revelations of the Hereafter by Joseph Wheelss. Accuracy in translating foreign works [e.g. Greek literature] is not of a primary concern, but proselytizing is. Historical accuracy is also sacrificed in writing what appeals to the masses, “I suppose you are aware that there are two editions in Greek of this work of Clement, the 'Anagnw/seij, that is, 'Recognitions,' and that there are two collections of books, differing in some points, but in many containing the same narrative. In short, the last part of this work, in which is the relation concerning the transformation of Simon, is contained in one of the collections, but is not at all in the other. There are also in both collections some dissertations concerning the 'Unbegotten God,' and the Begotten, and on some other subjects, which, to say nothing more, are beyond our comprehension. These, therefore, as being beyond our powers, I have chosen to reserve for others, rather than to produce in an imperfect state. But in the rest, we have given our endeavor, so far as we could, not to vary either from the sentiments or even from the language and modes of expression; and this, although it renders the style of the narrative less ornate, yet it makes it more faithful.” ~Rufinus, Presbyter of Aquileia, in his Preface to Clement's Book of Recognitions.

Biblical Scriptures still mention the Gods of the Babylonians: the origin of 'Vulcan's Hammer,' which is just another name for the club of 'Janus' or Chaos, “The god of Confusion,” as breaking the earth in pieces, is a covert allusion in which Babylon is identified with its primeval god, “How is the hammer of the whole earth cut asunder and broken!” ~Jeremiah 1:23.

The tower of Babel is the first overt act of open rebellion after the flood, and 'Cush' as 'Bel,' is the ringleader in it, and he is, of course, the first to whom the name 'Merodach,' “The great Rebel,” is given, therefore, according to the usual parallelism of the prophetic language, we find both names of the Babylonian god referred to together, when the judgment on Babylon is predicted: “Bel is confounded: Merodach is broken in pieces.” ~Jeremiah 1:2, Genesis 11:1-9.

The Judgment comes upon the Babylonian god according to what he has done. As Bel, he had “Confounded” the whole earth, therefore he is “Confounded.” Merodach, by his rebelliousness had "Broken" the united world into pieces; therefore, he is also, 'Broken in pieces.'

As the Pope bears the 'Keys of Janus,' so does he wear the mitre of 'Dagon.' The excavations of Nineveh have put this beyond all possibility of doubt. The Papal mitre is entirely different from the mitre of Aaron and the Jewish high priests, as that mitre was a turban. The two-horned mitre, which the Pope wears, when he sits on the high altar at Rome and receives the adoration of the Cardinals, is the very mitre worn by Dagon, the fish-god of the Philistines and Babylonians.

The Babylonian God 'Adonis is born of the virgin, Ishtar.' The Sabbath in Babylonian times is an inopportune day, a day in which the demons have power over this material world. The Biblical Sabbath is the day of creation, of a God who produces the universe.

Saint Jerome provides considerable literary confirmation that at Bethlehem, the cult of Adonis found a foothold as a result of Hadrian's attempt to Paganize Jerusalem and Its environs. "Bethleem, nunc nostram et augustissimum orbis locuni, ... Lucus inumbrabat Thamuz, id est Adonidis, et in specu, ubi quondam Christus paruulus uaguit, Ueneris amasius plangebatur." ~ Epistola lviii ad Paulinum, 3, Corpus Scriptorum Ecclesiasticorum Latino rum, LIV, 532, 4-8 Hilberg. See also Wolf Wilhelm von Baudissin, Adonis und Esmun, Leipzig 1911, p.83 and p.522, note 5, Methodology In the Study of the Mystery Religions and Early Christianity by Bruce M. Metzger.

One of the surest ways would be to imitate the teaching of the Church by offering benefits comparable with those held out by Christianity. Thus, for example, one must doubtless interpret the change in the efficacy attributed to the rite of the taurobolium. In competing with Christianity, which promised eternal life to its adherents, the cult of Cybele officially or unofficially raised the efficacy of the blood bath from twenty years to eternity. ~ Bruce Metzger, Historical and Literary Studies: Pagan, Jewish, and Christian, 1968.

Christians live their entire lives waiting for that inevitable day of Salvation, "I would rather live and love where death is king than have Eternal Life where love is not." ~ Col. Robert G. Ingersoll.

"Almost all the popular [Christian] writings fall into this kind of inaccuracy. They manufacture out of the various fragments of information a kind of universal Mystery religion, which never actually existed, least of all in Paul's day." ~ Dr. Albert Schweitzer, Geschichte der Paulinischen Forschung, Tübingen, 1911, pp. 151f.

"If those who read the writing that falsely bears the name of Paul adduce the example of Thecla to maintain the right of women to teach and to baptize, let them know that the presbyter in Asia who produced this document, as if he could of himself add anything to the prestige of Paul, was removed from his office after he had been convicted and had confessed that he did it out of love for Paul." ~ Tertullian, De baptismo, 17.

Another Resurrection: The 'Savior,' Adonis, after being put to death, "Rose from the dead," and the Syrians celebrated the festival of the "Resurrection of Adonis" in the early spring. "Then shalt thou die, but from the darkness above shalt rise victorious, and be twice a God." ~ Ovid, Metamorphoses.

"The story of the Roman soldiers falling asleep is too feeble and clumsy to merit serious refutation; and that the soldiers were bribed to say they slept is, if possible, more preposterous still. The penalty while doing sentry work would be death, and it requires a rather liberal bribe to induce a man to offer himself for instant execution. If there be any such bravo on record, I have not heard of him, and I cannot quite see what use the bribe for which he gave his life would be to him, even if he took it with him into his coffin." ~ W. S. Ross, Did Jesus Christ Rise from the Dead? An Anthology of Atheism and Rationalism, ed. Gordon Stein, Buffalo, NY: Prometheus, 1980, p. 210.

Was there a Jesus? "Tiberius accordingly, in those days the Christian name made its entry into the world, having himself received intelligence from Palestine of events, which had clearly shown the truth of Christ's Divinity, brought the matter before the senate, with his own decision in favor of Christ. The senate, because it had not given the approval itself, rejected his proposal. Caesar held to his opinion, threatening wrath against all the accusers of the Christians." ~ Tertullian, Apology, 197 C.E.

The festival is observed in Alexandria, the cradle of Christianity, in the time of Bishop Cyril, AD 412; and at Antioch, the ancient capital of the Greek Kings of Syria, where the followers of Jesus were first called 'Christians' in the Emperor Jilian's time, AD 363. The celebration in honor of the Resurrection of Adonis eventually came to be known as a Christian festival, and the ceremonies held in Catholic countries on Good Friday and Easter Sunday are the festival of the death and resurrection of Adonis.

This God is propitiated as "O Adonai" in one of the Greater Antiphons of the Roman Catholic Church. Osiris [aka Lord of Resurrections], after being put to death, "Rose from the dead," and bore the title of the 'Resurrected One.' ~ Bank of Wisdom, Box 926, Louisville, KY 40201.

Preposterous Christian tales arise to justify their faith, "The most extraordinary Roman soldiers that Rome ever heard of were those soldiers that were set to watch the tomb of Jesus. They managed to fall asleep simultaneously in order to allow Jesus to pass unseen, and when they awoke, for a bribe they deliberately committed suicide by admitting that they had slept, an admission that meant instant execution. Was ever invention so stupidly desperate and mendacity so recklessly absurd as that invention and that mendacity upon which rests the story of the Resurrection, upon which the whole fabric of the Christian faith has elected to stand or fall? The basis is too puerile to support a story told by an idiot for the purpose of imposing upon a fool." ~W. S. Ross, Did Jesus Christ Rise from the Dead? An Anthology of Atheism and Rationalism, ed. Gordon Stein, Buffalo, NY: Prometheus, 1980, p. 211.

The Babylonian creation known as "Enuma Elish," meaning, 'When on high' tells of the darkness and water inhabited earth.

"All lands were sea...Marduk laid a reed on the face of the waters, He formed dust and poured it out beside the reed. That he might cause the Gods to dwell in the dwelling of their heart's desire. He formed mankind..." ~Emmett Fields, Bank of Wisdom.

Osiris is represented in Egypt as at once the 'Son' and 'Husband' of his mother; and actually bore, as one of his titles of dignity and honor, the name "Husband of the Mother." The Greeks will later create a legend to be handed down in history, ... Oedipus, the man who kills his father, the man who [unknowingly] marries his mother.

The similarities between the Bible and Creation and ancient cultural beliefs are striking and will show the heritage of our accepted wisdom. The Babylonians believed that at death the disembodied spirit descended to the dark nether world, and human existence beyond the grave was a dismal reflection of life on earth complete with suffering and pain. Hope of an eternal reward for the righteous and deserving was not present and all were independently consigned to a world below. It is the Babylonian literary work, the "Gilgamesh Epic," which centers on the vain and dismal quest for eternal life. The ancient Babylonians, just as the modern Romans, recognized in words, the unity of the Godhead, the Oneness of God, and while worshipping innumerable minor deities, each possessing specific influences on human affairs, they distinctly acknowledged that there was 'One Infinite' and 'Almighty Creator,' supreme over all. Most other nations did the same.

In the classic Epic of Gilgamesh, we have the first mention of supposed Zombies, an existence of life after death. Zombies [reanimations] are found roaming around their places of death in search of living organisms to feed upon, and will walk around, searching for their food until it locates a living being, at which point it will raise its arms and form a horrific guttural moaning deep in its throat, attracting other zombies to the area. According to the tenets of Vodoun, a dead person can be revived by a bokor or Voodoo sorcerer. "They are dead, they shall not live; they are deceased, they shall not rise; therefore hast thou visited and destroyed them, and made all their memory to perish." ~Isaiah 26:14.

"Father give me the Bull of Heaven, so he can kill Gilgamesh in his dwelling. If you do not give me the Bull of Heaven, I will knock down the Gates of the Netherworld, I will smash the doorposts, and leave the doors flat down, and will let the Dead go up to eat the living! And the dead will outnumber the living!" ~Epic of Gilgamesh, Translated by Maureen Gallery Kovacs.

Zombies remain under the control of the bokor since they have no will of their own. "Zombi" is also another name of the voodoo Snake God Damballah Wedo, of Niger-Congo origin; it is akin to the Kongo word "Nzambi," which means "God." There also exists within the voodoo tradition the zombi astral, which is a human soul that is captured by a bokor and used to enhance the bokor's power. ~see Wade Davis, a Canadian ethnobotanist, who presented a pharmacological case for zombies in two books, The Serpent and the Rainbow, 1985, and Passage of Darkness: The Ethnobiology of the Haitian Zombie, 1988.

According to the Encyclopedia of Things that Never Were, particularly in France during the Middle Ages, the revenant rises from the dead usually to avenge some crime committed against the entity, most likely a murder. The revenant usually takes on the form of an emaciated corpse or skeletal human figure, and wandered around graveyards at night.

"In the early ages of mankind, the existence of a sole and omnipotent Deity, who created all things, seems to have been the universal belief; and tradition taught men the same notions on this subject, which, in later times, have been adopted by all civilized nations." ~Wilkinson in Ancient Egyptians.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

BC 10000-Domestication of the dog and future tales of dog-people [werewolves, like Saint Christopher].

BC 8000- The "Emerald Tablet" is alleged to be molded out of a single piece of green crystal, emeralds being one of the most expensive gems known to mankind, which is inscribed with a prognostic messages full of hidden meaning, an ancient artifact encoded with a mysterious wording, a powerful formula that that is said works in very explicit and comprehensible steps on all levels of reality at once: the physical, the mental, and the spiritual, and shows mankind how to achieve personal transformation and even accelerate the evolution of our species.

Although its true origin is lost in legends that go back over 10,000 years, the astonishing artifact was translated into Greek by Alexandrian scholars and actually put on display in Egypt in BC 330. In AD 400, it was allegedly reported buried somewhere on the Giza plateau to protect it from the religious zealots who were burning libraries around the world at that time [Roman Catholics].

Many believe the tablet still lies hidden there. Working only with the BC 3rd and 4th century Greek translations, many seekers of truth began to recognize that the Emerald Tablet contained a secret formula for transforming reality. Many alchemical drawings, such as the "Azoth of the Philosophers," are said to be schematic diagrams of the steps and operations of the Emerald Formula.

The medieval alchemists used the diagrams like Eastern Mandalas and meditated on them in their laboratories to achieve various altered states of consciousness. The tablet inspired over 3,500 years of alchemy, a period in which some of the most creative minds in the world delved into the intertwined mysteries of matter, energy, and the soul.

Many medieval alchemists had translations of the tablet hanging from their laboratory wall. Called Hermes Trismegistus, having the three parts of the Universal philosophy, and the work it describes is named the Solar Work, is complete. In the ancient Greek legend of the flood, Deucalion is the hero, and the ship rests on Mount Parnassus. Moses is said to have used eyewitness testimonies for his final compilation of Genesis, including the Great Flood narrative. ~Read the Sumerian account in Epic of Gilgamesh.

The 1st century Jewish historian, Flavius Josephus, who had access to a number of documents no longer available today says, "The time of this event [the Great Inundation] was 2262 years after the birth of Adam, the first man; the date is recorded in the sacred books..." ~Flavius Josephus, Antiquities, Loeb, 39.

"Josephus here takes notice that these ancient genealogies were first set down by those that then lived, and from them were transmitted down to posterity, which I suppose to be the true account of that matter, for there is no reason to imagine that men [i.e., Adam and Eve] were not taught to read and write soon after they were taught to speak..." ~Whiston 1.3.2, footnote. 3, no Loeb, writer's brackets.

Man is called in Hebrew 'Adam,' because formed out of adamah, the ground; just as in Latin man is called 'homo,' because formed from humus, the ground, homo ex humo, in the epigram of Father Lactantius.

Closely paralleling the Biblical Genesis account of the Great Flood, the Chaldean, Epic of Gilgamesh, created a gracious sensation. The flood story is not recorded in the Old Babylonian account although, according to it, Gilgamesh is said to have traveled to see a survivor of the Flood, Utnapishtim, in this account, to learn how to gain immortality. "We do not ask to be born; and we do not ask to die. But born we are and die we must. We come into existence and we pass out of existence. And in neither case does high-handed fate await our ratification of its decree." ~Corliss Lamont, 1902-1995, The Illusion of Immortality.

Gilgamesh's name also appears among the kings in the Sumerian Kinglist, which lists the immense longevity of ancient rulers. "The date of the composition of the Gilgamesh Epic can therefore be fixed at about 2000 B.C.E. But the material contained on these tablets is undoubtedly much older, as we can infer from the mere fact that the epic consists of numerous originally independent episodes, which, of course, did not spring into existence at the time of the composition of our poem but must have been current long before they were compiled and woven together to form our epic." ~Heidel, 1963, 15.

That someone who survived the Flood and still lived is possibly Ham, whom Gilgamesh visited seeking to find immortality. The blameworthiness for the Great Flood is not laid on mankind's wickedness [as Biblical account maintain], but on the whim of the Gods. The ancient Gods are despicable creatures in the Sumerian Epic of Gilgamesh as compared to the majestic person of God in the New Testament of the Bible, where

Noah is given a warning and an abundant time to build the [Ark 120 years].

In the Epic there is little warning, but Noah's Ark is very seaworthy; the ark in the Epic is a cube, 120 cubits on a side, and where the Biblical Flood, it rained for 40 days and nights; in the Epic it rains only six days and six nights. The Sumerians also had a Garden of Eden, known as Dilmun, which is described in the Epic of Enki and Ninhursag, the creation stories of both texts bear a most striking resemblance.

Flavius Josephus writes of the Great Flood and the ark, along with its final resting place, "Then the ark settled on a mountaintop in Armenia ... Then Noah let the animals out of the ark, went forth himself with his family, sacrificed to God and feasted with his household. The Armenians call that spot 'the landing-place,' for it was there that the ark came safe to land, and they show the relics of it to this day to this day ... This flood, and the ark, are mentioned by all who have written histories of the barbarians. Among these is Berossus the Chaldean, who in his description of the events of the flood writes somewhere as follows: 'It is said, moreover, that a portion of the vessel still survives in Armenia on the mountain of the Cordyaeans; and that persons carry off pieces of the bitumen, which they use as talismans ...' Hieronymus the Egyptian, author of the ancient history of Phoenicia, by Mnaseas and by many others ... Nicolaus of Damascus in his ninety-sixth book relates the story as follows: 'There is above the country of Minyas a great mountain called Baris where, as the story goes, many refugees found safety at the time of the flood. And one man, transported upon an ark, grounded upon the summit, and relics of the timber were for long preserved ...'"

~Whiston, on Flavius Josephus, Antiquities, 1.3.5-6, Loeb, 43-47.

Unfortunately we have little evidence, which survived, that can help us date the Flood, "... We conclude that the Scriptures furnish no data for a chronological computation prior to the life of Abraham; and that the Mosaic records do not fix and were not intended to fix the precise date either of the Flood or of the Creation of the World." ~Henry Green, 19th century Princeton theologian, 1890, 303.

1 Clement reveals the similarities of Paganism and his quest for Eternal Life for his soul in his works regarding the Egyptians, "For, if the soul should not obey the call of the magician [Egyptian hierophant] you henceforth will live more hopelessly, as thinking that there is nothing after death, and also as having tried things unlawful. If, however, you seem to see anything, what religion or what piety can arise to you from things unlawful and impious? For they say that transactions of this sort are hateful to the Divinity, and that God sets Himself in opposition to those who trouble souls after their release from the body." ~Book 1. 1.1. Clement's Early History, 1.5. His Design to Test the Immortality of the Soul.

"How should we assess the extent of the Biblical flood? We must first understand that we have to deal with a text... That is not only non-scientific but that communicates within a pre-scientific worldview... Some feel that they are protecting the reputation of the Bible by devising scientific theories that account for the details of the traditional interpretation of the text." ~John Walton's Treatise on the Flood pg 320.

"Now to Abraham and his seed were the promises made. He saith not, And to seeds, as of many; but as of one, And to thy seed, which is Christ." ~Galatians 3:16.

And, with such a Biblical argument presented in Galatians, the dreams of the Bible are considered inspired by today's Christians, and not the very words. The Bible claims to be a revelation from God, written by men who were Divinely guided, and even in the choice of words, which they employed, the words are considered sacred. This means that the biblical writers are rendered incapable of error in their welcoming and communication of God's revelation, which does not mean that the Bible is a verbally dictated book as God did not dictate to the writers of the Bible. If He had done so there would be no such thing as the individual writers' having their own approach or characteristics of writing. But as it is each writer wrote in the style and with the vocabulary, which were characteristic of him, his culture, and his knowledge.

Astrological implications: The Egyptian, Artapanus, believed that Hermes Trismegistus is really Moses. Eupolemus, of the late 3rd or early 2nd century B.C.E., "Claimed that Enoch had learned astrology from the angels, and that Abraham later taught the technique to the Phoenicians and the Egyptians."

The days of the week are reminders of the significant influence of astrology:

- Monday = Moon day.
- Tuesday = Mars' day [day of Tiw—the Norse Tyr—the Martian God of War]
- Wednesday = Mercury's day [Woden's day, the Norse Odin, God of the Runes].
- Thursday = Jupiter's day [Thor's day, the Nordic Jupiter, the mighty God of Thunder].
- Friday = Venus' day [Frigg's day, wife of Odin, Goddess of marriage].

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

➤ Saturday = Saturn's day

➤ Sunday = Sun Day [Sol Invictus, the Unquerable Sun, God of Emperor Constantine]

The twelve sons of Jacob, Abraham's grandson, all have long been associated with the twelve signs of the zodiac: "For hundreds of years before they were written down, these family stories were preserved by word of mouth. Abraham's grandson Jacob had twelve sons who became the patriarchs of the twelve Hebrew tribes. These twelve tribes are as much astrological as historical." ~Jewish Tradition, History and Culture by Janice Barsky, October 14, 2000.

BC 7540-The Great Flood: Many of the older cultures from Europe to Asia Minor have flood stories. In 7540 B.C.E. [9552 years ago], there was a significant flood event in the Mediterranean area, and the Black Sea filled with water, which made a large impact upon the local residents, killing and destroying an area of land similar in size to Great Britain.

BC 7000-4000- The Sumerian King List is an ancient record of Mesopotamian rulers, their names, their seat of power, and the length of their reigns. This list, of pre-flood kings, is fascinating because it mentions an antediluvian civilization and a cataclysmic deluge, with the ancient pre-flood kings having really long life-spans [evidenced by their elongated reigns], and after the Great Flood, the life-spans drop significantly but remain inordinately long for a significant period of time, similar to Genesis.

"From the earliest post-diluvian age, to that in which the Messiah appeared, together with the traditions, which so expressly recorded the fall of the human race from a state of original rectitude and felicity, there appears, from an infinite variety of hieroglyphic monuments and of written documents, to have prevailed, from generation to generation, throughout all the regions of the higher Asia, a uniform belief that, in the course of revolving ages, there should arise a Sacred Personage, a mighty deliverer of mankind from the thralldom, of sin and of death. In fact, the memory of the grand original promise, that the seed of the woman should eventually crush the serpent, was carefully preserved in the breasts of the Asiatics; it entered deeply into their symbolic superstitions, and was engraved aloft amidst their mythologic sculptures." ~Thomas Maurice, Hist. Hindostan, vol. ii. p. 273.

The length of their monarchical reigns gradually decreases until they reflect commonplace life-spans, with the average life-span of the biblical antediluvian patriarch recorded in Genesis being 858 years. ~read Noah's Ark and the Ziusudra Epic: Sumerian Origins of the Myth.

Eight kings in five cities ruled 241,200 years before 'The Flood' swept over the land, and after 'The Flood,' Kingship was handed down from Heaven a second time, this time to the city of Kish, which became the seat of Kingship. "In Kish, Gaur ruled 1,200 years; Gulla-Nidaba-annapad ruled 960 years; Palakinatum ruled 900 years; Nangishkushma ruled 670 years, 3 months and 3 days; Bahina ruled 300 years; Buanum ruled 840 years; Kalibum ruled 960 years; Galumum ruled 840 years; Zukakip ruled 900 years; Atab ruled 600 years; Mashda, the son of Atab, ruled 840 years; Arurim, the son of Mashda, ruled 720 years; Etana, the shepherd who ascended to Heaven and made firm all the lands, ruled 1,560 years; Balih, the son of Etana, ruled 400 years; Enmenunna ruled 660 years; Melam-Kish, the son of Enmenunna, ruled 900 years; Barsalnunna, the son of Enmenunna, ruled 1,200 years; Meszamu, the son of Barsalnunna, ruled 140 years; Tizkar, the son of Meszamu, ruled 305 years; Ilku ruled 900 years; Iltasadum ruled 1,200 years; Enmebaragesi, the king who smote the Land of Elam, ruled 900 years; Agga, the son of Enmebaragesi, ruled 625 years." ~The Sumerian King List, <http://www.geocities.com/protoilyrian/sumerian>.

Extra ordinary leadership requires extra ordinary Kings, and in ancient days, the Kings were treated as if gods, "When kingship was lowered from Heaven, kingship was [first] in Eridu. In Eridu, Alulim became king and ruled 28,800 years. Alagar ruled 36,000 years. Two kings thus ruled it for 64,800 years. I drop the topic Eridu because its kingship was brought to Bad-tibira. In Bad-tibira En-men-lu-Anna ruled 43,200 years; En-men-gal-Anna ruled 28,800 years; the god Dumuzi, a shepherd, ruled 36,000 years. Three kings thus ruled it for 108,000 years. I drop the topic Bad-tibira because its kingship was brought to Larak. In Larak En-sipa-zi-Anna ruled 28,800 years. One king thus ruled it for 28,800 years. I drop the topic Larak because its kingship was brought to Sippar. In Sippar En-men-dur-Anna became king and ruled 21,000 years. One king thus ruled it for 21,000 years. I drop Sippar because its kingship was brought to Shurrupak. In Shurrupak, Ubar-Tutu became king and ruled 18,600 years. One king thus ruled it for 18,600 years. These are five cities, eight kings ruled them for 241,000 years. Then the Flood swept over the earth." ~The Flood by Dr. David Livingstone, Sumerian Kinglist, Part I, Pre-Flood is a sort of, "I don't know if there is a God, but if there is I want to cover all bases." ~Sumerian Mythology by Kramer.

The Sumerians believe Man is fashioned from the blood of the god Ea, and in the mythology of Enki and in the World Order, a monstrous bird obtains control of the Tablets written by the gods that shows the delegation of responsibilities of the gods.

- Enlil, who brings up the seed of the land from the earth.
- Enlil who took care to move away Heaven from Earth, took care to move away Earth from Heaven." ~Sumerian Mythology by Kramer.
- The Sumerian, Akkadian, and Indian religions worship the Feast of the Sun on December 25th. This day is very important as it pertains to the seasons and agricultural events and is later capitalized upon to designate another historical event for a new religious group.
- The Lord whose decisions are unalterable.

Some of the Sumerian gods are: Nanna-Queen of Heaven, Goddess of War, also known as the Goddess of Power of Love and Procreation. An-God of the Heaven, Ki-Goddess of the Earth, Enlil-God of Air, Enki-God of Water, Nanna-Father of Utu and Inanna, God of the Moon, Utu-Sun God, Ninurta-God in Charge of the Destructive South Winds, Dumuzi-The Good Shepherd God, married to Inanna [God of the Moon] who insures fertility of the lands and also of the womb of female.

Not everyone was credulous [Gullible], even in ancient times there were those with common sense, "Everything has a natural explanation. The moon is not a God but a great rock and the sun a hot rock." ~Anaxagoras, 475 B.C.E.

During the explorations of the ancient cities of Assyria and Babylonia a number of clay tablets have been discovered, containing accounts of Creation, Flood, and Tower of Babel. They are written in cuneiform, in the form of epic poems. The story of Creation occupies seven tablets, and gives two accounts, which are now called the 'Akkadian' and the 'Babylonian.' The decipherment of these may be looked upon as one of the wonderful discoveries of our age: for the two contradictory accounts of Creation given in Genesis, which before was a puzzle, is now disclosed. The Babylonian account is identical with the Elohistic, relating how the creation of the world took place by successive stages, man being the final act; the Akkadian is identical with the Yavistic, man being created before plants and animals. The first tablet opens with a description of chaos.

"At that time the Heaven above had not yet announced, or the earth beneath recorded, a name. The unopened deep was their generator; Mummu-Tiamat, the chaos of the sea, was the mother of them all. Their waters were embosomed as one, and the cornfield was unharvested. The pasture was ungrown. At that time the gods had not appeared, any of them... No destiny had they fixed. Then the great gods were created." ~ Bank of Wisdom, Box 926, Louisville, KY 40201.

BC 7000 (?) - Ancient walls of Jericho are constructed. Mortar-less stones [rocks stacked one upon the other] are used to construct a wall with a six-foot base and up to twenty-foot heights. The high walls are considered impenetrable for its time, a strong bastion that can be easily defended, looking down upon the enemy. ~Hebrews 11:30. The destruction of these ramparts is a testament to early man's belief that God will support him in his endeavors if he will listen to and perform God's will. The Israelites believe that they are God's chosen people and God will look after them due to God's interventions to help.

Many Israelites still partake of an ancient rite partaking of the veneration of Baal. ~These Fertility Rites and Sacred Sex are represented in Hosea 8:5.

Baal is believed to bring forth fertility from the earth and not Yahweh. In their belief, God had a wife, which we now know based upon relics unearthed with inscriptions dedicated to "Yahweh and his Asherah." This and other pieces of religious artifact are concealed from the naïve masses.

BC 6520 (?) - 5400 - Temple of the Bull God is constructed in Çatal Huyuk, Turkey [The bull is one of the Astrological signs] Totems, such as the bull, are worshipped by ancient cultures as they represent power and strength.

"The most enigmatic of sculptures, the Sphinx was carved from a single block of limestone left over in the quarry used to build the Pyramids. Scholars believe it was sculpted about 4,600 years ago by the pharaoh Khafre, whose Pyramid rises directly behind it and whose face may be that represented on the Sphinx."

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

BC 6000-Ancient Civilizations notice a reoccurring pattern in the skies that corresponds with the seasons. A 365-day cycle is recorded and observed to be repetitive [solar calendar] Star watching becomes the domain of the priests who learn to predict the seasons by using astronomical observations [Astrology is born] Rains occur during a particular season, dry spells another and with this new knowledge priests help the farmers as well as the general populace to prophecy and control the people.

Catal Huyuk cave-drawings depict leopard men using tools for hunting.

The Ziggurats [stepped pyramids] are built by the priestly craft in order to be closer to their god. The Sumerians worshipped the Sun. The Sun representing the new day, a fresh beginning, and the end of the darkness [associated with evils]

The darkness, which befell the supposed crucifixion of Jesus is well noted in many Pagan myths, and merely duplicated in the Christian myth, "Such a story has obvious mythic overtones and can easily be doubted. That a solar eclipse should mark the death of a king was common lore among Greeks and other Mediterranean peoples [Herodotus 7.37, Plutarch Pelopidas 31.3 and Aemilius Paulus 17.7-11, Dio Cassius 55.29.3, John Lydus De Ostentis 70.a], and that such events corresponded with earthquakes was also a scientific superstition [Aristotle Meteorology 367.b.2, Pliny Natural History 2.195, Virgil Georgics 2.47.478-80]. It was also typical to assimilate eclipses to major historic events, even when they did not originally correspond, or to invent eclipses for this purpose [Préaux claims to have counted 200 examples in extant literature; Boeuffle and Isaac Newton have also remarked on this tendency]. The Gospel stories also make a solar eclipse impossible: the crucifixion passover happened during a full moon, the darkness supposedly lasted three hours, and covered the whole earth. Such an impossible event would not fail to be recorded in the works of Seneca, Pliny, Josephus or other historians, yet it is not mentioned anywhere else outside of Christian rhetoric, so we can entirely dismiss the idea of this being a real event." ~ancient historian Richard Carrier.

They held that the stars in the Heavens were an image of flocks of sheep grazing along the Euphrates and referred to the stars as "The Flock of Heaven." The brightest [fixed stars] were called, "Shepherds."

Scientifically, what would Heaven be like? "The temperature of Heaven can be rather accurately computed. Our authority is Isaiah 30:26, 'Moreover, the light of the Moon shall be as the light of the Sun and the light of the Sun shall be sevenfold, as the light of seven days.' Thus Heaven receives from the Moon as much radiation as we do from the Sun, and in addition 7X7 (49) times as much as the Earth does from the Sun, or 50 times in all. The light we receive from the Moon is one 1/10,000 of the light we receive from the Sun, so we can ignore that... The radiation falling on Heaven will heat it to the point where the heat lost by radiation is just equal to the heat received by radiation, i.e., Heaven loses 50 times as much heat as the Earth by radiation. Using the Stefan-Boltzmann law for radiation, (H/E) temperature of the earth (-300K), gives H as 798K (525 C). The exact temperature of Hell cannot be computed... [However] Revelation 21:8 says, 'But the fearful, and unbelieving... Shall have their part in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone.' A lake of molten brimstone means that its temperature must be at or below the boiling point, 444.6 Celsius. We have, then, that Heaven, at 525 Celsius is hotter than Hell at 445 Celsius." ~Applied Optics, vol. 11, A14, 1972.

Space Aliens(?) Sahara Desert, North Africa, Lhote's round-headed denizens, which allegedly depict life from the Red Planet [Mars] are depicted by the primitive cave artists as wearing suits strongly reminiscent of those worn by our own astronauts on the Moon, down to the minute details of their boots. Several hundred such drawings are scattered over many miles of desert: strange helmeted and out of the ordinary figures with head antennae, often floating in weightlessness as if the artist had been able to witness one of our modern space walks, while other images are of a technological bent, showing what could be taken as solar panels, space stations, floating spheres containing humanoid figures.

Unwilling to be caught up in the ancient astronaut fad, anthropologists have suggested that the Tassili "Roundheads" are merely ceremonial dancers or priests wearing empty gourds over their heads. The problem with this rational approach is that the agricultural know-how and resources to grow pumpkins were nonexistent in North Africa at the time the Tassili drawings were created, and would probably not have been available for another thousand years. ~read on the 19th century French explorer Henri Lhote, Prehistory Conference, 1962, Rome, Dr. W. Matthes.

BC 6000-The Six Pointed Star representing the sun is part of the ancient history of India [now generally accepted as being Jewish and representing the House of David] The Star is borrowed by the Semitic cult of Saturn whose famous harvest festivals were held annually at the end of the year, around December 25th. Aneon is calculated at 4,320,000 years [A Great Cycle-Compare this with the Viking beliefs AD 800]. The End of the World: The Great Serpent put to death by the Mighty Norse God, Thor, in the final conflict becomes the Serpent of Revelations identified with Satan. ~ Branston, Brian. Gods of the North. P g 281.

Christians transcribe the Norse "Mother's Curse" as "Judgment Day" when they encounter it variously rephrased as: Mutspell, Muspell, Muspelle, Muspeller, or Muspilli. ~Turville-Petre, E.O.G. Myth and Religion of the North. P g 284.

'Saturn,' the God of the Fields and shepherds, in Chaldee is pronounced 'Satur,' but, as every Chaldee scholar knows, consists only of four letters, thus, it is 'Saur,' and this, some allege, contains the Apocalyptic number of 666, which some say represents the notorious Emperor Nero. The original name of Rome itself was Saturnia, the "City of Saturn." The Pope, being the legitimate representative of 'Saturn,' as head of the 'Mystery of Iniquity,' is therefore, also proclaimed as 666, the 'Number of the Beast.'

Unlike the Christian Mysteries [Baptism, Eucharist, etc.], which ratify enigmas, the Pagans are warned, "We must not treat legend as if it were history." ~ Plutarch, de Iside et Osiride, xi, Loeb Classical Library, p. 29; see also lviii, op. cit., p. 139. On other differences between Christianity and the Mysteries, see E. O. James, In the Fulness of Time, London, 1935, pp. 87f.

This is vouched by the Roman poet, Ovid, by Pliny the Elder, and by Aurelius Victor. Thus, the Pope is alleged to have a claim to the name and number of the 'Beast,' being the only legitimate representative of the original 'Saturn,' he reigns in the 'City of the Seven Hills' where the Roman Saturn formerly reigned, and, from his residence in which, the whole of Italy was "Long after called by his name," being commonly named "The Saturnian land."

In the 19th century, a few British archaeologists, working at an Egyptian site in the city of Oxyrhynchus discovered a cache of papyri, which were brought to Oxford, where pedagogics analyzd and deciphered. One of these papyrus fragments is from the Book of Revelation and gives the number of the Beast as 616, not 666, and working on the same principle of numerology, academics work out 616 to indicate the malevolent and half crazed Emperor Caligula. The ego-maniacal Caligula had had a statue of himself erected in the Holy Temple in Jerusalem, which deeply offended the Jews, and if John was a Jew from Palestine he certainly would have known this.

The illustration of the four horsemen of the Apocalypse is borrowed and restructured from the Hebrew Prophet, Zachariah, where the red horse symbolizes war and destruction; the black horse signifies famine, and the pale horse denotes death; but the white horse suggests vengeance and deliverance.

Saturn and Lateinos are synonymous, having precisely the same meaning, and belonging equally to the same god. The Roman poet, Virgil, shows that Lateinos, to whom the Romans or Latin race traced back their lineage, was represented with a 'Halo' or 'Glory' around his head, to show that he was a "Child of the Sun."

The original 'Lateinos' occupied the very same position as Saturn did in the 'Religious Mysteries,' and who was equally worshipped as the "Offspring of the Sun." The Romans knew that the name "Lateinos" signified the "Hidden One," for their antiquarians invariably affirm that Latium received its name from Saturn "Lying Hid" there. On etymological grounds, then, even on the testimony of the Romans, Lateinos is equivalent to the "Hidden One," that is, to Saturn, the "God of Mystery." As 'Mystery' signifies the 'Hidden System,' so Saturn signifies the 'Hidden god,' and to those who were initiated the god was revealed; to all else he was hidden. 'Saturn,' therefore, is the name of the beast, and contains the mystic number [666], and the Pope, as the head of the beast, is represented as 'Lateinos' or 'Saturn,' that is, the head of the Babylonian "Mystery."

"Hinneh lash-sheqer asah et sheqer sepharim." "Behold, the lying pen of the scribes hath wrought lies." ~Jeremiah, who knew that Scriptural translations were being altered.

When the Pope requires all his services to be performed in the "Latin tongue," that is as much as to say that they must be performed in the language of "Mystery." When the Pope calls his Church the 'Latin Church,' that is equivalent to a declaration also that it is the Church of "Mystery." "Let him that hath understanding count the number of the beast—for it is the number of a man." ~Revelation 13:18

Translations of ancient Sanskrit writings by Maharashi Bharadwaja, a venture by the International
To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

Academy of Sanskrit Research at Mysore, India, reveals a civilization that dealt with flying objects in a smooth and comfortable travel and tells of being able to make these flying crafts motionless while in air, invisible, obtaining pictures of the interiors of these crafts, and also of being able to listen to conversations inside. Did God create more than one people?

BC 5500-The ancient Egyptians, believing themselves to be the oldest civilization [in the known world] portray themselves in picture form as being red in color, while other races and cultures are painted as black, yellow, or some other color [the word 'Adam,' first man, deriving from antiquity as meaning red earth or reddish in color].

1. In the Egyptian culture, matter always existed.
2. The Gods are represented as bringing order to chaos.
3. Isis is Goddess Mother of all Creation.
4. Isis, who is said to possess perpetual virginity, is also known as "The Mother of God" [Neter Mut]. ~cf. Matthew 1:23.
5. Isis is the wife of the "Resurrected" God, Osiris.
6. Osiris, the God of the Dead, father of Horus.
7. Osiris is the vegetation God, God of Resurrection, he who dies at the end of each growing season to be reborn, and is associated with life giving waters.
8. The Pharaoh is identified as the personification [man-God] of Osiris on Earth.
9. The Pharaoh is deified as the earthly incarnation of the God in Heaven [A concept to be borrowed upon later on in history as well as the attributes of the god Osiris by the followers of Jesus the Christ].
10. Osiris is overcome by his brother Set [God of Destruction and Chaos] representative of the "Dark God" the personification of evil and the badness in this world [Good versus Evil]
11. Osiris is killed by his brother, his body mutilated, stripped from the bones [no bones are broken] and is later resurrected by his wife [Isis]. ~cf. Exodus 12: 8, 9, 11, 46, Psalm 34:20, Exodus 12:46 and Numbers 9:12.
12. No bones are broken. Osiris is twice born, once by the Heavens and the second by his wife: Born once of spirit, once of the material world.
13. Osiris is a 'Black God,' 'Lord of the Dead,' 'God of Resurrection,' and Lord of the Underworld. "His flesh is burnished bright as copper." ... ~Compare this with Revelations 1:15, 2:18.
14. From the "Egyptian Book of the Dead," we have, "I fed the hungry and clothed the beggars. I gave water to the thirsty." ~Awakening Osiris translated by Norman Ellis, compare this with: 2 Kings 2:9, Psalms 146:4, Ecclesiastes 123:7, Luke 24:39.
15. The daily bread is under the dispensation of God. "Give us this day our daily bread. When thou plowest, labor in the field that God hath given thee." ~Egyptian Book of the Dead.
16. If a man wishes to live by terrifying others, God will take the bread from his mouth... It is the will of God that we cause men no fear.
17. From the Egyptian "Book of the Dead" we have, "And a new beginning was foretold in the end that a man may rise from his grave singing."

"I stand before the masters who witnessed the transformation of the body of man into the body in spirit, who were witnesses to Resurrection when the corpse of Osiris entered the mountain and the soul of Osiris walked out shining." ~Egyptian, Book of the Dead.

Thousands of years later we have. "He keepeth all his bones; not one of them is broken." ~cf. Psalm 34:20, Exodus 12:46 and Numbers 9:12.

Any Jew living in, or returning to Egypt, was in direct disobedience to God's command, "But he shall not... Cause the people to return to Egypt... For as much as the Lord hath said unto you, 'Ye shall henceforth return no more that way.'" ~Deuteronomy 17:16.

All of which is in strict accordance with the original "Law of Tabu" whereby no bones of the sacrificial victim are allowed to be broken. Osiris and Set represent two opposing forces, one good and one evil; two opposing orbs in constant turmoil with each other [One cannot exist without the other [good vs. evil; God vs. Satan] in this temporal material world-a concept to be later adopted by the Christian World].

The inner mysteries of religion were kept for those adepts, who had proven themselves, by a systematic progression of learning. In the inner group of King Teti we have, "... High priest of Ptah, more honored by the king than any servant, as master of secret things of every work, which his majesty has done... Master of secret things..."

In Chap. Ixiv of the "Book of the Dead" it is stated that the volume was discovered at On, or Heliopolis, and it was found to be "In the very handwriting of the God." Thoth had taken it down from the dictation of the older and greater Gods! This is not the only fabrication of the Egyptian priests. Every legend about the Gods is touched up and altered by them to meet every theological need of the Egyptian society, and later on, the Christians.

The adaptation of Egyptian culture and ethnicity is to be denied in the sequential evolution of modern religion. The Church, five thousand eight hundred and fifty years from this period will claim someone created these ancient writings to confuse the Christian believers and to test their faith. It is ironic that the Church will act so distant to its congregation on matters of truth, as one who is a man of the world.

A resolute study of the ancient gods will prove that God as we know today has had many faces and has changed with the times, depending upon the conquests of ancient civilizations and the survivors.

The discovery of ancient writings, with those attributes similar to the Christian God, Jesus, are disclaimed by the early Church Fathers who assert that they are an act of the devil to deceive those who believed in Jesus Christ our Lord and Father.

"The most evil institution in the world is the Roman Catholic Church." ~Father Joseph McCabe.

Having later destroyed the great library at Alexandria, they were unaware of the translations being recorded also in hieroglyphics, on the ancient pyramids, as they could not translate them at that time. In Egypt the devil is known as Set or Typhon, and the good god is called Osiris. Set and his underground legions fight against Osiris and the human race as is described in the 'Phrygian Tales,' fighting for the souls [ka] of all mankind.

BC 5500-10,000-Space Aliens(?) Se-go Canyon, Utah, c. 5,500 BC; Val Comonica, Italy, c. 10,000 B.C.E., Cave art found in the Spanish caverns of Ojo Guarea and Altamira, and the French ones at Lascaux and Font de Gaume, have proven that perhaps our distant ancestors were able to represent what they saw with a lucidity and simplicity that is stunning to twentieth century eyes. These skills extend to depictions of effects that anthropologists and archaeologists often find taxing: equally faithful representations of domed objects, some of them in threes, others with legs or antennae.

Ancient astronauts have been described as bi-pedal entities often with beaks or wings, or reptilian looking, gray aliens, ethereal, or humanoid coming and going in space craft of some kind or moving in and out of our dimension. Different theories or stories of creation cite these entities, not unlike gods from heaven who many believe seeded the human experiment and will return one day.

The feeling of a God returning to Earth, a Savior, if you will, who restores balance, is a metaphor in the journey of the human experiment in linear time and emotion. All virtual created by consciousness. All are merely theories. The Ojo Guarea complex, weaving its way for miles into the earth, poses an undecipherable riddle. ~En Busca de la Historia Perdida, In Search of Forgotten History, Spanish author and filmmaker Juan G. Atienza states that some of the cave systems many entrances are considered 'Evil,' and the local farmers will not till the soil near them nor even come close to them.

BC 5000- Creation of rock drawings at Ti-n-Lalan, close to Fezzan in Libya, showing an animal headed creature with a gigantic penis, and an animal/man hybrid, having sex.

BC 4500-Ancient Egyptians begin using religious burial texts to accompany their dead; first known written documents.

Ancient Egyptians called their land Kemet [Land of the Blacks] and Ta-Meri [Beloved Land], are primarily agriculturists who, with the practice of irrigation and animal husbandry, transform the Nile Valley into a vibrant food-producing economy by 5000 B.C. E. Their developed lifestyle allows them to enlarge skills in glass making, pottery, metallurgy, weaving, woodworking, leather work, and masonry. In this latter craft, ancient Egyptian practitioners excelled in architecture, as the pyramids attest.

BC 4026 – 3500 BCE: Creation of Adam and Eve [According to Jehovah's Witnesses]. According to many Christian faiths, Adam lives to 930 years of age.

BC 4004-The Christian scholar, Archbishop James Ussher, establishes a Chronology of the Bible that dates the earth's creation to Oct 23, 4004, B.C.E.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

- † The seven-day weekly cycle is established. ~Genesis 2:2.
- † The seventh-day Sabbath [of rest] is instated. ~Genesis 2:1-3.
- † Evil enters the world. ~Genesis 3.
- † A deliverer is promised. ~Genesis 3:15.
- † Adam and Eve's first two children, Cain and Abel, are born. ~Genesis 4:1-2.
- † The first murder is committed by Cain who kills his brother, Abel, but is not killed in return, but is banished to the Eastern land of Nod. ~Genesis 4:3-16. "To the Land of Nod," which is considered a Christian mistranslation of the Hebrew word 'Nod,' which means wandering. Cain the tiller, became Cain the killer. One version of Genesis has Cain and his brother Abel fighting for favors over their twin sisters, which did not appeal to some early Christians who edited this out.
- † In another fable, Caine and Abel are asked by God to present a sacrifice of that which they most cherish, and Caine chooses to kill Abel, his beloved brother, as the offering requested by God. For this heinous action he is exiled to the Land of Nod [forced to wander the earth], where he is taken in by Lilith, Adam's first wife, and taught to be independent.
- † The Hebrew word for Cain, 'qayin,' originally meant a 'lance' or 'spear.' The word also may be related to a mid-1st millennium B.C.E. South Arabic word 'qyn,' meaning a metalsmith. ~See Richard S. Hess, Studies in the Personal Names of Genesis 1-11.

The word Caine has become associated with the word 'Qanah,' meaning "To obtain," or "To provoke to jealousy" due to a word-play in Genesis. 4:1 between 'Qayin' and 'Qanithi,' which is a derivative of 'Qanah.' "And Adam had sex with his wife Eve, and she conceived and gave birth to Qayin, and said, 'I have obtained a man from YHWH.'" ~See Genesis 1:31.

- † According to the Book of Jubilees 4:31, Cain is said to have died when his house collapsed on him, in the same year that Methuselah died.

What really happened to Cain and his descendents that caused strong language from God to be used with Noah in Genesis 9:6, commanding Noah's descendants are to exercise whatever resources are necessary, up to the death penalty, to restrain the enormous sin of murder? ~Finding A Wife For Cain, <http://www.reasons.org/resources/apologetics/cainswife.shtml>. Note: Cain's lineage supposedly ends with the global Flood of Noah's day.

BC 4000-According to Jehovah's Witnesses, the earth is created in the 41st century B.C.E., "And God's active force was moving to and fro over the surface of the waters. And God proceeded to say: 'Let light come to be.' Then there came to be light." ~Genesis 1:2-3.

On the second Creative day, "Then God proceeded to make the expanse and to make a division between the waters that should be beneath the expanse and the waters that should be above the expanse." ~Genesis 1:7.

Adam, the "Son of God," is created in the autumn, perhaps in the month of Ethanim [September/October]. The sixth Creative day continues until at least after the creation of Eve, Adam's second wife. The time of Eve's creation is not affirmed in the Bible, nor does the Bible designate whether man's fall into sin occurs in the 41st century, soon after man's creation, or in the next century.

After Adam and Eve disobey God's command not to eat the fruit of the Tree of Knowledge of good and bad, God drives them outside the garden of Eden, "In order that he may not put his hand out and actually take fruit also from the Tree of Life and eat and live to time indefinite." ~Genesis 3:22; KJV, "And live forever."

Ancient Egyptian mummies show signs of circumcision. The religious controversy is whether or not the circumcision was done for both health and religious purposes. ~Romans 2:25-29, I Corinthians 7:18-19, Philippians 3:3-5. Jesus himself is circumcised on the eighth day as mandated by Hebrew Law. ~Luke 2:21.

BC 3941(?) 3668 (?) - The discrepancies in the dates of recorded history are due to significant events not occurring as the Essene priests had expected or predicted and the adjustment of dates is to allow for the estimated errors by the Jewish priesthood.

The Jewish Essenes believed that the world began [was created] at this period of time [based on the lunar-solar and solar calendars].

The Enoch prophecy foretells the End of the World, 4900 years from Creation. Herod, the Roman appointed King of the Jews, was therefore living in the last millennium. The Book of Enoch, in its present form of 104 chapters, is composed of five Books, with the following titles, of which those of Books 3 and 4 are of particular significance, namely:

- † The Rape of Women by Fallen Angels, and the Giants that were Begotten of Them.
- † The Visions of Enoch begun.

- † The Visions continued, with Views of the Messiah's Kingdom.
- † Man's Destiny revealed in Dreams from the beginning to the End of the Messianic Kingdom.
- † The Warnings of Enoch to his Family and to Mankind. This work is a composite of at least five unknown Jewish writers, and believed to have been composed during the last two centuries B.C.E.

The forged Book of Enoch is often quoted as being genuine and inspired in the Christian Epistle of Jude [14, et seq.], and as "Scripture" in the near canonical Epistle of Barnabas; with the early Church Fathers and Apologists, among whom Justin Martyr, Irenaeus, Athenagoras, Tertullian [Quintus Septimus Florens Tertullianus], Clement of Alexandria, Anatolius, Origen, Saint, Augustine, etc., "It had all the wright of a canonical book," but was finally condemned as a forgery by the forged Apostolic Constitutions, an instance of the very dubious Divine guidance of the inspired Christian Church against all error.

To be blunt, the early Saints were fantastic liars, "I was already Bishop of Hippo, when I went into Ethiopia with some servants of Christ there to preach the Gospel. In this country we saw many men and women without heads, who had two great eyes in their breasts; and in countries still more Southly, we saw people who had but one eye in their foreheads." ~St Augustine, City of God.

Saint Augustine, Bishop of Hippo, although a significant sinner in his youth, saw little difference between copula fornicatoria, that is sex with a prostitute, and copula carnis, sex within marriage. For this reason, the figure of Mary, mother of Jesus had to be exalted and honored, although her mortality was the subject of fiery polemics dividing the later Christian Councils.

Father Tertullian devotes an entire chapter "Concerning the Genuineness of the Prophecy of Enoch," in which he gives incredible patristic reasons as to how the Book survived Noah's Flood, either by the providence of Noah himself or by the Providence of God as in the mythical case of Esdras, and in answer to the scoffing objections that the Jews rejected the Enochian Book, he states, "I suppose," Tertullian sincerely argues, "That they do not think that, having been published before the Deluge, it could have safely survived that world-wide calamity, the abolisher of all things... Let them recall to their memory that Noah, the survivor of the deluge, was the great-grand-son of Enoch himself." ~ Forgery In Christianity: Hebrew Holy Forgeries by Joseph Wheless.

The Church begins its no defiance of Church Doctrine [anti-intellectualism], "I have no use for a Stoic or a Platonic or a dialectic Christianity. After Jesus we have no need of speculation, after the Gospel, no need of research." ~Tertullian, quoted in Augustine And The Scandal Of The North African Catholic Mind by Paul Copan.

Many Christian believe anything which is placed before them, "...Then anyone who leaves behind him a written manual, and likewise anyone who receives it, in the belief that such writing will be clear and certain, must be exceedingly simple-minded..." ~Plato, Phaedrus, 427(?)–348(?) B.C.E..

Augustine's second tract 'Contra mendacium,' written in 422 C.E., cautioned his fellow Christian brethren against lying, but evidently they needed more warnings, "One never errs more safely, methinks, than when one errs by too much loving the truth, and too much rejecting of falsehood." ~Saint Augustine, Retractions, Book I. "God is not to be sought after by reason but followed through authority [blind faith]." ~E. Tesele, Saint Augustine in Augustine the Theologian, New York: Herder and Herder, 1970, pg 27.

First, reasoning is not accepted, then it is. Contradictions abound in Christianity, "God, the Creator of all, at the beginning made man after His own image, and gave him dominion over the earth and sea, and over the air; as the true Prophet has told us, and as the very reason of things instructs us: for man alone is rational, and it is fitting that reason should rule over the irrational. At first, therefore, while he was still righteous, he was superior to all disorders and all frailty; but when he sinned, as we taught you yesterday, and became the servant of sin, he became at the same time liable to frailty. This therefore is written, that men may know that, as by impiety they have been made liable to suffer, so by piety they may be made free from suffering; and not only free from suffering, but by even a little faith in God be able to cure the sufferings of others. For thus the true Prophet promised us, saying, 'Verily I say to you, that if ye have faith as a grain of mustard seed, ye shall say to this mountain, 'Remove hence, and it shall remove.' Of this saving you have yourselves also had proofs; for you saw yesterday how at our presence the Demons removed and were put to flight, with those sufferings, which they had brought upon men." ~The Recognitions of Clement, About the Recognitions and Homilies 5.2, Suffering the Effect of Sin.

"The forgery of pious [Christian] documents of every imaginable character was among the most constant and zealous activities of the holy propagandists of the Christian Faith, from the beginning to the critical era when forgeries were no longer possible or profitable.” ~Joseph Wheless, 1930.

Unlike the Catholics, Saint Augustine refuses to equivocate, “By a joke the force of the objection,” by saying, “He was preparing Hell... For those prying into such deep subjects.”

Many prophets and ministries have attempted to foretell the death of this world. However, many neglect to understand the timetable as recognized by Scripture with its continuous chronological changes made by fervent priests.

BC 3900- Seth, Adam and Eve's third child is born: Seth lives to 912 years and fathers sons and daughters, carrying on Adam's devout family line. Cain's first child, Enoch, is born. Enoch fathers many sons and daughters. Cain's first grandchild, Irad, son of Enoch is born, but no definitive dates or years are given in the lineage of Cain, but many innovations and inventions are ascribed to the mental goings-on of Cain's posterity. In the Book of Jubilees two daughters of Adam and Eve are named; Azûrâ, the first, and Awân, who was born after Seth; mentioning Cain, Abel, nine other sons, and Azûrâ. Jubilees goes on to state that Cain later married his sister Awân and Seth married Azûrâ, thus, accounting for their descendants.

In distinct conflict with this version of births, according to Genesis Rabba and other later sources, Cain had a twin sister, and Abel had two twin sisters; Cain had a twin sister named Lebeda, and Abel a twin sister named Qelimath and in the Conflict of Adam and Eve with Satan, Cain's twin sister is named Luluwa, and Abel's twin sister is named Akliã.

The revelation, which Adam taught his third son Seth in the 700th year is, “Listen to my words, my son Seth. When God had created me out of the earth, along with Eve, your mother, I went about with her in a glory, which she had seen in the aeon from which we had come forth. She taught me a word of knowledge of the Eternal God. And we resembled the great Eternal Angels, for we were higher than the God who had created us and the powers with Him, whom we did not know.” ~The Apocalypse of Adam Translated by George W. MacRae, selection made from James M. Robinson, ed., The Nag Hammadi Library, revised edition. HarperCollins, San Francisco, 1990. James M. Robinson, ed., The Nag Hammadi Library, revised edition. HarperCollins, San Francisco, 1990.

The practicing Christian is to accept, without question, that which the fathers declare Scripture, “But since Enoch, in the same Scripture, has preached likewise concerning the Lord, nothing at all must be rejected by us, which pertains to us; and we read that ‘Every Scripture suitable for edification is ‘Divinely Inspired.’ ... To these considerations is added the fact that Enoch possesses a testimony in the Apostle Jude.” ~Tertullian, On the Apparel of Women, II, ii; ANF. iv, 15-16.

Yet, there remains some disqualifications as to authenticity and inspiration, “Naturally, basing itself upon the Pentateuch and the Prophets, it clothed itself fictitiously with the authority of a patriarch or prophet who was made to reveal the transcendent future... Messianism of Course plays an important part in apocalyptic eschatology, and the idea of the Messiahs in certain Books received a very high development... The parables of Enoch [Enoch], with their pre-existent Messiahs, mark the highest point of development [hence not Divine Revelation] of the Messianic concept to be found in the whole range of Hebrew literature.” ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. i, 601, 602.

Many Christians are still taught that Moses himself wrote the Pentateuch; he did not, e.g. The account of his death, verses such as, “The man Moses was very humble, more so than all men who were on the Earth,” and the reflection, “There has never been another prophet like Moses,” which were written centuries after his death.

Cain's great-great-great grandchild, Lamech, son of Methusael is born. Lamech marries two wives making him the first polygamist recorded.

BC 3800- Seth's first son, Enos, is born [Enos lives 905 years and fathers many sons and daughters]. In the Arabian tradition, Enos prohibits intermarriages with the Cainites [descendants of Cain]. Cain's great grandchild, Mehujael, son of Irad is born.

BC 3761-The Jews date events by how many years have elapsed since 3761 B.C.E., the Era of the Creation. Dates are designated with the abbreviation A.M., which stands for anno mundi, or “Year of the world,” an abbreviated form of ab creatione mundi, “... From the Creation of the world.” ~See <http://webexhibits.org/calendars/calendar-jewish.html>, Encyclopaedia Judaica, 1971.

BC 3700- Seth's first grandchild, Cainan, son of Enos is born [Cainan lives 910 years and fathers numerous sons and daughters]. Cain slays his brother Abel, thus making Abel the first murderer, and the object of religious discrimination. Cain is cursed by God [some believe by blackness, some by facial hair], and banished from the land to the “Land of Fugitiveness,” where the people of Nod dwell, to the East of Eden. ~Note: Why does the Bible skip over other people/inhabitants living on earth?

In Arabian tradition, respecting Cainan held a universal empire, Cainan is celebrated for his wisdom and miraculous powers. Cain's great-great grandchild, Methusael, son of Mehujael is born. Seth's great grandchild, Mahalaleel, son of Cainan is born [Mahalaleel lives 895 years and fathers copious sons and daughters].

BC 3600- Seth's great-great grandchild, Jared, son of Mahalaleel is born. Jared lives 962 years and fathers many sons and daughters. According to an ancient Arabian tradition Jared is the first of the line of Seth who breaks the command of Enos, which prohibits intermarriage with the Cainites that tend to the obliteration of moral and religious principles. ~Genesis 6:1-2.

The foundation of marriage is first described in the classic tale, Epic of Gilgamesh, which portrays the earth's first living creatures and the Great Flood, “Another example comes from Gilgamesh I: the naked and animal-like Enkidu acquires wisdom from his seven-day dalliance with a prostitute. Afterward she clothes him and leads him to the city of Uruk and its king Gilgamesh. Genesis rearranges the same traditions to describe the institution of marriage!” ~Richard J. Clifford, pp. 148-149, Genesis 1-11, Creation Accounts in the Ancient Near East and in the Bible, Washington, D. C. The Catholic Biblical Quarterly Monograph Series 26. The Catholic Biblical Association of America. 1994.

Lamech's children are born: Tubal-cain, “He was a furbisher of every cutting instrument of copper and iron.” The “Vulcan” of the Greeks.

The Church claims to be inerrant, and must do so if we believe, “The literal, historical sense of the first three chapters of Genesis in as far as they bear on the facts touching the foundations of the Christian religion, e.g., the Creation of all things by God at the beginning of time, the especial Creation of man, the formation of the first woman from the first man, the unity of the human race!” ~Papal Biblical Commission, June 30, 1909; Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. vii, pg. 313.

“*So important is it to comprehend the work of Creation that we see the Creed of the Church take this as its starting point. Old Testament, Numbers 14:33-34.

Adam, Seth, Enoch, Cainan, Mahalaleel and Jared continue communicating with their descendants. Adam talks with Seth [800 years], Adam speaks with Enos [695 years], with Cainan [605 years], Mahalaleel [535 years], Jared [470 years], Enoch [308 years], Methuselah [243 years], and with Lamech [56 years: Note-notice the reduction in years as time progresses].

‘Hieros Gamos,’ or the Sacred Marriage Ritual; this ceremony dates as far back as early Sumerian, about 3500 B.C.E. In this ritual the high priestess, acting as an avatar of the Goddess has sex with the ruler of the country to show the Goddess's acceptance of him as ruler and caretaker of her people. ~A Brief History of Religious Sex: Goddesses of Pagan Myth Resources by Sabrina Aset and W. Tracy.

Hollywood writers have nothing over ancient writers who also wrote of sensuous situations such as sex, which is also part of their ancient ceremonies, and as translated from a Sumerian poem, the High Priestess, acting for Inanna, is speaking to Dumuzi, the new Sumerian king, “My vulva, the horn, the boat of Heaven, is full of eagerness like the young moon. My untilled land lies fallow. As for me, Inanna, ‘Who will plow my vulva? Who will plow my high field? Who will plow my wet ground?’ As for me, the young woman, ‘Who will plow my vulva? Who will station the ox there? Who will plow my vulva?’” ~A Brief History of Religious Sex: Goddesses of Pagan Myth Resources by Sabrina Aset and W. Tracy.

Immortality, violence and Godlessness are said to increase.

The Egyptian Pharaoh known as, “Ilani,” [which signifies Gods] is a single person with a plural form. The Egyptian god Thoth, Lord of Magic, with the heart, reason, and mind of ‘Ra,’ the great ‘Sun God,’ the God of Light, writes the divinely inspired texts of the Pyramids. These books deal with sacred words and deeds, medicine, history, astrology, and law. If the Church had known of these ancient documents [when Egypt was invaded by the Christians, would they have saved them?]

As the gods of the Egyptians change the attributes of the old gods are assimilated into new ones or existing ones. At one time there may have been over three thousand of these lesser Gods.

What cannot be seen, what is not seen, holder of invisible and creative powers, what is hidden, including his name, is his name, unknown to Egyptian man.

In Thebes Amen has a feminine nature and is known as Āpt, who holds the scepter of life in her right hand. In a prayer to Amen we have this familiar ancient chant, “O Amen, O Amen, who art in Heaven [the sky], turn thy face upon the dead body of thy Son, and make him sound and strong...” ~from the Gods of the Egyptians by E.A. Budge.

These prophetic words will be the commencement of a speech three thousand five hundred from this time by a poor son of a carpenter. Amen, is lord of the thrones of two lands [Heaven and the material world].

“I am the Divine Hidden Soul who creates the Gods, and who gives sepulchral meals to the denizens of the underworld, of the deep, and of Heaven. I am the rudder of the East, the possessor of two Divine faces wherein his beams are seen. Hail, Lord of the shrine that stands in the Middle of the Earth, He is I, and I am He.” ~From the Book of the Dead with excerpts from the Chapter of the Coming Forth by Day.

Compare this with: “... Upon Golden Tablets do the Gods write.” ~Cf. with Revelation 1:8, 1:18, and the Book of Mormon.

The Mormons, more than five thousand years from this time, will also claim their revelations were first written upon golden plates. “... Thy son stands on thine thy throne, equipped with thy aspect... Thy name that is on earth lives, thy name that is on earth endures; thou wilt not perish, thou wilt not be destroyed for ever and ever.” ~From a 6th Dynasty Egyptian prayer, BC 2345-2181.

Documentation is steadily increasing, showing that Jesus is heavily influenced by the Egyptian gods and that the missing eighteen years of his early life may have been spent studying Egyptian gods & theology cannot be denied. The similarities in today’s Christian world are striking to say the least, and we also have Christian followers ending their prayers with “Amen.”

In the “Book of Apophis,” we have the Egyptian God, Re [Ra] struggling with and subjugating the serpent.

This last text was given to the dead to protect them against the dragon [serpent]. In the Egyptian Texts we also have the 'Sun God' directing the god Khnum to make man out of clay. A belief in the sacredness of a name is kept alive in the ancient scrolls of the priests. ~See also Genesis 2:19, Revelations 2:17.

The word, "Dragon," never appeared in the earlier four Gospels, and Jesus never preached on it, yet it now appears numerous times in Revelation. ~cf. Matthew 19.

Many tales are written in the early Christian era, as the Christians were quite prone to writing fantastic stories, "And the Apostle says, 'Yes, say on.' And the dragon, 'There is a certain woman in this place exceedingly beautiful; and as she was once passing by, I saw her, and fell in love with her, and I followed and watched her; and I found this young man kissing her, and he also had intercourse with her, and did with her other shameful things. And to me indeed it was pleasant to tell thee this, for I know that thou art the twin-brother of Christ, and always bringest our race to nought. But, not wishing to harass her, I did not at this time put him to death; but I watched him passing by in the evening, and struck him, and killed him, and especially as he had dared to do this on the Lord's Day.' And the Apostle inquired of him, saying, 'Tell me, of what seed and of what race art thou?' And he said to him, 'I am the offspring of the race of the serpent, and hurtful of the hurtful; I am son of him who hurt and struck the four brothers that stood; I am son of him who sits on the throne of destruction, and takes his own from what he has lent; I am son of that apostate who encircles the globe; I am kinsman to him who is outside of the ocean, whose tail lies in his mouth; I am he who went into Paradise through the hedge, and spoke with Eve what my father bade me speak to her; I am he who inflamed and fired Cain to kill his brother, and through me thorns and prickles sprang up in the ground; I am he who cast down the Angels from above, and bound them down by the desires of women, that earth-born children might be produced from them, and that I might work my will in them; I am he who hardened the heart of Pharaoh, that he should murder the children of Israel, and keep them down by the hard yoke of slavery; I am he who caused the multitude to err in the desert when they made the calf; I am he who inflamed Herod and incited Caiaphas to the lying tales of falsehood before Pilate, for this became me; I am he who inflamed Judas, and bought him, that he should betray Christ; I am he who inhabits and holds the abyss of Tartarus, and the Son of God has wronged me against my will, and has gathered his own out of me; I am the kinsman of him who is to come from the east, to whom also power has been given to do whatever he will upon the earth.'" ~Ante-Nicene Fathers/Volume VIII/Apocrypha of the New Testament/Various Acts of Thomas/Further Acts of Thomas by Anonymous from Wikipedia, as translated by Alexander Walker. About the Dragon and the Young Man.

"Yeshu said, 'Come, that I may teach you about Secrets [Mysteries(?)] no person has ever seen. For there exists a great and boundless realm, whose extent no generation of Angels has seen, in which there is a great invisible Spirit, which no eye of an Angel has ever seen, no thought of the heart has ever comprehended, and it was never called by any name. And a luminous cloud appeared there.'" ~Gospel of Judas cf. Apocryphon of John from the Nag.

As the world changes, so does the Bible, for the clergy must keep pace with an increasingly more sophisticated membership. Cetus once represented the Great Sea Monster [Whale, Crocodile, Shark, Dragon, Leviathan, Serpent, Sea Monster, Cockatrice, Rahab, Snake, Behemoth, Raham, Sea Gazelles], which represented Satan, who will be bound and imprisoned at the Second Advent of the Lord Jesus Christ [reference The Star Gospel], but since our sophisticated society no longer believes in dragons, it has since been replaced. "In that day, the Lord with his sore and great and strong sword, shall punish leviathan the piercing serpent, even leviathan that crooked serpent; and he shall slay the dragon that is in the sea." ~Isaiah 27:1, Quoted in In His Name by E. Christopher Reyes.

What a remarkable and astonishingly horrific image it must have sent out to the superstitious Pagans and early Christians, "Look at the monster Behemoth; I created him and I created you. He eats grass like a cow, but what strength there is in his body, and what power there is in his muscles! His tail stands up like a cedar, and the muscles in his legs are strong. His bones are as strong as bronze, and his legs are like iron bars. The most amazing of all my creatures!" ~Job 40:15-19.

The dragon was also known for its poison and was mentioned in the following Biblical references: Genesis 1:21; Exodus 7:9; Isaiah 13:22, 27:1, 34:13, 35:7, 42:30, 51:9; Matthew 12:40; John 3:14; Revelation 12:3-17, 19:20-21, 20:2; Jeremiah 9:11, 10:22, 14:6, 49:33, 51:34-37; Jacob 6:13; Numbers 21:9; Psalm 74:13, Psalm 74:14, Psalm 91:13, Psalm 104:26, Job 7:12; Daniel 7:2-7; II Kings 18:4; Elijah 3:33; Deuteronomy 32:33; Micah 1:8, Malachi 1:3, Peshitta., Jewish Talmud. Read Jonah and the Whale, "At the Lord's command a large fish [formerly a Dragon] swallowed Jonah, and he was inside the fish for three days and three nights." ~Jonah 1:17.

Earlier mentioning of Dragons, Leviathons, Behemoths, etc., "The Leviathan was a monstrous fish created on the fifth day of Creation. Its story is related at length in the Talmud Baba Bathra 74b, where it is told that the Leviathan will be slain and its flesh served as a feast to the righteous in [the] Time to Come, and its skin used to cover the tent where the banquet will take place." ~Commentary: Art scroll prayer-book, p. 725.

The dragon's fierce tenacity and strength is spoken of extensively throughout the older Bible versions, "... Anyone who sees Leviathan [Dragon, Monster, Serpent] loses courage and falls to the ground. When he is aroused, he is fierce; no one would dare to stand before him. No one can tear off his outer coat or pierce the armor he wears. His back is made of rows of shields, fastened together as hard as stone. Light flashes when he sneezes, and his eyes glow like the rising sun. Flames blaze from his mouth, and streams of sparks fly out. Smoke comes pouring out of his nose, like smoke from weeds burning under a pot. There is not a weak spot in his skin; it is as hard and unyielding as a millstone. There is no sword that can wound him; no spear or arrow or lance that can harm him. For him iron is as flimsy as straw, and bronze as soft as rotten wood. The scales on his belly are like jagged pieces of pottery; they tear up the muddy ground like a threshing sledge. He churns up the sea like boiling water and makes it bubble like a pot of oil. He looks down on even the proudest animals; he is the king of all wild beasts." ~Job 41.

To remove a name or destroy it is literally to blot out the existence of that entity in this world as well as the next and is the ultimate death of both the body and soul. To be remembered for all eternity one must have his or her name cut into stone for all posterity, forever and ever. It was for this reason that rock was used to perpetuate the names of the Gods and of their existence.

Massive granite obelisks are erected [some reaching 60' in height] with a copper metal coating that shone in the desert sun. The Resurrection is a belief that encapsulates a faith in the hereafter and a need to do well in this world so that one may enjoy the next, which is an everlasting life in a Spiritual World. This belief has not been isolated nor indigenous to any specific group or culture.

The belief that one's spirit can live on in a hereafter, not the body or material self, but the everlasting soul [ka], or that one's good deeds are weighed against a feather as told in the ancient "The Book of the Dead," otherwise known as the "Coffin Texts." "Resurrection after three days becomes a motif developed before Jesus, which runs contrary to nearly all scholarship. What happens in the New Testament was adopted by Jesus and his followers based on an earlier Messiah story." ~Yehezkel Kaufman Professor of Biblical Studies at Hebrew University, cf. Egyptian Book of the Dead.

"It is certain that the New Testament was not written by Christ himself, nor by his Apostles, but a long while after them, by some unknown persons, who, lest they should not be credited when they wrote of affairs they were little acquainted with..." ~New Testament Alterations, http://essenes.net/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=149&Itemid=563

The New Testament is based primarily upon the writings of a Jewish rabbi Yeshua Nazaret, known as Jesus [The Word Christ means Messiah].

Egyptian beliefs held that the feather is weighed against our sins in the underworld. If the feather is heavier than our good deeds, we proceed no further, but remain in a world oblivious to happiness, a world of darkness, and a world of non-being. Egyptian theology is based upon the resurrection to Heaven, or the stars, and the continuation of stability on earth.

His mother, Isis, to save him from Set, who attempts to kill him, hides Osiris, in a papyrus swamp as a child [similarities to Cain and Able and Moses].

In the Vatican legends it will be taught that Saint Michael, the Archangel, has committed to him the balance of God's justice, similar to Egyptian lore [Anubis and his scales], and that in the two opposite scales of that balance the merits and the demerits of the departed are put that they may be fairly weighed.

The Chinese have similar lores and, "One of them always represents a sinner in a pair of scales, with his iniquities in the one, and his good works in another... We meet with several such representations, in the Grecian mythology." ~Bishop Hurd.

Similarities to Egyptian lore and Christianity made the transition of the Egyptians to accept the religion of the Man Christ most probable in later centuries. Resurrection and immortality reign in both cultures. The striking similarities to Christianity cannot be denied. Can it be that early Christian Fathers also studied Egyptology? The Underworld is where evil spirits exist along with their evil ruler. "Despite the desperate spiritual yearnings of mankind, no one has yet created a single truth, or rationale, to support the belief in God and a personal immortality.” ~E. Christopher Reyes.

The cerebral limitations of the early Christian Fathers has been several times admitted to and apologized for by the the Roman Church, which further confesses of them, It was natural that in the early days of the Church, the Fathers, writing with little scientific knowledge, should have a tendency” [to fall into miscellaneous comical and outrageous errors] “Now entirely abandoned,” or so saith the Church. ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 3, iii, 731.

The world has already been divided into good and evil by the early Egyptians and the separation of the two worlds is depicted in both their artwork and their early writings. The pig is considered an abominable creature by the Egyptians, perhaps because of a ‘Black pig’ used to portray Seth who put out the lunar eye of the god Horus. This may be the forerunner of the prohibition on eating pork by various religions groups. Pork is abstained from today more from the religious perspective than from being unclean. Like Jesus, Horus has no recorded history between the ages of 12 and 30, Like Jesus, the God, Horus, has no recorded history between the ages of 12 and 30, “And the mythos alone will account for the chasm, which is wide and deep enough to engulf a supposed history of 18 years.” ~Massey, MC.

Long ago people got ill or diseases from not cooking pork properly and this may also have contributed to the taboo on pork. M.D. Aletheia claims that, at least 2500 years before Christ, the Egyptian God, Horus [sometimes interchanged with Osiris], was crucified on “An Accursed Tree” in sin-atonement.

The Roman writer Macrobius makes the same statement about the representation of the birth of Horus in the temples, Saturnalia, I., 18, and adds that this young god was a symbol of the rebirth of the sun at that date [December 25th].

We are brought to the very threshold of Christianity in the year AD 1, whereby the Jews are familiar with the Egyptian statues or pictures of Isis with the divine babe Horus in her arms, and Osiris, after being put to death, rises from the dead, will bear the title of the “Resurrected One.”

The first year in Christian calendar [a.d. = anno Domini- Year of Our Lord], Augustus - Jewish denotation is C.E. for Common Era since the Jews do not recognize ‘Yeshua’ as their Lord.

The sufferings, death, and resurrection of Osiris forming the Great Mystery of the Egyptian religious beliefs. “In certain sacred rites of the heathen, the mode of initiation is by baptism.” ~Tertullian, referring to the worship of Isis and Mithra.

“None is free from pollution, though his life be but the length of one ray upon the earth. And it is for that reason because of the sacrament of baptism that pollution of our birth is taken away, that infants are baptized.” ~Origin, Works, Vol. 1, p.65.

“...Our superstitions with our life begin; the obscene old grandam, or the next of kin, the new-born infant from the cradle takes, and first of spittle a lustration makes; then in the spawl her middle finger dips, anoints the temples, forehead, and the lips, pretending force of magic to prevent [urentes oculos] By virtue of her nasty excrement.” ~Dryden.

“When we are planning for posterity, we ought to remember that virtue is not hereditary.” ~By Thomas Paine, revolutionist and free thinker.

Some historians still dispute the Egyptian God's crucifixion account. There is no denying that the stories of Jesus and Horus are quite similar, and even the name Horus has been described as contributing the name of Jesus Christ. Horus and his once-and-future Father, Osiris, are frequently interchangeable just as Jesus, God and His Father are interchangeable. Jesus, like Horus, is claimed to have said: “I and my Father are one.” His personal epithet was “Iusa,” the “Ever-becoming Son” of “P'tah” or “The Father.”

“The Jews did not refer to ‘God’ as ‘My Father.’ Or if they did, they would qualify the statement with ‘In Heaven.’ However, Jesus did not do this. He made a claim that the Jews could not misinterpret when he called God ‘My Father.’ Jesus also implied that while God was working, He, the Son, was working too. Again, the Jews understood the implication that He was ‘God's Son.’ As a result of this statement, the Jews' hatred grew. Even though they were seeking, mainly, to persecute him, they then began to desire to kill him.” ~McDowell 1973, 16, see John 5:16-18.

Hanging on a tree was a common form of punishment. It was frequently called the “Accursed tree.” “He that is hanged on a tree is accursed of God.” ~cf. Deuteronomy, 21:22 and Galatians 3:13.

Horus, like Jesus, was said to have been the ‘Way, the Truth and the Light,’ the “Messiah,” the “Son of Man” and the “Word.” Horus was also called the “KRST,” or the “Anointed One,” which many Christians will be astounded to discover. Horus also was called the "Fisher," the "Good Shepherd," the "Lamb of God" and was associated with the lion and fish, "Ichthys."

There was a time when the priest was regarded as the foundation of wisdom, when information came from the pulpit, religion from the altar, and sheep were the property of the shepherd. And in those days, the masses lived in intellectual tranquility.

Originally a hawk or falcon-headed god, the Romans turned Horus into an eagle-headed god and the eagle symbolism is later transferred to Christianity [Hence podiums and pulpits in Roman Catholic Churches often bear eagle symbolism taken directly from the Egyptian God].

Jesus, like Horus, was born to a virgin, Isis-Meri, on December 25th, in a cave or a manger. In the catacombs at Rome can be found pictures of the baby Horus being held by the Virgin Isis-Meri in what scholars have claimed is the original 'Madonna and Child.' ~www.infidels.org.

Like Jesus, the Egyptian god Horus' birth was announced by a star in the east and he was allegedly attended by three wise men. As a youth, Horus taught in the temple and was baptized when he was 30 years old. As an adult, Horus performed numerous miracles including, like Jesus and Buddha, the feat of walking on water. Just as Jesus allegedly raised Lazarus from the dead, Horus was assumed to have raised El-Azar-us from the dead. Before his death, Horus had twelve disciples and at one stage appeared before them, "Transfigured on the Mount."

"The rudest savage has always known this fact, and for that reason always demanded the evidence of miracle. The founder of a religion must be able to turn water into wine; cure with a word the blind and lame, and raise with a simple touch the dead to life. It was necessary for him to demonstrate to the satisfaction of his barbarian disciple, that he was superior to nature. In times of ignorance this was easy to do. The credulity of the savage was almost boundless. To him the marvelous was the beautiful, the mysterious was the sublime. Consequently, every religion has for its foundation a miracle; that is to say, a violation of nature; that is to say, a falsehood." ~Col. Robert G. Ingersoll, The Gods, 1872.

The Christians are quite aware of numerous Virgin Births, "It is handed down among the Gymnosophists, of India that Buddha, the founder of their system, was brought forth by a Virgin from her side." ~Saint Jerome regarding Buddha, Contra Jovian, Book I; quoted by Rhys Davids, Buddhism, p. 183.

"The Christians, in this case, as in many others, were anticipated by the Pagans; for Virgin-Born Gods who sacrificed themselves for the good of the race were quite common in the myths and legends of the heathen nations of antiquity. The Reverend Charles H. Vail, in a scholarly study, 'The World's Saviors,' records the stories of miraculous births of fifteen other Saviors, who lived before the Christian era." ~John G. Jackson.

The Church will seek to Christianize the world by adopting the various patronages, worldwide, and the Holy Ghost incurs a grievous error in inspiring the certification of various Saints, creating saints from the paganized gods, as the noble Buddha is himself canonized by the Holy Church, as 'Saint Josaphat.' The "Life" of this Holy Saint being highly edifying to the Faithful as well as effective in spreading the Christian version of truth.

"During the Middle Ages the 'Life of Barlaam and Josaphat' had been translated into some twenty languages, English included, so that in reality the story of Buddha became the vehicle of Christian truth in many nations" ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 1, 713.

After "Suffering death" Horus, like Jesus, is buried in a tomb where he is resurrected and ascends into Heaven, or "Amen-ti." Christians now conclude their prayers with 'Amen,' the Egyptians ended their prayers with 'Amen-ti,' Egyptian for "Heaven" or the "After World."

2500 years before John baptized believers in the river Jordan, the ancient Egyptians baptized their believers in the Nile River, or in burial chambers. In both cases, the purpose of baptism is to cleanse and revivify individuals, whether alive or dead, into a new state of "Eternal Blessedness." As Christians assimilate with Jesus through baptism, the ancient Egyptians were also assimilated through baptism with their god, Horus. Jesus was baptized by John, Horus was baptized by lesser gods. ~From the works of D. Christie Sinton Amoume.

Conquering armies will destroy the magnificent libraries of ancient Egypt, but do not extinguish the hieroglyphs on the pyramids, as being unable to read these ancient writings the conquering armies left them intact. By the time victorious armies had entered Egypt, even the High Priests could not interpret many of the hieroglyphic writings or recognize the names of some of the ancient Gods. "If we admit that some infinite being has controlled the destinies of persons and peoples, history becomes a most cruel and bloody farce. Age after age, the strong have trampled upon the weak; the crafty and heartless have ensnared and enslaved the simple and innocent, and nowhere, in all the annals of mankind, has any God succored the oppressed." ~Robert G. Ingersoll, The Gods, 1872.

Through the pyramids the ancient culture and religious beliefs of the Egyptians lives on for us to compare the inter-relationships of a force that survives today in various forms of religion [Although many Christian religions will deny it]. Stories of the Virgin God Isis and the Resurrected Egyptian god Osiris are later assimilated into Christian literature by way of Jesus the Christ who is said by the Jews [according to their writings] to have lived in Egypt during the missing eighteen year Bible period. Where was Jesus from infancy to puberty? Did the Church destroy or conceal this damaging information?

The Egyptian God, Isis, with the child Horus, on her knee, was honored centuries before the Christian era, and worshiped under the names of "Our Lady," "Queen of Heaven," "Star of the Sea," "Mother of God," and numerous other epithets.... Before her, Neith, the "Virgin of the World," whose figure bends from the sky across the earthly plains and the children of men, was acclaimed as "Mother of the Great God Osiris." In Amentet, the Hidden Region, we have the Egyptian equivalent of Hell or Hades. Those who lead a good life will have the power to embark on the revered boat that will carry them across the legendary Underworld to appear with Ra at daybreak.

Christians are taught that all Non-Christians will go to Hades. ~Luke 16:23, Revelation 20:13.

"In Latin, Saint Jerome translates 'Hades' as 'Infernus,' the Roman name for the Underworld and thus an exact cognate." ~Christian History.

But, the religious Christian processions in which sacred objects are carried loftily for display to the naïve on-lookers, the tonsure of priests [shaving of the head], specific funeral rites, the use of lighted tapers, fashionable ideas regarding the natural features and characteristics of Hades, all of these are recognized Pagan prototypes. The real distinction, however, arises with regard to the relation of nascent Christianity to its Pagan rivals.

The character and amount of the evidence of the Pagan Mysteries creates certain procedural problems because of the vows of secrecy imposed upon the initiates, and relatively little information concerning the teachings imparted in the Mysteries has been preserved.

A large component of the scanty evidence regarding the ancient religious Mysteries dates back to the 3rd, 4th, and 5th Christian centuries, in that it must not be assumed that sacred beliefs and practices current at that time existed in substantially the same form during the pre-Christian era, but in similar structure since Pagan doctrines differed somewhat from place to place and from century to century, which is to be expected. ~Chr. Blinkenberg, Darstellungen des Sabazios und Denkmaler seines Kultus, in Archaeologische Studien, Copenhagen, 1904, pp. 66-128.

In the Tuat [Underworld], were goddesses who would be in charge of pits of fire. They were charged with the destruction of the bodies and souls of the deceased who did not fare well on Judgment Day. They would cut the bodies up before they were burned. Some Egyptian versions of Hades have huge serpents and reptiles [the Egyptians were afraid of snakes and reptiles], reptiles were believed to be overseeing the destination of souls.

The enemies of Ra, the 'Sun God,' who carries the Ankh in his right hand signifying life, and the staff in his left hand signifying his power, are destroyed by fire each morning and night. The Christian Coptics adopt many of the Egyptian sacred teachings and later embellish the Egyptian Hell by adding the souls of men who do not embrace Christendom. "Their worm shall not die, neither shall their fire be quenched..." ~Isaiah 66:24.

Isis has another son, Harpocrates. Having known no living man, we can only venture that this is another Virgin Birth or birth via a Holy Ghost. Harpocrates becomes a great Greek philosopher, one who was born premature and lame. He is often portrayed with his fingers to his lips signifying a helpless status and which is later interpreted by the Romans and Greeks as silence or secrecy. Statues of Harpocrates were often placed at the entrances to holy temples where dramas depicting the Mysteries were present.

"Claims of Virgin Birth were a common way of glorifying famous people and mythological heroes of ancient times. For example, Julius Caesar, Augustus, Aristomenes, Alexander the Great, Plato, Cyrus, the elder Scipio, Egyptian Pharaohs, the Buddha, Hermes, Mithra, Attis-Adonis, Hercules, Cybele, Demeter,

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

Leo, and Vulcan; all were thought of as Virgin-Born in at least some traditions. ” ~Rod L. Evans and Irwin M. Berent.

“He was a wise man who invented God.” ~Plato (427?-348? B.C.E.)

The Egyptian trilogy is represented in by King Osiris who dies and is reborn, first as God of the Underworld, Set; second, as the God Horus, god of the sun and god of home and environment; and third as Harpocrates the innocent child like God. It is represented in the body of Osiris rising from the dead. It is represented in the resurrection of the body, the soul, and also that of the spirit.

The ancient Egyptian priests preached, that if Osiris could rise up from the dead, then, man too might have a chance at Everlasting Life.

But man lacks the ‘Divine Body’ of Osiris, and only through a ‘Spiritual Rebirth’ could man attain the ‘Immortality of the soul and everlasting life’ in the hereafter according to the Egyptian priests.

All of this was available... for a price. Many Modern Religions have taught mythology, folklore, and fables as statements of fact [My role is to present the facts so much as I have been able to glean from history so that you may decide on the Truth].

The earliest known drug usage by mankind is recorded in the ancient civilization of Sumer, in Mesopotamia, which is one of the oldest in history, and relatively shortly after the dispersion at the Tower of Babel.

There is unambiguous evidence that plants were used as medicinal drugs there, and in adding up the early evidence that exists of Sumerians using opium. Scientists testing Ancient Egyptian mummies for drugs in their system, discovered that some of the mummies contained traces of cocaine. ~Note: This is unbelievably shocking because cocaine comes from plants originating in the Americas, although opium usage appears to have been also common!

The conclusion of some historians is that Stropharia cubensis may be of the Biblical The Tree of Knowledge, which is based upon the riddance of plants containing entheogens that are readily available in Africa. The author, McKenna, restricted the plants considered to those having entheogens with indole compounds, which are typically contain strong hallucinatory entheogens. With these prerequisites, the list of hallucinogenic plants is short: Tabernaemontana iboga and Peganum harmala. ~Syrian Rue.

Terence McKenna also suggests that the mushroom augmented the above characteristics by changing the behavior of some individuals.

BC 3499-3000 B.C.E.- Mankind is created to the ninth generation; from Adam to Enoch; Prophecies are foretold in the Old Testament; Adam and Enoch die.

By the tenth generation, Adam's race had increased immensely. Lacking female company, the Angels known as “Sons of God,” found wives among the attractive “Daughters of Men.” The children of their unions would have inherited Eternal Life from their father, but God had decreed, “Let not My spirit abide in flesh forever! Henceforth the years of man are limited to one hundred and twenty.” ~The Sons of God and the Daughters of Men: Notes from the Books of Ysrael. From Hebrew Myths: The Book of Genesis By Robert Graves and Raphael Patai, <http://www.piney.com/index.html>, Chapter 18 p. 100-107. cf. Genesis 6:1-7.

BC 3474- Adam dies at the age of 930 [3474 B.C.E.] Claims that Adam lived to be 930 years old is an archeological indication of the ancient Hebrews attempting to contend with other ancient Mideastern religions, which often depict their heroes living for hundreds or thousands of years.

BC 3450 (?) - The legendary Tower of Babel in Babylon reaches up to the heavens. ~Genesis 11:4. Does man, once again, wish to attain the powers of God, to be with God, and dwell in his domain? Dimensions of “Etemen-an-ki” or “The Foundation of Heaven and Earth” are derived from a cuneiform tablet of Anubelshunu from the year BC 229 during the reign of King Seleucus using Sumerian measurements, each side being 90 double cubits [90 cubits being the distance a man could walk in one minute]. Thus 4 X 90 = 360.

There is a clear reference to sacred numbers and magical beliefs in the text, which further states, “The initiate is to show this to the initiate. But, the un-initiate shall not see it.” ~The Gods of the Egyptians by E.A. Wallis Budge, vol. 2, Dover Publications.

The Akkadian language uses the word “Bab-ilu,” which translates into “Gate of God,” and tablets that have been found among the ruins of Babylon, with the exact form of the name by which its inhabitants called it: “Bab-ilu,” which means, the “Gate of God.” ~Witness of Assyria, Pg. 37.

Sometimes written with two signs, a Gate and God. The ancient Hebrew bears the same interpretation without any forced etymology, Babel: the Gate of God. The place was not founded by Semitic Babylonians, but by the Akkadians, and it was neither a city nor a town, but a temple, consisting of seven platforms, each being tinted a different color, and dedicated to the seven [known] planets, the topmost one being dedicated to the moon. It was called by the Semitic invaders, Ca-dimorra, the gate of God thus being translated by them into their own tongue.

The story of the confusion of languages was a theory born in the imagination of the writer of the "Inspired Text." The concept of a Sabbath originated with the Akkadians, who occupied a tract of land in the historic valley of the Tigris and Euphrates about five thousand years before the "Christ" Jesus, where the civilization of the world is alleged to have commenced. It was believed for many centuries that God would punish the Sabbath breaking individual and the Sabbath breaking nation.

The Akkadians were eventually conquered by the Assyrians, and from the ruins of whose empire subsequently arose the monarchies of Nineveh and Babylon, were the inventors of cuneiform writing, which consisted of figures of various kinds of animals, limbs, etc., traced with a style upon clay cylinders or tablets. Many of these have been found under the ruins of the buried cities; twelve were found in Babylonia in AD 1876, others at Tel-el-Amarna in Egypt in AD 1887, and among the ruins of Lachish in Southern Palestine, and are now decipherable.

The religion of the Akkadians, Shamanism, from the Semitic Shamas = Sun, was both astronomical and phallic. They had their "Trinity," a 'Celestial Father' and 'Mother,' and their off-spring, the 'Sun God,' an infant, Sargon, who was placed by his mother in a reed basket, and left on the bank of a river, subsequently found, and eventually becoming king of Babylon, in 3750 B.C.E. The name Adam is derived from the Assyrian Adami, meaning man.

They also had their "Holy Water," "Penitential Psalms," table of "Shew-bread," and "Ark" containing the images of their gods. They dedicated special days to the sun, moon, and five planets: Mars, Mercury, Jupiter, Venus, and Saturn, each cycle of which became a week of seven days. "The number seven thus became sacred to them," as did the number twelve, which represented the twelve signs of the zodiac, and from which the idea of the twelve apostles was derived.

"They had a special deity who received honor, as patron of the number seven; and destructive tempests and winds were believed to be directed by the will of seven wicked spirits." ~F.J. Gould, A Concise History of Religion.

The seven Heavenly bodies are represented in the seven platforms, by which the astronomer priests ascended to the summit of their temple, in the so-called "Tower of Babel." The 7th, 14th, 21st, and 28th days of each month are called 'Sabbaths,' or 'Rest Days,' and are rigorously kept, not even the king is permitted to eat cooked food, change his clothes, drive his chariot, sit in the judgment seat, review his troops, or even take medicine on any of these days.

The Sabbatical concept widens, from the Akkadians to their Semitic conquerors, the inhabitants of the neighboring countries of Phoenicia, Phrygia, Canaan, and Syria; and from these to the Jews during their captivity. The Puritans in the 16th century attempted, to revive the ceremonial obligations of the Jewish Sabbath; but altering the day of the week from the seventh to the first, which secured for them the name of "Sabbatarians."

"My ancestors were Puritans from England. They arrived here in 1648 in the hope of finding greater restrictions than were permissible under English law at that time." ~Garrison Keillor.

The Jews kept the 'Sabbath' with infinite strictness, and with them, this period of time known as the Sabbath became so Holy that he who violated it by working was punished by death. Sabbath breaking and murder were equal crimes. On the Sabbath the pious Jew could not build a fire in his house, ate cold victuals, and thanked God for the good that he ate.

The gates of the city are closed on the Sabbath, and no business is done on the Sabbath, and the traveler who arrives at the city gates on that day remains locked outside until evening. If he happened to fall and hurt himself doing so, he remained where he fell until the sun had gone down. It is quite remarkable that the first instance on record in which the Bishop of Rome attempted to rule the Christian Church was by an edict in behalf of the new Christian Sabbath [Sunday]. It had been the custom of all the Churches to celebrate the Passover, but with this difference: that while the Eastern churches observed it upon the 14th day of the first month, no matter what day of the week this occurred, the Western Churches kept it on the Sunday following that day; or rather, upon the Sunday following Good Friday. ~Bower, History of the Popes, vol. 1.

To Pope Pius XII. "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

pp. 18, 19; Rose's Neander, pp. 188-190; Dowling, History of Romanism, book 1, chap. 2, sec. 9.

Victor, Bishop of Rome, in the year 196 C.E., took upon himself the authority to impose the Roman custom upon all the Churches; that is, to compel them to observe the passover upon Sunday, "This bold attempt," says Bower, "We may call the first essay of papal usurpation." ~History of the Popes, vol. 1, p. 18.

All of which leads to the, "Earliest instance of Romish assumption." ~History of Romanism, heading of page 32.

Remember, even Jesus Christ was chastised for performing miracles and healing the sick on the Sabbath.

~Exodus 20:8, 31:13, Leviticus 25:2, 26:34, Isaiah 56:4, Ezekiel 20:12, 22:8, Matthew 12:8, 24:20, Mark 2:27, Colossians 2:16, Hebrews 4:9, Hosea 2:11, Luke 14:5, Acts 1:12.

Saint Augustine does not say however that they kept Sunday as a festival, but merely that they [Manichaeans] then worshipped the Almighty Sun: "Vos in die, quem dicunt solis, solem colitis." ~Faust, Bk XVIII, c. 5, [349].

The early Christians did not hold the seventh day in such veneration, and as a matter of fact, they ceased to regard it as Holy, even changing the sacred day from the seventh to the first in an attempt to distance themselves from their Hebrew roots. This change was really made by Emperor Constantine, because the first day of the week was the Sunday of the Pagans, change would delineate the Jews from the Christianized Jews, and this day was given to the pleasures [sexual] and recreation as well as to religious ceremonies for many centuries prior.

After Emperor Constantine designated the first day to be kept Holy and observed by Christians, Sunday eventually became the accepted sacred time for Jesus. But, the early Christians, kept the day much as it had been kept by their Pagan contemporaries, by attending church in the morning, and in the afternoon enjoying their leisure. The Catholic Church adopted the prevailing customs, and to accommodate itself to Pagan ways and superstitions, it agreed, as far as it could, with the basic concepts of the Pagans to facilitate their conversion. ~Sabbath Superstition Robert Green Ingersoll

The Hebrews were more forgiving in acceptance of other religions. According to Eliyahu Silver and Rabbi Yitschak Goldstein Although anyone who is driven by the right motives can become Jewish and join the Jewish people, this is not a necessity in order to enter heaven.

Noah [the Preacher of Righteousness] was not Jewish, but nevertheless it is written about him, "Noah was a just man and perfect in his generations." ~Genesis 6:9.

And what was his reward? "And Noah walked with God." The same holds true for Job. He was also not Jewish. "Job was perfect and upright, and one that eschewed evil." ~Job 1:1.

Therefore you don't have to be Jewish in order to be a God fearing and righteous person. The Jewish people believe they have a different mission in life: "And you shall be unto Me a kingdom of priests, a holy nation." ~Exodus 19:6.

For this reason the Jewish people have to live according to *613 Commandments. For the Noachide, non-Jew, life is considerably easier; he has far fewer commandments. Seven of them are particularly notable, because if he transgresses them, he will be punished by a human court.

These are:

- † Establish courts of law.
- † Do not murder
- † Do not worship idols
- † Do not blaspheme
- † Do not steal.
- † Do not commit adultery
- † Do not eat the limbs of a live animal.

"For all the Gods of the nations are idols; but the Lord made the Heavens." ~Psalm 96.

BC 3400- Seth's great-great-great grandchild, Enoch, son of Jared is born. Enoch lives 365 years and fathers many sons and daughters. The Arabian name of Enoch is Edris, and their traditions of him are that he is an eminent astronomer, mathematician and a great prophet of God.

Seth's great-great-great-great grandchild, Methuselah, son of Enoch is born, and Methuselah lives 969 years, making him the oldest of the ancient ones, and also the oldest man to ever live. Methuselah's name means, "At his death, it will come."

The "Years" mentioned in connection with the patriarchs probably signify "Months," instead of actual years. And so, if one is to arrive at the patriarchs' true ages, he must divide those year-numbers by twelve. Thus, Methuselah, it is alleged, was not 969, as Moses stated; rather he was only about 80 years old, plus the time he lived before he became a father, at the time of his death. ~John N. Clayton, The Question of Methuselah, Does God Exist? pg. 12, Liberalism's Manipulation of Scripture By Wayne Jackson, cf. Genesis 16:16.

After Methuselah's birth, the Bible records that Enoch develops a close relationship with God leading to his transformation to Heaven at the age of 365. Methuselah dies the year of the flood. Methuselah fathers many sons and daughters. "And Enoch walked with God 365 years and begat sons and daughters." ~Genesis 5:22. "And he was not for God took him." ~Genesis 5:24.

BC 3300- The marriages of brothers and sisters is quite common [Biblically] until prohibited by the Law of Moses in 1491 B.C.E. "It is said of Seth, and his posterity, that they were very good and virtuous, and very happy, without any considerable misfortunes for seven generations." ~Flavius Josephus, 1st century C.E.

The earliest astrologer, "Seth and his posterity were the inventors of that peculiar sort of wisdom, which is concerned with the Heavenly bodies and their order." ~Flavius Josephus, 2nd century.

Jewish astrological practice holds that astrology is to be used to rescue Moses from death following the Pharaoh's hard line decree that every newborn Hebrew male child will be cast into the River Nile. This story is addressed in the Midrash: "Why did they decree that they should cast them into the river? Because the astrologers foresaw that Israel's savior would be smitten by water, and they thought that he would be drowned in the water: but as we know it, it was only on account of the well of water that the decree of death was pronounced upon him..." ~see Numbers 20:1-13, Exodus Rabbah 1:18.

Old ideas are often rewritten for the aspiring new beliefs, "The rigid line between fact and fiction in religious literature, which readers often wish to draw, cannot be consistently justified, and in studying old Oriental religious narratives, it is necessary to realize that the teaching was regarded as more essential than the method of presenting it. 'Midrash,' which may be called useless for historical investigation, may be appreciated for the light it throws upon forms of thought. Historical criticism does not touch the reality of the ideas, and since they may be as worthy of study as the apparent facts they clothe, they thus indirectly contribute to history. In any case, while the true historical kernel of the Midrashic narrative will always be a matter of dispute, the teaching to which it is applied stands on an independent footing, as also does the application of that teaching to other ages." ~Encyclopaedia Britannica, article on Midrash.

Moses' Hebrew mother follows the child and later serves as his nursemaid, teaching Moses the Hebrew tribal traditions, while Moses attends royal schools, finish in the great astrological college at Annu. As Pharaoh's adopted son, Moses is fully initiated into all the sacred surreptitious rites, and becomes, like the Pharonic family, a professional astrologer and an astrolator-priest.

BC 3200-Intermarriage is frowned upon, "The Cainites held greater and greater influence over the godly descendants of Seth as intermarriage became more and more pervasive." ~Genesis 6:1-2. Bloodshed, debauchery, and wickedness characterize a growing proportion of human society. ~Genesis 6:1-2, 4-5, 11.

Seth's great-great-great-great-great grandchild, Lamech, son of Methuselah is born. Lamech lives 777 years and fathers many sons and daughters. Lamech is the first man [on record] who dies of a natural cause before his father. Lamech is able to talk with Adam [56 years], and learns of the Garden of Eden, etc., directly. Lamech's grandsons Japheth, Shem and Ham [98 years], thus becoming the prevailing link that possibly will bring the eyewitness history from "God's Creation" to the death of Shem after the flood, which is a period of 2158 years.

BC 3113- The Babylonian sage Berossus says, "The world will burn when all the planets that now move in different courses come together in the Crab, so that they all stand in a straight line in the same sign, and ... the future flood will take place when the same conjunction occurs in Capricorn. For the former is the constellation of the summer solstice, the latter of the winter solstice; they are the decisive signs of the zodiac, because the turning points of the year lie in them." ~Zimmer, Heinrich. Myths and Symbols in Indian Art and Civilization. Pg. 15.

BC 3102-February 17th is believed to be the beginning of our own "World Age" and will last for 1,200 "Divine Years." The Kali Yuga is the last cycle of the Indian Sacred Books and is characterized by the mixing of the castes [separation of castes still prevails in India] in a lawless declining epoch.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

BC 3100- Methuselah talks with Seth 355 years, Enos 453 years; Cainan 548 years; Mahalaleel 603 years; Jared 735 years, and with Enoch 300 years. The Book of Enoch is translated in 3017 B.C.E., at the age of 365.

BC 3000- Chaldeans develop Astrology, a belief that astronomical spheres control the destinies of mankind [freewill vs. destiny.] It is a fact that more crimes are committed during the full moon than at any other time of the month. Is there some truth to it? Some believe the stars do not lie, only the Astrologers. This system survives and spreads, eventually being adopted by the Greeks in BC 500. ~The Church, through the centuries with new dogmas, has removed most references to Astrology and reincarnation, in the Bible. However, we still have mention of Astrology in: Matthew 2:2, 2:7, Ezekiel 4:6, Daniel 2:27, and Exodus 40:38. Remember, it was the Persian Magi [Astronomers] who read the signs in the sky as denoting the savior is born.

Orpheus, the earliest Greek poet, relates how Bacchus also had a rod with which he drew water from a rock, and performed miracles, and this rod he could change into a serpent at pleasure; and that he passed through the Red Sea dry shod at the head of his army.

Christians are taught not to question their Bible, but from the statistics given in the Sacred Book the naughty Zulu savages proved absolutely to Bishop Colenso that the numbers of fugitives in Exodus were such that even conjecturing them to have marched; men, women and children, five abreast and in close order, that they would have formed a column 100 miles long, and this does not include their belongings, sheep, or cattle! Meaning this feat was impossible. The Israelites could not have passed through the Red Sea in a night or a week of nights as portrayed in the Bible. ~Colenso, Pentateuch Examined, and Exodus.

BC 3000 (?) - Hindu Astrology is developing in predicting actual events in a person's life and the circumstances involved. Indian palmistry is found in Vasishtha Rule 21 whereby it is explained that palmistry is forbidden [To practice Palmistry, Astrology, and Omens as a living for any financial gain]. It is the Essenes who are believed to have introduced the Gospel of Krishna, the Hindu Savior, to the Holy Land via ancient translations from the Sanskrit to Aramaic. In 325 C.E., these translations are incorporated into the new Christian faith.

The "Godhead" is represented in Hindu religious observance as "Atman," [Immortality of the individual soul], who is said to be the only thing that truly exists, an immortal substance that transmigrates from body to body. Brahma, the creator, appears in the lotus of Vishnu's dream. The cosmic dream dissolves after 100 Brahma years. 360 days and nights of Brahma equal 3,110,400,000,000 human years. One divine year equals 4,320,000 human years.

In Numerology the three aforementioned figures individually add up to nine, which is considered a magical number in many cultures. In India, under the name of Vishnu, the 'Preserver' or 'Savior' of men, though a god, is worshipped as the great "Victim-Man," who before the worlds were, because there was nothing else to offer, offered himself as a sacrifice.

The Brahmins, to exalt themselves as a priestly, half-divine caste, to whom all others ought to bow down, for many ages will teach that, while the other, lower castes came from the arms, and body and feet of Brahma, the visible representative and manifestation of the Invisible Brahm, and identified with him, they alone came from the mouth of the creative God. Brahma is referred to as the 'One Supreme God,' as cannot be accounted for, except on the supposition that Brahma had the very same meaning as the Hebrew Rahm.

Thus, we find the God Krishna, 'Christ,' in one of the Hindu sacred books, when asserting his high dignity as a Divinity and his identity with the Supreme, using the following words: "The great Brahm is my womb, and in it I place my fetus, and from it is the procreation of all nature. The great Brahm is the womb of all the various forms, which are conceived in every natural womb." ~The Ultimate Deception - The Two Babylons or The Papal Worship Proved To Be The Worship of Nimrod and His Wife, By The Late Rev. Alexander Hislop.

Are there any similarities between the Krishna and Christ?

- † Both were of virgin birth, Krishna from the virgin Devaki, and Jesus from Mary.
- † Both were sent from Heaven to earth in the form of a man.
- † Both were called Savior, and the second person of the Divine Trinity.
- † Both allegedly had adoptive human father who were carpenters.
- † Both had a Spirit or Ghost who was their actual father.
- † Both Krishna and Jesus were of Royal Descent.
- † Both were visited at birth by wise men and shepherds, guided by a star in the Heavens.

- † Both stories involved Angels issuing warnings that the local oligarch planned to kill the baby and had issued a decree for assassination. The parents fled. Mary and Joseph stayed in Muturea while Krishna's parents stayed in Mathura.
- † Both Yeshua and Krishna withdrew to the wilderness as adults, and fasted.
- † Both were identified as "The seed of the woman bruising the serpent's head."
- † Jesus was called, "The lion of the tribe of Judah," while Krishna is called "The lion of the tribe of Saki."
- † Both claimed, "I am the Resurrection."
- † Both refer to themselves as having existed before their birth on earth.
- † Both were "Without sin."
- † Both were God-men: being considered both human and being Divine.
- † Both are considered omniscient, omnipotent, and omnipresent.
- † Both performed many miracles, including the healing of diseases. One of the first miracles that both performed was to make a leper whole. Each cured "All manner of diseases."
- † Both cast out indwelling demons, and raised the dead.
- † Both selected Disciples to spread their teachings.
- † Both were meek, and merciful, and both were criticized for associating with sinners.
- † Both encountered a Gentile [non-Jewish] woman at a well.
- † Both celebrated a Last Supper.
- † Both forgave their enemies.
- † Both descended into Hell [Hades, the Underworld], and were Resurrected, and many people witnessed their ascensions into Heaven. ~Yeshua and Krishna Were Called Both A God And The Son of God, <http://nz.answers.yahoo.com/question/index?qid=20120625204949AA7fk9a>

Some will deny everything; the existence of any and all man-Gods, *"It has been contended that neither a God, nor man, called Jesus Christ existed in Jerusalem.. Or men called Christ once existed in Jerusalem, any more than we should deny that a man named Brama, Vishnou, or Chrishnou, once did certain things in India; or that a man called Hercules once played a conspicuous part in Phenecia and Egypt; but it is denied that a man or God, called Christ, was 'Born of a Virgin,' performed certain miracles, was crucified by the Jews, and after remaining three days, or nearly so, in the tomb, ascended into Heaven, it is denied that a man called Jesus Christ performed those wonders, and delivered those instructions which have been ascribed to him. All Christians will agree that the story told by ignorant and abused Indian enthusiasts about the god Brahma coming down upon the earth in the form of a man, and eating of flesh like a Cannibal, is absurd and unworthy of credit. What Christian would believe that Chrishnou, or Chrishna, or Vishnou, suffered all the metamorphoses, which credulous Indians believed they did? Who, on a degree above or below lunacy, would credit the idle tales [for idle and most mischievous they are when taken in relation of facts] about Hercules and his club, Balaam and his ass, Sampson with and without his hair, Jupiter and Juno, Ceres and Bacchus, Prosperine and Pluto, and a hundred other gods and goddesses, whose histories have been deemed veritable, sacred, and most Holy, to disbelieve which, was deemed execrable, and a crime worthy of death. The poet says, 'Would that God the gift would give us to see ourselves as others see us. If Christians could see themselves as others see them, they would be far more humble, far less self-sufficient and arrogant than they now are, think less highly of themselves, and far better of others, have less of love for themselves, and more for their fellow-beings, or rather, their self-love would be far more social in its consequences.'" ~See: A History of Freethought in the Nineteenth Century, J.M. Robertson, vol. 1, 76.*

BC 3000-2000-Ishtar is principal goddess of the Babylonians and Assyrians. Ishtar is the fertility goddess identified with the Morning Star; later Venus receives this honor. Ishtar has two faces, one warlike and the other gentle. Apsu is identified with the waters of the rivers, Mummu is the Womb of Chaos, Tiamat is God of the Sea, Anu is God of the Heavens [sky].

In King Hammurabi's kingship, Anu is known as the "King of Gods," the "Sky God," or "Sky Father," and his insignia is the shepherd's staff, while Ea is 'God of the Earth' and Marduk the 'Sun God' born of Ea and the personification of perfection of all the Gods.

Truth seekers find it exceedingly interesting that thousands of years before the Hebrews wrote their 'Genesis' we have in the Assyrian Books, the 'Babylonian Epic of Creation,' beginning very much like

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

Genesis, "When the Heavens above were not yet named, or the earth beneath had recorded a name, in the beginning the deep was their generator, the Chaos of the Sea was the mother of them all." ~Is It God's Word? By Joseph Wheless.

"Uruk [the Biblical Erech] was ruled by the Sky God, An, and the love goddess Ninsi-anna [the Lady of the Defenses of Heaven] in Semitic Sumeria or Inanna [Queen of Heaven] to non-Semites." ~Anthony Aveni, Conversing with the Planets, p. 51.

The most perfect of the Chaldean monuments is a large four sided monolithic pillar, unearthed from the debris of the ages, is a beautiful black diorite stele of Hammurabi, the King of Abram's own native country about 2350 B.C.E., or some three or four hundred years before the advent of that Pagan patriarch.

In the preamble of King Hammurabi's Code, in which he styles himself as the 'King of Righteousness,' the self-same title as that of Abram's Bible friend, Melchizedek, the heathen Jebusite King of Salem, it is written, "Priest of El-Elyon, God Most High." ~Genesis 14:18.

"We can only serve our country by telling the naked truth, however bitter it may be." ~Jose Rizal, murdered by the Catholic Church for espousing equality.

The Hammurabic Code concludes with a series of 'Blessings' for those who will obey his laws [similar to the Beatitudes in Scripture], and a long series of 'Curses' against those who will give not heed to the laws or interferes with the words of his code, similar to the format used by the Hebrews, followed by the Apostles, thousands of years later, in their coercing the ignorant masses to believe the myths of the new God-man. Ancient tribes accepted the idea that if it was written, then it must be true. ~cf. Biblical curses in Luke 6:24-26.

A carving at the head of the stone is said to represent Hammurabi standing before the god 'Shamash' with a scepter in his hand, and some [The error got into Well's book, Outline of History] erroneously state that it is the King receiving the Code of Law from the God. However, Hammurabi expressly says that he compiled the code himself, thus excluding any religious influence.

The entire code, which is more than a thousand years older than the first Hebrew prophet, is more strictly and comprehensively based upon principles of justice than any other known code until modern times. From certain archaic features, we have the inclusion of the 'Lex talionis,' 'An eye for an eye,' and the death penalty for adultery.

Professionals conclude that the laws are much older than 2000 B.C.E. and go back to the Sumerians; and it is an ironic comment on the Hebrew 'Genius for morality' that in borrowing from the Babylonian for the so-called 'Mosaic Code,' 1,300 years later, the Jews omit the most salient features, that of justice to woman, minimum wages for the workers, etc., yet retain such principles as the 'lex talionis,' or salient threats of fear.

In the Hammurabi Code priests have no distinct privileges and are mentioned only as ordinary citizens; and it is noteworthy that, while the Code envisages every aspect of life and work, there is no reference in any clause to the compulsory prostitution in the temples before marriage, which religious writers often quote, in spite of the warning of experts, from Herodotus. Temple prostitution is mentioned in the Bible. ~1 Corinthians 6:12-20.

Sex crimes are the most heavily punished, while adultery, which civil laws very rarely treat as a crime, the penalty is death, unless the King should forgive the man, and the husband forgives his wife, which suggests that it is an old law that was not strictly enforced. The penalty for incest and rape is death; and a priestess who incurs suspicion of looseness can be condemned to death. There was no penalty for incest when Cain and his brother Able married their sisters Calmana and Delbora.

Justice to women, who in Babylon, as in Egypt, was the equal of man, is a conspicuous feature of the Code. If a man divorces his wife, or even a concubine, he must return her dowry, and a wife may on liberal grounds divorce her husband, and she may retain her dowry, and a man cannot divorce his wife to marry a concubine.

Having coitus with another man's concubine was seen as a deliberate challenge to that man's power and authority, thus David's son Absalom, as an act of political rebellion, had sex with ten of his father's concubines "In the sight of all Israel." ~2 Samuel 16:22.

There are sixty clauses regulating marriage, divorce, and property on a basis of justice. Modern law is archaic, until a century ago, compared to these codes instituted a millennium before Christ, while the notion that Hebrew prophets began to teach the world justice twelve or thirteen centuries after the time of Hammurabi is one which any minister or priest ought now to be ashamed to repeat. ~C. Edwards Hammurabi Code, 1904. Cf. much later Mosaic Code see S.A. Cook's Laws of Moses and the Code of Hammurabi, 1903.

Marduk and the representation of the Sun God will play an important part in later history. The Babylonian god, Marduk is the first-born son of Ea, whose wife is Sarpanitum, the primary Babylonian god. Endiku challenges Gilgamesh, a Babylonian King to a wrestling match [deification has now been accomplished in history and from now on all kings will claim descendency from the Gods].

Of course, Gilgamesh vanquishes his foe and the legend continues. Gilgamesh hears of a Great Flood, from Utnapishtim, which will destroy mankind. Utnapishtim builds a ship and brings "... The seed of life of every kind into the ship."

On the 7th day Utnapishtim sends out a dove, the bird returns, it can find no land to rest. Then a swallow is sent out, and finally, a raven that does not return [the striking similarities between Utnapishtim and Noah can only lead one to believe that there is a relationship, somewhere far back in history].

Uta-Napishtim [Utnapishtim], a wise man, reveals to the king a plant that bestows eternal life [Tree of Life?] Gilgamesh dives into the to retrieve the plant but loses it to a Serpent of the deep [again, the similarities between this story and Biblical stories shows the inter-relationships amongst cultures].

The stories of Gilgamesh and Marduk change only slightly with the passage of time and due to encounters with new ethnicities the ancient beliefs are assimilated into the various Sumerians [Zui], Babylonians [Marduk], Assyrian, Hittite, Phoenicians, Greeks cultures. The Gods, being extremely jealous of their powers and retention from mankind withheld from man any hope of ever achieving immortality.

When human beings die, they crossed a river to the "Kingdom of the Dead," where they live in absolute darkness and dust, forever hungry and thirsty, unless there remained in the "Other World," a living person, who remembers them and offers them food and drink. The White Temple [most likely due to its limestone outer covering] is constructed and dedicated to Anu, God of the Sky, and Supreme Master. The Persian Magi teach the concepts of good and evil under the names of Ormuzd and Ahriman.

Many early religious beliefs constituted the worshiping of the dead, of which the early Church Fathers [4th century], will denounce, "Oh! Into what wretched plight the understanding of men has fallen! For if it is reckoned the greatest folly to fear the dead, what shall we judge of those who fear something that is worse than the dead are? For those images are not even to be reckoned among the number of the dead, because they were never alive. Even the sepulchers of the dead are preferable to them, since, although they are now dead, yet they once had life; but those whom you worship never possessed even such base life as is in all, the life of frogs and owls. But why say more about them, since it is enough to say to him who adores them: Do you not see that he whom you adore sees not, hear that he whom you adore hears not, and understand that he understands not? For he is the work of man's hand, and necessarily is void of understanding. You therefore worship a god without sense, whereas every one who has sense believes that not even those things are to be worshiped which have been made by God and have sense, such as the sun, moon, and stars, and all things that are in Heaven and upon earth. For they think it reasonable, that not those things which have been made for the service of the world, but the Creator of those things themselves, and of the whole world, should be worshiped. For even these things rejoice when He is adored and worshiped, and do not take it well that the honor of the Creator should be bestowed on the creature. For the worship of God alone is acceptable to them, who alone is uncreated, and all things also are His creatures. For as it belongs to him who alone is uncreated to be God, so everything that has been created is not truly God." ~The Recognitions of Clement, About the Recognitions and Homilies 5.16, God Alone a Fit Object of Worship.

"But when we clearly scan the somewhat vague and mysterious references of Clement, his 'Tradition' seems to be ultimately nothing more than the application to Scripture of that allegorical method, which he received from Pantaeenus, as Pantaeenus had probably learned it from the writings of Philo, and as Philo and his teachers had borrowed it from the Stoic method of interpreting Homer." ~Canon Farrar, Lives of the Fathers, p. 384.

The world as a constant struggle of good and bad, black and white, etc., which is carried over into other religious groups and sects. "The Persians believed in a Day of Judgment, when God [their one great God, Ahura Mazda] would destroy the earth, summon before him the souls of all men who had ever lived, reward the good and punish the living."

"It is clearly from Persia that certain sects of the Jews, and Christ and the early Christians, borrowed this idea of [in the Persian language] the coming of the 'Kingdom of Heaven'... The Roman Catholics, and in a less explicit way other Christians, believe in two judgments of the dead: the Particular Judgment, of each soul after death, and the General Judgment, of all men at the close of the human comedy. Roman Catholics, I find, are astounded and embarrassed to learn that this particular judgment of each soul after death was the most outstanding and most influential belief of the ancient Egyptians from the very dawn of history, and probably long before it." ~From Joseph McCabe, Rationalist Encyclopedia.

The soul of the Egyptian: "...The Egyptians were peculiar once more in their conception of the nature of man. He had a body and a soul, and he had a third something, which they called the 'Ka.' In fact, as time went on the 'immaterial' part of man was broken up into a number of principles, which puzzle the most learned Egyptologists. There was the 'Khu,' the soul proper, the intelligence. Then there was the 'Ka,' or double, the seat of sense and perception, so closely allied to the body that it was almost regarded as an ethereal counterpart of it, even as a sort of guardian angel. There was also the 'Ba,' vaguely conceived as a disembodied soul, winged like a bird and flitting about the tombs and cemeteries at night. Moreover, there were other fanciful abstractions, an essence of the heart, of the navel, and so on, and the confusion of all these in what remains of Egyptian thought gives a big task to the expert." ~From J. McCabe, Rationalist Encyclopedia.

According to the Assyrian "Seven Tablets of Creation" In the beginning, there existed a primeval abyss. Mûmmu-Tiamat and Apzû-Rishtû, deities of the watery accumulation, which contain the boundless life forms of every kind of living matter, combine the non-existing appearance that bears no name and no destiny and creation begins.

The text is written in cuneiform and most probably copied from another more ancient papyrus or scroll. Tammuz [Thammuz] or, in ancient Sumero-Babylonian, Dumuzi, is a fertility God, an agricultural God associated with crops and the harvest, and is no doubt associated with a death-and-resurrection ritual, which was related to the annual cycle of vegetation. ~Ezekiel 8:14.

"Trust, ye Saints, your Lord restored, trust ye in your risen Lord; for the pains, which Tammuz endured our Salvation have procured." ~Ctesias, 400 B.C.E., quoted in Graves, The World's 16 Crucified Saviours, Biblical reference to Tammuz, Ezekiel 8:14.

The women referred to by Ezekiel are celebrating the annual death of their god Tammuz by weeping for him. Now the Christians weep annually over the death of Jesus Christ, and rejoice each year on the Easter of his resurrection. Tammuz is a 'Sun God' who, in his daily cycle, rises from his cave in the morning, travels across the sky by day, before returning to his cave at night. Tammuz is then said to have descended into the "Land of No Return" before his resurrection the following day.

The death and Resurrection of Pagan Gods is alluded to in the Bible, specifically in Ezekiel. Yahweh had brought him in his vision to the north door of the Temple at Jerusalem; "And, behold, there sat women weeping for Tammuz." ~Ezekiel 8:14.

One month of the ancient Hebrew calendar is actually named Tammuz and, "It was unmistakably allied with the worship of Adonis and Attis, and even of Dionysus. Much might have been hoped for these religions with their yearly festival of the dying and rising Gods [Sun Gods]." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, Vol. XI, p. 388. Dionysus/Bacchus, "Slept three nights with Proserpine [Persephone]," evidently referring to God's journey into the Underworld [Hell(?)] to visit his mother, and like Jesus, this God also claims to have "Ascended to Heaven," such as related [plagiarized(?)] by another Church Father. ~see Justin Martyr, First Apology, 21; Roberts I, 170. Classical Journal, 92.

Dionysus is sometimes depicted as an adult, rising out of the Underworld after death, with a horse-driven chariot, which is typical of a Sun God.

All Sun Gods and saviors are born in caves, as was Jesus. Christians are undaunted by facts, sticking persistently with that which they have been told, most often, since childhood. The number of Pagan deities [most of which are also virgin-born and killed in some manner or another in their efforts to save mankind] is so great as to be extremely complicated to keep account of. The God Krishna in India, the God Indra in Nepal and Thibet, also spilled their blood for the Eternal Salvation of men; Buddha said, "Let all the sins that were in the world fall on me, that the world may be delivered," and the Chinese Tien, the Holy One, "One with God and existing with him from all eternity," he also died to save this world, as well as the Egyptian Osiris, who was called Savior, so was Horus; so was the Persian Sun God, Mithras; so was the Greek God, Hercules who overcame Death even though his body was consumed in the burning garment of mortality, out of which he eventually rose into Heaven, and so was the Phrygian Attis called Savior, and the Syrian Tammuz, and Adonis similarly, both of whom, as history has noted, were nailed or tied to a tree, and after ward they also rose again from their biers, or coffins. ~Max Muller. Cf. Ezekiel 8:14. Prometheus, the greatest and earliest benefactor of the human race, was nailed by the hands and feet, and with arms extended, to the rocks of Mount Caucasus. Bacchus or Dionysus, born of the Virgin, Semele, to be the Liberator of mankind [Dionysus Eleutherios as he was called], was literally torn to pieces, similar to the Egyptian God, Osiris.

"This was the darkest abode from which the wandering Sun starts in the morning. As the dawn springs fully armed from the forehead of the cloven sky, so the eye first discerns the blue of Heaven, as the first faint arch of light is seen in the east. This arch is the cave in which the infant is nourished until he reaches his full strength, in other words, until the day is fully come... At length the child is born, and a Halo of serene light encircles his cradle, just as the sun appears at early dawn in all his splendor."

~Doane, Bible Myths.

Significantly, as dawn approached the next day, a halo appeared, encircling the rising sun. The halo worn by the infant Jesus is said to be connected with the Tammuz myth. In addition, the Christian practice of praying with eyes closed is a reminder that Jesus originally descends from a Sun God tradition "Son of God," or "Sun of God." Why else would the ancients pray with their eyes closed unless it was to shield their eyes from the sun moving across the sky?

Like Jesus, the Biblical Tammuz, in his seasonal cycle, was born to a virgin, called Mylitta, on December 25th the height of the winter solstice. Tammuz allegedly performed miracles, healed the sick and suffered a painful death in order to become mankind's savior. On the third day, some accounts claimed, Tammuz is resurrected, like Jesus, into a new life of eternal blessedness. This Resurrection is celebrated in an annual lamentation that involved washing with water and anointing with oil.

"When those who lament, men and women, come up with him to me," said one Akkadian text, "May the dead arise and smell the incense."

The annual lamentation of Tammuz is described by the ancient Hebrews in the Old Testament: "Then he brought me to the door of the gate of the Lord's house which was toward the north; and, behold, there sat women weeping for Tammuz." ~Ezekiel 8:14.

With the return of Tammuz, the lands of the Akkadians became fertile [resurrection or rebirth] again and the seasonal and daily cycles continue. The Great Flood is related as Tamzi [Tammuz] looked out of his ship and saw that, "Mankind was turned to clay; like reeds the corpses floated." Tammuz relates how he was commissioned by the Gods to save himself and his family.

"I alone was the servant of the great gods. Their father, Anu, their king; their counselor, the warrior Bel; their throne-bearer, the god Uras; their prince, En-nugi; and Hea, the Lord of the Underworld, repeated their decree. In this destiny hearing, He said to me: Destroy thy house and build a ship, for I will destroy the seed of life." ~Tammuz.

Instructions are then given as to the size of the ship, which eventually landed on Mount Nizor, Mount Rowandiz, and the Akkadian equivalent of Olympus.

To the Christians, Tammuz became the disciple Thomas while to the ancients he became Adoni [Phoenician], Adonai, Syrio-Hebrew, and Adonis, Greek, ... Adonis, whose name Adon in Hebrew means "Lord" or "Master," was born to a virgin on December 25th. It is alleged that Adonis, also known as the "Anointed One," "Suffered for mankind," before his death and resurrection at the time of the Spring Equinox, now known as Easter. According to M.D. Aletheia, the festival of the "Resurrection of Adonis" was observed in Alexandria, the cradle of Christianity, in the time of Pope Zosimus, AD 417-18.

The festival also was observed at Antioch, the ancient capital of Syria, where the followers of Jesus were first called Christians in the time of Pope Liberius I, 352-66 C.E. "The celebration in honor of the Resurrection of Adonis came at last to be known as a Christian festival," says Aletheia.

The Phoenicians venerated the Sun God as a deity also, for in the inscriptions of Assur-bani-pal, an Assyrian King, we read that the name of the then crown-prince of Tyrenus Yahu-melek, "Yahuh is my King."

On a coin from Gaza of the 4th century B.C.E., now in the British Museum, is a figure of a deity in a chariot of fire, over whose head is written "Yho," in old Phoenician characters. "Yahuh" held only a subordinate position in the mythology of the Semites, and he only owes his notoriety to the fact that he was chosen as the patron deity of the Beni-Israel.

"The ceremonies held in Catholic countries on Good Friday and Easter Sunday are nothing more than the festival of the death and resurrection of Adonis..." ~from the works of D. Christie Sinton Amoune.

The word "Ashera" or "Asherah" is admitted to in the preface to the Revised Bible to be "Uniformly and wrongly rendered as grove" in the Christian Authorized Versions of the Bible. But, why such mystical and misleading nuances? Perhaps it is to conceal the coarse character of the item signified as "Ashera," which is an upright stone, and unquestionably a Phallic, sexual, symbol. ~M.D. Aletheia, The Rationalist's Manual, Bank of Wisdom, Box 926, Louisville, KY 40201.

The Eastern Semites of Accadia, Babylonia, Assyria, etc., the originators of the Chaldean religion, were astrologers and astronomers, and diagramed the ancient skies and zodiac.

The Chaldean Mysteries can be traced up to the days of Semiramis, who lived only a few centuries after the flood, and which is known to have been impressed upon the masses to instill the sacred image of their own depraved and polluted mind. The primary object of the priesthood was to introduce privately, by little and little, under the seal of secrecy and the sanction of an oath, what it would not have been safe all at once and openly to propound.

To drink of "Mysterious beverages," says Salverte, was indispensable on the part of all who sought initiation in these Mysteries. These "Mysterious beverages" were composed of "Wine, honey, water, and flour."

From the ingredients avowedly used, and from the nature of others not avowed, but certainly used, there can be no doubt that they were of an intoxicating nature; and till the aspirants had come under their power, till their understandings had been dimmed, and their passions excited by the medicated draught, they were not duly prepared for what they were either to hear or to see.

If it be inquired what was the object and design of these ancient "Mysteries," it will be found that there was a wonderful analogy between them and that "Mystery of Iniquity," which was later embodied in the Church of Rome.

The 'Queen of Babylon' was herself a paragon of unbridled lust and licentiousness, but in the 'Mysteries,' which she had a chief hand in forming, she was worshiped as 'Rhea,' the great "Mother" of the gods, with such atrocious rites as she was identified with Venus, the Mother of all Impurity, and raised the very city where she had reigned to a bad eminence among the nations, as the grand seat of idolatry, and consecrated prostitution. The genus of lust is covered, Biblically, where we read, "And have not done penance for the uncleanness, and fornication, and lasciviousness ..." and where a gloss also states, "Lasciviousness, i.e., unnatural lust." ~2 Corinthians 12:21. See also Saint Thomas Aquinas' Aquinas On Sex.

"As regards the individual nature, woman is defective and misbegotten, for the active power of the male seed tends to the production of a perfect likeness in the masculine sex; while the production of a woman comes from defect in the active power..." ~Quoting Saint Thomas Aquinas from his book, Summa Theologica.

Thus seated was this Chaldean queen a fit and remarkable prototype of the "Woman" in the Apocalypse, with the 'Golden Cup,' in her hand, and the name on her forehead, "Mystery, Babylon the Great, the Mother of harlots and abominations of the earth." ~See Revelation 17:5.

The 'Mystery of Iniquity' as embodied in the Papacy boasts of being the "Old Religion," and truly they are, for it appears that it is ancient indeed, tracing its lineage far beyond the era of Christianity, back over 4000 years, beyond the Hebrews, to near the period of the Flood and the building of the Tower of Babel, stealing from the Babylonians, and then claiming history as its own, which of course it is, of its own making.

The Apocalyptic emblem of the Harlot woman with the cup in her hand was even embodied in the symbols of idolatry derived from ancient Babylon, as they were exhibited in Greece; for thus was the Greek Venus originally represented, and it is singular that in our own day, and so far as appears for the first time, and the Roman Church actually took this very symbol as their own chosen emblem [The Chalice].

According to ancient Greek mythology, every seventh year the people of Athens are compelled to sacrifice seven virgins to a creature known as the Minotaur, a "Frightful monster, half man, half bull, the foul product of unnatural lust." ~White Slavery As Metaphor: Anatomy of a Moral Panic by Mary Ann Irwin.

According to Saint Augustine, "Of all these," namely the sins belonging to lust, "That, which is against nature is the worst." ~De adult. conjug., Cap. Adulteriū xxxii, cf. De Bono Conjugali, viii.

In the 19th century, a similar claim will lead to the Contagious Diseases Acts of 1864, 1866, and 1869 of London as the local newspaper, the Gazette draws back the curtain on wealthy Victorian men, to whom the white slave trade caters, suggesting visually the sexual tastes of those to whom, "The shriek of torture [was] the essence of their delight." ~Ibid

Paul encourages the [Christian] slaves to obtain freedom, if possible. ~1 Corinthians 7:21.

The Gospel, the Spirit of God bares the clear and distinct testimony of Paul, which is derived from the Babylonians, "The mystery of iniquity doth already work." ~2 Thessalonians 2:7.

This system of iniquity, which had been convincingly instilled in the Pagans divinely foretells what was to issue in a pompous apostasy, that in due time would be appallingly revealed to man, and would continue until it should be destroyed "By the breath of the Lord's mouth, and consumed by the brightness of His coming." ~2 Thessalonians 2:8.

"Protestantism was the triumph of Paul over Peter. Fundamentalism is the triumph of Paul over Christ." ~Will Durant

In its first introduction into the Church, the secret rituals came in furtively, subliminally, and by stealth, with "All deceivableness of unrighteousness." Wrought "Mysteriously," under reasonable, but false pretences, leading men away from the simplicity of the truth as it does in the alleged words of the man called Jesus, and the distortion of his ostensible adages.

And, it does so secretly, if not covertly maliciously, for the betterment of the priesthood, for the very same reason that idolatry was secretly introduced in the ancient 'Mysteries of Babylon,' it is not safe, it is not prudent to do otherwise, for the superstitious masses needed their idols, and the Church will be all too willing to let them keep their icons if only to facilitate conversion.

"Satan's Masterpiece," if there be one, is the Roman Church, the perfection of a religious institution created to deceive and perpetuate the priesthood, of policies for deluding and ensnaring the world, of claiming the minds of innocent children whom it condemns upon conception, of the thief who disguises itself as the meek and mild lamb, of the corrupter of nations and of people, of the Church that has claimed more lives than all the wars known to man.

For this very institution knows no bounds in the dissemination of its despicable and corrupt ways, leading men astray and compelling one to believe that it is for the good of God and his only begotten son, the Christ. To the Jews, everything written in the New Testament must comply with the Old Testament, and not the other way around. The New Testament cannot stand on its own without the Old Testament, because it claims to be the fulfillment of the Old Testament. "Think not that I have come to destroy the Law or the prophets, I am not come to destroy, but to fulfill." ~Matthew 5:17.

According to the Biblical scholar, Bart Ehrman, at least 11 of the 27 New Testament books are forgeries, while only seven of the 13 epistles attributed to Paul were probably written by him. Justin gives three-hundred and fourteen quotations from the Old Testament, and in one-hundred ninety-seven of these, which is, in 2/3rd of the cases, he names the Book from which he is quoting, yet, in making his so-called New Testament quotations, he never once mentions any of the names of any one of the Four Gospels. ~With thanks to Bet Emet. Note: Canon of the New Testament was not recognized until 380 C.E. Marcion's New Testament was already written [140 C.E.]

Hard to believe, but, "Nearly half of the New Testament is a forgery, according to a provocative new book that charges the Apostle Paul authored only a fraction of the letters attributed to him and the Apostle Peter wrote nothing." ~*Forgeries in the Bible's New Testament? is this Scripture fulfilled in your ears.” ~Luke 4:16-21.

But, the Hebrew One God is a yet another patent Forgery and Myth; a mycological Father-god can have no “Only begotten Son,” and Jesus Christ is a myth even before he is mythically born in the elaborate fairy story of the Church Fathers. With respect to the mythical Hebrew-Christian God or Gods, we may securely say, as says Father Justin Martyr apropos of the other mythic Pagan Gods. “And we confess that we are atheists, so far as Gods of this sort are concerned.” ~Justin Martyr, First Apology, ch. vi; Ante-Nicene Fathers, vol. i, 169.

As possessing supreme authority, also, over the faith, the Church will reveal little or much, as they judge most expedient; and hoard the great truths of religion, which were as essential a principle in the system of Babylon, as it will be in Romanism or Tractarianism.

It is this priestly claim to dominion over the faith and reasoning of men, that will “Imprison the truth in unrighteousness” in the ancient world, so that “Darkness will cover the earth, and gross darkness over the people.”

It is the very same claim, in the hands of the Roman priests, that ushers in the Dark Ages, when, through many a dreary century, the Gospel is unknown, and the Bible will become a sealed and forbidden book to the masses who will faithfully offer their lives in the name of Christ, for that, which they know not. In every respect, then, we see how justly Rome will bear on its forehead, “Mystery, Babylon the Great.”

Why were exactly ‘Four Gospels,’ out of the many brought for consideration from all parts of the known world, included in the New Testament, while II Thessalonians, the Pastoral Epistles and I & II Peter, which are accurately called forgeries for they advocated views, which were never held by the persons the writings were attributed to?

The New Testament Gospels were written in Koine Greek, and they are pseudepigraphic, which means they were written under the names of legendary characters, and others who remain anonymous. Unlike Paul, Peter was a simple fisherman raised in rural Palestine, and illiterate. So was the Apostle John, who could have not written the Gospel bearing his name. ~Acts 4:13.

Why only four Gospels? “There are four principle winds, four pillars that hold up the sky, and four corners of the universe; therefore, it is only right that there be four Gospels.” ~Saint Irenaeus.

We have extensive evidence that Egypt and Greece also derived their religious beliefs from Babylon, and we have equal collaborating evidence that the religious system of the Phoenicians also came from the same source. The distinguishing feature of the Phoenician idolatry practice was imported from Assyria, which included Babylonia. “The worship of the Architic Venus, formerly flourished as much among the Assyrians as it does now among the Phenicians.” ~Macrobius.

In 1825, on the occasion of the Jubilee, Pope Leo XII had a medallion struck bearing on the one side his won image, and on the other, that of the Church of Rome symbolized as a “Woman,” holding in her left hand a cross, and in her right a ‘Cup,’ with the legend around her, “Sedet Super Universum,” meaning, “The whole world is her seat.” ~The Ultimate Deception-The Two Babylons or The Papal Worship Proved To Be The Worship of Nimrod and His Wife, By The Late Rev. Alexander Hislop.

A library of clay tablets was created by King Sargon I., in 4,000 BC, at Nineveh, which presented stories of the Creation, Flood, and of a conflict between the Sun God and the demon Tiamat, also the descent of Ishtar into Hades, etc.

Their Gods were Bel, the Sun, son of Ea; Bilit, or Mylitta, Bel's wife, to whom every Babylonian woman had to offer her virginity; Sin, the moon; Ishtar, evening star, for Ishtar's sake men made themselves eunuchs, and women yielded to prostitution; Dagon, the fish-God, is of Chaldean origin.

“Prostitution is only a specific expression of the general prostitution of the laborer,” and hence casts the capitalist as white slaver. ~Karl Marx.

The Western Semites of Canaan, Syria, Phoenicia, Phrygia, and Asia Minor, retain many of the traditions and concepts of the Easterns. Bel was by then transformed into Baal; Ishtar into Ashtoreth and Astarte; Moloch into Ashera, and Priapus, the Phallic God. They had also the legend of the dying Sun God, and of a ‘Great Flood.’

Many of the stories of Jesus may be traced to these ancient Pagan legends. “We may... Suppose that Canaan was also influenced by Egypt in the sphere of literature, just as it was in that of sculpture. We should certainly encounter Egyptian influence in the literature of the Phoenicians, were that preserved; but in Hebrew literature also, which belongs to so much later a period, there are a number of features that strikingly remind one of the body of Egyptian writings, namely, in the wisdom, literature of the Hebrews, in the Psalms, and in the 'Song of Songs.' It might be supposed that similarities of this sort are to be traced, at least indirectly, to Egyptian prototypes. That being so, then even we ourselves must, without suspecting it, have all along been under the influence of the intellectual life of Egypt." ~From: The Literature of the Ancient Egyptians, Poems, Narratives, and Manuals of Instruction, From the Third and Second Millennia B.C., Adolf Erman [1854 - 1937], Translated into English by Aylward M. Blackman, Methuen, 1927 (apparently, 1923 German)

With this understanding of the history of cultures influencing and being influenced by others it is understandable why there are distinct similarities between the religion of the Christians and that of the Egyptians.

BC 3000-Secret organizations at this period of time are mainly from the priestly craft. Initiates are taught the mysteries of life through phases or degrees. According to the Chinese legend, on which perhaps the story of the virgin birth of Jesus is based, when but one man and one woman lived on the earth, the woman refused to sacrifice her virginity even to people of the globe. Perhaps the basis of miscegenation, high moral, social and religious principles are fast becoming extinct, and violence, debauchery and immorality now characterize almost the entirety of human society. ~Genesis 6:11.

BC 2800- Noah talks with Cainan [179 years], Mahalaleel [243 years], Jared [366 years], and with Lamech [595 years]. Cainan dies at the age of 910 [2769 B.C.E.] Mahalaleel passes away in 2714 B.C.E., at the age of 895.

BC 2750-Stonehenge is constructed by an ancient culture to mark the path of the stars. Little is known of the original people who inhabited this area of Britain as they did not put to writing their beliefs but used word of mouth and ritual to extend their realm.

BC 2700-Many believe that in deference to the Babylonian Gods that the Jews, who were enslaved by the Babylonians, when translating ancient Scripture wrote, "In the Beginning" vs. "The Father of Beginning."

What this translates to in English from the ancient Hebrew is the Scriptures beginning with the Hebrew letter "B" [second letter of the alphabet] instead of the letter, "A." [First letter in the Hebrew language] Later on in the New Testament we will have a correction that states, "I am the Alpha and the Omega" which attempts to correct the original translations. ~Revelation 1:8, 21:6, 22:13.

"Behold, the Angel of the Air shall bring him, and every eye shall see him, and the brotherhood, all the vast brotherhood of the Earth Shall raise their voice as one and sing, because of him. Amen. I am the Alpha and Omega, the Beginning and the End; what is, what was, and what is to come ... Fear not, I am the first and the last; I am the beginning and the end. Write the things that you have seen, and the things that are, and the things that will come after; The Mystery of the seven stars, which fill my hands, and the seven golden candles, blazing with eternal light. The seven stars are the Angels of the Heavenly Father, and the seven stars are the Angels of the Earthly Mother. And the spirit of man is the flame that streams between the starlight and the glowing candle; a bridge of holy light between Heaven and Earth.” ~The Essene Book of Revelations as translated by E B Szekely.

“A” being the first letter of the alphabet, “A” being the beginning, “A” representing the creation that existed prior to all else. The forged New Testament booklets and the reckless abandonment of writings of the early Christian Fathers, are the sole “Evidence” we have for the alleged facts and doctrines of most Holy Christian Faiths, as is admitted by the Roman Catholic Church.

- ✠ The Bible teaches that the earth was created first, and the sun later, on the fourth day of the first week. ~Genesis 1:1, 14-16.
- ✠ Scriptures also affirms that, “The human family came into existence the same week as the universe.” ~Genesis 1; Exodus 20:11.
- ✠ “Man has thus existed from the beginning of the Creation.” ~Isaiah 40:21; Mark 10:6; Luke 11:50; Romans 1:20.
- ✠ Therefore, humanity extends only a few thousand years before Christ, as evinced by the genealogical records of Jesus’ ancestry all the way back to Adam, the first man. ~1 Corinthians 15:45.
- ✠ There are only twenty generations between Abraham and Adam. ~Luke 3:23-38, cf. Genesis 11:12; Luke 3:35-36; with thanks to Wayne Jackson.

The wickedness of mankind continues to increase. The great ages of the people allows for an unequalled pool of united experience, varied appetites, and numerous thoughts applied to any given pursuit.

“Our documentary sources of knowledge about the origins of Christianity and its earliest development, are chiefly the New Testament Scriptures and various sub-Apostolic writings, the authenticity of which we must to a great extent take for granted here.” ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol.3, 712.

The Church declares the Gospels ‘God Inspired,’ and now states that we must take for granted [their word] that Scriptures speak the truth? One must bear one question in mind, “Does the Church lie?” “Hearsay at second-hand, and handed about among many, amounts to nothing as evidence.” ~Father Bishop Eusebius, the first Church historian.

BC 2686-2613-The Step Pyramid is constructed and designed by Imhotep, High Priest of Heliopolis, during the reign of Pharaoh Zozer as a virtual stairway to heaven, a means for man to be closer to his god, and the pharaoh is seen as the god-king, god incarnate, as seen by the inhabitants of Egypt [later on in history, the Romans leaders will also be deified].

From this deification we get the term, ‘Apotheosis,’ which is the act of raising a mortal to the rank of God. The High Priest of Heliopolis, Imhotep, is accredited with performing miracles and healing temples are erected in his honor. In 525 B.C.E., Imhotep is deified [attains the status of a god]. This is the first recorded example of the “Deification of a person” who never claimed to be a god [Apotheosis].

Abu’l Hassan Ma’sudi, a Coptic scribe, in his manuscript ‘Akbar-Ezzeman’ relates to a King of Egypt, Surid, who has two pyramids constructed, into which he has deposited the wisdom of his kingdom. These documents are to be preserved forever for all the descendents who could read the signs.

Abu’l Hassan Ma’sudi claims that the pyramids are older than previously recognized and that they were constructed prior to the Great Flood, a claim later made by Cicero, a Greek historian in 106-43 B.C.E., in his “Histories Apodexis” that the priests at Thebes handed down from father to son for 11,340 years the stories of the Great Flood occurring after the pyramids were built and of Gods living among men.

- ✠ “Those who for whole days prayed and offered sacrifice that their children might survive them, were called superstitious.”
- ✠ Cicero also drew the distinction, “Superstitio est in qua timor inanis deorum, religio quae deorum cultu pio continetur,” i.e. “Superstition is the baseless fear of the gods, religion the pious worship.” ~Cicero, ibid., II, 28, 72.
- ✠ “For who does not know history's first law to be that an author must not dare to tell anything but the truth? And its second that he must make bold to tell the whole truth? That there must be no suggestion of partiality anywhere in his writings? Nor of malice?” ~Cicero De Oratore, II:15, Loeb Classical Library.

“Cicero was well aware that the deities, which men worshiped, were false. For when he had spoken many things, which tended to the overthrow of religious ceremonies, he said nevertheless that these matters ought not; to be discussed by the vulgar, lest such discussion should extinguish the system of religion, which was publicly received... Nay, rather, if you have any virtue, Cicero, endeavor to make the people wise: that is a befitting subject, on which you may expend all the powers of your eloquence ... In the dispersion of the errors of mankind, and the recalling of the minds of men to a healthy state.”

BC 2600-2360- Jared dies at the age of 962 [2582 B.C.E.] Civilization, for all intents and purposes becomes further corrupted, and only a few godly people remain.

In the Early Dynastic Era of Egyptian civilization we have the hieroglyphic royal listings of the ages of the pharaohs as between 625 years and 1200 years. The author of “History of the Old Testament,” Claus Schedl, goes through a comprehensive if not an exhaustive history of this lineal patronage to the ancient kings tracing back through time to the ages of Adam, as 930 years [Genesis 5:5], and Noah, as 950 years [Genesis 9:29] and their former chronological links in other ancient societies.

The Christian faith borrows not only from the Hebrews, but also from the existing Pagan faiths as well.

“He formed man out of the dust of the ground, from which he was called man, because he was made from the earth. Finally Plato [whose real name is believed to have been Aristocles], says that the human form was Godlike; as does the Sibyl, who says, ‘Thou are my image, O man, possessed of right reason.’” ~Lactantius, Divine Instit II, lviii; p. 58.

The ancient Chaldean Noah declared, “In his anger also the secret counsel he poured out; To scatter abroad his face he set; He gave command to make strange their speech; Their progress he impeded.” ~Is It God's Word? by Joseph Wheless.

Ancient texts have Noah as sending out the raven, then the dove to find land. The New Version of the Bible has the dove flying about with an olive branch... A clear case of revision if one studies and uses the counting system of the old manuscripts discovered. However, the dove has a stronger symbology.

The Iranian Flood has Ahuramazda speaking of the coming blizzards and the Great Flood to Jima, the Flood being the judgment of God upon the sinful man. The Greek tradition tells of Deucalion and Pyrrha who, after the Flood, throw stones over their heads, thus creating the first humans. That the ancient kings were buried with an entourage is evidence of the deification paid them by their subjects.

Their retinue would be literally “Buried alive” with the king to share in his splendor in the “Hereafter” or next world. This sharing of a higher form of existence will later on in history be used to convert people all over the world by promises of a hereafter that will last an eternity. It will have a new name, with a new leader, and still newer components, borrowing from the ancient civilizations it will condemn as followers of heresy, myth, legends, spurious materials, illegitimate documents, and apocrypha, the word apocrypha is from the Greek, compound root, “To hide away” “Secret teachings” “Not for the uninitiated.”

The Sun religion is documented in the Egyptian Texts that tell of the god Atum creating the first Divine pair, Shu and Tefnut, by “Eexhaling and spewing out.”

Each culture has its own story or version of “The First Man and First Woman.” “But that there is a Son of the Most High God is shown not only by the unanimous utterances of the prophets, but also by the declaration of Trismegistus and the predictions of the Sibyls. The Erythrean Sibyl proclaims the Son of God as the leader and commander of all.”

And another Sibyl enjoins, “Know him as your God, who is the Son of God”; and the Sibyl calls Him ‘Counsellor.’ ~Lactantius, Divine Institutes, IV, vi; p. 105.

“Because of the vogue enjoyed by these heathen oracles and because of the influence they had in shaping the religious views of the period, the Hellenistic Jews in Alexandria, during the second century B. C. composed verses in the same form [hexameter verse] attributing them to the Sibyls, and circulated them among the Pagans as a means of diffusing Judaistic doctrines and teaching. This custom was continued down into Christian times, and was borrowed by some Christians so that in the 2nd or 3rd century, a new class of oracles emanating from Christian sources came into being. Hence the Sibylline Oracles can be classed as Pagan, Jewish, or Christian. In many cases, however, the Christians merely revised or interpolated the Jewish documents, and thus we have two classes of Christian Oracles, those adopted from Jewish sources and those entirely written by Christians... It seems clear, however, that the Christian Oracles and those revised from Jewish sources all emanated from the same circle and were intended to aid in the diffusion of Christianity." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, article by Patrick J. Healy, as transcribed by Douglas J. Potter, vol. XIII, Sibylline Oracles.

Alexandria, with its basic consent of religious tolerance, is known both as a center of Hellenism and Semitism, and is believed to be the birthplace of the Gnostic Christians. Some historians suggest that Jesus Christ may have visited Alexandria, as well as the famous Library of Alexandria, conceived by Demetrius of Phalerum and constituted during the reigns of Ptolemies I and II, 323-246 B.C.E., which was the first truly universal library in history, which was known to have hundreds of thousands of sacred manuscripts from all over the known world, attracted the most eminent philosophers, scholars, and visionaries of the entire civilized world. ~Alexandria by Dan Sewell Ward

Many famous scholars lived nearby in the royal palace, acting as "Living Books," whom the rulers of Alexandria could call upon for advice at any time [In other words, the Roman Church plagiarized from the Greeks, Pagans, and Jewish faiths. Saint Augustine, Father Justin Martyr, and Clement of Alexandria also believed that the Greek Sibyls were also 'Divinely Inspired'].

The Temple of Alexandria, the Sarapeum, housed a much smaller library containing many duplicate copies of books from the museum, and was intended to provide access to these books to the entire city of Alexandria. Unfortunately, it was destroyed by Christians in 391 C.E. as a Pagan temple, and to avoid the Christians from distinguishing the similarities to Pagan faiths.

BC 2595-2345-The Solar Temple of the Pharaoh in Egypt is constructed. The gigantic pyramids are built to impress upon the people the massive powers of god and to show god their respect and eternal reverence for Him. The play on words: son and sun, is just the beginning of other religious beliefs that will knowingly or unwittingly borrow from the Egyptian culture as well as other previous cultures.

In dispute is whether the Egyptians practiced a true polytheist religion [worshipping many Gods or one primary God with lesser Gods under him]. Amen-Ra is: King of the Gods, the god who cannot be seen [also known as Amon: the hidden], the Hidden God, the Invisible God, hidden to gods and men, the God of Invisible Creative Powers. The Egyptian god is, God of the Living as well as the Dead, Source of all Life and all Light. Neither the Christians nor the Jews are the first to conceive of an invisible God or an everlasting God, one who will outlive mankind.

The early Christian leadership also believed that there were many God, "Also, whereas at the first God said to the other Gods, 'Let us make man after our image and likeness; 'Also His saying, 'Let us drive him out; 'And again, 'Come, let us go down, and confound their language; 'All these things indicate that there are many Gods. But this also is written, 'Thou shalt not curse the Gods, nor curse the chief of thy people, 'And again this writing, 'God alone led them, and there was no strange God with them, 'Shows that there are many Gods." ~The Recognitions of Clement, 2.39. Argument for Polytheism, cf. Genesis.

Aristocracy first, then the Church, then the people, "In all the disputes, which have excited Christians against each other, Rome has invariably decided in favor of that opinion, which tended most towards the suppression of the human intellect and the annihilation of the reasoning powers." ~Voltaire.

When the Egyptian priests were no longer included in the plunder from raids to Syria and Nubia, they convinced the Pharaoh to levy taxes on the people of Thebes and revenues from the city. The people found it difficult to support the priesthood and the vast lands that they controlled and resorted to robbery of the Royal Tombs. It is now a documented fact, that corrupt government officials looked the other way in exchange for tributes while the treasures of their kingdom were pilfered and desecrated.

- † Halos, nimbus, are used to portray divine figures in earliest Egyptian works. This creation of a glowing inner spirit from the paintings is used to communicate a power more powerful than the layperson.
- † Later civilization such as the Greeks, Romans, Native Americans, and Indians would also incorporate the Halo to depict divinities.
- † The Halo also signifies a higher level of consciousness in this material world.

With circles about their heads, the portraits of Christ are also frequently surrounded, and in the case of Jesus, if His head had been merely surrounded with rays, there might have been some pretense for saying that it was borrowed from the Evangelic narrative, where it is stated, that on the Holy mount His face became resplendent with light. But nowhere, in the whole compass of Scripture, do we ever read that His head was surrounded with a disk, or a circle of light, yet what will be searched for in vain in Biblical Scriptures, is found in the artistic representations of the great Gods and Goddesses of Babylon.

The disk, and particularly the circle, were the well known symbols of the Sun-Divinity, the Pagan Sun God, and figured largely in the symbolism of the East. Some anthropologists felt that there was direct communications between the ancient worlds due to the similarities in beliefs. Due to the annihilation of religious matter by Catholic zealots, little did they know then the borrowing of religious texts from more ancient ancient civilizations was purposeful in order to build a new faith. Apollo, the child of the Sun, was often thus represented. Goddesses [the mothers], that claimed kindred with the Sun were equally entitled to be adorned with the nimbus or luminous circle.

"For whereas ye say, I am of Paul, I of Apollos, are ye not men?" ~1 Corinthians 3:4.

Compare the nimbus around the head of the ancient goddess Circe, the sorceress daughter of the 'Sun God,' Helios, and the sea nymph Perse, whose mystical l potions and incantations were alleged to be able to turn people into beasts with the 'Halo' around the head of the Catholic 'Perpetual Virgin.'

"But although death was very important to the Egyptians, life was considered to be more desirable. One sage of the period advised: "Enjoy your days. Delight your nose with balm and sweet perfume, offer lotus garlands to your wife to adorn her arms and neck. Let her whom you cherish be seated at your side, and let singing and music delight your ears. Cast care from you; think only of your pleasure until the day comes to enter into a world where silence reigns... For you must understand that no-one can take his worldly goods with him, and no-one has ever returned after his departure." ~From: The Egyptian Way of Death, Mummies and the Cult of the Immortal, Ànge-Pierre Leca, T translated by Louise Asmal, Doubleday, 1981, 1979, 1976, French.

The worst fear though was that the corpse might be destroyed, which would also destroy its chance of eternal life. "Die nota second time" was written hopefully at the bottom of some coffins. "Palestine was so closely linked geographically with Egypt that the influence of that great civilization must have been immense on the smaller and less civilized country. But to the jealous and barbarian Hebrews the splendor of Egypt was an offence, though they borrowed largely from the ideas and ideals, and even the very language, of the Egyptians. Yet in spite of hatred and malice, the influence of Egypt on the religion of both the Canaanites and Hebrews can be clearly seen, and through the Hebraic Scriptures that influence is found in the later religions, Christianity and Islam." ~From: Egyptian Religious Poetry, Margaret A. Murray [1863 - 1963], Pub. John Murray, 1949.

BC 2468-2369- The pre-Flood covenant made with Noah is wholly fulfilled, and God blesses the Flood survivors and tells them to fill the earth [multiply]. Animals are now allowed as food for man, but eating their life-blood is forbidden. Capital punishment is instituted for certain crimes.

BC 2545-2520-Pyramid of Khufu [known as Cheops in Greek] 756' x 756' square at the base at an angle of 51° 52', with its sides running north/south and east/west, with 2,300,000 stone blocks weighing 6,500,000 tons of stones transported from Aswan, six hundred miles away [Napoleon calculated the materials in the pyramids to be equivalent to a wall ten feet high and one foot thick around the country of France].

Newly discovered Egyptian documents tell of magicians performing before the Pharaoh Cheops. Magicians were part of the priesthood and practiced their magic to both entertain and to mystify the ignorant masses by revealing only enough of their mystical powers to keep the masses in fear of them. -Genesis 41:8, Exodus 7:11, 9:11, Daniel 1:20, 2:2, 4:7, Isaiah 2:6.

BC 2530-2150-The Solar Barge journeys across the night sea beneath the earth carrying the "Tree of Life" in Akkadian religious beliefs. Isis, the benefactor of magical arts and the resurrectress of Osiris [Resurrection is not a Christian invention, but dates back to ancient Egyptian mythology, which also borrows from other cultures, at least 2500 years before the advent of Jesus Christ].

Osiris was born on the 361st day of the year, when Plutarch says a Voice rang out proclaiming him the Lord of All. Horus, Plutarch also says, was born on the 362nd day, and the Greek God, Apollo on the same day. Apepi is a huge serpent, living in the Nile, who tried to intervene in the 'Sun-god' Ra's traveling across the sky in his boat. Representing darkness and the evilness that pervades mankind, Apepi is now associated with the left-hand path [alternative to the followers of goodness].

The Old Testament is revised by the inheritors of the new priest craft in an attempt to show the Egyptian priests that the new God of the Hebrews is more powerful than their 'Sun God' Ra. ~See Exodus 10:21-23, and 2 Kings 10:26-28, where Jehu destroys the Baal idols.

- † The Egyptians believed in the Immortality of the Soul: a concept interpreted as transmigration of the soul by Christine Doctrine.
- † Redemption of the soul of man is what mummification was all about.
- † The hieroglyph for the material body of man after the departure of his soul is symbolized as the fish, and two thousand five hundred years from this era the symbol most often used by Christians to represent the spiritual manifestation of Jesus will be the fish.
- † It is written that Ra, the God of the Sun, Lord and Creator of the World, God of Birth and Rebirth, in his old age becomes senile and orders the destruction of mankind on earth.
- † The Goddess Hathor is sent along with the god Sekhmet to destroy man.

Hathor is also called the "Queen of Heaven." ~cf. Jeremiah 44:17, 18, 19, 25.

In Egypt, the Goddess Athor, "The Habitation of God," signifies that in her dwelt all the "Fullness of the Godhead." 'Athor,' the Venus of Egypt, is represented as a cow, to indicate the light complexion of the Goddess that the cow represented, the cow's head and neck being gilded [made to look like gold or Yellow Hair].

The most famed pictures of the Virgin Mother in Italy represent the mother of Jesus, from a dark race, as of a fair complexion and with golden hair.

To point out the great Goddess-mother, in a Pantheistic sense, as at once the Infinite and Almighty one, and the Virgin mother, this inscription was engraved upon one of her temples in Egypt, "I am all that has been, or that is, or that shall be. No mortal has removed my veil. The fruit, which I have brought forth, is the Sun." ~The Two Babylons by The Late Rev. Alexander Hislop.

Watching the slaughter of mankind becomes too much for Ra [the Sun-God] to bear and he Floods the land with beer dyed with red ochre. Thinking the beer dyed red is blood, Hathor and Sekhmet partake of it and become intoxicated forgetting about the killing of mankind and thus saving the world from destruction.

The Egyptians allegedly surrounded the mummy with a mystical aura, a cosmic force of God, of which we know nothing about at present, because man in his ultimate wisdom could not deal with a metaphysical world that challenged his newly found religion or simply wanted to eliminate the competition.

Along with the sun, as the great 'Fire-God,' and, in due time, identified with him, was the serpent, which was also worshipped. "In the mythology of the primitive world," says Owen, "The serpent is universally the symbol of the sun." In ancient Egypt, one of the commonest symbols of the sun, or 'Sun-God,' is a disc with a serpent around it, representing the sun, the 'Great Enlightener' of the physical world, so the serpent is held to have been the 'Great Enlightener' of the spiritual domain, giving mankind the "Knowledge of good and evil."

Millenniums later the Egyptian Gods will be given a new name, their miraculous feats will be combined into one, their divine given powers will be claimed by a newly created god, one who will have universal acceptance, one who takes on the attributes of man made gods from all over the world, one who will assimilate into all societies, cultures, and religious spectrums, one who will be the god for all mankind, one who will be a man-god like the Egyptian Pharaohs, one who will be claimed to offer Salvation to man, one who will be called Jesus, the Savior, and woe unto him who does not accept this new Universalized God. The temples, statues, and libraries of older cultures, older civilizations, and Gods will be destroyed so that none may practice, read, or see the God of their fathers.

For knowledge of the past is to be forbidden by claiming the evil Satanic Spirit traveled back into the past to deceive the faithful and new laws of this alleged pure faith will be called 'Catechisms,' ordering the faithful not to read or listen to anyone who could potentially sway them from their faith.

The Christian is best kept ignorant, as Saint Paul states, "As unto little ones in Christ. I gave you milk to drink, not meat; for you were not able as yet." ~1 Corinthians 3:2.

The Church advanced its practice of feeding the multitude on the porridge of simple faith and materialized conceptions, "The pretext by which the worst practices can always justify themselves, i.e., that they edify those who take their religion simply and who would never become attached to it if it were not brought down to their level; God will always be the gainer as far as their intention goes, at any rate." ~Guinebert, Christianity Past and Present, pg. 476.

In the ancient Egyptian culture, the worship of the serpent began side by side with the worship of 'Fire' and the 'Sun,' and the inspired declarative statement of Saint Paul seems decisive on this subject, as he states, "When men knew God, but glorified Him not as God." The glory of God, was transformed not only into an image made like corruptible man, but into the likeness of "Creeping Things," or, that of the serpents. ~Romans 1:23.

Of profane writers, Sanchuniathon, the Phoenician, who is believed to have lived about the time of Joshua, says, "Thoth first attributed something of the divine nature to the serpent and the serpent tribe, in which he was followed by the Phoenicians and Egyptians. For this animal was esteemed by him to be the most spiritual of all the reptiles, and of a fiery nature, inasmuch as it exhibits an incredible celerity, moving by its spirit, without either hands or feet... Moreover, it is long-lived, and has the quality of renewing its youth, as Thoth has laid down in the 'Sacred Books;' upon which accounts this animal is introduced in the sacred rites and Mysteries." ~The Two Babylons by Reverend Alexander Hislop.

The "Great Fiery Serpent" is, in addition, represented with all the emblems of royalty, with all its heads encircled with "Crowns or diadems;" and so in Egypt, the 'Serpent of Fire,' or 'Serpent of the Sun,' in Greek was called the 'Basilisk,' that is, the "Royal Serpent," to identify it with Moloch, whose name recalls the concepts both of fire and blood, and properly signifying "The King."

The Basilisk was always, among the Egyptians, and among many nations besides, regarded as "The very type of majesty and dominion." The image of the serpent was worn affixed to the headdress of the great Egyptian monarchs; and it was not lawful for any one else to wear it, as the sun is identified with this serpent and is called "Pouro," which signifies, "The Fire" and "The King," and from this very name the epithet "Purros," the "Fiery," is given to the "Great seven-crowned serpent."

The Christian adoption of the soul and the soul living on, the soul being indestructible, and the soul being capable of enjoying life forever and ever is from Paul who learned Hellenistic [Greek] ways that are an adoption from Egyptology. The soul is known as "Ka," and the physical body after death is known as the "Khat."

The Egyptians as well as the Hindus believed that man had an invisible body, ghost, or shade, that is, a soul, ka, within the material body. Among the former, the dead were spoken of as "Osiriana," that is gone to Osiris. On a monument, which dates ages before Abram is said to have lived, is found the epitaph, "May thy soul attain to the creator of all mankind."

Saint Jerome will declare, "The dignity of a soul is so great, that each has a guardian angel from its birth."

Khem is the Phallic God of Reproduction. Sculptures and paintings in the tombs of the dead represent the deceased ushered into the world of spirits by funeral deities who announce, "A soul arrived in Amenti."

The Roman Catholics, and in a less explicit way other Christians, believe in two judgments of the dead: the Particular Judgment, of each soul after death, and the General Judgment, of all men at the close of the human comedy. Roman Catholics are astounded and embarrassed to learn that this particular judgment of each soul after death was also the most outstanding and most influential belief of the ancient Egyptians from the very dawn of history, and probably long before it.

BC 2500-Noah's sons are born. Shem, the eldest son carries on Seth's godly line. Shem lives 600 years and fathers five sons. Shem is 98 at the time of the Great Flood. ~Genesis 10:21.

Japheth, the middle son, fathers seven sons, and Ham, the younger son, fathers four sons. ~Genesis 9:24.

Noah is called upon by God to build an ark and warns of the coming flood [2466 B.C.E.]. ~Genesis 6.

Noah begins 120 years of prophesying regarding the devastating coming flood to come [God asks Noah to conduct this warning for humanity].

Gilgamesh, King of Uruk, in the ancient Sumerian poem cycles that comprise one of the oldest known pieces of literature upon which Genesis may be based, meets Enkidu, the only man who rivals him for strength and bravery. They develop into lovers and particularly enjoy wrestling with each other. ~See Epic of Gilgamesh.

In the Americas, Mayan culture flourishes in the Yucatan region of Central America. The Mayas developed a system of counting utilizing the concept of zero one thousand years before the Arabs, Indians, or Egyptians. The Mayans calculated 405 full moons in a 11,960-day period. Today we calculate the same period at 11,959.888-day period. Four thousand five hundred years later, they were only off by 112th of a day or 2.688 hours every 292 years.

Their written history dates back to a day calculated at August 11th, BC 3114. How were the Mayans able to be so accurate in their astrological calculations if they were so primitive as the Christian Spaniards claimed? Some say that there was interaction [trade] amongst the early Asian civilizations and the new world. Historians for years denied that these events could happen and claimed that the inhabitants of the new world traveled across a land connection from what is now Alaska down [South] to the Americas. Historians, traditionalists by nature, are prone to ridicule by their adversaries if they deviate from accepted practices and are quite reluctant to deviate from accepted norms.

We now know of strong ocean currents that could very possibly have made trade possible before the European migrations in the 16th centuries.

The Mayan High Priest is portrayed as half man and half god. Religious rituals were performed by sacrifices to appease the god of the sun and god of rain. All articles relating to religious and scientific findings of the Mayans are destroyed by the invading Spaniards.

The word "Tradition," as used by the early Fathers and the Holy Mother, the Church, will frequently be implored upon the masses as evidence of the reality and verity of those occurrences "Taken for granted" by the beneficiaries of the 'Catholic Authorities,' as support upon them. "Tradition," being that alleged evidence of things naturally incredible and unverifiable, of alleged events and miraculous happenings unwitnessed or un-documented over a century before the "Traditions" invariably contradictory eventually came to be 'Found' by the impious as well as the pious, which allege them as facts for the Faith.

"If the very order of Episcopal succession is to be considered, how much more surely, truly and safely do we number them from Peter himself, to whom, as to one representing the whole Church, the Lord said, 'Upon this rock I will build my Church...' Peter was succeeded by Linus, Linus by Clement, Clement by Anacletus, Anacletus by Evaristus..." ~Saint Augustine of Hippo, Letter 53, 412 C.E.

Tradition, in actuality, as admitted by the Catholic Church being Jewish in nature, but then denounced by the 6th century when the Church relinquishes its Jewish history. "...Once the Holiest of all, has become the most licentious den of thieves, the most shameless of all brothels, the Kingdom of Sin, death, and Hell. It is so bad that even Anti-Christ himself, if he should come, could think of nothing to add to its wickedness."

"The famous texts of Irenaeus on Apostolic Succession are a testimony to the faith of the 2nd century, rather than an example of historical narrative." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 7, 341.

The Holy Mother, the Church, admits that the first few centuries of Popes were often the creations of the her over zealous monks and followers. Pope Pius XII wrote that, "Scientists are beginning to find the finger of God in the Creation of the Universe."

Is there spiritual contradiction in the creation? "It is entirely possible, though not at all firmly established, that God used a Big Bang as His method of Creation. You cannot affirm it as a certainty, but neither can you deny it apodictically. Because the Bible does not specify how God did it, we are left to choose the hypothesis that seems to have the best supporting material... Nothing in the Biblical doctrine excludes the Big Bang." ~Arlie Hoover, Professor, Abilene University, 1992, 34, 35.

Further observance on the Big Bang Theory: "Hubble's observations suggested that there was a time, called the Big Bang, when the universe was infinitesimally small and infinitely dense. Under such conditions all the laws of science, and therefore all ability to predict the future, would break down. If there were events earlier than this time, then they could not affect what happens at the present time. Their existence can be ignored because it would have no observational consequences. One may say that time had a beginning at the Big Bang, in the sense that earlier times simply would not be defined. It should be emphasized that this beginning in time is very different from those that had been considered previously. In an unchanging universe a beginning in time is something that has to be imposed by some being outside the universe; there is no physical necessity for a beginning. One can imagine that God created the universe at literally any time in the past. On the other hand, if the universe is expanding, there may be physical reasons why there had to be a beginning. One could imagine that God created the universe at the instant of the big bang, or even afterwards in just such a way as to make it look as though there had been a Big Bang, but it would be meaningless to suppose that it was created before the Big Bang. An expanding universe does not preclude a creator, but it does place limits on when he might have carried out his job!" ~Stephen Hawking, A Brief History of Time, New York: Bantam, 1988, pp. 8-9.

"Tradition" has it that Jesus appointed Twelve Apostles, which is derived from the Zodiac [Astrological predictions], and also, "The number twelve was symbolical, corresponding to the twelve tribes of Israel." ~Encyclopedia Britannica, vol. 1, 264.

However, the whole story is fictitious. ~So says Encyclopedia Britannica, vol. 3, 2987. With the soundest Scriptural basis for its conclusion.

The Church is reluctant to reveal, that blessed with remuneration for 'Discovering' ancient manuscripts, the monks became intoxicated with printer's ink.

"The blessed Apostles, then, founded and built up the Church in Rome. They committed the office of Bishop into the hands of Linus. Of this, Linus, Paul makes mention in the Epistles to Timothy. To him succeeded Anacletus. After him, in the third place from the Apostles, Clement was allotted the office of Bishop." ~Saint Irenaeus, Against All Heresies, 180 A.D.

BC 2500-Excavations from Nimrod, capitol of Assyria, provide evidence of Babylonian Astrology, where the Babylonian calendar is discovered to be divided into thirteen lunar cycles starting at the beginning of the growing season.

The Astrological Babylonian signs are: A Vase and a Fish, a Firebird, a Hero, a winged Ibex (goat), a Genie (Spirit of Protection), a Griffin, an Oryx (antelope), a Man riding an Eagle, a Serpent, a Dragon, a Sphinx, a Swallow, and a Huntress.

One complete cycle of the Zodiac [Platonic Year] requires 25,920 years. Divided by 60, one soss, the Mesopotamian sexagenary scale, equals 432. It is not known when the Zodiacal signs in the heavens were formulated to be inclusive of 2,170 years [some say 2000 years].

In the 21st century man is still in wonderment as to the purpose of ancient Old Testament writings as pertains to Space Aliens(?) and Extra-terrestrials(?)

- † "There were Giants in the earth in those days; and also after that, when the Sons of God came in unto the daughters of men, and they bare children to them, the same became mighty men, which were of old, men of renown." ~Genesis 6:4. Nine cubits was the length thereof, and four cubits the breadth of it, after the cubit of a man. And this land, which we possessed at that time, from Aroer, which is by the river Arnon, and half mount Gilead, and the cities thereof, gave I unto the Reubenites and to the Gadites. And the rest of Gilead, and all Bashan, being the kingdom of Og, gave I unto the half tribe of Manasseh; all the region of Argob, with all Bashan, which was called the land of giants." ~Deuteronomy 3:11-13.

Nimrod, the 'Inciter,' the 'Rebellious One,' is identified as a 'Giant' amongst men, or 'Nephilim.' "What Ever Happened to the Spirits of the Giants?" ~Genesis 6:4, also known as Anakim in Deuteronomy 2:20-21, 9:2.
- † "But from their unhallowed intercourse spurious men sprang, greater in stature than ordinary men, whom they after wards called Giants [Nephilim or Fallen Ones]; not those Dragon-footed Giants who waged war against God, as those blasphemous myths of the Greeks do sing, but wild in manners, and greater than men in size, inasmuch as they were sprung of Angels; yet less than Angels, as they were born of women." ~The Sons of God and the Daughters of Men: Notes from the Books of Ysrael. - † "Before the world, there was a great gulf of twilight. North of this was the Home of Mist, full of ice, and to the South, the Home of Fire, guarded by a giant with a flaming sword. A day came when the twilight came to life, warmed by the fires but shaped by the ice, and became the Giant Ymir, with a living body and cruel, cold heart. When he looked for food, he saw a gigantic cow, from whose udders flowed streams of milk, licking the salt from the glacier until a head of hair pushed itself up through the ice and revealed a mighty man, Odin, with a heart warm and kind. The sons of Ymir became a race of Giants who worked evil on the earth, and the family of Odin began a war against the Ymir and his sons." ~Nordic Mythology, paraphrased from E.M Wilmot-Buxton, How All Things Began, The Junior Classics, Vol.3, p.197.
- † Philo says, "From Genos, son of Aeon and Protogonus, were begotten again mortal children, whose names are Light, and Fire, and Flame. These, says he, discovered fire from rubbing pieces of wood together, and taught the use of it. And they begat sons of surpassing size and stature, whose names were applied to the mountains, which they occupied: so that from them were named mount Cassius, and Libanus, and Antilibanus, and Brathy. From these, he says, were begotten Memrumus and Hypsuranius; and they got their names, he says, from their mothers, as the women in those days had free intercourse with any whom they met." ~Philo, 25 B.C.E.-50 C.E., Eusebius of Caesarea: Praeparatio Evangelica [Preparation for the Gospel], Tr., E.H. Gifford, 1903, Book 1, cf. Genesis 6:4, Numbers 13:33, Deuteronomy 2:11, 3:11-13, 9:2, Joshua 12:4, 13:12, 15:8, 18:16-17, II Samuel 21:20. Note: Hitler will expound upon this believing that once the Aryan race was pure and they roamed the earth as giants.

In the year 2000 we are in the Age of Aquarius. Many religions today interpret Aeons [from the Greek meaning Age or Era] in the Scriptures to mean the end. This misunderstanding from the Greek "Aeon" does not mean the End of the World, but the End of an Age.

The Hebrews frowned upon the old civilizations that used Astrology as a means of prophesizing. In The Old Testament we have a disclaimer as to the works of Astrologers as sorcery. "Of the great antiquity of this primitive worship there is abundant evidence, and that it originated among the inhabitants of the Assyrian plains, we have the united testimony of sacred and profane history. It obtained the epithet of perfect, and was believed to be the most ancient of religious systems, having preceded that of the Egyptians (Egyptiis vero antiquiores esse Magos Aristoteles auctor est in primo de Philosophia libro.” ~Theopompi Frag., Isaiah 48:12-13.

“The identity of many of the Assyrian doctrines with those of Egypt is alluded to by Porphyry and Clemens...” and, in connection with the same subject, Ouvaroff quotes the following from Birch on Babylonian cylinders and monuments, “The zodiacal signs... Show unequivocally that the Greeks derived their notions and arrangements of the zodiac and consequently their Mythology, that was intertwined with it from the Chaldees. The identity of Nimrod with the constellation Orion is not to be rejected.”

The early Greeks relied on the stars for their Divination, as did many early Christians, and Porphyry says, “The Gods, if they speak with a knowledge of things determined by fate, declare that their utterances are derived from the course of the stars, and almost all the truthful Gods acknowledge this.” -Eusebius of Caesarea: Præparatio Evangelica [Preparation for the Gospel], Tr., E.H. Gifford, 1903, Book VI, Chapter I.

After discovering the fact that the Egyptian priests claimed the honor of having transmitted to the Greeks the first elements of Polytheism, one can only conclude that other elements were also borrowed, “These positive facts would sufficiently prove, even without the conformity of ideas, that the Mysteries transplanted into Greece, and there united with a certain number of local notions, never lost the character of their origin derived from the cradle of the moral and religious ideas of the universe. All these separate facts--all these scattered testimonies, recur to that fruitful principle which places in the East the center of science and civilization.” ~Ouvaroff.

For committing such blasphemous ideas into writing, Porphyry's book was burned by edict of the Church in 448 C.E., as criticism of the origins of Christianity have been suppressed ever since.

BC 2500-The First Stonehenge is constructed with massive rocks placed in a circle. The alignments of the stones are used to predict the paths of the moon and stars as well as eclipses. Some say this ability to predict summer and winter extremes enabled the agrarian civilization to plant their crops at the right times to benefit from the weather and good fortune of the gods. Minor changes are made through three successive groups.

BC 2499–2000 BCE: Angels marry women; Nephilim; Violence on earth; the Great Deluge and its devastating effects upon mankind; Nimrod; Death of Noah; Birth of Abraham [According to Jehovah's Witnesses].

“The time points reference for pre-Abraham parts of the Bible are skewed. Prior to captivity in Babylon, the teachings of the Torah were carried by oral tradition down through the generations. The major writings of the Bible, the Mosaic Law, were stored in the tabernacle, which was lost at that time, and few who carried the oral tradition actually ever saw those stones. Obviously, if archaic stories were carried as strictly Judaic they were carried through Abraham, who admittedly comes from a family that worshiped several household Gods in the city of Ur, so you can't argue that they were inspired by God to people who worshiped Pagan Gods. In reading of Abraham, we can be certain that Sumeria and the surrounding areas was in a time of strife, that Abraham and his family were on the move, and concealing their identities in order to protect themselves. Thus the discontinuity between Abraham and his family his residence in Ur and in Hebron create a definite bottleneck in the Bible as a carrier of historical events.” ~Who wrote the Five Books of Moses? ReligiousTolerance.org

BC 2494-2181-In the Egyptian Fifth and Sixth Dynasties we have a solar calendar established with five bonus days at the end of the year. Star watching is now a predictable science in which the priests can calculate eclipses and they use this power as a means to control the naïve and superstitious masses.

BC 2400-Lamech dies five years before the Great Flood at the age of 777 in 2353 B.C.E. Methuselah also dies shortly before the flood at the age of 969 in 2348 B.C.E. Shem had four of his five sons: Arphaxad, who lived 438 years and carried on Seth's godly family line, then Elam, then Asshur “Builder of Nineveh,” and finally Lud. ~Genesis 10:11.

Japheth has three of his seven sons: Comer, Magog and Madai [No chronology is given for Japheth's descendants].

Ham had four sons: Cush, Mizraim, Phut and Canaan [No dates or years are given for Ham's descendants]. Shem's first grandchild, Salah, son of Arphaxad is born [Salah lives 433 years], and carries on Seth's godly posterity. Salah fathers many sons and daughters.

Christians still cannot get their dates together regarding the Deluge.

For the Great Deluge, different dates are generally assigned: Usher and English Bible, 2348 B.C.E.; the Hebrew Bible [Tanakh], 2288 B.C.E.; the Playfair Bible, 2352 B.C.E.; Clinton Bible, 2482 B.C.E.; Samaritan Pent, 2998 B.C.E.; the Jewish historian, Flavius Josephus, 3146 B.C.E.; Dr. Hales, 3155 B.C.E.; and the Septuagint, 3246 B.C.E.

In China, basic "Trigrams" of I Ching invented by Emperor Fu Xi in China. I Ching is the Chinese practice of divination. The Chinese system of I Ching is more of a philosophy of life than a true religion. Some of the primary symbols are: ☰ father, ☷ youngest daughter, ☱ second daughter, ☳ eldest son, ☶ eldest daughter, ☲ second son, ☵ youngest son, ☹ mother.

BC 2355-The reign of Egypt's King Pepy II Neferkare who, in what perhaps may be mankind's first homosexual short story, makes nocturnal visits to have sex with his general, Sisinne.

BC 2350-2175-The Ladder as a means of climbing up into the heavens in religion is as old as the history of man.

Early texts on Egyptian mythology state, "The deceased ascends on the ladder that Re, his father, made for him." as discovered in the Pyramid Text. In Memphis, Egypt we have mention of an 'Underworld.' [No fire, no suffering, no pain].

"He knew the dispositions of earth and Hell; there was nothing hidden from; he covered with a veil the side of all that he had seen." ~Fremasonry of the Ancient Egyptians by Manley P. Hall.

This theme is borrowed over and over again throughout history as the inspired 'Infallible Decree' "Unionis," which lets all Christians who depart from the Church know when and where their souls arrive and what to expect upon arrival, which will also be contradicted later on in Catholic history. The prophet Isaiah writes of a Church called, 'The Lady of Kingdoms,' who makes the audacious claim: "I am, and there is no one else besides me [I am the One True Church]; I shall not sit as a widow, nor shall I know the loss of children." ~Isaiah 47:5-8.

In the Babylonian "Lay of Ishtah" from which the Hebrew's revelation borrowed this and other matters of revelation, the underworld to which the shade of the departed, sinner and saint alike, sank after death, is described correctly, in gloomy shades, being variously and poetically called "The pit," the "House of darkness," the "Land of no return," metaphors strangely reminiscent of "Pluto's gloomy realm" of Homer, of the "Go down to the pit," of the Psalmist, of Isaiah, and of Job; of the "Bottomless pit" of the Apocalypse; of the "Outer darkness" and "Pits of darkness" of the evangelists; of the "Land of forgetfulness" of the sweet singer of Israel. ~Psalm 88:12.

BC 2300- The destruction of the Tower of Babel causes the dispersion of Babylon's population, spreading the people to the ends of the earth. It is 101 years from the flood to the "Confusion of Tongues," and the "Dispersion." [approximately 2247 B.C.E.] ~Genesis 11:1-9.

Ham's first grandchild, Nimrod [also known as Izdhubar], son of Cush is born. Nimrod founded Babylon [Chaldea, the capital was Ur]. The Tower of Babel is started [The Tower of Babel]

Like the "Temple of Jupiter Belus" in Babylon, which is seen and described by Herodotus in 440

"A former king built it, but he did not complete its head. Since a remote time the people had abandoned it, without order expressing their words. Since that time the earthquake and the thunder had dispersed its sun-dried clay; the bricks of the casing had been split, and the ear of the interior had been scattered in heaps. Merodach, the Great Lord, excited my mind to repair this building. I did not change the site, nor did I take away the foundation stone. As it had been in former times, so I founded, I made it as it had been in ancient days, so I exalted its summit." ~Smith's Bible Dictionary.

"Exaggerated chronologies are common to a large number of nations. Critical examination has [in all cases but one] demonstrated their fallacy; and the many myriads of years postulated for their past civilization and history by the Babylonians, Assyrians, Hindus, Chinese, and others have been shown to be pure fiction, utterly unworthy of belief. Cuneiform scholars confidently place the beginning of Babylon about B.C.E. 2300, of Assyria about B.C.E. 1500. The best Arian scholars place the dawn of the Iran civilization about B.C.E. 1500, of India about B.C.E. 1200. Chinese investigators can find nothing solid or substantial in the past of the 'Celestials' earlier than B.C.E. 781, or, at the furthest B.C.E. 1154." ~Rawlinson, Temple of Jupiter Belus was named by Nebuchadnezzar. The Temple of the Seven Lights of the Earth at Borsippa-Barzippa. ie, Tower of Tongues, located eleven miles from the north ruins of Babylon was described thus by Nebuchadnezzar in the Borsippa Inscription.

Shem's great grandchild, Eber [Heber], son of Salah is born [Eber lives 464 years and fathers two sons]. Ham's second and third grandchildren are born. Sidon founded Sidon [the Sidonians and Ammonites], and Heth, the sons of Cannan. Shem's great-great grandchild, Peleg, son of Eber is born. Peleg's name means, "Division." Peleg lives 239 years and fathers many sons and daughters. His brother's name is Joktan. Joktan has thirteen sons. Peleg lives 239 years [contradicting the shorter lifespans after the Flood], and fathers sons and daughters. His brother's name is Joktan. Joktan fathers 13 sons. The descendants of Japheth disperse, populating Greece, Parthia, Russia and Northern Europe.

BC 2042 (?) 2198 (?) 2247 (?) 2167 (?) 1400 (?) - The birth of Abraham [descended from Arpachshad of Upper Mesopotamia, the land of Mitanni], the Jew, Astrologer, Priest, and Levite [Gen. 21:5]. Terah, the father of Abraham is also known as an Astrologer & priest of Nippur & Ur.

The discrepancies in the various dates are due to changes made by the priests to adjust the calendar to coincide with predictions, which did not occur as envisaged in Jewish prophecy.

BC 2000 ± Noah dies at the age of 950. Noah lives after the flood, 350 years, and dies two years before Abraham is born [1998 B.C.E.] Terah's third son, Abraham, is born. Abraham is called "The Father of the Faithful" and "The Friend of God." Haran's daughter, Milcah, is born, Terah's daughter, Sarah, is born, Haran's daughter, Iscah, is born, Reu dies at the age of 239 years [1978 B.C.E.], Haran's son, Lot, is born, Nahor and Milcah are married, Milcah is niece and wife to Nahor.

From Christ back to Abraham there are allegedly some fifty-five generations. Archaeology has demonstrated that these fifty-five generations spanned approximately two thousand years at the most. ~Kitchen and Mitchell 1962, 213.

From Abraham, back to Adam, there are but twenty additional generations, a number of which are noted for having an exceptionally long lifespan; but, even if one grants possible omissions in the genealogical narrative, as with some Old Testament records [cf. Ezra 7:3,4; 1 Chronicles 6:6-10], there is no reason to assume that the earlier portion of Jesus' family record is of a radically different structure than that which characterizes the later generations. According to Jewish tradition, Ezra had a hand in the Old Testament, after the exiled Jews were resettled in Judah. He was qualified for the work, being one of the Inspired Bible writers, a priest, and also known as, "A skilled copyist in the Law of Moses." ~Ezra 7:1-11.

The Chinese practice Astrology with "Twelve" animal signs [Rat, Ox, Tiger, Cat, Dragon, Snake, Horse, Goat, Monkey, Rooster, Dog, and Pig]

"The nature then of the dragon and of serpents Tauthus himself regarded as Divine, and so again after him did the Phoenicians and Egyptians, for this animal was declared by him to be of all reptiles most full of breath, and fiery. In consequence of which it also exerts an unsurpassed swiftness by means of its breath, without feet and hands or any other of the external members by which the other animals make their movements. It also exhibits forms of various shapes, and in its progress makes spiral leaps as swift as it chooses. It is also most long-lived, and its nature is to put off its old skin, and so not only to grow young again, but also to assume a larger growth; and after it has fulfilled its appointed measure of age, it is self-consumed, in like manner as Tauthus himself has set down in his sacred books: for which reason this animal has also been adopted in temples and in Mystic rites." -Eusebius of Caesarea: Praeparatio Evangelica [Preparation for the Gospel], Tr., E.H. Gifford, 1903, on Philo 25 B.C.E.-50 C.E.

The Epic of Gilgamesh [Gilgamesh] is written down, the first literary evidence of werewolves [Saint Christopher was a werewolf/dog-head]. "... Just as Genesis 1-11 as a whole corresponds to the structure of the Atrahasis myth, so the garden of Eden story has incorporated many of the themes of the great Gilgamesh poem." ~Professor Blenkinsopp, Notre Dame University, on Atrahasis and Gilgamesh motifs in Genesis, pp. 65-66. Human Origins, Genesis 1:1-11:26. Joseph Blenkinsopp. The Pentateuch, An Introduction to the First Five Books of the Bible. New York. Doubleday. 1992. ISBN0-385-41207-X.

It was from Arcadia, in Greece, that the infamous werewolf cult arose, "The way in which Danaos became King of Argos was that a wolf came down from the hills and killed the lead bull and the Argives accepted the omen. Danaos, convinced that the wolf had been Apollo in disguise, dedicated the famous shrine to wolfish Apollo at Argos, and became so powerful a ruler that all of the Pelasgians of Greece called themselves Danaans... The element of the wolf, sometimes substituted for a dog in the Sirius tradition of the Dog Star, is important. It is an obvious European substitute for the non-existent jackal of Anubis. It was from this changing of the jackal into the wolf through adaptation to the European climate that those peculiar wolf traditions arose in Arcadia, which developed in pre-classical times into the werewolf concepts. Human blood-sucking Vampires... And Lycanthropy of werewolves all luxuriated in the wilds of Arcady among the Pelasgian survivors in pre-classical Greece after the Dorian invasion... What is a werewolf? It is a man's body with a wolf's head... And the temples of Wolfish [or Lycian] Apollo, were not altogether rare in Greece. Aristotle's famous school of Athens, the Lyceum, was in the grounds of the Lycian Apollo's temple just outside the Athens Gate of Diochares..." ~The False Gospel In The Stars Preparing The Way Of The Antichrist, <http://watch.pair.com/cancer.html> - pgs. 942:167.

Vampires are also alleged to have developed with the development of the Christ. The Bible says a lot about the occult, which is not specifically addressed [like the Trilogy] in the Bible, but was quite active during the writing of the Old Testament [e.g., idolatry, sorcery, witchcraft], and was vigorously fought in the New Testament [e.g., Gnosticism]. "Some occultists believe that Christ was the first vampire because he is seen as the first immortal, staked to a cross, drinks his blood, and eats his flesh to find an Eternal Life... etc." ~The Occult, www.biblestudyguide.org

Through trade, the Greeks and Egyptians exchanged not only commodities, but also theology, "Afterwards when the mythologists came forward, the story filled the theater, and became to succeeding generations a strong and unalterable belief. And the most illustrious heroes and Gods of the Egyptians are, it is said, universally claimed by the Greeks as their own. Hercules, for example, was by birth an Egyptian, and moved by his valor traveled over much of the known world, but the Greeks claimed him as their own, though in truth he was different from the son of Alcmena who arose at some later time among the Greeks. Perseus also, it is said, was born in Egypt, and the birth of Isis was transferred by the Greeks to Argos, while in their mythology they said that she was Io, who was transformed into a cow, but some think the same deity to be Isis, some Demeter, some Thesmophoros, but others Selene, and others Hera. Osiris, too, some think to be Apis, and some Dionysus, some Pluto, some Ammon, some Zeus, and others Pan." -Eusebius of Caesarea: Praeparatio Evangelica [Preparation for the Gospel], Tr., E.H. Gifford, 1903.

Some Christians believe that werewolves are spoken of in the Bible when King Nebuchadnezzar is troubled in his dreams whereby God is about to humble him, and sends His servant Daniel to pronounce sentence on Nebuchadnezzar. The King hears his sentence from God, "Let his mind be changed from that of a man and let a beast's mind be given to him and let seven periods of time pass over him." ~Daniel 4:16. Even up to the 21st century, Christian authors continue their denial of Pagan influence, and on the "Priestess," [Shamhat the harlot-priestess of Uruk] being recast as Adam's second wife, Eve: "Some elements of the Fall of Man myth in Genesis are of great antiquity; but the composition is late... The Gilgamesh Epic, the earliest version of which can be dated about 2000 B.C.E., describes how the Sumerian Love-goddess Aruru created from clay a noble savage named Enkidu, who grazed among gazelles, slaked his thirst beside wild cattle... Until a priestess sent to him by Gilgamesh initiated him into the mysteries of love. Though wise as a God, he was now shunned by the wild creatures; and the priestess therefore covered his nakedness, using part of her own garment, and brought him to the city of Uruk... Another source of the Genesis Fall of Man myth is the Akkadian myth of Adapa, found on a tablet at Tell Amarna, Pharaoh Akhenaten's capital... This myth supplies the theme of the Serpent's warning to Eve: that God had deceived her about the properties of the forbidden fruit." ~Robert Graves and Raphael Pat ai, The Fall of Man, pg. 78-79. Hebrew Myths: The Book of Genesis, New York. Doubleday & Company. 1963, 1964. Reprinted 1983 by Greenwich House a division of Arlington House Inc.

BC 1900-Destruction of the cities of Sodom and Gomorrah. The Bible is not explicit about the true reason behind the devastation as the interpretation hinges on the Hebrew word meaning "To know." The term is used 943 times in the Old Testament, and only 15 of these times is it a euphemism for sexual activity.

In the New Testament, the only reference to Sodom is in Luke 10:10, which identifies the sin as unsociability. The story of Sodom and Gomorrah may have nothing to do with sexuality.

BC 1800-The Hittite Empire is written on cuneiform tablets that describe how the Prince Anitta of Kussara conquered the city of Hattushash that he starved into capitulation and then he destroyed the city and cursed it. The "Execration Texts" tell the names of ancient cities and their princes whose names were written on clay figurines or clay pots and then shattered in an attempt to curse or perform some magical blight upon the enemy.

BC 1766-1122-Chinese court priests of the Shang Dynasty prophesy the future via hot poker applied to turtle shells.

BC 1750-The Beaker People take over the ceremonial region now known as Stonehenge that existed from a previous civilization around BC 1900. The stones were placed in a circular manner that we interpret today as a means of following the paths of the moon and stars and in all logical conclusions could determine eclipses. Many of their beliefs find similarities in the later Christian faith and the transformation to Christianity is facilitated by this fact.

BC 1740-1190-The Hittite [Kash] culture believes in many Gods. They attack Babylonia in 1595 B.C.E., and are overthrown in 1225 B.C.E., by Tukulti-Ninurta. There is a mixing of cultures and religious philosophies and their religious beliefs spread, eventually permeating Greek culture. ~Note: Jehovah's Witnesses compute 539 B.C.E., as the correct date for the fall of Babylon. Watch Tower 2-1-55, p. 93-95.

BC 1700-1155-Kassites conquer most of northern Babylonia. A city is built into a country under their rule, but little is known of this group other than they were fierce fighters/warriors.

BC 1670-1570-Hyksos Period: the era when Foreigners ruled Egypt.

BC 1550-The three phases of the early Egyptians beliefs:

1. New born: at dawn
2. Mature: full-grown at 12 noon
3. Old and dying: at the end of the day and back to earth. All three are considered of one Divinity [Trinity]. The Papacy, in some of its Catholic churches, such as, in the monastery of the 'Trinitarians' in Madrid, contains an image of the 'Triune God,' with three heads on one body, a facsimile of the Babylonian 'Triune Divinity,' worshipped in ancient Assyria, whose mystical concepts later migrated to Egypt.

In India, the supreme divinity, in one of the most ancient cave-temples, is represented with three heads on one body, under the name of "Eko Deva Trimurti," "One God, Three Forms."

In Japan, the Buddhists worship their great Divinity, Buddha, with three heads, in the very same form, under the name of "San Pao Fuh." This was the format of Pagan idolatry representing the Triune God, and there is evidence that, at a very early period, an important change had taken place in the Babylonian notions in regard to the 'Divinity,' and that the three entities had come to be, the 'Eternal Father,' the 'Spirit of God' incarnate in a 'Human Mother,' and a 'Divine Son,' the fruit of that incarnation.

The Exalted Christian Savior who is fated to appear before the World's End is from an old synopsis in the Buddhist scriptures known as Kalki Avatara, the "Destroyer of Sin," who will come from Heaven to proclaim Doomsday. Persians replicate him, transforming his designation to "Son of Man," or "Messiah."

BC 1503-1354-The reign of Egyptian Queen Hatshepsut who adopted male dress and wore a false beard to appear manly.

BC 1500 (?) -Hindus believe that after death one is reborn in another body: this can be an animal, human being, mineral [rock], or vegetable. Hindus also develop a "Trinity," Brahman [God Creator], Vishnu [Protector of the Universe] and Shiva [Deity of Good and Evil]. The destruction of the Indus culture is propagated by the Arians who take possession of their lands [1500-1200 B.C.E.]. Arian meaning "Hospitable" or noble while the non-Arians are referred to as "Dasyu" or ungracious.

BC 1450-Space Aliens(?) "During the reign of Pharaoh Thutmose III around 1450 B.C.E., there is a description of multiple 'Circles of fire,' brighter than the Sun, and about 5 metres in size that appeared over multiple days." They finally disappeared after ascending higher in the sky. ~Unidentified Flying Objects: Do You Believe? By S.G.H.A.P.I., <http://www.ruhaunted.com/UFO.html>

BC 1433 (?) 1466 (?) -Monotheism was first born in Egypt with a Amenhotep and then copied by the Israelis in Canaan. Amen believed that there was only one God, and tried to compel all of Egypt to worship his One God concept, which angered the priesthood. When the Pharaoh died [and his young son died, the Famous Tutankhamen] the Egyptians blissfully went back to their old Polytheism, and destroyed most of the Pharaoh's images to his one God, and even abandoned the city he built for his God.

Moses and 'The Exodus,' on the 14th day of the month Nissan, 1433 (?) 1466(?) the Pharaoh, Amenhotep II, changes his mind and in his anger sends forth 200,000 foot soldiers, 600 war chariots, and 50,000 horsemen to bring the Israelites back to Egypt. Judaism also borrowed many of its ideas from Paganism, and Christianity did the same.

Biblical error from Antiquities of the Jews: From Flavius Josephus' original source quoting a time span of 1062.5 years between the Exodus and the Babylonian Exile, which he believed to be recorded in Solar years, Josephus erroneously deducts 115 years [701-586 BCE] instead of 136 years [722-586 BCE], which results in a 947 year calculation for the period 'Exodus to Fall of Samaria,' instead of 914.5 years. Moses flees the enemy of the Hebrews and later commands his people to set up large stones and to spatter them with plaster. ~Deuteronomy 27:2.

There is reason to believe that Moses may indeed have witnessed a burning bush, a bush that burned, but is not consumed. Recent scientific findings reveal that, 'Ball lightning' can act in this manner, a fiery ball of various dimensions, which appears suddenly and vanishes just as mysteriously.

Some say that Moses was a sorcerer because, "Moses was educated in all the learning of the Egyptians, and he was a man of power in words and deeds." ~Acts 7:22, NASB.

Pliny describes Moses as having founded 'A sect of magic' magices factio that, 'Iannes' and 'Totapes' were also members. ~Pliny, Natural History 30.11.

Pliny the Younger, a Roman governor, called Christianity a "Superstition taken to extravagant lengths." ~Pliny to Trajan about the Christians, 111 CE.

Early Christians also viewed Moses as a great magician, having also been educated in Egyptian magic. An ancient amulet found in Acrae on Sicily describes how Moses became phykikos [a magician] after climbing the Sacred Mountain. Moses' magic is considered greater than the court Egyptians as he defeats the Egyptian magic, but it is also considered 'Good' because Moses performs his magic to serve God.

"When Pharaoh speaks to you, saying, 'Work a miracle,' then you shall say to Aaron, 'Take your staff and throw it down before Pharaoh, that it may become a serpent.' So Moses and Aaron came to Pharaoh, and thus they did just as the Lord had commanded and Aaron threw his staff down before Pharaoh and his servants, and it became a serpent. Then Pharaoh also called for the wise men and the sorcerers, and they also, the magicians of Egypt, did the same with their secret arts. For each one threw down his staff and they turned into serpents. But Aaron's staff swallowed up their staffs." ~Exodus 7: 9-12.

Flavius Josephus, a 1st century historian also argues that Moses' acts are superior to the magical arts because they are Divine in Nature. ~Josephus, Antiquitates Judaicae 2.284.

It is this manner of offering that he writes the laws. God tells Moses on the mount that he knows not of the name Yahweh. ~Exodus 6:3, 3:14, Genesis 5:2, 4:26, 32:30. See also Luck, Georg Witches and Sorcerers in Classical Literature. Witchcraft and Magic in Europe: Ancient Greece and Rome. University of Pennsylvania Press (November 1999) ISBN: 0812217055.

The name of God is a not spoken in Hebrew [YHWH, YHVH, YWVH and other similar variations of the Tetragrammaton are aspects of the Godhead].

“What is called the Tetragrammaton, YHVH, appears in the Old Testament 6823 times as the proper name of God as the God of Israel. As such it serves to distinguish him from the Gods of the other nations.” ~Encyclopedia Britannica, vol.iii, pg. 3320.

The Jews deny the Christian Godhood of Yahveh, “The God who is the hero of these [Genesis] stories is not the ‘Supreme Cosmic God,’ the ‘Father of the Lord Jesus Christ,’ in whom we live, and move, and have our being, but the ‘Tribal god of the Hebrews,’ according to their earliest and crudest conception of his character. He is known by two names: ‘Elohim,’ meaning God, in general, and ‘Yaho.’ The latter is a proper name, like Asshur, Moloch, Baal, etc. He is only one God out of many.”

Every nation and people during this era had one or more gods. The Hebrews were forbidden to worship any other god but ‘Yaho.’ “Yaho is generally but less correctly given as Yahveh and Jehovah.” ~From the works of Rev. Charles P. Fagnani, D.D., Professor of Scripture at Union Theological Seminary.

The seven given names of God are: “El, Eloha, Elohim, Yahweh-Tsabbath, Elohim-Tsavvath, Shaddai.” ~Genesis 4:26 & Exodus 6:3. “And neither does he know Adonai. ‘Shadday,’ the ancient name of the Hebrew God, which means ‘To overpower’ and ‘To treat with violence,’ is invoked at the singularly appropriate time in the apprehension of a thief.” ~From The Ten Commandments by Joseph Lewis.

The early transcribers knew what they were doing when they translated the Hebrew Scriptures. Their sole purpose was to enhance their new religion. “To use the word ‘God’ or ‘Lord God,’ instead of ‘Elohim,’ or ‘Yaho,’ is misleading and disastrous. It conceals from the unsuspecting reader that the un-Godlike sayings and doings recorded are those of an imagined, primitive deity, not those of the God of the New Testament.” ~Fagnani, The Beginnings of History according to the Jews, pp. 18-19; Boni, New York, 1925.

The early Christian Fathers are not troubled by the truth so much as spreading their ‘Word,’ and gaining converts. “Transcribers freely added new matter from the same sources on which the original authors had drawn, the traditions of their own locality or sanctuary, variants of historical traditions or legend. Every new copy was thus in some measure a fresh rescension... Scribes compared different copies, and combined their contents according to their own judgment or interests... Of records or monuments there are but a few traces, and these for the most part doubtful.” ~Encyclopedia Britannica, vol. ii, 2075-76.

Old or New Testament “Canonical” and “Apocryphal” literature is created for the gullible, and countless examples of the imaginative process of these early history-writing religious activist abound in all the writings of the ancient, as all who are familiar with such classics as Herodotus, Thucydides, Xenophon, Josephus, Livy, may recall. “But if oxen [and horses] and lions... Could draw with hands and create works of art like those made by men, horses would draw pictures of Gods like horses, and oxen of Gods like oxen... Aethiopians have Gods with snub noses and black hair, Thracians have Gods with gray eyes and red hair.” ~Xenophanes, quoted in Stewart Guthrie, Faces in the Clouds: A New Theory of Religion, New York: Oxford University Press, 1996, p. 179.

This appears to leave the Pagan God ‘Yahveh’ and his pretended ‘Holy Word’ as both a myth and fable. “It will very soon appear most probable, that he [Jesus Christ] was not born at all; but, like Minerva from the head of Jupiter, the fiction sprung from the brains of the early Christian priests.” ~From: The Existence of Christ Disproved, by Irresistible Evidence, in a Series of Letters, From a German Jew, Addressed to Christians of All Denominations.

When Moses asks God his name, God does not answer directly, but states, “I am who I am.” [Ebyeh asber ebyeh whose translation is closest to “Never you mind who I am, or ‘Mind your own business’].

The name of God is Jah-Bul-On-Jah, and is only spoken once a year in the Most Holy of Holies. Jah: from the Sumerian meaning his essence. ‘Bul,’ from the Assyrian, meaning , ‘Lord.’ Or, from the Egyptian meaning ‘Father of All.’ Together they are interpreted as meaning I am and shall be: Lord in Heaven, Father of all.

Therefore, when God states he does not recognize the name he is called, it is not necessarily, because it is not his name but man is not allowed to pronounce his name except in strictest reverence in the Hebrew Tabernacle only once a year within the Holy of Holies. God’s name may be found in Exodus 14:19. containing three verses, which also contain seventy-two Hebrew letters [Shem ha-meforash] Moses is taught all the mysteries and wisdom of the Egyptians [Palmistry (Cheirosophy) & Astrology are included as part of the esoteric arts] The Bible reflects on palmistry in Job ~Job 37:7. It is in Exodus 20:13 that we have God's word regarding Murder. ~See also Leviticus 24:13.

The Scriptural interpretation is delineated in Exodus. The commandment is "Thou shalt not murder!" Why would God help the Israelites kill their enemies and later help them kill the Canaanites if the law is "Thou shalt not kill?" A concept still argued over to this day in most Christian countries, yet, did not stop the Church from murdering or killing its dissenters.

In the Canaanite, culture the serpent [dragon] is seen as a sexual symbol and the phallus is the sign of Ba'al [the bull]. Baal is the god worshipped by those who lost faith in Moses when he stayed too long on Mount Sinai, and doubted his ability to lead the Israelites to the Promised Land during the Exodus. The earliest writings are ascribed to the most important people in the history of Israel as this would give the books more importance and authenticity, such as Moses, Abraham, and Noah.

"Priests of the Goddess discovered, to their advantage, that it was particularly fortunate for women to have commerce with them. Priestesses were not likely to avoid the act of which their Goddess was the presiding genius. Large carvings of the sex-organs stood unblushingly in the temples: until Englishmen and Americans came along in the 19th century." ~From the books of the former benedictine monk, Father J. McCabe's, Rationalist Encyclopedia.

The early priesthood is so pre-occupied with sex that it is written, Noah is ordered to take two of each animal into the ark, "For fear that even beasts should be born of adultery... Even unclean birds were not allowed to enter with two females each." ~On Monogamy, Ante-Nicene Fathers, Ch. iv; p. 62.

"The Fathers of the Church were persuaded that Orpheus was the disciple of Moses. They saw in him a type, or rather a prototype, of Jesus, since he too had come to teach mankind, and had been at once its benefactor and its victim. Emperor Severus Alexander, Roman Emperor 222 - 235 (208 - 235)] placed a statue of Orpheus in his labarum, besides that of the Christian Messiah." ~From: Scriptores Historiae Augustae.

"Between Orphism and Christianity there were, indeed, analogies so evident and so striking that it was impossible to accept them as accidental. A common source of inspiration was assumed.... If on examination we find something of Orphism in every religion, it is because Orphism made use of elements common to them all, drawn from the depths of human nature, and nourished by its most cherished illusions." ~From the Encyclopedia Religion & Orpheus A History of Religions, Salomon Reinach [1858 - 1932], Newly Revised and Enlarged, Tr. Florence Simmonds, Liveight, 1942 (1930) (1909) (1909 Paris).

The scribes in the translations of the ancient writings, to insure accuracy, would count the number of words and letters on each page and in each chapter. The letters would be counted going down as well as across the page, and the totals summed in each book, to insure accuracy of the scribes. Later Christian versions/translations are not so strict in their interpretations and accuracy. In the Akkadian mythologies, BC 2414, we have Sargon [Sharru-kin: the king is legitimate], whose father is a Semite.

At birth he is placed in a reed basket by his mother and set him adrift in the Euphrates River, where he is discovered by a water pourer [the gardener Akki], who takes him home and raises him [does this story sound familiar?] He later falls in love with the goddess Ishtar. The Akkadian kings are known to prefix their names with the sign for divinity, a trait, which is to be carried on throughout history... all Akkadian kings are henceforth descendents of Gods [A practice continued into Europe and all parts of the world]. It was also the custom in primitive times, when an infant's legitimacy was doubted, to throw it into the water. If it floated, that proved its legitimacy; if it sank, it was a bastard. This may have accounted for the original story of why Moses was put in the bulrushes, rather than the legend of Pharaoh's wrath. Moses was the son of Amram, who had married his paternal aunt, which, according to Hebrew law, was an incestuous union. ~From The Ten Commandments by Joseph Lewis.

BC 1433-The Longest Day vs. the Longest Night (?) - Aztec and Mayan civilizations report the Longest Night; the day the sun did not rise under the reign of Titu Yupanqui Pachacuti II. The natives feared it was due to disrespect to the gods and customs. ~Compare this with Joshua 6:20, & 10:12, The Longest Day, half way around the world during a comparable period.

BC 1400-1250 (?) - The walls of Jericho come tumbling down. -Book of Joshua 6:20. The historical significance is that by following the word of God, one will achieve success in one's undertakings. This criteria, will lead to many nations proclaiming that God is on their side when declaring war upon their enemies.

“O Amen, O Amen, who are in Heaven.” ~Egyptian Book of the Dead, cf. the Christian The Lord's Prayer and Psalm 23.

BC 1400-1200-Ugarit Texts describe Asherah [Goddess of Fertility] as the mother of the Gods and consort of Ba'al. Perhaps seldom known, yet of immense significance is the religion of the Canaanites [Ki-in-anim], whose lands are described in Biblical lore that lends itself to our modern Bible translations in the way it is presented in not only language, but also to its poetic prose. ~Numbers 34:1-12.

Asherah is a Pagan Goddess, worshiped by the Philistines and Canaanites. Thus, when we have evidence that Yahweh's wife was Asherah, the Philistine fertility Goddess, we know Israel was not originally monotheistic... With the exception of Greek and Roman Gods, these ancient myths are not taught in public schools. Of course the “Die Hard” Christians will say that, “Satan invented all this to confuse people.” Texts discovered in Ra Shamrah, show a cuneiform alphabet as Phoenician in derivation and Semitic in nature. Discovered in what was once known as the town of Ugarit, now Ra Shamrah, in western Syria, these texts lend credence to the fact that the Hebrews also borrowed from ancient religions.

The Habiru are mentioned in the Legend of Naram-Sin during the Akkadian era [BC 2350-2150] and described in the Tablets of Nuzi as aliens who sell themselves in groups as slaves. They fight as mercenaries with the kings of Larsa, Warad-Sin in 1770-1759 B.C.E. Abraham is described as a Hebrew [Genesis 13, 14] and is described as an Aramaean. ~Genesis 25, 20, 28, 31, Deuteronomy 26-5, and God accepts slavery in Exodus 21:5-6.

BC 1350 (?) -1362-The “Heretic” Pharaoh Akhenaten introduces a strict monotheism [one god concept] that is frowned upon by the priestly class. The Ancient Egyptians had all ready delineated good and evil and the main characters were set in stone, a good world [heaven] and an evil one [underworld]. They also worshipped sacred animals and birds.

Controversy surrounds the gods of the Egyptians when the Pharaoh eliminates all but one. His decision is not popular with the populace either. The Egyptians were monotheists with the lesser gods having some attribute of their primary god. Also known as the Pharaoh Amenhotep IV, husband of Nefertiti, the Pharaoh establishes the Cult of Aton, the Sun God. He moves the capitol to a new city that he has built in the desert, Akhetaton. The Pharaoh renames himself Akhenaton in honor of the God Aton. By overthrowing all the old gods, at one time Amenhotep IV drew the wrath of the priestly craft as well as the populace who later come to know him as the “Heretic to the throne of the Pharaohs.”

It was a matter of too much change at one time. He took away the power and status of the priests and upon his death; all mention of him [inscribed in stone] is removed from the idols and sacred temples of Egypt [His name is removed forever from the eyes of man and God]. After the heresies of Akhenaton/Amenhotep the priests declare the Trilogy of three main gods [three gods in one]: Amen, Ra, and Ptah. Upon his death, his son-in-law [King Tut, Tutankhamen the boy King] moves the capitol back to Thebes. King Tut dies mysteriously at age eighteen, and upon his death he is buried with full honors deserving of a god with his coffin inlaid with gold, skin of the Gods. ~Note: Sigmund Freud concludes, in his 1939 book, Moses and Monotheism, that Moses was not an Israelite but an Egyptian whose teachings derived from Akhenaton's belief in pure monotheism [which he had imposed for apparently impetive economic reasons].

Ptah is the Egyptian archetype of Jahwe, and Imhotep is the first builder to use stone instead of brick and mud, building the city of Memphis, which makes Imhotep an historical prototype of Cain, who is described in the Bible as the first person to build a city. ~Exodus 4:17.

Recent examination of Tut's remains shows a distinct split at the base of the skull. It is now believed that the high priest, who later became Pharaoh, may have murdered the boy king and the queen to gain power and the seat of the pharaoh. His reign [the high priest] however, was short lived.

BC 1301 (?) -1207 (?) - “The Healing Place of the Soul” A magnificent library located inside the palace of Pharaoh Ramses II with many manuscripts from all parts of the known world. Later to be destroyed to protect the teachings of a new faith. With the increased tensions along the delta region, Ramses relocates the capital and names it after himself “City of Ramses.” The Biblical cities Tanis and Avaris are the same... “City of Ramses.”

BC 1300-1000-Veda: ancient Sanskrit [not of human origin] literature of Hinduism. Thirty-three Devas are said to govern the three regions of heaven, earth, and air. The Vedas describe a variety of evil creatures, including the “Asuras” and the “Panis,” who harm people and work against the Hindu gods. God of the Hindus, says, “Of Him whose Glory is so great, there is no image.” ~Veda.

To Pope Pius XII, “I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians.” ~Mahatma Gandhi

He "Illumines all, delights all, whence all proceeded; that by which they live when born, and that to which all must return." ~Veda.

In the "Institutes of Menu," he is characterized as "He whom the mind alone can perceive; whose essence eludes the external organs, who has no visible parts, who exists from eternity... The soul of all beings, whom no being can be comprehend."

BC 1300 (?) -Runes, the casting of stones with markings are used as a means of divination in the Scandinavian countries. Bishop Wulfila in his 4th century Gothic translation of the Bible mentions runes in Mark 4:11.

King James and later Christian versions delete mention of the runes [stones] in their Bibles. King James I said: "No Bishop, no king," but he might as well have said, "No cross, no crown." "The king owned the bodies, and the priest the souls, of men. One lived on taxes, the other on alms. One was a robber, the other a beggar, and each was both." These robbers and beggars controlled two worlds. ~From The Great Infidels, 1881, by Col. Robert Green Ingersoll.

"The Gothic religion, taught the being of a supreme God, Master of the Universe, to whom all things were submissive and obedient." ~Tacit. de Morib. Germ.

The king made laws while the priest made creeds. With bowed backs the people received the burdens of the one, and with wonder's open mouth the dogmas of the other. If any aspired to be free they were crushed by the king, and every priest was a Herod who slaughtered the children of the brain. The king ruled by force, the priest by fear, and both by both.

Herod has his own wife murdered in a fit of jealousy, "His passion also made him stark mad and leaping out of his bed he ran around the palace in a wild manner. His sister Salome took the opportunity also to slander Miriam and to confirm his suspicions about Joseph [Miriam's alleged lover]. Then out of his ungovernable jealousy and rage he commanded both of them to be killed immediately. But as soon as his passion was over he repented of what he had done and as soon as his anger was worn off his affections were kindled again... Indeed, the flame of his desires for her was so hard that he could not think she was dead but he would appear under his disorders to speak to her as if she were still alive..." ~Flavius Josephus.

The king said to the people: "God made you peasants, and he made me king. He made rags and hovels for you, robes and palaces for me. Such is the justice of God."

And the priest said: "God made you ignorant and vile. He made me holy and wise. If you do not obey me, God will punish you here and torment you hereafter. Such is the mercy of God."

"God made the male and female for the propagation of the human race." ~ Saint Irenaeus Against All Heresies, 180 C.E.

Infidels are intellectual discoverers. They sail the unknown seas and find new isles and continents in the infinite realms of thought. He is an intellectual capitalist, and for that reason excites the envy and hatred of the theological pauper. Willing to trust logic to that of blind faith. Especially the blindness which is being created by a superstitious clergy to enrich themselves at the expenditure of the poor masses. Is it necessary that Heaven should borrow its light from the glare of Hell? ~From the works of Robert Green Ingersoll.

BC 1250 - Sex in ancient Egypt was no different from 21st century man: The Ani Papyrus shows the rite of the "Animation of the phallus" appears to be one of the earliest recorded examples of a fellatio. ~Leather History Timeline, <http://www.leatherarchives.org/exhibits/deblase/timeline1.htm>

BC 1225 - Assyrians capture Babylon and there is an assimilation of the Babylonian culture and religious beliefs. The temples are subordinate to the king who often appoints his own children to high positions in the priesthood [a practice later adopted by the Christians]. Cuneiform type of writing is established.

Winged Creatures [Angels?], those having special powers and capabilities first appeared around the 9th century BCE. Assyrians began depicting spiritual creatures [kari-bu] that were half man, half animal. Western civilization would later portray angels [cherubs and seraphim] with wings about the 4th century AD. ~Job 38:4-7, Daniel 7:10, Jude 9, Hebrews 1:14, Revelation 14:6, 22:8, Matthew 9:32, 12:22, 17:15, Timothy 4:1.

Angels are made a part of Christian dogma in AD 325 with the Council of Nice. The Roman winged goddess of victory, Victoria, is also portrayed with wings.

Speaking of the almighty power of King Nimrod, the Bible says, "Forasmuch as this people refuseth the waters of Shiloah that go softly, and rejoice in Rezin and Remaliah's son; now therefore, behold, the Lord bringeth up upon them the waters of the river, strong and mighty, even the king of Assyria, and all his glory; and he shall come up over all his banks. And he shall pass through Judah; he shall overflow and go over; he shall reach even unto the neck; and the stretching out of his wings shall fill the breadth of thy land, O Immanuel." ~Isaiah 7:6-8.

Cyrus the Great, as told by Herodotus, dreamt that he saw the son of one of his princes, who was at the time in a distant province, with two great "Wings on his shoulders, the one of which overshadowed Asia, and the other Europe," from which he immediately concluded that he was organizing rebellion against him. ~The Two Babylons or The Papal Worship Proved To Be The Worship of Nimrod and His Wife, By The Late Rev. Alexander Hislop.

Wings were ancient signs of sovereign power, which may be why some versions of Genesis refer to the birds as being the first created. So utterly idolatrous was the Babylonian recognition of the Divine unity, that 'Jehovah,' the Living Hebrew God, severely condemned His own people for giving any countenance to it: "They that sanctify themselves, and purify themselves in the gardens, after the rites of the 'Only One,' eating swine's flesh, and the abomination, and the mouse, shall be consumed together." ~Isaiah 66:17.

BC 1200 (?)—Descendants of Abraham [Father of a multitude] arrive in Canaan. The Canaanites worship Baal-Habad, the god of storm and fertility. Baal lives with the high god, El. Baal dies and descends to the underworld of Mot, god of death and sterility.

Anat, Baal's lover/sister comes to his rescue. Baal is resurrected and returns to Anat. Beelzebub, a powerful demon, is originally Baal-zebul, god of Ekron. ~See also Biblical references in: 1 Kings 16:31, 18:21, 2 Kings 1:2, 10:18, 10:28, Romans 11:4, Deuteronomy 4:3, Hosea 9:10, and Judges 2:13, Luke 2:15.

The Merneptah Stele, is one of the earliest archaeological accounts of the Jewish people in the Land of Israel, where they further develop their monotheistic religion, Judaism, and enjoy periods of self-determination under the Egyptian Pharaohs.

In Virishna, the sacred Indian God who lived twelve hundred years before Jesus we have the treasured records teaching Virishna was:

- † Born of the Virgin Devaki.
- † Was a spirit [ghost].
- † Ordered killed by Cansa, the ruling entity at that time [as were all the children under two years of age during this period].
- † Angels or spirits attended his birth.
- † He performed Miracles.
- † Was put on a Cross between two thieves.
- † He dies, and is resurrected [arose from the dead].
- † Virishna is known as the Protector of the Universe, guide, and friend of all humankind.
- † Virishna's final appearance will be at the End of the World, marked as Kalki.
- † Tradition has it that Virishna was crucified by being put to death on a cross between two thieves and he descended to the underworld, rose from the dead, and ascended to Heaven in sight of all. Incarnated on several occasions [believed to be from ten to thirty nine times] in times of calamity to save the world.

BC 1140—King Wen pairs the I Ching [Book of Changes] tri-grams to form sixty-four combinations.

BC 1122—Palm reading [Dermatoglyphics] and face reading are popular in China during the Zhou Dynasty.

BC 1027—Beddou, also known as Fot, ancient Chinese God, prevailed over Japan, Ceylon, and China.

One thousand and twenty years before the time of Jesus:

- † Fot is born of a Virgin
- † At birth, a king sought to put him to death orders all male children born during this period to be put to death.
- † He is saved by shepherds and lives in the desert until thirty years of age.
- † He teaches a Doctrine of Truth and performs miracles.

Does any of this sound familiar? The worship of 'The Virgin,' the 'Queen of Heaven,' the 'Great Goddess,' the 'Mother of God,' etc., has become one of the majestic features of the Christian religion. The historical documents record, "These sayings [of Jesus Christ and apostles] consisted of a number of strange parables, and doctrines of our Savior, which the authority of so venerable a person, who had lived with the apostles, imposed on the Church as genuine." ~Bishop Papias, Apostolic Father, in Mist. Eccles. Bk. III, Ch. 39.

And yet, the Holy Church offers little in clarification of what Jesus allegedly said or quoted. The Church will have one believing that Jesus worshiped his mother. Taking the Gospels for the moment as historical, but excluding John, which is a notorious 2nd century romance, Jesus actually detested his mother, and is disliked by her, while his father, Joseph, appears to have died before the time described.

BC 1004-Duke of Zhou adds explanatory texts to existing I Ching hexagrams as a systematic sacred text. "The Book of Changes" is popular as a means of divination and is used to gauge the flow of Yin and Yang energies.

BC 1000-Vedas: Hindu evil spirits. Later Christian teachings will incorporate good and bad spirits. ~Job 1:6-22.

The Devil is later developed from the Greek, Diablos, which means "Slanderous." Kali is the Black Goddess, with omnipotent powers and protector against fear who is appeased only by human sacrifices. The Binderwurs of Central India eat their sick and aged believing that this pleases their God. Kali is believed to be able to watch over her devotees against fear and to give them limitless peace.

"It is wonderful how much time good people spend fighting the Devil. If they would only expend the same amount of energy loving their fellow men, the Devil would die in his own tracks of ennui [boredom]." ~Helen Keller.

As the darkness pervades, devouring all that exists, Kali is depicted as standing on the corpse of Shiva, with the garland of skulls hung around her neck, symbolizing the remains of finite existence.

The Vishnu Purana, Hindu Holy Book, tells of a king who massacres the male children in an attempt to find the Divine Krishna [omnipotence, limitless power, and good and bad are similarities between this and Christianity, and are so striking that later Church Fathers claim that it is the work of the devil to deceive Christians].

In the Rationalist's Manual, M.D. Aletheia said "The idea of redemption from sin by the sufferings and death of a Divine 'Incarnate Savior' was common among the ancients."

He said redemption was "The crowning point of the idea entertained by primitive man, that the gods demanded a sacrifice to atone for sin or avert calamity."

Among the Hindus, whose religion predates Christianity by up to two thousand years, Aletheia states that the concept of redemption and resurrection was prevalent long before Christianity. "Krishna came upon earth to redeem man by his sufferings," Aletheia states.

"He is represented hanging on a cross, the tradition being that he was nailed thereto by an arrow." Long before Christ, Krishna was called the "Lord of Lords" and "The Redeemer," who "Rose from the dead, and ascended bodily into Heaven so that all men saw him..." Where logic, or reason, cannot explain the unfathomable, Christians are asked to have Blind Faith, "It would require higher authority than that of Christ and his biographers to convince any classical scholar that he [Jesus] escaped from the tomb after the Roman guard had been set. That every soldier on the vigil slept at his post is one of the most incredible of the incredible statements we are expected to believe in order to be 'Saved.'" ~W. S. Ross, Did Jesus Christ Rise from the Dead? An Anthology of Atheism and Rationalism, ed. Gordon Stein, Buffalo, NY: Prometheus, 1980, p. 211.

"Krishna, whose history so closely resembles our Lord's [Jesus], was also like him in his being crucified."

This might explain why, when Pope John Paul II arrives to deliver a public mass in New Delhi in November of 1999, he was met with hostility. "It was bad timing..."

Hindu activist Raju told New Delhi reporter Uli Schmetzer, "It's like the Caliph of Mecca coming to visit the Pope in Rome on Christmas Eve." Many Indians see Christianity as "Westernized Hinduism," hence, they saw the Pope as a man who was trying to sell their own religion back to them.

This perception is hardly surprising given that, in "The Historical Jesus and the Mythical Christ," Gerald Massey finds over one hundred similarities between the two Gods.

Kersey Graves in "The World's Sixteen Crucified Saviors," finds over 300 resemblances. Both authors use the more common earlier English spelling of Krishna, "Christna," which reveals the relationship between the Hindu and Christian Gods [Christna predates Christ by at least 1200 years]. Krishna came upon earth to redeem man by his sufferings. He is represented hanging on a cross, the tradition being that he was nailed thereto by an arrow. ~Guignaut, Religion de l'Antiquite.

As well as both Gods being Resurrected Redeemers, Christna was born to the virgin Devaki, or "Divine One." The son of a carpenter, Christna was of royal descent, as was Jesus, and his birth was attended by angels and shepherds. "The pure Virginity of the celestial mother was a tenet of faith for 2,000 years before the Virgin [Mary] now adored was born." ~Dr. Inman, Ancient Faiths, Vol. 1, pg. 159.

The infant Christna also was presented with gold, frankincense and myrrh by wise men. As a child, Christna is allegedly persecuted by a tyrant who orders the slaughter of thousands of infants. As an adult, Christna "Lived poor and loved the poor," hence, he was called the "Shepherd God," "Sin Bearer" and "The Liberator."

He was also called the "Firstborn," the "Universal Word," and the "Beginning and the End," "Alpha and Omega." Christna, like Jesus, was described as omniscient, omnipresent and omnipotent; and proclaimed he was the "Way to the Father."

Just as Christ was baptized in the Jordan, Christna was baptized in the Ganges. Christna's ministry was marked by "Many miracles and wonders." He raised the dead and healed lepers, the deaf and the blind. Christna used parables to teach the people about charity and love.

"Eyewitnesses" claimed Christna was transfigured in front of his disciples; hence, they bestowed upon him the title "Jezeus," meaning "Pure essence."

In some traditions, Christna died on a tree or was crucified between two thieves. He rose from the dead and ascended to Heaven where he is said to return to "Do battle" with the "Prince of Evil" who will "Desolate the earth." Even the Hindu and Catholic priesthoods have much in common, according to the Australian author Peter Bowler in "True Believers."

Both have nunneries and monasteries; both believe celibacy is a virtue; both impose penances; both offer indulgences; and both use beads for religious significance... ~from the works of D. Christie Sinton Amoune.

Hanging on a tree was a common form of punishment. It was frequently called "The accursed tree." If this be true, then is Jesus then accursed by the very words of Holy Scripture?

The Israelite, King Saul demands of David, as a bride-price for his daughter Michal, 100 Philistine foreskins.

"He that is hanged on a tree is accursed of God." ~Deuteronomy 21:22 and Galatians 3:13.

If an artificial scaffold were made, and it was cruciform [formed or arranged in a cross], yet it was still called "A tree." ~see Higgins, Anacalypsis, Vol. 1.

BC 1000-King David looks up between earth and the Heavens for a Sign and sees an Angel of the Lord with a sword stretched out over Jerusalem. ~1 Chronicles 21:16.

This star in the Heavens may have been an occurrence of a comet.

BC 966-The date of Solomon's temple and the Great Jewish Exodus is believed to be 966 B.C.E., and 1446 B.C.E. ~ 1 Kings 6:1. Note: Moses is 80 ½ years at the time of the Exodus, which is quite old in those times.

"Heaven was born of the sky, and nurtured by cunning priests, who made man a coward and a slave. Hell was built by priests, and nurtured by the fears and servile fancies of man during the ages when dungeons of torture were a recognized part of every Government, and when the deity was supposed to be an infinite tyrant, with infinite resources of vengeance ... the devil is an imaginary being, invented by primitive man to account for the existence of evil, and relieve the deity of his responsibility." ~Doane, Bible Myths. God accepts slavery in Exodus 21:5-6.

BC 949-992-King Solomon of Israel builds his famous Temple in Jerusalem, "King Solomon began to build the house of the Lord in Jerusalem, on Mount Mariah, which had been shown to David his father, in the place that David had prepared in the thrashing floor of Ornan the Jebusite. When all the work on the Temple was completed, King Solomon offered a sacrifice of twenty-two thousand oxen, and one hundred and twenty thousand rams: and the king and all the people dedicated the house of God. And Solomon began to build in the second month, in the fourth year of his reign." ~Second Book of Palalipomenon.

King Solomon believes that he has power over the spirits of the Invisible World. This knowledge of power is given to him by an Angel of God and passed down to his son Roboam and called the Clavicle or Key of Solomon. In Jewish myth Solomon acquires a reputation as a magician who employs legions of evil spirits to assist in building of the Temple compelling them to obey by the power of a Magical Ring [1 Kings 8, 4:30, Songs of Solomon] Asmodeus, an evil spirit, angers King Solomon by preying upon one of his wives. The records of Josephus tell of Eleazer, Roman Emperor Vespasian, who was able to drive away the evil spirits by using the alleged magical ring of Solomon along with the use of some herbs.

The Archangel Michael hands Solomon a magical ring to conquer this demon. Preparations for the Temple included 186,000 men with 3,300 overseers, 80,000 hewers and 70,000 laborers. David contributes 108,000 talents of gold and 1,017,000 talents of silver for its construction. Solomon was one of the most impressive of ancient kings of Judea and Israel, with his ocean fleets trading in the Mediterranean and Red seas, his subjects mining gold in what is now Saudi Arabia, and with his wealth he built the great Temple in Jerusalem.

In BC 950, Solomon's household included 700 wives and 300 concubines. Solomon is best remembered in history for his wisdom and is credited with authoring all or part of three books of the Bible [Proverbs, Ecclesiastes, and Songs of Solomon]. Was Solomon guilty of adultery when he indulged in the sexual embrace with more than seven hundred wives and three hundred concubines? Or was Solomon like the Duke of Ferrara [Niccolo D'Este], who had ninety-two illegitimate children, yet made a law that marital infidelity should be punishable by death?

The Church has pawned the illegitimacy of children, as well as the nobility, as being of lesser beings. Leonardo da Vinci, 1452-1515, one of the world's most versatile geniuses, was the illegitimate son of a Florentine lawyer and a mother of humble station. Giovanni Boccaccio, 1313-1375, celebrated Italian writer and scholar, and author of the Decameron, was a love child.

The great Catholic Emperor, Charlemagne, never denied his illegitimacy. Pope Clement VII, an illegitimate son, was Pope from 1524 to 1534, despite the Biblical quotation which said that, "... A bastard shall not enter the congregation of the Lord."

"My son, do not disdain the discipline of the Lord or lose heart when you are punished by him; for the Lord disciplines those whom he loves, and chastises every child whom he accepts. Endure trials for the sake of discipline. God is treating you as children for what child is there whom a parent does not discipline? But if you are without discipline, in which all have shared, you are not sons but bastards." ~ Hebrews 12:5-8.

The Church teaches that, in a spiritual sense, all Christians are brothers of Jesus Christ, but those who do not have the Virgin Mary as their Mother, and those that have the same Father as Jesus, but different Mother, they are bastard brothers or sisters of Jesus Christ! ~Matthew 12:46, 25:40, 28:10, Mark 3:34.

Erasmus, "The man who laid the eggs that Luther hatched," was the son of a Dutch parish priest and his housekeeper servant. Jean d'Alembert, 1717-1783, one of the most brilliant mathematicians and writers of his time, famous for his work on the great French Encyclopedia, was the illegitimate son of an artillery officer and was picked up as an infant on a doorstep in Paris. August Strindberg and Alexander Dumas' films were unlawfully begotten.

Erasmus remains within the Church, and tells the racist, Martin Luther, "I always freely submit my judgment to the decisions of the Church whether I grasp or not the reasons, which she prescribes. Most of the controversy is regarding the following Biblical passage, "And there are three who give testimony in Heaven, the Father, the Word, and the Holy Ghost. And these three are one." ~1 John 5:7,8 King James Version, Catholic Douay-Rheims Version.

But not all believe the assertion of Jesus being three, "Is it not as gross an Absurdity to say, 'The One God of Heaven and Earth, is Three or Four Persons, as to say, 'The One King of Great Britain and Ireland, is Three or Four Persons?' Is not the former altogether as false as the latter?'" ~Edward Elwall, Dagon, 1726. See Exodus 20:3, and 1 Timothy 2:5.

"Erasmus was attacked for not adding the 'Comma Johanneum,' 1 John 5:7,8. He answered that he had not found the words in any Greek manuscript, including several he examined after publishing his editions. However, he unwisely said that he would insert the Comma Johanneum in future editions if a Greek manuscript could be found that contained the spurious passage. Interestingly, one was found, or made, that contained the words." ~Prof. Daniel Wallace.

"The manuscript was made by a Franciscan friar named Froy or Roy, in 1520 A.D. Erasmus kept his word and added the passage in his 3rd edition, but he added a long footnote expressing his suspicion that the manuscript had been prepared just so to confute him." ~from Professor Daniel Wallace.

"Erasmus [16th century] was not the only grave and learned gentleman to hoax the entire world of learning with an uncharacteristic piece of fakery. Carlo Sigonio, later in the 16th century, was the dominant scholar of his day in two or three fields, the reconstruction of the chronology and constitutional history of early Rome, the history of Medieval Italy, and the theory of historiography. A revered teacher and prolific writer, he was especially known for his mastery of Cicero's works and his own ability to write pure Ciceronian prose." ~Forgers and Critics, Creativity and Duplicity in Western Scholarship, Anthony Grafton, Princeton, 1990.

"That all knowledge of the Latin classics comes to us from the Mediaeval copies of them, and they who transcribed them had the opportunity of forging or garbling them. We are simply at their mercy... The existing copies, whenever made, are to us the autographic originals... The numerous religious bodies then existing over the face of Europe had leisure enough, in the course of a century, to compose not only all the classics, but all the Fathers too." ~The Rise of Christendom, Edwin Johnson, 1842-1901.

Abraham Lincoln and Alexander Hamilton were born from men other than those to whom their mothers were married. James Smithson, 1765-1829, is founder of the Smithsonian Institution, which is "Devoted to the increase and diffusion of learning among men," was born in France, the natural son of Hugh Smithson, first Duke of Northumberland, and Mrs. Elizabeth Keate Macie. Booker T. Washington, great Negro educator, and George Washington Carver, Negro scientist whose achievements in the field of food and plant chemistry are acclaimed the world over, did not know who their fathers were.

Bible records show notable instances of illegitimate births. Solomon was a bastard, and his descendant, Jesus, was born from seed, other than his father's, an "Angel" of the Lord commits adultery with Elizabeth, and John the Baptist is born. ~From The Ten Commandments by Joseph Lewis.

BC 950 (?)-In the Judaic laws and history written in the Southern Kingdom, and also the Sumero-Babylonian Goddess Belit-ili, Belili, and the Canaanites we have the first wife of Adam, Lilith. Lilith the She Devil, Lilith the obstinate one, Lilith who is substituted with "Night Monster," being a quarrelsome woman who is against childbirth in the Hebraic version. Lilith, who now portrayed as a Female Demon, propitiates human sacrifice, vengeful, and eventually runs away rather than subordinate herself to the will of Adam.

Unhappy with this quarrelsome woman, this inflexible woman who runs away, Adam talks to God who sends three angels to return her. Many interpretations of the Bible have completely omitted this passage due to its modern interpretations on divorce. ~In the Book of Isaiah, 34:14.

Lilith is supposed to fly during the nocturnal darkness searching for newborn children to kidnap or murder. When she visits men, during the night, she seduces them and propogates demon sons. In the Hebraic version Lilith is created as Adam's conjoined twin [back to back] who demands equality with Adam and refused this she leaves in anger. Muslims sometimes portray Lilith, after leaving Adam, as having slept with Satan creating the demonic Djinns. Middle Eastern herdsmen believed that Adam only married her because he tired of coupling with animals. ~See Deuteronomu 27:21.

Lilith refusing to lie beneath Adam during sexual conjugation would not let Adam subjugate her and runs away. God then sends three angels, sanvi, Sansanvi, and Semangelaf to bring the pariah back to Eden, but the angels are cursed by Lilith who then runs to the Red Sea whereby she becomes a lover to demons and produces 100 babies a day [daughters known as lilim]. ~Genesis 4:11.

God then gives the forlorn Adam a more docile and cooperative partner who we have come to know as Eve.

The Babylonian version of "The Creation" has Marduk who creates "Lulla," the first man. On a tablet from Ur, 2000 B.C., she is called Lillake. The ancient Greeks knew her as Lamiae, Empusae [Forcers-In], or daughters of Hecate. Christians will know her as the Harlot from Hell, or succbi, as the monks would attempt to fend her off by clutching their genitalia in one hand and a crucifix in the other. With the knowledge of the discrepancies in translations, one begins to wonder if the first man was not a "Woman" instead, noting the similarities in the names "Lulla" and "Lilith." ~Cf. Isaiah 51:9, Job 26:12, Psalm 74:13, 89:10, II Esdras 6:52, II Baruch 29:3-8, Jonah 2:1.

Christian Bibles have also removed the name of Lilith for how can they [Christians] espouse "No Divorce," if Adam, the first man, had another wife? Eve [Hawwah-Mother of All Living Things] is a complete contradiction to the first wife who is argumentive and does not want children, Eve being obedient, helpful, and having children.

Was Eve the first sin and not the apple? For her alleged transgression Eve will be also called "The lance of the demon," "The road of iniquity," "The sting of the scorpion," "A daughter of falsehood, the Sentinel of Hell," "The enemy of peace," and "Of the wild beast, the most dangerous," and "You are the Devil's Gateway."

The Church Father, Tertullian tells his female listeners in the early 2nd century that all women were responsible for the death of Christ, "On account of your desert that is, death even the Son of God had to die." ~Tertullian, De Cultu Femininum, Book I Chapter I, Modesty in Apparel Becoming to Women in Memory of the Introduction of Sin Through a Woman in The Ante-Nicene Fathers

In the "Book of Jasher" we have Eve giving birth to two sons, and three daughters, the second son conceived is Seth, which is similar sounding to the Egyptian's Set. ~Genesis 1:12, Genesis 2:1, and Book of Jasher.

In the Middle Ages Lilith, and her daughters, the Lilim, is still dreaded, and the Jews continued to make amulets to protect themselves from visitations from the nocturnal demons who copulated with man in his dreams causing nocturnal emissions. "They who are of the priesthood, or of the clergy, shall not be magicians, enchanters, mathematicians, or astrologers; nor shall they make what are called amulets, which are chains for their own souls. And those who wear such, we command to be cast out of the Church." ~Catholic Church Canon 36.

"Eden as a peaceful rural retreat, where man lives at his ease among wild animals, occurs... I the story of Enkidu... The fervent love between Enkidu and the priestess, though omitted from the Genesis story, has been preserved by a Talmudic scholiast [annotator] who makes Adam wish for death rather than be parted from Eve. Yet the myth of the Fall licenses man to blame woman for all his ills, make her labor for him, exclude her from religious office and refuse her advice on moral problems." ~Robert Graves and Raphael Patai, pp. 80-81, The Fall of Man, Hebrew Myths: The Book of Genesis. New York. Doubleday & Company. 1963, 1964. Reprinted 1983 by Greenwich House a division of Arlington House Inc.

BC 874-853 [?]-King Ahab, King of Israel, allows his wife Jezebel to practice paganism and she in turn brings in priests of Baal. Ahab reigned during the time of the Great Prophet Elijah who is son of and successor to Omri [BC 876-869] King of Israel who chose Samaria to be the capital of Israel in BC 870. ~1 KINGS 16:16, 21-23, 27-29.

Ahab's rule is distinguished by his strong alliance with the Kingdom of Judah and by his successful stand against the Assyrian invaders.

The Prophet Elijah criticizes Jezebel, Ahab's wife, for worshipping the Canaanite god Baal. The Hebrew Prophet also denounces Ahab for idol worshipping and destroys 450 seers of Baal. Ahab is killed in battle and succeeded by his sons Ahaziah and Jehoram, and nine hundred years later, when Jesus is first introduced to his "Cousin," John the Baptist, he is asked if he believes that John is a reincarnation of the Prophet Elijah, but Jesus neither admits nor denies reincarnation at this time. ~Matthew 11:14, 17:11; Elijah is spoken of in I Kings 17 and II Kings 2.

There was an attitude among the people who lived contemporary with Jesus to believe in most anything. It was a naive age, and all leaders of religion had recommended themselves to the public by working miracles and curing diseases. The expected Messiah, in order to stand any chance of success, must therefore work miracles and heal from sickness. The Catholic Church makes fantastic admissions about its New Testament, and when discussing the origin of those writings, blatantly admits, "... The most distinguished body of academic opinion ever assembled." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, Preface.

The Catholic Church admits that the Gospels, "Do not go back to the 1st century of the Christian era." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, Farley ed, vol. vi, p. 137, pp. 655-6.

The Essenes, pretended to effect miracles and extraordinary cures, and Jesus was an Essene. The biographers of Jesus, therefore, not wishing their master to be outdone, made him also a performer of miracles, of which prodigies and wonders the legendary history of Jesus contained in the New Testament is full. Without them Christianity would not have prospered. "The Essenes had various communities in Palestine, with the main center at Qumran on the shores of the Dead Sea. The sensational discovery of numerous scrolls in a cave at Qumran in 1947 made it possible to gain glimpses into a community, which practiced in a way, 'Christianity before Christ.' As is well known, the translation of the material was systematically boycotted and only very recently almost all the Qumran texts have appeared in print. Similarities between the teaching of Jesus and those of the Essenes are obvious..." ~The Jesus Conspiracy: The Turin Shroud and the Truth About the Resurrection by Holger Kersten & Elmer R. Gruber p. 239.

"The Hindu sacred books represent Krishna, their 'Savior' and 'Redeemer,' as in constant strife against the evil spirit, surmounting extraordinary dangers, strewing his way with miracles, raising the dead, healing the sick, restoring the maimed, the deaf, and the blind; everywhere supporting the weak against the strong, the oppressed against the powerful. The people crowded his way and adored him as a god, and these pretended miracles were the evidences of his divinity for centuries before the time of Jesus." ~Doane, Bible Myths.

Buddha performed what appeared to be "Great miracles for the good of mankind, and the legends concerning him are full of the most extravagant prodigies and wonders." "It was by belief in these, that the religion of Buddha was established." ~Bumouf.

Buddhist garments and staffs were supposed to imbibe some mysterious power, and blessed were they who were allowed to touch them. A Buddhist saint, who attained the power called 'Perfection,' was able to rise and float along through the air, his body becoming imponderous. Buddhist annals give accounts of miraculous suspensions in the air.

We are also told that in B.C. 217 nineteen Buddhist missionary priests entered China to propagate their faith, and were imprisoned by the emperor; but that an angel came and opened the prison door and liberated them. The Hindu sage, Vasudeva, Krishna, was liberated from prison in like manner. We may, therefore, easily see where the legends of Peter and his release from prison and the Ascension, came from. ~Acts 5:21-24, Bank of Wisdom, Box 926, Louisville, KY 40201.

But alas, the Buddhists were not immune from corruption either as discovered a few miles from Tokyo was a large and rich monastery of what was understood to be the very strictest sect of Buddhist monks.

"They were so Holy that they closed their doors against the wicked world and wanted to be alone. But in their extensive grounds there was a home for feeble-minded women, tended by the good monks, and a rumor spread in Tokyo that numbers of these unfortunates were just unwanted wives whose husbands paid the monks to take them over. A Tokyo paper organized a raid in 1928, and though the police at once suppressed it, published an amazing story. The Buddhist monastery was a colony of sadists, just as the German Franciscan friars were found to be colonies of sodomists. When the raiders burst in they found the monk-keepers gambling and squabbling with blood-splotted paper money, while the women, half mad or half dead, lay about, mutilated, exhausted, fouled with the monks' excrements. Women were chained even in the temple, and rape, sexual mutilation, and ignominy were but a few of the foul performances that took place." And this is the second greatest "spiritual" religion of our time: the religion over which our idealists and scorners of materialism go into ecstasies!" ~The Fruits Of Romanism, The Catholic Church Does Far More Harm Than Good by Joseph McCabe, Edited by E. Haldeman-Julius.

BC 853-King Ahab dies. "By integrating Biblical data with those derived from Assyrian chronological records, the yr 853 B.C. can be fixed as the year of Ahab's death, and the year 841 as the year Jehu began to reign. The years in which Ahab and Jehu had contacts with Shalmaneser III of Assyria can also be given definite dates [by means of astronomical calculations based on an Assyrian reference to a solar eclipse]. With these fixed points, it is possible to work both forward and backward in the lines of the kings of Israel and Judah to give dates for each king. By the same means it can be determined that the division of the kingdom occurred in 930, that Samaria fell to the Assyrians in 722-21 and that Jerusalem fell to the Babylonians in 586. The synchronistic data correlating the reigns of the kings of Israel and Judah present some knotty problems, which have long been considered nearly insolvable. In more recent times, most of these problems have been resolved in a satisfactory way through recognizing such possibilities as overlapping reigns, co-regencies of sons with fathers, differences in the time of the year in which their reign of a king officially began, and differences in the way a king's first year was reckoned." ~Introduction to 1 Kings, NIVSB, by J. Vannoy, See also, Gleason Archer, pg. 369, Vol., 1., The Expositor's Bible Commentary, Leon Wood, A Survey of Israel's History, Wycliffe Bible Encyclopedia, Vol., 1, pg. 347, Edwin R. BC 850- The Greek Odyssey includes many traces of werewolf beliefs. "To start with the classical references: Apart from the famous legend of Romulus and Remus, saved and fed by a friendly she-wolf, there are many other mythological and religious tales from this area of Europe: Apollo, the famous Greek God of Light, Medicine and Music, was born, together with his twin Artemis, from Zeus and Latona, a woman turned into a she-wolf to be disguised and so protected from the wrath of Era, Zeus' official wife [and sister]. For this reason Apollo was always looked upon as a protector, both from and of the wolves: they were not to be killed if not absolutely necessary."

In ancient Greece, "Wolves are worshiped because of the likeness of their nature to dogs, and because in old times when Isis, with her son Horus, was going to fight against Typhon, Osiris, they say, came from Hades to the aid of his wife and child in the likeness of a wolf. But others say that the Ethiopians, having invaded Egypt, were driven away by a multitude of wolves, and on this account the city is called Lycopolis. The crocodile is said to be worshiped because the robbers from Arabia and Libya are afraid to swim across the Nile on account of the crocodiles, 'They say too that one of their kings, being pursued by his own hounds, took refuge in the marsh, and then was taken up by a crocodile and, strange to say, carried over to the other side.' -Eusebius of Caesarea: Præparatio Evangelica [Preparation for the Gospel], Tr., E.H. Gifford, 1903.

"Then there is the legend of Licao [Greek and almost Italian for hunting dog], the very first renowned werewolf: this man was the king of Arcadia and he knew that, disguised among the wanderers he hosted, Zeus himself was hiding. So he decided to discover, which one was Zeus: he killed his youngest son, Arcade, and prepared a meal with his flesh: only a God would know the taste of human flesh and from this he could tell who the unfortunate meal was. The hungry wanderers wolfed down their meal, but Zeus was so angry for the useless murder that he instantly turned the king himself into a wolf. 'Then another Greek peculiarity was the great number of white, and albino wolves: they were found especially around Hermes' temples, so they were considered sacred to this God, protector of the wandering shepherds and of the cattle, and should never be harmed. Greeks had an excellent relation with wolves, since the population was very scarce and mainly concentrated around the coasts and did not often interfered with wolfish affairs.'" ~The False Gospel In The Stars Preparing The Way Of The Antichrist, <http://watch.pair.com/cancer.html> - pg 965.

"Thus we can see that African colonies went forth and settled in all parts of the world, leaving the proofs in language, myth, and the hieroglyphics, in religious rites. The symbolical customs and ceremonies in far off lands are still extant among races by whom they are no longer read or understood, but which can be read in Egypt." ~Albert Churchward, The Signs and Symbols of Primordial Man, p. 284.

The Romans will not outlaw Child Sacrifices until 146 B.C.E. Carthage is later razed to the ground and rebuilt by order of Caesar and then later captured by the Arabs in 698 C.E. The African congregation will have a marked impact on Christian throughout history, especially by the first black Saint, Augustine. Augustine's misogynist views and acceptance of Pagan Gods [the Sun God], and Augustine's Western Christianity, will give the Church its theological excuse for mass murder and genocide against heretics such as the Gnostics, Arians, Donatists, etc., and strangely enough, Augustine's theology originates from the early Gnostics [Manichaeans].

"In the light of their doctrinal dualism and the intransigence, sometimes amounting to ferocity, with which its spirit was applied, Christians might have been expected to press their differences home with every device and force available. Moreover, if they are measured by their Bishops [and a better yardstick is not easily thought of], close to half the population who called themselves church members toward mid-century must have belonged to some allegiance other than the one that ultimately prevailed: in other words, they were Arian, Donatist, or Meletian. Sectarian rivalry was thus a very real thing, a spur to great exertions. Egypt especially, being split three ways, echoed to the shouts of partisans, the din of violence, and laments for those robbed, stripped naked, flogged, imprisoned, exiled, sent to the quarries and copper mines, conscripted into the army, tortured, decapitated, strangled, or stoned or beaten to death. The express object was to make converts." ~Ramsay MacMullen, Christianizing the Roman Empire, p. 93.

For the first three or four centuries, "The Christian art of this period remained delightfully Pagan. In the catacombs we see the Savior as a beardless youth, like a young Greek God; sometimes represented, like Hermes the guardian of the flocks, bearing a ram or lamb round his neck; sometimes as Orpheus tuning his lute among the wild animals." ~Angels' Wings, by E. Carpenter, p. 104.

In religious history we have numerous numbers of black virgin mothers who have been worshiped. Devaki the Indian Goddess, the Great is Diana of the Ephesian, and Isis the Egyptian, who obviously are portrayed as being black skinned or dark; but the large number of images and paintings of the same kind, yet extant, are in the Italian Roman Churches, and passing for representations of Mary and the infant Jesus. ~Compare this with the dark skinned Jesus in Revelations 1:15, 2:18.

Saint Augustine, an African [black] is most often portrayed in Christian literature with Caucasian physical attributes since blackness is often relegated to evil, wickedness, and inequity. Darkness, or Blackness in literature, and the evil it represents is exemplified by this version of a young woman who had a vision of the horrific devastations of Hell relates what she has seen, "And the Apostle said unto her: 'Relate unto us where thou hast been.'" And she answers, "Dost thou who wast with me and unto whom I was delivered desire to hear?"

"And she began to say: [This description of Hell-torments is largely derived from the Apocalypse of Peter],

“A man took me who was hateful to look upon altogether Black, and his raiment exceedingly foul, and took me away to a place wherein were many pits [chasms], and a great stench and hateful odor issued thence. And he caused me to look into every pit, and I saw in the [first] pit flaming fire, and wheels of fire ran round there, and souls were hanged upon those wheels, and were dashed [broken] against each other; and very great crying and howling was there, and there was none to deliver. And that man said to me: ‘These souls are of thy tribe, and when the number of their days is accomplished [literally in the Days of the Number] they are [were] delivered unto torment and affliction, and then are others brought in their stead, and likewise these into another place. These are they that have reversed the intercourse of male and female.’ And I looked and saw infants heaped one upon another and struggling with each other as they lay on them.’ And he answered and said to me: ‘These are the children of those others, and therefore are they set here for a testimony against them.’” ~Apocalypse of Peter, The Syriac Version omits the clause regarding the children. Quoted in The Acts of Thomas, 3rd Century, from The Apocryphal New Testament, Trans. M. R. James, Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1924. The Apocalypse of Peter is allegedly spoken by Peter himself.

“This work has shewn that Hercules, Mithra, and other Gods, were but personifications of the ‘Sun,’ while, at the same time, it has incontestably proved that the religion and worship of Christ is but a copy of the religion and worship of Mithra, the God Sun of the Persians. Certainly, as noticed in the second number, Augustine, Firmicus [Firmicus Maternus 4th century], Justin [Justin Martyr c. 100 - c. 165], Tertullian [160-220 C. E.], and others, having perceived the exact resemblance between the religion of Christ and the religion of Mithra, did, with an impertinence only to be equaled by its outrageous absurdity, insist that the Devil, jealous and malignant induced the Persians to establish a religion the exact image of Christianity that was to be, for these worthy Saints and sinners of the church could not deny that the worship of Mithra preceded that of Christ, so that, to get out of the ditch, they summoned the Devil to their aid, and with most astonishing assurance, thus accounted for the striking similarity between the Persian and the Christian religion, the worship of Mithra and the worship of Christ; a mode of getting rid of a difficulty at once so stupid and absurd, that it would be almost equally stupid and absurd seriously to refute it.”

“The worship of Christ, and the religion based upon it, is an exact copy, in all its essential features, of the worship of Mithra and the religion of the Magi; if so, is it not morally certain that the Persians did not copy the religion of the Christians, but that the Christians copied the religion of the Persians? The early fathers must have been very reluctant to admit the likeness was so complete; the admission was, however, wrung from them, by facts they were compelled to receive as such, and which could not be explained or argued away by any other than a devilish kind of sophistry.”

“It is, therefore, incontestably proved that Mithra was the original personification of the god Sun—of which Christ is the copy—as it is certain the original must exist before the copy can be made; and Mosheim informs us that ‘Manes’ [also: Mani, 216-276] or Manchaeus, as he is sometimes called by his disciples, by birth a Persian, educated among the Magi, and instructed in all those arts and sciences which the Persians and the other neighbouring nations held in the highest esteem, who had penetrated into the depths of astronomy, in the midst of rural life studied the art of healing, and applied himself to painting and philosophy, that this great genius [continues Mosheim] combined these two systems (that is, the Persian and the Christian system), and applied and accommodated to Jesus Christ the characters and actions, which the Persians attributed to the God Mithra.”

“The comparison instituted by us in our second number, between Mithra and Christ, renders it unnecessary to write another line in order to show that those who worship Christ as a god, are idolators, bowers down to an idol formerly worshipped in Persia under the name of Mithra, and that Manes was right when he accommodated to Christ the character and actions, which the Persians attributed to the God ‘Mithra.’” ~From: The Existence of Christ Disproved, by Irresistible Evidence, in a Series of Letters, From a German Jew, Addressed to Christians of All Denominations, pgs. 202-203.

BC 800-700 (?)-The Phrygian [part of Asia Minor] deity is Cybele, known as the Great Mother of the Gods. She takes for her lover a young and handsome god named Attis. When he proves himself unfaithful to her, the angry goddess has him castrated, and he dies of his injuries, but he later returns to life. The priests of Cybele are castrated, so as to play the role of Attis, and adherents of this religion work themselves into frenzies with drums and cymbals, slashing themselves with knives and rubbing the blood over their bodies.

In his book, "The Golden Bough," Dr James Frazer notes the striking similarities between Jesus and ancient pagan god known as Attis or Atys, "The only begotten son and Savior" of the Phrygians. Like Jesus, Attis is depicted as a man nailed or tied to a tree, at the foot of which was occasionally depicted a lamb. Some accounts said Attis castrated himself beneath the tree, giving rise to a priesthood that practiced either self-castration or enforced celibacy [centuries later Pope Gregory VII, AD 1073-1085, will enforce celibacy on the Roman Catholic clergy]. It is claimed that after Attis was crucified [Or, some say castrated].

Origen's works flourished during the latter part of the 2nd and beginning of the 3rd centuries emphatically declaring that Christ Jesus descended into Hell. ~Origen, Contra Celsus, bk.ii. c. 48.

"Who but an infidel would deny that Christ was in Hell?" ~quoting Saint Chrysostom by Bonwick; Egyptian Belief, p. 46.
"The Lord preached the Gospel to those in Hades, as well as to all in earth, In order that all might believe and be saved, wherever they were. If, then, the Lord descended to Hades for no other end but to preach the Gospel, as He did descend, it was either to preach the Gospel to all, or to the Hebrews only. It accordingly to all, then all who believe shall be saved, although they may be of the Gentiles, on making their profession there." ~Saint Clement of Alexandria, 3rd Century.

All these ancient Pagan Gods predate Christ, who descended into Hell, and many other Gods that might be mentioned remained in Hell for the space of three days and three nights. "They descended into Hell, and on the third day rose again."

"Then presently, all the saints were joined together, hand in hand, and the Lord Jesus laid hold on Adam's hand, and ascended from Hell, and all the saints of God followed him." ~Nicodemus; Apo. Ch. xvi and xix.

"The reason why the 'Christ,' Jesus, has been made to descend into hell, is because it is part of the Universal Mythos, including the 'Three days' duration. The Saviors of mankind had all done so; he must, therefore, do likewise." ~Doane, Bible Myths, p. 213.

Like Jesus and even Mithras, the festival of the "Resurrection of Attis" is celebrated at the time of the Christian Easter. "In point of fact it appears from the testimony of an anonymous Christian, who wrote in the 4th century of our era, that Christians and pagans alike were struck by the remarkable coincidence between the death and resurrection of their respective deities, and that the coincidence formed a theme of bitter controversy between the adherents of the rival religions, the pagans contending that the resurrection of Christ was a spurious imitation of the resurrection of Attis, and the Christians asserting with equal warmth that the resurrection of Attis was a diabolical counterfeit of Christ. In these unseemly bickerings the heathen took what to a superficial observer might seem strong ground by arguing that their god was the older and therefore presumably the original, not the counterfeit, since as a general rule an original is older than its copy." ~Doane, Bible Myths.

The Mithraic Mysteries "Seem to have included a Sacramental meal and a baptism of blood... In the baptism the devotee, crowned with gold and wreathed with fillets, descended into a pit, the mouth of which was covered with a wooden grating. A bull, adorned with garlands of flowers, its forehead glittering with gold leaf, was then driven on to the grating and there stabbed to death with a consecrated spear. Its hot reeking blood poured in torrents through the apertures, and was received with devout eagerness by the worshiper on every part of his person and garments, till he emerged from the pit, drenched, dripping, and scarlet from head to foot, to receive the homage, nay the adoration, of his fellows, as one who had been 'Born Again' to 'Eternal Life,' and had washed away his sins in the blood of the bull." ~Dr. James Frazer.

Being "Born Again" is not derived from Christianity, but from the so-called Pagan savages, "The rite of the second birth is widespread, universal, over half the savage world. With the savage to be twice-born is the rule. By his first birth he comes into the world; by his second he is born into his tribe. At his first birth he belongs to his mother and the women-folk; at his second he becomes a full-fledged man and passes into the society of the warriors of his tribe... These rites are very various, but they all point to one moral, that the former things are passed away and that the new-born man has entered upon a new life. Simplest of all, and most instructive, is the rite practiced by the Kikuyu tribe of British East Africa, who require that every boy, just before circumcision, must be 'Born Again.' The mother stands up with the boy crouching at her feet; she pretends to go through all the labour pains, and the boy on being reborn cries like a babe and is washed." ~Jane Harrison.

Dr. James Frazier admits the Christians confessed that in this point of time, Christ was the junior deity, but they triumphantly demonstrate his real seniority by falling back on the subtlety of Satan, who on so important an occasion had surpassed himself by inverting the usual order of nature. "Taken altogether, the coincidences of the Christian with the heathen festivals are too close and too numerous to be accidental..." Jesus was accused of being a "Necromancer, and a magician, and a deceiver of the people," says the early Christian, Father Justin Martyr. He was said to have been initiated in the magical arts while in the heathen temples of Egypt, and both Jesus, and Horus the 'Egyptian Savior,' aka "Holy Child" are represented on monuments with wands, in the received guise of necromancers, while raising the dead to life.

"There was just reason to suspect that there was some fraud" In the actions of these Yesuans, or primitive Christians, who traveled about from city to city to convert the Pagans; and that, "The strolling wonder-workers, by a dexterity of jugglery, which art, not heaven, had taught them, imposed on the credulity of the pious Fathers, whose strong prejudices and ardent zeal for the interests of Christianity would dispose them to embrace, without examination, whatever seemed to promote so good a cause... The pretended miracles of the primitive Church were all mere fictions, which the pious and zealous Fathers, partly from a weak credulity and partly from reasons of policy, were induced to espouse and propagate for the support of a righteous cause." ~Dr. Middleton, Letters From Rome.

Saint Martyr is a Gentile ex-Pagan of Samaria, turned Christian, and supposed to have suffered martyrdom in the reign of Marcus Aurelius, in whose name he forged a most preposterous rescript. His principal works, in Greek, are his two Apologies, the first addressed to the Emperor Antoninus Pius [whose reply he also forged], the second to "The sacred Senate" of Rome; his Dialogue with Trypho the Jew, and his Hortatory Address to the Greeks. He describes himself and fellow Christian Fathers as "We who formerly used magical arts." ~I Apol. Ch. xiv. Note: We hear of no Jewish martyrdoms or Jewish persecution still we come to the times of the Jewish War, and then chiefly in Palestine!

From the MacMillan Contemporary Dictionary we obtain the definition of Easter, "From Eastre, the Teutonic goddess of the dawn, whose rites were also observed in the spring." The Easter eggs and bunny are pagan fertility symbols. The exact date of birth of Jesus is not given in the New Testament, but it is very unlikely that it happened in the winter, because the shepherds were out in the field at night, Luke 2:8-11, and this was not the custom in the winter, the rainy season.

BC 772-221-Olmecs in Central America developed Astrology and a calendar of 360 days equal one conventional year. 7,200 conventional years equal one baktun. 144,000 days equals one pictun, 2,880,000 days equals 8,000 conventional years.

They also built massive ziggurats with a ceremonial chamber at the apex to be closer to their god. Olmecs invented a game with a ball and a hoop at each end of a court [the precursor to basketball?] The losers in this ball game would pay with their lives. The winners, permitted to run into the crowds, claim any jewelry they can grab.

BC 763-A solar eclipse occurs during the reign of the Assyrian King Ashur-dan III that is calculated to have occurred on 15 June. This astronomical recording makes it possible to compute the eras of ancient kings using computers to back track through history to pinpoint significant events.

BC 730- "Krimon warms the heart of Simias" is one of a number of lines of homosexual graffiti that constitutes the earliest known uses of the Greek alphabet.

BC 721-705-King Sargon II of Assyria exiles the Jews after defeating Shalmaneser V. The Assyrians conquer the House of Israel and its ten Northern tribes which spreads scatters them as far as Nineveh where they repopulate parts now known as Iraq, Afghanistan and Pakistan and Northern Israel is re-populated with the Assyrians own people who speak Aramaic in Assyrian dialect [Aramaic is the language spoken by Jesus]. These scattered tribes are later to be known as the "Lost Tribes of Israel." ~1 Kings 17:1-6.

BC 700-Indra: Verdic god of storms, rain and battle, born of a virgin in Tibet.

Hesoid, an impressive poet, writes the Theogony, 1022 lines, on of the origins of the Greek Gods, and on Works and Days, 828 lines, of affable advice for the working man

BC 679-Aristeas of Proconnesus, Jewish mystic, poet, is said to have the capabilities and powers to leave his body and to fly while in this state of transition. Mentioned in the writings of Pliny, Maximus of Tyre, and Herodotus. He is the composer of the poem, "Arimaspea" that tells how he becomes possessed by Apollo and journeys to the Issedonians and encounters mythical griffins [winged lions]. Aristeas is the name taken by an anonymous Jew who allegedly invented a tale, which has had inestimable sway upon the Christian faith and its early dogmas.

This devout Israelite [supposedly about 200 B.C.E.] had the captivating choice to compose religious forgeries, and forged a letter in the name of one Aristeas, a supposed high ranking official of the mighty Pharaoh, Ptolemy II, Philadelphus, the Greek king of Egypt, 285-247 B.C.E., purporting to address to his brother, Philocrates, an awe-inspiring history of the Jewish Translations into a sacred Hebrew/Gentile tongue that will satisfy the virtuous wonder-craving Jewish mind.

Earlier Rabbis are alleged to have translated the whole of the 'Law' [Books of Moses], the 'Prophets,' and the 'Writings,' but their failure to explain the numerous corruptions and adulterations made to the Sacred texts as they were translated into Greek [Koine Greek, which is the conversational language of the common man], by the Greek-Jews of Alexandria later leads to a cognitive dissonance among the religiously astute. The Greek Pharaoh, Ptolemy, had recently established a famous library at Alexandria, Egypt, which he purposed should contain a copy of every obtainable literary work extant. This famous Library became the most extensive and celebrated library of the ancient world, containing some 700,000 manuscript books at the time it was savagely destroyed, in 391 C.E., by the benighted zealous Christians and vehemence of Bishop Theophilus of Alexandria and his fanatical monks of Nitria, as related in Kingsley's Hypatia or any history of the times. ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. xiv, pg. 625.

Few Christians understand the purpose of destroying such great literary works, but their devastation is deemed necessary for the good of the Church to preserve its tenets of original thought, Divinity, and godliness of their Savior, Messiah, Jesus. Too much familiarity with Pagan texts will lead the fellowship to question their Christian dogmas.

"The Egyptians were the first who asserted the doctrine that the soul of man is immortal." ~Herodotus, from: Alexandria: A History and a Guide, E.M. Forster [1879 - 1970], Anchor Books, 1961.

Herodotus is the first to use the word 'Chrestos,' the meaning of which is applied to both things and persons, meaning 'fated,' someone who is doomed by an oracle, a sacrificial victim, or the 'Word.' ~Read The Gospel According to Thomas, by Raghavan Iyer, 1983.

The name 'Christian' is first invented, by the sneering, mocking Antiochians, as early as 44 C.E., but had not come into general use before their persecutions by Emperor Nero, occurring in the New Testament only three times, and only then with a negative connotation, the Christians being despised and detested for their atrocities and crimes. ~Acts 11:26, 4:16, 26:28, See also the works of Canon Farrar.

"People who believe absurdities commit atrocities." ~Voltaire.

Regarding the Trinity, Tertullian declares, "Credo quia incredibilis est" – "I believe because it is unbelievable;" and, like Paul's, "I am become a fool in glorying," he vaunts thus his own folly: "Other matters for shame I find none which can prove me to be shameless in a good sense, and foolish in a happy one, by my own contempt for shame. The Son of God was crucified; I am not ashamed [to believe it] because men must needs be ashamed of it. And the Son of God died; it is by all means to be believed, because it is absurd. And He was buried and rose again; the fact is certain because it is impossible.”

“Tertullian was born in Carthage somewhere about 160 C.E. He was a Pagan, and he abandoned himself to the lascivious life of his city until about his 35th year, when he became a Christian.... To him is ascribed the sublime confession: 'Credo quia absurdum est' [I believe because it is absurd]. This does not altogether accord with historical fact, for he merely said, 'And the Son of God died, which is immediately credible because it is absurd. And buried he rose again, which is certain because it is impossible.' Thanks to the acuteness of his mind, he saw through the poverty of philosophical and Gnostic knowledge, and contemptuously rejected it.” ~Carl Gustav Jung, Psychological Types; Tertullian was one of the founders of the Catholic Church.

“The New Testament clearly presents Christ as God. The names applied to Christ in the New Testament are such that they could properly be applied only to One who was God. For example, Jesus is called God in the phrase, 'Looking for the blessed hope and the appearing of the Glory of our great God and Savior, Christ Jesus' [Titus 2:13; compare John 1:1; Hebrews 1:8; Romans 9:5; 1 John 5:20,21].” ~Josh McDowell, More Than a Carpenter, Living Books, Tyndale House Publishers, Wheaton, 1973, page 11.

For milleniums the the Christian Church has claimed that the Jews killed Jesus, but in the early 21st century, Pope Benedict XVI will declare that the Jews were not responsible for Jesus' death, which appears to contradict, writings to the faithful in Thessalonica, whereby Paul says concerning the Jews, “Who both killed the Lord Jesus, and their own prophets, and chased us out and please not God, and are hostile to all men, forbidding us to speak to the Gentiles that they may be saved, to the filling up of their sins continually,” Paul says of them, “But the wrath came [aoristicall] upon them to the end.” ~cf. 1 Thessalonians 2:16.

Jesus was never crucified. ~The Holy Koran 4:157.

The Jews did not kill Jesus, nor did they crucify him. ~Mark's Gospel 16:9-20, which describes Jesus' actions after the Resurrection, but do not appear in the two oldest and most reliable Christian manuscripts and some uncertainty is also on the Resurrection story.

“So the work entitled 'The Apocalypse of the Apostle Paul,' Though rejected by the ancients, is still esteemed by most of the monks. Some persons affirm that the book was found during this reign [i.e., of Theodosius] by Divine Revelation, in a marble box, buried beneath the soil, in the house of Paul, at Tarsus, in Cilicia. I have been informed that this report is false, by a presbyter of Tarsus, a man of very advanced age, as is indicated by his gray hairs.” ~Sozomen, Hist. Ecl., vii, 19, after speaking of the Apocalypse of Peter.

Why? Because, the Jews chased the surviving Apostles out of Judea, by which they barely escaped the terrible calamities that were about to fall upon Jerusalem, where they generally resided. ~Acts 8:1.

The Greeks already had their own Gods, their own 'Trinity,' and their own 'Logos.' “But the Greeks speak of Him as the Logos, more befittingly than we do as the word, or speech: for Logos signifies both speech and reason inasmuch as He is both the speech and reason of God. ... Zeno represents the 'Logos' as the arranger of the established order of things, and the framer of the universe. ... For it is the spirit of God which he named the soul of Jupiter. For Trismegistus, who by some means or other searched into a lmost all truth, often describes the excellence and majesty of the Word.” ~Lactantius Div. Inst. IV, viii-ix; Ante-Nicene Fathers, vol. vii, 106-7.

There can be no mistake that the Christ was and is founded upon the Pagan Myth, as the old Greek “Logos” of Heraclitus and the ancient philosophers who gave it a face-lift and declared it 'Inspired' by the Greek priest who wrote the first chapter of the “Gospel according to Saint John” and worked his way up into the “Incarnate Son” of the old Hebrew God for the consumption of the religiously famished Christians as the most sacred Article of Christian Faith.

The most Holy Saint John expounds upon the old faiths declaring, “In the Beginning was the Logos, and the Logos was with God, and the Logos was God. The same was in the beginning with God. All things were made by him and without him was not anything made that was made.” ~John 1:1-3.

The doctrine of the Logos was a Pagan invention of the Greek philosopher Heraclitus, who lived 535-475 years before Christ, and had never heard of Christ. From the word the science of Logic takes its name; and on it the first principle of Stoicism and the Christian doctrine of “The Word” are based. “The Word, 'Logos' [Greek: Logos; Lat. Verbum] is the term by which Christian theology in the Greek language designates the Word of God, the Second Person of the Blessed Trinity. Before Saint John had consecrated this term by adopting it, the Greeks and the Jews had used it to express religious conceptions, which, under divers titles, have exercised a certain influence on Christian theology... It was in Heraclitus that the theory of the Logos appears for the first time, and it is doubtless for this reason that, first among the Greek philosophers, Heraclitus was regarded by Saint Justin [Apology, I, 46] as a Christian before Christ. ... It reappears in the writings of the Stoics, and it is especially by them that this theory is developed. God, according to them, 'did not make the world as an artisan does his work -- [although Genesis 2 says he did] but it is by wholly penetrating an matter that He is the Demiurge of the universe.' He penetrates the world 'As honey does the honeycomb.' " ~Tertullian, Adv. Hemogenem, 44.

In the Beginning, the Gods created the Heaven and earth, "Bereshith bara elohim," etc., "In-beginning created [the] Gods [the] Heavens and [the] earth." ~Genesis 1:1. Note: The plural Elohim is used 2570 times, but is always [falsely] translated to the singular God in Christian literature, thus falsely making us believe that this text was written at a time when the Hebrew people were monotheistic.

"This 'Logos' is at the same time a force and a law... Conformably to their exegetical habit, the Stoics made of the different gods personifications of the 'Logos,' e.g. of Zeus and above all of Hermes. ... In the [Apocryphal] Book of Wisdom this personification is more directly implied, and a parallel is established between Wisdom and the Word. In Palestinian Robbinism the Word [Memra] is very often mentioned... It is the Memra of Jehovah, which lives, speaks, and acts... Philo's problem was of the philosophical order; God and man are infinitely distant from each other; and it is necessary to establish between them the relations of action and of prayer; the Logos is here the intermediary... Throughout so many diverse [Pagan and Jewish] concepts may be recognized a fundamental doctrine: the Logos is an intermediary between God and the world; through it God created the world and governs it; through it also men know God and pray to Him... The term 'Logos' is found only in the Johannine writings... This resemblance [to the notion in the Book of Wisdom] suggests the way by which the doctrine of the Logos entered into Christian theology." ~From the Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 9, pgs. 328-9, Note: Paul spoke not of knowing God but of being known by God ~1 Corinthians 8:3; Galatians 4:9.

There is nothing new under the sun as the Logos is entered into Christian theology. It was definitely not created by Christian theologians nor the Church Fathers, nor was it ever 'Inspired,' as declared by some Christian groups. In the admittedly forged 'Book of Wisdom,' which is none the less continues to be part of the 'Inspired' Canon of the Roman Catholic Bible [Douay-Rheims], the 'Pagan Demiurge' becomes, 'Divine Wisdom' and "Paralleled" with, "The Word" of the Hebrew God, and "Is the Memra of Jahveh, which lives, speaks, acts."

The Jewish philosopher Philo evolved it into "An intermediary [Mediator] between God and the world, through which God created the world."

This Pagan notion reverberates as, "There is one mediator between God and men, the man, Christ Jesus." ~1 Timothy 2:5, Forgery in Christianity by Joseph Wheless, 1930, from the Bank of Wisdom, www.bankofwisdom.com.

The Church will condemn and put to death those who do not accept this Holy Doctrine declared by the Vicars of Christ and blasphemy laws of England and later a number of Colonial American States will decree imprisonment for ridiculing the 'Most Holy Mystery of Christian Faith.'

Father Lactantius pursues the incontestable Pagan "Proofs" through his seven Books, and so attempts to vindicate the truth and Divinity of Christianity. The eminent Doctor Lactantius concludes with his strange turning away from that which was unclear to the Pagan Emperor, assuring him of the overthrow now of all error, and the triumph of the new Catholic Truth, a new history that will supercede all others, "But all fictions have now been hushed, Most Holy Emperor, since the time when the great God raised thee up for the restoration of the house of justice, and for the protection of the human race... Since the truth now comes forth from obscurity, and is brought into light!" ~Lactantius Div. Inst VII, xxvi; p. 131.

One technique was perfected by prostitutes, which considerably increased the pleasure of their partners and was also contraceptive. Lucretius' description of prostitutes twisting themselves during coitus [De rer. nat. 4.1269-1275] was reverberated by the Babylonian Talmud. ~Ketuboth 37a: Rabbi Jose is of the opinion that a woman who prostitutes herself turns round to prevent conception!

"Truly religion is the cultivation of the truth, but superstition is that which is false... But because the worshippers of the Gods imagine themselves to be religious, though they are superstitious, they are neither able to distinguish religion from superstition, nor to express the meaning of the names." ~Father Lactantius Div. Inst. IV, xxviii; p. 131.

BC 669-627-Ashurbanipal, King of Assyria [from Egypt to Persia] amasses a great collection of writings. At a library in Nineveh are discovered 25,000 tablets, which are alleged to contain symbols of secret magical texts in the language of Shumer [BC 2900]. Ashurbanipal claims to have read and understood the texts learning from them the "Magic of Ancient Knowledge," known but to a few. "I understand the mysterious words in the stone carvings from the days before the Flood," he declares.

BC 664-610-Psamtik I, Psammetichos, King of Egypt during the 26th Dynasty, nurtures two of his children without hearing any spoken languages in the hope of them developing a godlike language. It is rumored that when they did speak, they spoke Phrygian, an ancient Asia Minor language.

BC 640-558-Solon, Greek lawgiver writes of a great civilization that existed long, long ago which was handed down to him from an Egyptian priest who claims to have Athenian ancestry. Legends of a lost continent and race of people existing centuries ago and the place referred to is generally thought of as The Lost City of Atlantis.

The first documented accounts of Atlantis, which is said to have been swallowed up by the ocean as the result of an earthquake, appear in "Timaeus" and "Critias," two dialogues by the Greek philosopher Plato. According to his account in "Timaeus," the lost island is described to the Athenian statesman, Solon, by an Egyptian priest.

The priest asserted that Atlantis was larger than Asia Minor and Libya combined. The priest revealed to Solon that a prosperous civilization had reputedly centered on Atlantis about the 10th millennium BC, and that the country had conquered all the Mediterranean peoples, except the Athenians. In his work "Critias," Plato records the history of Atlantis and depicts the nation as Utopian [the perfect civilization]. Speculation as to Plato's descriptive material and history are rampant, but the possibility exists that he may have had access to other documents that did not survive. Ancient Greek mythology, in a poem by Pindar, tells of a King De Calion who is saved from a Great Flood caused by the God Zeus.

"No country or people who are slaves to dogma and dogmatic mentality can progress." ~Jawaharlal Nehru, Indian statesman, 1889-1964, Key Ideas in Human Thought. The Christian God accepts slavery in Exodus 21:5-6.

When it is discovered, that "Zeus the Savior," is only a title of Dionysus, the "Sin-Bearing Bacchus," his character, as "The Savior," appears in quite a different historical light. Bacchus is the patron of the 'Heavenly Host,' and of fire worship, who is canonized by Rome; few realizing that this "Saint Bacchus the Martyr" is the identical 'Bacchus of the Pagans, 'The 'god of drunkenness and debauchery,' is evident from the time of his festival; for October the 7th follows soon after the end of the vintage.

The word "Host," which is used in the Catholic Mass for the bread and wine on the Altar, supposedly representing the transubstantiated body and blood of Christ, is from the Latin "Hostia," which is the dictionary interpretation, "An animal slain in sacrifice, a sin-offering."

The old Pagan Romans celebrating what was called the "Rustic Festival" of Bacchus; and about that time, so does the Catholic festival of "Saint Bacchus the Martyr" occur. As the Chaldean god is also admitted into the Roman calendar under the name of Bacchus, so also is he canonized under his other name, that of Dionysus. He is said to have been born of a virgin on December 25th, was a traveling teacher who is said to have performed miracles such as turning water into wine, he was referred to as the "King of Kings," "God's Only Begotten Son," "Twice Born," "Young Man of the Tree," "The Alpha and Omega," and many others, the riding of a donkey with followers waving branches about was commonplace for Gods and Royalty at the time, and upon his death, he is said to have been Resurrected.

The Vicars of Christ in their excess of zeal for saints and saint-worship, actually split 'Dionysus Eleuthereus' into two, making two saints out of the double name of the one Pagan Divinity; and the innocent epithet "Rusticum," which, even among the heathens, had no pretensions to Divinity at all, forms a third; and on date of October the 9th, we read this entry in the Roman calendar: "The festival of Saint Dionysius, and of his companions, Saint Eleuther and Saint Rustic."

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

In Egypt, the Chaldean God esteemed as the great object of love and adoration, as the God through whom "Goodness and truth were revealed to mankind," he is regarded as the predestined heir of all things; and, on the day of his birth, it was believed that a voice was heard to proclaim, "The Lord of all the earth is born," and in this character he is styled "King of Kings," and Lord of lords," it being as a professed representative of this hero-god that the celebrated Sesostris caused this very title to be added to his name on the monuments which he erected to perpetuate the fame of his victories.

Not only is he honored as the great "World King," he is regarded as 'Lord of the Invisible World,' and "Judge of the dead," and it was taught that, in the world of spirits, all must appear before his dread tribunal to have their destiny assigned them.

In addition, in the Greek mythologies we have the Cyclops [a one eyed giant] who salubriously devours his victims [cannibalism]. The Greeks believed the sun was a chariot driven across the sky by the sun god Helios. The Oracle at Delphi lived in a temple on the southern slope of Mount Parnassus. It was customary to bring gifts to the Oracle for assistance in foretelling the future. It is rumored that Emperor Nero stole five hundred of the statues donated to the Oracle.

Pagan temples were not meeting houses in which the people merely sat or stood in rows with long faces chanting doggerel or listening to some priest pontificate on some virtue. They were also art museums, built to honor the gods, such as: Zeus and Aphrodite, of Apollo and Athene. In four or five centuries they had "Inspired" a wonderful artwork. Writers of the Gospels are inspired to say that the Apostles said various quotations, which they never did. It was quite common in those days to say so and so says.

In a century or two sculptures, paintings, and architecture had made more progress than the more ancient world had made in 3,000 years, and it was accumulated in the temples for the people to admire and enjoy. From about 390 to 420 most of these went up in smolder fires.

Priests and monks, with the new Catholic powers that the Bishops had inveigled from the emperors, led mobs to attack and destroy that which they did not understand, and all over the Greek world there was such a holocaust of art as never before.

BC 628-551- Buddha rejects many of the significant aspects of the Hindu philosophy, challenging the authority of the priesthood, denying the validity of the Vedic scriptures, and rejecting the sacrificial cults based on these premises. He revealed to his members, of all castes, that denying a person's spiritual worth is a not a matter of birth.

Buddha refers in his writings to Zoroasterism, believers in one god [monotheism]. This could place this religion to as much as 6,000 years older than previously thought. The Bible of the Zoroastrians is the Gathas. The religion is still practiced in parts of Iran and India today as Parsiism. The Muslims refer to the Zoroasters as Gabars [infidels].

Fire is also seen as a divine or sacred element and the worship of fire has its fullest development in ancient Persia [Iran], where the ceremonial keeping of the flame was the chief attribute of the Zoroastrian religion whereby mankind is believed to be washed of his sins by the purifying fires.

- † Zoroaster, like Jesus, he is conceived by a 15-year old virgin.
- † Zoroaster is born in a cave like Jesus, which is later altered to manger.
- † Zoroaster ascends into Heaven, like Jesus.
- † Fire is believed to be the earthly manifestation of the "Divine," and the "Heavenly light."
- † The term for "Priest" in the Zoroastrian scriptures is Athravan, "Belonging to the fire."
- † Zoroaster becomes known as the P' Logos."
- † The conquest of Persia by the Muslims is denoted by the extinction of the "Holy Flame" in the Persian temples, and when the Zoroastrians fled as religious cast outs from their native land to India, the sacred fire they carried with them was a sign of their nationality and of their faith in their god.
- † Zoroaster, Persian, founded a monotheistic cult, which believed in one and only one God.
- † The Magi who sought the child Jesus are believed to be of Persian origin and followers of Zoroasteism.

- † Penance is an effort not to sin again.
- † Sins may be erased through Confession.
- † The winter solstice [December 25th] is also celebrated as the birthday of the Unconquerable Sun [Sol Invictus, the Saturnalia being celebrated between the 17th and 23rd of December].
- † Zoroaster held that good and evil co-existed but could be avoided and overpowered.

The basic tents of Zoroasterism are simple: Good Thought, Good Word, Good Deed. In AD 224, this religion is declared the official religion of the Sassanid Empire and its members increased during the 3rd to 7th centuries. Ormazd is the King of Light and Ahriman the Prince of Darkness [Darkness is portrayed as the evil world and lightness as the good]. The spiritual creation would live for three thousand years followed by that of material creation. At forty-two years of age, Zarathustra, converts king Vishtaspa. By 75 B.C.E., this religion is the predominant religion of the Roman legionnaires.

Reading Genesis we find that the Creation is described twice, and the creation of mankind also depicted in two versions. The two creation myths in the Bible were written relatively late, and not by Moses and many Christians are led to believe. The first version was written last, which was written somewhere around 600 B.C.E., and the later version, written first, probably at the time of the Kings of Israel, which is not too long after the hiatus from Egypt. ~Forrester-Brown 1974:6, Genesis.

Celsus, 170 C.E., using Greek logic, wonders about the most impractical things, which as the distribution of the Creation of the World over definite days, before days existed; for, as the Heaven was not yet created, nor the foundation of the earth yet laid, nor the sun yet revolving, how could there be days?

The similarities between this religion and Christianity facilitate the spread of Christendom. The third period is that of the Evil One who would dominate before the coming of the revelation. The last period is the Day of Judgment. Zoroaster has a vision of the Supreme Being, Ahura Mazda, and the "Holy Spirit," who preaches the Gospel of a God who overcomes evil. This concept of the "Supreme Being" having many aspects, Ahura Mazda, is later combined into one being, that of "Holy Spirit" and "The Wise Lord." The Zoroastrian world is divided into the "Followers of Truth" and "Followers of the Lie."

The similarities do not end here, for we also have: All evil will be exterminated on earth by fire and molten metal. Zoroaster [Zarathustra in the Old Iranian] founded a religion that claimed the need for hatred of unworthy things. [Thereby, discovering Evil]. "Christianity was new religion and Jesus was a new God. I don't think you can point out this God or that God and say, ah ha! Jesus! However, what that culture believed were the attributes of a God were applied to Jesus. Jesus is more a product of what that particular culture believed what a God should be than he is a facsimile of any other God. 'O the stale old dogs who pretend to guard the morals of the masses, how smelly they make the great back-yard wetting after everyone that passes.'" ~The Young and Their Moral Guardians quoted in How Does Christians Explain The Similarities Between Jesus' Life and Pagan Gods That Existed Before Him? <http://au.answers.yahoo.com/question/index?qid=20080414142317AAOZBvj>

The Gathas [Sacred Scriptures] known as Avesta, which is said to have been written in gold ink on 12,000 ox hides, are alleged to have been destroyed by Alexander the Great in 330, B.C.E. Zoroasterians followers believe in the "Resurrection of the dead, the Last Judgment, and Everlasting Life in Paradise [Paradise is a Persian word]. At death, each person is to be judged at the "Bridge of Discrimination."

The Disciple Paul says, that some Christians do not believe in the Resurrection of the dead. It was, however, generally believed by many Pagans, and it is useless now to ask how the belief arose. ~1 Corinthians 15:12.

Like many other Pagan myths, Resurrection is but a fairy tale; and we will clearly see the growth of it from 50 to 120 C.E., by the Universal Church as its flights of the imagination spread throughout the Roman Empire. Luminous rays emanating from the soul occasionally Divinely penetrating the body, which is then of itself raised above the earth, and this is also said of Zoroaster.

"The disciples of Jamblichus asserted that they had often witnessed the same miracle in the case of their master, who, when he prayed was raised to the height of ten cubits from the earth. The greatest miracle which Rome pretends to work, is when, by the repetition of five magic words, she professes to bring down the body, blood, soul, and Divinity of our Lord Jesus Christ from Heaven, to make Him really and corporeally present in the sacrament of the altar. The Chaldean priests pretended, by their magic spells, in like manner, to bring down their Divinities into their statues, so that their 'Real

"Followers of the Truth" will cross over to paradise. "Followers of the Lie" will fall into Hell. The Persians believed in a Day of Judgment, when God, their one great god, Ahura Mazda, would destroy the earth, summon before him the souls of all men who had ever lived, reward the good and punish the living. It is from Persia that certain sects of the Jews, and Christ and the early Christians, borrowed this idea of "The coming of the Kingdom of Heaven."

In spite of the glosses of preachers and Divines, educated Christians recite with some hesitation the words of the Apostles' Creed: "He, Christ, descended into Hell."

This intriguing clause, of what is called the simplest expression of the Christian faith, is based chiefly upon the alleged words of Peter in Acts 2:31 that, "His soul was not left in hell." Hades in the Greek text corresponding to the Hebrew Sheol, and upon the statement in 1 Peter 3:18, that Christ after death preached to "The spirits in prison."

Here is the earliest inventions of the forever burning Christian Hell of fire and brimstone for eternal torture, "The wicked shall go down into the Sheol of darkness and fire and dwell there forever;" this being "One of the earliest mentions of Sheol as a Hell of torment." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. i, 602-3; Encyclopedia Britannica, vol. i, 223-5.

This descent into Hades is accepted literally, by the earliest Fathers of the Church, Irenaeus, Clement, Tertullian, etc., and later incorporated in the Creed. Later the same Latin word, infernum, is used to render both Hades and Gehenna, the latter being the Hebrew abode of the demons. Saints Peter, and John, are described to be "Anthropoi Agrammatoi Kai Idiotai," or "Unlearned and ignorant men." ~Acts 4:13.

The Christian Church would like the masses to remain dull-witted and ignorant, "There is on earth among all dangers no more dangerous thing than a richly endowed and adroit reason... Reason must be deluded, blinded, and destroyed." ~Martin Luther, 16th century, quoted by Walter Kaufmann, The Faith of a Heretic, Garden city, N.Y., Doubleday, 1963, p. 75.

What does this mean? It means that the followers of Jesus were illiterate, therefore could not have written the Gospels. They couldn't read or write Hebrew, much less [Koine] Greek, which was the language of the sophisticated population.

All Twelve of the Apostles are of the same type, chosen from among the humblest of men and the most superstitious of the Galilee peasants, fishermen, and laborers, allegedly being "Called" personally, by the Son of God, the proclaimed soon to be King of the Jews. The 'Chosen ones' are to be His counselors and associates in the establishment of the earthly and heavenly Kingdoms of Jews. ~Note: Being Chosen to represent God is not in the Bible.

God sends His son from Galilee along with a band of pacifist disciples also called "Galileans." The confusion is not God's. It is the attempt of the Gentile Bishops to cover up the truth that Jesus was a Galilean, a zealot, a rebel [Did Jesus not intervene with the death of Lazarus, a known zealot?]

Judas the Galilean: Judas Galilaeus, a scribe, protests against the harsh Roman rule, and taxation; aiming to be a Messianic King, Judas placed the Jews at the head of the world, and his followers accepted that he was the long awaited Jewish Messiah. Judas set up his base at Sephoris, just three miles from the supposed village of Nazareth. An inspiring public speaker, he attracted vast numbers to his standard because of the popularity of his doctrines. Josephus in his book, Antiquities of the Jews, describes the philosophy founded by Judas the Galilean as the fourth sect of Jewish philosophy but does not give it a name, merely saying it accepted Pharisaic notions and that its sectaries accepted the slogan, "We have no Lord but only God." ~cf. Matthew 4:10.

The city called Nazareth did not exist when Jesus [Yahu or Yeho] was born. Jesus is crucified, and above his head a notice saying, "Jesus of Nazareth the King of the Jews." But, according to the Greek translation, the New Testament notice actually read, "Jesus the Nazarene the King of the Jews." Jesus' brother, James the Just is known from ancient sources to have been a lifelong Nazirite, John the Baptist, and Saint Paul also took the Nazirite vow on occasions for reasons of penitence. ~Acts 18:18, 21:18-27, 24:17-18, Numbers 6:1-21, Judges 13:5.

Judas was also the leader of a popular revolt in the "Days of the Taxing," when Roman rule was declared Law in Judaea in 6 C.E., and after the banishment of Archelaus, Quirinius, the legate of the Roman province of Syria, which included Judaea, a census was called to assess the population for taxes. Since the followers of Judas believed the only master of the Jews was God, and it was improper to pay taxes to a Gentile; it was improper to acknowledge false Gods, the Emperors were claiming Divinity. Furthermore the Law of Moses forbade not only foreign rulers, it also forbade numbering the people, and for some hard line Jews, this was the final straw, which led to rioting. ~Josephus Antiquities of the Jews, Whiston 18:1:1..

“Son of God,” in the Bible is not limited to Jesus. ~See Genesis 6:2 and Job 1:6.

The Catholic Church's Second Vatican Council's Ecumenical conduit breaking Nostra aetate [Declaration on the Relationship of the Church to Non-Christian Religions] clearly renounces any basis in Scripture for regarding Jews as “Renounced or cursed by God,” but precedes that claim with the bold statement, “The [Catholic] Church is the new people of God.”

Because Christ is the Divine title of Jesus the Christian God, people are inclined to assume it has always been a Divine title. It has not. The Jewish Messiah was a Savior Prince. ~C. F. Dupuis in France, Origine de tous les Cultes, 1795, F. Nork in Germany, Biblische Mythologie, 1842, Richard Taylor in England, The Devil's Pulpit, 1830, were among the first, in modern times, to put forward this perspective.

“The chronology of the birth of Christ and the subsequent Biblical events is most uncertain.” ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 7, 419.

Jesus is even regarded as insane and his relatives seek to restrain him by force, if necessary. ~Mark 3:21; cf. John 10:20.

“If the Lord were from other than the Father, how could He rightly take bread, which is of the same creation as our own, and confess it to be His Body and affirm that the mixture in the cup is His Blood? When, therefore, the mixed cup and the baked bread receives the Word of God and becomes the Eucharist, the Body of Christ, and from these the substance of our flesh is increased and supported, how can they say that the flesh is not capable of receiving the gift of God, which is nourished by the Body and Blood of the Lord, and is in fact a member of Him?” ~Saint Irenaeus, Against Heresies, 189 A.D.

It is Saint Irenaeus who notices the name ‘Teitan,’ or ‘Titans,’ who were often called the ‘Elder Gods,’ supreme rulers of the universe, being of enormous size, and incredibly strength, contained the Mystic number 666, and believed that ‘Teitan’ was “By far the most probable name” of the beast from the sea. ~Revelation 14:9, 19:20, 20:4.

Historically it will be found, that while ‘Saturn’ was the name of the visible head, ‘Teitan’ was the name of the invisible head of the beast. Teitan is the Chaldean form of ‘Sheitan,’ the name by which ‘Satan’ has been called from time immemorial by the Devil worshippers of Kurdistan; and from Armenia or Kurdistan, this Devil-worship embodied in the Chaldean Mysteries traveled westward to Asia Minor, and thence to Etruria and Rome. ‘Teitan’ was known by the classic nations of antiquity to be ‘Satan,’ or the ‘Spirit of Wickedness,’ and originator of moral evil.

The history of ‘Teitan’ and his brethren, is given in Homer and Hesiod, two of the earliest earliest Greek writers, although later legends are co-mingled, show quite evidently the exact counterpart of the Scriptural account of Satan and his angels. Homer says, that all the “Gods of Tartarus,” or Hell, “Were called Teitans.”

Hesiod also tells us how these Teitans, or “Gods of Hell,” came to have their dwelling there. The leader of the Teitans commits a particular act of wickedness against his father, the ‘Supreme God of Heaven,’ with the approval of the others of the “Sons of Heaven,” that father “Called them all by an opprobrious name, Teitans,” pronounces a curse upon them, and then, in consequence of that curse, they are “Cast down to Hell,” and “Bound in chains of darkness” into the eternal abyss.

Catholics accordingly accept the gloss of Saint Thomas Aquinas, that Christ did not go into the infected company of the damned sinners, but into, “That part of Hell,” a sort of never-never land for exiles from heaven, where there is no fire or Devil, and where the company consists of innocent children and blameless souls who are excluded from Heaven just because they inherited the guilt of Eve's terrible sin, and were never baptized [what of those who lived before the dogma of baptism was invented?]

Aquinas adds that Christ could not take them with him to Heaven, so inescapable is the penalty of their inherited sin. This repulsive farrago of the Scholastic “Genius” is still taught in Catholic seminaries, Hurter's “Theologia Dogmatica,” II, 519-21; and Protestants, who are debarred from such consolation, regard the descent into hell as a mystery or reject it, though it has the same authority as the witnesses they quote for the Resurrection.

To Pope Pius XII, “I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians.” ~Mahatma Gandhi

The supposed prophecy of Jesus, Matthew 12:40, that he would spend three days "In the heart of the earth," and the few other references, show that the early Christians, in borrowing the story of the Resurrection [regeneration] from contemporary cults, Attis, Adonis, Isis, Horus, Cybele, etc., found it intimately connected with a descent into the underworld, and rather lamely took this over. Jesus, pronounced in Hebrew Yezua, was a very common name.

"I am the light of the world... I am the way, the truth and the life." ~The Egyptian God, Horus, Book of Vivifying the Soul Forever, 3000 B.C.E. (?)

The Jesus of the New Testament is, to a large extent, a personification of the Sun God and Savior, Bacchus, the Phoenician Ies, identical with the Hindu Krishna or Christna, the Persian Mithra, the Egyptian Horus, and other Sun Gods. After the captivity the name was interchanged with Joshua or Yahoshua, the successor of Moses; and in the Greek it is Yesous or Jason.

In the Authorized Biblical Versions it is rendered Jesus. ~Acts 7:45, Hebrews 4:8.

But in the Revised Versions it is rendered Joshua, the "Same word rendered Jeshua." ~Nehemiah 8:17.

In Scripture, he is known as Tammuz and is commonly known among historical writers under the name of Bacchus, that is, "The Lamented one." ~Ezekiel 8:14.

To the ordinary reader the name of Bacchus suggests nothing more than revelry and drunkenness, but it is now well known, that amid all the abominations that attended his orgies, their grand design was professedly "The purification of souls," and that from the guild and defilement of sin. This lamented one, exhibited and adored as a little child in his mother's arms, seems, in point of fact, to have been the husband of Semiramis, whose name, Ninus, by which he is commonly known in classical history, literally signified "The Son."

~The Two Babylons by The Late Rev. Alexander Hislop

A three days' interval between the commemoration of the death and that of the resurrection of the god is familiar to the ancient religions. This was a necessary foreshortening in ritual of the third of the year during which the Vegetation-God had to remain below the earth.

The adoption of this descent into the underworld between death and resurrection lends legitimacy that the founders or compilers of the Legend of Jesus took the material from the popular cults of their time. It shows also that they were superstitious men of weak intellect, for the story as it was told about Attis, Osiris, Persephone, etc., was quite logical in its primitive way, it is altogether inconsistent when applied to Jesus. "Be of good cheer, O Neophytes of the new-arisen God [Osiris], for to us too from our pains shall come Salvation."

Jackson, in Christianity Before Christ, p. 96, cites a Professor Hocart as saying the following, "Osiris, after his death, became a King in the Underworld... And from his dead body his successor, Horus, is conceived. But every dead king is Osiris and every living king Horus. Thus Osiris and Horus are really the same, Horus being the living form of Osiris, an Osiris the dead form of Horus. There is thus a succession of men who are killed, become Gods, and are succeeded by their posthumous sons..." ~A.M. Hocart, Social Origins, London, Watts and Co., 1954, pp. 79-82.

"I and my Father are one." ~cf. John 10:30, KJV.

To the Christian, or the Jew who is passing into that phase, the Underworld is a place of sin and torment; Attis and Persephone had been regarded by their worshippers as beings compacted of spirit and body, to say nothing of their divine and human natures.

The Christian "Hell" affords a useful insight into the confused making of the new religion, and we hardly wonder that it was a stumbling block to the educated Greeks and Romans. ~from the works of J. McCabe, Rationalists Encyclopedia. The Catholic Church, upon discovering the attributes and the striking similarities between the beliefs of the Zoroastrians and the early Christians, as well as other so-called Pagan religions, stated that it is a trick of the devil to deceive them.

Religious leaders tell Christians that the devil put certain writings into the beliefs of other people to deceive them and the early Christians believed that ancient records were doctored or forged to mislead them and have them renounce their leaders. The writings on the pyramids had not yet been translated to prove the early Christian Fathers were lying. The Three Wise Men were Zoroastrians. ~Matthew 2:1. On lying. See Matthew 23:16-23.

R. S. Mead in his Fragments of a Faith Forgotten.

The Halo that one sees in many religious paintings is an early Persian ornamentation [adopted by the Egyptians] that appears in later Christian, Chinese, and Indian and Buddhist art. The Halo decorates such alleged luminaries as Pope Saint Victor I, friend of the most brazen concubine in the harem of the debauched Emperor Commodus, Collistus, ex-slave and, imprisoned for theft, and a corrupter of the Church.

Saint Damasus got elected by his credulous followers, after murdering 150 of those of his fellow rivals; he is in an acknowledged forger of lies and myths, and the only Pope, 366-384, who was indicted by the civil authorities for adultery, which charges were dropped when the Emperor intervened. ~The Christian God orders adultery, II Samuel 12:11.

Damasus is rebuked by the whole Church for his foul arrogance and was on peculiarly good terms with the Emperor's passionate concubine. Little can be said of Catholic art, which was inspired by theft or pagan temples, and in the medieval era by such luminaries as Paolo Veronese, who was dragged before the Inquisition for the irreverence of his art, or Filippo Lippi, a loose friar who seduced a nun and co-habitated with her for years with her while he painted beautiful religious pictures. ~See La Decadence de l'art Sacre (1931), by A. Cingria [a Catholic]. It is enough to translate the title, The decadence of Sacred Art. Note: Saint Jerome was secretary to Damasus, who died in 384 C.E.

The man that came into the Bishopric of Rome, as a thief and a robber, over the dead bodies of hundreds of his opponents, could not hesitate as to the selection he should make regarding the direction of the 'New Faith.' History shows that Pope Damasus had acted in character, that, in assuming the Pagan title of Pontifex Maximus [Pontifex Maximus, with tribunician power and imperium superseding all others], he had set himself at whatever sacrifice of truth to justify his claims to that title in the eyes of the Pagans, and as their legitimate representative of a long line of Pagan Pontiffs.

The title of Pontifex Maximus also makes the Emperor the chief administrator of all religious affairs, granting him the power to conduct all religious ceremonies, consecrate religious temples, control the Roman calendar [powers to add or remove days as desirable], appoint the Vestal Virgins and some Flamens, lead the Collegium Pontificum, and recapitulate the dogma of the Roman religion.

In the 8th century B.C.E., a vestal virgin, named Rhea Silvia, finds herself pregnant. But she got pregnant through no fault of her own, she was raped by the God Mars! A recognizable story that predates the Christian account by some 800 years, a woman who has physical relationship with a God, 'Ergo est,' she remains a Virgin, yet gives birth [Silvia Rhea gave birth to twins; Romulus and Remus].

The Romans practiced Emperor Worship, and Julius Caesar undergoes an acquisition of numerous titles, with investment in the Republican offices of consul four times, dictator five times, appointed dictator in perpetuity [dictator perpetuo] in 45 B.C.E., and had attained the title of "Pontifex Maximus" for several decades, being handsomely prepared for his future deification; he did not gain these positions without the majority of a vote by the people nor senate, which will later lead to jealousy, suspicion, and resentment, and eventually, his assassination in 44 B.C.E., after Celopatra convinces him that he is a god, and Caesar has coins struck in his image [Give unto Caesar that, which is Caesar's].

"Under Roman Law... Christians were liable to suffer penalties imposed by Roman law just because they were Christians, Christian apologists continued to protest that they were innocent of any crime but their protests went unheeded... Those who voiced such protests were told that they might easily prove their loyalty to the [Roman] Empire by worshiping the state Gods, and in particular by burning incense to the Emperor's image or swearing by his Divinity... The Christians refusal to countenance such claims, and the language in which they ascribed Divine honor to Jesus, could easily be given the appearance of sedition. Of all the provinces of the Roman Empire, there was none in which Emperor-worship was more thoroughly organized than in Asia. In the Asian city of Pergamum the cult of Rome and Augustus was established as early as 29 B.C.E. Some think that John had this cult in mind when he described Pergamum as the place 'Where Satan's throne is' [Revelation 2: 13], although others think of the cult of Asklepios, the Healing-God with his serpent-image, which was also located there. At any rate, in addition to the other forms of Paganism with which Christians in the province of Asia had to live, there was this specially seductive form. Coolness towards the imperial cult might be put down to lack of patriotism. We remember how Paul had friends among the Asiarchs of Ephesus, who warned him not to enter the theater when the riotous demonstration was being held in defense of the great Goddess Artemis against her traducers. But it was from the Asiarchs, the leading men in the cities of the province of Asia, that the high priesthood of the imperial cult was recruited, and the Asian aristocracy thought it an honor to serve in this way. The temptation must at times have been strong for Christians to compromise just a little, to avoid giving their pagan neighbors the impression that they did not appreciate the blessings of peace and prosperity, which the institution of the Empire had brought to that part of the world. But the majority would not compromise, and to them the imperial cult proved a deadly enemy." ~F.F. Bruce The Defense of the Gospel, Revised Ed., England Inter Varsity Press, 1982, p. 67.

It is evident also that Caesar, and his successors are accepted in light of that Divine character by the Pagans, who, in flocking to the Roman Church, and rallying around the new Pontiff, changed neither their creed nor worship, but bring both into the Church along with them. Many feel that the Catholic Pope is only fulfilling Scripture. ~Daniel 11:36.

A statue is dedicated to Caesar in the temple of Quirinus in 45 B.C., with the words "To the Invincible God." Before his death, Caesar even had his own temple under the name "Jupiter Julius;" which is the first step in establishing a religious cult; by honoring a living hero according to the Greek tradition, thus becoming, Divi filius, or Son of a God.

The second step in the great cult of Caesar is taken with his official apotheosis [elevation to divine status] after his death. As a dead hero, Caesar is conveyed to the number of the gods, and the senate and people officially declare him a god, and during the celebration in honor of the Divus Julius the appearance of a comet is taken as divine proof that his soul has been received into the number of the great immortals.

The very people most devoted to "The worship of the strange God," which is introduced into the Christian Church, are victimized by ingratitude and self-interest by those who would conspire to promote the new doctrines, and Jovinian, and all who resisted the newly adopted Christian Pagan ideas and Pagan practices, are excommunicated and persecuted. "To the angel of the church in Ephesus write: These are the words of him who holds the seven stars in his right hand, who walks among the seven golden lamp-stands..." ~Messafe to the Goddess, Ephesus, Revelation 2:1-7.

Only those who were heartily attached to the new apostacy are favored and advanced, and such men are sent from Rome in all directions, to restore the reign of Paganism, being magnified with high titles, the conquered heathen lands being divided among them, and all to promote "The gain" of the Holy Catholic, the Romish See, to bring in "Peter's Pence" from the ends of the earth to the Roman Pontiff.

Pope Saint Boniface I, AD 418-422, fought his way to the throne; Pope Saint Zosimus I, AD 417-418, whom some historians think as bad as Saint Damasus, Saint Symmachus, repeatedly accused of adultery, AD 498-514, and Hormisdas, whose son, Saint Silvarius, succeeded to the Papacy, all are portrayed with halos. The Church, moreover, gives the first 30 Popes their halo on the ground that most of them earned the immortal crown of martyrdom, whereas, even the Catholic experts on the martyrs like Duchesne, Delehaye, Ehrhard, etc., admit that only one Pope ever died for his faith.

The Persian Zend Avesta says that Ahriman threw the Universe into disorder by raising an army against Ormuzd, and, after fighting against him for ninety days, was at length vanquished by Hanover, the Divine Word. The account of the war in Heaven is similar to that held by nearly every nation. The Christian account is given in Revelation 11:7, and in the Apocryphal book of Nicodemus; it is to be found in the Talmud and in the Hindu "Aitareya-brahmana," written seven or eight centuries before the Christ. The Egyptians' legend told of a revolt against the great Sun God Ra. ~from the works of M.D. Aletheia, The Rationalist's Manual, Bank of Wisdom, Box 926, Louisville, KY 40201.

The apocryphal "Gospel of Nicodemus" also gives an account of the descent of Jesus into hell, of his rising again on the third day, and ascending, in company with numerous saints and the first man, Adam, into heaven; and of the attempt of Satan and the Prince of Hell to close the gates of hell against him; when, in a voice of thunder, accompanied by the rushing of winds, is heard: "Lift up ye Gates [of Hell], O ye Princes, and be ye lifted up, O ye everlasting gates, and the King of Glory shall come in."

The name 'Apocrypha' was used for ancient religious writings, meaning that such writings were to be read by people from a specific group, because people who were not from this group would not be able to understand them. The meaning of the word itself is: "Mysterious, Hidden, Vague and Difficult." This is the basis of the Roman Church denying its followers the privilege of reading the Bible for centuries.

The Catholic Bible [Douay-Rheims] will modify, and/or delete that which disagrees with the current Catholic Doctrines, sometimes eliminating whole books, such as Ezra I and II, which at one time were part of the Catholic Bible, but fell into disfavor after a few centuries.

The word 'Apocrypha' will reappear in the early ages of Christianity and is used for some of the illegal writings of the Old Testament as well as the New Testament, in particular the writings, which are about revelation concerning the future and the final victory of God's Kingdom. Such writings were believed to be superior and beyond the thinking of ordinary people, books for the elite Christians, or clergy, as late as the Middle Ages, the Bible was often times chained to the pulpit to prevent theft and coming into the hands of the masses.

The religion of Zoroaster, later to expand and be known as Mithraism, is confessed by the Catholic Encyclopedia to be a divinely revealed Monotheism, worshipping 'One God,' and having a 'Divinely Revealed' set of rules by which their followers are controlled, a 'Moral Code' comparable to the Christians', a sacrosanct system claimed by Christians to be a monopoly of the newly founded Hebrew-Christian religion to the exclusion of all heathen systems, thousands of years later.

The confession reads, "The Avesta system may be best defined as Monotheism, modified by a physical and moral dualism, with an ethical system based on a Divinely revealed moral code and human free will." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 2, pg 156.

The Catholic faith, having borrowed heavily from the religious beliefs of the Roman legionnaires, reluctantly declares that Mithraism is praiseworthy, acceptable, but not quite as good as Christianity.

"Mithraism is the highest religious result to which human reason unaided by Revelation, can attain."

BC 621-Ptolemy records a partial eclipse in great detail during the fifth year of King Nabopolassar. So great is the accuracy of details supplied, that modern astronomers know that this occurred on April 22nd, 621 B.C.E., and can date Babylonian Chronology from that fixed point. This precise recording of the planetary positions will not repeat again for thousands of years. ~The Master Chronology of God's People From Adam to Amageddon 6,000yrs

BC 600(?)-Mention is made in Chinese culture of the "I Ching" or "Book of Changes," a form of wisdom and fortune telling. For over three thousand years, philosophers, mystics, politicians, alchemists, scientists, and oracles as well as mathematicians have used the Chinese "I Ching" for inspiration and guidance in their lives. The translations go back further than its 12th century BC renditions by Yi King.

Five hundred and fifty years before Jesus, Confucius states, "If some years were added to my life, I would give fifty to the study of the Yi, and might then escape falling into great errors," and "Respect spiritual beings if there are any, but keep away from them."

Confucius had not the least idea of founding a religion, as is usually said, and the system called Confucianism is a unique case in history of the survival of an ethic without religion. Golden Rule: "Do not to another what you would not want done to yourself; thou hast need of this law alone; it is the foundation of all the rest." And, "Acknowledge thy benefits by return of other benefits, but never avenge injuries." ~Confucian Analects VII, xvi

BC 600-The Persian cult of Mithraism spreads the teachings of monotheism [one god.]. Their leader is Mithras, mythical son of Ahura Mazda, god of Zoroaster. The Christian Churches have suppressed the following information for centuries. “...If Rome had not become Christian, it would have become Mithrasian.” ~D. Jason Copper, Mithras: Mysteries and Initiated Rediscovered.

At one time Mithraism is the semi-official religion of the Romans.

Mithras is known as:

- † The All Knowing God who is the opponent of all evil forces on earth and associated with Astrology and Taurus the bull, which heralds the coming of spring. The blood of the bull was considered as a life force.
- † The Way, the Persian god of light in the Avesta who rides across the sky in a chariot drawn by four horses.
- † The Light
- † This religion included a baptism and sacraments of bread and wine.
- † December 25th also denotes the setting and rising of the sun, which is representative of death and resurrection.
- † His resurrection is celebrated on Easter. Regenerator of Earth, and the Creator of Life.
- † Mithra is known as “God out of a Rock,” and services are held in caves [does this sound like Saint Peter?].
- † The Mithraic celebration of the sun, “God’s Birth,” is celebrated on December 25th, the day he is born in a stable of a virgin.
- † The Sun is “Born Again” on December 25, a Holy Day, and a day of celebration.
- † Members are advanced by degrees [seven, corresponding to the seven known celestial planets] as they learn the mysteries of life. The Apostles were also advanced by degrees.
- † The Mithraic “Taurobolia” was a symbol of a Divine sacrifice and of the saving effect of blood.
- † Paul later says of Jesus, “They drank from that spiritual rock and that rock was Christ.” [I Corinthians 10:4] Identical words found in Mithraic scriptures except the word Mithra is used instead of Christ.
- † He is pictured carrying a lamb on his shoulders.
- † He was born of a Virgin.
- † Sunday [Sun Day] is sacred to them and is known as “The Lord’s Day.”
- † The Mithraic figure Aion is said to represent the keys to the world beyond.
- † Mithra is placed on a rock tomb called “Petra.” After three days, he is removed with celebration, festivities, and joy.
- † Mithra followers believed that there will be a day of Judgment when Non-Believers would perish and believers would live in a Paradise or Heaven.

Later Saint Paul, who is very knowledgeable and well traveled, adopts these teachings and consolidates them into the new religion. “He [Saint Paul] threatens, moreover, the stubborn and forward and denounces them, saying 'Whosoever eats the bread or drinks the cup of the Lord unworthily is guilty of the Body and Blood of the Lord.'” ~1 Corinthians 11:27.

“The Orphic cults in Greece, the Osiris and Isis cult in Egypt, the worship of Attis and Adonis in Syria [of which Palestine is part], the purification and communion ceremonies of Mithraism, all turned about the idea of a secret means of salvation. The God dies and is resurrected; the Virgin Goddess gives birth to a Son; the members of the religious community eat of their God and gain strength from the Sacred Meal.” “The Church Fathers were aware of these similarities, and sought to explain away their resemblances by means of the theory that the Devil had blasphemously imitated Christian rites and doctrines. I may pause to point out that these Pagan rites long antedated the Christian analogies, and therefore the theory loses force.”

“The death and resurrection of a Savior-God was very prevalent in Tarsus, Paul's own city. The Attis Mysteries were celebrated in a season which corresponded to the end of our Lenten season and the beginning of Easter. They were preceded by fasting and began with lamentations; the votaries gathered in sorrow around the bier of the dead divinity; then followed the resurrection; and the risen God gave hope of salvation to the mystic brotherhood; and the whole service closed with the feast of rejoicing, the Hilaria."

~Ray Wood Sellars, The Next Step in Religion: An Essay Toward the Coming Renaissance, New York, The Macmillan Co. 1918, pp. 23-24.

Jesus never wrote a Gospel nor did he ask his disciples to do so. He did, however, allegedly ask them to go to all personages to tell them about the news of salvation, although many never realized they needed it and were living quite comfortable without it. One of the most inveterate forms of imaginative creation on the part of the old Christian historiographers is the development of sayings and whole speeches, which, just as do the narrative fiction writers of today, they place entire paragraphs into the mouths of their fictional personages of whom they were writing, which discourses they often fabricate whole, but always write them in the style and manner of the writer of the epoch in question, and not in those of their ancient subjects.

Thus, the Apostle Paul says, "In the past God spoke to our forefathers through the prophets at many times and in various ways, but in these last days he has spoken to us by His Son, whom he appointed heir of all things and through whom he made the universe." ~Hebrews 1:1-2.

A statement, which very few Jews during his time accepted. The partaking of bread and wine was part of the secret mystery performed by those who had participated in instructions and rituals leading to higher degrees of initiation and the bread and wine represented the Body and Blood of their Savior. Mithras, after slaying the bull as a salvific blood sacrifice, had dined with the 'Sun God,' and this supper became the Mithraic 'Cultic meal,' similar to the terminology of the Christian 'Eucharist'.

Human sacrifices, "It was a custom of the ancients in great crises of danger for the rulers of a city or nation, in order to avert the common ruin, to give up the most beloved of their children for sacrifice as a ransom to the avenging demons; and those who were thus given up were sacrificed with mystic rites. Kronos then, whom the Phoenicians call Elus, who was king of the country and subsequently, after his decease, was deified as the star Saturn, had by a nymph of the country named Anobret an only begotten son, whom they on this account called ledud, the only begotten being still so called among the Phoenicians; and when very great dangers from war had beset the country, he arrayed his son in royal apparel, and prepared an altar, and sacrificed him." -Eusebius of Caesarea: Præparatio Evangelica [Preparation for the Gospel], Tr., E.H. Gifford 1903, Book 1.

Mithrasians' "Last Supper," like the modern Communion or Eucharist, also included wine as a symbol of "Sacrificial Blood," and "Bread in wafers, or small loaves marked with a cross, was used to symbolize flesh."

"According to myth, the miracle of turning water into wine took place for the first time at the marriage of Dionysus and Ariadne. This same miracle is attributed to Jesus at the wedding feast in Cana." ~Freke, and Gandy, The Jesus Mysteries.

Paul's "Belief that he received the myth from the 'Heavenly' Jesus himself has obscured his own role in creating it." ~Hyam Maccoby, Paul and Hellenism.

In essence, what we have is Christianity denouncing the ways of the Jews, who refuse to accept Christ as their Savior, the Pagans, with their multiple similar Gods, and the Greeks, who also have Gods, and ways, similar to Christianity, "Blessed is the one who has never tasted the poison of the wisdom of the Greeks."

~De fide, Corpus scriptorum christianorum orientalium, 154.7; see further S. Brock, From Antagonism to Assimilation: Syrian Attitudes towards Greek Learning, in Syriac Perspectives on Late Antiquity, Variorum Reprints, London: Variorum, 1984), V.19. Cf. Eusebius in Homily, 4.

"It is clear that Philo has composed [Concerning Flaccus] a unified, well-planned drama that moves in a straight line from the opening scene of high promise to the unmarked grave on the lonely isle. And each episode in the story finds a parallel in the Gospel Passion. Crossan had limited himself to three episodes in the account to find Gospel parallels. We can now state that the entire book was used by the Gospel writers to construct their passion narratives." ~cf. Philo, Concerning Flaccus.

"Was any man ever so mad, was any man ever so mad as to take that, which he feeds on for a God?"

~So says Cicero, who himself was a Roman augur and a priest

The host, or consecrated wafer, is proclaimed as the 'Body and Blood' of the 'Prodigious God' of the Catholic Church. The host is enshrined in a box adorned with gold and silver and precious stones, and made manifest as that of "A god" whom even the Pope's Pagan "Fathers knew not," who to this day honors in the very manner that which the terms of the Biblical prediction imply that he would.

Thus, when the Pope was invested with the Pagan title of 'Pontifex,' and set himself to make that title a certainty, he in effect fulfilled the prediction of Daniel recorded more than 900 years before. —Daniel 11:36. It will not be until the 4th century, when the 'Queen of Heaven,' now enshrined as 'Mother Mary,' will begin to be worshipped in the Christian Church, and the "Unbloody Sacrifice" the Eucharist, will be brought in from Africa and become popular. Epiphanius states that the practice of offering and eating it began among the women of Arabia; and at the time it was well known to have been adopted from the Pagans.

The very shape of the 'Unbloody sacrifice' of Rome indicates whence it came, for it is a small thin, round wafer; and on its roundness the Church of Rome lays so much stress. "If, in making the roundness the ring be broken, then must another of his fellow-cakes receive that honor to be made a god, and the crazed or cracked miserable cake, that once was in hope to be made a god, must be given to a baby to play withal." ~John Knox.

The round disk, so frequently displayed in the sacred emblems of Egypt, symbolizes the Sun, and when Osiris, the 'Sun-Divinity,' becomes incarnate, and is born, it is not merely that he should give his life as a sacrifice for men, but that he might also be the life and nourishment of the souls of men.

"...In their hidden character, the enigmas of the Egyptians were very similar to those of the Jews."

"The Clementine Homilies," are considered fictitious heretical books as they show a distinct proclivity to equate Jesus with the sun and the solar year. "No one shall join in prayers with heretics or schismatics." ~Catholic Church Canon 33.

For many years the Church debated and argued over what would be accepted into Church Canon, "The New Testament Canon presents a remarkable analogy to the Canon of the Old Testament. The beginnings of both are obscure... The history of the Canon may be divided into three periods. The first, extending to 170 C.E., includes the era of circulation and gradual collection of the Apostolic Writings. The second is closed in 303 C.E., separating the sacred from other Ecclesiastical writings. The third may be defined by the third Council of Carthage, 397 C.E., in which a catalog of the Books of the Scriptures was formally ratified by conciliar authority. The first is characteristically a period of tradition, the second of speculation, and the third of authority, and we may trace the features of the successive ages in the course of the history of the Canon. But however all this may have been, the complete Canon of the New Testament, as we now have it, was ratified by the third Council of Carthage, 397 C.E., from which time it was generally accepted by the Latin Church [Roman Catholic], some of the books remaining in doubt and disputed." ~McClintock and Strong's Cyclopedia of Biblical and Ecclesiastical Literature.

Many works have been attributed to Clement who was considered a disciple of Saint Peter, "The two chief extant Clementine writings, differing considerably in some respects in doctrine, are both evidently the outcome of a peculiar speculative type of Judaistic Christianity, for which the most characteristic name of Christ was 'The True Prophet.' The framework of both is a narrative purporting to be written by Clement [of Rome] to Saint James, the Lord's brother, describing at the beginning his own conversion and the circumstances of his first acquaintance with Saint Peter, and then a long succession of incidents accompanying Saint Peter's discourses and disputations, leading up to a romantic recognition of Clement's father, mother and two brothers, from whom he had been separated since childhood. The problems discussed under this fictitious guise are with rare exceptions fundamental problems for every age; and, whatever may be thought of the positions maintained, the discussions are hardly ever feeble or trivial. Regarded simply as mirroring the past, few, if any, remains of Christian antiquity present us with so vivid a picture of the working of men's minds under the influence of the new leaven, which had entered into the world." ~Hort, Clementine Recognitions, p. xiv.

Early Christian leaders were surpassed by none when it came time to compose surreptitious writings, "They use certain other books likewise, to wit, the so-called Circuits of Peter, which were written by the hand of Clement, falsifying their contents, though leaving a few genuine things." ~Epiphanius, Haer., XXX, 15.

Who dares claim a Gospel a forgery? Who dares stand up to the Emperor Constantine? Who dares speak out against a deviously deceptive Church? "An elaborately and lavishly appointed new form of historiography is known to have been invented in the 4th century. It deviated from the more traditional forms of history writing in that its content was largely consistent of citations to purported earlier authors, and specifically, their texts and written literature. Like Moses in the bulrushes, it carefully wrapped and swaddled the independently canonical New Testament texts. So far, no one appears to know for sure exactly who the authors of the New Testament literature were, or indeed in which century the texts were first written. The dominant hypothesis is that they were written in the 1st or 2nd centuries, and there appears to be an array of evidence to support this hypothesis." ~Constantine Invented Christianity: A Thesis In The field of Ancient History by P.R.F. Brown.

Although Constantine is worshipped as a semi-God, and his word is law, not everyone agreed with him, "The Son is sprung from things non-existent, or from another substance and not from God, and that there was a time or age when He was not. The Father and the Son are two Gods. To an independent political observer, public opinion about Jesus is not at all positive and orthodox, and reflects a position that he certainly is not to be regarded as coming from God, but rather has sprung from nothing existing. A new God has been invented. The literature of the new God [of Emperor Constantine] is fiction." ~Arius in Hilary of Poitiers' De Synodis; Promoted to Bishop in 350 C.E.

"In the Circuits, then, they adapted the whole to their own views, representing Peter falsely in many ways, as that he was daily baptized for the sake of purification, as these also do; and they say that he likewise abstained from animal food and meat, as they themselves also do." ~cf. Homilies and Recognitions.

The Egyptians adopt many of the Greek Gods and religious ways after their conquest by Alexander the Great, and the 'Sun,' as the 'Son' is, in addition, symbolized by the golden color of "Corn," by the ancient Egyptians, as the 'Sun-Divinity' incarnate, which, according to the sacred oracles of the great Goddess of Egypt state "No mortal hath lifted my veil. The fruit, which I have brought forth is the Sun."

What is more natural then, if this incarnate Divinity is symbolised as the "Bread of God," than that he should be represented as a "Round wafer," to identify him with the Sun? "A plate of silver, in the form of a Sun, is fixed opposite to the 'Sacrament' on the altar; which, with the light of the tapers, makes a most brilliant appearance." ~Hurd.

"And they brake down the altars of Baalim in his presence, and the images [Sun-Images] that were on high above them, he cut down." ~see II Chronicles 34:4.

The early Pauline Church portrays Jesus is a failure because this 'Savior' is compatible with the humble Jesus of the Apostles, leaving intact the spiritual and triumphant 'Christ' of Paul. The faithless Peter and the family of Jesus, which thinks he is insane or possessed are portrayed as failures also.

For the Paulinists, "The Apostle" remained Paul, for them, the truth being drawn from Paul's 'Mystical Union' with Christ, having never met the man, and not from the earthly Jesus as portrayed by Peter. "Dedicated to Truth, yet always mindful that all faith is false, all faith is true truth is the shattered mirrors strewn in myriad bits; while each believes his little bit the whole to own." ~The Kasidah of Haji Abu el-Yezdi, as translated by Sir Richard F. Burton.

Neither Jesus nor the faithless relatives of Jesus threaten Paul's 'Divine Christ' nor Paul's leadership. Historians point out that a number of Greek and Roman writers like "Diodorus, Cicero, Livy, Pausanias, and Strabo" thought that mythic figures such as, "Theseus, Herakles, Odysseus, Minos, Dionysus, Castor, and Pollux..." must have had a historical basis, which was eventually mythologized, the job of the historian being to discard the fictional elements, leaving the biographical core exposed, as Herodotus attempted to do for Herakles [Hercules].

In Mark II, the associates of Jesus, who were illiterate and naive are also rehabilitated. ~Acts 4:13.

Peter replaces Paul as the founder of the new religion, and in Matthew, Jesus says he will build his church upon Peter, and in Luke the Apostles do not desert Jesus at his arrest and death, and by the end of the 1st century the Jesus and Pauline parties had polarized, each defending their own interpretations, the Pauline system of belief of 64 AD differentiating with those of Justin, by 160 CE.

The Apostle, Mark, will reverse the historical process by providing an adequate core for the historical Jesus of Paul. Then, further enhancement to the created mythological figure will be furnished with Mark II, a supplemental to Mark I, producing the current Gospel, which threatened the Paulinists version. Mark's 'Divine Jesus' will now forgive sins, regulate the Sabbath, walk on water, calm the brutal seas, raise the dead, perform various sundry miracles, and predict his own death, to allegedly fulfill God's plan in the Hebrew Scriptures.

Roman witnesses to the historicity of Jesus? Pliny [friend of Suetonius and Tacitus, 55-120] was dragged into the discussion of the "Christ-Myth" at a late stage, merely to enlarge the list of witnesses to the historicity of Jesus, but no one seriously believes that any such evidence is found in his works. In his correspondence with the Emperor Trajan, which is believed to have taken place about the year 113 C.E., and which is occupied with the question how Pliny, as Proconsul of the province of Bithynia in Asia Minor, was to behave in regard to the Christians, he informs the Emperor that the adherents of the sect sing hymns to Christ at daybreak "As if he were a God [quasi deo]." What this proves as regards the historical reality of the man Christ we should be pleased to have rationally explained. ~The Witnesses to the Historicity of Jesus, by Arthur Drews, 1865-1935, Tr. Dr. Joseph McCabe, Watts, 1912. Amc reprint, 1972.

The New Testament subsequently evolved into a copious piece of devious Christian priesthood propaganda, as the Church claims it recorded the intervention of a Divine Jesus Christ into Earthly affairs. However, a spectacular discovery in a remote Egyptian monastery reveals to the world the extent of later falsifications of numerous Christian texts, themselves only an "Assemblage of legendary tales." ~Encyclopédie, Diderot, 1759.

Mark no longer predicts that the baffling Son of Man will come in the future, nor that he himself will become this figure after his death. Now, during his lifetime, Jesus will become the Son of Man. Later, in Matthew and Luke, Jesus is proclaimed 'Divine' even before his Baptism, and the Gospel of John has Jesus "Eternally Divine." ~See The Word was with God, and the Word was God. ~John 1:1.

The priestly symbols were a staff, a ring, a hat, and a hooked sword; members are called brothers, and priests are called "Father." The "Mitre" hats worn by today's Orthodox Bishops were first worn by Mithrasian high priests, as the hat's name, mitre [mitra] suggests. The "Dog collar" worn by today's clergy dates back to the ring or halo associated with another Roman god, Saturnus, whose feast was celebrated on December 25th. Christians took the Mithras' festival, the festival of the "Resurrection of Mithras," and turn it into what would later become Easter.

Without Hell, there would be no need for religion, "Orthodoxy cannot afford to put out the fires of Hell." ~Col. Robert G. Ingersoll.

See how the Christians portray persecution and murdering of the Pagans to convert them, "Speaking from the standpoint of pure history, no one will deny that much in the antecedent and environing aspirations and ideals of Paganism formed, to use the Church phrase, a praeparatio evangelica of high value. 'Christo jam tum venienti, crede, parata via est.' sings the Hymn of Prudentius. The Pagan world 'Saw the road,' Augustine could say, 'From its hill-top.' 'Et ipse Pitaetus Christianus est.' said the Priest of Attis; while, of Heraclitus and the old Philosophers, Justin avers that 'there were Christians before Christ.' Indeed, the earlier apologists for Christianity go far beyond anything we should wish to say, and indeed made difficulties for their successors." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, Vol. XI, p. 393.

The architecture of the Christian Church, from the cavernous interiors to the ceremonial altars are borrowed straight from the Mithraic temples, which were destroyed. The early Christians desecrated the Mithraic Temples, and built their own churches, oftentimes on the same foundations as the old Mithraic Temples. December is a special month for the followers of Mithra and many other religions of this time, for on December 21st and 22nd, the sun, traveling south, reaches its lowest points in the sky, otherwise known as the winter solstice. By December 25th, the sun is returning northward.

Mithraic teachings traveled with Alexander the Great and in 250 C.E., become a major rival to Christianity that had to be eliminated. This cult is also in existence when Pompeii returned to Rome after capturing Jerusalem in BC 63 [Before Christ]. Their celebration of December 25th is the spring equinox [Estra or Easter], the forty days, which are later to become Christian Lent.

Mithra is born at midnight of December 25th the exact moment the year turns from growing obscurity and darkness to that of light. Early Christian Fathers are hard pressed to explain the similarities of Christianity and Mithraism and actually claim that the Christians believed in rebirth and resurrection first which is hard to accept now in light of sequential historical facts.

"Owing to the cult's secrecy, we possess almost no literary evidence about the beliefs of Mithraism. The few texts that do refer to the cult come not from Mithraic devotees themselves, but rather from outsiders such as early Church fathers, who mentioned Mithraism in order to attack it, and Platonic philosophers, who attempted to find support in Mithraic symbolism for their own philosophical ideas.”

 “However, although our literary sources for the ‘Mithraic Mysteries’ are extremely sparse, an abundance of material evidence for the cult exists in the many Mithraic temples and artifacts that archaeologists have found scattered throughout the Roman Empire, from England in the North and West to Palestine in the South and East. The temples, called Mithraea by scholars, were usually built underground in imitation of caves. These subterranean temples were filled with an extremely elaborate iconography: carved reliefs, statues, and paintings, depicting a variety of enigmatic figures and scenes. This iconography is our primary source of knowledge about Mithraic beliefs, but because we do not have any written accounts of its meaning the ideas that it expresses have proven extraordinarily difficult to decipher.” ~from The Cosmic Mysteries of Mithras, by David Ulansey, <http://www.well.com/user/davidu/mithras.html>.

Regarding ancient icons, David Ulansey further states, “The celestial equator was often described in ancient popular literature about the stars. Plato, for example, in his dialogue Timaeus said that when the creator of the universe first formed the cosmos, he shaped its substance in the form of the letter ‘X,’ representing the intersection of the two celestial circles of the Zodiac and the celestial equator. This cross-shaped symbol was often depicted in ancient art to indicate the cosmic sphere. In fact, one of the most famous examples of this motif is a Mithraic stone carving showing the so-called ‘Lion-headed God,’ whose image is often found in Mithraic temples, standing on a globe that is marked with the cross representing the two circles of the Zodiac and the celestial equator. Mithraic temples were built in imitation of caves. But caves are precisely hollows within the rocky earth, which suggests that the rock, from which Mithras is born, is meant to represent the Mithraic cave as seen from the outside. Now as we saw earlier, the ancient author Porphyry records the tradition that the Mithraic cave was intended to be ‘an image of the cosmos.’” ~Ibid.

Miracles are no big thing in ancient times. Jesus is born of a Virgin, while Mithra is born of a rock, “Of course, the hollow cave would have to be an image of the cosmos as seen from the inside, looking out at the enclosing, cave-like sphere of the stars. However, if the cave symbolizes the cosmos as seen from the inside, it follows that the rock out of which Mithras is born must ultimately be a symbol for the cosmos as seen from the outside. This idea is not as abstract as might first appear, for artistic representations of the cosmos as seen from the outside were in fact very common in antiquity. A famous example is the ‘Atlas Farnese’ statue, showing Atlas bearing on his shoulder the cosmic globe, on which are depicted the constellations as they would appear from an imaginary vantage point outside of the Universe... The rock, from which Mithras is born... Represents the Cosmos, which is proven by the snake that entwines it: for this image evokes unmistakably the famous Orphic myth of the snake-entwined ‘Cosmic Egg’ out of which the Universe was formed when the Creator-God Phanes emerged from it at the beginning of time. Indeed, the Mithraists themselves explicitly identified Mithras with Phanes, as we know from an inscription found in Rome and from the iconography of a Mithraic monument located in England.” ~Ibid.

“The birth of Mithras from the rock, therefore, would appear to represent the idea that he is in some sense greater than the cosmos. Capable of moving the entire universe, he cannot be contained within the cosmic sphere, and is therefore depicted in the rock-birth as bursting out of the enclosing cave of the universe, and establishing his presence in the transcendent space beyond the cosmos. This imaginary ‘Place beyond the universe,’ had been described vividly by Plato, several centuries before the origins of Mithraism.

In his dialogue Phaedrus,” BC 247, Plato envisions a journey by a soul to the outermost boundary of the cosmos, and then gives us a glimpse of what the soul would see if for a brief moment it were able to “Look upon the regions without.”

“Of that place beyond the Heavens, none of our earthly poets has yet sung, and none shall sing worthily.” ~Plato

BC 597-538-The concept of Angels as messengers and celestial beings is being developed. Jewish faith is influenced by Babylonian beliefs that show pictorial representation of beings with wings.

The Babylonian priesthood required that women participate in religious sex, "Babylonian custom compels every woman of the land once in her life to sit in the temple of love and have intercourse with some stranger. The men pass and make their choice. It matters not what be the sum of money; the woman will never refuse, for that were a sin, the money being by this act made sacred. After their intercourse she has made herself Holy in the sight of the Goddess and goes away to her home." ~writing of Herodotus, the father of Babylonian history.

In ancient times, women were won over that it was an honor and a privilege to be fertilized by a "Holy man," either a priest or other man connected with the Holy rites, and children resulting from such unions were often called "Children of God," a sobriquet, which no doubt from time to time led to legends of miraculous births!

BC 587-Nebuchadnezzar, Chaldean King, casts out the remaining two tribes of the House of Judah from Southern Israel. BC 586-538-Genesis and Numbers of the Old Testament are formally written down for future generations of Jews. The Jews, being conquered and enslaved by the Babylonians, practice the first true separation of church and state. They do not consider themselves citizens of Babylonia, but of the Jewish faith.

Caesaropapism is the term to be accepted by the Church, which denotes the subordination of the Church to the religious claims of the dominant political power until the advent of Pope Gelasius I in 492 C.E., who will declare the "Two Swords Doctrine" in which the church and state are accepted as co-equals [spiritual and temporal] each supporting the crimes of the other against the masses.

"Out of 182 works accepted for centuries as the genuine writings of Christians during the first 180 years of the present era, only twelve are now contended by theologians to be genuine; 170 forged writings permitted by the alleged 'Guider into all Truth' to have existed for centuries, and believed in by poor, feeble man." ~Julian, Old and New Testament Examined.

A date upon which most historians agree upon, which is a date that is usually uncontroversial is the destruction of the Jerusalem Temple by King Nebuchadnezzar of Babylon in 586 B.C.E. ± 1 year. ~ Ezekiel in 4:1-5.

BC 585-Jeremiah, the Prophet. ~2 Chronicles 36:21, Jeremiah 1:1, Daniel 9:2.

Jeremiah is alleged to have traveled to Ireland bringing with him many meaningful objects from Jerusalem. One item is the exalted "Ark of the Covenant."

The Church, through the centuries, has played down this significant event. The Patriarch Saint of Ireland, falling upon "Saint Patriarch," the Roman Catholics choosing to bestow the honor upon their own Christian missionary who died in the county of Down, on March 17, AD 465, one thousand and fifty years later. Saint Patrick is not the traditional patron of Ireland, but it serves the Roman Catholic Church's purpose.

The "Ark of the Covenant," in J.H. Allen's book, "Judah's Sceptre and Joseph's Birthright," notes that Jeremiah and a princess (daughter of an Eastern king) carried with them the harp, an ark and the stone called "Liafail." This ark allegedly the true "Ark of the Covenant."

Irish history tells that the last place the Ark of the Covenant was seen was in Ireland! "The fact is, Rome began early to covet Ireland. Once they got possession, it was necessary for them to destroy the influence of Jeremiah. This they did, in part, by substituting the name of Saint Patrick in the place of the prophet's; and more, they then set to work to destroy even the old and famous capital city of Tara. In 565 AD, Saint Ruadham, along with a posse of Bishops and chiefs of the South of Ireland, cursed the city, so that neither King nor Queen might ever rule or reign therein again. They forced the government, monarchy, and people to abandon the place. From thence Tara was deserted... ” ~From The Ten Lost Tribes, Rev. Joseph Wild, D.D., 1883, London: Robert Banks, Printer, Racquet Court, Fleet Street, E.C.

Some believe that ancient visitors carried out breeding experiments and produced a phenomenal creature intelligent enough to have the rules of society imparted to it. These bizarre new beings invented agriculture and became the first artists, then created their own warlike civilizations. Sodom and Gomorrah are said to have been destroyed by an ancient atomic bomb, and the Ark of the Covenant is allegedly an electrified transmitter that allows Moses to communicate with the space-astronauts. Von Daniken claims that ancient astronauts, complete with space helmets, were carved on stela at the Mayan city of Copan. ~ Erich von Daniken, Chariots of the Gods, 1968.

Suppression of the truth is pervasive and necessary in attempting to destroy the traditions of the “Tuath de Danan,” of Irish folklore in order to spread the news of Christianity. By sword or by book unbelievers will be converted as written accounts of the Hebrews show how they transplanted their royal lineage and priesthood from Palestine to Ireland, for safe keeping via the Prophet Jeremiah and Barch, but now are lost.

Was the last place the Ark of the Covenant was seen really in Ireland? Catholic Historians reject it as legend, fable and prose. “Irish historians are unanimous that about 580 B.C.E. there arrived in Ulster a notable man, a patriarch or saint, accompanied by an Eastern princess, and a lesser person by the name of Simon Brach, or Barch. This party brought with them several remarkable things about which Ireland's songs and legends cluster; those things were a harp [David's harp], and a wonderful stone, the Stone of Destiny, the Lia Phail, Irish tradition tells us that Jeremiah married the princess Tamar Tephith to Eochaidh, the Heremon, or head king of Ireland, after the latter embraced the worship of the true Jehovah. Jeremiah became the chief figure in Irish history, life and religion.” ~Tracing Our White Ancestors, by Frederick Haberman.

Irish Legends include: “The Wishing Well,” similar to the pit where Joseph was cast down or hidden and his blood soaked pieces of his coat of many colors was taken from him [the kilt is the Irish substitute worn today]. Northern and Western Ireland were once called Scotland [and they also had the kilt of many colors as well].

Irish legend has wishing wells, with small bits of torn clothing placed about the edge. Supposedly brought to Ireland by the Prophet Jeremy [Jeremiah] and his companion Barch, of Palestine. “Sacred Wells,” common in Ireland, based upon Joseph's grandeur in Egypt being brought about by his being put in a pit [Genesis 37:24, in the Septuagint it is a 'Cistern,' and in the Vulgate Bible it is 'Cistern', while the Fenton Version has 'well'].

That the Septuagint is an official Greek translation of the Old Testament, supposedly completed around 250 B.C.E., by seventy-two Jewish scholars, is yet another bold fabrication. The so-called LXX [Septuagint, meaning seventy and not seventy-two] is allegedly a Greek translation of the Old Testament and is much less reliable, especially when it comes to the historical recording of numbers in the text. It adds one hundred years to most every patriarch from Adam to Terah, thereby adding a total of about 1,500 yrs to the genealogy.

It is at the well that his brother, Reuben, tears his clothes, because Joseph is not in the well. ~British History Traced From Egypt & Palestine And Other Essays, Israel in Ireland, by Covenant Publishing Company Limited, 1927.

The Septuagint, which begins with the creation of the world and traces the development of the Hebrew people through the patriarchal period up to the invasion of Canaan, was believed from very earliest times to be the work of one person, Moses. ~See II Chronicles 25:4; Luke 2:22; 24:44.

There are those who questioned the Mosaic authorship, and about 500 C.E. a Jewish scholar wrote in the Talmud that the last eight verses of Deuteronomy, which tell of the death of Moses appear to have been written by Joshua. ~Baba Bahra 14b-15a Joshua wrote... Eight verses of the Law.

By the time of the Protestant Reformation, Roman Catholic and Protestant scholars were already discussing the difficulty of maintaining the Mosaic authorship of the Torah to one Biblical person. ~Old Testament Life and Literature by Gerald A. Larue, 1968.

Before the Reformation could take place, man had to relearn, that is, learn to think, a process which had long been suppressed by the Church, “Poems like Virgil's Fourth Eclogue were prized for what the author had not meant when he was writing them; while his real interests were utterly neglected. Against this mental misconception, this original obliquity of vision, this radical lie in the intellect, the restorers of learning had to fight at least as energetically as against brute ignorance and dullness. It was not enough to multiply books and to discuss codices; they had to teach men how to read them, to explain their inspiration, to defend them against prejudice, to protect them from false methods of interpretation. To purge the mind of fancy and fable, to prove that poetry apart from its supposed prophetic meaning was for its own sake, and that the history of the antique nations, in spite of Paganism, could be used for profit and instruction, was the first step to be taken by these pioneers of modern culture. They had, in short, to create a new mental sensibility by establishing the truth that pure literature directly contributes to the dignity and happiness of human beings. The achievement of this revolution in thought was the great performance of the Italians of the 14th and 15th centuries." ~John Addington Symonds.

"[As for evolution]... Cutting out the sections [on the subject] is preferable if the portions are not thick enough to cause damage to the spine of the book as it is opened and closed in normal use. When the sections needing correction are too thick, paste the pages together being careful not to smear portions of the book not intended for correction." ~R.E. Martin, American creationist, in Reviewing and Correcting Encyclopaedias, 1983:205-7, instructing followers to censor books that don't follow Creation Dogma.

The Jewish Bible begins with the Five Books of Moses, known as the Torah, which was canonized in the 5th century B.C.E. Historically speaking, there are few records dating to the earliest days of Jewish civilization: "The precise origin of the Hebrew tribes is unknown. There are records dating from the Egyptian New Kingdom that mention a homeless nomadic people called the 'Habiru' or 'Hapiru.'"

Much of the early history of the Hebrew people must be pieced together from the Hebrew Scriptures, which were written between the 13th and 3rd centuries B.C.E. [ca. 1200-200 B.C.E.] ~Jewish Tradition, History and Culture by Janice Barsky, October 14, 2000.

There are considerable indications that whoever wrote certain portions of the Pentateuch was in Palestine, within the territory which in the time of Moses had not yet been entered. ~See Genesis 50:10, Numbers 35:14, and Deuteronomy 1:1, 5, 3:8, 4:46.

It is said that Moses commanded, "He that understandeth Genesis, let him not reveal it." However, Genesis should be revealed that we may have a proper conception of the beauty of astrology, that is, Gen-Isis, and not "The beginning," but what Isis, the mother nature, who generates or produces, Isis, the great ruler of waters; Isis, the menstrual of all nature, Isis, which, when combined with air and heat, generates all reason and purpose. "And the Spirit of God moved on the face of the waters" [i.e., the air, the wind, or the air in motion]. ~ Genesis 1:2.

The Biblical references speak of places which are located "Beyond the Jordan," which is to say on the east side of the Jordan and outside of Palestine proper. Such a statement could only be made by someone on the western side of the Jordan river, and Moses never entered that land. ~Deuteronomy 34.

Father Tertullian, however, gives full credence to the legend of the Septuagint.

The Septuagint is allegedly written at the Island of Pharos, "Which was a house that was built near the shore, and was a quiet place, and fit for their discoursing together about their work... Accordingly they made an accurate interpretation, with great zeal and great pains," working until the ninth hour each day, and visiting Ptolemy every morning.

"Now when the Law was transcribed [first 5 books only] and the labor of interpretation was over, which came to its conclusion in seventy-two days," the work was read over to the assembled Jews, who rejoiced that, "The interpretation was happily finished;" they were enjoined to report any errors or omissions, which they might discover, to the 'Seventy,' who would make the necessary corrections in their work. ~Flavius Josephus, Antiquities of the Jews, Bk. XII, chap. 2; Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. xiii, pg. 722.

"To this day, at the temple of Serapis, the libraries of Ptolemy are to be seen, with the identical Hebrew originals in them." ~Apology, to the Rulers of the Roman Empire, I, xviii; Ante-Nicene Fathers, iii, 32.

Many believe that, "The pot of gold," is a reference to a pot made of gold [not filled with gold] This is in reference to the "Ark of the Covenant" being covered with gold, as depicted in the "Throne Room of God," and under the rainbow [in Heaven]. "The Little People," as the angels argue over the body of Moses, at his death, the angels disagree over the hiding place of the Ark of the Covenant. The Ark is finally hidden and the angels still argue over the place it is to be kept.

This is a significant spiritual battle, reflected in modern day Ireland with the conflict between the Protestants and the Gentile Christian Church attempting to have dominion over the resting place of the Ark of the Covenant. A conspiracy theory having the Ark hidden behind legends would conceal the real roots and national background of the people of Ireland and their roots being from the Israelites.

Jeremiah takes the consecrated Ark and other sacred objects along with the royal princesses to a New World, for safety to be re-united with the remnant of their own people, Israel when the time was appropriate. "Birth Stones," the emerald is the stone of the tribe of Dan, tribe of Israel, which migrated early in Israel's history, to far off Ireland.

BC 580- Early Lesbianism: Sappho's celebrated girls' school flourishes on the isle of Lesbos as her exquisite love poems to students are the earliest known lesbian writings.

BC 582 (?)-479-Pythagoras, mathematician, philosopher, teacher, is the first to teach that the earth is round and revolves around the sun [A fact that is lost in later history and for which many are condemned because the Christian Church Authorities would believe otherwise. How could the earth be round?] Surely, we would fall off if this were so! If the earth is round, would not the Bible tell us so?

The early Church Fathers without knowledge [many were illiterate] set themselves up as the scientists, doctors, and interpreters of all that lay within the domain of God. Pythagoras used mathematics and musical scales to relate the orbits of the planets and developed his concept of "Music of the spheres."

It is alleged that Pythagoras applied for admission into the occult school, Mysteries of Isis, at Thebes, and waited many years before he was approved, and only then by producing proper credentials.

Pythagoras believed that he was the Trojan War warrior Euphorbus reborn, believing in immortality and transmigration of the soul. This mystery school is to have profound influences on the religious history of the world, influencing people as far away as Galilee.

Its religious beliefs however will not be called Isian but a new name, an appellation that would identify the followers of its founder. Hades is the Greek, "God of the Dead," "God of the Underworld," son of Titans, and brother of Zeus & Poseidon. His palace in the underworld is where the good are rewarded and wickedness is punished. No mention is made of fire or brimstone.

Gehenna, Gahanna, Valley of Hinnom, near Jerusalem [II Kings 27:10] is known as the place of abomination where the Israelites sacrificed their children to the God Moloch [in Arabic literature it's Jahannam]. Later this area is converted into a dump [refuse area] kept ablaze perpetually to prevent the spread of disease. It also becomes synonymous with Hell.

"If priests had not been fond of mutton, lambs never would have been sacrificed to God. Nothing was ever carried to the temple that the priest could not use, and it always happened that God wanted what his agents liked." ~Robert G. Ingersoll, American Free thinker.

The Greek word for dead is Hades [their God of the Dead] The use of Hades, Hell, and Burning Inferno is later to become the same in Christian literature. A concept spread by Dante in the 13th century.

Asclepius' resurrection, or Esculapius, the "Son of God," the "Savior," "Rose from the dead," after being put to death ... in Greek mythology, the God of medicine. He is a son of the god Apollo and Coronis, a beautiful maiden of Thessaly. Angry because Coronis was unfaithful to him, Apollo kills her and rips the unborn Asclepius from her womb. He later sends Asclepius to the centaur Chiron to be raised. Asclepius learns all that Chiron knows about the art of healing and soon becomes a great physician.

Because Asclepius threatens the natural order on earth by raising people from the dead, the god Zeus kills him with a thunderbolt. Prometheus, another Greek God, descends from Heaven as "God Incarnate as Man."

Prometheus has an extraordinary friend, "Petraeus [Peter], the fisherman, who deserts him," and we find that the only place a friend named Petraeus is mentioned is in the selection from the Robert Taylor, a cleric of the 19th century who did his research while in prison for blasphemy [religious wickedness].

"*The majesty of his silence, whilst the ministers of an offended God were nailing him by the hands and feet to Mount Caucasus, could only be equaled by the modesty with which he relates, while hanging on the cross, his service to the human race, which had brought on him that horrible crucifixion: I will speak... See what, a God, I suffer from the Gods! For mercy to mankind, I am not deemed worthy of mercy... But in this uncouth appointment, am fixed here, a spectacle dishonored by Jove!... On the throne of Heaven scarce was he seated... On the powers of Heaven He showered His various benefits, thereby confirming His sovereignty... form anew...None save myself, opposed His will...I dared, and boldly pleading, saved from the destruction--saved them from sinking to the realms of Night... For which offense, I bow beneath these pains... Dreadful to suffer, piteous to behold." ~Aeschylus, Prometheus Bound.

Did Jesus offend both the Jewish high priests and scribes? And could he also have invoked the wrath of the Roman authorities when he helped Lazarus, a zealot who misappropriated funds, which led to Jesus' eventual execution? In actuality, Jesus may have opposed Roman rule. The corrupted Gospels are quite vague on this issue, and may have been edited to shift the blame from the Romans to the Jews when the new Eastern Roman authority, establishing itself in Constantinople, was making Christianity its official religion. A religion that now blamed the Romans for the brutal death of its creator would have been a faux pas, but a little creative editing would have allowed its acceptance. ~E. Christopher Reyes, In His Name.

The Greeks write of similar Gods, "Lo, streaming from the fatal tree, His all-atonning blood!" ~Aeschylus. Is this the God of the Greeks? "Tis he, Prometheus, and a God! Well might the sun in darkness hide, And veil his glories in, when God, the great Prometheus, died, for man, the creature's sin." ~Ibid

Mithras, Osiris and other Egyptian Gods also died and rose again. So perhaps Jesus too had to be Resurrected. A Jewish Rabbi who called himself the 'Son of Man' also appears to have been crucified for offending Roman rule. Seek, but you shall not find, for the Christians mutilated or destroyed virtually all of the great classic works of ancient Greek and Roman authors, such that contemporary man might suspect that this stanza has either been removed or fatally disguise through mistranslations. In a remarkable aside, the Catholic Church further admits that, "... The earliest of the extant manuscripts [of the New Testament], it is true, do not date back beyond the middle of the 4th century C.E." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, op. cit., pp. 656-7.

Like Zoroaster, Prometheus was also called the "Logos," and like Horus, he was called the "Word." His intentions, like Jesus, Christna, Buddha, Mithras and Attis, is "To save mankind."

In a time where few could read or write, and of those who could, they wrote profusely in the names of others, ignoring completely what we would now call false, lying, or misleading, "We have proved again and again, the writings are not the production of Christ or of His Apostles, but a compilation of rumors and beliefs, made, long after their departure, by some obscure semi-Jews, not in harmony even with one another, and published by them under the name of the Apostles, or of those considered the followers of the Apostles, so as to give the appearance of Apostolic Authority to all these blunders and falsehoods." ~Faustus, 400 C.E., Contra Faustus Manicheum, BOOK XXXIII.

"Many things have been inserted by our ancestors in the speeches of our Lord, which though put forth under His name, agree not with his faith; especially since, as already it has been often proved, these things were written not by Christ, nor [by] his Apostles, but a long while after their assumption, by I know not what sort of half Jews, not even agreeing with themselves, who made up their tale out of reports and opinions merely, and yet, fathering the whole upon the names of the Apostles of the Lord or on those who were supposed to follow the Apostles, they maliciously pretended that they had written their lies and conceits according to them." ~Saint Faustus, 5th Century French Bishop, quoted in New Testament Alterations, http://essenes.net/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=149&Itemid=563.

The Centaur is found on coins struck in Babylonia showing that the concept must have originally come from that era, and the Centaur is also found in the Zodiac, the antiquity of which goes up to a higher period, and which had its origin in Babylon.

The Greeks admit this antiquity and derivation of the Centaur; for though Ixion was commonly represented as the father of the Centaurs, they also acknowledge that the primitive Centaurus was the same as 'Kronos,' or 'Saturn,' the father of the Gods.

Diodorus asserts, "They alleged also that Kronos was set against them, inasmuch as they used in earlier times to sacrifice the best of their sons to this God, but after wards bought children secretly, and reared them and sent them for the sacrifice; and when an inquiry was held, some of those who had been sacrificed were found to have been superstitious. So when they had taken thought of this, and saw the enemy encamping close to their walls, they had a superstitious fear of having abolished the honors, which their fathers had paid to the Gods: and, being eager to amend their errors, they chose out two hundred of their most distinguished sons and offered them as a public sacrifice; and others who were under suspicion gave themselves up of their own accord, in number not less than three hundred. Now they had a brazen statue of Kronos, stretching forth his upturned hands inclined towards the ground, in such a way that the boy placed thereon rolled off and fell into a pit full of fire." -Eusebius of Caesarea: Præparatio Evangelica [Preparation for the Gospel], Tr., E.H. Gifford, 1903.

Kronos is the first King of Babylon, or Nimrod; consequently, the first Centaur is the same, created to manifest an aura of Mystery regarding monarchical power. The Centaur is the same as the Zodiac sign 'Sagittarius,' or "The Archer." The founder of Babylon's glory was "The Mighty Hunter," whose name, even in the days of Moses, was "Wherefore, it is said, Even as Nimrod, the mighty hunter before the Lord." ~Genesis 10:9.

BC 563-483-Prince Siddhartha Gautama, known as Buddha. "Between Buddhism and Christianity there are a number of resemblances, at first sight striking. The Buddhist order of monks and nuns offers points of similarity with Christian monastic systems, particularly the mendicant orders. There are moral aphorisms ascribed to Buddha that are not unlike some of the sayings of Christ. Most of all, in the legendary life of Buddha...there are many parallelisms, some more, some less striking, to the Gospel stories of Christ. A few third rate scholars [contend that these are borrowings from Buddhism. Why not, as everything else is?]"... "One of its most attractive features was its practice of benevolence towards the sick and needy. Between Buddhists and Brahmins there was a commendable rivalry in maintaining dispensaries of food and medicine," long claimed as a Holy monopoly of 'Christian Charity.'" ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 3, 28-34, passim. "The Supreme Brahm, the most Holy, the most high God, the Divine being, before all other Gods; without birth, the mighty Lord, God of gods, the Universal Lord." ~The Two Babylons or The Papal Worship Proved To Be The Worship of Nimrod and His Wife, By The Late Rev. Alexander Hislop.

Christians adopt the images and personas of world religious figures to further their favorable reception. Buddha preaches enlightenment through morality, meditation, and moderation.

- ‡ He surrenders all his worldly powers and material wealth to help right injustices in the world.
- ‡ Founder of a humanized religion and preached "The Way."
- ‡ A person who prays to "Bodhisattva" can be reborn into a paradise in the Buddhist cosmology.

Buddha is a "Divine Individual" who, like Christ and Christna, is believed to have been "Resurrected from the dead," and just as many Christians now believe in an historical Christ, many Buddhists believe there existed a living, breathing Buddha.

Unfortunately, as with Jesus, there is little if any physical evidence supporting the claim Buddha ever walked the earth. All that is known is the legends and sayings surrounding the Buddha character predate Christ by five hundred years. Therefore, it could be argued that Christianity draws just as much from Buddhism as it does from Hinduism. Just as Christ is said to have died while hanging from a tree, Buddha is believed to have expired while sitting at the foot of a tree.

Some claim that Sakya Buddha was crucified, like Jesus, in a sin-atonement. Buddha, like Jesus, suffered for three days in Hell, and was allegedly resurrected: Buddha ascended to Nirvana; Jesus arose to Heaven. On his burial, Buddha's funeral clothes were said to have "Unrolled themselves, and the lid of his coffin was opened by a superhuman agency, when he ascended bodily into Heaven." Similar to Jesus, whose tomb was opened by an "Angel of the Lord," who came and "Rolled back the stone."

Hell is depicted as an abode of great suffering, a place of no return, "And I saw also another place over against that one, very squalid; and it was a place of punishment, and they that were punished and the angels that punished them had their raiment dark, according to the air of the place. And some there were there hanging by their tongues; and these were they that blasphemed the way of righteousness, and under them was laid fire flaming and tormenting them. And there was a great lake full of flaming mire, wherein were certain men that turned away from righteousness; and angels, tormentors, were set over them. And there were also others, women, hanged by their hair above that mire, which boiled up; and these were they that adorned themselves for adultery. And the men that were joined with them in the defilement of adultery were hanging by their feet, and had their heads hidden in the mire, and said: 'We believed not that we should come unto this place. And I saw the murderers and them that were consenting to them cast into a strait place full of evil, creeping things, and smitten by those beasts, and so turning themselves about in that torment. And upon them were set worms like clouds of darkness. And the souls of them that were murdered stood and looked upon the torment of those murderers and said: O God, righteous is thy judgment.” ~Apocalypse of Peter, verses 21-25. The Christian God orders adultery, II Samuel 12:11.

During this period, an imperial edict, found possibly at Nazareth, decreed the death penalty for anyone who destroys a tomb, or casts out the buried, or “With evil intent removes them to some other spot.” ~M. P. Charlesworth, Documents Illustrating the Reigns of Claudius and Nero, Cambridge 1939, 15, no. 17.

Like Buddha, Jesus' grave clothes were all that were found in the empty tomb after his “Resurrection.” Going over Buddha's life one discovers that, like Jesus, he was known as the “Savior of the World” and the “Light of the World.” He was born of the Virgin Maya, who was considered the “Queen of Heaven.” Christna, Christ, and Buddha were of royal descent. Buddha was called by his disciples the “Good Shepherd,” the “Carpenter,” the “Enlightened One,” and the “Infinite and Everlasting.” Buddha grew up teaching chastity, temperance, tolerance, compassion, love, and the equality of all. It was Buddha who first said: “If someone strikes you on the right cheek, turn to him the other also.”

Similar to Matthew 5:39. These words are also attributed to Lao-Tze, 500 years before Jesus. Buddha, like Jesus, abolished idolatry, was a “Sower of the Word,” and preached “The establishment of a kingdom of righteousness.” He performed miracles and wonders, which included healing the sick. Like Jesus, Buddha was said to have “Walked on water” and to have fed 500 men from a “Small basket of cakes.”

In his final years, Buddha was said to have “Crushed a serpent's head” and to have been “Transfigured on a mount...” The father of Chinese Buddhism, Hui-Neng [AD 638-713] teaches his pupils to apply the principles of “Seeing into nothingness” in order to maintain a state of “No mind,” in an attempt to transcend the processes of thought itself.

The account given by Catholic Encyclopedia of the ‘Lord Buddha’ and of Buddhism, by the uncomplicated substitution of the names Christ [the name already being known as the Savior of Buddhism] is, ‘Christna, the Incarnation,’ of the Supreme God Vishnu.

Christianity may well be mistaken for a sermon of this ancient ‘Holy Faith’ and Founder who would no more recognize the present day Christianity that acquired its name than would Buddha. “It is noteworthy that Buddha was a contemporary of two other famous religious philosophers, Pythagoras and Confucius. In the sacred books of later times Buddha is depicted as a character without a flaw, adorned with every grace of mind and heart.”

“There may be some hesitation in taking the highly colored portrait of Buddhist tradition as an exact representation of the original, but Buddha may be credited with the qualities of a great and good man... In all pagan antiquity no character has been depicted as so noble and attractive. Buddha's order was composed only of those who renounced the world to live a life of contemplation as monks and nuns... [In the time of King Asoka, 3rd century B.C.E.] Buddhism was in a most flourishing condition; it had become a formidable rival of the older religion [Brahmanism], while a tolerant and kindly spirit, [unknown to Christianity] was displayed towards other forms of religion... [By the 7th century CE, here it parallels Christianity again] an excessive devotion to statues and relics, the employment of magic arts to keep off evil spirits, and the observance of many gross superstitions, complete the picture of Buddhism, a sorry representation of what Buddha made known to men... The vast majority of the adherents of Buddhism cling to forms of creed and worship that Buddha, if alive, would reprobate Northern Buddhism became the very opposite of what Buddha taught to men, and in spreading to foreign lands accommodated itself to the degrading superstition of the people it sought to win.”

It is now quite evident as to the intentions of the Holy Mother, the Universal Church of Rome as to why she vacillates between the auspices of idols and icons, financial rewards. The Church makes millions upon the lack of knowledge of its congressional membership as to the history of its icons and religious facts. “Wheresoever the bishop shall appear, there let the people be; even as where Jesus may be there is the Universal Church.” ~Saint Ignatius, ad Smyrn., n. 8.

“It is now evident, and will further so appear, that there is no single novel feature nor "revealed truth" in all the Christian religion: our Holy Faith is all a hodgepodge or pot pourri of the credulities of every superstition from Afric Voodooism to the latest one anywhere in holy vogue among the credulous. Even our 'Idea' of God with its superlatives of "revealed" high attributes is very primitive: The idea of a Being higher than man, invisible, inaccessible, master of life and death, orderer of all things, seems to exist everywhere, among the Negritos, the Hottentots, the Bantu, the Nigrütians, the Hamites; for everywhere this Being has a name. He is the 'Great,' the 'Ancient One,' the 'Heavenly One,' the 'Bright one,' The 'Master,' sometimes the 'Author' or 'Creator.' ... Nowhere is He represented under any image, for He is incapable of representation." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, Vol. One, 183, 184, Forgery in Christianity by Jopseph Wheless, and the Bank of Wisdom, www.infidels.org

BC 558-468-Darius I, King of Persia, in BC 552, the Magian Priests attempt to dethrone the king. Chief Priest Gaumata is defeated. The events of the reign of Darius are carved into limestone for posterity in three languages. Called the "Behistun Inscription," the languages written are: Cuneiform [Old Persian], Assyrian, and Elamite. The Cuneiform is from an ancient language dating back to about BC 3000.

BC 551-479-K'ung-Fu-Tzu, Confucius, taught high moral principles, ancient classics in Chinese literature, and power by example in a time rampant with crime, low morals, and excessive government corruption. Chinese communism in the 21st century still has to deal with government corruption.

BC 550-Jainism: Doctrine of Ahimsa, reverence for life [all living things] Members walked about unclothed until religious laws forced them to wear garments. In the 15th century, they reluctantly chose to wear white robes.

BC 540-Ancient Homosexuality: The Etruscan Tomb of the Bulls at Tarquinia is depicts by a fresco a man anally penetrating another.

BC 539-Cyrus, Persian Ruler [Iran] conquers Babylonia and worships at the Temple of Marduk. Freedom is granted to the exiled Jews inhabiting Babylon. These Jews now speak Southern Aramaic, which is a tongue adapted from their previous conquerors. Later, Jesus [Yeshu, is the shortened version of the Hebrew Hehoshua, son of Nun] and his disciples will speak in the Northern dialect. The Greek term for Aramaic is Syriac. Jesus is accused of being a "Necromancer, and a magician, and a deceiver of the people." ~ Justin Martyr.

[Nigromantia, by folk etymology fr. LL necromantia, fr. LGk nekromanteia, fr. Gk nekr- + -manteia -mancy] (1522), conjuración of the spirits of the dead for purposes of magically revealing the future or influencing the course of events]. ~1996 Zane Publishing, Inc. and Meriam-Webster, Incorporated.

He is said to have been initiated in the Magical Arts in the heathen temples of Egypt. Both Jesus, and Horus the Egyptian savior, are represented on monuments with magic wands, in the received guise of necromancers, while raising the dead to life. Father Justin Martyr treats the Pagan books of Christian evidences, as prophetic Scriptures and divine, and speaking of their prohibition by the Roman Emperors, says: "By the contrivance of Demons it was made a capital crime to read them, in order to deter men from coming to a knowledge of what is good." ~Apologia, I, ch. 77; Ante Nicene Fathers, vol 1, 178.

The Romans did not welcome the existence of the "Jewish Christians," whom they considered seditious like the Jews, with their more original texts, and ancient practices, which did not pay respect to the semi-God Emperor and the Roman Gods. In fact, they went to great lengths not only discredit them and their eye witness accounts, but even went so far as to successfully legislate their destruction in the 4th century. Many resurfacing manuscripts, such as the Nag Hammadhi library, may have been buried as a result of the Roman persecutions and book burning campaigns of the early 4th century.

'Not as common bread nor common drink do we receive these; but as we have been taught, the food which has been made into the Eucharist by the Eucharistic prayer set down by Him, and by the change of which our blood and flesh is nourished, is both the Flesh and Blood of that incarnated Jesus." ~Saint Justin Martyr, First Apology; 150 A.D.

But the Blood of the Gods is not a new concept, as in Greece the virtue of "The blood of God" had once been known, though that virtue, as exhibited in its poets, was utterly obscured and degraded. That word is 'Ichor,' and the bards of classic Greece know that Ichor is the term peculiarly appropriated to the blood of a divinity.

Homer refers to the blood of God, "From the clear vein the immortal Ichor flowed, such stream as issues from a wounded God, pure emanation, uncorrupted flood, unlike our gross, diseased terrestrial blood." ~The Two Babylons By The Late Rev. Alexander Hislop. Compare with, The Blood of God, Acts 20:28. To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

In his First Apology to the Emperor Antoninus Pius, Father Justin Martyr makes a strong appeal for the use of reason in defiance of tradition and authority, a discriminating gesture to the Pagan Emperor, but a principle seldom applied by a Christian in point of his own imposed creeds, “Reason directs those who are truly pious and philosophical to honor and love only what is true, declining to follow the opinions of the ancients, if these be worthless.” ~Chap. ii, Ante-Nicene Fathers, vol. i, 63.

Dr. Middleton tells us that, “There was just reason to suspect that there was some fraud” in the actions of these Yesuans, or primitive Christians, who traveled about from city to city to convert the Pagans; and that “The strolling wonder-workers, by a dexterity of jugglery, which art, not Heaven, had taught them, imposed on the credulity of the pious Fathers, whose strong prejudices and ardent zeal for the interests of Christianity would dispose them to embrace, without examination, whatever seemed to promote so good a cause... The pretended miracles of the primitive Church were all mere fictions, which the pious and zealous Fathers, partly from a weak credulity and partly from reasons of policy, were induced to espouse and propagate for the support of a righteous cause.”

“That the system of morals propounded in the New Testament contained no maxim, which had not been previously enunciated, and that some of the most beautiful passages in the Apostolic Writings are quotations from Pagan authors, is well known to every scholar... To assert that Christianity communicated to man moral truths previously unknown, argues on the part of the asserted either gross ignorance or willful fraud.” ~Buckle, History of Civilization, Vol. I, p. 129.

The primitive Christians were perpetually reproached for their credulity; and Julian says that “The sum of all their wisdom was comprised in the single precept, ‘Believe.’”

According to the very books, which record the miracles of Jesus, he never claimed to perform such deeds, and Paul declares that the great reason why Israel did not believe Jesus to be the Messiah was that “The Jews required a sign.”

“John,” in the 2nd century, makes Jesus reproach his fellow-countrymen with “Unless you see signs and wonders you do not believe.” It is evident, therefore, that, had he performed the miracles that his followers said he did, the Jews would have accepted him as their Messiah; and that, since he was not accepted by them, we may justly conclude that he performed no miracles. His miracles were evidently concocted and recorded for him.

When told that, if he wanted people to believe in him, he must first prove his claim by a miracle, John says: “A wicked and adulterous generation asks for a sign, and no sign shall be given it except the sign of the prophet Jonah.” This answer not satisfying the questioners, they came to him again, and asked: “If the Kingdom of God is, as you say, close at hand, show us at least some one of the signs in the Heavens which are to precede the coming of the Messiah?”

It was generally understood then that the end of the present age was at hand, it was to be heralded by Signs from Heaven. ~Bank of Wisdom, Box 926, Louisville, KY 40201

BC 522-438 [?] Pindar, one of the greatest lyric poets of ancient Greece from the city of Thebes. Held in acclaim even 100 years after his death, when Alexander the Great defeated the Thebans, killing and enslaving the citizenry, sacking the city, and razing the buildings, Alexander ordered that the house that had once belonged to Pindar be spared, and forty-four of his epic poems have been preserved.

Legend has it they were chosen for use as school texts in the 2nd Century AD. In Greek mythology version of the flood, first mentioned by the poet Pindar, legend has Zeus as destroying the Earth. Only the good King Deucalion and his family are saved who take refuge in an ark well stocked with provisions.

BC 520-518-Zechariah, Hebrew Priest and Prophet who stresses obedience to God, commitment towards one's innermost spirituality, and a world where Jews and gentiles worship in the future as one. Zechariah believes that all this will come about via “Supernatural” or “Divine Intervention.”

Herodotus [viii] gives an incidental account of how the Phocians, in a battle with the Thessalians, smeared six hundred of their bravest warriors with white clay so that they would look like supernatural beings, and falling upon the Thessalians by night, the phocians terrified the latter and put them to flight.

BC 500-Greeks, practicing Astrology develop the modern “Twelve” sign zodiac around BC 450, which the Roman Church will use in their corruption of pagan beliefs as the twelve apostles.

Superstitions and folklore have the Scythians recorded as believing the Neuri to be werewolves.

BC 488-First banishment in Athens, Greece. Aristotle says it was authored by Cleisthenes; a Person receiving 6000 votes is sent into exile for 10 years, but his property is not confiscated and he could return after 10 years with full rights.

BC 484-425-Herodotus, famous Greek historian, writer, poet: Herodotus, whose famous work, "History" which is from the Greek word meaning "Inquiry" traveled extensively and wrote about the lands and peoples he encountered in the Middle East, Northern Africa, and the Mediterranean Area. Herodotus describes Egypt as the "Gift of the Nile."

He believed that the Greeks assimilated many of the Egyptian gods and cultural practices and while his works are not entirely accurate about specific events, his descriptions of roads, cultures, and warring practices of various countries give insight into the lives of the people living two thousand five hundred years ago. Herodotus wrote of the cannibalistic practices of African cultures, mentioned here, for five hundred years later we will have the generation of a new religious group which claims, "Bread as the body of Christ, and wine as his blood."

It is easy to see the assimilation of the new religion when one has already accepted the former as a religious practice. The only difference is the latter being now symbolic rather than practiced.

BC 480-411(?) -Protagoras, Greek teacher and philosopher. Protagoras was the first thinker to call himself a Sophist and to teach for pay, receiving large sums from his pupils. He gave instruction in grammar, rhetoric, and the interpretation of poetry. His chief works, of which only a few fragments have survived, were entitled Truth and On the Gods. "It can do truth no service to blind the fact, known to all who have the most ordinary acquaintance with literary history, that a large portion of the noblest and most valuable moral teaching has been the work not only of men who did not know, but of men who knew and rejected the Christian faith." ~John Stuart Mill, Liberty.

The basis of his speculation was the doctrine that nothing is absolutely good or bad, true or false, and that each individual is therefore his or her own final authority; this belief is summed up in his saying, "Man is the measure of all things." ~From the Microsoft Encarta Encyclopedia, 1998.

"As to the Gods, I have no way of knowing either that they exist or do not exist, or what they are like." ~Protagoras.

Protagoras was charged with impiety, as were other Greek thinkers of his time who denied the pagan gods, such as Socrates and Anaxagoras, who were sentenced to death, but Protagoras was merely banished from Athens, his books burned, and as he sailed into exile, he drowned.

BC 477-First Buddhist Council, The Dhammapada, poetic teachings from the Gautama is said to be from this era. Includes the "Four Noble Truths," and the "Eightfold Path."

BC 458- "The Book of Ezra," originally written in Ancient Hebrew, is censored by the Christian Church in later centuries. The Book of Ezra details how God's words are to be shared with the people, however there are interpretations, or 'Secret Mysteries' that are not to be given to public but only to the wise men, in secret. Ninety-four books are written of which only ten remain today. Secret teachings are not unknown amongst the Hebrew and Christian cleric. ~See: Daniel 7:25.

BC 436-338-'The Golden Rule,' Isocrates, "Do not do unto others what angers you if done to you by others."

BC 428-348-Plato contemplates epistemology and the nature of wisdom. Influenced by Pythagoras and Indian ideas, disciple of Socrates, founder of the Academy in Athens. Virgin Births were a common theme in the Pagan world, and Plato, who died 347 B.C.E., was believed, soon after his death, to have been Born of a Virgin.

His own nephew Speusippus tells the story in analogous terms to those found in the Gospel of Matthew, and Julius Caesar, and the Emperor Alexander share the same distinction of conception by Virgin birth.

In Plato's cosmology of the world, the universe is a spherical entity and the three Fates [Lachesis, Clotho, and Atropos] direct human destiny, always allowing for freedom of choice, thus man is ultimately accountable for the good and evil in his life. It is also alleged that Plato applied to the Mystery School of

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

Isis, with a religious doctrine that borrows heavily from the Egyptians.

No one is admitted to the school that is a slave or previously convicted of a crime. In the initiation, the novitiate is blindfolded so that he may see with the eyes of the soul and not the eyes of the body. "As above, so below," believed to have come from the Egyptian Mystery School, is adopted by the Greek Secret Cults [Isis Cult] that alludes to everything on earth having a double or counterpart in another world. A religious leader who will change the religious opinions of the world later adopts this two-world system. The story of a "Lost Continent" and/or civilization is found in documents written by Plato who asserts there was an advanced civilization existing 12,000 years ago [the dialogues, Timaeus & Critias.] Was he speaking about the Lost Garden of Eden or another great culture that preceded the Greeks?

Where did he get his information? Plato, in "The Republic" asserts: "The just man, having suffered all manner of evils, will be crucified," [written three hundred and fifty years before the birth of Christ]. Crucifixes displaying the god Indra are to be seen at the corners of the roads in Tibet.

In Some parts of India the worship of the crucified god Bulli, an incarnation of Vishnu, occurs. The "Incarnate God" Buddha and "Suffering Savior expired at the foot of the tree." The expression is frequently used in the Roman Missal.

"The Golden Rule, "Do unto others as I would they should do unto me." ~Plato.

The Egyptian gods Osiris and Horus were also crucified as saviors and redeemers. The sufferings, death, and resurrection of Osiris formed the great mystery of the Egyptian religion. Attys was "The only begotten son and savior" of the Phrygians, represented as a man nailed or tied to a tree, at the foot of which was a lamb. Tammuz or Adonis, the Syrian and Jewish Adonai, is another virgin born god, who "Suffered for mankind" as a "Crucified Savior." Prometheus, of Greece, was with chains nailed to the rocks on Mount Caucasus, "With arms extended," ~Murray, Manual of Mythology, pg. 82.

"Plato's dead form this earthly shroud invests: his soul among the godlike heroes rests." ~Speusippus, Jacobs I, 109, translated by Merivale.

BC 418- Ancient Homosexuality: December 25th, the birth of Epaminondas, one of the great military geniuses of the ancient world, who, like many other Greek warriors loved boys, but for him delight in boys was inclusive, he never married or produced an heir. His two favorite boys fell in battle and, by his order, were buried with him in his tomb.

BC 400- Damarchus, an Arcadian werewolf, is said to have won boxing medal at the Greek Olympics. The Purim story takes place in Persia, 5th century B.C.E., where Esther is the Jewish wife of King Xerxes. She reveals herself as a Jew to the king in order to save her people. The people are threatened by the evil court adviser, Haman, who is offended that Mordecai, a Jew, will not bow before him.

BC 399- The great seventy year old Greek philosopher Socrates stands before a jury of 500 of his fellow Athenians accused of "Refusing to recognize the Gods recognized by the state," and "... Of corrupting the youth," for which, if found guilty; his penalty could be death. Socrates is given the opportunity to propose his own punishment and could probably have avoided death by recommending exile, but instead, the philosopher initially offered the sarcastic recommendation that he be rewarded for his actions. When pressed for a realistic punishment, he proposed that he be fined a modest sum of money.

Faced with the two selections, the jury preferred death for Socrates. The philosopher was taken to the near-by jail where his sentence would be carried out. Athenian law prescribed death by drinking a cup of poison hemlock [Hemlock produces a sluggish death by gradually paralyzing the central nervous system]. Socrates would be his own executioner. ~The Suicide of Socrates, 399 B.C.E.

BC 384-22- Aristotle; philosopher, teacher, monotheist, scientist and tutor to Alexander the Great. It is this Greek philosopher's deductive reasoning that is later used by Church representatives to prove the subsistence of the Church Doctrines.

In 350 B.C.E., Aristotle writes, "Palmistry is a judgment made of the conditions, inclinations, and fortunes of men and women, from the various lines and characters which nature has imprinted in the hands, and which are almost as various as the hands that have them." ~The Benham Book of Palmistry by Wm. G. Benham [for palmistry in the Bible refer to: Job 37:7]

"Aristotle distinguished three kinds of souls or immaterial principles: a vegetative soul [for functions of a plant-nature], an animal [non-intelligent] soul, and a human or intelligent soul. This idea was taken over [with scores of others] from the Moors of Spain who followed Aristotle, by the schoolmen of the Middle Ages, and it is still taught in Catholic philosophy. For instance, stories of the growth of a corpse's beard or nails, after the soul has departed, are explained by saying that the 'vegetative soul' still lingers and can promote these 'Plant-like' growths!" ~From J. McCabe, Rationalist Encyclopedia.

When the women visit Jesus at his tomb they wrap him in linen and pour Myrrh upon him, just as the Egyptians did, "Lay myrrh upon thy head; clothe thyself in fine linen, Anointing thyself with the truly marvelous things of God. Adorn thyself; make thyself as fair as thou canst; And let thy heart sink not. Follow thy heart and thy joy. As long as thou livest upon earth: Trouble not thy heart until the day of mourning come upon thee. With joyous countenance keep a day of festival, and rest not in it; For no one takes his goods with him; Yea, no one returns that is gone hence. ~From: The Egyptian Book of the Dead, as translated by E. A. Wallis Budge. Cf. Ecclesiastes.

The Gospels are actually not eye witness accounts of Jesus' life, as preached on Sunday, but a description of what Paul allegedly told them about Jesus plus other Jewish traditions on Messianic Arrival, intermixed with ancient Roman myths.

Aristotle maintained that women have fewer teeth than men, although he was twice married, it never occurred to him to verify this statement by examining his wives' mouths.

BC 382-The birth of Philip II of Macedon, father of Alexander the Great. In 350 B.C.E., Philip leaves on a military expedition, taking with him 800 boys to be used for the pleasure of himself and his military officers. Alexander is known to have been bi-sexual in preferences.

BC 378-The Sacred Band of Thebes is created with the military unit consisting entirely of 150 male couples and is based upon the belief that men fighting alongside their loyal lovers would die rather than shame one another.

BC 370-Eudoxus of Cnidus postulates that the earth is round. The Church will overlook this fact during the "Dark Ages" due to its inability to explain it. Superstitions still prevail, even within the passageways of this great institution. If this were so, would common sense dictate to you that the people on the other side would fall off? It is the superstitions of the priesthood that dictate what reality is.

BC 370-328-The Greek Doctor, Theophrastus describes a hypnotic and aphrodisiac plant, Mandragora officinarum, as part of the ingredients for a love potion [also described in Genesis] The mandrake also has sinister implications as it is said to resemble the human genitalia. The mandrake contains alkaloids scopolamine and hyoscyamine, ingredients used in medieval witches' liniments.

A favorite pupil of Aristotle, Theophrastus, while traveling with Alexander the Great in Babylon describes the citron fruit [etrog] that cannot be eaten. However, in the 2nd century Greek physician Galen is writing recipes for this fruit [more about this fruit later].

BC 356-323-The birth of Alexander of Macedonia, known to history as Alexander the Great: king, general, world conqueror, and lover of men, particularly his lover, Hephaiston, whose death in 324 he mourns profligately, and the eunuch slave boy Bagoas, who had once been a favorite of the Persian king Darius. Alexander the Great is taught by Aristotle, Plato's famous pupil. Alexander of Macedonia, Alexander the Great, in AD 332, defeats the Persians and the Greeks. Cross culturalization begins in the Jews adapting Macedonian and Greek ways and the Macedonians worshipping Yahweh [Iao] next to Zeus and Dionysus. After plundering Persia of its gold in 334 B.C.E., Alexander the Great buried huge portions of his great treasure along the route home to lighten the burden of his soldiers. Gold, being extremely heavy, is twice as heavy as the same-sized bar made of lead, is difficult to transport.

Most great men in ancient times were considered gods, "Alexander the Great demanded a formal act of deification from the Greek states. At Sparta the motion ran: 'If Alexander wishes to be called a God, agreed.'" ~From: The Wit of the Greeks and Romans, Compiled and Newly Translated by John Ferguson, Leslie Frewin: London, 1968.

A great library is set up in Egypt and named after Alexander. Many Jews, upon hearing of this vast library, send their learned scribes, who were well versed in Greek, and many of their ancient scrolls that had been prepared by Esdras [Ezra] the Priest. Jasher had compiled one of the scrolls [Book of Jasher] The Mysteries of the Egyptian Hierophants survives in the chambers of learning. Gnosticism, Judaism, Cabala, Zohar, and Talmud all co-existed in an atmosphere of enhancement of all cultures, faiths, and religions.

There is strong reason to believe that the Apocryphal Books may have originated from the Alexandrian Library that was destroyed by the early Christians who sought to destroy the books associating their faith with the faith of the Egyptians or other ancient pagans [Book of Enoch, Gospel of Thomas and the Second

Book of Esdras].

"It [Book of Enoch] had left its imprint on the New Testament and the works of the early Fathers... Clement of Alexandria, Tertullian, Origen, and even Saint Augustine suppose the work to be a genuine one of the patriarch... The work is a compilation, and its component parts were written in Palestine by Jews of the orthodox school... In the latter part of the 2nd century before Christ." ~See Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. i, 602. passim; Encyclopedia Britannica, vol. v, 220-224.

Remarkable isn't it? "That it is some 350 years after the time the Church claims that a man called Jesus Christ walked the sands of Palestine, and here the true story of Christian origins slips into one of the biggest black holes in history. There is, however, a reason why there were no New Testaments until the 4th century: they were not written until then, and here we find evidence of the greatest misrepresentation of all time." ~The Forged Origins of the New Testaments by John Bushby.

Priestly fraud committed in the name of God. "The first of that most mischievous of all institutions, universities, was the University of Alexandria, in Egypt; where lazy monks and wily fanatics first found the benefit of clubbing together, to keep the privileges and advantages of learning to themselves, and concocting holy mysteries and inspired legends, to be dealt out as the craft should need, for the perpetuation of ignorance and superstition, and consequently of the ascendancy of jugglers and jesuits, Holy hypocrites, and reverend rogues, among men.. All the most valued manuscripts of the Christian scriptures are Codices Alexandrini. They very first Bishops of whom we have any account, were Bishops of Alexandria. Scarcely one of the more eminent fathers of the Christian church is there, who had not been educated and trained in the arts of priestly fraud, in the University of Alexandria, that great sewer of the congregated feculencies of fanaticism." ~From: The Diagesis Being A Discovery of the Origin, Evidences, and Early History of Christianity, Never yet Before or Elsewhere so Fully and Faithfully set Forth, By the Rev. Robert Taylor [1784 - 1844], Founder of the Christian Evidence Society and of the Society of Universal Benevolence; reprint: Kessinger, n.d. (1829).

The books of Apocrypha of the Old Testament were written between 200 BC and 100 AC. The importance of these books was to explain the history of the Jews and the religious and cultural situation in that era. Christians now acknowledge that the "Apocrypha of the New Testament" includes several books, letters and translations about false Gospels that are named after people, who never wrote them. These books are not included in the Holy Bible, because they were of less spiritual importance than the books of the New Testament, claiming that they were written by some people who had personal aims or to prove certain viewpoints [But the church does not reveal whose intentions].

The Church knew their malice of intention and refused them completely [Which does not explain why the Christians accept the Books of Moses as Moses most assuredly did not write them either.] "The cult, which he established, outlasted him for at least a century." ~Lucian, Harmon, iv, 1953, 173.

"Alexander made this dramatic entrance into his homeland after a long period. He was a striking figure, putting on an occasional show of madness and foaming at the mouth. This came easily to him by chewing soapwort, a plant used in dyeing, but others thought the foam an awesome visitation." "When the city was overcrowded with people who lacked all brains and sense and were not in the least like human beings [those creatures who live on bread], but were indistinguishable from beasts of the field apart from outward appearance, Alexander went into a particular room and sat on a sofa, robed just like a god, and took the Asclepius [snake, Coluber aesculapii? Greek Medicine in Rome, 532, 46] from Pella on his lap [a snake, as I have already said, of considerable size and beauty], coiling it round his neck and letting its long tail pour from his lap and trail in part along the ground. Its head was the only part he kept out of sight, under his armpit [the snake would put up with anything]. . . The astonishing thing about this episode is the reputation that the oracle [the mouthpiece of the deity (O.E.D.), etc.] attained. Even the emperor Marcus Aurelius [Roman Emperor 161-180 (121-180)] consulted it. The snake can be seen on coins, and the oracle was actually still in being more than fifty years after Alexander's death." ~H. Mattingly and E.A. Sydenham The Roman Imperial Coinage Vi Aurelian.

Matthew and John were two of Jesus' disciples, Mark being a disciple of Peter and Luke being a disciple of Paul. Mark and Luke wrote their testament under the supervision of the two disciples Peter and Paul. Matthew allegedly wrote his Gospel to his own people, the Jews, which is evident in the way he focused on clarifying how the prophecies of the Old Testament were allegedly fulfilled in Jesus Christ.

Matthew can be shown to have extensively used Mark as a source for his Gospel, but the numerous errors in Mark make it highly improbable that an Apostle would have placed such heavy reliance on such a poorly conceived work. Something is definitely remiss when it is recorded in the Catholic Encyclopedia, in a favorable evaluation of the clerical mindset, there ascends the Catholic Church, which admits that it does not know who wrote its Gospels or Epistles, confessing that all twenty-seven New Testament writings began life anonymously, “It thus appears that the present titles of the Gospels are not traceable to the Evangelists themselves... They [the New Testament collection] are supplied with titles which, however ancient, do not go back to the respective authors of those writings.” ~Catholic Encyclopedia, Farley ed., vol. vi, pp. 655-6. Matthew did not write Gospel According to Matthew, otherwise it would have been entitled, The Gospel by Matthew, rather than The Gospel According to Matthew, “Early tradition ascribed this Gospel to the Apostle Matthew, but scholars nowadays almost all reject this view. The author, whom we still can conveniently call Matthew, has plainly drawn on the mysterious 'Q,' which may have been a collection of oral traditions. He has used Mark's Gospel freely, though he has rearranged the order of events and has in several instances used different words for what is plainly the same story. The style is lucid, calm and Tidy. Matthew writes with a certain judiciousness as though he himself had carefully digested his material and is convinced not only of its truth but of the Divine pattern that lies behind the historic facts.” ~J. B. Phillips, The Gospels, Geoffrey Bles, London, Introduction. Note: The Gospel According To Matthew was inspired by the gospel of the Hebrews. Read: In His Name by E. Christopher Reyes.

Mark allegedly wrote his Gospel for the Romans, as he had lived among them. Jesus was an Aramaic speaking Jew [an old Hebrew language], which is not a written language, and this is why the only records we have, are by people writing in [Koine] Greek. Jesus was crucified around 30 C.E., at the age of 34, and the oldest writings do not appear until after 75 C.E. which leaves a forty year gap regarding his teachings to become known in Greek, which are then passed on by oral traditions into the Roman Empire after the scattering of the Jews about 70-90 C.E.

He focused on what the Romans considered being their example and concentrated on the alleged greatness and power of Jesus, who the Romans perceived of only as a rabble rouser. Luke wrote to those who came from a Greek [Hellenized] background, and he focuses on the ‘Will and Heart,’ without which no man should deserve to be human and with which God’s love is allegedly revealed to the world. Many people, therefore, call the Gospel of Luke ‘The Gospel of Mercy.’

John did not write his story until after wards, when Christianity began to take a foothold in various Pagan cultures by adopting them into their writings. He wrote it in an attempt to clarify some matters and respond to some heresies that were threatening Christianity [which were actually the peoples who were content with their own paganism and cared not to be obligated to another version of their Paganism].

At the present time there are copies of ‘Greek Gospels’ that date back to the 6th century to the 12th century, when the Church had almost completed its revisions on historical documents, and many of these are blatantly admitted by the Holy Mother the Church as unashamed forgeries.

The history of ancient forgery bears this out: it was in fact a common practice to invent a companion or other second-hand witness as an author, to lend greater credibility to fabricated documents, and to create a good basis for excusing charges of omission or chronological error or stylistic inferiority. The Old Testament could not be changed after the arising of Christianity, because it was already widely known to the non-Jewish world. The Catholic Church continues to persevere, stating unequivocally that, “The titles of our Gospels were not intended to indicate authorship,” also adding that, “The headings... Were affixed to them.” ~Catholic Encyclopedia, Farley ed., vol. i, p. 117, vol. vi, pp. 655, 656.

Therefore they are not Gospels written “According to Matthew, Mark, Luke or John,” as has been publicly stated for centuries from the Pulpit of deceit and religious treachery, and the full force of this acknowledgment reveals that there are no genuine Apostolic Gospels, there are no Holy Writings, there is no Divine Inspiration, and that the Christian Churches’ rather vague and shadowy writings today do not embody the ground and pillar of Christian foundations and faith. The consequences of the Church’s treachery are fatal to their pretense of Divine Origin, and of the entire New Testament, abandoning the so-called Divine Inspiration of Christian texts, which truly have no special authority, and for centuries, these fabricated Gospels bore both the Church’s certification of authenticity, which are now confessed to be false, authority which now provides evidence that the Christian writings are wholly fallacious [being creative history, imaginative myths, Pagan reinterpretations].

Alexander the Great founded in 332 before the Common Era [B.C.E.] the magnificent city Alexandria, known for its wisdom and great library. The Jews had there from the beginning a prominent place, and at one point there were living there one million Jews.

So fascinated are the Greeks with the Jewish religion, that the Greeks become the first people to translate the Old Testament Bible into another language when King Ptolemy II, 250 B.C.E., compels 70 Rabbis to translate the Hebrew Bible into Greek [Koine Greek, which is the commonly spoken Greek of the time] [now known as the Septuagint, which means '70' in Greek]. "The text of the Septuagint was regarded as so unreliable, because of its freedom in rendering, and of the alterations, which had been introduced into it, etc., that, during the 2nd century of our era it was discarded by the Church." ~The Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. iv, pg. 625.

"To sum up, then, Alexander [King of Macedonia 336-323 B.C.E., 356-323 B.C.E.] united the whole civilized world for the first time under a single head and gave to it a common language and culture. By the natural gifts of his extraordinary personality, he at the same time set before it a perfect model of kingship and thus ensured the persistence of the monarchical principle for two millennia. This, his conscious work, had a direct effect on the evolution of monotheism, while in other respects his conquests proved the turning point in the history of religions. By breaking down the barriers, which racial and lingual divisions had hitherto set up between different nations of the earth, these conquests led to a great fusion of the religions hitherto professed by them, and thus opened the door to the world-religions which were afterwards to share between them his vast Empire... Thus, from the scientific point of view, there is none among the forerunners of Christianity who did more to prepare and make ready its way than." ~Forerunners and Rivals of Christianity, From 330 B.C. to 330 A.D., Francis Legge [26-27]

Early transcripts of the Old Testament were in Greek [versus Hebrew translations] due to the Jewish scholars being more knowledgeable and conversant in Greek than the Ancient Hebrew [Aramaic]. Coptic Christians followed the ministry of Saint Mark who worked and died in Alexandria. "The Secret Gospel of Mark" with its Gnostic implications is written in Alexandria and is actually the additional notes of The Gospel of Mark.

After the death of Alexander the Great, the lands conquered by Alexander, and territories, are divided up amongst his generals, with Ptolemy I Soter taking control over Egypt in 305 B.C.E. The concept of sin, in Catholic logic, is not contained in the Gnostic system, and sin to them, unless it be the sin of ignorance, required no necessity for an atonement. Jesus is not perceived as God, but merely as his Prophet.

Cleopatra is the last of the Ptolemaic Rulers and is later defeated by the Romans but through her charm, she continues to rule as Queen under the authority of Julius Cesar and later on by Mark Antony. Some say that she was part black, but this error has existed only since the 20th century.

"Julius Caesar was very attached to Venus. He often spoke of his Divine descent from her. He wore her figure on his ring, ordered her effigy printed on coins, even built and dedicated a temple to her as part of a Venus cult he initiated. She was on the one hand his Venus Victrix, the mother of victory in battle, Caesar's watchword when he went to war, and on the other Venus Genetrix, mother of all men" ~Aveni, Conversing with the Planets, pg. 34, 1st century B.C.E.

Cleopatra was of Mesopotamian ancestry [now considered Greek]. With the advent of Greek [Hellenistic] culture, there is further dissension amongst the priests as the masses look upon their fair skinned conquerors as demi-gods, similar to the Pharaohs, but with a unique feature, and that is that those with fair skins will come to be worshiped, and the Greeks will further perpetuate this fraud by building monuments to themselves.

The new God will become white: This unique feature will not be lost in centuries to come as Saint Paul will also eulogize the dark skinned Jewish Jesus, the Christ, and his mother, as being fair skinned to further develop the acceptance of Jesus as a God, the last fair skinned [light complected] Pharaoh to rule being Cleopatra.

There is nothing new under the sun. The "Messiah" means the "Anointed One." The Hebrew word occurs forty times in the Old Testament; and each time in the Septuagint or Greek translation, most of which were made in the 3rd century before our era, the word is translated Χριστός, or Christos, which again means "Anointed." The "Word" and "The Christ" was already in vogue in Alexandria, Egypt, as far back as 280 B.C.E., nearly three centuries before the advent of "The Christ," Jesus.

And the word "The Anointed" strictly speaking, means, and from what the expression is probably derived, will appear later. In The Book of Enoch, written not later than 170 B.C.E., "The Christ" is spoken of as already existing in Heaven, and about to come as judge of all men, and is definitely called "The Son of Man.” ~ Cultes païens dans l'Empire Romain, 2 vols., 1911, vol. ii, p. 263.

The Sacred Mysteries, its rites and ceremonies are no longer held sacred due to the conquerors having their own Gods. This violation of the inner sanctuaries causes the priests to conceal their innermost rituals from all but a select few in order to protect the last vestiges of their ancient Gods.

In the aura of the desolate desert sands, the priest-craft will continue to perform the rites practiced for primal centuries of which the aura of secrecy is later to be carried on by the son of a carpenter in a far off land.

The Romans will hold an uneasy truce over Egypt with proliferous corruption and elevated taxes often making the populace angry, and centuries later, the corruption of the Romans will also be assimilated in a continuum of corrupt ways with the adaptation of Christianity, which adapts Roman traditions. The Greeks, and now the Romans, have assimilated their gods and the Isis Cult will wield great power for another seven hundred years within the Roman Empire.

In order to maintain a peace about the land the Romans restore some of the smaller Egyptian temples and even have their names carved as cartouches representing themselves as pharaohs and gods. Deification of the Roman leaders will be replicated by European monarchs, who will declare, “All kings are descendents of God,” and initiate the conflict between the church and the state that will continue into the 21st century. Alexander's soldiers saw many lands, and many peoples.

Of the Jews, they held them with disdain for mutilating their bodies [circumcision], and of the Babylonians, “There is none other more corrupt than this people, or none other more learned in the art of pleasure and voluptuaries. Fathers and mothers suffered their daughters to prostitute themselves to their guests for silver, and husbands were not less indulgent with respect to their wives. The Babylonians plunged into drunkenness and all the disorders, which follow it. The women appeared at the banquets with modesty at first, but they ended by abandoning their robes, then the rest of their garments one after another, disrobing themselves little by little of modesty until they were entirely naked. And these were not public women who abandoned themselves so; they were the most respectable matrons and their daughters.” ~ Quintus Curtius, historian who accompanied Alexander the Great on his great conquests.

BC 350-The Mahabharata, “The sum of all true righteousness: deal with others as thou wouldst thyself be dealt by. Do nothing to thy neighbor, which thou wouldst not have do to thee hereafter.”

BC 340-Berossus, the priest of Bel-Marduk in the temple of E-sag-ila writes an historical compilation of his people written in Greek entitled, “Babyloniaka,” completed in 275 B.C.E. Book One recounts the Babylonian Cosmogony, Book Two is a chronological listing of the Babylonian kings, including the ten kings before the Flood, culminating with Alexander the Great. His works are dedicated to King Antiochus I Soter, BC 280-260. The Biblical historian Flavius uses these manuscripts to trace ancient legends and cultures.

Antiochus issues a decree, which until that time was unheard of in the multicultural and religiously tolerant ancient world of Rome: He outlaws another people's religion, banning the teaching, and practice of Judaism. The book of the Maccabees [probably written by a Jewish chronicler in the early 1st century B.C.E.] describes it as follows: “Not long after this, the king sent an Athenian senator to compel the Jews to forsake the laws of their fathers and cease to live by the laws of God, and also to pollute the Temple in Jerusalem and call it the Temple of Olympian Zeus.” -II Maccabees 6:1-2.

BC 338-The Greek, Sacred Band of Thebes is annihilated by Philip of Macedon and his son Alexander the Great at the Battle of Chaeronea. The valiant 300 stood their ground and perished.

BC 329-Space Aliens(?) 329 BC - Central Asia, during the reign of Alexander the Great, 356-323 B.C.E. A historian, for the period of the reign of Alexander the Great allegedly tells of two strange crafts appearing like two silver shields in the sky, that dived repeatedly at his army, until the war elephants, the men, and all their horses panicked and refused to cross the river where the bizarre incident occurred... The historian describes the objects as “Great shining silvery shields, spitting fire around the rims... Things that came from the skies and returned to the skies.” ~ Frank Edwards, Stranger Than Science, Pan Books, London, p. 198.

BC 324-Death of Hephaiston, the male lover of Alexander the Great.

BC 320-“Ben Sirah,” containing parts of the Apocrypha is written [Ben Sirah is a son of the prophet Jeremiah] A Greek version is found in the Septuagint known as Ecclesiasticus. A Hebrew edition is later published in AD 1798, which of course, the Church denies its authenticity.

BC 310-250-Aristarchus of Samos shocks his fellow Greeks when he announces that not only is the earth round, but the earth goes around the sun. In 1616, Galileo will make this same assertion, but is later forced to retract this statement by Catholic authorities, after his many years of research, observation, and scientific analysis, in front of Church Authorities, under a penalty of excommunication.

"They know that it is human nature to take up causes whereby a man may oppress his neighbor, no matter how unjustly... Hence they have had no trouble in finding men who would preach the damnability and heresy of the new doctrine from the very pulpit..." ~Galileo Galilei, 1615, Astronomer, Heretic, Free thinker.

BC 309-246-The "Library of Alexandria," founded by Ptolemy I, has over half a million volumes. Most of the volumes are in Greek and are destroyed by Roman Emperor Aurelian in late AD 3rd century. The guardian of the scrolls [one of which is The Book of Jasher] upon hearing of the intent to burn the library quickly removes many scrolls and sends them to Arabia for safekeeping. In AD 391, the Christians also destroy another smaller library due to its non-Christian works.

The Christian destroyers are quite elated in the destruction of this famous library of the "Heathens." Books dating back for centuries dealing not only in Egyptian cultures, but cultures from various parts of the known world at that time are burned and lost forever.

Ptolemy II was the most brilliant of the dynasty, the greatest monarch of his age, and the most clearly skeptical. His learned tutor is known in Greek literature as "Theodorus the Atheist," and the man who became the first scholar of Alexandria. It was a golden age of culture-and of skepticism. ~See Hundred Men Who Moved the World, vol. III.

BC 300-Ancient Homosexuality: Addeaus of Macedon says , "When you meet a boy who pleases take action at once. Don't be polite, just grab him by the balls and strike while the iron is hot." ~Leather History Timeline, <http://www.leatherarchives.org/exhibits/deblase/timeline1.htm>.

God or Aliens? Was there a nuclear holocaust in ancient India? ~See Numbers 12:6, Revelation 13:12-13; Psalms 73:22. "... A single projectile charged with all the Power of the Universe. An incandescent column of smoke and fire, as brilliant as ten thousand suns, rose in all its splendor. It was the unknown weapon, the iron thunderbolt, a gigantic messenger of death, which reduced to ashes the entire race of Vrishnis and Andhakas. The corpses were so burned they were no longer recognizable. Hair and nails fell out. Pottery broke without cause... Foodstuffs were poisoned. To escape, the warriors threw themselves in streams to wash themselves and their equipment." ~Chief Nuclear Physicist, Oppenheimer quot in the hindupoen, Mahabharata, 300 B.C.E., <http://www.kent.net/paranomal/anomalies/mahabharata.html>.

The Native Americans also had their holocaust, "The Gourd of Ashes," which states, "The white brother will bring the symbol of the sun, which makes a great explosion shaking the earth... A substance like fire has sprung into existence... Blistering hills, rivers, and trees. All... Are being reduced to ashes." ~John Hogue, The Fate of Nations, p. 39, Hopi Prophecy, See http://www.auschcomp.com/redman/Hopi_Prophecy.htm, <http://www.newage.com.au/library/hopi.html>

BC 289~ A Chaldean priest, Berossos, writing in Greek reports that, according to Mesopotamian belief 432,000 years elapsed between the crowning of the first earthly king and the coming of the Great Deluge.

BC 270-Epicurus, "Let nothing be done in thy life, which would cause fear if it became known to your neighbor."

BC 247-183-Hannibal, Carthaginian General from Northern Africa, with a deployment of 40,000 men, crosses the Alps from Spain into Italy to defeat Roman Legions using a new type of warfare, elephants. After the Romans adapt to the new tactics and defeat the General, Hannibal commits suicide by taking poison.

The Romans are predominantly followers of Mithra, the way, the light, and the all-knowing god, which has many similarities to the new religion, which will attempt to take over the world [see BC 600].

With his baptisms and Eucharist, and the twelve disciples, and the birth in a cave, and so forth, Mithra appeared to the early Church Fathers as an invention of the Devil and a mainly perilous mockery on Christianity, and all the more so because his worship was exceedingly popular amongst the masses and the Roman legionnaires. The cult seems to have reached Rome about 70 B.C.E.

Throughout the history of mankind we have the priest-craft documentating religious leaders being:

† Born of a Virgin

- † Performing Miracles.
- † Turning water into wine.
- † Preaching of the goodness in this world and for man to be good to his fellow man.
- † Being crucified on a Cross between two thieves.
- † Performing miracles after their death [resurrection].

These men of great and extraordinary manifestations traveled about in various times long before Jesus Christ in China, Japan, India, the Mideast, and North America. Stories of great floods also abound in various cultures and peoples around the world. What are we to make of all this?

That something is being told to us. Something that is quite simple in nature and not expensive. Quite the contrary, it's free, "To be good to our fellow man." Almost too easy or simplified to believe! The rest of this book will endeavor to show the corruption of man in the pursuit of this simple journey through the centuries.

You be the judge as to who is telling the truth and for what reason. The primary purpose of religion was in many cases being in power, the power to control and the power to levy taxes and collect monies from the masses. Is there truly one and only one religion of God who can save us? Sixteen centuries ago, a "Father of the Church," Firmicus Maternus, wrote a book called "The Errors of the Profane Religions."

The Errors of the Profane Religions is considered to be "... The most valuable book that a stupid man ever wrote." ~The Story Of Religious Controversy, Chapter II, by Father Joseph McCabe, Ph.D..

Firmicus found that many of these Pagan religions of the Roman world had Saviors or Redeemers. He discovered that every year the birth of these Gods was celebrated, often in mid-winter, and every year, often about the time of our Easter, the death and resurrection of the gods were celebrated. He inadvertently exposed what the Church knew all along, that in some of these religions bread and wine was used at the altar, and candles and incense and sacred water were part of the ritual. Firmicus therefore concluded that the devil had revealed or inspired these things to the pagan nations before Christ was born, in order to spoil the success of the Christian Church when it should be founded. "The Devil has his Christs!" he exclaimed! The Early Christians refused to use incense [burned to worship the Roman Emperor], but, when things cooled down, many "Libellatici" asked for reintegration. Emperor Diocletianus' [the Emperor—God] decrees forced the Christian clergy to worship the Emperor and proclaim the latter's Divine status. Christian churches were now ordered closed and their "Holy Books" destroyed.

Jesus is not the first Savior to be born of a Perpetual Virgin, in fact, it was quite common for the priestcraft to declare their God, born of a Virgin, in order to promote their religious doctrines in many ancient religions.

Mary becomes a Perpetual Virgin: Justin the 'Martyr,' a Pagan Greek from Palestine, fled to Ephesus at the time of the Bar Kochbar revolt, 132-135 C.E., joining the increasing Christian community, and soon found himself contending with the Pagan priests of Artemis, worshipers of an eternally Virgin Goddess. Justin effectively overcame the sentiments of the established Christians and had Mary, the mother of Jesus, also declared a virgin, citing his Greek copy of Book of Isaiah as evidence of Scriptural prescience [foreknowledge]. ~Life of Nero by Suetonius, chapter 16, Lying For God by Kenneth Humphreys.

With this corrupted interpretation of a Virgin Birth, an anonymous Greek priest will then forge the 'Gospel According to Saint Matthew,' which then goes one step further, taking the word 'Harah,' which is in Hebrew past or perfect tense, and changing it into a future tense, which is still used today, to arrive at, "Behold, a virgin shall be with child, and shall bring forth a son, and they shall call His name Emmanuel." ~Matthew 1:23.

The following Saviors have been documented as having laid down their lives for the Salvation of mankind, been born of Virgins and ascended back into Heaven upon their deaths:

- † Chrishna of Hindostan.
- † Buddha Sakia of India.
- † Salivahana of Bermuda.
- † Zulis [Zhule] of Egypt.
- † Osiris of Egypt.
- † Zoroaster of Persia.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

- † Mithra of Persia [Born of a rock, which is an even bigger miracle than a virgin birth].
- † Baal of Phoenicia
- † Taut “the Only Begotten of God” of Phoenicia.
- † Indra of Tibet.
- † Bali of Afghanistan.
- † Jao of Nepal.
- † Wittoba of Bilingonese.
- † Thammuz of Syria.
- † Atys of Phrygia [now Turkey].
- † Xamolxis of Thrace.
- † Zoar of Bonzes.
- † Adad of Assyria.
- † Deva Tat of Siam
- † Sammonocadam of Siam.
- † Alcides of Thebes
- † Mikado of Sintoos.
- † Beddru of Japan.
- † Cadmus of Greece.
- † Hil of Mandaites.
- † Feta of Mandaites.
- † Gentaut of Mexico.
- † Quexalcote of Mexico.
- † Universal Monarch of the Sibyls.
- † Ischy of Formosa.
- † Divine Teacher of Pato.
- † The “Holy One” of Xaca.
- † Fohi of China.
- † Tien of China.
- † Adonis [son of the virgin Io of Greece].
- † Ixion of Rome.
- † Quirinus of Rome.
- † Prometheus of Caucasus.*
- † Mohammad of Arabia [Nabi Isa].

*Prometheus is described as “The Creator of Man.”

Clever priests and developing new religions have relied heavily upon the past to build upon their future. In the religion of our day there is nothing original. All of the Christian Doctrines, its symbols, and ceremonies are but the survivals of creeds that perished long, long ago. Baptism is far older than Christianity or Judaism.

The Hindus, the Egyptians, the Greeks and the Romans already had their holy water rituals, which the Christian Eucharist merely borrowed from the Pagans. Ceres is the goddess of the fields, Bacchus the god of the vine, and at the harvest festival they made cakes of wheat and said, “These are the flesh of the Goddess.” They drank wine and cried: “This is the blood of our God.”

“I am the true Vine,” says Jesus in the fourth Gospel, possibly with an implicit and hostile reference to the cult of Dionysus, in which there was also a Pagan ritual miracle of turning water into wine. ~Robertson, Christianity and Mythology, p. 357.

The priest-craft belonged to believers in the supernatural, the superstitious, the miraculous and the absurd that filled the world with hatred, bigotry, malevolence, and fear, and in defense of their respective creeds they committed every crime and practiced every cruelty known to mankind, and in their so-called piety they have also committed every degradation, immorality, and lascivious act upon their helpless victims imaginable to mankind.

Often it is far easier for religious zealots to fight for morality than to live up to it. Millenniums ago a few straightforward men began to think, to investigate, and to reason.

"Fear was the first thing on earth to make Gods." ~Lucretius.

They were the freethinking skeptics who dared to doubt the legends of the imperious Catholic Church, the legends of great works, and the miracles of the past. They began to notice what was happening around them and discovered that eclipses came at precise intervals and that their coming could be foretold, and that they soon became content that the conduct of nature and of men had nothing to do with eclipses and that the stars moved in their orbits oblivious to the acts of the sons of men.

"Our father who are'nt in Heaven, Hollow be thy name. Thy kingdom dead, thy will be read. On earth as if there were a Heaven. Give us this day our daily dream and deliver us from reality. for thine is the falsehood, the corruption and the Horror forever. Hy-men." ~Christian D. Seaver, The Book of Worm 6:9.

"I propose to define religion as, 'A sum of scruples [taboos], which impede the free exercise of our faculties.'" ~Reinach.

Galileo, Copernicus, and Kepler destroyed the religious astronomy of the Bible, and demonstrated that the 'Inspired' story of creation was but a mere contrivance for the benefit of the few, could not be true, and that the church was as ignorant as the priests were dishonest. ~Adapted from: Myth And Miracle by Robert Green Ingersoll, 1885, edited by Emmet Fields.

- † The Sun is a great warrior, fighting the hosts of Night in many ancient cultures.
- † The Greek god, Apollo, is the Sun, and he fought and conquered the serpent of Night. Agni, the generous, who loved the lowliest and visited the humblest, was the sun.
- † Apollo is the God of Fire, and the crossed sticks that by friction leaped into flame were his emblem. It was said that, in spite of his goodness, he devoured his father and mother, the two pieces of wood being his parents.
- † Baldur is the sun who was in love with the Dawn a fair young maiden, which he deserts and travels through the heavens alone. At the twilight they meet, reconcile, and the drops of dew are the tears of joy that they shed.
- † The Indian, Krishna, is the Sun, and at his birth the Ganges thrilled from its source to the sea. All the trees, the dead as well as the living, burst into leaf and bud and flower.
- † Hercules is a Sun-God.

At least five centuries before Christ, the Greek poet Aeschylus wrote "Prometheus Bound," which tells of Prometheus' crucifixion. Prometheus, according to Aeschylus, is crucified on "A fatal tree" atop Mount Caucasus, which is distinctively similar to Jesus, who is nailed to "An accursed tree," atop Mount Golgotha. Other accounts, however, claim Prometheus was bound by chains nailed to a rock on Mount Caucasus.

Christian writers, not only introduced new doctrines, legends, miracles and so forth, most of which we can trace to antecedent Pagan sources, but that they took especial pains to destroy comparable Pagan records and so obliterate the evidence of their own Christian dishonesty. "Everyone of these has been destroyed by the care of the Church, and it is remarkable that even the treatise of Firmicus is mutilated at a passage where he seems to be accusing Christians of following Mithraic usages." ~J. M. Robertson, Pagan Christs, p. 325. "The polemic literature of Christianity is loud and triumphant; the books of the Pagans have been destroyed." ~Professor Murray.

Prometheus, like Jesus, is depicted as a Savior bound "With arms extended." According to Aeschylus, at the time of Prometheus' death, the sky went dark in the same way darkness descended upon the land when Jesus was crucified.

The Pagan Gnostic Redeemer, Savior, Liberator, Professor Murray says, "Is descended by a fairly clear genealogy from the 'Tritos Sôtêr' [third Savior] of early Greece, contaminated with similar figures, like Attis and Adonis from Asia Minor, Osiris from Egypt, and the special Jewish conception of the Messiah of the Chosen people. He has various names, which the name of Jesus or 'Christos,' 'The Anointed,' tends gradually to supersede. Above all, he is in some sense Man, or 'The second Man' or 'The Son of Man' . . . He is the real, the ultimate, the perfect and Eternal Man, of whom all bodily men are feeble copies." ~cf. 1 Corinthians 15.

"If it were desirable upon the part of God to send his Son to save the world from eternal perdition, why was it that, when he did arrive, so many nations were kept in ignorance of his mission? Even the Jews, God's 'Chosen People,' had no knowledge than an incarnate deity was to expire on the Cross. If the regeneration of the world had been the object of Christ, would it not have been better, instead of ascending to Heaven, for him to have remained on earth, teaching practical truths, and showing by his own personal example how the world could be rescued from that moral and intellectual darkness and despair to which it had been reduced by the influence of a degrading theology?" ~Charles Watts, The Death of Christ: An Anthology of Atheism and Rationalism, ed. Gordon Stein, Buffalo, NY: Prometheus, 1980, p. 217.

"For they that dwell at Jerusalem, and their rulers, because they knew Him not, nor yet the voices of the prophets, which were read every Sabbath day, they have fulfilled them in condemning Him. And when they had fulfilled all that was written of Him, they took him down from the tree, and laid him in a sepulcher." ~Paul in Acts 13:27-29.

Significantly, darkness also descends upon the land when another Greek God, Hercules, is said to have died. Following his resurrection, Prometheus ascended bodily to Olympus where he took his rightful place among the Gods... Adonis is said to have been a modification of an earlier Akkadian God, Tammuz, who predates Christ by 2000 years. ~From the works of D. Christie Sinton in, Amoume.

"For centuries the people of the Mediterranean had annually observed the death and resurrection of their Gods. The Osirian drama, so beloved by the Egyptians, dated back certainly 25 and perhaps 35 centuries. Tammuz too, had died a violent death, to be brought back to life with the sprouting of the grain. So had Adonis been buried in a rocky tomb, mourned and declared resurrected and ascended unto Heaven. So had Hercules died and been resurrected at Paul's home." ~H. W. Smith, Man and His Gods.

It appears that throughout history, noculture, race, creed or religion has had a monopoly on God. Can man believe in God without having to pay homage to those who profess to speak for God by demanding our blind obedience and servitude?

BC 240-Aristotle's "De Historia Animalium" is mentioned in Pliny's "Natural History" with references to Palmistry and its practice along with a "Lost" treatise. The Roman poet, Juvenal, refers to palmistry as "The cheap chiromancer's art." ~ Edward D. Campbell, The Encyclopedia of Palmistry.

There was a wide choice of religions available, all offering "the crown of life" as the reward of initiation and the acceptance of certain doctrines. "The Orontes has flowed into the Tiber," wrote Juvenal, the satiric poet. It is as significant as it is true, for at Antioch the 'Orontes' was then used as a great sewer.

"With regard to the belief in Heaven, in the un-morality of the soul in the reunion of the dead, and in a future retribution, the Pagan world differed from the Christian in nothing save in the grounds for such beliefs." ~ A. Farrer, Paganism and Christianity, p. 108

BC 238-Ptolemy III, of Egypt, replaces the lunar calendar with solar calendar [12 months of 30 days each]. Five extra days are added at the end of each year. Ptolemy orders one extra day to be added every fourth year. It is quite clear that the ancient Egyptians realizing that their solar calendar was not entirely accurate allowed for corrections approximately every leap year [fourth year]. Ptolemy III [descendent of one of Alexander the Great's generals] will also carry on the Egyptian tradition of declaring himself a God and erecting statuary to that effect.

BC 206-AD 220-Fate Divination is based on calendar data established on a base of tens and another based on twelve's, Han Dynasty, China, which is used in Astrological forecasting.

BC 200-Ptolemy Philadelphus is obsessed with the acquisition of knowledge and learning, in his sincere desire to own all the books of the world, including the Jewish "Book of Laws" that is considered the greatest work, trades 100,000 captives for this work. "The Letter of Aristeas" contained in this great library at Alexandria contained a passage in Verse 20, regarding flying through the air is reputed to have been written in the era 150 B.C.E. The Septuagint, a Greek translation of the Bible by seventy scholars [not seventy-two] is prepared for King Ptolemy Philadelphus [the basis for most ancient Translations of the Torah].

A Greek translation [along with its purposeful mistranslations(?)] of the Old Testament is written for the Jews, the works known as the Septuagint, which translation is not finished until about 250 B.C.E. One copy of the Septuagint was kept in the great library of Alexandria, Egypt, which is destroyed by fanatical Christians to protect the Faith, from alleged unscrupulous followers who might detect the many similarities between Christianity and existing Pagan myths. ~From the works of Eliyahu Silver & Rabbi Yitshak Goldstein

The seventy-two will become a legend, and a spiritual weapon in the future battles, which are to be waged around the Bible of the Church; the "Inspired" Septuagint is not easily surrendered. Not as carefully translated as the Hebrew as some portions of the original text have already been deliberately altered. ~Noticeable in the revisions of Numbers 16:5.

Ptolemy, the Greek King of Egypt, allegedly gathers together 72 scholars in Alexandria to translate Scriptures from the original Aramaic [Targum, Book of Daniel and Book of Ezra] and Hebrew into Greek [known as the Septuagint].

Concerning Egyptian affairs, government, and court-ceremonial in the times of the Ptolemies [Wilcken, in Philologus, vol. iii. 111], Aristeas' historical statements about the time of Philadelphus are totally unreliable.

In § 180 he changes Philadelphus' defeat at Cos into a victory; he does not know that Demetrius was banished on the accession of Philadelphus, or that the latter's marriage with his sister was childless (§§ 41, 185); he transplants the philosopher Menedemus arbitrarily to the court of the Ptolemies (§ 201), and lets the historian Theopompus and the tragedian Theodectes relate incredible stories to Demetrius (§§ 314, 315. Of Theodectes, who died before 333 B.C.E., Demetrius can scarcely have had cognizance of such matters.

"When the use of the Septuagint in the synagogue service speedily surrounded it with an atmosphere of sanctity, pious belief easily accommodated itself to a myth, the material and form of which closely resembled the familiar legend of the restoration of the Holy books by Ezra under Divine Inspiration; a legend, which is found for the first time in IV Esdras, but which is certainly far older. The Christian Church received the Septuagint from the Jews as a Divine Revelation, and quite innocently employed it as a basis for Scriptural interpretation." ~Aristeas, Letter Of: By: Kaufmann Kohler, Paul Wendland.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

There are numerous errors in the Letter, and the author of this letter also declares himself (§ 16) a heathen; as such, in §§ 128, 129, he asks Eleazar concerning the purport of the Jewish dietary laws; and in § 306 consults the translators about the meaning of the ceremony of washing the hands before prayer. ~see Schürer, vol. ii. 444, note 57. But it is universally recognized that in point of fact his panegyricizing tendency toward Judaism throughout shows him to be a Jew. ~Kautzsch, Die Apokryphen, Vol. i. 16.

It is also certain that he cannot have lived in the time of Philadelphus. It is ironic, that even in the 21st century, that the Catholic Church, which had previously changed the Torah translations, still forbids Catholics from reading the book [Torah] as preached by Jesus the Christ, their Savior. The Christian Fathers will change the ancient Scriptures and then declare the original Apocrypha.

How can the original be declared a fairy tale and not the duplicate? The current translations of the Bible in this world are known as the Authorized and the Douay Versions, the latter having been rendered into English from the Latin, reluctantly, by the Catholic Church, after Tynsdale and others started translating Scriptures into common English. The Authorized Version at the time of King James I, was so erroneously executed that a revised translation was called for a few years ago.

Though more accurate than its predecessor, it is still marred by numerous faulty readings with several interpolations, admitted as suspicious by the revisers themselves, and are tolerated to remain, to this day. An instance of these interpolations will be found in the last chapter of the Gospel of Mark, from Verse 9 to the conclusion.

Predestination, in the Catholic theology is the teaching that the 'Eternal Destiny' of a person is predetermined by God's unchangeable force. However, predestination does not necessarily imply a denial of free will. Most supporters of the doctrine have maintained that it is only the individual's "Final Destiny" that is predetermined, not the individual's actions, which remain free. ~Romans 8:29-30, Ephesians 1.

"If you are either already saved or damned, and this is determined even before you are born [Predestination], and there is nothing you can do to change that, wouldn't that weigh heavily on one's attempt to live a meaningful life? Would it not preclude a meaningful life? And what of Salvation by grace? If there is a God, and we cannot be saved by anything we do, and, since we would deserve damnation, we could not deserve any worse than we do already, what would be the point of performing any one action as opposed to any other? How do these Xians get meaning in their lives? These are well-known theological problems, which have never been satisfactorily resolved." ~Doug Krueger, That Colossal Wreck

"There is no wild beast, like an angry theologian." ~Roman Emperor Julian, the Apostate.

Julian presents the arrangement of the process of fiction, creative writing, fraud, deceit, interpolation, corrections, and the fraudulent misrepresentation of ancient history, by Constantine, in the early 4th century. The Emperor Julian never called Christians by the name Christians, and instead in all his transactions, used the term Galileans. Julian referred therefore to the New Testament literature as "The fabrication of the Galileans." ~Three New Ideas In the Field of Ancient History, 2011, <http://www.mountainman.com.au/essenes/>

In the first Biblical creation myth, "God said: 'Let there be'" ~See also 1 John 1:1.

"In the beginning was the 'Word,' and the belief that a God had decided beforehand what would be and what would happen, is the basis of Christian predestination." ~Acts 4:28.

If Salvation and glory are predestined, it then follows that condemnation and destruction must also be predestined. The first theologian to enunciate a doctrine of double predestination was Saint Augustine, fortunately he did not have many successors. "As we shall see, the concept of time has no meaning before the beginning of the universe. This was first pointed out by Saint Augustine. When asked, 'What did God do before he created the universe?' Augustine didn't reply, 'He was preparing Hell for people who asked such questions. Instead, he said that time was a property of the universe that God created, and that time did not exist before the beginning of the universe.'" ~Stephen Hawking, A Brief History of Time, New York: Bantam, 1988, p. 8

"We call predestination God's eternal decree, by which he determined within himself what he willed to become of each man. For all are not created in equal condition; rather, eternal life is foreordained for some, eternal damnation for others." ~John Calvin, Institutes 3. 21. 5.

The Swiss theologian Karl Barth, claimed that God's will is revealed in Jesus Christ, and all are elect through him. In this form the doctrine of predestination is practically universalist, that is, all are promised salvation, which is the prevailing Christian attitude today.

The word repent has been in the Douay Version wrongly rendered through the Latin to do penance.

The word rendered Ghost, Holy Ghost, and Spirit in the New Testament is the Greek word Pneuma, which is the equivalent of Ruach in the Hebrew of the Old Testament. Both words mean air in motion or breath. Ruach is rendered in Gen. 3: 8, "In the cool of the evening," in Genesis 8: 1 as "Wind," and in Genesis. 1:2 Ruach Elohini is translated "The spirit of God," but, literally rendered, it should have been "The breath of the Gods."

In the Latin Vulgate, from which the Catholic or Douay translation is made, pneuma is rendered "Spiritus," from Spiro, meaning, I breathe. When the Bible is translated from the Latin into Anglo-Saxon, "Spiritus" is rendered "Gast." In the illiterate Middle Ages, gast became goost and gost, approaching very near to, and probably derived from, the old German geist, which is the present equivalent of pneuma, spiritus, and ruach. 'Jesus gave up the Ghost,' "The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee," and "Receive ye the Holy Ghost," etc., are, therefore, all are mistranslations. ~In Luke 4: 1.

The same word pneuma is also rendered differently: "And Jesus, being full of the Holy Ghost (pneuma) ... was led by the Spirit (pneuma)," In Luke 8: 55 the same word again is rendered spirit, instead of breath. ~M.D. Aletheia, The Rationalist's Manual, Bank of Wisdom, Box 926, Louisville, KY 40201.

Three accounts are given of how the 'Holy Books,' which now appear in the New Testament were:

- ✠ Popius, in his "Synodicon" to the Council of Nicaea, says that 200 "Versions of the Gospel were placed under a Communion table, and, while the Council prayed, the 'Inspired Books' jumped on the slab, but the rest remained under it."
- ✠ Irenmus says, "The Church selected the four most popular of the Gospels."
- ✠ Council of Laodicea, in 366, declares that, "Each book was decided by ballot. The Gospel of Luke escaped by one vote, while the Acts of the Apostles and the Apocalypse were rejected as forgeries." ~Bank of Wisdom, Box 926, Louisville, KY 40201, The Rationalist's Manual, M. D. Aletheia, author of A Rationalist Catechism, and The Agnostic's Primer.

The creation of many of the older 'Scriptural' manuscripts most likely took place at the great monastery at Mount Athos, in Salonica, where about "60,000 monks were employed." The first that we know of the four Christian gospels is in the time of Irenaeus, who, in the 2nd century, intimates that he has "Received four Gospels as authentic Scriptures." The Gospels were passed from word of mouth, for over forty years, then committed to paper, which produced over 200 hundred different promising Books and the Good News stories during the 2nd and 3rd century from which only 27 were accepted into the Bible in the 4th century, but only after much editing by the Orthodox [Catholic] Church.

The Roman Church, having full knowledge of these falsifications, can do little to make known to the world that their fundamental beliefs are founded upon a lie. "This pious forger was probably the adapter of the John Gospel." ~Investigator, Origin of the Christ Church.

The official Catholic chronicle speaks of the Christian forgeries, which long ago were regarded as inspired, of the "Pseudo-Dionysius the Areopagite," who "Clove unto Paul" after his Mar's Hill harangue continue to haunt the faith and their long list of forgeries. ~Acts 17:32-34.

Blatant Christian forgeries had been confirmed by saintly bones bought in the East and in Rome, and all the biographies of saints were pure inventions to satisfy the need for adventurous tales. They vied in stories of weird tortures and of miracles, which remained undoubted until Le Nain de Tillemont published in 1698 his "Memoirs to Assist, etc. . . in which he denounced the falsity of thousands of hagiographies, with the exception of Peter and Paul, which were too perilous to undertake, though Tillemont had elected to live in Belgium; far enough from the long arm of French kings egged on by their Bishops.

And of all who name many precious forgeries, "A series of famous writings." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 5, 13. All were fictitiously created by pious Christians "At the very earliest in the latter half of the 5th century, of highest and universally acknowledged authority, both in the Western and in the Eastern Church, lasting until the beginning of the 15th century," followed by a "Period of sharp conflict instigated about their authenticity by Laurentius Valla, and closing only within recent years." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 5, 15.

"Those writings, with intent to deceive, weave into their narrative certain fictitious personages, such as Peter, James, John, Timothy, Carpus, and others." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 7, 345.

If, in the venerated "Pseudo-Areopagite," the Sainted Peter, Paul, John, et al., are admittedly of "Fictitious To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi personages,” then how do they acquire the ‘Flesh and blood’ of actual persons in the Gospels and Epistles?

Whoever wrote the “First Epistle,” be it Father, Bishop, or the pious Pope of Rome, his zeal and his intelligence are demonstrated by his argument, in Chapter 25, of the ‘Truth of the Resurrection;’ in proof of which he makes a powerful and faith compelling plea. It was a sad day when the Church took to forging Scriptures, and a heartrending day when they took to declaring their forgeries as truth as Pope John Paul II actually declares his powers via the forged ‘Jesus Documents,’ in March, 2001.

“In one word, the Church of Rome has spent immense treasures and shed, in murder, the blood of sixty eight millions and five hundred thousand of the human race, to establish before the astonished and disgusted world, her fixed determination to annihilate every claim set up by the human family to liberty, and the right of unbounded freedom of conscience.” ~Brownlee, 1836.

“Let us consider that wonderful sign [of the Resurrection], which takes place in Eastern lands, that is, in Arabia and the countries round about. There is a certain bird, which is called a Phoenix. This is the only one of its kind, and lives five hundred years. And when the time of its dissolution draws near that it must die; it builds itself a nest of frankincense, and myrrh, and other spices, into which, when the time is fulfilled, it enters and dies. But as the flesh decays a certain kind of worm is produced, which, being nourished by the juices of the dead bird, brings forth feathers. Then, when it has acquired strength, it takes up that nest in which are the bones of its parent, and bearing these, it passes from the land of Arabia into Egypt, to the City called Heliopolis. And, in open day, flying in the sight of all men, it places them on the altar of the Sun, and having done this, hastens back to its former abode. The priests then inspect the registers of the dates, and find that it has returned exactly as the 500th year was completed.” ~Ante-Nicene Fathers, i. p. 12. Note: This fable respecting the Phoenix is mentioned by Herodotus. See Herodotus, vol. ii, 73, and by Pliny, Nat. X, 2, and is used as above by Tertullian, De Resurr., see. 13, and by others of the Fathers, CF., iv, 15.

BC 200-Attis, of Phrygia [now Turkey] is born of the virgin, Nama. He is a handsome god who becomes the lover of Cybele who has him castrated when he is unfaithful. One being born of a virgin is common in ancient lore, it adds a godlike quality to those who are so proclaimed.

The Roman, Holy Week, was a plainspoken dramatic event of the death and resurrection of love, often imitated by the early Christians, “The other was, at least in theory, a spiritual and ascetic drama. But Saint Augustine would look from the pale young Attis on his tree to the pale young Christ on his cross, from Resurrection to Resurrection, and wonder... Cybele and Attis were ages older than Jesus.” ~The Myth of the Resurrection by Father Joseph McCabe, Ph.D., 1925.

The early Pagan Roman Empire is not lacking in Gods, Goddesses, Virgin Births, and Resurrections, “Hence as, according to the Pagan legend, the lover of Venus, a most beautiful youth, is said to have been slain, then raised to life again, in the month of June, they call the month of June by his name, and they have a solemn celebration in it every year, in the course of which his death is mourned by the women, and after wards his Resurrection is chanted, and praised.” ~Saint Jerome in Commentary on Ezekiel, quoted in Migne edition of Jerome's works, vol. XXV, col. 82.

Saint Jerome will spend a considerable amount of his life in Palestine speaking of the East, the whole region of Palestine and Mesopotamia, and the “Most beautiful youth” is Tammuz. The Goddess whom he calls “Venus,” in Roman fashion, which is really the Babylonian Ishtar, the Astarte of the Phoenicians and the Hebrews.

Attis was the slain and Resurrected God of the Phrygians: “The Lord,” as he was known over all that portion of the world, whether priests called him Tammuz or Attis. “Lord” is in Palestinian language “Adon,” and even the Bible some times refers to Adonai, really Adoni, “My Lord,” as the name for God; and the Greeks took it for a proper name and created the beautiful young God, “Adonis,” the lover of Venus, who dies and rises again every year.

BC 200-118-Polybius, Greek historian, was one of the thousand noble Achaeans who, after the conquest of Macedonia in 168 BC, were sent to Rome as hostages, gives his philosophic admiration to the religious system of the Romans as an effective means of government of the populace.

“In my opinion their object is to use it as a cheek upon the common people. If it were possible to form a State wholly of philosophers, such a custom would perhaps be unnecessary. But seeing that every multitude is fickle and full of lawless desires, unreasoning anger and violent passions, the only recourse is to keep them in check by mysterious terrors and scenic effects of this sort. Wherefore, to my mind the ancients were not acting without purpose or it random, when they brought in among the Vulgar those opinions about the gods and the belief in the punishments in Hades.” ~Historiae, quoted by Grover, The Conflict of Religions in the Early Roman Empire, pp. 3-4.

The historian, Livy, admires the wisdom of Numa, who “Introduced the fear of the gods as a most efficacious means of controlling an ignorant and barbarous populace.” And such will be the case throughout history, the masses controlled by their own ignorance.

And in the 16th century King Philip of Spain will exploit this lack of knowledge in Spain’s conquest of heathen lands, stealing all that is not nailed down and forging documents, with the consent [turning the other cheek] of the Holy Mother the Roman Catholic Church, to rob the peasants of their lands and their future, without retaliation, to a greater degree, for fear of being condemned to ‘Hell’ and eternal suffering by their alleged benefactors, a belief still held today by the now landless masses who naively still believe in their ‘Vicar of Christ’ as representing them.

BC 196-The Egyptian Rosetta Stone is carved with hieroglyphs. This stone is discovered by one of French General Napoleon’s men in 1799. The stone is revealed to be a teaching tool, showing the ABC’s in ancient Egyptian and Greek [plus two other languages].

It is the fifty-four lines of Greek letters that will later be used to translate the Egyptian hieroglyphs and eventually the mysteries of the pyramids. The Greek language is used in praising the Pharaoh Ptolemy V, BC 205-180, who is descended from the Greeks [One of Alexander the Great’s Ptolemaic Generals].

“Bind it about thy neck, write it upon the tablet of thy heart.” ~Everything of Christianity is of Egyptian origin. From: The Diegesis Being A Discovery of the Origin, Evidences, and Early History of Christianity; Never yet Before or Elsewhere so Fully and Faithfully set Forth, By the Rev. Robert Taylor [1784-1844], Founder of the Christian Evidence Society and of the Society of Universal Benevolence, reprint: Kessinger, n.d. (1829).

BC 195-171-“The Wisdom of Jesus, son of Sirach” known as the “Sirach,” or “The Greek Septuagint,” written by Jesus ben Sira [The name “Jesus” is a common name among the Jews during this era]

The works deal with ethics and ‘Divine Law,’ becoming so popular that in BC 130 there is a Greek translation, in which Chapter 24 deals with “Uncreated Wisdom acting as a Divine Person,” two hundred years later it appears that this work is also borrowed upon to become the basis for the interpretation of the Christian ‘Logos.’

BC 186-The Roman Senate attempts to subdue secret societies, especially the Bacchanals who worship Bacchusia and whose rituals have become a fertility-rite. The Romans also periodically destroy the temples of Isis and Serapis in Rome, along with religious documents, as they destroy the shrines of many non-Roman Gods and persecute members of the Isis cult with disdain.

“Let no private psalms nor any un-canonical books be read in church, but only the canonical ones of the New and Old Testament.” ~Catholic Church Canon 59.

In 43 B.C.E., the Roman legislature unexplainably orders the construction of a new Isis-Serapis Temple, perhaps due to the relationship between Cleopatra and Caesar or Mark Antony. Isis is the national religion of Egypt during this period.

Ancient Homosexuality: The Roman Senate attempts to suppress the Bacchanalian rites, which, according to the historian Livy, there is more debauchery among the men with each other than with the women.

BC 170- Before 170 B.C.E., the Book of Enoch is called him Christos, the Anointed One, and declares that He has already come and gone, and that his Second Coming is anticipated at any time. ~ Reinach, Salomon. Opheus. Pg 217.

BC 168-The Jews revolt against the Ptolemy’s of Egypt; the Romans who will also learn to distrust the Jews will note this revolt later on in history by dealing ruthlessly with the Jewish inhabitants in destroying their temples as well as their homes in an effort to rid themselves of this vermin that chooses to ignore their leadership as well as their gods.

Hellenization: This is the basis for the separation of the Christian-Jews from their Jewish ancestry and why the name of Jesus was changed from Jeshua Ben-Panthera. “Jesus” being the “Hellenized” [or Greek version of his Hebrew name].

Antiochus IV Epiphanes, King of Syria, 175-164 B.C.E., leads a campaign against the Jews, which may be the first recorded event of discrimination against the Jews. In the Roman Empire, before Christianity, the Jews are continually disparaged for their unwillingness to honor the officially accepted gods of the Empire.

BC 161- Two envoys of Judah Maccabee are the first Jews to travel to Rome.

BC 120- Artapanus, a Hellenistic Jew, lays the foundation of Egyptian culture as perceived by Moses and is quoted by Alexander Polyhistor. ~Exodus 25, 2:10.

The mixture of cultures encompasses the intermingling of religions as well. We cannot assume that the Jews had their Bibles as Christians now have. In the reign of Josiah, about 100 years before the captivity, there was only one copy of the "Law of Moses" in the whole of Judaea. It neither was read nor even consulted by them, for it was Hilkiah, the priest, who accidentally found a copy in a "Rubbish heap of the Temple." ~Julian, Old and New Testament.

It was announced as a wonderful discovery; but it was afterwards destroyed by fire. All that the Jews knew about Moses and his religion they learnt from hearsay, just as the Greeks and Romans knew about their mythology. It was a system taught by their priests.

Ezra says, in 2 Esdras 14, he was the only man who knew the Law of Moses by heart, and that after the return from captivity in Babylon he retired to a field for forty days, and wrote from memory the five books of Moses, probably including Joshua and other historical books of the Old Testament, aided by drinking a cup full of some strong liquor of the substance of water and the color of fire! [Moses and Joshua could not have been the authors of the books attributed to them, for they describe their own deaths].

The Old Testament was written in ancient Hebrew on rough skins, in ink almost obliterated by age, and crossed in different inks and languages. The writing consisted of capital letters only, very badly formed, and with no vowels, stops, or division into words by spaces; being, like modern Hebrew, written from right to left. There were originally about 150 old writings of this description, allegedly inspired by the "Spirit of God."

Fifty-three are formerly considered by the Christian Church as Canonical; they included the "Pentateuch," or five books of Moses. "We are told in the Pentateuch, that God, the Father of us all, gave thousands of maidens, after having killed their fathers, their mothers, and their brothers, to satisfy the brutal lusts of savage men. If there be a God, I pray him to write in his book, opposite my name, that I denied this lie for him." ~Robert G Ingersoll, Free thinker.

In 1380, fourteen books are decided to be un-Canonical and are classed as "Apocryphal" by Wycliffe, the Reformer and Bible translator. These fourteen books are omitted from the Protestant Bibles, though they are said in the Articles of Religion of the English State Church to be useful "For example of life and instruction of manners." Many of the old writings have now been lost or destroyed. ~Bank of Wisdom, Box 926, Louisville, KY 40201.

BC 100- 44-July 13th, the birth of the bi-sexual Gaius Julius Caesar in Rome. "Wife to every man and husband to every woman."

The Egyptian armies will succumb to the Roman militia under Gaius Julius Caesar [Caesar is also an official Imperial title] conquering of most of the known world in his times.

Caesar falls for the seventeen-year-old Queen of Egypt, Cleopatra, and helps her to retain her throne. Traveling everywhere, it is from Caesar that we have records of the Druids of Britain. "The principal point of their doctrine," says Caesar, "Is that the soul does not die and that after death it passes from one body into another."

One must keep in mind that this attitude regarding the soul of man is one hundred years before the birth of Jesus.

BC 100- 75- Virgil's eighth Eclogue is the first voluntary transformation of a werewolf.

BC 100- Philo of Biblos writes a history of his people entitled, "Phoinikika." His work is primarily based on that of Sanchuniathon, the Phoenician from the Persian era. He has the first man and woman as Aion and Protogonos who were provided for by the fruit of trees.

"The Word, 'Logos,' is the fountain of life... It is of the greatest consequence to every person to strive without remission to approach the divine Word of God above, who is the fountain of all wisdom, that, by drinking largely of that sacred spring, instead of death, he may be rewarded with everlasting life."

Again, similarities between Biblical lore and ancient mythology bear a striking resemblance [the Catholic Church will claim that the devil actually inserted the words into history to fool mankind]. Many passages in the Fourth Gospel illustrate dependence on the non-Christian works of Philo.

BC 99-Space Aliens(?) The Roman author Julius Obsequens writes that in 99 B.C.E., “In Tarquinia towards sunset, a round object, like a globe, a round or circular shield, took its path in the sky from West to East.” ~Unidentified Flying Objects: Do You Believe? BC 90-21-Greek critics, friends of Socrates, saw the State “With false reason covering truth,” which by this device “Quenched lawlessness, with laws.”

Diodorus Siculus, Greek historian, and a contemporary of Emperor Julius Caesar and Augustus, traveling in Asia and Europe, collecting the material for his great ‘Bibliotheca Historica,’ Historical Library [history of the world in 40 books, from the creation through the Gallic Wars and up to the first years of the empire] admitted it to be the duty of the State, “To establish effective gods to do the work of police.”

And, “It is to the interest of States to be deceived in religion.” “Religion will be the tool used to subjugate the masses throughout the world in the middle ages, and the very same instrument will be utilized in the 21st century against the ignorant poor of the world.”

“Living as he did in an age of bitter polemics, he strove to avoid the animosities and hatreds engendered by theological differences.” ~Socrates, Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 14, 119.

BC 90-21- The principle of God ordained laws and pretense of ‘Divine Sanctions’ is effectual through the cooperation of King and Priest for dominion over the weaker castes who they believe are meant to be ruled because God ordains it, and this attitude is recognized by many ancient writers, and even lauded as salutary for the ignorant masses.

It’s a paternalistic attitude, which pervades the Church, seeing the ignorant masses as their children, unable to make decisions vital to the redemption of their souls in a fantasy world as well as their lives here on earth without the assistance of the priests. Even the Greek critics, friends of Socrates, perceive the the State , “With false reason covering truth,” which by this device “Quenched lawlessness, with laws.”

Diodorus Siculus, Greek historian, and a contemporary of Emperor Julius Caesar and Augustus, traveling in Asia and Europe, collected the material for his great work, ‘Bibliotheca Historica,’ Historical Library [History of the world in 40 books, from the creation through the Gallic Wars and up to the first years of the Roman Empire] admitted it to be the duty of the State, “To establish effective Gods to do the work of police.” And, “It is to the interest of States to be deceived in religion.” ~From the works of Joseph Wheelless.

Is it no wonder that free thinkers in 18th century America are chastised and the pious notion of God and religion as the Gigantic Civil Police of the common masses is enforced by the Attorney General of England, in a celebrated State trial for the sale of a copy of Thomas Paine's The Age of Reason, who recommends to the jury the dire necessity, “To prevent its circulation among the industrious poor,” for, the barrister holds forth, “Of all human beings, they stand most in need of the consolations of religion... Because no man can be expected to be faithful to the authority of man who revolts against the government of God!” ~Williams' Case, 26 Howard's State Trials, p. 719; 1798-99.

BC 88-Eighty Thousand [80,000] Roman and Italian citizens are put to death by Mithridates VI, King of Pontus [now part of Turkey] successor of Mithridates V [who was assassinated in BC 120] conquered Colchis; home of the legendary Golden Fleece sought after by Jason and the Argonauts.

BC 83- The original Sibylline Books are destroyed by fire in 83 B.C.E., and a new collection is subsequently compiled, which are consequently also destroyed in 405 C.E. ~Microsoft Encarta Encyclopedia, 1998, article on Sibyls

The Sibyl, in Greek and Roman mythology, was any woman inspired with prophetic power by the god Apollo. “As soon as they [Christians] had destroyed one temple, they dashed away to the next. They toppled over walls, smashed idols, statues and art-objects and altars, and stole the temples wealth for themselves.” ~Libanios, Pro temples, 389 C.E.

Apollo is worshiped as the life giving sun, which, and according to Caesar, was worshiped by the Germans, when they knew of no other deities except fire and the moon. The Greek Sibyls [which Saint Augustine heartily believed in], are perceived to live in caves or near streams and capable of prophesy while in a frenzied trance, usually in Greek hexameters, which are handed down in writing. Early Greek writers mention only one Sibyl, the Erythraean Herophile, who predicted the Trojan War.

To Pope Pius XII, “I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians.” ~Mahatma Gandhi

"The Sibyls are quoted frequently by the early Fathers and Christian writers, Justin, Athenagoras, Theophilus, Clement of Alexandria, etc., they were known and used during the Middle Ages in both the East and the West. They all purport to be the work of the Sibyls." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, v. xiii, p. 770.

Clement of Alexandria devotes abundant chapters to showing the "Plagiarism by the Greeks of the Miracles related in the Sacred Books of the Hebrews," and he quotes as 'Inspired' the recognized forged book "Peter's Preaching," and the heathen Sibyls and Hystaspes.

"The Apostles, following the Lord, preached the Gospel to those in Hades. For it was requisite, in my opinion, that as here, so also there, the rest of the disciples should be imitators of the Master." ~Clement of Alexandria.

Clement declares Abraham was a great scientist, "As thin in astronomy we have Abraham as an instance, so also in arithmetic we have the same Abraham," the latter diploma being founded on the feat that Abraham, "Hearing that Lot had been taken captive, numbered his own servants, 318... This mystic number, expressed in Greek letters T I E, used as numerals: "The character representing 300 (T) is the Lord's sign [Cross], and I and E indicate the Savior's name." Such is the Christian rhetoric which is now accepted as 'Inspired' truth from the mouth of God. ~Strom. VI, xi; Ante-Nicene Fathers, ii, 499.

"Forgeries, most notable of these forged Christian addenda to the Pagan-Jewish forged Oracles, 'Is found in Book VIII, a lengthy composite of Jewish and Christian fraud, consisting of some 500 hexameter verses. The first 216 verses, are most likely the work of a second century Jew, while the latter part (verses 217- 500), beginning with an acrostic on the symbolical Christian word Ichthus is undoubtedly Christian, and dates most probably from the 3rd century." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 13, 770.

Like most of the naive ex-Pagan Fathers of Christianity, Tertullian is also a confirmed Sibyllist, and believes the forged Pagan oracles are the 'Inspired Truth of God,' and he cites several of her "Prophecies," assuring the ignorant masses with confidence, "And the Sibyl is thus proved no liar." ~Pallium, Ch. ii; Ante-Nicene Fathers, iv, 6.

Father Tertullian admits, in a tu quoque [a retort charging an adversary with being or doing what he criticizes in others] argument, that the Christians are 'Sun Worshipers,' "You [Pagans] say we worship the sun; so do you." ~Tertullian, Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 14, 525; Ad Nationes, xiii; Ante-Nicene Fathers, iii, 123.

"But Magi and astrologers came from the East." ~Matthew 2:1.

The interpreters of the stars were the first to announce the birth of Christ and among the first to be formally obliterated from the Christian Bible. In the 2nd century, approximately 200 years before the offending Codex Sinaiticus was ever in existence, the writings of Hippolytus, Barnabus, and Saint Ignatious evidence the fact that 2nd century Christians read, "God was manifest in the flesh" in their Bibles.

Hatred of the Jews stretches back to the times before Jesus, "Softly! Softly! I want none but the judges to hear me. The Jews have already gotten me into a fine mess, as they have many other gentleman. I have no desire to furnish further grist for their mills." ~Marcus Tullius Cicero, 1st century B.C.E., Oration in Defense of Flaccus.

Cicero writes, "The Jews belong to a dark and repulsive force. One knows how numerous this clique is, how they stick together and what power they exercise through their unions. They are a nation of rascals and deceivers."

So different are the Sinai Bible's New Testament [Codex Sinaiticus] from other early Christian versions then being published that the Church angrily tried to annul the dramatic new evidence that challenged its very existence, "The Sinaiticus manuscript also had a peculiar way of spelling the word 'Christian.' Wherever this title appears, the 4th Century manuscript spells it 'Chrestian,' and in a Vaticanus manuscript of the same age, it utilizes a slightly transitional spelling of, 'Chreistian.'" ~The Sinaiticus Codex was written on fine vellum, 390 leaves were discovered by Tischendorf, though it originally must have contained more than 730 pages. Most of the missing leaves are from the Old Testament, with the majority of Genesis, with 1 Chronicles now missing

"...Astrology now-a-days, forsooth, treats of Christ... Is the science of the stars of Christ; not of Saturn, or of Mars. But, however, that science has been allowed until the Gospel, in order that after Christ's birth no one should thenceforward interpret anyone's nativity by the heaven." ~On Idolatry, Ch. ix; Ante-Nicene Fathers iii, 65, some astrological passages survive in: Matthew 2:2, Ezekiel 4:6, Daniel 2:7, Exodus 40:38.

Modern translators of the Bibles have omitted the Phoenix, so appealing to the great Christian Father, Tertullian, and slipped in supplementary falsifications by substituting the word "Palm-tree" to express the flourishing state of the righteous. Concealed in obfuscation, circumlocutions, and devotedly pedantic perfidiousness the Romish Fathers will stand unchallenged and elevated amongst the ignorant masses who cannot read, much less argue religious idiocy and doctrines. The universalized religion created by Peter and Paul will claim millions of lives as the now powerful Roman seeks to compel all mankind to prostrate themselves and kiss the hand that will grant its powers only to those who accede to its supremacy.

"Must men die once for all, while birds in Arabia are sure of a Resurrection?" ~Tertullian, On the Resurrection of the Flesh, Ch. xiii; Ante-Nicene Fathers, iii, 554.

Nearly three-thousand years before Jesus, Egypt is the classic home of the myth of a slain and Resurrected God, "I am the Resurrection and the Life," which is merely an epitome of what the Egyptians chanted for ages about their great God, Osiris, the Judge of the Dead, who is one of the oldest and most revered Gods of Egypt.

The First Epistle is supposed to have been written about the year 96-98 C.E., by Clement, a close friend and coworker of Paul, according to the late "Tradition" first set in motion by Dionysius, A.D. 170. But "This Clement, was probably a Philippian." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 4, 13.

"Who the Clement was to whom the writings were ascribed, cannot with absolute certainty be determined." ~Ante-Nicene Fathers, i, 2.

Father Tertullian vouches, too, along with the other early Christian Fathers, for the spurious 'Official Report of Pilate to Caesar,' [Caesar was not a name but an official title] and for Pilate's conversion to Christianity by saying, "All these things Pilate did to Christ; and now in fact a Christian in his own convictions, he sent word of Him to the reigning Caesar, who was at the time Tiberius. Yes, and even the Caesars would have believed on Christ, if either the Caesars had not been necessary for the world, or if Christians could have been Caesars." ~Apoogy, Ch. xxi; Ante-Nicene Fathers, vol. iii, pg. 35.

"Then take a most complete and unassailable symbol of our hope [speaking of the Resurrection], subject alike to life and death. I refer to the bird, which is peculiar to the East, famous for its singularity, marvelous from its posthumous life, which renews its life in a voluntary death; its dying day is its birthday, for on it it departs and returns: once more a Phoenix where just now there was none; once more himself, but just now out of existence; another, yet the same. What can be more express and more significant for our subject; or to what other thing can such a phenomenon bear witness? God even in His own Scripture says: 'The righteous shall flourish like the Phoenix.'" ~Greek Septuagint: Dikaios os Phoenix Anthesei; Ps. xcii, 12.

The indiscretions of the Church as pertains to Scripture are innumerable. "Many writings have been falsely attributed to Pope Saint Clement: (1) The 'Second Clementine Epistle to the Corinthians.' Many critics have believed them genuine [they having been read in the Churches]... But it is now admitted on all hands that they cannot be by the same author as the genuine [?] Epistle to the Corinthians... (2) Two Epistles to Virgins.' (3) At the head of the Pseudo-Isidorian Decretals stand five letters attributed to Saint Clement. (4) Ascribed to Clement are the 'Apostolic Constitutions,' 'Apostolic Canons,' and the 'Testament of our Lord.' (5) The 'Clementines' or 'Pseudo-Clementines,' including the 'Recognitions and Homilies,' hereafter to be noticed." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 4, 14-15; cf. 17, 39.

Many Latin and most of the ancient Greek manuscripts were on reused vellum. A manuscript in the Vatican contained part of the 91st Book of Livy's 'Roman History.' The famous 'Sinai Bible' discovered by Tischendorf was written over with the lives of the Catholic female saints. Parts of the Iliad and the 'Elements' of Euclid were covered by monkish treatises.

No two of the 5,487 early Greek manuscripts of the New Testament are identical, except for the tiniest of fragments, and not one of these 5,487 manuscripts contains the same books and order of books as found in the modern New Testament.

The Codex Sinaiticus comes the closest, but it also contains the Epistle of Barnabas, and the Shepherd of Hermas, which are no longer considered Scripture by Christians.

It is note worthy that the earlier New Testament manuscripts have different wording than later copies, and where that wording differs, it usually expresses some doctrine now considered heretical by that branch of Christianity that became Orthodox and mainstream. ~New Testament Alterations, http://essenes.net/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=149&Itemid=563

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

The 'De Republica' of Cicero, was discovered under the 'Commentary' of Saint Augustine on 'Psalms,' and several of his 'Orations' under the 'Acts of the Council of Chalcedon.' "Other such monkish palimpsests were discovered to contain the Institutes of Gaius; eight orations of the Roman senator Symmachus, the Comedies of Plautus, parts of Euripides, epistles of Antoninus Pius, Lucius Verus, Marcus Aurelius, and others, the 'Fasti Consolaris' of 486, the Codex Theodosianus, are among the precious remains of Greek and Roman erudition which were "Preserved" in this monkish fashion in the erudite monasteries." ~Forgery in Christianity by Joseph Wheless.

As for "Monks constantly occupied in copying the classic texts," for the preservation and diffusion of Pagan culture, it is an ardent farce as they also inculcate their personal beliefs, thereby adding to Scripture! The sheer audacity of the Church to claim it has preserved the antiquities, when the monks couldn't read Greek nor good Latin, and many couldn't read at all, and all the while the Holy Church and Churchmen loathed Pagan culture and literature, it is beyond credulity that they would even attempt to preserve that which they detest. ~From Forgery in Christianity by Joseph Wheless.

Ichthus is the Greek word for fish, and the symbol of the fish was the fitting and universal symbol of the early Christians as typical of the "Catch" of the Apostolic fishers of men. The cabalistic word, 'Ichthus,' worked into the professedly Pagan Oracle in the form of an acrostic, is composed of the initial letters of the popular name and title of the Son of the Christian God, in the Greek, "Iesous Christos Theou Uios Soter," "Jesus Christ, Son of God, Savior."

The Church historian, Bishop Eusebius, preserves the Acrostic, taken from the Erythraean Sibyl, but says, "Many people, though they allowed the 'Erythrian Sibyl' to have been a prophetess, yet reject this Acrostic, suspecting it to have been forged by the Christians," which suspicion the good Bishop refutes by an appeal to Cicero, who, he assures, had read and translated it into Latin. ~Eusebius, Oration on Const., chap. 18-19; I, 274-5.

Father Saint Augustine, the misogynist often quotes the Sibylene verses.

"Accordingly, I judged it all the more necessary to find out what the truth was by torturing two female slaves who were called deaconesses. But I discovered nothing else but depraved, excessive superstition."

"The Erythraean Sibyl has indeed written some things clearly and manifestly relating to Christ... There are some, who suspected all these prophecies, which relate to Christ, and passed under the name of the Sibyl, to have been forged by the Christians." ~Saint Augustine, De Civ. Dei, xviii, 23; N&PNF. ii, 3723.

The 'Fish' anagram is an ancient Pagan symbol for fecundity [ancient phallic symbol], being the rage and veneration throughout Paganism in ancient times and is adopted by Christendom as the initials acrostically formed the name and title of its new deity, and that in the ancient science fish were supposed to be generated in the water without carnal copulation, and were thus peculiarly symbolic of the 'Virgin-Born' Christ. The Church Father, Tertullian, says, "We, little fishes, after the example of our Ichthus, are born in water." ~On Baptism, Ch. 1; Ante-Nicene Fathers, a Collection, vol. 3, 669.

Relics: Rome, playing on the ignorance of people, held all kinds of relics in veneration. "In the Church of All Saints at Wittenberg was shown a fragment of Noah's ark, some soot from the furnace of the Three Children, a piece of wood from the cradle of Jesus Christ, some hair from the beard of Saint Christopher, and nineteen thousand other relics of greater or less value." ~D'aubigne.

Father Clement of Alexandria attributes to the Sibyls the same inspiration as the Old Testament, and cites Peter and Paul as appealing to them for a prediction of the life and character of Jesus Christ, Peter and Paul speaking thus, "Take the Greek books in your hand, and look into the Sibyl. How clearly she speaks of one God, and of the things to come; then take Hystaspes also and read, and you will find the Son of God much more clearly and evidently described." ~Strom. I, 6, p. 761, Ed. Oxon.; also Lact., De ver. sap., I, 4, 15; Free Inquiry, p. 34.

Father Lactantius cites scores of Sibylline 'Prophecies' that are 'Forged' by the Christians for the belief and persuasion of the Pagans, who were effectively "Refuted by these testimonies," and thus "Brought Christ," some of them, says Lactantius, imploring that these prophetic verses, "Were not by the Sibyls, but made up and composed by our own writers," and is so confessed by the Catholic Encyclopedia, but the great Apologists argue, "Do not Cicero and other Pagan authors, dead long before Jesus, testify to the Sibyls?" Yes! To the Sibyls and their utterances then extant; not to the later Christian forgeries in their names! ~Forgery in Christianity by Joseph Wheless.

One has only to look up at the ceiling in Saint Peter's, in Rome, to verify the presence of the Sibyls in Catholic history. "It is therefore right, especially in a matter on which the whole plan of life turns, that every one should place confidence in himself, and use his own judgment and individual capacity for the investigation and weighing of the truth, rather than through confidence in others to be deceived by their errors, as though he himself were without understanding. God has given wisdom to all alike, that they might be able both to investigate things, which they have not heard, and to weigh things, which they have heard. Nor, because they [our ancestors] preceded us in time, did they also outstrip us in wisdom; for if this is given equally to all, we can not be anticipated in it by those who precede us." ~Father Lactantius, Divine Institutes, II, viii; Ante-Nicene Fathers, VII, 51.

Jesus, after his baptism, "Began to perform the greatest miracles, not by magical powers, but by heavenly strength and power... His powers were those, which Apollo called wonderful... And he performed all these things not by His hands, or the application of any remedy, but by His word and command, as the Sibyl had foretold, 'Doing all things by His word, and healing every disease.'" ~Father Lactantius.

Many chapters from the pre-Jesus era are replete with instances of the miracles of Jesus, alleged, each of them, to have been foretold by one or another of the Sibyls, and quoting the Christian-forged prophetic verses in proof. The Christ came to fulfill the Law; "...And the Sibyl shows that it would come to pass that this law would be destroyed by the Son of God: 'But when all these things which I told you shall be accomplished, then all the law is fulfilled with respect to Him.'"

"With five loaves at the same time, and with two fishes, He shall satisfy five thousand men in the wilderness; and afterwards taking all the fragments that remain, He shall fill twelve baskets to the hope of many." "But, perhaps the sacred writings speak falsely when they teach that there was such power in Him, that by His command He compelled the winds to obey Him, the seas to serve Him, disease to depart, the dead to be submissive."

Why should the Sibyls teach the same things in their own verses? One of whom, thus speaks, "But shall still the winds by His word, and calm the sea as it rages, treading with feet of peace and in faith."

"He shall walk on the waves, He shall release men from disease. He shall raise the dead, and drive away many pains; And from the bread of one wallet there shall be a satisfying of men." ~Greek Sibyls

When the Pagans discover the excessive similarities between their religious beliefs and Christianity the Roman Church will state that it is merely the work of the Devil who has fooled them into believing that their gods came first. "Some, refuted by these testimonies, are accustomed to have recourse to the assertion that these poems were not by the Sibyls, but made up and composed by our own writers. But he, will assuredly not think this who has read Cicero and Varro, and other ancient writers, who make mention of the Erythraean and other Sibyls from whose books we bring forth these examples; And these authors died before the birth of Christ according to the flesh. But I do not doubt that these poems were in former times regarded as ravings, since no one understood them. For they announced some marvelous wonders, of which neither the manner, nor the time, nor the author was signified. Lastly the Erythraean Sibyl says that it would come to pass that she would be called mad and deceitful." ~De Natura Deorum, ii.

"They will say that the Sibyl is mad, and deceitful: but when all things shall come to pass, Then ye will remember me; and no one will any longer Say that I, the prophete ss of the great God, am mad." "Therefore they were neglected for many ages; but they received attention after the nativity and passion of Christ had revealed secret things. Thus it was also with the utterances of the prophets, which were read by the people of the Jews for fifteen hundred [!] years and more, but yet were not understood until after Christ had explained them by His word and by His works. For the prophets spoke of Him; nor could the things which they said have been in any way understood, unless they had been altogether fulfilled." ~Lactantius, Div. Inst., Bk. IV, chap. xv; The Ante-Nicene Fathers, a Collection of the extant Writings of all the Founders of Christianity down to the Council of Nicaea, or Nice, in 325 A.D. American Reprint, eight volumes. The Christian Literature Publishing Co., Buffalo, N.Y., 1885. [xxx]. vii, 115, 116.

The Nicene delegates argued among themselves, expressing personal motives for inclusion of particular writings that promoted the finer traits of their own special deity. Throughout the meeting, howling factions were immersed in heated debates, and the names of fifty-three Gods were tabled for discussion, "As yet, no God had been selected by the council, and so they balloted in order to determine that matter... For one year and five months the balloting lasted...” ~God's Book of Eskra, Prof. S.L. MacGuire's translation, Salisbury, 1922, chapter xlviii, paragraphs 36, 41.

That heathens and even devils may be specially endued with the gift of prophecy by God for his glory, and God may make use of the Devil-in-Chief for this purpose, is expressly asserted by Pope Benedict XIV. ~Heric Virtue, III, 144, 150.

“In order to prove that the heathens were capable of Prophecy, refers to the instance of the Sibyls, who make clear mention of the ‘Mysteries of the Trinity,’ of the ‘Incarnation of the Word,’ of the Life, Passion, and Resurrection of Christ. It is true that the Sibylline poems now extant became in course of time interpolated; but as Pope Benedict XIV, 1740-1758, remarks, ‘This does not hinder much of them, especially what the early Fathers referred to, from being genuine and in no wise Apocryphal!’” ~The Angelic Doctor, Saint Thomas Aquinas, Catholic Encyclopedia vol. 12, 474.

The inference is inevitable, that Pagan Sibyls, Christian Church Fathers, and the Vicars of God, are strongly characterized by Ignorance, religious propaganda and Imposture, “But it happened after that Jesus rose out of those who [are] dead, and he spent eleven years speaking with his disciples, and teaching them only as far as the Places of the First precept [Law?], and as far as the Places of the First Mystery, this which (is) the inward of the veil which (is) within the First precept, namely the twenty-fourth mystery out(side) and below; these [Places], which become in the second Space of the First Mystery, which [is] before every Mystery, the Father in the form of dove. Jesus is saying to his disciples, ‘I came out of that First Mystery, namely the Last Mystery, which is the twenty-fourth,’ and which, the disciples knew not, and understood not, that, there is anything within that mystery; but they were thinking of that Mystery that it is the head of the Universe, and the head of all those, which become.” ~The Gnostics and Their Remains, Ancient and Mediaeval, C.W. King [1818 -1888], Wizards Bookshelf, 1973, 1887, 1864.

“When a religion has fallen and been succeeded by another, the more zealous advocates of the new belief sometimes find themselves in a curious state of embarrassment. So it is with regard to the heathen system and the Christian code. Among the numerous oracles given to the world in former days, some have chanced to find a remarkable accomplishment; and the pious but ill-judging Christian, unable to ascribe them to deities in whom men no longer believes, is driven to create for them a different origin. ‘God,’ says Rollin, ‘In order to punish the blindness of the Heathen, sometimes permits evil spirits to give responses conformable to the truth.’” ~Rollin, Histoire Ancienne, vol. I, 887.

A pernicious priesthood deceives and conceals, “The only evil spirit, which had an agency in the oracular sponges of antiquity was that spirit of craft imposture, which finds so congenial a home among an artful and cunning priesthood.” ~Anthon, Classical Dictionary, 4th ed., p. 929; Art. Orvalum.

“This transference was promoted by the numerous cases in which Christian saints became the successors of local deities, and Christian worship supplanted the ancient local worship. This explains the great number of similarities between Gods and Saints. For the often maintained metamorphosis of Gods into Saints no proof is to be found.” ~Catholic Encyclopedia.

The Catholic Encyclopedia even admits God-like attributes to most of its saints, but not Gods to saints.

“... Has indeed been said that the ‘Saints are the successors to the Gods.’ Instances have been cited... Of statues of Pagan Gods baptized and transformed into Christian Saints!” ~Catholic Encyclopedia Vol. 15, 710; cf., Is It God's Word? By Joseph Wheless, pg. 5, 7-9.

In a society born of superstitions and ignorance, many Gods are created, numerous myths, and half-truths spread, “Manifold as the varieties of [miracle] legends now seem to be, there are fundamentally not so very many different notions utilized. The legend considers the Saint as a kind of Lord of the elements, who commands the water, rain, fire, mountain, and rock; he changes, enlarges, or diminishes objects; flies through the air; delivers from dungeons [examples, Peter, Paul] and gallows; takes part in battles, and even in martyrdom is vulnerable; animals, the wildest and the most timid, serve him [e.g., the stories of the bear as a beast of burden; the ring in the fish; the frogs becoming silent, etc.]; his birth is glorified by a miracle; a voice, or letters, from Heaven proclaim his identity [all these score for Jesus the Christ]; bells ring of themselves; the Heavenly ones enter into personal intercourse with him [betrothal of Mary]; he speaks with the dead and beholds Heaven, Hell, and Purgatory; forces the Devil to release people from compacts; he is victorious over Dragons; etc. Of all this the authentic [?] Christian narratives know nothing [a confession that every Saint-tale of Bible and Church is a lie]. ~Forgery in Christianity by Joseph Wheless. There is a logical explanation for those hundreds of years of silence on Jesus, "The construct of Christianity did not begin until after the first quarter of the 4th century, and that is why Pope Leo X [d. 1521] called Christ a 'Fable,'" ~Cardinal Bembo: His Letters..., op. cit.

Purgatory is not of Christian origin as, "The Greeks even invented... A Purgatory, where a certain mild chastisement purified souls." ~Reinach.

What have the Greeks to do with Holy Scripture? The name, Jesus, is a Greek name, not Hebrew name. The Church will borrow Greek words and give them new meanings. e.g. "Homousios," which is translated by the phrase, "Of one substance," and used to describe Jesus' unique persona of Divinity, and in the dialogue in reference to whether the Father and the Son were of the "Same Substance."

And from the Greeks, we have the invention of Gods, "Since the masses of the people are inconsistent, full of unruly desires, passionate, and reckless of consequences, they must be filled with fears to keep them in order. The ancients did well, therefore, to invent Gods, and the belief in punishment after death." ~Polybius, 204(?) - 122(?) B.C.E.

Pluto, the 'God of Hell,' is looked upon with awe and dread, the great god on whom the destinies of mankind in the eternal mundane world would mainly depend; for it was said that to Pluto it belonged, "To purify souls after death." Purgatory being created in Paganism, as it is in Catholicism, the ostentatious priestcraft and superstitious leader of hypocrisy, their power will be wielded by this opinion of an indeterminate state, which will be attributed to the "God of Hell."

Christians aren't supposed to notice the evils of their Bible, "The God of the Bible measures up to the level of a petty and vicious tyrant. The God of the Bible punishes babies for the sins of their parents [Exodus 20:5, 34:7; Numbers 14:18; 2 Samuel 12:13-19]; punishes people by causing them to become cannibals and eat their children [II Kings 6:24-33, Lamentations 4:10-11]; gives people bad laws, even requiring the sacrifice of their firstborn babies, so that they can be filled with horror and know that God is their Lord [Ezekiel 20:25-26]; causes people to believe lies so that he can send them to Hell [II Thessalonians 2:11], and many other atrocities, far too many to list here. It would not be hard to measure up to, and exceed, that level of moral purity. Atheists surpass it every day." ~Doug Krueger, That Colossal Wreck.

The sublime creation, borrowed from Paganism, the serpent, the Devil's grandiose catalyst will be instrumental in seducing all of mankind into believing it was a sin for being born, whereby all the earth will worship with such astonishing reverence, the Holy Mother the Church, it being laid down in the Octateuch of Ostanas, that, "Serpents were the supreme of all Gods and the Princes of the Universe."

"These Heretics magnify the 'Serpent' to such a degree as to prefer him even to Christ Himself; for he, say they, gave us the first knowledge of good and evil. It was from a perception of his power and majesty that Moses was induced to erect the brazen serpent, to which whosoever looked was healed. Christ Himself, they affirm, in the Gospel imitates the sacred power of the serpent, when He says that, 'As Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness even so much the Son of Man be lifted up.' They introduced it when they bless the Eucharist." ~So says Tertullian, an early Father of the Church.

Another form of the 'Sun-Divinity,' or 'Teitan,' at Rome, was the 'Epidaurian' snake, worshipped under the name of "AEsculapius," that is, "The man-instructing serpent." Teitan, or Satan, in Rome, were identified with the "Serpent that taught mankind," that opened their eyes, and allegedly gave them the "Knowledge of good and evil." ~The Two Babylons by Rev. Alexander Hislop.

"But whence does this world of fantastic concepts arise? A glance at the pre-Christian religious narratives will dispel every doubt. All these stories are anticipated by the Greek chroniclers, writers of myths, collectors of strange tales, neo-Plutonism, and neo-Pythagorism. One need only refer to the 'Ellados Periegesis' of Pausanius, or glance through the codices collected by Photius in his 'Bibliotheca,' to recognize what great importance was attached to the reports of miracles in antiquity by both the educated and uneducated."

"But how was the transference of [these miracle] legends to Christianity consummated? ... Hellenism had already recognized this [fraudulent] characteristic of the religious fable, and would thus have been obliged to free itself from it in the course of time, had not the competition with Christianity forced the champions of the ancient polytheism to seek again in the ancient fables incidents to set against the miraculous power of Christ. In this way popular illusions found their way from Hellenism to Christianity.” ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol.9, 129-30.

“Saint Augustine, ‘De Cura, XII’, and also of Pope Saint Gregory I, the ‘Great, Dialogues, IV,’ XXXVI, the greatest book of Lies outside the Bible, relate of a man, who died by an error of the ‘Angel of Death’ and was again restored to life, the same story, which is already given by Lucian in his ‘Philopseudes. Such, verily for shame, is ‘That new Paganism later called Christianity.’” ~From the works of Joseph Wheless.

The ‘Grand Secret of the Most Holy Roman Empire’ is finally brought to light. The real name of the guardian divinity of Rome, the secret most jealously guarded, that when Valerius Soranus, a man of the highest rank, and, as Cicero declared, “The most learned of the Romans,” had imprudently divulged it, he was remorselessly put to death for his disclosure.

Admitted by the author of ‘Pompeii,’ in regards to a former representation, that the serpents in the secret compartment, hidden away in the inner depths of the Vatican, is only another means of exhibiting the dark divinities represented in the same secret upper compartment. The serpent, of which there is a double representation, is unquestionably the serpent of AEsculapius.

The fly-destroying swallow, therefore, must represent the same divinity. Now, every one knows what was the name by which “The Lord of the Fly,” or ‘Fly-Destroying God’ of the Oriental world was called... ‘Beel-zebub.’ The “Lord of the Fly,” to the profane it meant only the power that destroying the swarms of flies when these became, as they often did in hot countries, a source of torment to the people whom they invaded... the ‘Fly,’ which even the racially prejudiced Martin Luther declares as the earthly reincarnation of the Devil himself.

This name, as identified with the serpent, reveals itself as one of the distinctive names of Satan. ‘Baal-zebub’ means “The restless Lord,” even that unhappy naïve individual who “Goeth to and fro in the earth, and walketh up and down in it,” who “Goeth through dry places seeking rest, and finding none.” ~The Two Babylons by Rev. Alexander Hislop.

Priests are reluctant to admit that their sole purpose is to maintain their continuity, that of a workless class, which preys upon the naïve masses with superstition and fear.

“There were not less than seven temples of Isis in Rome itself, the number of the Roman faithful must have been very considerable, and on their offerings and the gifts of the state, a large staff of priests was maintained.” ~Encyc. of Gods, Jordan .

The inference appears inescapable, that Satan, in his proper name, appears as the ‘Great God’ of a secret and mysterious worship, and this may account for the extraordinary mystery observed on the subject matter. Gratian, 1090(?) - 1155, founder of the science of canon law abolishes the legal provision for the support of ‘Fire-Worship’ and ‘Serpent-Worship’ in Rome, we see how exactly the Divine prediction is fulfilled. “And the great Dragon was cast out, that old serpent called the Devil, and Satan, which deceiveth the whole world: he was cast out into the earth, and his angels were cast out with him.” ~Revelations 12:9.

“In every continent of the world, the Dragon chiefly represents the principle of fertility. The creation of the earth and the appearance of life came about as a result of a combination of the elements. The first living cell was born out of the earth, fertilized from the sky by wind and water. From this union of yin and yang sprang the seed which produced the dragon. Every year the same process takes place.” ~John Michell, View Over Atlantis, 1969.

The sudden appearance of Dragons during the early European Christianization era can be attributed to the Christian invasions and can be easily explained by the meticulous, and painstaking efforts the zealot Christians gave to writing their fictitious records to support their beliefs.

Thomas Jefferson omits Revelation entirely from the Bible he edited, and wrote that he, “Considered it as merely the ravings of a maniac, no more worthy nor capable of explanation than the incoherence of our own nightly dreams.”

Accepting the Pagan ‘Pontifex,’ the ‘Pontifex Maximus,’ the highest ranking priest in the Roman religion, to whose powers and prerogatives the Pope declares himself heir, was thus, also declared the ‘High-Priest of Satan,’ so, when the Pope entered into a league and alliance with that Pagan system, adopting the rites of ‘Devil-Worship,’ and by consenting to occupy the very position of that ‘Pontifex,’ he brought also all its abominations into the Church.

And in so doing, he became the ‘Prime Minister of the Devil,’ which is why some religions believe that the Pope is the Anti-Christ incarnate, residing in the 'Synagogue of Satan.'

BC 70- Jesus is not the only Messiah of his age; Flavius Josephus says prior to 70 C.E., that there are many, if not innumerable, Messiahs, and Christs, declaring the End of the World. ~ Reinach, Salomon. Orpheus. Pg. 217, Flavius Josephus, 37(?) -100 C.E., Jewish historian, The Jewish War, 170 B.C.E.-70. Matthew 16:27-28 [Jesus fails to make good on his promise to return during the lifetime of his disciples], Matthew 24:34-35, Mark 9:1, 13:30 and Luke 9:26-27.

"... A charismatically endowed descendant of David whom the Jews... Believed would be raised up by God to break the yoke of the heathen and to reign over a restored Kingdom of Israel to which all the Jews of the Exile would return..." ~Brandon, S.G.F., Religion in Ancient History, Pg. 248.

Why does the Christian clergy continue to prophecy the End of the World? "No one knows about that day or hour, not even the Angels in Heaven, nor the Son, but only the Father." ~Matthew 24:36.

BC 69-30- Cleopatra VII, BC 51-30, Queen of Egypt shares the throne with her brother/husband Ptolemy XIV, although her first love is Caesar for whom she bears a child, Caesarion. Incest is common throughout Egyptian history as well as the history of kings and queens of Europe, for after all, they do claim to be descendants of God and cannot marry commoners.

Until the middle of the last century in France, some fathers lived in concubinage with their daughters. Lugaid, the supreme king of Ireland, married his mother, and a king of Leinster had his two sisters as wives.

It is stated that the Pharaohs and Ptolemies married their sisters [Incest: for Gods can only marry Gods]. This gives rise to the expression that, "Princes and dogs know no relationship." ~From The Ten Commandments by Joseph Lewis

Throughout history we will see the struggle between the religious clerics who know better, but say nothing, and the monarchs who recognize the fact that if they do not adhere to being deified, to a lesser degree than God, they would end up relinquishing their authority to the masses or the Church which they did not desire.

"Almighty God! How long will this superstitious sect of Christians, and this upstart invention, endure?" ~Anecdota Ecclesiastica or Secret Church Histories, Vienta, Paris, 1822 reprint of 1731 ed., and Diderot's Encyclopedie quoting Pope Alexander VI on Christianity.

In the Philippines Pope Alexander VI, the epitome of ambition without conscience, will share his power with the King of Spain, Philip, and create a repressive nation conceived and controlled by a corrupt king and a corrupt Church, uncontrollable in graft and corruption. In the 21st century the legislative bodies continue to rule via suppression and ignorance by promising an end to graft and corruption, with the Roman Catholic Church acquiescing and nodding its approval for laws to improve the plight of the masses which will never be implemented.

BC 64- Israel is conquered by the Romans, under Pompeii, who continues allowing the Jewish migration to Rome, as long as they also continue paying tribute.

BC 63- The Jewish zealots are conquered by the Romans: The Jews are seen as a threat to the Roman Empire and their temples are desecrated and burned in retaliation for rebelling.

BC 59-AD 17- Totus Livius, Roman historian whose published works, "Ab Urbe Condita Libri" gives a detailed history of the times, traditions, and practices of the people in his times. It is from books such as this that we gained knowledge as to Roman laws during the time of Jesus. It is not a crime punishable by death to steal.

If Jesus is crucified between "Two Thieves," then their sentence of death was not for stealing. It was a serious crime against the Roman Empire that they were tortured and condemned to death.

BC 51- Caesar writes of the Druids in Britain who study the stars and the power of an "Immortal God." Recruited from the upper classes the Druids performed a ritualistic ceremony advancing the novice by degrees. They had sacred poems and practiced divination. One day was set aside each week for religious purposes and celebrated December 25th [winter solstice] at which time they performed their initiation rites. They believed in and practiced human sacrifices.

This cult is replaced by Christianity around 300 C.E., and is easily accepted due to similarities in Christian ritual and dogma. "In the Egyptian temple would be found a crib or manger, with a figure of the infant Horus lying in it and a statue of his mother nearby, for the ancient Egyptians, centuries before the Gospel Jesus, had set aside December 25th as the birthday of their Gods." ~Wright, L. Jesus, the Pagan Sun-god.

The masses look upon the Greek speaking as educated and quite knowledgeable. The early Gospels are written in the language of the predominantly educated, in Koine Greek, not the language of the Jews, Aramaic, nor the Romans [Latin] and quote several Greek Pagan authors such as Aratus and Cleanthes as well as the Greek Septuagint 300 times instead of the Jewish Scriptures.

BC 47-Maps of North and South America are allegedly contained in the famous library of Alexandria, Egypt. Long acknowledged by historians, that ancient maps existed in various cultures, it remains a perplexing problem as to how the Turkish maps of Piri Reis of AD 1513 show the outline of South America and Brazil's coastline and are said to have been based on even older ancient maps.

BC 45-The Romans, per Julius Caesar, adopt the solar calendar. This calendar is 11 minutes and 4 seconds longer than the one in use today.

BC 31-Ephraims, Genesis 48, I Kings 12, revises the End of the World Doctrine regarding the restoration by allowing a zero decade causing the year 31 to be the end of the Last Jubilee. This occurred just before an earthquake and their leader is henceforth called, "Earthquake." ~Matthew 28:2.

Greek pedants living in Rome are called neo-Atticists. They set out to revive the form of the Attic dialect of the Greek language, later called 'Koine,' that had been current in the 5th and 4th centuries B.C.E. Koine Greek is the language spoken by Paul. ~See Acts 14:11 where Paul and Barnabas are mistaken for Greek speaking Gods.

The Star of Bethlehem : Jesus is not the only one to have a star indicating his Divine Birth, "Behold, the star of Caesar came forth as a sign." ~Virgil, Eclogue 9.47, 42 B.C.E., cf. Matthew 2:1-2.

"The Julian star outshines all others just as the Moon outshines the lesser lights." ~Horace, Odes 1.12.46-48, 24 B.C.E.

"In the original Greek, however, Matthew's text contains far more evidence of the Magi's astrological talents than either Latin or English translations are able to carry. In the Authorized Version, for example, Matthew's Magi come 'From the East,' and see their star 'In the East.' The Greek has magoi coming from anatolai, 'The East,' Usually written in the plural, yet seeing their star en te anatole, the singular form and thus not a reference to where they were when they saw the star. No writer of Greek in antiquity would employ two different usages to mean the same thing; but anatole also has a specific astronomical and astrological application. It refers to the achronychal rising of a star or planet, when the object is in direct opposition to the sun, rising in the East as the sun is setting in the West and visible throughout the night in an arc. We know from cuneiform tablets now in various museums that the Babylonian astrologers, for instance, regarded such a phenomenon as exceptionally significant, calculating positions for its occurrence with enormous accuracy for the potent outer planets of Mars, Jupiter, and Saturn, and able to predict astronomical events far into the future ..." ~Paul William Roberts, Journey of the Magi, 1995, p. 356.

The year 31 would commence the millennium [solar]. The Diaspora Essene support the House of David, although they will accept another king, with the House of David subordinate. For this reason Herod holds all Essene in high respect. Many of the doctrines and narratives contained in the Christian Scriptures are almost identical with those held by the Buddhists, and the Essene [Ascetic Jews] or Therapeut monks of Egypt, Essene being the Egyptian, and Therapeut the Greek name for "Healer."

The first followers of Jesus, Jesusites or Yesuans, were nearly all Jewish, Essenes, Jesus being one himself. The Yesuans were not called Christians till the latter part of the 1st century, at Antioch. It was to the espousal of the cause of Jesus by the Essene magicians that the future success of Christianity was due. They accepted the Jesus the Nasarene [Nasorean], whom the Jews, rejected as the expected Messiah, or Avator. It merely required a change of names for the Scriptures of these Essenes to become the Scriptures of the new sect.

The word, "Jesus" is actually another Biblical mistranslation of a Greek mistranslation. In Hebrew "Yeshua" means "Salvation," while the name Jesus has no actual intrinsic meaning in English whatsoever.

The probability that that sect of ascetics, the Therapeutae, established in Egypt and its neighborhood many years before the period assigned by later theologians as that of the birth of Jesus, were the original fabricators of the writings contained in the New Testament, now becomes a certainty on the basis of evidence furnished by the statement of the Catholic historian, Bishop Eusebius, that, "... Those ancient Therapeutae were Christians, and that their ancient writings were our Gospels and Epistles." ~Doane, Bible

Myths

The books of the New Testament were written on papyrus, some in Greek and some in Latin; "Matthew" being written in Syro-Chaldaic; "Mark," "Luke," "John," "Acts," and "Romans," in Ancient Greek. It is notable that the pretended genuine "First Epistle" does not contain, nor does it mention the name of any one as its author, nor name Clement; its address is simply: "The Church of God which sojourns at Rome, to the Church of God sojourning at Corinth."

There is only one manuscript of it in existence, a translation into Latin from the original Greek. This is the celebrated manuscript of "Holy Scripture" is known as 'Codex A,' in the Vatican Library, which was first discovered and presented to King Charles I of England by Cyril of Alexandria, in 1628; the Fathers cited both I and II Clement as Scripture.

On this manuscript, at the end of I Clement, is written, "The First Epistle of Clement to the Corinthians," a subscription which proves itself a forgery and that it was not written by Clement, who could not know that a later forger would write a "Second Clement," so as to give him occasion to call his own the First. ~Ante-Nicene Fathers, vol. 8, 55-56.

The Apocrypha Books of the Old Testament include:

- † Historical Books
- † 1 Esdras and 2 Esdras [Once accepted and included in the Catholic version of the Bible]
- † 1 Maccabees and 2 Maccabees.
- † Additions to the book of Daniel [the song of the three young men and Bel and the Dragon]
- † Addition to the Book of Esther.
- † Letter of Jeremiah [usually added to the Book of Baruch]
- † The prayer of Manasseh.
- † Book of Myths.
- † The Book of Baruch [often this book is added to the Books of Prophecy or to the Book Revelation]
- † Tobit
- † Judith.
- † Books of Revelation.
- † The Revelation of Esdras.
- † Books of Teaching.
- † Wisdom of Solomon.
- † Book of Sirach.

Most of the books of the Apocrypha were written in ancient Greek but the books of Tobit, Judith, Sirach and 1 Maccabees are thought to have been written originally in Hebrew or Aramaic, and then translated into Greek. Twenty-seven books are now considered to be Canonical, but there were sixty-one others now classed as Apocryphal.

"Twelve were excluded at first, but afterwards received as Canonical; among the Apocryphal Books were the 'Gospel of the Egyptians,' one of the Essene Scriptures, and one a Gospel, which circulated among the Christians of the first three centuries, containing the doctrine of a 'Trinity,' a Doctrine, which was not established in the Christian Church until 327 C.E., but which was taught by a Buddhist sect in Alexandria, Egypt. There are forty-one, consisting of absurd fables, many of which have been lost or destroyed; and twenty-eight writings mentioned or referred to in the various Canonical Books, which have also been lost." ~H.J. Hardwicke, Evolution and Creation.

The letters I.H.S., to a Christian represent, "Jesus Hominum Salvator," "Jesus the Savior of men."

But, to the ancients, they represented, "Isis, Horus, Seb," that is, "The Mother, the Child, and the Father of the gods," "The Egyptian Trinity."

After centuries of judicious examination, we now find that, "Of the 182 works accepted for centuries as the genuine writings of Christians during the first 180 years of the present era, only twelve are now contended by theologians to be genuine; 170 forged writings permitted by the alleged 'Guider into all truth' to have existed for centuries, and believed in by poor, feeble man." ~Julian, Old and New Testament Examined.

BC 30-Hillel's Golden Rule, "What is hateful to thyself do not so to another." ~ cf. Psalms 18:7-11.

BC 20-50-Philo of Alexandria, Jewish Philosopher, Platonist, Monotheist [One God], attempts to alter the way the historical Books of Moses are preserved by using Hellenism [Greek] philosophy and by using elaborate allegories to describe events.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

Philo's god lacks human qualities, "... He just exists." His god makes himself known via "Powers." Philo had a great knowledge of Greek history and philosophy and incorporated these elements into an interpretation of God with certain attributes or elements later to be incorporated into the Catholic "Logos." The Jews use a secret code to write their Torah, each letter having a corresponding number., and this code is used for maintaining accuracy in copying as well as secrecy of interpretations of their scriptures and to protect the secret wisdom from outsiders. Example: QBL = Hebrew word meaning "From mouth to ear." It is also a secret code of the growing Jewish mysticism that is to proliferate in later centuries in the teaching of the Cabbala and the Sephiroth of the Tree of Life.

The early Christians are not so methodical with their translations of Scripture as the Jews. Modern Biblical historians have misled the masses to further their religious beliefs, with mis-interpretations running rampant and no one to keep them in check. English translations have been manipulated so as to induce the reader to believe that the Jews were monotheists or worshipers of one only God, and to render obscure the immortal character of "Yahuh," the "Lord."

Space Aliens(?) "Elohim," "Those who came from the sky," literally "The Gods," is rendered "God," and "Yahuh Elohim," literally, "Yahuh of the Gods," is rendered "Lord God." Jephthah, who sacrificed his daughter because she came to greet him, argues with the Amorites that every nation is entitled to what its national God bestows upon it. ~Judges 2:24.

"Whom when we saw we were astonished, for their bodies were whiter than any snow, and redder than any rose. And the redness of them was mingled with the whiteness, and, in a word, I am not able to declare their beauty. For their hair was curling and flourishing [flowery], and fell comely about their countenance and their shoulders like a garland woven of nard [spikenard] and various flowers, or like a rainbow in the air: such was their comeliness." ~Apocalypse of Peter, verses 8-10.

The sixty-eighth Psalm has been positively recognized as a song to the "Sun-God!" Later to be recognized as the family god of Emperor Constantine. It opens with the invocation, "Let God arise," literally, "Let the Mighty One arise," and bids all inferior creatures, "Cast up a highway for Him that rideth through the Heavens by his name Yah."

"Long before this, belief in the old polytheism had been shaken. The world was fully ripe for monotheism or its modified form, henotheism; but this monotheism offered itself in varied guises, under the forms of Oriental religions; in the worship of the Sun, in the veneration of Mithras, in Judaism, and in Christianity. Whoever wished to make a violent break with the past and his surroundings sought out some, Oriental form of worship, which did not demand from him too great a sacrifice."

"Some... Believed that they could appropriate [the truth contained in Judaism and Christianity] without being obliged on that account to renounce the beauty of other worships. Such a man was the Emperor Alexander Severus, 222-235; another so minded was Aurelian, 270-275, whose opinions were confirmed by Christians like Paul of Samosata. Not only Gnostics and other heretics, but Christians who considered themselves faithful, held in a measure to the worship of the Sun. [Pope] Leo the Great in his day, 440-461, says that it was the custom of many Christians to stand on the steps of the Church of Saint Peter and pay homage to the Sun by obeisance and prayers." ~From Forgery in Christianity by Joseph Wheless.

Pope Leo, the Great is the first representative of the Catholic Church who was consistent, exclusive, Universal Papacy, advocated even the penalty of death for heresy.

The Jews are instigating rebellion against the Roman Empire, and a Gentile spy like Paul could be immensely priceless. Paul hopes to extinguish this nationalist flame of the Jews by diluting it with Gentiles, and several decades later some of them, by and large ignorant men and women, still believe Paul's con and even hold suppers in his name in the larger Greek and Roman cities.

Paul teaches his version of Christianity with no prior knowledge of any of the teachings of Jesus, and there is not a single saying of Jesus in the Gospels, which is quoted by Paul in his many Epistles as Paul never quotes from any existing sermons and speeches, parables and prayers, of Jesus. Paul does not speak of Jesus' supernatural birth, or even that he fed a multitude with a few loaves and fishes.

And yet, Judas has to kiss Jesus so that the Roman soldiers will know who he is.

Saint Paul never tells his credulous audience that Jesus commanded the dead to rise, that Jesus cast out devils, that Jesus cured the faithful of leprosy and blindness and performed many other wonderful works to persuade the unbelieving generation of Jesus Christ's Divinity.

Why? Because Paul did not know of these alleged exploits. Paul must have quoted them to potential converts or in doctrinal disputes if he knew. The only answer is that Paul knew nothing of them, and that he did not mean either the Gospel Jesus is not historic or Paul was not teaching the religion of Jesus.

"It would be a historical anomaly without a precedent, that Christ should have performed any of the extraordinary acts attributed to him in the Gospels, and no Roman or Grecian historian, and neither Philo nor Josephus, both writing in that age, and both living almost on the spot where they are said to have been witnessed, and both recording minutely all the religious events of that age and country, make the slightest mention of one of them, nor their reputed authors. Such a historical fact banishes the last shadow of faith in their reality." ~All History Ignores Him by Kersey Graves, 1875.

Justin Martyr, the eminent early Father of the Church, in the middle of the 2nd century attempts to establish the Divinity of Christ. Yet with more than 300 quotations from the sacred books of the Old Testament and nearly one hundred from the Apocrypha, he makes no utilization of the four Canonical Gospels. Nowhere does Justin Martyr even mention the names of Matthew, Mark, Luke and John. The Canonical Gospels are only definitely heard of after 100 years, after the death of the Divine Jesus.

End of the World: Authors of the Gospels predicted the Doomsday almost immediately [Jesus saying it will come to pass in his own generation], "There be some standing here, which shall not taste of death, till they see the Kingdom of God." ~Luke 9:27. Matthew 16:27-28 [Jesus fails to make good on his promise to return during the lifetime of his disciples], Matthew 24:34-35, Mark 9:1, 13:30 and Luke 9:26-27.

A quantity of Pseudo-Epigraphic books were published, most notably 2 Peter, in which the Christian believer is encouraged to remain firm within the faith, while fallaciously reinforcing to the Christian believer that, "One thousand years is as a Day with the Lord," in order that their Scriptural endings of the "Last Days" can be understood to apply to a larger period of time. In other words, the Biblical "Last Days" can now apply to more than 1000 years beyond, which negates Jesus' saying of he will return soon, and evangelicals now use it to apply to their so-called fulfilled Biblical prophecies. Christ's Second Coming was believed to coincide with the destruction of the temple at Jerusalem or soon thereafter, which it didn't and Scripture is now in error, for Paul preached the "End of Time" within their generation.

Jesus asserts that the End of the World is imminent [which the Apostles interpret as being within their lifetime], and warns his Disciples to be ready. Then he tells them to build a Church from which to advocate his message! But, if the End of the World is at hand, why would Jesus tell his friends to build a Church? Most of his immediate followers return to Judaism when it does occur.

Christian Evangelists and Fundamentalists have a lot of fun with this one as they like to scare their congregation; the "Sky is Falling!" With the End of the World at hand, Church attendance increases and so does their collections. But Jesus himself, in Scripture says, "Heaven and earth will pass away, but My words shall not pass away. But of that day and hour no one knows, not even the angels of Heaven, nor the Son, but the Father alone." ~Jesus Christ, Matthew 24:35-36.

"An untold number of people have tried to predict the Lord Jesus' return by using elaborate time tables. Most date setters do not realize mankind has not kept an unwavering record of time. Anyone wanting to chart for example 100 B.C.E., to 2000 C.E., would have contend with the fact 46 B.C.E., was 445 days long, there was no year 0 B.C.E., and in 1582 we switched from Julian Years [360 days] to Gregorian [365 days]. Because most prognosticators are not aware of all these errors, from the get go the ir math is already off by several years." ~Library of Date Setters of the End of the World, <http://www.bible.ca/pre-date-setters.htm>.

Early Christians accordingly expect the World's End so soon that they determine that there is no reason to marry, have sex, or to give birth to children who will never grow to adulthood, which is a major reason for Christianity's renunciation of marriage [and sex is a sin]. Motherhood will only harm women in the convulsions of the last days: "Woe unto them that are with child, and to them that give suck, in those days!" ~Luke 21:23.

Christianity as it is represented today appears to be merely another "New form of Paganism," and after it became the official or State religion, consciously and purposely, by sword and by fire, in furtherance of the then Imperial policy of "One State, one Religion," under the murderous Emperor Constantine, perfected the amalgamation of the salient features of all the fluxing Pagan religions of the Empire.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

What was created was a conglomeration of 'Heathen' thoughts, morals, and religious preaching so as to bring all Pagans within the one State/Church, which is accredited by secular and Church history; and which is quite ingenuously revealed by the Holy Mother the Church, treating the influence of Constantine as Christianity when no other religion would accept the Emperor after he wantonly murdered his family. "When such conditions prevailed [ignorance] it is easy to understand that many of the emperors yielded to the delusion that they could unite all their subjects in the adoration of the one 'Sun-God' who combined in himself the Father-God of the Christians and the much-worshiped Mithras; thus the empire could be founded anew on the unity of religion. It looks almost as though the last persecution of the Christians were directed more against all irreconcilable and extremists than against the great body of Christians... It was especially in the West that the veneration of Mithras predominated!"

"Would it not be possible to gather all the different nationalities around his altars? Could not 'Sol Deus Invictus,' to whom even Constantine dedicated his coins for a long time, or Sol Mithras Deus Invictus, venerated by Diocletian and Galerius, become the supreme god of the empire? Constantine .. had not absolutely rejected the thought even after a miraculous event [!] had strongly influenced him in favor of the God of the Christians... For a time it seemed as if merely tolerance and equality were to prevail. Constantine showed equal favor to both religions. As Pontifex Maximus he watched over the heathen worship and protected its rights... In the dedication of Constantinople in 330 a ceremonial half pagan-half Christian was used, The chariot of the 'Sun-God' was set in the marketplace, and over its head was placed the Cross of Christ while the Kyrie Eleison was sung."

"Shortly before his death Constantine confirmed the privileges of the priests of the ancient Gods.. In the same way religious freedom and tolerance could not continue as a form of equality; the age was not ready for such a conception, without realizing the full import of his actions, Constantine granted the Church one privilege, after another. As early as 313 C.E., the Church obtained immunity for its Ecclesiastics, including freedom from taxation... Emperor Constantine moreover placed Sunday under the protection of the Emperor... It is true that the believers in Mithras also observed Sunday as well as Christmas. Consequently Constantine speaks not of the day of the Lord, but of the everlasting day of the 'Sun.'" ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 4, 297-301.

"The reason why Christmas came to be celebrated on December 25 remains uncertain, but most probably the reason is that early Christians wished the date to coincide with the Pagan Roman festival marking the 'Birthday of the 'Unconquered Sun' [Natalis Solis Invicti]; this festival celebrated the winter solstice, when the days again begin to lengthen and the sun begins to climb higher in the sky.'" ~Encyclopedia Britannica.

"Measure not men by Sundays, without regarding what they do the week after!" ~Fuller.

"Merry Christmas?" Even the 'Christmas Tree' ritual is banned in ancient customs as a practice to be reviled, as the Fir tree signifies the rebirth of the god Baal, and is a testimony to Baal Tarmal the Pagan Messiah. ~ Read Jeremiah 10:1-5.

Ritual murder is also given a different perspective by the early Christians, "Thou shalt not delay to offer the first of thy ripe fruits, and of thy liquors: the firstborn of thy sons shalt thou give unto me." ~ In Exodus 22:29, which is a remnant of the time when the ancient Hebrews ritually murder their first son, sacrificing him to their god.

"A very general observance required that on the 25th of December the birth of the 'New Sun' should be celebrated, when after the 'Winter Solstice' the days began to lengthen and the Invincible star triumphed again over darkness. It is certain that the date of this 'Natalis Invicti' was selected by the Church as the commemoration of the Nativity of Jesus, which was previously confused with the Epiphany... this substitution, which took place at Rome probably between 354 and 360 AD, was adopted throughout the Empire and that is why we celebrate Christmas on the 25th of December." ~From: Astrology and Religion among the Greeks and Romans, Franz Cumont [1868 -1947], Dover, 1960.

"In the religion of Sol, the festivals were determined by astronomy. The greatest festival was held on December 24—25th, at the time of the winter solstice. Because from this date the length of the day began to increase, it was regarded as the day of the rebirth of the god and of the renovation of life." ~From: Encyclopaedia Britannica, 1994, Vol. 24. Mystery Religions, by Reinhold Merkelbach.

"In the West the festival often begins with midnight mass, celebrating the coming of the light into a darkened world." ~From: Oxford Illustrated Encyclopedia of Peoples and Cultures, Volume Editor Richard Hoggart, Oxford, 1992, Vol.7.

In the older Pagan nations, which did not take to legends with all the fierce solemnity with which the Jews held theirs, the deification stories are modified and enlarged as time goes on, and the legends of Astarte and Adoni in its last form, as Lucian, Plutarch, and Saint Cyril give it, just before the sun of Syria was darkened by the shadow of the cross, and the scent of the myrtles and cooing of the doves of Astarte were thrust into the horrid category of sins.

Thus was the ultimate merger and total identity of Paganism with "The new Paganism called Christianity" finally established by law and by Imperial policy of "One State and One Religion," to which conformity is enforced by brutal laws of confiscation and death; all the other religions of the Empire are fused by fire and by sword into a bastardized Christianity, which Jesus himself would not recognize today. ~cf. Regarding conformity: Matthew verses 13-14.

Christmas: "On 17 December 1603 the Tübingen-educated German astronomer John Kepler observed a striking conjunction of the planets Saturn and Jupiter in the constellation Pisces, and calculated that a similar conjunction must have occurred in 7 B.C.E. He speculated that this might have been the true year of Jesus' birth, it generally being agreed that the original dating of the nativity to the year 1 C.E., by the 6th century monk Dionysius Exiguus [Denny the Dwarf/midget], derived from a miscalculation. Kepler found support for his theory in a Jewish rabbinical reference to the Messiah appearing when Saturn and Jupiter were in conjunction in the constellation of Pisces." ~Ian Wilson, Jesus, The Evidence.

"The Christian ritual developed when, in the 3rd century, the Church left the Catacombs. Many forms of self-expression must needs be identical, in varying times, places, cults, as long as human nature is the same. Water, oil, light, incense, singing, procession, prostration, decoration of altars, vestments of priests, are naturally at the service of universal religious instinct. Little enough, however, was directly borrowed by the Church, nothing, without being 'baptized,' as was the Pantheon. In all these things the spirit is the essential: the Church assimilates to herself what she takes, or, if she cannot adapt, she rejects it. Even Pagan feasts may be 'Baptized': certainly our processions of April 25th are the Robigalia; the Regation Days may replace the Ambarualia; the date of Christmas Day may be due to the same instinct which placed on December 25th the Natalis Invictis of the Solar Cult." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, Vol. 11, p. 390.

The frequent references to the: "Sun-Gods," under various names, has been veiled by the English translations, the title "Adonai," is the Phoenician name for the "Sun-God," and when it occurs singularly translates to "The Lord;" but when it is met with in conjunction with "Yahuh" or "Elghiin," it is the "Lord God." Psalm 110:1 was written to read, "Yahuh said to Adonai," or "To our Adonis," "Sit at my right hand," Adonai being the revered 'Sun God.' From the Sun God of the ancients to the Sun God, Jesus, "For our conversation is in Heaven; from whence also we look for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ." ~Philippians 3:20.

The pious Christian Fathers are themselves sorely puzzled and scandalized by the early associations with the Pagan cults as their religious tomes are replete with naive attempts to explain the mystery of it, which they attributed to the blasphemous wiles of the Devil.

And the infamous Father Justin Martyr states, "It having reached the Devil's ears that the prophets had foretold the coming of Christ, the Son of God, he set the heathen Poets to bring forward a great many who should be called the sons of Jove. The Devil laying his scheme in this, to get men to imagine that, the true history of Christ was of the same character as the prodigious fables related of the sons of Jove." ~Apology, ch. 54; Ante-Nicene Fathers, a Collection of the extant Writings of all the Founders of Christianity down to the Council of Nicaea, or Nice, in 325 A.D. American Reprint, eight volumes. The Christian Literature Publishing Co., Buffalo, N.Y., 1885. Vol. 1, 181-182, Psalm 95, I Corinthians 10:20, Exodus 22:28.

The popular deity of Thebes, Amen- Ra, is translated in Psalms as "Ammon," the "Hidden Sun," or "One who is not visible." He is one with Adonai; with the "Stygian Jupiter," when he descended to the lowest point of his annual declination in late December; with the Olympian Zeus, rising to his highest point of ascension in June; and with the Jupiter Ammon, worshipped as the hidden or occult God, and reappearing in the sign 'Aries.' ~see Isaiah 45:15.

Before Christianity, "The Devil had blasphemously imitated the Christian rites and doctrines ... Always seeing in Pagan analogies the trickery of devils." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, 393.

The name "Ammon" in Isaiah 65:16, is twice erroneously rendered "The God of Truth," instead of "The
To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

God Ammon. "This deity is again alluded to in Psalms 10:1, where "Lord" ought to read "Yahuh," and again in Psalms 89:46, "Yahuh, how long wilt thou hide thyself?"

And, in verse 89: 52, "Blessed be Yahuh for ever more (who is) Ammon, even Ammon." The name "Ammon," in its more recognizable shortened form is "Amen," also found its way later into the Greek language, and is used in the sense of "Truly."

In the Apocalypse the word is written with "Ho" prefixed, when it is rendered "The Amen," which is now meaningless expression. In Revelation 3: 4 it should read, "These things, saith Ammon, the true and faithful witness."

Another name for the Hebrew "Sun God" is "Shaddai," sometimes conjoined with the prefix 'El,' Bel, the Babylonian Sun-God, and Baal, the Syrian. Yahuh, or Yahweh, is usually written "Jehovah," which does little to convey to us of the true Hebrew pronunciation of "Yahouyeh."

The name was pronounced by the Semites by and large, "By whom Yahuh was worshipped," as "Yahuh," "Yahu," or "Yho." ~El Shaddai, is often translated God Almighty, meaning God of the Mountains. Cf. Wm. F. Albright, The Names Shaddai and Abram, Journal of Biblical Literature, LIV, 1935, 180 ff.

In the reign of the Assyrian King Sargon II, the throne of Hamath was occupied by 'Yahou-behdi,' which literally means the 'Servant of Yahuh.' ~from M.D. Aletheia: The Rationalist's Manual.

"The discovery and decipherment of the Assyrian records, have raised the curtain upon forgotten dramas of the earth's history, and have removed the Jewish writings from the solitary position they once occupied. We have now before us the voluminous literature of a race allied to the Jews in blood, creed, thought, and language. The stories of Creation, Deluge, and Tower of Babel are shown to be Babylonian; the ritual, dress, and furniture of the Temple were Babylonian; and the religious poetry of the Hebrews is anticipated by that of Babylon. The history and chronology of the Hebrew scriptures are proved faulty and unreliable, and the whole evidence at command supports the opinion of critics as to the very late date of the Jewish literature." ~Edwards, Witness of Assyria, pg. 9.

BC 10-Ancient Homosexuality: August 1st, the birth of Claudius, Emperor of Rome who made significant contributions to the gladiatorial games or to his male lovers.

An early Christian, Tertullian denounces the blood spilling gladiatorial events, not so much for their vicious barbarity as for their Pagan idolatry, "... It shall be proved true that the entire apparatus of the spectacles originates from idolatry... They belong to the Devil and his pomp and his Angels because of the idolatry involved." And, "Take note, O Christian, how many unclean Deities have taken possession of the circus." ~Tertullian.

BC 7-The Roman calendar with ten months [304 days] and two months added later [January and February] has an extra month added every second year.

BC 4-CE 65-Lucius Annaeus Seneca, astronomer, astrologist, born in Cordoba Spain, Roman Philosopher, believed that the earth will burn up when all the planets that now move in different courses come together in the Crab [16,000 C.E., or 18,000 C.E.] and that a future flood will take place when the same conjunction takes place in Capricorn [AD 4,000 or AD 6,000].

BC 4-CE 1(?) -Apollonius, a great prophet, possibly the model for Jesus. The story, which the Christian Churches has suppressed for centuries. ~Note: Emperor Septimius Severus is said to have had both busts of both Apollonius and Jesus in his chapel.

Appollonius of Tyana [Tyana, Cappadocia], Death: ca. 97, Ephesus, Anatolia; School/tradition: Hellenistic philosophy, sophism; Pythagoreanism, aestheticism, and vegetarianism. "Therefore God, knowing that they were barbarized to brutality, and that the world was not sufficient to satisfy them [for it was created according to the proportion of men and human use], that they might not through want of food turn, contrary to nature, to the eating of animals, and yet seem to be blameless, as having ventured upon this through necessity, the Almighty God rained 'Manna' upon them, suited to their various tastes; and they enjoyed all that they would. But they, on account of their bastard nature, not being pleased with purity of food, longed only after the taste of blood. Wherefore they first tasted flesh." ~The Sons of God and the Daughters of Men: Notes from the Books of Ysrael. From Hebrew Myths: The Book of Genesis By Robert Graves and Raphael Patai, <http://www.piney.com/index.html>.

The contemporaries of Jesus, both in miracle working and in preaching. Christian authors have, for centuries, credited his work as being in the 4th century C.E.; if they acknowledge him at all. Abstaining from meats is recommended, but not enforced, due to its negative impact upon the carnivorous masses.

"But they are not concealed from us, who know the Mysteries of the creation, and for what reason it is permitted to the Demons to do those things in the present world; how it is allowed them to transform themselves into what figures they please, and to suggest evil thoughts, and to convey themselves, by means of meats, and of drink consecrated to them, into the minds or bodies of those who partake of it, and to concoct vain dreams to further the worship of some idol." ~The Recognitions of Clement, About the Recognitions and Homilies. 4.19, Demons Incite to Idolatry.

Apollonius is a simple man, going straight to the public, offering his religious path at no charge, and at the same time shunning any official institutions. "In time, this Teacher gathered followers who absorbed his message, so that he would eventually be recognized as the founder of a movement. However, he angered the authorities of his day, was put on trial, and condemned to death. After his execution, the Teacher's followers were dismayed for a time; yet the inspiration their Teacher had given them lived on in their hearts. Wishing to restore the Teachers' reputation, which had been injured by his trial and execution, they published, as much as 20 to 30 years later; how long exactly we cannot be certain the Teachers' sayings and deeds, and an accounting of his personal traits; for the Teacher himself had written nothing of his own volition to remember him by." ~Texts Outside the Bible Accept No Imitations On Apollonius of Tyana by J.P. Holding

When proceedings against them were begun, Apollonius addressed the following words to the statue of Domitian, "Fool! How little you know of the Fates [Law of Karma] and Necessity! He who is destined to reign after you, should you kill him, will come to life again."

Before the tribunal, Aelian, Domitian's prefect, accuses Apollonius of being worshiped by men and thinking himself worthy of equal honors with the gods. Apollonius is thrown into prison, where he spends his time exhorting the prisoners to courage and raising their spirits.

Brought before Domitian, he bravely defends Nerva, Rufus and Orfitus, whom Domitian, had also imprisoned as conspirators. Domitian insisting that Apollonius should defend himself alone from the charges, and not with the others who are condemned.

Apollonius, rather than defend himself, declares them innocent and protests against the injustice of assuming their guilt before their trial begins.

There are numerous alleged close parallels between the biography of Apollonius [as written by Philostratus, both 172 C.E.] and the New Testament Gospels [whose authors are unknown], incidences of demons being cast out by Apollonius; Apollonius raising the dead; Apollonius on trial, Apollonius performing general miracles; Apollonius spouting wisdom to the masses, all which cannot serve but as a means of learning between the similarities with the Gospels.

Following his failed crucifixion in 30 C.E., Apollonius reappears in Alexandria, Egypt, then the literary capitol of the world, where Damis follows immediately, and together they founded the acclaimed School of Didymus, where Apollonius wrote several of his books, including The Homeric Lexicon Of The Iliad & The Odyssey, which is first republished in 950 C.E., with great consternation by Church officials, and eventually handed down from le Comte de Saint-Germain to Jean-Baptiste D'Ansse de Villoison in Paris [about 1770].

Apollonius and his companion Damis remain in Egypt for about 15 years, then they return to Tyana and are visiting Crete in 46 C.E., at the time of the great earthquake. ~See the chronology of Sir Flinders Petrie, chapter 9.

Jerusalem comes under siege by General Vespasian in 66 C.E., whereupon the Hebrew historian Flavius Josephus is placed in charge of the Jewish forces, which are decisively defeated by the Roman legionnaires, and Commander Josephus is captured and imprisoned by Vespasian in 68 C.E.

"In gratitude to Joseph Flavius who had cured his son, the Emperor Vespasian resolved to protect the Jews, and Titus, after the ruin of the second temple, welcomed many Jews whom he reduced to slavery. From that time on, the Jews are slaves of the state and it is as such that they should be considered in the German State, since the German kings are successors of the powerful Emperors of ancient Rome." ~The Jewish Question: From antiquity to the Carolingian epoch: The period of commercial prosperity of the Jews by Abram Leon.

Vespasian heard that Apollonius had arrived in Alexandria and wanted to consult with him. Vespasian sends a message to Apollonius, asking Apollonius to come to Jerusalem. But according to Philostratus, Apollonius "Declined to enter a country, which its inhabitants polluted both by what they did and by what they suffered" and sends that reason in a communication to Vespasian. ~Apollonius of Tyana & The Shroud of Turin by Rob Solarion.

Apollonius of Tyana is the recognized world teacher of the 1st Century, and during the first three centuries, before he was created at the Council of Nicaea, as an alternative Messiah to Apollonius, no such man as Jesus Christ is known to or ever mentioned by anyone! After the Council of Nicaea, Constantine legislated for the destruction, by fire, of the writings of the Hellenic academic and philosopher Porphyry, for the destruction, by fire, of the writings of the Hellenic philosopher, and the reknown logician Arius of Alexandria, and for the death, by beheading of anyone caught concealing said writings. ~Eusebius, Life of Constantine.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

Of the hypocrisy of the religious leadership Prophyry states, "But what utterly perplexes me is, how, being invoked as superiors, they receive orders as inferiors, and while requiring their worshiper to be just, they submit when bidden themselves to do injustice, and, while they would not listen to one who invokes them, if defiled by sensual pleasure, do not hesitate themselves to lead any whom they meet into lawless indulgence." ~Eusebius of Caesarea: Præparatio Evangelica [Preparation for the Gospel], Tr., E.H. Gifford, 1903.

Typical of 19th Century Apologetic Christian views on the subject is that of Cardinal Newman, a Catholic apologist, who, admitting the identity of Apollonius and the Gospel Messiah, considers the former an imitation of the latter, in spite of the fact that Apollonius preceded Jesus, the Savior, by three centuries [Jesus, God of the Gospels is not born until the year 325 C.E., at the Council of Nicaea, rather than when the star appeared over Bethlehem]. "The favor in which Apollonius from a child was held by gods and men; his conversations when a youth in the Temple of Aesculapius; his determination, in spite of danger to go up to Rome; the cowardice of his disciples in deserting him; the charge brought against him of disaffection to Caesar; the Minister's acknowledging, on his private examination, that he was more than man; the ignominious treatment of him by Domitian on his second appearance at Rome; his imprisonment with criminals; his vanishing from Court and sudden reappearance to his mourning disciples at Puteoli, these, with other particulars of a similar cast, evidence a history modeled after the narrative of the Evangelists. Expressions, moreover, and descriptions occur, clearly imitated 'From the sacred volume.'" ~Cardinal Newman, 20th century.

"It is hard to say whether the Pythagoras of the Alexandrians is not an Apollonius of an earlier date by some centuries, or whether the Apollonius of Julia Donna, besides his resemblance to Christ, is not a Pythagoras endowed with a second youth. The real truth of the matter will probably be found to lie between the two suggestions." ~Reville.

"Everything is worn and withered away by time, whereas time itself never ages but remains immortal because of Memory." ~Apollonius of Tyana, 2nd century C.E.

Godfrey Higgins considers Christ as an imitation of Pythagoras' Apollonius of Tyana, those who likewise started life immaculately and killed by their enemies while seeking to serve mankind, the truth appears to be that both Pythagoras and Apollonius are historical while Jesus is mythical.

Christians will continue to deny similarities, or even the existence of Apollonius to their sacred Jesus, yet, it is a Greek manuscript written on parchment, which refers to a gift of cultivated land bestowed by King Ptolemy, son of Ptolemy Soter, to Apollonius of Tyana; which is signed by Damis, which describes the land producing barley and wheat, which yields its owners a regular income. ~ Lease from the Estate of Apollonius.

No amount of cajoling or revelation of truths will change the minds of the die-hard Christians, "It is highly improbable, if not unquestionable, that Apollonius of Tyana shortly after the publication of the Gospel to the world, was a person made choice of by the policy and assisted by the powers of the Kingdom of Darkness, for doing something extraordinary, merely out of design to derogate from the miracles of our Savior Jesus Christ, and to enable Paganism the better to bear up against the attacks of Christianity."

~Cudworth, Intellectual System.

From the time of its discovery in the 4th-5th century to the 21st century, the Church has made known its manifest to destroy, condemn, or marginalize the historical substance of Apollonius of Tyana, "It is manifest, therefore, that Philostratus compared Apollonius and Pythagoras; but I do not see that he endeavored to make him a rival of Jesus Christ. Philostratus had never once mentioned our Savior, or the Christians, his followers; neither in this long work, nor in the 'Lives of the Sophists;' if this be his as some learned men of the best judgment suppose, is there any hint that Apollonius anywhere in his wide travels, met with any followers of Jesus? There is not so much as an obscure or general description of any men met with by him, whom any can suspect to be Christians of any denomination, either Catholics or heretics.

Whereas I think if Philostratus had written with a mind adverse to Jesus, he would have laid hold of some occasion to describe and disparage his followers, as enemies of the gods, and condemners of the mysteries and different from all other men." ~Dr. Lardner, Credibility of the Gospel Story.

Under the heading of Apollos, we read, "Apollos [contracted from Apollonius], an Alexandrian Jew who after Paul's visit to Corinth worked there in a similar way. He was with Paul at a later date in Ephesus." ~See Encyclopedia Britannica, 11th edition.

At the age of twelve Apollonius went to Tarsus and is educated there; coincidentally Tarsus is the birthplace of Paul of Tarsus a/k/a Saint Paul the Apostle. Martin Luther [Founder of Protestant-Christianity] believed Apollonius to be the author of the Epistle to the Hebrews, and there are strong cases that early Christian censors, and plagiarizers inserted the name Pol/Paul in place of Apollonius/Apollos/Pol wherever it could be found, yet it miraculously remains in the New Testament as Apollos in some instances because the Paul character they were creating is the speaker in the instances in question. ~see also Acts 17:22-23.

† "For when one says, 'I belong to Paul,' and another, 'I belong to Apollos,' are you not merely human? What then is Apollos? What is Paul? Servants through whom you came to believe, as the Lord assigned to each. I planted, Apollos watered, but God gave the growth." ~1 Corinthians 3:4-6.

† "I have applied all this to Apollos and myself for your benefit, brothers and sisters, so that you may learn through us the meaning of the saying, 'Nothing beyond what is written,' so that none of you will be puffed up in favor of one against another." ~1 Corinthians 4:6.

† "Now concerning our brother Apollos, I strongly urged him to visit you with the other brothers, but he was not at all willing to come now. He will come when he has the opportunity." ~1 Corinthians 16:12.

Apollonius visits Rome and raises the daughter of a senator from the dead, which is reminiscent of the daughter of Jairus in Gospel of Luke. ~cf Luke Chapter 8:40-42.

Jesus, according to Scripture, raised at least three people: the 12-year-old daughter of Jairus [Mark 5:21-43, Luke 8:40-56], a young man in Nain, who was the only son of a widow [Luke 7:11-17], and Lazarus, the brother of Mary and Martha [John 11]. Cf. "But when this son of yours who has squandered your property with prostitutes comes home, you kill the fattened calf for him!" "My son," the father said, "You are always with me, and everything I have is yours. But we had to celebrate and be glad, because this brother of yours was dead [in spirit like Lazarus] and is alive again; he was lost and is found." ~Luke 15:30-32 NIV.

"It has been claimed that Apollonius of Tyana was initiated into the Arcanum of Egypt in the Great Pyramid, where he hung upon a cross until unconscious and was then laid in the tomb for three days. While his body was unconscious, his soul was thought to pass into the realms of the immortals [the place of death] After it had vanquished death [by recognizing that life is eternal] it returned again to the body, which then rose from the coffer, after which he was hailed as a brother by the priests, who believed that he had returned from the land of the dead. This concept was, in substance, the teaching of the Mysteries." ~Manly P. Hall, The Secret Teachings of All Ages, Reader's Edition, p. 183.

"All through the 3rd century there is repeated mention of this [Apollonius' teachings]. But it was not until Hierocles in the beginning of the 4th century boldly charged upon the Christian priesthood their plagiarism of the teachings and works of Apollonius, that the latter found it necessary to set every means at work that could in any way help to conceal the great truth that Hierocles proclaimed with such portentous force. It was true that no one knows exactly what it was that Hierocles wrote, for Eusebius, who took upon himself the task of destroying the testimony of Hierocles, took precious good care to destroy the work of his formidable opponent, and give his own version of the matter instead. The reply of Eusebius to Hierocles has come down to us. Why has not Hierocles' arraignments of the Christian priesthood also come down to us? Let that priesthood answer." ~J. M. Roberts, Antiquity Unveiled.

In Corinthians 1:10-12 we read of four parties in the Corinthian Church, of which two attached themselves to Paul and Apollos respectively, using their names, though the 'Division' could hardly be due to a conflict of religious doctrines, and from Acts 18:24-28 we learn that Apollo spoke and taught with great power and success. He may have captivated his hearers by teaching 'Wisdom' in the allegorical style of Philo, and he was evidently considered a man of unusual magnetic force.

"Since Apollos is a Christian and 'Taught exactly,' he could hardly have been acquainted only with John's baptism or have required to be taught Christianity more thoroughly by Aquila and Priscilla. Martin Luther regarded Apollonius [=Apollonius] as the author of the Epistle to the Hebrews and many scholars since have shared his view.” ~Apollonius the Nazarene The Controversy Between Adherents of Apollonius and Jesus by Dr. R. W. Bernard, B.A., M.A., Ph.D., 1964, Codex Bezae.

Christians overlook the fact that according to their Scriptures, the admission that Apollonius; teachings were in perfect accord with the teachings attributed to their Saint Paul [Pol is also an abbreviation of Apollonius]. “A strange distinctive figure, clad in white linen and not in garments wrought of skins; with feet unsaddled and with locks unshorn; austere, reserved, and of meager mien; with eyes cast upon the ground as was his manner, Apollonius of Tyana drew to him with something of a saint's attraction all simple folk, and yet won as intimates the Emperors of Rome.” ~Similarities Between Apollonius and Jesus By Dr. R. W. Bernard, B.A., M.A., Ph.D., 1964.

Simple folks of early Christianity, “Simple folk are doubtless accessible to all forms of suggestion... Their religious sensibility is more quickly stirred and reacts more profoundly when it is under the will of group contagion, and then they usually show themselves so incapable of regulating it that they very often put the theologians to embarrassment... They constitute, therefore, a disturbing element in the Church... In ferment and always unstable, nevertheless, nothing frightens them worse than the prospect of change in their belief... For a man to accord to any Creed whatever his reasoned and well-considered assent, he must experience an ordinary need for reason and reflection; he must also be accustomed to reasoning. Experience proves that this habit is not common, but presupposes an educated man and a daily schedule, which from time immemorial has been the precious privilege of a minority; even smaller in the 5th century than it is today. The majority of men may indeed find that they possess within themselves a religious life in principle, but it ferments in their consciousness as a vague yearning; they prove incapable of organizing it, just as they remain impotent to organize their minds. Of themselves they do not succeed in unifying either their intellect or their moral ego. The necessary light and direction come to them from without, usually in the form of statements of a metaphysical kind, which can not be verified. It matters little that they are neither very coherent in themselves nor easy of justification, provided they be clear and decisive. But if they are to be classified with the Truth they must not vary by a hair and issue from one authority worthy of confidence, or at any rate deemed so in which they shall find unwavering support... For this reason simple-minded faithful souls in Saint Augustine's day, and he along with them, willingly believed that the Church represented a Divine institution established to teach unerringly and to preserve intact the Eternal Truths revealed by Christ and by the Holy Spirit... The reality of the religious thought and life enclosed in that setting varies infinitely from age to age and milieu to milieu, for the passage of time modifies the reason of educated men as it does the impressionableness of the ignorant.” ~Guigenbert, Christianity Past and Present, p. 207.

During way travels through Asia, and before reaching the Euphrates, Apollonius visits a sacred city in Syria called Hierapolis, “Ninos” in Philostratus biography of him, where he attracted a disciple, Damis, who later kept a comprehensive diary of his deeds and sayings [something which Jesus' followers did not do until after his death].

These notes describe a number of incidents and adventures during the life of Apollonius, including events connecting to Roman Emperors from Nero, 54-68, to Nerva, 96-98 C.E. Although he had many followers and admirers, Philostratus maintains that Apollonius also had many enemies, particularly the Stoic philosopher Euphrates of Tyre.

Apollonius becomes a famous philosopher, teacher, miracle worker, analogous to his contemporary Jesus. “We are at a loss to discover whether he was a sage, an imposter, or a fanatic.” ~Edward Gibbon.

Christian writers proclaim that Jesus is known for his miracles, and performs before the multitudes, yet this so-called miracle worker is unknown to any contemporary writers of his time, unknown to Josephus who wrote often of the times, and unknown to the soldiers who, one day, will seek him out in the garden. “Howbeit many of them, which heard the word believed; and the number of the men was about five thousand.” ~Acts 4:4.

The following is a list of contemporary historians who do not mention Jesus' famous Resurrection:

- † Appian
- † Arrian
- † Dio Chrysostom
- † Florus
- † Paterculus [Marcus Velleius Paterculus]
- † Phlegon ~ John Remsburg, The Christ.

Out of the numerous writers of the 1st century Christians claim to have written about Jesus, out of this number it has been asserted that one [Josephus] allegedly spoke of Jesus, and another [Tacitus] of the Christians. Of the former it is more or less needless to speak of, as that has been given up by Christian divines years ago.

Saints Augustine and Jerome lived in the 4th century, it is true; but neither they nor any other Christian Fathers ever dreamed of saying that the Pagans borrowed from Christianity. It will take modern revisionists, Christian Apologists time to defend their own church from the charge of borrowing, plagiarizing and scrounging from the ancient Pagans as every apologist has to meet that contemptuous charge from the Jews and Pagans. However, for the sake of those Christians who still cling to historical errancy/revisionism, Dr. Lardner, 1760, said:

- † The resurrection of Jesus is never quoted by any of our Christian ancestors before the [often tergiversate/equivocation] of Bishop Eusebius.
- † Flavius Josephus [in Jewish Antiquities] nowhere else mentions any name or word of his alleged Savior, Jesus the Christ, in any other of his works, except the testimony above mentioned, and in an additional dubious passage concerning James, the Lord's brother, whom the Catholic Church claims is merely Jesus' cousin.

- † The alleged passage on Jesus interrupts the narrative.
- † The language is quite Christian [and not Hebrew].
- † The passage is not quoted by Saint Chrysostom, though he often refers to the 1st century Jewish historian Josephus, and would not have omitted quoting it, had it been then, in the text.
- † The passage is not quoted by Photius, though he has three articles concerning [the Jewish historian] Josephus.
- † Under the article Justus of Tiberius, this author [Photius] expressly states the contrary in that this historian [Josephus], being a Jew, had not taken the least notice of Christ.
- † Neither Justin, in his Dialogue with Typho the Jew, nor Clemens Alexandrinus, who made many extracts from ancient authors, nor Origen's Against Celsus, have mentioned this testimony.
- † Origen openly affirms [in chapter xxiv., bk. i, Against Celsus], that Josephus, who did mention John the Baptist, did not confess Christ.
- † Bishop Eusebius is the first person who refers to these passages [passages not in existence until the 15th century] Bishop Eusebius, "Whose honesty is not so great as to allow of our considering everything found in his works as undoubtedly genuine." ~Read: Eusebius, Præparatio Evangelica, Ch. 51. bk. Xii. Note: Bishop Eusebius, who says that it is lawful to lie and cheat for the cause of Christ. Ecccl. Hist. lib. 2. ch. xii. From: Even in Biblical Times People Asserted Christ Never Existed from Robert Taylor Diegesis, 1829.

Around 300 C.E., Hierocles undertakes to prove that the Pagans are more reasonable in believing the now famous sayings and doings of Apollonius [as recounted by Philostratus], than the Christians are in believing the "Ignorant" [men without letters, illiterate, see Acts 4:13] followers of Jesus who had recounted his life.

The Christian Bishop, Eusebius of Caesarea, writes a now extant Reply to Hierocles, in which he argues that Philostratus' account of Apollonius is much more incredible than anything that Christian sources ever said about Jesus, and if what Philostratus says is true, then Apollonius must have been in league with demons. "Apollonius, a contemporary of Jesus of Nazareth, was, like him, an enthusiastic founder of a new spiritual school. Perhaps less metaphysical and more practical than Jesus, less tender and perfect in his nature, he nevertheless inculcated the same quintessence of spirituality, and the same high moral truths." ~Helena Blavatsky, 1877.

Tredwell points out that Christianity forced its way forward by mass executions and at the point of the sword. "Think not that I come to send peace on earth," says Jesus, "I come not to send peace but a sword." There were two diverse groups of early Christians, both of whom claimed to follow an anointed Christos leader, one being war; the primary difference in the translation of this passage appears in the Book of Kells, which uses the word "Gaudium," meaning "Joy" rather than "Gladium," which means "Sword," rendering the verse in the Biblical translation, "I came not [only] to bring peace, but joy." The other being translated, Peace. ~cf. Matthew 10:34, see: Corpus Inscriptionum Latinarum identity number CIL VI 24944; cf. Lodovico Antonio Muratori, Novus Thesaurus Veterum Inscriptionum, vol. III. Class. XXIII, Mediolani (Milan) 1739-1742, p. 1668, no. 6.

"If Christ, in fact, said, 'I came not to bring Peace but a Sword,' it is the only prophecy in the New Testament that has been literally fulfilled." ~Robert G. Ingersoll, Free thinker.

Even Tertullian recognized this error in his, Apologeticum, 3.5-6

It is in this way that the "Church Militant" is born and is enabled to develop as a challenger to world power. In 296 C.E., Diocletian decreed against the Manichaeans, "We order that their organizers and leaders be subject to the final penalties and condemned to the fire with their abominable Scriptures, resulting in numerous martyrs in Egypt and North Africa." The fiction of "Christian persecutions" by Emperor Diocletian [and numerous others] were based on historical truth being bent [ever so slightly].

The Catholic Church is born in the bloodshed of the Pagans, skeptics, and Jews, and the brutal murder of the beautiful Hypatia by Christian 'Monks,' soon after the Council of Nicaea, by order of Cyril, Bishop of Alexandria, who is consequently 'Sainted,' and the ensuing malicious massacres of the peace loving Manichaeans, it grew by bloodshed with the deaths of tens of millions of true followers of Christ, who adamantly refuse to accept the false hypocritical teachings of the new Church, as over three million women are later callously put to death across Europe in only a few centuries ago as witches, some believe the Church will surely die in bloodshed, the aftermath of the recent world carnage, which is fruit of sixteen centuries of false Christian teachings of love and peace, carried on with an olive branch in one hand and a sword in the other.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

Christians aiming to authorize their views and wanting others to accept them wrote in the name of the Apostles, "Fabricating, falsifying and forging documents." ~Bart Ehrman.

During the so-called "Witch hunts," more than 100,000 women were murdered by the Church by being burned alive at the stake. In Western Europe some 20 percent of the victims were men, which meant the Church discriminated 80% of the time against womanhood. The anger was directed at women, and often, before callously burning them alive, red-hot steel chains were placed on their arms and upon their sensitive breasts, which had been viciously amputated.

Such are the deeds of doing God's Work. Their families were forced to watch, and children were inhumanly beaten so that they would not forget what happened to the "Demonized" women burning before them. Ignorant stereotypes, period superstition, and religious tensions all played a part in prompting this monstrosity. "The general intellectual apprehension of Christianity falls rapidly away into obscurity. The formulas, which churchmen go on repeating without really understanding them themselves, only serve as a mask for an unbridled immorality, and a faith really uncouth and incoherent; a gross syncretism in which Teutonic superstitions mingled with those native to the soil, really count for more than the Christian dogmas." ~Guigenbert, Christianity Past and Present, p. 212.

The supposed witches, the majority of them women over 50, being both poor and ignorant, were accused of having carnal knowledge [relations] with the Devil, victims of his incurable lust, and once the Devil had possessed them, the Malignant One made them blaspheme, commit sacrilegious acts, unleash plagues, murder children, spread disease [including impotence among men], and they could even vanish the penis of an unfortunate priest. In Trieste, the Jesuit priest, Peter Binsfeld burned 368 witches in 22 villages in which so many died that only a single terrified woman remained in each of two tiny villages to tell the horrific story of dealings with the Devil. ~cf. Deuteronomy 23:1.

"For two or three centuries, many Protestants have given figures concerning the total number of people killed directly or indirectly by the Papacy during the Middle Ages. The numbers given include 50 million, 68 million, 100 million, 120 million, and 150 million. Roman Catholics typically give much smaller numbers. Frequently the figures are stated without any information about where they came from or how they were computed." ~Estimates of the Number Killed by the Papacy in the Middle Ages and Later by David A. Plaisted, 2006.

Even the noted Christian, Erasmus, says the Church was born in blood, grew in blood, succeeded in blood, and will end in blood. All of this resulting from the fraudulent replacement of the original religion of Apollonius by the new religion of the Church of Rome, which took place at the Council of Nicaea in the year 325 C.E., adopting the teachings of Apollonius, without the vegetarianism, which is incongruous with acceptance by the ignorant meat-eating, alcohol imbibing masses.

"Religion supports nobody. It has to be supported. It produces no wheat, no corn; it plows no land; it fells no forests. It is a perpetual mendicant. It lives on the labors of others, and then has the arrogance to pretend that it supports the giver." ~Robert G. Ingersoll, Free thinker.

Often the clergy, as well as the masses were illiterate, "In those days [500 C.E.], too, the large majority of the clergy are miserably ignorant and share in the profligacy of the age... Scarcely anywhere save in the heart of the monasteries . . . in the 6th and 7th centuries does the light of intellectual culture and theology even flicker." Guigenbert, Christianity Past and Present, p. 215.

The sun worshiping Pagan Emperor Constantine enjoys his red meats, his flowing wines, and the supple company of beautiful women at his midnight revels too much to be willing to accept the Spartan religion of which Apollonius is the recognized head, a religion, which he allegedly imported from India, based on the doctrines of Christna and Buddha and bearing the name of Essenic Christosism. ~The Composite Figure Known As Jesus Christ by Lloyd Ard, www.ardnet/Search_for_Truth/Jesus_Christ/jesus_christ.shtml.

Christianity, as created by the Council of Nicaea, is indeed a new religion, which is preceded by the religion established by Apollonius almost three centuries previously, which may be more properly called Essenism, a form of Neo-Pythagoreanism in character, the new doctrines, which Apollonius brought from his learnings in India and introduced among the Essenes, which soon gives rise to the new sect known as the Nazarenes or Therapeuts, whose doctrines are essentially Buddhist in nature.

As soon as Jesus is positioned in the place of Apollonius by the sun worshiping Pagan, Emperor

Constantine, who oversaw the Nicaean Council, the task of the sycophant Roman churchmen is to destroy all records concerning Apollonius, his 1st century birth, and his Frugal Essenian life with the Early Christian followers during the first three centuries, so that the world may now forever be kept in ignorance and darkness concerning this massive fraud, and be made to believe that Jesus, and the Christian religion, which they created in the beginning of the 4th century C.E., antedates their creation by three centuries. Constantine seeks to unify his empire and have the people, in all conquered lands, accept his will as supreme leader. “Everyone must know for all future time that if he raises his hand to strike the State, then certain death is his lot.” ~Adolf Hitler.

“He [Apollonius] refused to touch anything that had animal life in it, on the ground that it densified the mind and rendered it impure. He considered that the only pure form of food was what the earth produced fruits and vegetables. He also abstained from wine, for though it was made from fruit, it rendered turbid the ether in the soul, and destroyed the composure of the mind.” ~Mead

“A man called Apollonius was born at Tyana at some date known, probably in the reign of Tiberius. The persecutions, which made it dangerous for Seneca at Rome to continue his experiment in vegetarianism did not extend to Cilicia, and Apollonius addicted himself to Neo-Pythagoreanism [vegetarianism]. From the ordinary humanistic training of a Sophist, he seems to have passed into the ascetic discipline of a sect which, originally Oriental, and after wards reaching its highest success among the decadent colonial aristocracies of South Italy, was now again coming into vogue as the Roman Empire began to Orientalize. Indian theosophy, a natural science chiefly drawn from Stoic authorities, antiquarian ritualism in certain Greek cults, a great copiousness of moral sentiment, the asceticism, which usually appears at the times when the white corpuscles predominate in the body politic of any civilization, vegetarianism, teetotalism, etc. such appear to have been the main ingredients in Apollonius' religion.” ~Phillimore, In Honor of Apollonius of Tyana.

Concerning Apollonius' life in the temple of Aegae, Stobart writes: “Marvelous cures are attributed to Apollonius, for like his great master, Pythagoras, he considered healing the most important of the divine arts; and, in addition, under his guidance, the temple became also a centre for philosophy and for the science of religion.” ~Stobart.

“Just as some would ascribe the constitution of the Essene and Therapeut communities to Pythagorean influence, so others would ascribe their origin to Buddhist propaganda; and not only would they trace this influence to the Essene tenets and practices, but they even refer to the general teachings of the Christ to a Buddhist source in a Jewish monotheistic setting. Not only so, but some would have it that two centuries before the direct general contact of Greece with India, brought about by the conquests of Alexander -- India, through Pythagoras, strongly and lastingly influenced all subsequent Greek thought.” ~Anthropologist, Margaret Mead.

Sidonius Apollinaris, Bishop of Claremont, also speaks highly of Apollonius. Sidonius translated the Life of Apollonius to Latin and in writing to a friend he says, “Read the life of a man who religion apart resembles you in many things; a man sought out by the rich, yet who never sought for riches; who loved wisdom and despised gold; a man frugal in the midst of feasting, clad in linen in the midst of those clothed in purple, austere in the midst of luxury. . . . In fine, to speak plainly, perchance no historian will find in ancient times a philosopher whose life is equal to that of Apollonius.” ~Sidonius Apollinaris, The letters of Sidonius.

Jesus leaves nothing in writing to mankind, or so Christians believe. Jesus left no tell tale signs of either his coming or going, other than the historicized fictions of so-called followers nearly one hundred years after his death. All we have is second hand accounts of what he allegedly said, while Apollonius is the author of a voluminous philosophical literature.

All of Apollonius' works were collected by the Roman Emperor Hadrian, and preserved in his palace at Antium.

Apollonius also believed in re-incarnation. Records of Apollonius' life in Greece are so important that, were it not for the salvaged works of Apollonius and the books of Pausanius, we would have no history of Greece between the year 52 B.C.E., and the 5th century C.E.

Some of the numerous dying, and rising Savior Gods, during this era include Osiris, Tammuz, Baal, Attis, Adonis, Hercules, and Asclepius. Bishop Cyril, of Alexandria, Egypt, refers to a Pagan celebration of very ancient date, one which never occurs to him that the Pagans may also have borrowed it. "And at last when his [Osiris] cult disappeared before the religion of the man Christ, the Egyptians who embraced Christianity found that the moral system of the old cult and that of the new religion were so similar, and the promises of Resurrection and Immortality in each so much alike that they transferred their allegiance from Osiris to Jesus of Nazareth without difficulty; moreover Isis and the child Horus were straightway identified with Mary the Virgin and her Son, and in the apocryphal literature of the first few centuries which followed the evangelization of Egypt, several of the legends about Isis and her sorrowful wandering were made to center around the Mother of Christ. Certain of the attributes of the sister Goddesses of Isis were also ascribed to her, and like the Goddess Neith of Sais, she was declared to possess Perpetual Virginity. Certain of the Egyptian Christian Fathers gave to the Virgin the title 'Theotokos,' or 'Mother of God,' forgetting apparently that it was an old translation of Nefer Mut, a very old and common title of Isis." ~Budge, Egyptia Book of the Dead.

The Bishop says, "The Greeks invented a solemnity in which they mourned with Venus for the death of Adonis, and then affected to rejoice when they found returning from the Under World, him whom they sought; and this ridiculous ceremony took place in the temples of Alexandria down to our own time." ~Bishop Cyril of Alexandria, Commentary on Isaiah, ch. II, 3.

"All Scripture is given by Inspiration of God." ~2 Timothy 3:16.

"Every Scripture suitable for edification is Divinely inspired." ~Original Greek text is quoted by the Early Church Father Tertullian, Ante-Nicene Fathers, vol. iv, 16.

"Woe to the land shadowing with wings, which is beyond the rivers of Ethiopia: 'That sendeth ambassadors by the sea, even in vessels of bulrushes upon the waters,' saying: 'Go, ye swift messengers, to a nation scattered and peeled,' etc." ~Ezekiel 18:1-2.

This is an abominable mistranslation from the Hebrew text, but if the reader cares to compare various translations of the Bible in different languages, he will see that none of the translators understood the passage. But Cyril of Alexandria did. The Greek text of the prophet, which Saint Cyril uses says plainly, "That sendeth hostages by the sea and letters of papyrus upon the water," and the Bishop of Alexandria, Saint Cyril tells us what this means.

The Egyptians say in their legend that the body of Osiris floated to Byblus, off the coast of Syria, and Isis went there to recover it. Cyril gives the whole legend of Adonis and rightly identifies Adonis with Tammuz and with Osiris. Then, to explain the "Letters of papyrus" in Isaiah, Cyril tells us that every year the "Friends of Venus" [that is the priestesses of Aphrodite] mourned at Byblus, and the women of the land "Beyond the rivers of Ethiopia," the land [to translate the Hebrew text correctly, "Of the fluttering of the wings of birds..."], a letter written on papyrus, which is put on a raft, and sent out to sea.

It was supposed to float to Byblus and to inform the "Friends of Venus" that her lover's body had been found, and so that their mourning soon turned into the joy of the Resurrection. Priestesses, Queens or otherwise, sometimes had sex with thousands of men. In ancient cultures with matriarch religions, sex was considered something ennobling and uplifting. Sex could take one closer to the Gods rather than alienate you from God. An example of this come from one of the oldest stories in existence, the Gilgamesh Epic [Gilgamesh is part human, and part God].

In the ancient Goddess religions sex is supposed to bring one to civilization and the Goddess, but in the Judaeo-Christian religion sex drives one into the wilderness, away from their God. The Aegopy had open, free love when Christianity first began, but in other "Heretical" sects in early Christianity, such as the Brothers and Sisters of the Free Spirit, they were persecuted/killed/murdered by good Christians 600 years ago. Heresy is anything, which the Catholic Church does not in agreement with, which changes periodically throughout history.

"So we consider him as one of the Magi, because he conversed with the Magi of Babylon and the Brahmans of India and the Gymnosophists of Egypt. But even his wisdom is reviled as being acquired by the magic art, so erroneous are the opinions formed of him. Whereas Empedocles and Pythagoras and Democritus, though they conversed with the same Magi, and advanced many paradoxical sentiments, have not fallen under the like imputation. Even Plato, who travelled in Egypt, and blended with his doctrines many opinions collected there from the priests and prophets, incurred not such a suspicion, though envied above all men on account of his superior wisdom." ~Philostratus, Apollonius of Tyana.

Some Christian writers are courageous enough to admit, "After his death, the city of Tyana paid him Divine honors; and the universal respect in which he was held by the whole of the Pagan world testified to the deep impression, which the life of this supernatural being, had left indelibly fixed in their minds, an impression, which caused one of his contemporaries to exclaim, 'We had a God living among us.'" ~Réville, Catholic writer.

The Star of Bethlehem is long thought to be more than just a star by contemporary Ufologists. Their analysis suggests that the Biblical "Star" was a proscribed object, which is capable of autonomous movement to the spot of the Nativity scene in order to indicate its exact location to the three Persian magi [as opposed to the 'Zenith,' theory, where the star's declination and ascension is at zenith at Bethlehem, causing it to 'Move' as the magi approach it]. ~UFO From PESWiki.

"The Mandaean... Believed that at the End of Time what they call the 'Secret Adam' will come to earth. The Secret Adam is a Messiah like figure, but he builds a machine that then transmits all the souls back to their hidden source in the All-Father outside of the machinery of cosmic fate."

According to the Anglo-Saxon Chronicles, from the creation of the world until this year has passed five thousand two hundred years.

BC 84 (?) - 29 C.E. (?) - The Birth of Jesus Christ, the Messiah, the Savior (?): March 1, Sunday [see Pope John II's speech, 1996, regarding the date of the birth of Jesus]. 6 April 06 B.C.E., is believed by some Biblical scholars to be the actual date of the historical birth of Jesus Christ.

Jesus [known as Yeshu, short for Joshua, Yehoshua- son of Nun] a Shemite. ~Genesis 5:32, 10:22.

Yshu Mshiha, Jesus the Nasorean is born [some authorities and reference books erroneously refer to him as Jesus of Nazareth, but the town of Nazareth did not exist in his time and only declared as such in AD 4th century. Jesus was a Nazirite, which means he was a Jew who had taken an ascetic vow or vow of abstinence. ~See also AD 132.

The reverend father John P. Meir, of the Catholic Biblical Quarterly, states, "The very notion that Jesus was born [1,997] years ago on December 25th is hopelessly wrong." [Thanks to Denny the Dwarf and his poor mathematical skills in the 6th century].

The reverend Meir accepts the possibility that Jesus was born between 6 BCE and 4 BCE. According to the Bible, Jesus is born in the year of the census of Quirinus who is Governor of Syria. ~Luke 2:1-4.

Further research reveals that, "A 6th century monk named Dionysius Exiguus [Denny the Dwarf] is responsible for our present BC-AD system of dating: his mathematics was not as good as his piety." ~Catholic Encyclopedia.

"Romanism is a refined system of Christianised heathenism, and chiefly differs from its prototype in being more treacherous, more cruel, more dangerous, more intolerant." ~Sir George.

The Roman Emperor is Augustus when the Persian Astrologers arrive in Jerusalem asking, "Where is the child who is born to be king of the Jews? We have observed the rising of his star..." ~Matthew, 2:2.

Mary is born in 26 B.C.E, and only seventeen at the conception of Jesus, and in Hebrew, is "Called a virgin," as all single women in her era are called. She is betrothed to Joseph and becomes pregnant. ~Luke 1:26-55, Matthew 1-18-25.

But, Paul, in the New Testament, referring to Jesus states that Jesus, "... Sprang from the seed of David." ~Leviticus 27:30-33.

Mary is but twelve years old, "And her parents went down marveling, and praising the Lord God, because the child had not turned back. And Mary was in the temple of the Lord as if she were a dove that dwelt there, and she received food from the hand of an angel. And when she was twelve years old there was held a council of the priests, saying, 'Behold, Mary has reached the age of twelve years in the temple of the Lord. What then shall we do with her, lest perchance she defile the sanctuary of the Lord?'" ~Verse 8, Apocryphal Apocrypha: Ante-Nicene Fathers, Vol. VIII, Apocrypha of the New Testament, Anonymous, translated by Alexander Walker, The Protevangelium of James.

The concept of a Perpetual Virgin, as in Mary, mother of Jesus, and later to be called the 'Mother of God,' is a notion perpetrated by Paul [Other religions also had Gods born of a Virgin: Horus, Buddha, Bali, Adonis, Virishna, Mithra, and Zoroaster, and Christianity would be no different if it was to gain converts]. "Those Gnostics, therefore, who allege that He took nothing from the Virgin do greatly err... For why did He come down into Mary if He were to take nothing of her?" ~Saint Irenaeus, Against All Heresies, 180 C.E.

Jesus' childhood is missing in Scripture, "Take away that Jesus of thine from this place for he cannot dwell with us in this town; or at least teach him to bless and not to curse." ~The Gospels of the Infancy or Childhood: Gospel of Thomas

The varied works of the Gnostics will be incorporated into the new faith, a faith which continually borrows from the extant beliefs of its time, "And the 'Word,' which comes from his mouth, penetrates what is above and below. And the hair of his head is the number of the hidden worlds, and the boundary of his face is the image of the aeons. The hairs of his face are the number of the outer worlds. And the stretching out of his hands is the manifestation of the cross." ~Gnostic Scriptures and Fragments: The Untitled Text in the Bruce Codex.

In a preposterous treasury of ancient Pagan beliefs and ceremonies, which the Church Christianizes, Firmicus Maternus readily concludes that the Devil had given the world the legends of miraculous births and resurrections in advance so as to spoil the chances of Christianity when it came. So all the early Christians thought.

To appeal to the masses, the Church will adopt the grandiose and ostentatious ceremonies of the Emperor with its fineries and symbolisms as well as those of the Pagans, "In a word, many forms and ceremonies, to pass over other things of the Christian worship, were evidently copied from these secret rites of Paganism; and we have only to lament that what was thus done with unquestionably the best of intentions, should in some respects have been attended with an evil result." ~Mosheim, History of the Christian Religion, I, 19.

Was Jesus married? Jesus was referred to by a title only given to married teachers, that of 'Rabbi,' and even his detractors had no qualms about referring to him as such, and allowed him to preach in the synagogue, a practice also limited to married men. ~John 1:38,49, 3:2, 6:25, 20:16. Note: Many bibles have hence substituted 'Teacher' for 'Rabbi.' John, in the second chapter of his book speaks of a wedding at which not only Jesus was present, but also his mother, who would have had to have traveled all the way from Nazareth especially to be there. At this event Jesus was in charge of the wine, a duty usually set aside for the groom, and if this does not make it obvious enough that it was his own wedding he was present at, we have in the sacred record that he was referred to as the bridegroom on this occasion. ~John 2:1-10.

Who Jesus married: The association Jesus had with certain women would have been wholly inappropriate for a single man, but perfectly normal and accepted for that of a husband. ~Matthew 27:55, Mark 15:40-41, Luke 23:27-28, A Married Messiah? by Nathan C. Taylor.

Martha called Jesus, "Master," a title only a wife would use to address her husband, and when Mary, her sister, was in mourning over the death of their brother, Lazarus, she sat in her home until Jesus called her out, just as was the custom that only a husband could call a woman out of her home at such a time.

Not only did Christ fulfill the traditional duties of a typical Jewish husband, but so did his wives, when they anointed Jesus prior to his burial. ~Luke 24:1-10.

Firmicus says of the Egyptians, "They have in a temple an image of Osiris buried, and this they honor with an annual lamentation. They shave their heads... They beat their breasts. And when they have done this for a few days, they pretend that they have found the fragments of the torn body [of Osiris], and they lay aside their grief and rejoice." ~Firmicus Maternus, The Errors of the Profane Religions, Ch. II.

"And God went on to say: 'Let us make man in Our image, according to Our likeness, and let them have in subjection the fish of the sea and the flying creatures of the Heavens and the domestic animals and all the earth and every moving animal that is moving upon the earth.'" ~ Genesis 1:26.

"And thus also it was that the knot of Eve's disobedience was loosed by the obedience of Mary. For what the virgin Eve had bound fast through unbelief, this did the Virgin Mary set free through faith." ~ Saint Irenaeus Against All Heresies, 180 A.D.

We also have the Forbidden Gospels, those which, due to their divergence from accepted Christian dogma or their absurdity are not accepted by any of the four the Councils of Nicaea, "With the crisis posed by Mary's becoming a woman and thus her imminent pollution of the temple. The priests resolve the crisis by turning her over to a divinely chosen widower, the carpenter Joseph, who agrees to be her guardian, but refuses to marry her." ~The Complete Gospels, Ronald Hock divides the Infancy Gospel of James into three parts.

There was no Virgin Birth, and the Catholic Church divulges its knowledge regarding early exclusions in the old Bibles, saying, "The remark has long ago and often been made that, like Paul, even the earliest Gospels knew nothing of the miraculous birth of our Savior." ~ Encyclopaedia Biblica, Adam & Charles Black, London, 1899, vol. iii, p. 3344.

Christianity stands upon the Virgin birth of Jesus, without which there is no true miracle worker, "Indeed, Mary's purity is so emphasized that it becomes thematic and thus answers the fundamental question, which guides the narrative, 'Why Mary, of all the Virgins in Israel, was chosen to be the mother of the Son of God.' The answer: 'No one could have been any purer.' Thus Anna transforms Mary's bedroom into a sanctuary where she receives no impure food and is amused by the undefiled daughters of the Hebrews. When she turns three years of age, these young women escort her to the temple in Jerusalem where she spends the next nine years in absolute purity, and is even fed by the hand on an Angel. When, at age twelve, she is made the ward of Joseph, she spends her time spinning thread for the temple with the other Virgins from Israel. When she is later suspected of impurity, she passes a test and has her innocence proclaimed by the high priest. Finally, when she gives birth to Jesus, two midwives certify that she remains a virgin. In short, it is through her purity that Mary fulfills the blessing, which the priests made when she was only one year old: that she might be blessed with a blessing that could not be surpassed." ~ Ronald Hock, The Complete Gospels.

"We have heard talk enough. We have listened to all the drowsy, idea-less, vapid sermons that we wish to hear. We have read your Bible and the works of your best minds. We have heard your prayers, your solemn groans and your reverential 'Amens.' All these amount to less than nothing. We want one fact. We beg at the doors of your churches for just one little fact. We pass our hats along your pews and under your pulpits and implore you for just one fact. We know all about your moldy wonders and your stale miracles. We want a 'This year's fact'. We ask only one. Give us one fact for charity. Your miracles are too ancient. The witnesses have been dead for nearly two thousand years. Their reputation for 'Truth and veracity' in the neighborhood where they resided is wholly unknown to us. Give us a new miracle, and substantiate it by witnesses who still have the cheerful habit of living this world. Do not send us to Jericho to hear the winding horns, nor put us in the fire with Shadrach [Daniel 1:7, 3:11], Meshech [Genesis 10:2, 1 Chronicles 1:5, Ezekiel 38:2, Psalms 120:5], and Abednego [Daniel 1:7, 2:49, 3:12-30]. Do not compel us to navigate the sea with Captain Jonah, nor dine with Mr. Ezekiel. There is no sort of use in sending us fox-hunting with Samson. We have positively lost all interest in that little speech so eloquently delivered by Balaam's [Joshua 13:22, Numbers 22:5, 24:25, Deuteronomy 23:4-5] inspired donkey. It is worse than useless to show us fishes with money in their mouths, and call our attention to vast multitudes stuffing themselves with five crackers and two sardines. We demand a new miracle, and we demand it now. Let the church furnish at least one, or forever hold her peace." ~Col. Robert G. Ingersoll, American Free thinker.

"Miraculous births were rather a fashionable thing in those days, especially in Rome, where most of the theology was laid out. Caesar had a miraculous birth, Cicero, Alexander from Macedonia, nobody was in style or great unless he had a miraculous birth. It was a land of miracles." ~Absurdities of the Bible by Clarence Darrow, Little Blue Book No. 1637, Edited by E. Haldeman-Julius

An angel tells Joseph, that this is done in order to fulfill the word of the prophet: "Behold, a Virgin shall be with child, and shall bring forth a son, and they shall call his name Emmanuel." ~Matthew 1:22-23.

The Bible says, "Behold a Virgin shall conceive and bare a son and shall call his name Emmanuel." But for the Jewish reader who knows Hebrew, this also raises the problem, a problem which Saint Jerome mistakenly or acceptably mistranslated, "Laken yittan adonai hu lakem oth hinneh ha-almah harah ve-yeldeth ben ve-karath shem-o immanuel."

Literally translated into English, in the exact order of the Hebrew words, the 'Prophecy' reads, "Therefore shall-give my-lord he [himself] to you sign behold the-maid conceived [is pregnant] and-beareth son and-calleth name-his Immanuel." ~Isaiah 7:14.

The Hebrew word in Isaiah 7:14 that the King James translation translates as virgin is 'Almah.' In Hebrew 'Almah' means girl, a young woman, that may be, or not be, a virgin. Therefore the word virgin in Isaiah 7:14 is an erroneous translation. Honestly translated, the verse reads: "Behold, the young woman has conceived [is with child] and beareth a son and calleth his name Immanuel."

In translating, from the ancient Hebrew text, Saint Jerome will error egregiously, even ignoring the strong criticism of the Jewish Rabbis in his time, as well as his followers, and the Catholic Church will expound upon this error, for the Pagan Gods are also Born of Virgins and this collaborates with what the new Church claims as a Universal Church, one which has something for everyone.

"As early as the 2nd century B.C.E.," says the distinguished Hebrew scholar and critic, Salomon Reinach, "... The Jews perceived the error [in the Koine Greek translation] and pointed it out to the Greeks; but the [Christian] Church knowingly persisted in the false reading [by Saint Jerome], and for over fifteen centuries she has clung to her error." ~Orpheus, p. 197.

"No one would take the Gospel of Jehoshaphat seriously. If you wanted someone to read it, you called yourself Peter, or Thomas, or James. In other words, you lied about who you really were." ~Prof. Of Religious Studies, Bart Ehman, University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill.

The Hebrew word for virgin is 'Betulah,' that word is used, for instance, when the Holy Torah speaks about Rebecca in Genesis 24:16, "...A Virgin, neither had any man known her." Women did not hold a high place of honor among the Hebrews, and the most important daily prayer uttered by a pious Israelite is, "Blessed art thou, O Lord Our God, King of the Universe, who hast not made me a woman."

Writing to the Bishops Chromatius and Heliodorus, Saint Jerome complains of the monumental difficulties in translating, "A difficult work is enjoined, since this translation [Latin Vulgate Bible] has been commanded me by your Felicities, which Saint Matthew himself, the apostle and evangelist, did not wish to be openly written. For if it had not been secret, he would not have added to the evangel [messenger] that which he gave forth was his; but he made up this book sealed up in the Hebrew characters, which he put forth in such a way that the book, written in Hebrew letters, and by the hand of himself, might be possessed by the men most religious, who also, in the course of time received it from those who preceded them. But this very book they never gave to any one to be transcribed, and its text was related, some one way and some another." ~Saint Jerome, V. 445; Sod, the Son of the Man, p. 44.

Being criticized by many of his contemporaries for his Virgin Birth falsification, Saint Jerome reluctantly replies to one of his critics, Juvianus: "I know that the Jews are accustomed to meet us with the objection that in Hebrew the word 'Almah' does not mean a virgin, but a young woman. And, to speak truth, a virgin is properly called 'Bethulah,' but a young woman, or a girl, is not 'Almah,' but 'Naarah!'" ~Saint Jerome, Adv. Javianum I, 32; Nicene and Post-Nicene Fathers, vi, 370.

Saint Jerome did not exaggerate when he said that he made his Vulgate translation hurriedly. A comparison between verses vi, 11, and viii, 9 show that a definite confusion relative to the names of the elders of Bethulia, a confusion, which does not exist in the Greek Septuagint, where also x, 6, should be compared. Jerome did not concern himself with biblical accuracy, "And he came down into the plain of Damascus at the time of the wheat harvest, and burned up all their fields, their flocks and and their herds he delivered to destruction, their cities he ravaged, and the fruits of their fertile plains he scattered like chaff, and he struck all their young men with the edge of the sword.” ~Greek Septuagint, 2:27.

“And after these things he went down into the plains in the days of the harvest, and he set all the corn on fire, and he caused all the trees and vineyards to be cut down.” ~Saint Jerome's Vulgate Version, 2:17.

So insistent is this strong criticism of a Virgin Birth, that Saint Jerome is driven to write a book on the subject, in which he makes a very notable confession of the inherent incredibility of the Holy Ghost paternity-story, “For who at that time would have believed the Virgin's word that she had conceived of the Holy Ghost, and that the angel Gabriel had come and announced the purpose of God? and would not all have given their opinion against her as an adulteress, like Susanna? For at the present day, now that the whole world has embraced the faith, the Jews argue, that when Isaiah says, 'Behold, a virgin shall conceive and bear a son,' the Hebrew the Hebrew word denotes a young woman, not a virgin, that is to say, the word is Almah, not Bethulah!” ~Saint Jerome, The Perpetual Virginity of Blessed Mary, Nicene and Post-Nicene Fathers, vi, 336.

So the Greek Father or priest who forged the false ‘Virgin- Birth’ interpolation into the manuscript of Matthew, also heaves in, perhaps ignorantly, the false Septuagint translation of Isaiah 7:14, which the Latin Father Saint Jerome purposely perpetuated as a pious “Lie to the glory of God.”

This is not some indefinite “A virgin” who 750 years in the future “Shall conceive” and “Shall bear” a son whose name she “Shall be called” Immanuel, Jesus; but it is some known and definite young female, married [or un-married], but not a “Virgin,” who had already conceived and was already pregnant, and who beareth a son and calleth his name Immanuel, ... who should be the “Sign,” which “My lord” should give to Ahaz of the truth of Isaiah's false prophecy regarding the pending war with Israel and Syria, as related in Isaiah vii, and of which the total falsity is proven. ~see 2 Chronicles 28.

“Modern theology does not grant that Isaiah 7: 14, contains a real prophecy fulfilled in the virgin birth of Christ; it must maintain, therefore, that St. Matthew misunderstood the passage when he said, 'Now all this was done that it might be fulfilled, which the Lord spoke by the prophet, saying, 'Behold, a virgin shall be with child, and bring forth a son, etc.' ” ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. xv, 451.

Papal Infallibility has already declared that, “It will never be lawful to grant... That the sacred writers could have made a mistake.” ~Pope Leo XIII, Encyc. Provid. Deus; Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. ii, 543.

The Pope and the impossibility of error. In Catholic theology, Papal Infallibility is the dogma that the Pope, when he solemnly defines a matter of faith or morals, does not have the possibility of error. This doctrine was not defined until the First Vatican Council of 1870.

Considering the status of woman among the early Hebrews, one can well understand this profuse thanks and appreciation for not being an abject, despised and polluted creature. ~From the book, The Ten Commandments by Joseph Lewis.

Joseph, father of Jesus, is a practicing Essene, who holds celibacy as an esteemed way of life, a higher perfection of the self [sex is seen as a means of procreation and not recreation]. “To have coitus other than to procreate children is to do injury to nature.” ~Clement of Alexandria, The Instructor of Children, 2:10:95-3.

These beliefs, customs, and guiding principles are contrary to the other Jewish sects that uphold marriage and family life and see unmarried men as an abomination [therefore it is very important to study the Essene if one is to have a clear understanding of the Aramaic speaking Jesus to learn the motives behind his actions]

To study Jesus, one must first study the religion of Joseph and Mary. Paganism was fast losing credibility among the masses, including the naive and superstitious, who found the myths of Gods coming down to visit man and becoming involved in mundane much too credulous to believe and their actions too complicated to understand. The numerous myths/concoctions were too childish to be believed by the enlightened minds of that era. Socrates was put to death for his disbelief in the Pagan Gods of Greece. Corruption within the priesthood, which was becoming pecuniary induced to perform ritual for financial enlightenment and prone in many of its practices to corruption.

“Which of the Gods now shall the people summon to prop Rome's reeling sovereignty?... Whom shall Jupiter appoint as instrument of our atonement?... Thou, [Mercury], winged boy of gentle Maia. Put on the mortal shape of a young Roman; descend, and well contented to be known As Caesar's avenger, stay gladly and long with Romulus' people, delay thy homeward, skybound journey.” ~Horace, ode to Caesar Augustus as the God Mercury.

To Pope Pius XII, “I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians.” ~Mahatma Gandhi

A new religion was ripe for a reform in religion, and for a purer system based on belief in one God, which was the trend. One of the many pretended Messiahs of Israel served as the occasion for this reform. His own people would not largely accept him, and his religious propaganda would find an eagerness more readily accepted among the uneducated Pagans than the educated, who had a freer form of worship and were very prone to believe in many Gods and in most any fable. The new religion will be tolerated through most of the Empire, and at Rome, the 'Eternal City.' As it grows and spreads, it will interfere with the businesses of many, "Demetrius Silversmiths," will violently oppose it as it destroys their idol making trade. ~Acts 19:24.

The new religion will gain the adherence of the Pagan Emperor Constantine, who will become the sole Emperor of the pagan world achieved through a victory due, as he is made to believe, by Christian priests superstitiously, to a miraculous Sign of the Cross, with the legend 'In Hoc Signo Vincas,' hung out in heaven for him during the battle at the Milvian Bridge by the Christian's God himself. "On 28 October 312 the Christians suddenly and unexpectedly found themselves victorious. The victory was a miracle, though opinions differed as to the nature of the sign vouchsafed to Constantine. The winners became conscious of their victory in a mood of resentment and vengeance. A voice shrill with implacable hatred announced to the world the victory of the Milvian Bridge." ~Amaldo Momigliano, 1959.

Constantine did not personally recount any events of the famous battle in 312 C.E., to Bishop Eusebius, or any other Eastern Bishops, until at least 325 when conversing with them after the Council of Nicaea; but then he mistakenly asserts that, "The catalyst for the Emperor's stories [was] an opportunity to explain the circumstances behind the construction of his famous military standard and its effectiveness in battles," but, in a breathtakingly wrong footnote, Eusebius also inadvertently states that, "The labarum, a vexillum with Christian symbols, apparently did not appear on coins until after Constantine's reign." ~Professor van Dam, Eusebius' Commentary, p. 62-63.

At the Council of Nicaea, Bishops from the Eastern and Western Empire gathered, some of the greatest story-tellers of all time will now have the opportunity to guide their semi-god Emperor in his religious beliefs, and one day hold power over an Empire. Many Christians still believe that their New Testament writings were agreed upon at the Council of Nicaea where 20 canons [church rules] were voted upon, but at the Council of Nicaea, none dealt with any of the so-called sacred writings, "The polemics of the first three centuries entered into the freedom of options. The Council of Nicaea defined religious Truth, and from then on, inaugurated the permanence of the lie: the forgery of Gospels, the falsification of writings, the destruction of heterodox works, and the fabrication of an official history to which the majority of erudite people and historians still subscribe to this day." ~The Resistance to Christianity: The Heresies at the Origins of the 18th Century, chapter 19, Arianism and the Church of Rome.

Eusebius modified the story of the events of 312 in his three editions of Historia Ecclesiastica, 313, 315, and 324, and also in his Vita Constantini, 339, as he learned more details of those fictitious events, history now portraying Eusebius as an unreliable, and a dishonest historian, who shaped his final narrative to fit the needs of his theological agenda, changing Constantine from the "New Moses" of his early writings to the "Exemplar of Jesus Christ" in his concluding presentation so that, "The Emperor would become the embodiment of Eusebius' distinctive theology" of Christ the Son being subordinate to God the Father. ~Eusebius, Historia Ecclesiastica, Professor van Dam, Eusebius' Commentary, p. 74-81.

"The real oppressor, enslaver, and corrupter of the people is the Bible." ~Some Mistakes of Moses, Ingersoll's Works, Vol. 2 p. 43.

The Emperor, in appreciation or as a perceptive policy of state, adopts the new God and Creed, and at the instigation of the priests sets up this creed as the state religion and enthrones the new religion priests in place and power in the state. ~See Constantine 325 AD.

Emperor Constantine never abandons sun worshiping and even keeps the sun icon on his coins, which contradicts Christian authors who claim he converted to Christianity. Christianity is merely a means to unite the Roman Empire during desperate times.

The Essene in Qumran lived separately from the other Jews and advocated strict religious practices and men for the most part lived separately from their wives. The betrothal period lasted a number of years before the actual marriage ceremony. When the woman became pregnant a second marriage was performed, that was binding, and without divorce.

"Qumran lies directly within the orbit of Jesus' early activity. His first public appearance occurred in this region. It is a striking fact that the place where Jesus received the ritual Baptismal bath in the Jordan at the hands of John, was only 5 km. from the monastic settlement of Qumran. There is of course a reason for this. John the Baptist was a schaliach, an apostle of the sect of Qumran... John led a community of Essene moderates. After his Baptism one should similarly count Jesus as a member of one of these communities, and refer to him as a Nazarene. This later led to the falsely translated and irrational description of him as 'Jesus of Nazareth' [a small town which did not exist until the 5th century C.E.], a place which was not even in existence at the time of Jesus. Later a sign was said to have been fixed to the Cross, giving charge against him as membership of this sect: 'Jesus, Nazarenus, Rex Iudaeorum; Jesus, Nazarene, King of the Jews.' ~The Jesus Conspiracy: The Turin Shroud and the Truth About the Resurrection by Holger Kersten & Elmer R. Gruber p. 239.

End of the World: "This concerns those who seek smooth things [the easy way to Heaven, which includes no circumcision], whose evil deeds shall be uncovered to all Israel at the End Time... The simple shall support their counsel no more... Many shall understand their iniquity and treat them with contempt because of their guilty presumption. When the glory of Judah shall arise, the simple of Ephraim shall flee from their assembly. They shall abandon those who lead them astray and shall join Israel." ~Nahum Peshier. Matthew 16:27-28 [Jesus fails to make good on his promise to return during the lifetime of his disciples], Matthew 24:34-35, Mark 9:1, 13:30 and Luke 9:26-27.

When the whole congregation of Israel had been summoned, including women and children, they had the statutes of the Covenant read into their ears that they may no longer stray, implying that there was no time for the usual three years of initiation, simply being told the rules would have to suffice as long as the simple had sincerely repented. Thus, at the end time all Israel would be called to enrol into the elect. The Rule of the Congregation also orders that in the Last Days, "... All the congregation of Israel shall join the Community to walk according to the Law of the Sons of Zadok the Priests and the men of the Covenant... They shall summon them all."

When the Essene diviners of the signs considered the End Time was nigh, a Nasi was sent out into the community to test the mettle of the simple of Ephraim, taking on the role of Elijah. Elijah was the prophet who triumphed at Carmel over the prophets of Baal and founded a community of monks there. Some Jews regarded Elijah as an angel who visited earth then returned to Heaven whence he would return to announce the Judgement day, others as a perfectly holy man who overcame death because he had not sinned. Essenes would have seen these as being the same thing. They believed that by behaving perfectly, as God wanted, they would become angels. In so doing they would be forming Heaven on earth and make possible the coming of the Kingdom of God.

Now three months pregnant, the second marriage is performed and the husband goes back to the life of celibacy, as he is not allowed to engage a woman when pregnant. This religious austerity causes the men to seek only women of their own religious sect who are dedicated to this religious archetypal in accord with the high principles set forth by their order.

This concept of the Virgin Birth and later Resurrection, to protect the new religion of the followers of Christ, is the basis for the austere treatment of unbelievers and the passionate beliefs of his supporters for the next two thousand years. All that disagree are ostracized, ridiculed, stigmatized, condemned, tortured, anathematized, excommunicated, and justified by declaring them heretics of the faith.

"The resurrection of Jesus is made to take place like that of Mithra, from a rock tomb; and to the sacred banquet of twelve represented by the last supper there is added, in the fourth Gospel, an episode, which embodies the common Pagan usage of a sacred banquet of seven. In the way of miracle the Christ is made to turn water into wine, as Dionysos had been immemorially held to do; he walks on the water like Poseidon; like Osiris and Phoebus Apollo he wields the scourge; like the solar Dionysos, he rides on two asses and feeds multitudes in the desert; like Asculapius, he raises men from the dead, gives sight to the blind, and heals the sick; and like Attis and Adonis he is mourned over and rejoiced over by women." ~History of Christianity by John M. Robertson.

All that Jesus taught on forgiveness will be forgotten in the attempt to proselytize the world. The first marriage would be to a woman who is a virgin, "Physically."

If a woman became pregnant before the first marriage [during the engagement period of several years or

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

betrothal], it is said, according to Essene tradition that “A Virgin Had Conceived.”

In de pudicitia, Tertullian strongly objects to the claims that the martyrs have the power to win the forgiveness of sins committed directly against God; sins such as idolatry, and murder, which are thought to be beyond the power of the church, which it now claims full authority. ~ J. Patout Burns, Authority and Power: The Role of the Martyrs in the African Church in the Fifth Century.

The woman is still a virgin, “Legally,” [1 Corinthians 7:36, the ceremony is similar to John 2:1]. Having broken the rules, and Joseph not willing to put her away [Matthew 1:19], the child would be taken away and raised by the Essene as an orphan without a name; Joseph listens to a Levite priests who are called angels. ~ John 10:34-36, Matthew 1:20.

In AD 6 Jesus [the name is from the Greek, Iesous], Jeshua Ben-Panthera, or Yehoshua Ben Joseph, is 12 years old [Yacob Ben Joseph is the brother is Jesus, James]. The haphazard Christian canonization process of the New Testament Gospels leads to the inclusion of a book written by a community, which is eventually branded as heretical by the later Christian Church.

The book? The Epistle of James, which is the earliest direct evidence that we have of a Jewish Christianity after the Jewish War of 70 C.E. The Epistle, which is attributed to James, the brother of Jesus, is actually a pseudonymous work written around 85 C.E. ~ The Epistle of James: A Jewish Christian Document, Williams, Kümmel, Introduction to the New Testament, p. 411-412.

The work appears to be dubious in that the Greek used in this Epistle is fluent, quite eloquent, and polished, which is highly unlikely to have come from that of a son of Galilean carpenter whose mother tongue was Aramaic, and although some scholars have argued that most Jews during that era were bilingual, capable of communicating in both Aramaic and Greek, it is highly unlikely that such educated Greek would have come from someone of such a humble background. Eusebius [260-340 C.E.] notes that James was among the “Disputed books.” ~ History of the Church 2:23-24-25.

Jesus’ ministry does not begin until 29 C.E. [Luke 3:1-4, 3:23], during the reign of Tiberius when Pontius Pilate is Governor of Judea and Herod is the appointed Jewish ruler of Galilee. Herod fears the natural heir to the House of David and orders him killed. The problem is when was he born?

Even though The Gospel of Luke appears second in the New Testament today, the scribes of the Gospels of Matthew and Luke were wholly dependent upon the Mark writing as the source and framework for their compilation of their works. But, the Gospel of John is independent of those writings, and the late 15th century theory that it was written later to support the earlier writings is the truth. ~ The Crucifixion of Truth, Tony Bushby, Joshua Books, 2004, pp. 33-40.

Ancients felt it was sometimes necessary to scare the masses into behaving properly, “Religion would perhaps be unnecessary in a commonwealth of wise men. But since the multitude is ever fickle, full of lawless desires, irrational passions and violence, it is right to restrain it by the fear of the invisible world and such tragic terrors. Whence our ancestors appear to have introduced the notions concerning the Gods and opinions about the infernal regions, not rashly or without consideration. Those rather act rashly and inconsiderately who would expel them.” ~ Polybius, Book VI, 56.

Religion was intended to control the masses, “It is impossible to govern a mob of women, or the whole mixed multitude, by philosophical reason and to exhort them to piety, Holiness and faith; we must also employ superstition with its fables and prodigies. For the thunder, the abyss, the trident, the torches, the serpents, the thyrsi [staff] of the Gods, are fables, as is all ancient theology, but the legislature introduces these things as bugbears to those who are children in understanding.” ~ Strabo, Lib., Book I, pg. 19.

What is theology? “Theology is not what we know about God, but what we do not know about Nature. In order to increase our respect for the Bible, it became necessary for the priests to exalt and extol that book, and at the same time to decry and belittle the reasoning powers of man. The whole power of the pulpit has been used for hundreds of years to destroy the confidence of man in himself; to induce him to distrust his own powers of thought, to believe that he was wholly unable to decide any question for himself, and that all human virtue consists in faith and obedience. The church has said, 'Believe and Obey!' If you reason you will become an unbeliever, and unbelievers will be lost. If you disobey, you will do so through vain pride and curiosity, and will, like Adam and Eve, be thrust from Paradise forever! For my part, I care nothing for what the church says, except in so far as it accords with my reason, and the Bible is nothing to me, only in so far as it agrees with what I think or know.” ~ Some Mistakes of Moses, Ingersoll's Works, Vol. 2 p. 53.

The devout Christian of today should be aghast at the liberties taken by the early scribes in translating and recording the early Gospels, which differences between the oldest and newest Gospels display irreversible consequences in imaginative interpretations, much like the new Biblical misinterpretations of today, "... How scribes could allow themselves to bring in here and there changes, which were not simply verbal ones, but such as materially affected the very meaning and, what is worse still, did not shrink from cutting out a passage or inserting one." ~Dr Constantin von Tischendorf, Alterations to the Sinai Bible, 1863, available in the British Library, London.

The Gospel of Mark, in the Sinai Bible carries the "First" story of Jesus Christ in Christian history, which is one completely different from what is in our modern Bibles. It starts with Jesus "At about the age of thirty," Mark 1:9, and Mark doesn't know anything of Mary, a virgin birth, or of any mass murders of baby boys by Herod.

Christianity has long taken liberties with Gospel translations; the Sinai Bible carries a conflicting version of events surrounding the "Raising of Lazarus" [a rebel treated as if dead for misuse of Temple money], and reveals an extraordinary omission that later becomes the central doctrine of the Christian faith: the Resurrection appearances of Jesus Christ and his ascension into Heaven. No supernatural appearance of a Resurrected Jesus Christ is recorded in any of the ancient Gospels of Mark, but now, a description of over 500 words appears in the modern Bibles. ~Mark 16:9-20.

"If God existed as an all-powerful being, He would not need the money that faithful believers donate to their churches." ~Rev. Donald Morgan.

The priests, knowing Herod, who is not Jewish, but a member of the Semitic race, have adapted the Roman calendar and they also know that Herod previously used the solar calendar while many Jews now use the lunar or solar-lunar calendar [a difference of 3 years], deceive Herod as to the date of the true birth of Jesus. [Herod was appointed King of the Jews, by the Romans, as he was very accommodating to them in giving gifts and bribery monies].

Egyptian priests had a sacred code of their own "Founded on very different principles from those, which characterized the popular religion, and it was studiously concealed from the curiosity of the public by wrapping it up in characters the meaning and power of which were only known to themselves." ~ Von Mosheim, Vol. I, 21.

"One date that can be fixed with certainty is the death of Herod the Great. Josephus records the events accompanying Herod's end in such a way that the time is unmistakable. The week of the Passover was approaching, a lunar eclipse had just occurred, and the length of his reign is specified. The yr 4 B.C.E., is definite, and the day, April 4, is highly probable." ~cf. Matthew 2:19, Lewis Foster, T. Exp. B. C. w. NIV, Vol. 1, P. 595.

If Yeshua was crucified on the Passover eve, 14th Nisan, 28 C.E., His death would have been on the lunar Sabbath and fast day [a Friday afternoon], April 23rd, 28 C.E. [The beginning of Nisan should have been Friday, April 9th at dusk, just after the sun-moon conjunction in tropical Aries].

This would have made Yeshua just over 34 years old if born on Monday, January 6th, 7 B.C.E., (24th lunar day of Qashot) giving Him 3 years, 3 months, and 17 days since His baptism on January 6th, 25 AD [a Saturday, a few days after the full moon on the 3rd]. ~Essene Chronology, <http://www.essene.com/Church/EsseneChronology.htm>

"A custom was introduced of confiscating the effects of those Jews who embraced Christianity... This confiscation was a species of the right of amortization, to recompense the prince, or the Lords, for the taxes levied on the Jews, which ceased on their embracing Christianity." ~Montesquieu, Spirit of the Law, Cincinnati, 1873, vol. 2, p. 42.

Flavius Josephus, 37–95 C.E., in his massive 1st century work, Jewish Antiquities, and Jewish Wars, describes that there were three Jewish religious "Parties" or "Sects" during the period ranging from the Hasmonean Dynasty to the destruction of the Temple by the Romans in 70 A.D.: "For there are three philosophical sects among the Jews. The followers of the first of which are the Pharisees; of the second, the Sadducees; and the third sect, which pretends to a severer discipline, are called Essenes." ~Jewish Wars, Book 2, Chapter 8, William Whiston, Translator.

For those into Astrology, Jesus is born when the 'Age of Aries' is drawing to an end under the sign of Pisces [the sign of the Fish]. In BC 1433, during the Exodus, we have the Age of Taurus, hence the homage paid to the image of the Bull [The God Baa]. The Zodiacal signs from Moses would read: Taurus [Bull], Aries [Ram], Pisces [Fish] and the year 2000 is now the Age of Aquarius. The epochs run in two thousand year increments. Some believe we will not fully enter into the Age of Aquarius until the year 2740 with the entry of the vernal equinox into the constellation of Aquarius, while others claim we have entered this age beginning in 1948 and still others claim not until the year 2400.

Mithraism and Christianity are both recognized by the Roman State, but the Christian-Jews are still persecuted and despised. The State found it difficult to make any headway against them, the more so perhaps because the Christian doctrines appeared in so many respects to be merely faint replicas and copies of the older existing Pagan creeds. A male lamb was used in the sacrifice in the Mithraism Mysteries, and Porphyry says that, "A place near the equinoctial circle was assigned to Mithra as an appropriate seat; and on this account he bears the sword of the Ram [The Zodiacal (astrological) Aries], which is a sign of Mars [Ares]." ~Robertson.

Herod is not the natural born Jewish heir to the throne, merely the appointed one [a political appointment by the Romans in which he must make financial offerings to his Roman benefactors, tributes and bribes] and is therefore fearful of the child Jesus who is descendent of the House of David. Herod's advisors know that Herod had converted to the Roman calendar, while they use the lunar calendar and deceive Herod when asked of the birth date of this new born king. Other Jewish sects use the solar calendar [a chronological difference of two years]. ~John 2:20, Isaiah 61:1-2, Luke 3:23, 4:16-21, Matthew 28:2, Daniel 9:27, 12:11-12.

It is through an amazing set of circumstances and contradictions of interpretations that the teachings of Jesus, a man who sought to help others, did not wish to inflict harm or pain upon others and who wished to alleviate the pain and suffering in this material world would be the one whose name is later to be used to kill, maim, ostracize, banish and condemn other people, races, cultures and other religious groups of the world.

Jesus desires the Individuality of 'Saved Souls' whereas Paul, through his learning at 'Greek Mystery Schools,' after the death of Jesus, will seek repentance or salvation through Institutional Guidance. On idolatry, St. Paul tells the Athenians that God had, "Winked at the times of this ignorance" during which they erected altars "To the unknown God," which implies that He had compassion on their ignorance and sent them the "Light of Truth" to reward their good intentions. ~Acts 17:22-31.

Gamaliel the Elder [20-50 C.E.], Rabbi of the Pharisees, and president of the Sanhedrin is the first Rabbi to be honored with the title of Rabban [Hebrew, "Teacher" or "Master"], which is afterward granted to all heads of the Sanhedrin who are descendants of Hillel. We are advised in the New Testament, that the Pharisees also believe in the resurrection of the dead, believe in angels, spirits, and all doctrines of the early Christians. Gamaliel is a renowned teacher of the Law, and the "New Testament" records Gamaliel's name in two instances. ~Acts 5:34-40.

Gamaliel advises the Sanhedrin to treat the disciples of Jesus Christ with moderation, and in Acts 22:3, Saint Paul boasts that the "Great Rabbi" is his instructor regarding Law. The Pharisees believed it is the woman's role to maintain the purity of the home [a concept today which many accept as an inferior role]. Marriage is regarded as not only a sacred rite, but as a duty to family and the Jewish community.

Sexual intercourse is forbidden during menstruation, not because it is dirty, but in it preventing a man from taking his wife for granted. The Torah stating that the wife should become "Niddah," or sexually unavailable for seven days so she will be as beloved by the husband as on the wedding night.

In "The Gospel According to Thomas," it clearly states, "...Resurrection cannot be monopolized by the Christians, for it is the spiritual birth right of every human being endowed with soul and spirit, whatever his religion may be." Perhaps for this reason alone the Church sought to destroy this work and when it could not, banished it and similar writings through the Index of Forbidden Books, threatening with excommunication any Christian who dared to read any literature contained on this non-sacrosanct list of books.

The manufacture of Gospels as well as some of the sacred manuscripts probably took place at the great monastery at Mount Athos, in Salonica, where about "60,000 monks were employed in that occupation." The first that we know of the four Christian Gospels being in the time of Irenaeus, who, in the 2nd century, intimates that, he has "Received four Gospels as authentic Scriptures." Yet, the pious Catholic Church now admits this moral fraud upon their Church followers, "This pious forger was probably the adapter of the 'Gospel of John.'" ~Investigator, Origin of the Christ Church.

Not one of the five men who contributed most to form the Church Canon, Bishop Irenaeus, Tertullian, Saint Clement, Saint Jerome, and Saint Augustine, accepted all of the Books of the Bible.

The early Greek religious forgers are so ignorant or lackadaisical regarding their writings that they interpolate their fraudulent new matter into old manuscripts without taking care to expunge or suppress the previously made statements, which often glaringly contradict by the new interpolations for which the contemporary Christians have done their utmost to rationalize these contradictions.

Up until the middle ages, excommunication as practiced by the Catholic Church was to act as if the individual excommunicated were literally dead. The person would be dressed in grave clothes and he/she would be placed in the grave for several days. Later, they would be sent away from society, spiritually dead, or non-existent.

What did Jesus look like?

- ✠ Jesus is of dark complexion. ~Revelation 1:15, 2:18
- ✠ With premature gray curly hair. ~Revelations 1:14.
- ✠ And, most likely small of stature. ~John 20:14-15.
- ✠ The most ancient pictures and statues in Italy and other parts of Europe, portray a black Jesus. The "Bambino" at Rome, and the Virgin and Child at Loretto are black, as are other similar images in Rome. ~Doane, Bible Myths, p. 335.

"... Christ had to be born in the manner of the ever-cherished Child- God of the ancient world; he must have a Virgin for mother, and he must be pictured in swaddling-clothes in the basket-manger, preserved from immemorial antiquity in the myth of Ion and in the cult of Dionysos, in which the image of the Child-God was carried in procession on Christmas day. Like Horos he must be born in a stable the stable-temple of the sacred cow, the symbol of the Virgin Goddess Isis, Queen of Heaven; and the Apocryphal Gospels completed the Pagan parallel by making the stable a cave, the birthplace of Zeus and Mithra and Dionysos and Adonis and Hermes and Horos." ~History of Christianity by John M. Robertson. Note: The portion of the volume, extending from page 361 to page 476, comprising the Apocryphal Gospels properly so called, consist of twenty-two separate documents, of which ten are written in Koine Greek and twelve in Latin.

Bethlehem... Used to be overshadowed by the grove of Tammuz, i.e., Adonis; and in the cave where Christ previously wailed as an infant, they used to mourn also for the beloved of Venus [Saint Jerome to Paulinus]. In his letter to Sabinianus the cave is repetitively mentioned, "That cave in which the Son of God was born;" "That venerable cave," etc., "Within the door of what was once the Lord's manger, now the altar." "Then you run to the place of the shepherds." There appears also to have been above the altar the figure of an angel, or angels. ~See Justin, Tryph., 78. Verse 18, Apocryphal Apocalypse: Ante-Nicene Fathers, Vol. VIII, Apocrypha of the New Testament, Anonymous, translated by Alexander Walker, The Protevangelium of James From Wikisource.

"The Bible was not handed to mankind by God, nor was it dictated to human stenographers by God. It has nothing to do with God. In actuality, the Bible was voted to be the Word of God by a group of men during the 4th century." ~The Bible's Ungodly Origins by Robert L. Johnson.

The first Roman Emperor, in order to convert to Christianity, needed a single canon to be agreed upon by the Christian leaders to help him unify the remains of the Roman Empire. Until this time the various Christian leaders could not decide, which books would be considered "Holy," and thus "The Word of God," and which ones would have to be excluded and not considered the "Word" of God. ~Professor John Crossan of Biblical Studies at DePaul University.

Constantine then offered the various Church leaders money to agree upon a single canon that could be used by all Christians as the "Word" of God, which they gratefully accepted, and complied with his wishes. It appears that with this significant financial motivational factor added to the picture, the Church fathers were able to overcome their argumentative differences and finally agree, which "Holy" books would stay and which would eventually be destroyed. In other words, man decided what is to be Law, and not God.

Ancient manuscripts reveal the true nature of the presbyters [early Church Fathers], who were held in low regard by the poor masses in which they were their true natures have been subtly suppressed by modern Church historians. In reality, they were, "... The most rustic fellows, teaching strange paradoxes. They openly declared that none but the ignorant was fit to hear their discourses... They never appeared in the circles of the wiser and better sort, but always took care to intrude themselves among the ignorant and uncultured, rambling around to play tricks at fairs and markets... They lard their lean books with the fat of old fables... And still the less do they understand ... and they write nonsense on vellum... And still be doing, never done." ~Origen of Alexandria, Contra Celsum [Against Celsus], 251 C.E. Catholic Encyclopedia, Bk I, p. lxxvii, Bk III, p. xliv, passim.

"Origen doubted the authority of the Epistle to the Hebrews, of the Epistle of James, of Jude, of the Second To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi of Peter, and the Second and Third of John; while, at the same time, he was disposed to recognize as Canonical certain Apocryphal Scriptures, such as those of Hermas and Barnabas." ~Chambers' Encyclopedia. Jesus speaks Aramaic, and is most likely conversant in Latin and Greek as well as in Ancient Hebrew, and is a member of the Essene therefore would have long hair and a beard [that was customary for the men of his time] Whenever he fulfilled the position of the priest of his order he would have shorn [cut] his hair [beard and hair].

Was Jesus a Vegetarian?

James, the brother of Jesus, also known as Joseph of Arimathea, is a vegetarian, which is asserted to by Hegesippus who lived approximately 130 C.E. Does this mean that Jesus may also have been a vegetarian? Death penalty for murder, by either animals or humans is established in 2400 B.C.E. ~Genesis 9:5-6.

In "The Essene Gospel of John" Jesus preaches against the eating of flesh. ~See also Leviticus.

In the Essene Gospel of Peace we have Jesus admonishing those to follow His Laws, "Happy are those that persevere to the end, for the devils of Satan write all your evil deeds in a book, in the book of your body and your spirit. I tell you truly, there is not one sinful deed, but it is written, even from the beginning of the world, before our Heavenly Father. For you may escape the Laws made by kings, but the Laws of your God, these may none of the Sons of Man escape. And when you come before the face of God, the devils of Satan bear witness against you with your deed, and God sees your sins written in the book of your body and of your spirit, and is sad in his heart. But if you repent of your sins, and by fasting and prayer you seek the Angels of God, then each day that you continue to fast and to pray, God's angels blot out one year of your evil deeds from the book of your body and your spirit. And when the last page is also blotted out and cleansed from all your sins, you stand before the face of God, and God rejoices in his heart and forgets all your sins. He frees you from the clutches of Satan and from suffering; he takes you within his house and Commands that all his servants, all his angels serve you. Long life does he give you, and you shall never see disease. And if, thenceforward, instead of sinning, you pass your days in doing good deeds, then the angels of God shall write all your good deeds in the book of your body and of your spirit. I tell you truly, no good deed remains unwritten before God, not from the beginning of the world. For from your kings and your governors you may wait in vain for your reward, but never do your good deeds want their reward from God." ~The Discovery of the Essene Gospel of Peace by Edmond Bordeaux Szekely.

"After my departure there will arise the ignorant and the crafty, and many things will they ascribe unto Me that I never spake, and many things, which I did speak will they withhold, but the day will come when the clouds shall be rolled away, and the Sun of Righteousness shall shine forth with healing in his wings." ~Jesus, The Essene Gospel of Peace.

"For I am Joseph, who laid the body of our Lord Jesus Christ in my sepulcher, and saw Him and spoke with Him after His resurrection; who after wards kept His most pious mother in my house until her assumption into the Heavens, and served her according to my power; who also was deemed worthy to hear and see from her Holy mouth many secrets, which I have written and keep in my heart. That, which I saw with mine eyes, and heard with mine ears, of her holy and glorious assumption, I have written for faithful Christians, and those that fear God; and while I live I shall not cease to preach, speak, and write them to all nations. And let every Christian know, that if he keep this writing by him, even in his house, whether he be cleric, or lay, or a woman, the devil will not hurt him; his son will not be lunatic, or demoniac, or deaf, or blind; no one will die suddenly in his house; in whatever tribulation he cries to her, he will be heard; and in the day of his death he will have her with her Holy virgins for his help. I beseech continually that the same most pious and merciful Queen may be always mindful of me, and all who believe in her and hope before her most pious Son, or Lord Jesus Christ, who with the Father and the Holy Spirit, lives and reigns God through endless ages of ages. Amen." ~Ante-Nicene Fathers/Volume VIII/Apocrypha of the New Testament/The Passing of Mary: First Latin Form, anonymous, From Wikisource, as translated by Alexander Walker. Ms. C.

In his work "Orpheus the Fisher," Eisler shows that no representations have been found among the catacomb inscriptions that depict Jesus, the cross or even the crucifixion. Instead, a Greek figure is represented as the leader of the sect, a vegetarian, and friend of animals, depicted either under the figure of Orpheus, playing his lyre and surrounded by friendly animals, or as the Good Shepherd [Hermes] carrying a lamb around his neck.

Three hundred years before Jesus, in the Essene Gospel of Peace, Jesus the vegetarian, is added, and it is written, "For I [Jesus] tell you truly, he who kills, kills himself, and who eats the flesh of slain beasts, eats of the body of death. For in his blood every drop of their blood turns to poison; in his breath their breath to stink; in his flesh their flesh to boils; in his bones their bones to chalk; in his bowels their bowels to decay; in his eyes their eyes to scales; in his ears their ears to waxy issue. And their death will become his death. For only in the service of your Heavenly Father are your debts of seven years forgiven in seven clays.” ~The Discovery of the Essene Gospel of Peace by Edmond Bordeaux Szekely.

“The lamb,” meaning the Paschal lamb, “Is roasted and dressed up in the form of a cross. For one spit is transfixed right through the lower parts up to the head, and one across the back, to which are attached the legs [forelegs] of the lamb.” ~ Justin Martyr, Dialogue with Trypho.

Ancient literature speaks of a devout minister, who, before he is expunged from Christian literature, was both a prophet and devout religious leader loved by the common man, Ells gives the following account of the Life of Apollonius, “He [Apollonius] was born in Tyana, a Greek city of Asia Minor, three years before the birth of Christ, and he lived about a hundred years, until the reign of Nerva. As with Moses, no man knoweth his grave unto this day. Devoted to philosophy from his boyhood, he studied it after the unequalled method of those days, by listening to lectures and to disputations of rival thinkers in every market-place and from the steps of every temple. He chose as his own the philosophy of Pythagoras, and enthusiastically practiced its austerities, maintaining absolute silence for five years as a mental discipline, avoiding all relations with women, giving away his patrimony, and wearing only linen [cotton] garments. In the phraseology of today he was a vegetarian and a total abstainer. He claimed that by this mode of life his senses were made abnormally acute, so that he had a premonition of future events and became aware of the minds of men and of distant happenings; and he successfully set up that defense when he was tried for ‘sorcery’ before the emperor. He prayed to the Sun three times a day, offering incense but never sacrificing victims. He believed in the immortality of the soul, in metempsychosis [reincarnation], and in a supreme deity, the Creator of the Universe.” ~Ells, Life of Apollonius.

“Eat not anything, which fire, or frost, or water has destroyed.” ~Jesus Was A Vegetarian, <http://www.soystache.com/jesus.htm>

It is not until the early 16th century, that this chronicle of the Life of Apollonius is ver released in Europe, but meets with strong Catholic opposition, and historians are immediately accused of trying to create a counterfeit of Jesus, an imposter for the sole purpose of discrediting their savior, and the historians reluctantly rebut the fact that the legends of Jesus are based on the Life of Apollonius. It interesting to note that these early Christians never considered their ‘Jesus’ as a Messiah, or even a Savior.

They regarded him as merely being anointed [or enlightened] and that's it. It is the early Roman Church that establishes all the formal regalia and posturizing of a Messiah and Savior, and with their continual redacting of religious supplements, we have the additional sacrosanct drive, “His shed blood covers our sins,” and . . . “By His stripes you are healed.”

But, none of these creative statements are recorded in any Biblical statement of the legend, Jesus, nor are they ever attributed to the 1st century prophet, Apollonius. The faithful followers of Apollonius were called Apollonians, and devotedly continued to worship him until the 4th Century. Many of them wearing the same modest attire as himself and adopting his Pythagorean vegetarian mode of living. However, Apollonius never imposed his mode of life on others, even on his personal disciples, whom he gave the utmost of freedom.

In the Pauline Epistles, which, in their original form, were written by Apollonius, Damis is referred to as ‘Demas,’ a devoted companion of the apostle [Paul, or Pol], representing Apollonius, who also appears in the Epistles as “Apollo,” who is also said to have preached a similar doctrine and in a similar manner as Saint Paul. ~See Colossians, Chapter 4: Verse 14; 2nd Timothy, Chapter 4: Verse 10; Philemon, Verse 24; I Corinthians, Chapter 3: Verses 4–6 & Verse 22; I Corinthians, Chapter 4: Verse 6; Titus, Chapter 3: Verse 13.

Apollonius, early in life, decides to lead the Pythagorean life, and when his teacher of Pythagorean philosophy, Euxenus, asks him how he will begin his new mode of life, he replied, “As doctors purge their patients.”

“Hence,” says Mead, in his biography, “He refused to touch anything that had animal life in it, on the ground that it densified the mind and rendered it impure. He considered that the only pure form of food was what the earth produced fruits and vegetables. He also abstained from wine, for though it was made from fruit, it rendered turbid the ether in the soul, and destroyed the composure of the mind.”

“Henceforth, Apollonius abjured all the pleasures of sense. A vegetarian and a total abstainer in the modern meaning of the latter term, the devoted monk of philosophy adopted and practiced more rigidly than any hermit of the Thebaid, the triple rule of poverty, chastity and obedience. This native of a warm and luxuriant clime, whose people were wholly given to indolent gossip and sybaritic enjoyments of all kinds, was clad in a simple robe of white byssus, after the fashion of Empedocles, whom he so much resembled in many ways, slept upon the ground, went bare-footed like Socrates, and hardest trial of all to a talkative Asiatic Greek observed the Pythagorean silence for five years." ~W. B. Wallace.

Perhaps the Infancy Gospel, of Jesus, was not accepted by the Church Fathers was because it cherished the poverty of Jesus; something which many in the Christian ministry would also disapprove of, since it would put a significant dent in their lavish lifestyles, "The Savior condescended to poverty, that He might teach how closely we in a humble lot may walk with God. He lived to please, honor, and glorify His Father in the common things of life. His work began in consecrating the lowly trade of the craftsmen who toil for their daily bread. He was doing God's service just as much when laboring at the carpenter's bench as when working miracles for the multitude." ~The Infancy Gospel of Thomas

Unlike the hypocritical practicing, when coming to the court of Phraotes, King of Taxila, Apollonius is hospitably received by the vegetarian Emperor who leads a Pythagorean life, except for his mild use of wine, and when he tries to argue with Apollonius concerning the benefits of the moderate use of wine, saying that it promotes restful sleep, Apollonius defends his water-drinking, saying it preserves the soul untroubled and makes true divination [clairvoyance] through dreams possible, with which wine interferes. "In the 4th Century we observe the replacement by the heathens of Jesus by a man who was put in his place. First Celsus and Porphyry, and later Hierocles, put Apollonius in place of Christ and opposed the new religion." ~Dr. Johannes Hempel.

An author of the 4th century writes of Constantinople and the early Christians as still divided as to their doctrines, "This city," he says, "Is flail of slaves and craftsmen who are all of them profound theologians and preach in the shops and in the streets. Ask a man to change a piece of money for you and he will tell you wherein the Son is different from the Father. Ask another the price of a loaf of bread; he will reply that the Son is lower than the Father. Should you inquire if your bath is ready, you will be told that the Son was created out of nothing." ~The Jewish Question: From antiquity to the Carolingian epoch: The period of commercial prosperity of the Jews by Abram Leon.

"Apollonius is not only like Jesus Christ, but he combines in his own person many of the characteristics of the Apostles. Like Paul he travels up and down the world from east to west, and like him, too, he is the victim of Nero's jealousy. Like John, according to a tradition which prevailed even in his time, he is persecuted by Domitian." ~Reville.

Finding the general morals of Tarsus distasteful, Apollonius resolves to take up quarters at Aegae, which possesses the holy temple of Aesculapius, where the priests of which are philosophers of the Pythagorean school have become famous for their great powers as healers, that people came to their temple from all over Greece, Syria, and even from Alexandria, Egypt, to consult with them.

The laudable priests of this healing temple of Aegae cure diseases by vegetarian diet, hydrotherapy, fasting and magnetic healing [Laying on of hands], which art Apollonius acquired from them). They are heirs of an ancient oral therapeutic tradition, which came from the Orphic mysteries, the secret of which was jealously guarded by the disciple who received it.

By these priests, Apollonius was initiated; and it was not long before he excelled his masters. The followers of Mani also practiced the "Laying on of Hands," before the Orthodox Christian Church, "The Truth and the secrets, which I speak about, and the laying on of hands, which is in my possession, not from men have I received it nor from fleshly creatures, not even from studies in the Scriptures. But when my most blessed Father, who called me into his Grace, beheld me, since he did not wish me and the rest who are in the world to perish, he felt compassion, so that he might extend his well-being to those prepared to be chosen by him from the sects. Then, by His Grace, He pulled me from the council of the many who do not recognize the Truth and revealed to me His secrets and those of His undefiled Father and of all the cosmos. He disclosed to me how I was before the foundation of the world, and how the groundwork of all the works, both good and evil, was laid, and how everything of this aggregation was engendered according to its present boundaries and times." ~Nazorean Commentary.

"The 'sects' are the twelve religions that fall short of a perfect path. Mani comes with authority, referred to by the laying on of hands theme, to invigorate the living tradition and set it apart once again from its muddling with lesser streams. Mani claims not to be just a scholar or a mystic, but a true Herald of that Good Realm bringing with him Divine Authority to act, restore, and uplift the elect ones who embrace the teachings of light. Mani here speaks that his Father Yeshu [Jesus] also has an undefiled Father, and that he knows the secrets of both and of the Mystery of his own origins, and of the true origins of the world. The boundaries and times entail the Mystery of the Three Times and the two natures elaborated upon in the Kephalia. ” ~Nazorean Commentary.

“And the flesh of slain beasts in his body will become his own tomb. For I tell you truly, he who kills, kills himself, and whoso eats the flesh of slain beasts, eats the body of death. For in his blood every drop of their blood turns to poison; in his breath their breath to stink; in his flesh their flesh to boils; in his bone their bones to chalk; in his bowel their bowels to decay; in his eyes their eyes to scales; in his ears their ears to waxy issue. And their death will become His death.” ~Jesus.

Would the Christian followers have been so numerous if theirs was a faith of abstinence from meat? The ancient followers of Osiris also followed the dictates of abstinence from meat, “Eat, therefore, all your life at the table of our earthly mother, and you will never see want.”

The Egyptian God, Osiris, God of Resurrection is also the God of Vegetation. Reading the Gospels one will quickly realize that eighteen years are missing in the life of Jesus. With so many errors, deletions, and modifications, Christianity has managed to survive for millenniums, and despite a multitude of long-drawn-out self-justifications by Christian Church apologists, there remains no unanimity of opinion regarding the non-existence of Jesus' miraculous “Resurrection” appearances in ancient Gospel accounts of the story. Not only are the Jesus narratives missing in the Sinai Bible, they are totally absent in the Alexandrian Bible, the Vatican Bible, the Bezae Bible, and an ancient Latin manuscript of Mark, code-named “K” by Biblical analysts.

Furthermore, the newly discovered Sinai Bible carries a conflicting version of events surrounding the “Raising of Lazarus” [treated as if dead], and reveals an extraordinary omission that later becomes the central doctrine of the Christian faith: the Resurrection appearances of Jesus Christ and his ascension into Heaven. No supernatural appearance of a resurrected Jesus Christ is recorded in any ancient Gospels of Mark, but a description of over 500 words now appears in the modern Bibles. ~Mark 16:9-20.

Despite a multitude of long-drawn-out self-justifications by Christian Church apologists, there remains no unanimity of opinion regarding the non-existence of Jesus' “Resurrection” appearances in ancient Gospel accounts of the story.

Not only are those Jesus narratives missing in the Sinai Bible, they are also absent in the Alexandrian Bible, the Vatican Bible, the Bezae Bible and an ancient Latin manuscript of Mark, code-named “K” by Biblical analysts. The so-called miraculous Resurrection remarks are lacking in all of the oldest Armenian versions of the New Testament, as well as in the 6th century manuscripts of the Ethiopic Bible Version and the 9th century Anglo-Saxon Bibles. However, some Gospels, by the 12th century have the now well known Resurrection, verses written, but within asterisks, which denotes marks used by early scribes to indicate spurious passages in a literary document. The Catholic Church admits that this, “The Resurrection is the fundamental argument for our Christian belief.” ~Catholic Encyclopedia, Farley ed, vol. xii, p. 792.

Undaunted by the truth, which it claims to uphold, the Catholic Church, as well as many of its Christian offshoots, have accepted the Markan forgery into their dogma and made it the basis of Christianity. Yet no supernatural appearance of a Resurrected Jesus Christ is ever recorded in any of their earliest Gospels of Mark is obtainable. A Resurrection and ascension of Jesus Christ is the sine qua non [without which, nothing] of Christianity. ~Catholic Encyclopedia, Farley ed, vol. xii, p. 792.

Just because something is old or of antiquity does not necessarily mean that it is the truth! ~1 Timothy 4:1.

All of which is also confirmed by words attributed to Paul: “If Christ has not been raised, your faith is in vain.” ~1 Corinthians 5:17.

The Resurrection verses in the Gospels of Mark are universally acknowledged as forgeries and the Church reluctantly agrees, saying, “The conclusion of Mark is admittedly not genuine... Almost the entire section is a later compilation.” ~Encyclopaedia Biblica, vol. ii, p. 1880, vol. iii, pp. 1767, 1781; also, Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. iii, under the heading The Evidence of its Spuriousness, Catholic Encyclopedia, Farley ed, vol. iii, pp. 274-9 under heading, Canons.

To Pope Pius XII, “I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians.” ~Mahatma Gandhi

This myopic trend of fictitious Resurrection narratives continues today in support of fraudulent Christian writings. The final chapter of the Gospel According to John is another 6th century forgery, one entirely devoted to describing Jesus' resurrection to his disciples. ~John 21.

The Church admits, "The sole conclusion that can be deduced from this is that the 21st chapter [gospel According to John] was after wards added and is therefore to be regarded as an appendix to the Gospel." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, Farley ed, vol. viii, pp. 441-442; New Catholic Encyclopedia (NCE), Gospel of John, p. 1080; also in The New Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. xii, p. 407.

What happened to the early years of Jesus? It is said that he is of Jewish ancestry, however there is strong suspicion to believe that during the tenure of the missing years that he lived in Egypt and while there adopted some of the religious thoughts pertaining to the Osirian & Isis Cult [King David & Solomon were Goddess worshippers]

His sermons surely plagiarize some of the ancient Egyptian teachings. "It is, I think, expedient to set forth to all mankind the reasons by which I was convinced that the fabrication of the Galilaeans is a fiction of men composed by wickedness. Though it has in it nothing divine, by making full use of that part of the soul, which loves fable and is childish and foolish, it has induced men to believe that the monstrous tale is truth."

~ Emperor (360-363 CE) Flavius Claudius Julianus (the Apostate), Against the Galileans remains of the 3 books, excerpted from Cyril of Alexandria, Contra Julianum, 1923.

Who speaks the Truth? "I, Mani, an Apostle of Jesus Christ through the will of God, the Father of Truth, from whom I also was born, who lives and abides forever, existing before all and also abiding after all. All things, which are, and will be subsist through his power. For from this very one I was begotten; and I am from his will. From him all that is true was revealed to me; and I am from His Truth. The Truth of ages, which He revealed I have seen, and [that] Truth I have disclosed to my fellow travelers; peace I have announced to the children of peace, hope I have proclaimed to the immortal race. The Elect I have chosen and a path to the height I have shown to those who ascend according to this Truth. Hope I have proclaimed and this revelation I have revealed. This immortal Gospel I have written, including in it these eminent Mysteries, and disclosing in it the greatest works, the greatest and most august forms of the most eminently powerful works. These things, which He revealed, I have shown to those who live from the truest vision, which I have beheld, and the most glorious revelation revealed to me." ~Mani, Nazorean Commentary.

The Jewish Talmud speaks also of Jesus inhabiting the region of Egypt. In John's Gospel, Jesus is referred to as the Doer of Evil when presented to Pilate. Roman Law uses this term for sorcery that is also a term used for the magicians of Egypt.

Trypho, the Jew, 160 C.E., calls Jesus a 'Galilean Magician.' The similarities between the Egyptian Osiris, and Jesus are:

- † Osiris possessed a human form while living upon earth.
- † Osiris had the magical power to bestow life after death upon him.
- † Osiris possessed Magical powers to bestow life upon others who led a good life here on earth.
- † Osiris assumed a new body in this region where he ruled.
- † Osiris is known as god of the dead.
- † Osiris partakes of the bread of eternity and the beer of everlastingness.
- † Osiris bestows life for his followers where corn, wine, and oil abound.
- † Osiris is in a constant struggle with good and evil [evil personified by Seth]
- † Osiris wears white linen garments and white sandals [3500 B.C.E.]
- † Osiris is the god-man who suffers, dies, rises again and reigns eternally in heaven.
- † Osiris is a god who was once a human being.
- † Osiris is incorruptible and immortal who made men and women to be "Born Again," [beyond the grave & everlasting]
- † Osiris gave man a reason to live a good life on earth.
- † Osiris is a god portrayed with his feet standing in water that flows under his throne [the waters possessing spiritual powers]

The similarities between Christianity and the ancient Egyptian beliefs are boundless. One has only to read the Bible and compare the values of the Egyptians to discover the origin of our own religious perspectives. They are not original, not inclusive, and not our own, but merely a collection of various cultures assembled over thousands of years in man's vain attempt to explain that, which even today is impenetrable.

"It is from the Bible that man has learned cruelty, rapine, and murder; for the belief of a cruel God makes a cruel man. That blood-thirsty man, called the prophet Samuel, makes God to say, 'Now go and smite Amalek, and utterly destroy all that they have, and spare them not, but slay both man and woman, infant and suckling, ox and sheep, camel and ass.'" ~I Samuel 15:3, quoted by Thomas Paine, Age of Reason.

"At the outset Jesus was not spoken of as God, nor was divinity a term applied to him; this happened only after a considerable interval of believing explication, almost certainly after the fall of Jerusalem." ~Archive of the Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

"He is not overcome by his enemies and thou art not overcome by thine enemies; no evil thing whatsoever hath happened unto him, and no evil thing whatsoever shall happen unto thee forever and ever." ~Osiris, from The God of the Egyptians by E.A. Wallis Budge, page 157.

"The idea that one religion is false and another true is essentially Christian, and had not occurred to the Egyptians and Greeks who were living together at Alexandria. Each worshiped his own Gods, just as he spoke his own language, but he never thought that the Gods of his neighbor had no existence, and he was willing to believe that they might be his own Gods under another name. The Greeks in particular held this view and had already identified Osiris, God of the World Beyond Death, with their Dionysus, who was a God of Mysteries and also of wine. So when Ptolemy [I] Soter [323-285 B.C.E.] decided to compound a God for his new city, he was only taking advantage of this tendency, and giving a local habitation and a name and a statue to sentiments that already existed." ~From: Alexandria: A History and a Guide, E.M. Forster [1879 - 1970], Anchor Books, 1961.

"A curious relic of primitive superstition and cruelty remained firmly imbedded in Orphism, a doctrine irrational and unintelligible, and for that very reason wrapped in the deepest and most Sacred Mystery: a belief in the sacrifice of Dionysus himself, and the purification of man by his blood. It seems possible that the savage Thracians, in the fury of their worship on the mountains, when they were possessed by the God and became 'Wild beasts,' actually tore with their teeth and hands any hares, goats, fawns or the like that they came across... The Orphic congregations of later times, in their most Holy gatherings, solemnly partook of the blood of a bull, which was by a Mystery the blood of Dionysus-Zagreus himself, the Bull of God, slain in sacrifice for the purification of man." ~Gilbert Murray, speaking of Orphism, 6th century B.C.E., Greece and Southern Italy.

AD1-Christian, and theologians have long debated the actual date of Jesus' birth or even if Jesus ever existed. "The Word" [the Greek, Logos], is now "The Beginning of the Creation by God" and "The image of the Invisible God."

The birth? / Jesus, 753 A.U.C. becomes A.D. 1 [where A.D. stands for Anno Domini, which is Latin for, 'In the year of the Lord']. Earlier dates are listed as 'B.C.' [Before Christ], so that Rome is founded in 753 B.C.E.

According to the Bible, Jesus is born when Herod I ruled over Judea, but Herod I, from historical accounts, died in 749 A.U.C., therefore Jesus had to be born no later than that year, which is 4 B.C. of the Christian Era. ~Isaac Asimov, Asimov's Chronology Of The World.

According to Jehovah's Witnesses, after an unspecified time, Jehovah [God] uses his Son, the "Word," as a "Master worker" through whom, "All [other] things come into existence... And apart from him not even one thing comes into existence."

It is very strange that the Roman system reveals no records of existence of Jesus' birth, trial or death, which leads many to claim Jesus' existence was concocted.

AD3-Sir Isaac Newton calculated the date of the Crucifixion of Jesus Christ as April 3, A.D. 33 and the earliest date of the Apocalypse [The End of the World] as 2060 A.D. ~Matthew 16:27-28 [Jesus fails to make good on his promise to return during the lifetime of his disciples], Matthew 24:34-35, Mark 9:1, 13:30 and Luke 9:26-27.

Elizabeth conceives John the Baptist, Jesus' cousin. John the Baptist is born [around 266 solar days after conception, a full term baby].

"The Mandaeans subscribe to the belief that Judas Thomas was Jesus' twin brother-as the Celtic and Egyptian Christians did; it seems, but they also believe that it was this Judas, not Iscariot, who was crucified. Why? Because his resemblance to Jesus was sufficient to fool Pilate, who knew what Jesus looked like and was legally obliged to witness the Roman punishment of crucifixion when meted out by

To Pope Pius XII. "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

Jews, and because Judas Thomas had been instrumental in a rift among Jesus' followers that ultimately brought down the crucifixion sentence... Jesus had then posed as Thomas for the rest of his life to avoid the taint of his failure as messiah interfering with his work. He had enacted the drama, played the role: now he wished to get on with his life. ~Paul William Roberts, Journey of the Magi, 1995, p. 285.

Mary conceives Jesus [in Elizabeth's 6th month], and Jesus is born [around 266 solar days after conception; greater atonement].

AD 6-Judea is under domination of the Romans and the ruling authorities order a census for taxation purposes. The Zealots, who are led by Judas of Galilee, rebel. They feel that by acknowledging the authority of the pagan Roman Emperor, they would be renouncing the authority of God and acquiescing to slavery.

The Zealots are extremist groups, one of which is called the, "Sicarii" or "Dagger men," who adopt terrorist tactics, assassinating both Romans and some prominent Jews who are in favor of cooperation with the Roman authorities. This rebellion, led by the Zealots, is quickly put under control, and many of them killed. Survivors continue to advocate uncompromising opposition to the Romans.

Simon, a disciple of Jesus, is a Zealot. ~see Luke 6:15, and Jesus may have sealed his doom by the Romans by assisting him.

Contemporary versions of the Gospel of Luke have a staggering 10,000 additional words than the same Gospel in the newly discovered Sinai Bible, and six of those words say of Jesus, "And was carried up into Heaven," but this narrative does not appear in any of the oldest Gospels of Luke available today. ~Three Early Doctrinal Modifications of the Text of the Gospels, F. C. Conybeare, The Hibbert Journal, London, vol. 1, no. 1, Oct 1902, pgs. 96-113. cf. John 15:15, Hebrews 1:1-2, John 16:12-13, II Timothy 3:14-17, I Corinthians 13:8, II Corinthians 11:13-15, Matthew 11:13, Acts 20:20-27, II Peter 1:3, Deuteronomy 12:32, Proverbs 30:5-6, Isaiah 8:20, Acts 17:11, Galatians 1:6-9, I Thessalonians 5:21, I John 4:1, etc., etc.

Simon Magus is one of the earliest Gnostics who is also skilled in the arts of magic; interpreting the Garden of Eden, Exodus from Egypt, and the crossing of the Red Sea as mere allegories. Simon Magus may be the Simon mentioned in the Bible. ~Acts 8:9-24.

Simon claims many skills and also to being the 'Son of God,' "I [Simon], am the first power, who am always, and without beginning. But having entered the womb of Rachel, I was born of her as a man, that I might be visible to men. I have flown through the air; I have been mixed with fire, and been made one body with it; I have made statues to move; I have animated lifeless things; I have made stones bread; I have flown from mountain to mountain; I have moved from place to place, upheld by angels' hands, and have lighted on the earth. Not only have I done these things; but even now I am able to do them, that by facts I may prove to all, that I am the 'Son of God,' enduring to Eternity, and that I can make those who believe on me endure in like manner for ever. But your words are all vain; nor can you perform any real works such as I have now mentioned, as he also who sent you is a Magician, who yet could not deliver himself from the suffering of the cross." ~The Recognitions of Clement, About the Recognitions and Homilies. 3.47, Simon's Vaunt.

As a Jew, Jesus would also be called a Son of God. "Among the Jews the twelfth year was the dividing line between childhood and youth. On completing this year a Hebrew boy was called a Son of the Law, and also a Son of God. He was given special opportunities for religious instruction, and was expected to participate in the sacred feasts and observances. It was in accordance with this custom that Jesus in His boyhood made the Passover visit to Jerusalem. Like all devout Israelites, Joseph and Mary went up every year to attend the Passover; and when Jesus had reached the required age, they took Him with them." ~cf. Infancy Gospel of Thomas, quoted in Perfect Child and Perfect Youth by Ellen G. White, Excerpted and condensed from 3 chapters of Desire of Ages, 1898 by Pacific Press Publishing Co.

"Joseph, the carpenter of Nazareth, was a humble workman who plied his trade. His house was made of mud and straw, with wooden beams. It was white-washed and it had an outside staircase leading up to the flat roof. He worked at his trade in the 'Street of the Carpenters.' The advertisement over his shop may have read 'My Yokes Are Easy, My Burdens Light.' A saying, which Jesus used when he called men to him. Our old English Bible says that Joseph was a 'Carpenter.' The Greek word [tekton] means 'Worker In Wood.' Since wood was used in so many ways; building houses, laying roofs, making furniture and farm implements, the wood-worker was often much more than a carpenter. He could also have been a builder. [construction worker]" ~Typical Jewish Childhood Of A Carpenter's Son, with 4 Brothers [and 2 sisters] by Norman Bull, M.A., Ph.D., Excerpted and Condensed from Jesus the Nazarene.

The early Christian Fathers wrote extensive, often writing complete make-believe dialogues about their saints to enforce their beliefs upon the ignorant masses. Simon, as a magician, in a conversation with Peter, claims to have many invincible powers, "Simon, who by magic art am able to show many signs and prodigies, by means of which either my glory or our sect may be established. For I am able to render myself invisible to those who wish to lay hold of me, and again to be visible when I am willing to be seen.' If I wish to flee, I can dig through the mountains, and pass through rocks as if they were clay. If I should throw myself headlong from a lofty mountain, I should be borne unhurt to the earth, as if I were held up; when bound, I can loose myself, and bind those who had bound me; being shut up in prison, I can make the barriers open of their own accord; I can render statues animated, so that those who see suppose that they are men. I can make new trees suddenly spring up, and produce sprouts at once. I can throw myself into the fire, and not be burned; I can change my countenance, so that I cannot be recognized; but I can show people that I have two faces. I shall change myself into a sheep or a goat; I shall make a beard to grow upon little boys; I shall ascend by flight into the air; I shall exhibit abundance of gold, and shall make and unmake kings." ~The Recognitions of Clement, 2.9. Simon Magus: His Profession.

The Gnostics believed in a God, an immutable, one who stood over all Gods [Pagan Gods, and Monarchial Gods], which soon caused great consternation amongst the early Christians who then sought to exterminate their nemesis.

From ancient Gnostic writings we have, "This is he who is sought in every place. And this is the Father from whom, like a light-spark, the monad came forth, beside which all the worlds are as nothing. It is this, which moved all things with its shining. And they received Gnosis and life and hope and rest and love and Resurrection and faith and rebirth and the seal. This is the ennead, which came from the Father of those without beginning, who alone is Father and Mother unto himself, whose pleroma surrounds the twelve deeps:

- † The first deep is the all-wise from which all sources have come.
- † The second deep is the all-wise from which all the wise have come.
- † The third deep is the all-mystery from which, or out of which, all mysteries have come.
- † The fourth deep moreover is the all-gnosis out of which all Gnosis have come.
- † The fifth deep is the all-chaste from which everything chaste has come.
- † The sixth deep is silence. In this is every silence.
- † The seventh deep is the insubstantial door from which all substances has come forth.
- † The eighth deep is the forefather from whom, or out of whom, have come into existence all forefathers.
- † The ninth deep moreover is an all-father and a self-father, that is, every fatherhood is in him and he alone is father to them.
- † The tenth deep is the all-powerful from which has come every power.
- † The eleventh deep moreover is that in which is the first invisible one, from which all invisible ones have come.
- † The Twelfth deep moreover is the truth from which has come all truth."

"And each one of the fatherhoods in his right hand makes 365 powers according to the word which David spoke, saying: 'I will bless the crown of the year in thy beneficence.'" ~See Psalms 64:1. ~From: Gnostic Scriptures and Fragments: The Untitled Text in the Bruce Codex.

The Gnostic interpretation of Scripture was designed to appeal to the Hellenistic [Greek philosophy] intellectual communities such as existed in Alexandria, Egypt. They do not relate to the New Testament Gospel, as it presented a Hebraic view of the world, which is also in opposition to the philosophical constructs of Hellenistic culture.

This reality provides an interesting corroboration of Saint Paul's earlier comments to the Corinthians about the differences between the Hellenistic [or Greek] and Hebraic worldviews. ~1 Corinthians 1:20-22, Hebraists and Hellenists by Peter Nathan, This article originally appeared in the Spring 2005 issue of Vision. Revised for Spring 2008.

The Mandaeans believed that it was Jesus, and not Thomas, who was the source of the Gospel of Thomas, and to some, Paul is considered a heretic, a rebel, a fanatic, "Jesus/Thomas had continued to preach wherever he could that was beyond the reach of the Roman-Pauline Church, ending up in Madras, where he was finally burned to death by ungrateful Hindu priests. St. Paul was the great villain of the piece, seen by the Mandaeans as a fanatic and a Roman agent." ~Paul William Roberts, Journey of the Magi, 1995, p. 285.

It is likely that 2nd century Gnostics arose from Simon Magus' disciples, and according to Irenaeus, Simon is the source of all heresy and is associated with what becomes known as Gnosticism. ~Against Heresies 1.23.2-3.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

Flavius Josephus, the Jewish historian, writes of the Zealots playing a major role in inciting and continuing the Jewish rebellion against the Romans, one of which begins in AD 66.

The boisterous Simon, the Magician, claims to be omnipotent, "I shall be worshiped as God; I shall have Divine honors publicly assigned to me, so that an image of me shall be set up, and I shall be worshiped and adored as God. And what need of more words? Whatever I wish, that I shall be able to do. For already I have achieved many things by way of experiment." ~The Recognitions of Clement, 2.9. Simon Magus: His Profession.

"Paul nowhere else gives so much as a hint of chosen followers of Jesus on earth. The word 'Disciple(s)' appears not once in the New Testament Epistles. This is the word used in the Gospels for followers attached to a ministering Jesus, but in the epistles there is no mention of such followers or a ministry." ~ Apollon of Alexandria and the Early Christian Apostolate by Earl Doherty.

AD8-Roman Emperor Augustus passes a law for the burning of books that offend him. Those authors that wrote very offensive material would be exiled. The Christian Church, once accepted by the Romans will also initiate such a policy.

The death sentence was finally imposed upon those violators of "Literary Treason" in AD 11. The followers of Jesus, the Roman Catholic Church, follow the leadership of Augustus later by taking up the curtailing of freedom of the press and castigation of the authors deemed detrimental to the state or self-preservation of the church [purity of faith].

AD 12-August 31st, Birth of the future immoral and perverted Roman Emperor, Caligula.

AD 19-Tiberius, 42 B.C.E., Roman Emperor, banishes the Septuagint [Greek Bible, 282 B.C.E.] missionaries from Rome but they soon return. Emperor Tiberius orders the crucifixion of Isian priests and the banishment of 4000 of their followers. "At the first each book had its single original text, which it is now the object of criticism to recover, but in the first two centuries this original Greek text disappeared under a mass of variants, created by errors, by conscious alterations, and by attempts to remedy the uncertainties thus created." ~F.C. Kenyon, The Text of the Greek Bible, pages 241-242.

Historical records do not show if the Cult of Isis has joined with the Jews in their attempt to overthrow the Romans. Perhaps this is an error on the part of the Romans for the Isians will become a more secretive group and will enjoy another three hundred and seventy-five years of worship under Roman rule, much to the dismay of the Christians.

"Two things, however, rendered the Septuagint unwelcome in the long run to the Jews. Its divergence from the accepted text [afterward called the Masoretic] was too evident; and it therefore could not serve as a basis for theological discussion or for homiletic interpretation. This distrust was accentuated by the fact that it had been adopted as Sacred Scripture by the new faith. A revision in the sense of the Canonical Jewish text was necessary. This revision was made by a proselyte, Aquila, who lived during the reign of Hadrian [117-138 C.E.]" ~Jewish Encyclopedia: Bible Translations: Aquila.

Anti-Semitism(?): Tiberius expels the Jews from Rome, a people who had gone to live peaceably in the city. Suetonius says that Tiberius, "Suppressed all foreign religions... He distributed the Jewish youths, under the pretense of military service, among the provinces noted for an unhealthy climate; and dismissed from the city all the rest of that nation as well as those who were proselytes to that religion, under pain of slavery for life, unless they complied." ~Suetonius, Lives of the Twelve Caesars, Vol 13, Tiberius, Section 36.

Cassius Dio writes of Tiberius, "As the Jews flocked to Rome in great numbers and were converting many of the natives to their ways, he banished most of them." ~Cassius Dio, Roman History, 57.18.5a.

Flavius Josephus also documents in his writings, Jewish Antiquities, that Tiberius, due to the Jewish beliefs, "Ordered all the Jews to be banished out of Rome, 'Taking four thousand men out of them, and sent them to the island Sardinia; but punished a greater number of them, who were unwilling to become soldiers, on account of keeping the laws of their forefathers. Thus were these Jews banished out of the city ...'"

It is quite ironic that a Jew, Jeshua of Nazareth, Jesus, one who gives sermons from the Old Testament [Torah], is stigmatized by John in the Gospels, yet no Christian ever considers this dichotomy. The direct followers of Jeshua of Nazareth look upon themselves as a religious reform movement within Judaism, and most confrontations between the early Christians and the various Jewish groups are recorded in the Christian Scriptures [aka New Testament] without opposition.

The corrupted Gospel of John, contains numerous passages in which the authors condemn "The Jews" as sons of Satan and accuse the Jews of murdering their Savior, Jesus. Justin Martyr, circa 100 to 165 C.E., and Irenaeus of Lyon, circa 130 to 200 C.E., will develop their concept of "Supercessionism," which is sometimes described as, "Theology of displacement," or "Replacement theology," in which they will teach the Christians that the Jews lost their right to be God's Chosen People and are responsible for Jesus' execution, and Milito of Sardis, 160 C.E., will claim that, "Through his misreading of the Gospels still more bluntly than Justin held the Jews responsible for the death of Jesus..." ~Anti-Semitism in the Roman Catholic Church in the 1st To 20th Century CE by B. A. Robinson.

AD20 (?) - 100 - Paul, a converted Hellenistic-Jew, finds it difficult to conceive of Jesus (Christ) existing as a second divine being next to YHWH for all eternity, and after the death of Jesus Paul decides that Jesus had been Divine.

Saint Paul, more than any other follower of Jesus' teachings will change the way Christianity will be presented to the world. Paul is a learned man and is well aware of the teachings of Mithraism and the rivalry it posed for this newly found religion. In AD-40, we have the conversion of Paul from his Jewish faith to the new Jewish-Christian faith and Paul immediately begins preaching about Christ being the Son of God, disagreeing with Barnabas, Peter, and James, the brother of Jesus regarding the tenets of this new faith. ~Acts 9:20.

So, Jesus had brothers, and these brothers were jealous that Jesus would not heed the word of the Rabbis at the temple, "All this displeased His brothers. Being older than Jesus, they felt that He should be under their dictation. They charged Him with thinking Himself superior to them, and reproved Him for setting Himself above the priests and rulers of the people. Often they threatened and tried to intimidate Him; but He passed on, making the Scriptures His guide." ~Perfect Child and Perfect Youth by Ellen G White, Excerpted and condensed from 3 chapters of Desire of Ages, 1898 by Pacific Press Publishing Co. cf. Infancy Gospel of Thomas.

"Descent as Son of a God appointed by the chief deity to become incarnate as a man, atonement, restoration of a sovereignty, ascension to Heaven, a Gospel indeed, and so like the pattern of the Christian Gospels." ~Randal Helms, Gospel Fictions, 1988, p. 25.

Paul's wife, Phoebe, is a deacon of the church in Cenchreae, yes, women had a more significant role in those days, and it is during this period that Paul writes, in Corinthians, that it was well for the unmarried to, "Remain as I do," but, "... It is better to marry than to suffer the fire," referring to the priests and their professed celibacy, which was not practiced, but considered due to the End of the World and the Coming of Jesus... Soon, real soon. ~Romans 16:1. Matthew 16:27-28 [Jesus fails to make good on his promise to return during the lifetime of his disciples], Matthew 24:34-35, Mark 9:1, 13:30 and Luke 9:26-27.

Christians have a belief [according to their Creedal pledge] that their bodies will be resurrected at the End of the World, but no Greek or Roman actually sought this; it was the soul that will enjoy the afterlife. The irony here is that even Saint Paul never made this distinction himself, and it is not a factor in his soteriological system. Paul doesn't say, because Jesus rose in the flesh, man will also.

In fact, Paul tells his readers that neither flesh nor blood can enter the Kingdom of Heaven. And the conception of Christ's Resurrection in all of the Epistles is one of that ascending immediately to the right hand of God, in spirit only. There is no sojourn on earth in flesh, let alone any appeal to such a feat as an essential attribute in the death and resurrection equivalent as laid out in Scripture. ~Romans 6.

In 2 Samuel 13:1, we have a hint that Paul may have had a previous marriage to Tamar, a.k.a. Damaris, daughter of King David, which can lead to confusion, as Jesus is now the accepted King David of the Jews. Heavily influenced by his Greek learnings of ancient prophets and pagan gods, Paul believes profoundly in the ancient Hellenistic Sibyls. These ancient legends of women, who could predict the future, called Sibyls, were prophets, and were believed to be inspired by the Gods.

The Sibyls were found primarily in the famous oracle centers, particularly those of Apollo, the Greek god of prophesy. These Sibyls were believed to live 900 to 1,000 years, and according to Greek legends, many could interpret dreams while others could cause their voices to be heard after death. This early Christian fact may be verified by merely looking up inside the Sistine Chapel, at the half dozen or so Sibyls created by the greatest painter of all time, Michelangelo, who became famous for his muscular, masculine women paintings.

Early Greek writers mention only one Sibyl, Erythraean Herophile, who predicted the Trojan war. It is not until later on that the number of Sibyls was increased to ten, including the Samian, the Trojan, the Phrygian, the Cimmerian, the Delphian, the Cumaean, the Libyan, the Tiburtine, and the Babylonian.

And, of course, the most important was Deiphobe, the Cumaean Sibyl, who the god Apollo had promised to grant her any wish she desired. Deiphobe asked to live for as many years as there were pebbles of sand in her hand, but she did not wish for eternal youth, and she grew old and withered and her name appears along with several other legends dealing with Rome.

Paul's teachings are a mixture of his Jewish upbringing and the Hellenistic or Greek philosophies [with Egyptology mixed in], and the "Theory of redemption," is also introduced into the new faith by Paul, as well as the deification of Jesus, and this leads to a dispute with the disciple Barnabas. -Acts 15:2.

What Paul does is fuse his Roman beliefs of Mithraism and Judeo-Christianity into a new religion that is acceptable to both worlds [a Universal Religion]. Paul is relentless in his pursuits as he was unyielding in his denunciation of the Jews before his conversation. ~1 Corinthians 9:20-25, Romans 10:12, Acts 21.

The new faith then grows in strength and numbers. In addition, in AD 58 we have Paul's last visit to Jerusalem. Paul borrowed from the various known religions of the world and created a Universal Religion. Many think this religion is Universal to the World; however, it was drawn from the universal religions of the world at the time of Paul.

If one reads "The Testaments of the Twelve Patriarchs" written perhaps between BC 107 and AD 137 one will see clearly how Paul borrowed heavily from the works of others. The Roman Church does not finalize the Doctrine of Jesus being Divine until the 4th century when the Church makes a concerted effort to separate Christianity from its Jewish roots, and Jesus is no longer being referred to as Yehoshua, his Jewish name, but Jesus.

In the 4th century we still have a small religious sect known as Hypisistarians that do not believe in and refuse to worship God as Father, which is Jewish, the Christians worshipping God the Son. The Hypisistarian God is revered as the "Mighty Ruler."

The new Christian religion is a threat to Judaism, however, it 'Lacks antiquity,' and is perceived as no threat to paganism in that it lacks idols, to which everyone can see and pray. Theirs [Christian-Jews] is an invisible god [Jewish God]. The separation of the Jewish God and the God of the Christians will be intensified by strict doctrine, dogmas, and ecclesiastically approved canons that will follow later on in history.

Idol worshiping is condemned, but accepted by the early Christian Fathers, in order to assist in accepting new initiates into the faith, "And yet who can be found so senseless as to be persuaded to worship an idol, whether it be made of gold or of any other metal? To whom is it not manifest that the metal is just that, which the artificer pleased? How then can the Divinity be thought to be in that, which would not be at all unless the artificer had pleased? Or how can they hope that future things should be declared to them by that in which there is no perception of present things? For although they should Divine something, they should not straightway be held to be Gods; for Divination is one thing, Divinity is another. For the Pythons also seem to Divine, yet they are not Gods; and, in short, they are driven out of men by Christians. And how can that be God, which is put to flight by a man? But perhaps you will say, 'What as to their effecting cures, and their showing how one can be cured? On this principle, physicians ought also to be worshiped as Gods, for they cure many; and in proportion as any one is more skilful, the more he will cure.'" ~The Recognitions of Clement, About the Recognitions and Homilies 4.20, Folly of Idolatry.

Egyptian metaphysical literature along with their mysteries is destroyed by a Christian world that can not deal with a life force that exists beyond the realm of its own imagination, a life force beyond the natural phenomena we call Laws of Nature.

The early Christian leaders were seldom-learned men, although the Church would have you believing so, and their interpretations of Biblical Scripture is not based on any scientific nor rational thinking. Superstitious, their primary motive is for spreading the new faith and not seeking truth.

"The Roman Virtues, Fides, Castitas, Virtus [manliness] were canonized. The Mysteries had already fostered, though not created, the conviction of immortality. It was thought that 'initiation' insured a happy after-life and atoned for sins, that else had been punished, if not in this life, in some place of expiation.

"These Mysteries usually began with the selection of 'Initiandi,' their preliminary Baptism, fasting, and confession. After many sacrifices, the Mysteries proper were celebrated, including tableaux showing Heaven, Hell, Purgatory, the soul's destiny, the Gods. Apuleius [in Metamorphoses] tells us his thrilling and profoundly religious experiences. There was often seen the 'Passion' of the God Osiris; the rape and return of Kore and the sorrows of Demeter, Eleusis, the sacred marriage and Divine Births [Zeus and Brimos]. Finally, there was usually the Meal of mystic food; grains of all sorts at Eleusis, bread and water in the cult of Mithra, wine [Dionysus], milk and honey [Attis], raw bull's flesh in the Orphic Dionysus-Zagreus cult. Sacred formukae were certainly imparted, of magical value.” ~Catholic Encyclopedia, Vol. XI, pp. 391-2.

“The old Egyptians celebrated the resurrection of Osiris by a sacrament, eating the sacred cake or wafer after it had been consecrated by the priest, and thereby becoming veritable flesh of his flesh.” ~P. Andrada La Crozius, a French missionary, History of India. cf. the Passion with the works of Philo, Concerning Flaccu.

From its early years, the Christians have deluged their congregation with the evils of sinfulness and the eternal Hell that awaits them, “. . . For the fire will never cease to torment the damned. I indeed could pray that it might be so, who am branded with the deepest scars of transgressions, which stand in need of utmost mercy. But let Origen be ashamed of his lying words, who saith that there is a term set to the torments.” ~The Apocalypse of Peter.

The Romans had a problem digesting the intrinsic differences in the various cults of Christianity, and a few Roman Emperors took to ignore the differences entirely, classifying them as another extremist Jewish group and persecuted them also. There are during the first three centuries many differing perspectives on the teachings of Jesus.

The “Ka” or soul of man lives on in the ancient Egyptian world, and followers of the new religion could not understand the transition from a visible to an invisible world yet, although the early Mithra, Zoroaster and Egyptian beliefs are assimilated by the Christians, but the details of resurrection and a hereafter life for the common man have not yet been finalized. Cremation is seen as contradictory to early Christian beliefs due to its conflict with the Scriptural interpretations of the early Church Fathers and the “Resurrection.” “The promise of a privileged life beyond the grave for those who have 'Seen' the Mysteries... Ranges from the earliest text, the Hymn to Demeter, down to the last rhetorical exercises of the Imperial period.” ~Ancient Mystery Cults, p.21.

If the material body is destroyed by fire, would not also the soul be destroyed? Unable to come to any rational solution to this dilemma at the time the Church decided that henceforth cremation is against God's Law. Since that period of time, the policy of the Church has changed regarding cremation [It is not until the 20th century that the Christian Church will change its views on this subject]. It was the custom and common practice in Rome to cremate as well as in other groups such as in India in the 1st to 4th century.

In 1886, the Roman Catholic Church will officially ban cremations with Church members, and as recently as World War II being Excommunication for those arranging them. The Eastern Orthodox Ecumenical Patriarch of Constantinople stated in 1961 that, “There is no formal Orthodox rule against cremation, but there is a heavy weight of custom and sentiment in favor of Christian burial.”

The Christian church claims it has advocated burial since its inception. They reserved burning being for Witches and other heretics. They exterminated hundreds of thousands of them, mainly during the 15th to 18th centuries. The Old Testament, Hebrew Scriptures, has references as to the disposal of the body by burning in fire derived from verses, which are first believed to have been executed by the Philistines, Babylonians, and Assyrians. The burning of bodies and objects in ancient Israel being mostly reserved for idols, criminals or enemies:

- † Judah initially ordered his pregnant daughter-in-law to be burned to death because she was guilty of prostitution. This action would have caused the death of the woman and her twin fetuses. ~ Genesis 38:24.
- † Moses destroys the golden calf by burning it. ~Exodus 32:20.
- † If a man marries both a woman and her mother, then all three “... Must be burned in the fire.” The passage is ambiguous in that it is not known whether they would be burned alive, or would be stoned to death first, as was the Hebrew custom for infractions of their Code, and then their bodies burned. ~ Leviticus 20:14.
- † If the daughter of a priest becomes a prostitute, then she “Must be burned in the fire.” ~Leviticus 21:9.
- † God exterminates Korah and 250 Israelite men with fire because they opposed Moses. ~ Numbers 16:35.
- † God commanded that the idols of Pagan Gods be destroyed by fire. ~ Deuteronomy 7:25.
- † After Joshua and his army exterminated the men, women and innocent children of Jericho, a few soldiers disobeyed God's command and looted the city. As punishment for the theft, and to pay for

To Pope Pius XII, “I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians.” ~Mahatma Gandhi

Israel's disgrace, God orders the thieves to be burned, being stoned to death, and their bodies burned and buried in what was called the 'Valley of Achor.' ~ Joshua 7:15-25.

- ✦ The Philistines burn Samson's wife and father-in-law to death. ~ Judges 15:6.
- ✦ Saul has been wounded and asks for an assisted suicide from his armor-bearer. Being refused, Saul commits suicide himself. The Philistines impale Saul's body and those of his sons and leave them for public display. The people of Jabesh Gilead retrieve the bodies, burning them and later burying the remaining bones in Gilead. ~ 1 Samuel 31:11-13.

There have been a number theories raised to account for this unusual treatment to a hero:

- ✦ Burning may have been a local custom in Gilead.
- ✦ The people of Gilead may have been worried that the Philistines might dig up the bodies and further desecrate them.
- ✦ Burning might have been necessary because their bodies may have partially decomposed.
- ✦ The Hebrew word translated as "Burnt" may have actually meant "Anointed," thus, the bodies might not have been burned after all.
- ✦ Jehu demolishes a temple consecrated to the God Baal and burns its sacred stone. ~ 2 Kings 10:26.
- ✦ This verse contains a curse, which refers to the time that the Babylonians burned Zedekiah and Ahab by fire. ~ Jeremiah 29:22.
- ✦ God proclaims a death curse on Moab because he had reduced the bones of the king of Edom to lime through burning. ~ Amos 2:1.
- ✦ The Christian Scriptures, the New Testament, contain few references to burning of bodies or objects:
- ✦ The Sorcerers who were converted to Christianity, also brought their scrolls out to be burned. ~ Acts 19:19.
- ✦ The fate of those whose names were not written in the 'Book of Life' is to be thrown into the 'Lake of Fire.' ~ Revelation 20:15.

Yet, the burial of many Biblical figures is also described in the Bible:

- ✦ Genesis 25:8-10: Abraham
- ✦ Genesis 23:1-4: Sarah
- ✦ Genesis 35:19-20: Rachel
- ✦ Genesis 35:29: Isaac,
- ✦ Genesis 49:33 and 50:1-13: Jacob
- ✦ Genesis 50:26: Joseph [The Israelites went to great effort to bury his body in the Promised Land; they retained it for over 300 years in Egypt and after the Exodus during 40 years of wanderings before burying it].
- ✦ Deuteronomy 34:6: Moses, where God selected a burial site at a secret location in Moab for Moses.
- ✦ Joshua 24:29-30: Joshua
- ✦ Joshua 24:33: Eleazar
- ✦ 1 Samuel 25:1: Samuel
- ✦ 1 Kings 2:10: David
- ✦ Matthew 14:10-12: John the Baptist
- ✦ Acts 5:5-10: Ananias and Sapphira
- ✦ Acts 8:2: Stephen
- ✦ I Corinthians 15:35-44, where Saint Paul appears to favor burial and discusses how God will raise the decomposed body of a believer. The symbolism used is that of planting a seed and having new life rise from the decaying seed.
- ✦ Revelation 20:15: The fate of those whose names are not written in the 'Book of Life,' is to be thrown into the 'Lake of Fire,' presumably a fate worse than death. Not to be given a proper burial was considered to be a great catastrophe upon the family and brought dishonor upon the deceased.
- ✦ 1 Kings 13:22: A prophet disobeys God by eating a meal in a forbidden location. God lays a curse on him, that his body will not be buried in the tomb of his fathers. Shortly after, the prophet is attacked by a lion and his remains left abandoned on a road.

- ✠ Jeremiah 16:6: God lays a terrible curse on the Israelites: that many would die of diseases, will not be mourned, and would be “Like refuse lying on the ground,” and their bodies will be consumed by wild animals and birds.
- ✠ Jeremiah 22:19: God laid a similar curse on Jehoiakim because of his pride and disobedience. Jeremiah said that he would be given the burial of a donkey: to be dragged away and thrown outside the city gates.
- ✠ The Crucifixion: Of the countless tombs in Palestine from the era of the Roman occupation, which have been excavated, only one skeleton has been found which bears the marks of the crucifixion, due to the fact that after a Roman execution, the body would be discarded in an open pit where it would be devoured by wild dogs. To be forbidden a traditional burial added significantly to the horror of this method of execution to both the deceased and the family members. ~ Pamphlet available from The Peoples Gospel Hour, PO Box 1660, Halifax NS, Canada, B3J 3A1, Internet Cremation Society at: <https://cremation.org/home.html>

The Greeks and Romans never found Egyptian burial customs reprehensible, and though they may have been astonished by them, whereas the early Church fathers were furiously opposed to the preservation of bodies and waxed highly indignant in their writings, when Christianity reached Egypt from Rome, it wanted to impose its own rites and beliefs, and Saint Anthony inveighed against Egyptia style mummification.

“Never allow my body to be taken to the Egyptians. I do not wish them to have it in their houses... You know how often I have berated those who carry on these practices and how often I have urged them to do away with these customs...” ~Saint Augustine, one of the Four Great Doctors of the Western Church [Doctor Gratiae]

The great Saint Augustine also took part in the controversy and in one of his sermons thundered against mummification, forcefully affirming that the ‘Survival of the soul’ was not the prerogative of embalmed Egyptians and that immortality had nothing to do with preservation of the body. Nevertheless, in spite of all these authoritative voices, the Copts, who were Egyptian Christians, continued for several centuries to have themselves embalmed. ~From: The Egyptian Way of Death, Mummies and the Cult of the Immortal, Ange-Pierre Leca, Translated by Louise Asmal, Doubleday, 1981 (1979) (1976 French).

AD 26- Pontius Pilate becomes the Roman Prefect of Iudaea [Samaria, Judea, Idumea], until 36 C.E.

The Roman Emperor Tiberius is born Nov 16, 42 B.C.E., and retires to Capri, where he indulges in all forms of perverted sexual explorations.

AD 27-27-29(?) Yochanon ha Matbil, John the Baptist, begins ministry. ~Luke 3:1-2.

The 15th year of the reign of Tiberius.

John the Baptist, a Nazirite, is arrested and ordered killed by Herod Antipas... [Circa 27-34(?) C.E.]

AD 27-34(?) Yeshua is baptized by the hermit, Yochanon ha Matbil [John the Baptist] ~Mark 1:4-11.

AD 28- The Sanhedrin shift from the Second Beit Hamikdash [Temple].

AD 29 (?)-Peter is baptized, Jewish call: “You will be called Cephas.” ~John 1:42.

The Christian authors write Anti-Semitism into their Gospels, “Ye are of your father the Devil, and the lust of your father ye will do. He was a murderer from the beginning, and abode not in the truth, because there is not truth in him. When he speaketh a lie, he speaketh of his own: for he is a liar and the father of it [...] then answered the Jews.” ~Jesus Christ, speaking to the Jews in the Gospel of Saint John, 7:44, which makes it quite clear that Christ was addressing the Jews.

Mark 16-9 and John 20:11 attribute Mary Magdalene as the first to see Jesus after the resurrection. Some allege that Jesus did not die and that Luke, a doctor/physician, administered to Jesus [Colossians 4:14]. The First miracle, water os turned into wine at Cana. Three paragraphs in the newer versions of the Gospel of Luke's description of the Last Supper did not appear until the 15th century, but the Church still passes its Gospels off as the unadulterated “Word of God.” ~Dr Tischendorf, Are Our Gospels Genuine or Not? op. Cit.

Was Mary Magdalene black? “The Virgin Mary” was Glaphyra of Cappadocia, and her skin was not black. Mary Magdalene, however, was the daughter of the black King of Libya. The Black Madonna and child, therefore, must depict “Mary Magdalene” and a Holy child fathered by Jesus.

To Pope Pius XII, “I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians.” ~Mahatma Gandhi

In "The Gospel of Mary" of the Gnostic Gospels, the Resurrection is represented as merely a dream or trance.

Some Christian sects interpret Ephesians as God/Jesus being the only physician to mankind, and therefore deny their followers medical care, "There is one physician, both fleshly and spiritual, made and not made; God incarnate; true life in death; both of Mary and of God; first passible, then impassible; even Jesus Christ our Lord." ~Ephesians.

The phrase, "Died... Was buried... Was raised," [Aapeqanen... Etafh... Eghgertai] may be a metaphor as an indication of a physical raising as the "Concept of the resurrection itself," does not entail any more a physical than a spiritual concept; Christianity already accepting, and modifying, many Jewish beliefs.

Lazarus is cast out [treated as if dead] for misappropriating Jewish synagogue money, and Jesus, upon visiting him, accepts Lazarus back into the Synagogue [figuratively, raised from the dead], a fact suppressed by the early Christian Fathers, for it didn't hold the potency necessary to gain new converts such as if a miracle hadn't occurred. ~Luke 16:20, John 11:1, 2, 12:1.

For a Roman soldier to fall asleep at his post meant death, yet, "The most extraordinary Roman soldiers that Rome ever heard of were those soldiers that were set to watch the tomb of Jesus. They managed to fall asleep simultaneously in order to allow Jesus to pass unseen, and when they awoke, for a bribe they deliberately committed suicide by admitting that they had slept; an admission that meant instant execution. Was ever invention so stupidly desperate and mendacity so recklessly absurd as that invention and that mendacity upon which rests the story of the Resurrection, upon which the whole fabric of the Christian faith has elected to stand or fall? The basis is too puerile to support a story told by an idiot for the purpose of imposing upon a fool." ~W. S. Ross, Did Jesus Christ Rise from the Dead? An Anthology of Atheism and Rationalism, ed. Gordon Stein, Buffalo, NY: Prometheus, 1980, p. 211.

Colossians 2:12 also speaks of other people who were resurrected along with Jesus; those spoken of not being physically resurrected, and Ephesians 2:1, 5-6 speaks of people who were also resurrected from the dead, and their death was also only spiritual.

Unfortunately, the Holy Mother the Church neglects to inform her flock that until the 4th century, outcasts, those censured by the Church, were often wrapped in white linens [as was Jesus and Lazarus] and set in a sepulcher, as if dead, as penance for their sins, and to show others that they are no longer part of the assemblage. ~From the works of Richard Carrier, Review of In Defense of Miracles: A Comprehensive Case for God's Action in History, Douglas Geivett and Gary Habermas, eds. Inter Varsity Press, 1997, accessed 26/6/2000.

"In religious matters, oftentimes, it is truth that is the first victim." ~E. Christopher Reyes.

The Bible will record a spear wound sustained by Jesus while on the cross, the description of the wound telling of the pouring out of blood and water. ~John 19:34, written approximately 90 AD.

The Vikings have a story of their God, Odin, "I know I was hanged upon a tree shaken by the winds for nine long nights. I was transfixed by a spear; I was moved to Odin, myself to myself."

This is meant to suggest a mortal wound being struck at the heart. ~McDowell, citing James Thompson, E. H. Day, and William Stroud: 1st ed., p. 198, § 10.4A. 1B. 1C; 2nd ed., pp. 223-5, § 9.6A. 1B. 1C, see also Black's Medical Encyclopedia.

The Jews had long prophesied that their Messiah came "With water and blood," meaning baptism and death. ~1 John 5:6-8; for the breaking of no bones, refer to Exodus 12:46 and Numbers 9:12; for the prophesy, see Zechariah 12:10.

Accordingly, several Church Fathers, Saint Ambrose, Saint Augustine, and Saint Chrysostom, understood this Scriptural passage as being symbolical and not literal. The blood represented the Eucharist and the water, Baptism. Jewish tradition of the time also held that the rock in the wilderness that Moses smote twice, "Poured out blood at the first stroke, and water at the second." ~See Shemoth Rabba, folio 122.

"Is anybody so mad as to believe that the food he eats is actually a God?" ~Cicero, The Nature of the Gods, 3.201.

The good anti-Semitic Christian, Chrysostom, "In the earliest days of Christianity, Saint John Chrysostom, frustrated by the Jews' refusal to convert, called them the most miserable of men. The great theologian, Martin Luther, encountering the same steadfastness, declared: 'Their Synagogues should be set on fire... Their homes should likewise be broken down and destroyed... Let us drive them out of the country for all time.'" ~The Jewish Question: From antiquity to the Carolingian epoch: The period of commercial prosperity of the Jews by Abram Leon.

The Catholic Church supported slavery wholeheartedly, and according to Saint Chrysostom mankind was originally created perfectly free and equal, without the calculation of a slave. But, by the fall man lost the power of self-government, and fell into a threefold bondage: the bondage of woman under man, of slave under master, of subject under ruler.

These three relations he considers Divine Punishments and Divine Means of Discipline. Thus slavery, as a Divine Arrangement occasioned by the fall, is at once relatively justified and in principle condemned. Now since Christ has delivered us from evil and its consequences, slavery, according to Saint Chrysostom, is [in principle] abolished in the Church, yet only in the sense in which sin and death are abolished. Regenerate Christians are not slaves, but perfectly free men in Christ and brethren among themselves.

The exclusive authority of the one and subjection of the other give place to mutual service in love. Consistently carried out, this view leads of course to emancipation. Chrysostom, it is true, does not carry it to that point, but he decidedly condemns all luxurious slave-holding, and thinks one or two servants enough for necessary help, while many patricians had hundreds and thousands. Daniel saw in the sins of the people the real cause of their captivity.

Sin, therefore, is the mother of servitude and first cause of man's subjection to man; yet this does not come to pass except by the judgment of God, with whom there is no injustice, and who knows how to adjust the various punishments to the merits of the offenders... The Apostle exhorts the servants to obey their masters and to serve them ex animo, with good will; to the end that, if they cannot be made free from their masters, they may make their servitude a freedom to themselves by serving them not in deceitful fear, but in faithful love, until iniquity be over-passed, and all man's principality and power be annulled, and God be all in all. In the 6th century Church funds were used, sometimes, to reduce slavery by redeeming prisoners. Constantine, in 315 C.E., prohibited the branding of criminals on the forehead, "That the human countenance," as he said, "Formed after the image of Heavenly beauty, should not be defaced."

Chrysostom did advise the liberation of superfluous slaves, and the education of all, that in case they should be liberated, they may know how to take care of themselves. He is of opinion that the first Christian community at Jerusalem, in connection with community of goods, emancipated all their slaves; and thus he gives his hearers a hint to follow that example. But of an appeal to slaves to break their bonds, this father shows of course no trace; he rather, after Apostolic precedent, exhorts them to conscientious and cheerful obedience for Christ's sake, as earnestly as he inculcates upon masters humanity and love. The same is true of Saints Ambrose, Augustine, and Peter Chrysologus of Ravenna [458 C.E.]. ~With thanks to History of the Christian Church, §20. Social Reforms. The Institution of Slavery, http://www.ccel.org/s/schaff/history/3_ch03.htm

AD29-The Roman, "The Justinian Code rests on the broad distinction of the human race into freemen and slaves. It declares, indeed, the natural equality of men, and so far rises above the theory of Aristotle, who regards certain races and classes of men as irrevocably doomed, by their physical and intellectual inferiority, to perpetual servitude; but it destroys the practical value of this concession by insisting as sternly as ever on the inferior legal and social condition of the slave, by degrading his marriage to the disgrace of concubinage, by refusing him all legal remedy in case of adultery, by depriving him of all power over his children, by making him an article of merchandise like irrational beasts of burden, whose transfer from vender to buyer was a legal transaction as valid and frequent as the sale of any other property. The purchase and sale of slaves for from ten to seventy pieces of gold, according to their age, strength, and training, was a daily occurrence." ~History of the Christian Church, §20. Social Reforms. The Institution of Slavery, http://www.ccel.org/s/schaff/history/3_ch03.htm. The Christian God orders adultery, II Samuel 12:11, cf. Revelation 2:22-23.

The legal wall of partition, which separated the slaves from free citizens and excluded them from the universal rights of man, was indeed undermined, but by no means broken down, by the ancient church, who taught only the moral and religious equality of men.

We find slaveholders even among the Christian Bishops and the higher clergy of the Roman Empire. The Church was never the friend of the downtrodden or enslaved. All hasty and violent measures met with decided disapproval. The Council of Gangra threatens with the ban every one, who under pretext of religion seduces slaves into contempt of their masters; and the council of Chalcedon, in its fourth canon, on pain of Excommunication forbids monasteries to harbor slaves without permission of the masters, lest Christianity be guilty of encouraging insubordination. The church fathers, so far as they enter this subject at all, seem to look upon slavery as at once a necessary evil and a divine instrument of discipline; tracing it to the curse on Ham and Canaan.

Saint John Chrysostom, the Golden Mouthed, in his work 'On the Priesthood,' has a probing eulogistic oration regarding the clerical habit of continually telling lies to spread the alleged Catholic truth of the True Faith. ~cf. Isaiah 45:7, God creates evil.

Saint John Chrysostom, the Golden Mouthed, the famous 4th century theologian, and contemporary of Saint Augustine, discusses Paul's own acknowledgment of falsehoods and deceit: "I am made all things to all men, that I might by all means save some." ~1 Corinthians 9:22.

"Paul's doctrine of Baptism was not sacramental, but symbolical and subjective," since the former is seen as too close to 'Magical' principles. ~Kirsopp Lake, 1911, is also quoted as saying that Paul's conception is based on, "The well-known idea that results could be reached in the unseen spiritual world by the performance of analogous acts in the visible material world." p.17, n.45.

In the sermons of the Church Fathers, contraception and prostitution could form a couple that might only engender death as Saint John Chrysostom cries out in his Homily 24 on the Epistle to the Romans 4: "For you, a courtesan is not only a courtesan; you also make her into a murderess. Can you not see the link: after drunkenness, fornication; after fornication, adultery; after adultery, murder?"

"How it may be lawful and fitting to use falsehood as medicine, and for the benefit of those who want to be deceived." ~Bishop Eusebius, Book of Evangelical Preparation.

Cardinal Newman, even agrees that, "When there was a causa justa, an untruth need not be a lie." ~R. Graves and J. Podro, The Nazarene Gospel Restored, pg. 36.

The Catholic Encyclopedia tells us the first Bishops even forged Jesus' letters, putatively in his own handwriting, and signed!

"Great is the force of deceit! Provided it is not excited by a treacherous intention." ~Read 1 Corinthians 9:19, and Diagnosis, p. 309.

Referring to the eating of lamb, ancient Scriptures say, "And they shall eat the flesh in that night, roast with fire, and un-leavened bread; and with bitter herbs they shall eat it. Eat not of it raw, nor sodden at all with water, but roast with fire; his head with his legs, and with the purtenance thereof. ... And thus shall ye eat it; with your loins girded, your shoes on your feet, and your staff in your hand, and ye shall eat it in haste: it is Yahveh's Passover... In one house shall it be eaten; thou shalt not carry forth ought of the flesh abroad out of the house; neither shall ye break a bone thereof!" ~Exodus 12: 8, 9, 11, 46, Psalm 34:20, Exodus 12:46 and Numbers 9:12.

"It is interesting that the first Christian commentary on any text of Scripture that we know about came from a so-called heretic, a 2nd century Gnostic named Heracleon, who wrote a commentary on the Gospel of John." ~Ehrman, Misquoting Jesus, pg. 28.

Yet, the imminent Saint John will use this passage to refer to Jesus on the cross and having no bones broken as the fulfillment of yet another Hebrew prophecy. It is still a Mystery as to how Jesus can be nailed to the cross with monumental spikes without having any bones broken in either his hands or feet. Christians have been want to duplicate this scene. ~Psalms 34:1, 19, 20, Numbers 9:12, John 19:31-35.

This was allegedly the sign of God's Grace and the gift of life as Christ was understood by Paul as representing this rock. ~1 Corinthians 10:4.

John is alone in having Jesus perform a transmutation of water in to wine, and this is unlikely to be coincidence as the same symbolism is no doubt intended there also. Thus, the alleged wound is supposed to testify to the fact that this was the Messiah, and could therefore be an invention for that purpose as John himself already reports a Scriptural reason to invent the spearing, and makes suspiciously excessive assertions of its truth. ~John 19:35-37.

The only portion of the body where a noticeable amount of water or any clear liquid would ever be visible, along with blood, is the large intestine and even then, only abnormally. e.g. diarrhea, a wound unlikely to be fatal until many days later. ~Read, Why I Don't Buy the Resurrection Story by Richard Carrier

Was it Jesus who fulfilled the prophecy in Zacheriah 9: 9-10 of the Old Testament? "Rejoice greatly, O daughter of Zion; shout, O daughter of Jerusalem: behold, thy King cometh unto thee: he is just, and having salvation; lowly, and riding upon an ass, and upon a colt the foal of an ass. And I will cut off the chariot from Ephraim, and the horse from Jerusalem, and the battle bow shall be cut off: and he shall speak peace unto the heathen: and his dominion shall be from sea even to sea, and from the river even to the ends of the earth."

They say that Jesus rode on a donkey, like the whole Middle East in those days, but, did he bring peace? The battle bow, the horses and the chariots, symbols of war, were not cut off from Jerusalem, and his dominion was not from sea to sea and to the ends of the earth; as a matter of fact, he did not have any dominion at all.

Would the Church now translate the words of Paul in scriptures to have us believe that Jesus is God?

- ✠ “Seeing it is one God, ...” ~Romans 3:30.
- ✠ “We know that an idol is nothing in the world and that there is no other God than one.” ~1 Corinthians 8:4.
- ✠ “But to us there is but one God ...” ~1 Corinthians 6.
- ✠ “One God and father of all, ...” ~Ephesians 4:6.
- ✠ “For there is one God ...” ~1 Timothy 2:5.
- ✠ “You believe that there is one God, and you do well.” ~James 2:19.

Thomas says to Jesus; “My Lord and my God.” in John 20:28, which is an abomination in Hebrew teachings, and was not Jesus Hebrew? In Numbers 23:19, in I Samuel 15:29, and in Hosea 11:9 it states that God is not a man. The Jewish concept about God is that He is a spiritual being, and not flesh and blood. See Genesis 1:2; “And the spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters.”

How can God be one when He is walking around upon the earth as a man and at the same time He is in Heaven? In Matthew 23:9 we have, “And call no man your father upon the earth, for one is your father, which is in heaven.” ~Note: The Gospel of Matthew contains no less than sixty-five references to the Old Testament, forty-three being direct verbal citations, thus greatly outnumbering those found in the other Gospels.

So here Jesus excludes himself from being the father in heaven. Doesn't Luke 22:41-42 say, “He prayed, saying: ... Not my will, but thine be done.” Would a dying man on the cross call out to himself? “My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?” ~Matthew 27:46.

Jesus says in Matthew 4:10: “Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve.” ~See also Luke 4:8, from the works of Elyahu Silver & Rabbi Yitschak Goldstein.

AD29-The Christian churches tell of the Roman soldier who fell asleep at his post. These facts did not pass by unnoticed by the early Christian church. In the early centuries of the Christian church there was no such thing as a Trinity. The Church looked upon Jesus as a “Half God,” according to the teachings of Origen. “Anyone who can worship a ‘Trinity’ and insist that his religion is a monotheism can believe anything.”

“The story of the Roman soldiers falling asleep is too feeble and clumsy to merit serious refutation; and that the soldiers were bribed to say they slept is, if possible, more preposterous still. The penalty while doing sentry work would be death, and it requires a rather liberal bribe to induce a man to offer himself for instant execution. If there be any such bravo on record, I have not heard of him, and I cannot quite see what use the bribe for which he gave his life would be to him, even if he took it with him into his coffin.” ~W.S. Ross, Did Jesus Christ Rise from the Dead? An Anthology of Atheism and Rationalism, ed. Gordon Stein, Buffalo, NY: Prometheus, 1980, p. 210.

But in 318 C.E., the presbyter Arius got into a conflict with his Bishop, because of his firm statements about Jesus. Since he was a Bible scholar, he could not accept that Jesus was a god, since the Bible teaches that there is only one God, and therefore he taught that Jesus was not a god but a creature. But his Bishop, Alexander, disputes that because the New Testament clearly turns Jesus into a God.

This dispute gets so much out of hand that it threatened to tear up the early Christian Church, therefore specially for this dispute a synod was organized; we will read soon of the synod of Nice in 325, and there the dispute is settled. First Jesus, and “God the Father,” becomes a duality, and later the ‘Holy Ghost’ is added to form a ‘Trinity.’ The falsified rendition reading, “For there are three that bear record in heaven, the ‘Father,’ the ‘Word’ and the ‘Holy Ghost,’ and these Three are One.” ~1 John 5:7.

“We need not hesitate to declare our conviction that the disputed words were not written by Saint John: that they were originally brought into Latin copies in Africa from the margin, where they had been placed as a pious and orthodox gloss on Ver. 8: that from the Latin they crept into two or three late Greek codices, and thence into the printed Greek text, a place to which they had no rightful claim.” ~A Plain Introduction to the Criticism of the New Testament by F. H. A. Scrivener, 4th edition, 1894, volume 2, page 407.

Yet, the Church has made no effort to change or make known this fact as current editions of ‘New King James Version,’ ‘Green’s Literal Translation,’ ‘Green’s Modern KJV,’ and ‘Webster’s Bible,’ continue to perjure the words of John, even though it was not in the majority of manuscripts, the Byzantine text, or even in the first two editions of Erasmus’ Greek text. It doesn’t mention Jesus, as in the original Greek Scriptures of the New Testament this text does not exist. This text is added later to the New Testament by the Catholic Church in a desperate attempt to prove a ‘Trinity’ that cannot be proven.

To Pope Pius XII, “I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians.” ~Mahatma Gandhi

The Early Christians not only made available the Greek Scriptures, but prepared versions in the principal vernaculars as well. The New Testament has come to us in bits and pieces, a Gospel from here, a letter of Paul from there... The first ones who compiled out of this a reliable text of the Greek New Testament, were Westcott and Hort in 1881. In that Greek text I John 5:7 says, "For there are three witness bearers." ~Read History of the Church by Dr. H. Berkhof, 6th ed. 1955, pages 68-70.

It is interesting to note, that nowhere, in the Gospels, does Paul ever mention the Roman guards, or the women who visited the tomb and found it empty, or an angel that descended in an earthquake, or rolled the stone away from the tomb, and announced to the women that Jesus had risen. Nowhere does Paul mention the virgin birth of Jesus, or the place of his birth, or gives any chronological indication of when the 'Resurrected Savior' had lived. Paul preached the Resurrection in a different light than what is now taught. Paul believed that material bodies are planted [as in a seed of a tree] or buried, from which spiritual bodies are resurrected. ~1 Corinthians 15:51-53.

Simon Peter is extremely jealous of Mary Magdalene and in "The Gospel According to Thomas" states, "Mary Magdalene should leave us... Women are unworthy of the Life" The Life is referring to the inner circle of Jesus and the Mysteries. Jesus defends Mary and says he will 'Lead her' meaning he will teach her the "Mysteries," which are denied the masses.

"Beware that no one lead you astray saying Lo here or lo there! For the Son of Man is within you."

Dreams, for centuries, have been a means of the supernatural spirits, genies, and God to speak to those in this material world in order to express dissatisfaction or to accomplish a task. Often spoken of in the Bible.

~See [Genesis 20:3, 31:11, 31:24, 37:9, 41:1, Judges 7:15, Matthew 2:12, 27:19, Job 7:14, 34:15-17, Jeremiah 23:28, Daniel 2:7, I Kings 3:5, and Numbers 12:6], dreams are also a means for man to relieve the pressures and stress from the previous day.

We now know that dreams are a necessity and help man to solve problems, relieve stress, and to gain wisdom from his God. James, the first Bishop of Jerusalem, is the leader of the then called Jerusalem Church, primarily practicing and preaching Jewish tenets mixed with those of the Christians [AD 42-67] while Peter is the leader of the Christian faction in Rome preaching another viewpoint, but still retaining the Jewish fervor, therefore we have two factions teaching to some extent dissimilar doctrines as to the teachings of Jesus.

A fragment of the 'Gospel of Peter,' which, according to early Christian writers, was in common use in the 2nd century, and received as 'Inspired' with the rest of the New Testament writings, has recently been found in an Egyptian tomb at Akhmim.

This Gospel directly contradicts most of the important details in the accounts given of the alleged appearances of Jesus after his death in the so-called Canonical Gospels, the Acts, and the Pauline Epistles. Thus, with one compelling shove, disappear Peter's following of triple denial in the presence of John and others at the foot of the cross the appearances to Mary Magdalene and other women; the walk to Emmaus; the apparition to the eleven of a material body through closed doors; the second apparition to remove Thomas's doubts; the appearances at Jerusalem during forty days by many living proofs; all those mentioned in the Epistles to the Corinthians.

After his resurrection, Jesus first appears to Mary Magdalene, and not Peter [According to the Gospel of John]. Mary Magdalene announces to Jesus' disciples, "I have seen the Lord." In other Scriptures, her name is first in the list of witnesses. ~Mark 16:1-11; Matthew 28:1; Luke 24:10; John 20:11-18, and 1 Corinthians 15:5-8.

Peter says to Mary, "Sister we know that the Savior loved you more than the rest of woman." ~Peter,

Gospel of Mary Magdalen

The Gospel of Peter is at a later period dropped, probably for that reason, that it favored the heresy of the Doctrine, which held that the body of the Christ was a 'Specter' or 'Illusion' for the Gospel relating to the Crucifixion. ~Laing, Gospel of Peter.

The early Christian writers create their own events as to what allegedly happened [historically], and on a letter addressed to Polycarp we have, "What have you to say about the Solar Eclipse, which occurred when the Savior was put on the cross? At the time the two of us were in Heliopolis and we both witnessed the extraordinary phenomenon of the moon hiding the sun at the time that was out of season for their coming together... We saw the moon begin to hide the sun from the east, travel across to the other side of the sun, and return on its path so that the hiding and the restoration of the light did not take place in the same direction but rather in diametrically opposite directions..." ~Pseudo-Dionysius: The Complete Works, tr. Colm Luitheid, Paulist Press: New York, 1987, p. 268. In a footnote Gingerich mentions that an eclipse [of the sun by the moon] could not have happened at that time because the Passover is a full moon event, and solar eclipses always happen during the new moon. Owen Gingerich, Copernicus: The Book Nobody Read, pages 190 and 191.

The writer of Pseudo-Dionysius apparently read the Alexandrinus variant of Luke, where upon darkness is said to have accompanied Jesus' crucifixion, which is attributed to an eclipse. ~Pseudo-Dionysius, p. 268f, Luke 23:44. In 1457 the Italian humanist Lorenzo Valla writes, "... The claim of 'Dionysius'... That he observed the Eclipse of the sun at the hour of the Saviour's death... Is as blatant a fiction as the epistolary form of the report." ~Pseudo-Dionysius, Introduction by Karlfried Froehlich, p. 38.

The very idea that Matthew was written by an eyewitness of the crucifixion is chronologically possible, "But an investigation of the sources used in this Gospel will show that this cannot be the case." ~J. C. Fenton,

The Penguin New Testament Commentaries: Saint Matthew (London: Pelican Books, 1963; Penguin Books, 1993) pp. 12, 14.

It is "Mistaken to confine the idea of apostolicity to literary authenticity... Widespread and important as this criterion was, it must still be said that no New Testament writing secured canonical stand on the basis of apostolicity alone." ~Henry Y. Gamble

"They brought two malefactors, and crucified him between them; but he kept silence, as feeling no pain," and this silence is maintained until he died, crying out, "My power, my power, thou hast left me," which sounds, says Mr. Laing, "More like the cry of a baffled magician than of either a natural man or a Son of God..."

This contradicts no less than eight utterances from the cross-recorded in the Canonical Gospels:

- ✠ 'My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?'
- ✠ 'Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do'
- ✠ 'Verily, this day thou shalt be with me in Paradise'
- ✠ 'Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit'
- ✠ 'Woman, behold thy son'
- ✠ 'Behold thy mother'
- ✠ 'I thirst'
- ✠ 'It is finished.'

The first symbol of the cross is to be found in the catacombs of the Buddhists as their sacred Swastica, also seen in the old Buddhist zodiacs, and in the Asoka inscriptions.

No cross of present-day shape is to be found; and for a very good reason, for the cross was not the symbol of early Christianity. Jesus, after his acceptance as a Christ, was worshipped under the form of a lamb, the "Lamb of God." It is not till the Council of Constantinople, in 707 C.E., that symbols of a cross with a man nailed to it are ordered to be used in place of the lamb, or ram, which was formerly used to denote the Victorious Sun [Son].

The Son passes through the sign Aries, giving new life to the world, where he is worshipped as "The Lamb of God." The lamb gave place later to a Phallic symbol as a sign of regeneration. From the decree just alluded, to the identity of the worship of the astronomical "Aries," the ram or lamb, and the Christian "Savior," is certified beyond the possibility of a doubt; and the mode by which the ancient superstitions were propagated is well known.

The Pagan cross is a later development of the older "Crux Ansata," or combined phallic emblems, the two portions of which represented the male and female procreative powers of nature, the oval or upper portion the "Vulva," or "Yoni" of the Hindus; and also the lower portion or "Tau," the "Phallus," Ashera, Priapus of the Jews, Linga of the Hindus, or membrum virile, the common symbol of the "Life-giver," which is sometimes also represented by a lighted torch, a tree, a fish, or a scepter. It was particularly sacred with the Egyptians, the Babylonians, the Buddhists, and the Hindus. A cross is also the symbol of the Hindu God, Agni, the "Light of the World."

Through commerce [trade] the Egyptians and Greeks traded not only goods, but also religious beliefs, "Those mutilated members of Uranus, those lustful members, which after their excision did violence to the waves, how wanton the members, of which your Aphrodite becomes the worthy fruit! In the mystic celebration of this pleasure of the sea a lump of salt and a phallus are delivered as a symbol of generation to those who are being initiated in the adulterous art: and they pay a piece of money to her, as lovers to a harlot." -Eusebius of Caesarea: Præparatio Evangelica [Preparation for the Gospel], Tr., E. H. Gifford, 1903.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

It was also worn as a charm by Egyptian women, and is later adopted by Christian women, Osiris is represented with a scepter and a crazier, and stretched on a 'Crux Ansata.' Osiris is the main component in Egyptian religious lore. Already worshipped on the hill of Rhakotis, and the most celebrated of the Egyptian deities, to him is added the bull god Apis, of Memphis, whose cult has been recently revived, and out of their names is formed the compound, "Serapis." But while the origins and title of the new God are Egyptian, his appearance and attributes are definitely Hellenized [fair skinned Greek]. ~From: The Diegesis Being A Discovery of the Origin, Evidences, and Early History of Christianity, Never yet Before or Elsewhere so Fully and Faithfully set Forth, By the Rev. Robert Taylor [1784 - 1844], Founder of the Christian Evidence Society and of the Society of Universal Benevolence.

The Egyptian savior, Horus, is often represented sitting on the lap of his mother, Isis, his virgin mother, with a large 'Cross' carved on the back of the seat. On the breast of an Egyptian mummy is to be seen a cross upon a "Calvary." The Egyptian images generally hold a cross in their hands. In the cave of Elephanta a figure is represented as destroying a crowd of infants, with a "Crux ansata," a "Mitre," and a "Crazier."

The Egyptian priest wore the "Crux ansata" as a "Pallium," the head passing through the vestment at the oval or "Yoni;" just as the priests of the Catholic Church now wear their mass vestment. By the side of one of the inscriptions in the Temple, on the Island of Philas, is seen a "Crux ansata" and a "Maltese cross;" the same are to be seen in a Christian Church. The cross is also to be found, in some form, in the hands of Siva, Brahma, Vishnu, Krishna, Svasti, and Jama, on the figures of ancient monuments. The god, Saturn, was represented by a cross with a ram's horn; Venus, by a circle with a cross, the goddess of love. Krishna was also represented suspended on a cross.

"I am the oblation," says the Lord Krishna in the Bhagavad Gita, "I am the sacrifice, I the ancestral offering." "In the truly orthodox conception of sacrifice," says Elie Reclus, "The consecrated offering, be it man, woman or virgin, lamb or heifer, cock or dove, represents the deity himself... Brahma is the Imperishable sacrifice;" Indra, Soma, Hari and the other Pagan Gods, became personified in animals to the sole end that they might also be immolated.

Although the words Krishna and Christ might sound phonetically similar, they have dissimilar meanings, "Krishna" meaning, "The Black One," or the "Dark One," and "Christ" meaning, "Anointed One," or the "Messiah," although, all across Europe, and even the Philippines, we find numerous portraits and statues of a Black Madonn holding a black Jesus child. ~Compare this with Revelations 1:15, 2:18, which describes Jesus as being dark toned. On a Phoenician medal, found in the ruins of Citium, are inscribed the cross with a rosary attached, and a lamb, this last being the early symbol of the followers of Jesus. The priests of "Jupiter Ammon" carried in procession a cross, and a box containing a compass or magnet called "The Ark of the Covenant of God." "There is reason to believe that the Chinese knew something about the polaric property of the loadstone more than 2,000 years before the Christian era." ~From the Popular Encyclopedia.

We thus see that the cross was used as a religious emblem many centuries before "Yesuism," or early Christianity, by nearly every nation and religion of the world. The Latin cross, rising out of a heart, similar to the Catholic emblem, the "Crux in corde," is first used by the Egyptians; representing goodness.

Under the foundations of the Temple of Serapis, at Alexandria, are discovered a cross and various phallic emblems, which cause the shocking murder of Hypatia by Saint Cyril's monks. The Egyptians also put a cross upon their sacred cakes, whence arose the idea of "Hot cross buns." Many Egyptian sepulchers are cruciform in shape. Anu, the chief deity among the Babylonians, and the sun god Bel, or Bal, had the cross for their sign. A cross hangs on the breast of Tiglath Pileser in the colossal tablet from Nimrod located in the British Museum.

Another king, from the ruins of Nineveh, wears a maltese cross on his breast. The "Saint Andrew's Cross" originated in the four spoke wheel, on which Ixion, the god "Sol," was bound to, when crucified in the heavens; two spokes confined the arms or, of the dove, the wings, and two the legs. Criminals were extended on this form of cross. The ensigns and banners of the Persians were cruciform.

"Few cases have been more powerful in producing mistakes in ancient history than the idea, hastily taken by Christians, that every monument of antiquity, marked with a cross, or with any of those symbols which they conceived to be monograms of their god, was of Christian origin." ~Rev. G.W. Cox,

Aryan Mythology

AD 30-Jesus' first coming to the Temple to drive out the money brokers. ~John 2:13-16.

Jesus, the Nazarene, born 12-4 B.C.E., dies 26-36(?), crucified at the hands of Roman troops in Jerusalem, Friday 14 Nisan? Or Friday 15 Nisan? Or possible Friday, 14 Nisan; the crucifixion dates are 7 April 30, 3 April 33 or 30 March 36 C.E. Dismas is the repentant thief crucified alongside Jesus.

Saint John allegedly writes the "Book of Revelation" and the "Apocalypse" on the Greek island of Patmos. We know that the Seer of the Apocalypse was John the Apostle the son of Zebedee, known as the Beloved Disciple of Jesus. At the end of the 2nd century the Apocalypse was acknowledged by the historical representatives of the principal churches as the genuine work of John the Apostle.

End of the World: Coming Soon! In the midst of religious persecution the early Christian-Jews sell their valuable possessions and begin taking their meals together, but they keep their houses as they wait for the return of their Savior, within their lifetime. ~ Matthew 16:27-28 [Jesus fails to make good on his promise to return during the lifetime of his disciples], Matthew 24:34-35, Mark 9:1, 13:30 and Luke 9:26-27.

Christian Scriptures [New Testament], when interpreted literally, record various predictions by Jeshua of Nazareth [Jesus Christ] that God's Kingdom will arrive within a very short period, within their lifetime, or is actually in the process of arriving. Jesus is even recorded as saying, "... There shall be some standing here, which shall not taste of death, till they see the Son of Man coming in His Kingdom." ~ Matthew 16:28. In Matthew 24:34, Yeshua says, "... This generation shall not pass, till all these things be fulfilled." Since the life expectancy in those days was little over 30 years, Jesus appears to be predicting His Second Coming sometime during the 1st century C.E. But, it didn't happen.

The Christian Churches love their Holy relics, which help to prove that there was a Jesus. Collin de Plancy estimated that from the Holy bones purchased in Western Europe some 500,000 to 600,000 skeletons could be reconstituted. The Catholic Church acknowledges numerous religious artifacts all over the world, even those of Jesus, but will not concede how many, or which, if any, are real, e.g.:

1. Jesus' Foreskin: paaeputum [praeputum], allegedly kept by the Virgin Mary after circumcision. 12 in France, 1 in Belgium, 1 in Germany, 1 in Rome. The one best attested at Charroux (Poitiers) said to have been given as betrothal gift by the mother of Emperor Constantine, Empress Helena, to Charles the Great, who had Charroux built to house it in 788 CE. A bulla of Pope Clement VII in 1379 grants indulgences to sightseers. King Henry V sent it to London to help in the birth of Henry VI from Catherine of France. Confirmed by royal ordinance of 1447. King Louis XI worshiped it in 1464.
2. Jesus' Navel: [umbilical chord] authenticated by Pope Clement V in 1310, and two are kept in France, two in Italy, and one in Constantinople [Constantinople].
3. Jesus' Blood: in crystal vials: Eight are in France, four in Italy, two in Belgium, and three remain in Constantinople. One drop of Jesus' blood had an adventurous history. The Prophet Nicodemus allegedly caught some blood on a parchment, put it in a bird's beak. The bird landed in Normandy, where the Abbey of Bec-Halluin was founded in 1200 C.E., by the Duke of Normandy. The drop in Bruges [Belgium] of Abbey of St Basil, is said to have liquefied every Friday from dawn to 3 p.m., 1148-1310, and when a criminal uttered a blasphemy, it became solid.
4. Jesus' Baby Teeth: One milk tooth is at Soissons, although Guibert, abbot at Nogent, wrote a book contesting its authenticity, and several of Jesus' adult teeth allegedly at Charroux.
5. Jesus' Nails: Five nails of his left hand, and two nails of his right hand, at Charroux.
6. Jesus' Hairs: In Church of St Alban [Namur] confirmed by the Papal bulla of 1249. Two hairs in Chartres, 1322, and also at Lucca [Italy].
7. Jesus' Beard: One curl at Wittenberg, 1509.
8. Jesus' Tears: In a crystal vial, shed on Golgot ha [Golgotha] at Vendome. Five in France.
9. Jesus' Perspiration [Sweat]: on the Golgot ha [Golgotha/Calvary], at Vienne and St. Omer.
10. Jesus' Breath: [Now this is an extremely difficult one to fathom] at Genova, doubtful.
11. Jesus' Crown of Thorns: Made of twigs of Acacia horrida, var. nilotica, with thorns of 5-10 cm. [2-4 in.] are kept in the chapel of Bucoleon in Constantinople [The Crown of Thorns cost St Louis IX 100,000 coins of 4.2 grams of gold at 22 carats, or some 400 kilograms of gold]. In 1204 the Crusaders came to Constantinople to pass through Anatoliato Palestine to rescue the Holy Sepulcher from the Muslims, but following the counsels of the Venitian Doge Dandolo, they sacked the city and dethroned the Emperor. Byzantium then fell to Baldwin of Flanders, as well as one-fourth of the religious relics, including the Crown of Thorns, which was sent to Venice, as security for a money loan. In 1238, St Louis IX repaid to the Venetians [Venetians] the loan of 13,134 gold perpres[?]. The crown arrived in Paris in 1239. The king, and all his Court, in shirt and naked feet, then carried the Crown in 1248 to the Saint Chapel built [Chapel built] expressly to receive it. In the course of time, the kings sent some 70 spines to other kings, to Venice, and other Christian churches.

12. Jesus' Seamless robe. with half-sleeves. Increasing in size with age of God located at Argenteuil and Trier [Germany].
13. Jesus' Shirt, sandals, shawl, belt are at Athens.
14. Jesus' Swaddling clothes: at Prag, received by Karl IV.
15. Jesus Manger cradle [cradle] of Bethlehem, in the Church of Our Lady Bethlehem.
16. Jesus' straw from his manger.
17. Jesus' incense brought by the three Magi of Persia to Bethlehem.
18. Jesus' gold pieces, brought by the three Magi.
19. The skulls of the three Magi.
20. Tones of the three Magi.
21. Skulls, tibias, and femurs of the Innocents allegedly slaughtered by Herod the Great, skeletal remains: 204 parts are at Wittenberg.
22. Part of the rock shown by Satan to Jesus in the desert.
23. Twelve baskets of bread multiplied miraculously by Jesus.
24. Jars of water, which were changed into wine at the Canna wedding.
25. Spines of the fishes fed to 5000 people.
26. Some of these dried fishes furnished by Jesus.
27. Bones of donkey on which Jesus rode on Palm Sunday.
28. Some of the palm leaves carried on that day.
29. Piece of the cloth with which Jesus dried the feet of the Apostles.
30. Some of the water used to wash the apostles' feet.
31. Piece of sail of bark in which the disciples fished on Lake of Tiberiad.
32. Piece of broiled fish offered to Jesus by Peter.
33. Table of Last Meal [whole].
34. Part of said table also said to be in Frankfurt, Germany.
35. Table cloth [whole] in Golden Fleece, Burgundy.
36. The Holy Calice [Chalice] of Last Meal.
37. Some crumbs from the Last Meal.
38. Comb of cock who crowed in Caiphas' house, awakening Peter to his duty.
39. Some feathers of said cock.
40. Stick on which cock crowned [crowed].
41. Basin in which Pontius Pilatus washed his hands absolving himself of any accountability.
42. Some of the 30 silver coins paid to the traitor, Judas.
43. Judas' leather bag.
44. Ten feet of the rope used by Judas to hang himself.
45. Judas' lantern.
46. Holy Cross, obtained by Empress Helena; mother of Emperor Constantine, in 324 C.E., 35 splinters at Wittenberg.
47. Nails of crucifixion at Wittenberg and Venice.
48. Lance plunged into Jesus' body while on cross [Sacred Lance, which Hitler sought for its alleged magical powers].

54. The blood-stained whipping post. ~J.W. Ross, To The Path Breaker, 1878, The Annals of Poggio Bracciolini and Other Forgers, by the infamous Florintine forger Louis Paret, 1423-1429.

AD 32-John the Baptist: preaches penance and practices Baptism in the River Jordan [not a Jewish Tradition] Yahia Yuhana, and when John the Baptist is killed, Jesus assumes the leadership of most of John's followers. The Bible is void on the issue of who gave John his authority, as he must have had a higher authority in order to Baptize Jesus [Simon Magus is one of the followers of John the Baptist who elects not to follow Jesus]. Simon Magus, with his consort Helen, will attempt to set up his own religious group in opposition to Jesus. Furthermore, the beliefs of John have never been resolved inasmuch as we know he was of Jewish ancestry, he practiced an Egyptian philosophy similar to the Isians.

Simon claims to be God, "At those sayings of his Simon grew pale; but after a little, recollecting himself, he thus answered, Do not think that I am a man of your race. I am neither magician, nor lover of Luna, nor son of Antonius. For before my mother Rachel and he came together, she, still a virgin, conceived me, while it was in my power to be either small or great, and to appear as a man among men. Therefore I have chosen you first as my friends, for the purpose of trying you, that I may place you first in my Heavenly and unspeakable places when I shall have proved you. Therefore I have pretended to be a man, that I might more clearly ascertain if you cherish entire affection towards me." ~The Recognitions of Clement, 2.14. Simon Magus, Professes to Be God

Simon Magus, one of the the pretended Messiahs, after Jesus, and noted in the New Testament, was the sorcerer who notoriously "Used sorcery, and bewitched the people of Samaria, from the least to the greatest," so that all the people said, "This man is the great power of God," and "Of a long time he had bewitched them with sorceries." ~Acts 8:9-11.

The miracles proclaimed in the Bible as such "Works," and such "Great signs and wonders," prove nothing, for even Jesus himself admits the great credulity of the people in his times, and even denying that he ever worked any "Signs and wonders," and refused to perform any. ~read Matthew 12: 38-40; 16: 4; Mark 8: 11-13; and John 6: 30.

Does Jesus Lie? Jesus writes off his own claims of "Miracles" by declaring, "If I bear witness of Myself, My witness is not true." ~John 5:31.

Proof of the Divine mission and authority of Jesus as the Christ must, therefore, must derive from some other more valid verification than that of mere popular wonder working and magical performances prevalent at the time.

The Jews, the people who lived in the devout expectation of the coming of their Messiah and who are alleged to have seen all the "Great signs and wonders" of Jesus, as well as of the numerous "False Christs" whom Jesus decried, did not believe that Jesus was the Messiah and king, and after the death of Jesus, when a new generation, which had not seen these "Great signs and wonders," had grown up, the Gospel biographies and Epistles began to be written by his fanatical followers, to further the propaganda of the new faith, while the Jews continued looking for their Messiah, promised and prophesied, it is said, in their ancient Scriptures. Obviously there could be no Messiah who could not fulfill these various prophecies. ~See Philo of Alexandria, Special Laws 2.204, 206-211, Book of Jubilees 32.4-7, Flavius Josephus, Antiquities of the Jews 11..5, Pesikta Rabbati 51.8, and it is interesting to note that not one Jewish writer, or any writer for that matter during the time of Jesus ever wrote of any miracles occurring, except perhaps for a falsified document of Josephus which has been verified as a forgery.

The case of Elymas Bar-Jesus is somewhat in point as is also that of the "Damsel possessed with a spirit of divination, which brought her masters much gain by sooth-saying." ~Acts 13:6-8 and 16:16.

Spells, witchcraft, and fortune-telling were quite common in this era of superstitious believers. And even greater were the "Signs and wonders" were worked upon the masses by common charlatans intent upon separating them from their finances.

Irving Hexham, noted historian estimates that, the blatant persecution of ancient European Pagans by fanatical Christians produced the increasingly popular tale, that over 9 million witches died horrible deaths between 1000 and 1800 C.E., most of them burned at the stake. Many of these victims were women, who, it is said, were midwives or traditional healers feared by the Church that loathed them because they brought relief to suffering without the glorifying assistance of the Catholic clergy. ~The Invention of Modern Witchcraft: A Surprising Genealogy of Neopaganism by Irving Hexham, January 1, 2004.

"From the birth of Popery in 606 C.E., to the present time, it is estimated by careful and credible historians, that more than fifty millions of the human family, have been slaughtered for the crime of heresy by Popish persecutors, an average of more than forty thousand religious murders for every year of the existence of Popery.” ~Dowling, History of Romanism, pp. 541, 542. New York, 1871.

Thus, even total strangers to Jesus Christ, un-commissioned by him, disbelievers in him, common fakirs, would also exercise the Divine Power of “Casting out Devils” in his name, to the great scandal of the Disciples. ~Mark 9:38 and Luke 9:49.

Faustus warns us that the New Testament was not written by Christ or by His Apostles, but nameless men many years later, which has been confirmed by historians, “You say, that if we believe the Gospel, we must believe everything that is written in it. Why, then, since you believe the Old Testament, do you not believe all that is found in any part of it? Instead of that, you cull out only the Prophecies telling of a future King of the Jews, for you suppose this to be Jesus, along with a few precepts of common morality, such as, ‘Thou shalt not kill,’ ‘Thou shalt not commit adultery;’ and all the rest you pass over, thinking of the other things as Paul thought of the things, which he held to be dung. Why, then, should it seem strange or singular in me that I select from the New Testament whatever is purest, and helpful for my Salvation, while I set aside the interpolations of your predecessors, which impair its dignity and grace?” ~Faustus, 400 C.E., Contra Faustus Manicheum. The Unholy Bible of Judeo-Christianity, http://www.essenes.net/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=669&Itemid=949. Note: “Thou Shalt Not Kill” The exact Hebrew of this Biblical phrase is “Lo tirtzak,” which accurately translates as, “Any kind of killing whatsoever.” The Mandaeen, Manda da Hayye, in “Knowledge of Life,” the modern day followers of John the Baptist, perhaps of Gnostic origin, regard Yehoshua ben Joseph [Jesus] as a false prophet. Paul, on the other hand, refers to Jesus as the Second Adam or Second Man. ~I Corinthians 15, Acts 4:12, Matthew 18:11.

The Mandaeans used a phallic shaped role of bread in certain Oblation ceremonies, as well as two Pitha's rolled up into a phallic shape and filled with nuts and fruits, which represent the male reproductive force, and the female womb is represented by the cup containing fruit of the vine, and by the baptismal Waters called “Jordon.” When the sacred water is added to the cup of wine in the Masqita Mass, the secret scrolls tell us that a creation of a spiritual body is created in the spiritual worlds. “After the water has been poured into the wine-cup, the commentaries liken what follows to the nine months of gestation.” ~Drower, The Secret Adam, p. 77.

Jesus has premature gray hair and dark skin; so says The Apocalypse of Saint John, we have John describing Jesus, “...And his head and his hairs were white, as white wool, and as snow, and his eyes were as a flame of fire...and his feet like unto fine brass, as in a burning furnace. And his voice as the sound of many waters.” ~See also Revelation 1:14-15, 2:18.

“For Paul there were no empty tombs, no disappearance from the grave of the physical body, no physical resurrection, no physical appearances of a Christ who would eat fish, offer his wounds for inspection, or rise physically into the sky after an appropriate length of time. None of these ideas can be found in reading Paul. For Paul the body of Jesus who died was perishable, weak, physical. The Jesus who was raised was clothed by the raising God with a body fit for God's Kingdom. It was imperishable, glorified, and spiritual.” ~Bishop Shelby Spong, A Bishop's Search for the Origins of Christianity.

“But the dead will not be raised with physical bodies, nor could the living faithful join Christ in the air if they still had theirs. No: the raised body will not be fleshy, but spiritual, as Christ's was at his resurrection.” ~Paula Fredriksen.

AD 33-34(?)-Nisan 14: April 1, Jesus is impaled, End of Law, a new covenant made and validated, transgression causing desolation to the Jewish system, 2300 solar days of Daniel 8 starts. Nisan 16, Jesus is resurrected as an Angel, and appears before Jehovah, offering his angelic soul as a ransom for Adam.

God accepts and Jesus goes to Gehenna, having no Angelic soul. This is Angelic loss day. Three days and nights in the hearts of the Heavenly congregation end. Nisan 17; appointed over all, end of 3 temple times. Jesus is resurrected as a human, and the 3 days and nights in the tomb end. Jesus breathes onto the Disciples and tells them that what they bind on earth will also be bound in Heaven, and Jesus gives them authority over the law of the church; 40 days of appearances start. Jesus enters Heaven, the ascension on the 40th day.

Yochanon ha Matbil, John the Baptist, is ordered arrested and killed by Herod Antipas. ~Luke 3:19-20.

After 40 years Jesus will die and be buried next to Muhammad in Medina; Islam teaches that Jesus didn't die in A.D. 33 but has been in a state of “Suspended animation” ever since.

AD 33-36(?)-The Ministry of Jesus Christ, The Prince of Peace, which is alleged to have been a short ministry: Jesus is accused of being in "Possession by evil spirits." ~John 7:20; 10:20. cf. Isaiah 45:7, God creates evil.

Christian Church's acceptance of money goes against Scripture, all of which disagrees with the teachings of Jesus who does not send his Disciples out to collect money, "Go your way; behold I send you forth as lambs among wolves. Carry neither purse, nor script, nor shoes... And in the same house remain, eating and drinking such things as they give; for the laborer is worthy of his hire..." ~Luke 10:3,4-7.

Even Saint Paul does not quote a single tithing Scripture to compel people to give, and he most certainly could have. The Jewish Temple and its sacrificial system are still on going during his lifetime, but Paul knew that only Levites could collect tithes and offerings.

Of course, "Render to Caesar what is Caesar's and to God what is God's," is a clear distinction between religion and Roman politics, implying that Caesar's taxes are lawful and should be paid. ~Note: The Apostle Paul never taught tithing and never took tithes. Some churches did voluntarily contribute to Paul's cause, Philippians 4:14-16, while others did not, II Corinthians 11:8. Paul never taught that the Gentile Christians should tithe.

Perhaps this could explain the evil nature of the Church and its Christian followers over centuries. The allegation that Jesus' activity as an itinerant preacher [Christians' disingenuousness: Jesus' Ministry' takes place over a three year period is an unfounded claim... There is no evidence to either prove or disprove. According to the early Christian villain, Irenaeus, 140-202, the very early Christian sects, i.e. those who were very close to the times in which the itinerant preacher managed his sorceries, taught that there was only was one year between Jesus' baptism and his condemnation]. ~Irenaeus, Against the Heresies, 1:33,2:20:1,2:22:5, ed by The Gnostic Society Library.

Having antagonized the Jews with his teachings, Jesus, the Nazarene, is seized by Roman soldiers and handed over to the Sanhedrin, who condemn him for blasphemy. ~The exact year of Jesus' crucifixion is disputed.

The Roman procurator, Pontius Pilate, permits the angry mob decide Jesus' fate. He is crucified, but his disciples maintain that he has been resurrected from the dead. On Friday, March 20th, the Crucifixion of Jesus begins, and inscribed upon the cross when Jesus is crucified are the Latin words: "Jesus Nazarenus Rex Iudeorum," in Pontius Pilate's native language, "Jesus Nazarenus Rex Iudeorum," "Jesus the Nazarene Ruler of the Judeans."

At the time that Pontius Pilate orders the "Jesus Nazarenus Rex Iudaeorum" inscribed upon the cross the spiritual leaders of Judea are also protesting to Pontius Pilate, "Not to write that Jesus was the ruler of the Judean" but to engrave instead that Jesus, "Had said that he was the ruler of the Judeans." ~John 19:19.

"And he came and dwelt in a city called Nazareth: that it might be fulfilled, which was spoken by the prophets, He shall be called a Nazarene." ~Matthew 2:23, Note: Of 1,071 verses, Matthew has 387 in common with Mark and the Gospel of Luke, 130 with Mark, 184 with Luke, with only 370 being unique to itself.

There are no Gospels at this time, the Gospels are not written until almost six generations after the death of the alleged Savior. Jesus predicts that His "Kingdom of God" will come with great power, that is while some people hearing him speak are still alive [coming soon]. ~ Mark 9:1.

The four Gospels are virtually unknown to the early Christian Fathers, and no Christian writer before 150 C.E., even makes the slightest referral to of them, "With the exception of Papias, who speaks of a narrative by Mark, and a collection of sayings of Jesus, no Christian writer of the first half of the 2nd century quotes the Gospels or their reputed authors." ~ Solomon Reinach.

This anonymous Gospel According to Mark was the first to be written, between 60 and 80 C.E., by an anonymous Roman convert to Christianity. It was copied word-for-word and used extensively by Matthew and Luke, as their primary source. Nevertheless, the Gospel author never met Jesus, he wrote in [Koine] Greek, not Hebrew, and was not even a Jew, therefore knew little or nothing of their culture and traditions. It is unlikely that Mark even knew any Jews.

"It is impossible, in my mind, to overestimate the creativity of Mark, but those twin trials [i.e., before the Sanhedrin and before Pilate] must be emphasized for what they are, namely, consummate theological fiction... It is magnificent theological fiction, to be sure, but entailing a dreadful price for Judaism." ~ John Dominic Crossan, former Catholic priest, The Historical Jesus, 390.

According to Mark, Jesus aligns himself with this luminary who will be seen "Coming in the clouds with great power and glory. And then shall he send his Angels, and shall gather together his elect from the four winds, from the uppermost part of the earth to the uttermost part of Heaven." ~Mark 13:26-27.

There was no-one to correct the anonymous author of Mark who is confused about Jewish life, such as misquoting the Ten Commandments, attributing God's words to Moses, and having Jews buy things on the Sabbath.

No one knows who wrote the New Testament, nor even most of the Old Testament, “If there are parts of the Testament of the Father, which we are not bound to observe, for you attribute the Jewish Law to the Father, and it is well known that many things in it shock you, and make you ashamed, so that in heart you no longer regard it as free from corruption, though, as you believe, the Father Himself partly wrote it for you with His own finger while part was written by Moses, who was faithful and trustworthy, the Testament of the Son must be equally liable to corruption, and may equally well contain objectionable things; especially as it is allowed not to have been written by the 'Son Himself,' nor by His 'Apostles,' but long after, by some unknown men, who, lest they should be suspected of writing of things they knew nothing of, gave to their Books the names of the Apostles, or of those who were thought to have followed the Apostles, declaring the contents to be according to these originals.” ~Faustus, 400 C.E., Contra Faustus Manicheum.

The Gospel According to Mark has undergone many changes and there are several ancient versions. The oldest versions of Mark all end at Mark 16:7. The Gospel of Mark, perhaps the earliest Gospel, and most probably the closest to anyone who allegedly witnessed Jesus, does not describe the history of Jesus, or even mention his miraculous virgin birth, which was added in Matthew, thirty years later, which had then assimilated other pagan myths into the Christian legends. ~The Gospel of Mark by Vexen Crabtree, 2006.

- † The Apostle Paul also believes that Jesus is returning soon and that there is actually no time for sex; in Paul's first letter to the Corinthians he even tells the faithful to “Flee fornication.” ~Corinthians 6:18.
- † “Let every man have his own wife” and “Every woman have her own husband,” that is if one is compelled by desire, it being the abstinent Paul's preference, and in view of the imminent Christian's End of the World, that Christians ought to stay single and celibate, and focus on the Lord's Glory that is to come. ~Corinthians 7:1-8, 32-33. Matthew 16:27-28 [Jesus fails to make good on his promise to return during the lifetime of his disciples], Matthew 24:34-35, Mark 9:1, 13:30 and Luke 9:26-27.
- † Paul also reminds his followers that fornicators [those who indulge in coitus without benefit of marriage] are not among those who will “Inherit the Kingdom of God.” ~Corinthians 6:9-10.
- † Most early Christian followers believed that Jesus would return within their lifetime. ~1 Corinthians 7:29.
- † The Apocalypse of Peter is a non-canonical work dating from the early 2nd century describing how fornicators are to be hung over a burning pit in Hell, the women by their necks and plaited hair, and the men by their genitalia. The men complaining among themselves that they didn't know this was coming. ~see Bamstone, The Other Bible.

It is only when Jesus does not reappear within the lifetime of the Apostles, His followers purportedly begin to write down Jesus' sayings. This is a bit of fanciful gross prevarication on the part of Matthew, as there is not a word in the Old Testament of this alleged “Prophecy” or anything like it, or of such a place existing as Nazareth, which did not exist in Old Testament times. ~See the marginal references to this verse in Judges 13:5, “Lo, thou shalt conceive, and bear a son; and no razor shall come on his head: for the child shall be a Nazirite [Hebrew, Nazir] unto God from the womb; and he shall begin to deliver Israel out of the hand of the Philistines.” and 1 Samuel 1:11.

The first two chapters of Matthew, Jesus' miraculous virgin birth, and Jesus' royal genealogy, were not contained in the first versions of Matthew's Gospel; all were added much later by passionate Christian followers. Darkness, tearing away of the veil of the temple, earthquakes, etc., all were phenomenon that attended the death of nearly every ancient mythic hero, worldwide. An eclipse was out of the question to account for the darkness, because the Passover moon was at the full, and an eclipse would only last about six minutes.

The Passover is not unique to the Jews, nor the Christians; Sahagun, the great Spanish missionary, tells us that it was a custom of the people there to “Smear the outside of their houses and doors with blood drawn from their own ears and ankles, in order to propitiate the God of Harvest.” ~Kingsborough, Mexican Antiquities, vol. vi, p. 235.

Ironically, the early Christians didn't even celebrate the birth of their Messiah, Jesus the Christ. Jesus wasn't even born December 25th, but every Pagan God based on Nimrod was. Jesus was conceived near the end of what we call December during the Biblical month of Kislev, “On your day of gladness, we [Christians] neither cover our doorposts with wreaths, nor intrude upon the day with lamps. At the call of public festivity, you consider it a proper thing to decorate your house like some new brothel. We are accused of a lower sacrilege because we do not celebrate along with you the holidays... " ~Tertullian, 155-220, 2001, p. 1176, quoted by David Berco, A Dictionary of Early Christian Beliefs, 1998, p. 342.

So, what was celebrated in December by the Pagans? "Familiar to early Christians was the Saturnalia, an ancient Roman festival celebrated during the last days of December in honor of Saturn, the God of Agriculture. The Saturnalia... Was diametrically opposed to the teachings of Christ." ~Hidden Truths About Christmas, UCG; Australia.

"To the Pagans, the Saturnalia was fun. To the Christians, the Saturnalia was an abomination in homage to a disreputable God who had no existence anyway." ~4,000 Years of Christmas: A Gift from the Ages, 1997.

"In the days of Christ, December 25th was sacred to the Pagan Romans..." ~The Xmas Story, Part 4, Heathen Holidays by Denise Snodgrass.

"Nothing in Christianity is original. The pre-Christian God Mithras, called the 'Son of God,' and the 'Light of the World,' was born on December 25, died, was buried in a rock tomb, and then Resurrected in three days. By the way, December 25 was also the birthday of Osiris, Adonis, and Dionysus. The newborn Krishna was presented with gold, frankincense, and myrrh." ~Dan Brown, The Da Vinci Code.

At the death of the Hindu savior, Krishna, "A black circle surrounded the moon, and the sun was darkened at noon-day; the sky rained fire and ashes; flames burned dusky and livid; demons committed depredations on earth. At sunrise and sunset thousands of figures were seen skirmishing in the air; and spirits were to be seen on all sides." ~Amberley's Analysis of Religious Belief.

"Among the ancient Hindus Soma was a chief deity; he is called the Giver of Life and Health... He became incarnate among men, was taken by them and slain, and brayed in a mortar [a God of Corn and wine apparently]. But he rose in flame to Heaven to be The Benefactor of the World' and the 'Mediator between God and Man.' Through communion with him in his sacrifice, man [who partook of this God] has an assurance of immortality, for by that sacrament he obtains union with his Divinity." ~Baring Gould, Orig. Relig. Belief, I. 401.

The ancient Greeks and Romans thought that the births and deaths of great men were announced by celestial signs. On the death of Romulus, founder of Rome, the sun was darkened for six hours. When Julius Caesar is murdered, it is said that there was darkness for six hours.

"Krishna, whose history so closely resembles our Lord's, was also like him in his being crucified." ~Dr. Inman, Ancient Faiths, vol. 1, p. 411.

If an artificial gibbet were made, it was cruciform, but was called "A tree." ~Higgins, Anacalypsis vol. 1.

Crucifixes displaying the god Indra are to be seen at the corners of the roads in Tibet. In Some parts of India the worship of the crucified god 'Bulli,' an incarnation of 'Vishnu,' occurs. The "Incarnate God" Buddha and "Suffering Savior expired at the foot of the tree."

This expression is frequently used in the Roman Missal. The Egyptian gods, Osiris and Horus, were also crucified as Saviors and redeemers. The suffering, death, and resurrection of Osiris forms the greatest mystery of the Egyptian religion and is the basis for their belief in an eternal life. Atty's is "The only begotten Son and Savior" of the Phrygians, represented as a man nailed or tied to a tree, at the foot of which was a lamb.

Tammuz [Ezekiel 8:14] or Adonis, the Syrian and Jewish Adonai, was another Virgin born God, who "Suffered for mankind" as a "Crucified Savior." Prometheus, of Greece, was with chains nailed to the rocks on Mount Caucasus, "With arms extended," as a Savior. ~Murray, Manual of Mythology, p. 82.

Each year the young nubile maidens, "Wept for Adonis." ~See Ezekiel 8:14.

Saint Cyril also tells of the worship of Adonis, or Tammuz, in ancient Egypt, and it had at least three [and most likely more] annual resurrections, for the worship of the Persian God Mithra, which also flourished there, as everywhere else; and the Mithraists, as Firmicus also tells us, every year laid a statue of Mithra on a bier, mourned his death, and then, in a blaze of candles, rejoiced at his resurrection.

And Alexandria did not differ from the other cosmopolitan cities of the time. "The tradition ran that the 'Generative Rock,' of which a standing image was worshiped in the temples, had given birth to Mithras, on the banks of a river, under the shade of a sacred tree, and that shepherds alone, ensconced in a neighboring mountain, had witnessed the miracle of his entrance into the world. They had seen him issue forth from the rocky mass, his head adorned with a Phrygian cap, armed with a knife, and carrying a torch that had illuminated the somber depths... For although the shepherds were pasturing their flocks when he was born, all these things came to pass before there were men on earth." ~Cumont, page 132-133 of an English translation of The Mysteries of Mithras.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

It is in Rome that Firmicus describes the Mithraist celebration, which Saint Augustine, doubtless saw, and also that of the Adonis ceremony, which Firmicus says: "In most cities of the east Adonis is mourned as the husband of Venus and... His wound is exhibited to the spectators." ~Firmicus Maternus, The Errors of the Profane Religions.

Theologians do make errors, and so does the Church, "But we must always remember two things about it [religion]: first, that the liability of error is enormous, indeed almost infinite; and second, that the results of confident error are very terrible. Probably throughout history the worst things ever done in the world on a large scale by decent people have been done in the name of religion, and I do not think this has entirely ceased to be true at the present day... The record of early Christian and Medieval persecutions, which were the direct result of that one confident religious error comes curiously near to one's conception of the wickedness of the damned." ~Sir Gilbert Murray, Five Stages of Greek Religion.

The tragedy of the crucifixion was acted out in Athens, Greece, 500 years before the Christian era. ~Doane, Bible Myths, p. 192. Saint Paul was a traveled man, and he borrowed heavily from the religious beliefs of the peoples he encountered during his journeys.

Bacchus, the offspring of Jupiter and Semele, was also called, "The only begotten son," the "Sin-bearer," "Redeemer," etc., Hercules, son of Zeus; Apollo; Serapis; Mithras, of ancient Persia, is known as "The Logos;" Zoroaster; and Hermes, were also "Saviors," centuries before Jesus or the Catholic faith ever existed.

Men are made Gods, "But the foolish men who were then, whereas they ought to have abandoned the opinion, which they had conceived of him, inasmuch as they had seen it confuted by his mortal punishment, extolled him the more. For raising a sepulcher to his honor, they went so far as to adore him as a friend of God, and one who had been removed to heaven in a chariot of lightning, and to worship him as if he were a living star. Hence also his name was called 'Zoroaster,' after his death, that is, living star, by those who, after one generation, had been taught to speak the Greek language. In fine, by this example, even now many worship those who have been struck with lightning, honoring them with sepulchers, and worshiping them as friends of God. But this man was born in the fourteenth generation, and died in the fifteenth, in which the tower was built [Babylon], and the languages of men were divided into many." ~The Recognitions of Clement, About the Recognitions and Homilies 4.28, Tower of Babel.

And today Fundamentalists would have their brethren believe that the Devil went back into time to tempt man with these stark revelations. Ridiculous; but such is their reasoning. ~From Bank of Wisdom, Box 926, Louisville, KY 40201, The Rationalist's Manual, M. D. Aletheia, author of A Rationalist Catechism, and The Agnostic's Primer.

"Fundamentalist Christianity rests on circular reasoning and pat answers. The belief system is brilliantly constructed to provide its own support, if you don't look too closely at the logic. It is a closed system, satisfied with its own internal evidence of truth. It is closed in that any information or argument from outside is rejected a priori because, as discussed above, it is a 'Lie,' not of the 'Truth.'" ~Marlene Winell, Leaving the Fold, Oakland, CA: New Harbinger, 1993, p. 83.

The numerous similarities, but with variances which contradict early Christianity will be the downfall of Gnosticism, "This truly is the only-begotten God. This is he whom the All knew. They became God, and they raised up his name; God. This is he of whom John spoke: 'In the beginning was the Word and the Word was with God and the Word was God. This one without whom nothing exist, and that, which has come into existence in him is life.'" ~Gnostic Bruce Codex, also see John 1.1,3,4.

He gave to them commandments: "Abide in my word and I will give to you Eternal Life ! And I will send you powers. And I will strengthen you with spirits of power, and I will give you authority, as you will. And no one will prevent you in what you wish. And you will beget for yourselves aeons and worlds and Heavens [so that] the intelligible spirits come and dwell in them. And you will become Gods, and you will know that you are from God, and you will see him, that he is God within you, And he will dwell in your aeon." ~Ibid

"If the New Testament accounts could support a range of interpretations, why did Orthodox Christians in the 2nd century insist on a literal view of resurrection and reject all others as heretical? I suggest that we cannot answer this question adequately as long as we consider the doctrine only in terms of its religious content. But when we examine its practical effect on the Christian movement, we can see, paradoxically, that the 'Doctrine of Bodily Resurrection' also serves an essential political function: it legitimizes the authority of certain men who claim to exercise exclusive leadership over the churches as the successors of the Apostle Peter. From the 2nd century, the Doctrine has served to validate the 'Apostolic Succession' of Bishops, the basis of Papal Authority to this day.” ~The Gnostic Gospels, Elaine Pagels, Princeton University professor.

Good Christians believe that the Bible is inerrant, no mistakes, no errors, and that all that it contains is the truth as it was inspired by God. Yet Saint Paul admits that he lies, first by stating he does not lie, “I speak the truth in Christ; I lie not!” ~Saint Paul, Romans 9:1.

And it is this same sanctimonious individual who proclaims that he does indeed lie for the benefit of the faith with amazing naiveté, “... If by reason of my lie the truth of God has been made more prominent to His glory...” ~Saint Paul, Romans 3:7.

“This [Pope] Leo was of his own nature a gentle and quiet person, but often times ruled by those that were cruel and contentious men, whom he suffered to do in many matters according to their insolent will. He addicting himself to niceness, and taking ease did pamper his flesh in diverse vanities and carnal pleasures. At banqueting he delighted greatly in wine and music, but had no care of preaching the Gospel, nay was rather a cruel persecutor of those that began then, as Luther and others, to reveal the light thereof, for, on a time when a Cardinal Bembus did move a question out of the Gospel, the Pope gave him a very contemptuous answer saying: 'All ages can testify enough how profitable that fable of Christ hath been to us and our company.'” ~Pope Leo, quotation by John Bale, in King John.

If, as the Catholic chronicle states, “The sacred Fish of Atargatis have nothing to do with the origin of the Eucharist, nor with the Ichthys Anagram of the Catacombs. The Anagram, Ichthys, the Greek word for Fish, does indeed represent 'Lesous Christos Theou Uios Soter,' Jesus Christ, Son of God, Savior; the propagation of the symbol was often facilitated owing to the popular Syrian Fish-cult [from Dagon, the ancient Syrian Fish-God]. That the terminology of the Mysteries was largely transported into Christian use is certain [Paul, Ignatius, Origen, Clement, etc.]; that the liturgy, especially of Baptism, organization of the Catechumenate, Disciplina Arcana, etc., were affected by them, is highly probable. Always the Church has forcefully molded words, and even concepts as Savior, Epiphany, Baptism, Illumination [photismos], Mysteries [Teletes], Logos, to suit her own Dogma and its expression. Thus it was that John could take the expression 'Logos,' mold it to his Dogma, cut short all perilous speculation among Christians, and assert once for all that the 'Word was made Flesh' and was Jesus Christ.” ~Catholic Encyclopedia, Vol. XI p. 392.

The Fish symbol used extensively in the Bible to represent Christianity. It is another ancient Pagan astrological symbol for the Suns [Sons] Kingdom during the “Age of Spices.” Jesus' assumed birth date is supposed to be the start of this age. A double play on words, Son and Sun, some sun worshipping Pagans believing that God is the “Son of the Sun,” the Christians will adopt the Pagan symbology, “Age of Pisces” the fish, and in the Bible we have the twelve disciples asking Jesus when the last Passover shall be and Jesus replies, “Behold, when ye are entered into the city, there shall a man meet you bearing a pitcher of water. Follow him into the house where he entereth in.”

The man bearing the pitcher of water represents the ancient astrological Aquarius, the Water Bearer, who represents the Age after Pisces. Therefore, when the Sun [Son] leaves the Age of Pisces, he will enter the Age of Aquarius, the man portrayed bearing a pitcher of water, and Jesus says, “I will be with you even to the end of the [World] Age,” which meant that after the Age of Pisces is the Age of Aquarius. Jesus is the personification of the Age of Pisces, the Fish, or the literary astrological symbol for the Age of Pisces, and not the End of the World, which Christianity likes to taunt their membership with. ~Matthew 16:27-28 [Jesus fails to make good on his promise to return during the lifetime of his disciples], Matthew 24:34-35, Mark 9:1, 13:30 and Luke 9:26-27.

Jesus, and Saint Paul, in the early 1st century C.E., with barbarians at the borders of the once powerful Roman Empire, strongly assert that the End of the World is about to occur, and Jesus clearly warns his followers that, “This generation will certainly not pass away until all these things have happened. This world will pass away...” ~Matthew 16:28, 24:34-35, Mark 9:1, 13:30 and Luke 9:26-27.

The Christian have misinterpreted many verses in their attempt to further their congregation in the faith in Jesus, and the notion of “End of Times” and the “End of the World” is a yet another misinterpreted astrological Christian allegory, which was mistranslated from inscriptions portrayed 3500 years ago on the walls of the temple of Luxor of Egypt, and are images of the annunciation, the miraculous conception, the birth, and adulation of the Egyptian God, Horus, the Sun [Son] God. Jesus warns his disciples to preach very rapidly in town after town, fleeing at the first sign of persecution, because they will not have enough time to go through all the towns of Israel before the End of the World occurs. ~Matthew 10:23.

The failure of the most compelling and diabolically morbid declaration in the Bible, that world concerns no longer matter because the world is about to draw to a close, is the single most Prophetic failure of the New Testament, which has not stopped the Christian ministry, nearly two thousand years later, from preaching the same preposterous proclamation. ~The End of the World is Nigh! The Dangers of Apocalypticism and End-Times Beliefs by Vexen Crabtree, 2011.

Saint Paul says that time is so short that people should no longer bother getting married, mourn, or bother with worldly possessions, “Those who have wives should live as if they had none ... Those who buy something, as if it were not theirs to keep; those who use the things of the world, as if not engrossed in them. For this world in its present form is passing away.” ~1 Corinthians 7:27-31.

Saint Paul sees the Holy Sacrament of Baptism in a different light than the contemporary Christian, “Just as today we perceive natural laws and forces working in nature and the universe, the ancients perceived spiritual forces operating between the natural world and the supernatural, between the present, earthly reality and the primordial past or higher Divine reality. For Saint Paul, the rite of Baptism was a Sacrament [ex opere operato], in this sense, something which drew on invisible spiritual forces operating between past and present, between Heaven and earth.” ~ The Jesus Puzzle, p. 99.

Would this not mean that even fish is sacred and not to be eaten? The new Christian religion was supposed to be purer and much simpler to understand for the ignorant masses, borrowing from the pagan gods worldwide, at first, then delving into some of the older cults, which were coupled with some very effective negative inducements.

Its Founder proclaimed himself as God, who had come to establish a new kingdom on earth as well as in the heavens. To those who would abandon their families and their material possessions, to the clergy, he made the promise of immeasurable rewards, “There is no man that hath left house... Or lands for my sake, but he shall receive a hundredfold now in this time, houses ... And lands; and in the world to come eternal life.” ~Mark 10:29, 30; Matthew 19:29; Luke 18:30.

There is no doubt what He proclaimed again and again that in a very short time the existing world would end, and that He would return in His glory to establish His Kingdom and a new earth, where He would reign forever.

So soon, indeed, would this great reward be realized, the prospective king asserted, that there were some “Standing here, who shall not taste of death, till they see the Son of Man coming in his kingdom.” ~Matthew 16:28.

The new religious order assures the superstitious masses of an everlasting felicity in its heaven to all who would just believe; but it also threatened them with eternal torment in the fires of its Hell for all who would not believe and accept it. All must pray and wait for the prophecies to take place and all the material belongings should be put into the custody of their leaders for their common assistance in a formalized communistic-socialism system.

The fearful and trembling zealous proselytes did as they were told without question, for they lacked knowledge being under the decisive sanction of supreme Divine fear. Early Christian leaders were quite enthusiastic on scaring their members into believing and the punishment if they did not, “Ezrael the Angel of Wrath shall bring men and women, the half of their bodies burning, and cast them into a place of darkness, even the Hell of men; and a spirit of wrath shall chastise them with all manner of torment, and a worm that sleepeth not shall devour their entrails: and these are the persecutors and betrayers of my righteous ones.” ~The Apocalypse of Peter, The Ethiopic Text, First published by the Abbe Sylvain Grebaut in Revue de l'Orient Chretien, 1910, from a fresh translation from his Ethiopic text by H. Duensing appeared in Zeitschr. f. ntl. Wiss., 1913.

“Neither was any among them that lacked: for as many as were possessors of lands or houses sold them, and brought the price of the things that were sold, and they laid them down at the Apostles' feet; and distribution was made unto every man according as he had need.” ~Acts 4:34, 35.

Biblical readers know well the story of the woe that befell Ananias and his wife Sapphira for holding out a part of their substance from the common pool, which was a warning to any who, with a cautious eye to a possible hitch in the “Second Coming,” might be inclined to “Lie to the Holy Ghost,” who kept a tally of the contributions. ~Acts 5:1-11.

The head of the Disciples and his associate propagandists are admittedly without learning, "Unlearned and ignorant men." ~Acts 4:13.

The spiritual leaders of Judea protested to Pontius Pilate against the reference to Jesus as "Rex Judaeorum" insisting that Pontius Pilate was not cognizant of or misunderstood the status of Jesus in Judea. On the cross he utters, "Eloï, Eloï, lama sâbâchthâni!" which in Aramiac means, "My God, My God, for this is I was preserved!" In the Nestorian Christian Bible [followers of Saint Thomas, Judas Thomas aka Thomas Didymus, Twin of the Savior, who claim Thomas rather than Peter as their leader], translated from the Aramaic language, we have, "My God; for this I was kept..." meaning, "This is my destiny!" ~Mark 15:34, Matthew 27:46.

"I see many who strongly insist on these [theories of fiction] is something [based] on the truth and ancient opinion. Our position is that these groups included the Greek academics of the East who shared Julian's conviction that the New Testament was a fiction of men." ~Nestorius writes on a systematic classification of heresies.

The 1562 second edition of the Geneva Bible, "Blessed are the pacemakers." ~Matthew 5:9.

"And he [a bridegroom] saw the Lord Jesus in the likeness of the Apostle Judas Thomas, who shortly before had blessed them and departed from them, conversing with the bride, and he said to him: 'Didst thou not go out before them all? How art thou now found here?' But the Lord said to him: 'I am not Judas who is also Thomas, I am his brother.'" ~Acts of Thomas 1:11.

Note: The Saint Thomas Christians became a high caste in the Indian social order, alongside a religious system that is well acquainted with the inspiration of earthly avatars of Divinity. Who was crucified on the cross? Was it Jesus the "Nasorean," or "Jesus Barabbas?" ~Matthew 27:16.

Barabbas means, Son of the Father or God, and some Muslims believe Jesus, the Prophet, was not killed on the cross, having been replaced by another, Barabbas. The Muslims believe Jesus was a Great Prophet followed by the last Great Prophet, Mohammed. Jesus, by helping his friend Lazarus, who is a zealot, is associated with him and thereafter has sealed his future, for he [Jesus] will also be thought of as a zealot who advocates the overthrow of the government [Romans] Jesus is crucified between two thieves on a cross. Remember, theft is not a crime punishable by death under ancient Roman laws.

Therefore, the two thieves alongside Jesus are zealots, and not thieves as we think of stealing today. Jewish zealots did not pay tribute to the Romans [money under the table, as did the Rabbis], and their political views for the violent overthrow of the ruling government was a constant threat, that was their crime. They stole no money nor committed any crimes against the Jews.

In 399 C.E., Gaudentius and Jovinus, counts of the Emperor, "Overthrew the temples and broke the images of the false Gods," in Carthage. Ever since, says Saint Augustine, "Who does not see how much the worship of the name of Christ has increased." ~Saint Augustine, Civ dei, 18:45.

Theirs is a crime against the Romans. The crime of Jesus is allegedly against the Rabbis and not Roman law. ~Luke 6:15.

The gold in the Holy Temples of the Pagans was taken and melted down, and the historic stone walls, the Romans ripped apart, stone by stone, in order to steal the gold within. The taking of Pagan gold from their sacred temples [but not considered really stealing], for, "... There is no such thing as 'Robbery' for those Saint Augustine who truly possess Christ." ~Libanius, Or. 30.9f.

Jesus is not welcome in the Temple for he preached freely, cast out the money changers [a lucrative business in the temple] cast out the whores and prostitutes [male and female lovers of the priests who resided inside the Temple], and chastised the clergy for their lack of morality and practicing their unchaste ways inside a Temple of God [this goes to show that the clergy in Christian religions had two thousand years of prior poor examples to follow].

The fact that Jesus is crucified and not stoned [as prescribed by Jewish laws] lets us know that the Romans are the ones who tried Jesus and found him guilty as they thought of Jesus as a zealot; one who instigated the violent over-throw of the Roman government.

Did Jesus have a twin brother? In the Bible, we have an apostle who is portrayed as weak and unbelieving. Yet, in the works of The Gospel According to Thomas, a Gospel denied by the Church Fathers, Thomas is revealed as Didymus Judas [John 20:24-25] the twin brother of Jesus as well as his most esteemed disciple. Thomas later preached in India along with Bartholomew, another disciple.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

In the beginning of the Gospel According to Thomas, "These are the secret words spoken by the living Jesus and recorded by Didymus Judas Thomas." In Gnostic writings the word, Living is used to refer to Jehoshua Ben Pandira, or Jesus, after his resurrection [see also, Lost Books of the Bible]. In Gospel of Mark, 3:6 we have the brothers of Jesus as: James, Joses [Joseph], Juda, and Simon, with no reference to his sisters' names. ~Some Bibles also list the brothers in Matthew 56-65 [which is excluded from most Bible books].

Jacob-Heli, the father of Joseph, grandfather of Jesus, is against taxes being used for military purposes, while Theudas, the head of the Egyptian Therapeutae supported "Nationalism," a free and independent country of Jews, and stored money away for that purpose at Qumran.

Theudas misuses the money [Luke 15:13] and the zealots are then called "Thieves," for misappropriation of taxes collected intended for religious purposes. Judas, the Galilean leads a group of zealots who uses military force to harass the Romans. ~Acts 5:36.

The assumed pseudo author, in the Gospel According to Luke, is based on a Christian interpretation of the healing God, Lykos, from ancient Greek mythology.

Their beliefs, similar to the Pharisees, held a doctrine in a belief in continued existence after death that inspires them to lay down their lives for their faith in exchange for a glorious rebirth. The Dragon [In Revelations 13, the Dragon, is Joazar, who attempts to exclude Mary from communion and is prevented by Ananus] gives his power to the "Wild Beast" to make war on the saints [believers]. Judas is the "Wild Beast" during the times of Jesus, all non-believers, in the growing group of Jesus' followers are referred to as "Beasts."

Gentiles [uncircumcised believers] are needed to increase the ranks of the diminishing radical ranks, and although accepted, are discriminated against due to their not accepting full initiations or acceptance of all Jewish Laws. In Revelations 13:18, we have reference to 666, which is an allusion to the numbered grades of promotion within the celibate standings within the priesthood.

The chief priest is ranked above all others as representative of the clergy [Judas Iscariot is referred to with the number seven. ~Luke 8:2, Revelations 13:1.

His emblem is the lion, his numerical ranking is seven [or less] and he is known as 'Chief Beast' among the married set [Simon Magus is the second beast]. In times of war this position might necessitate fighting on the "Sabbath Day," therefore, the Chief Beast also retains an anti-priestly station, and the position is held by a "Satan," known as Judas Iscariot ~Luke 8:2, Revelations 13:1-10, 1 Peter 5:8.

Simon claims he can make a human being out of air, "As we spoke these and such like words with looks suited to the occasion, this most vain fellow believed that we were deceived; and being thereby the more elated, he added also this, 'I shall now be propitious to you, for the affection, which you bear towards me as God; for you loved me while you did not know me, and were seeking me in ignorance. But I would not have you doubt that this is truly to be God, when one is able to become small or great as he pleases; for I am able to appear to man in whatever manner I please. Now, then, I shall begin to unfold to you what is true. Once on a time, I, by my power, turning air into water, and water again into blood, and solidifying it into flesh, formed a new human creature, a boy, and produced a much nobler work than God the Creator. For He created a man from the earth, but I from air, a far more difficult matter; and again I unmade him and restored him to air, but not until I had placed his picture and image in my bed-chamber, as a proof and memorial of my work.' Then we understood that he spake concerning that boy, whose soul, after he had been slain by violence, he made use of for those services, which he required." ~The Recognitions of Clement, 2.15.

Simon Magus, Professed to Have Made a Boy of Air.

The 666, in Revelations is a coded language to describe the zealots who constantly wage war on the Romans by using church monies to raise arms [Read: Luke 16:20, John 11:1-2, and 12:1] This system of levels permeates all aspects of ranks [The higher one's education, religious learning, marital status, etc.] At different ages one is tested and progresses to the next level eventually being proficient and qualifying to participate in the "Sacred meal," the "Sacrament." The steps being named: Samekh-full initiation, Resh-entry gained to the sanctuary, Taw-initiates reach the summit.

Saint Irenaeus claims that the Valentinians changed the Scriptures, "By transferring passages, and dressing them up anew, and making one thing out of another." Irenaeus notes that among some Biblical manuscripts circulating in his day, the number of the Beast in Revelations was not 666 but actually 616.33. Irenaeus reveals that accusations of corruption of Scripture were also applied to the Orthodox Church as well, for the so-called heretics, "Turn round and accuse these same Scriptures, as if they were not correct." ~The Corruption of Scripture in the 2nd Century by John Gee, Ph.D.

The numerical values in Hebrew were: Samekh-60, Resh-200, and Tav-400 with their total 660, and by putting the letters together and adding the Hebrew Waw to make the letters a word [Waw = 6], we have 666 [Revelations 13:18]. 666 is representative of the sum total of the Jewish priestly system that is understood only by those who have passed the learning and ritualistic ceremonies accompanied by them.

Revelations 13 is a denunciation by John of Zebedee on the whole system and its leader, Simon Magus, who upon the death of Jesus, will proclaim himself the new leader of the group and in effect, becomes the first Anti-Pope. The Gospel According to John was written about the same time as that of Luke, perhaps after 93 C.E. The Gospel of John was written in the name of the apostle John, the brother of James who was the son of Zebedee. The earliest versions of John did not contain the final chapter, which describes Jesus Christ's appearance to his devoted disciples after rising from the dead. John did not quote as much of Mark as the others did.

Jesus becomes aware of the taxes collected by the church not going to help the poor and the widowed women, but are being diverted for priestly extravagances as well as the zealot movement. What Rabbi Jesus did, and John of Zebedee, author of Revelations as dictated by Jesus, is attack the whole system; a system that although it was becoming corrupt, was a system that proclaimed to speak for God and speak for the Jews, and this system is represented by the high-ranking priestly craft.

What Jesus did was not sacrilegious as many have claimed and the reason the Jews allegedly crucified him, for Jesus is not punished according to Jewish law, but by Roman Law, for being a zealot. Many religious groups now claim 666 in the Bible refers to Social Security numbers, I.D. numbers, or a world identification system. Others believe that 666, after studying Judaism, that these numbers refer to the church itself and the vigilance one must assert in its financial affairs.

Jesus and his Apostles, a band of uncouth vagrants, explore Palestine with a retinue of barefoot and unwashed peasant men and women, shocking polite citizens by their habits of not washing even their hands to eat when invited as guests, and by the forcefulness of their language.

Jesus' cousin, John the Baptist, is a desert dervish, unwashed and unshorn, who wore a leather loin-strap for clothes and whose regular diet consisted of wild bumble-bee honey and raw grasshoppers. His own brother James is as unkempt and filthy as any Saint in the calendar; of him Bishop Eusebius records, "James, the brother of the Lord, ... A razor never came upon his head, he never anointed with oil, and never used a bath!" ~His. Enc., II, 23.

The Apostles abandon Jesus, not showing at the crucifixion and appearing at the cave only upon the pleadings of Mary Magdalene and it is only through the efforts of Mary Magdalene [declared by Jesus himself as the Apostle of the Apostles-second only to Jesus] and no other person that the Apostles reluctantly visit the burial site of Jesus. Mary is an eminent person in the life of Jesus and the other Apostles are jealous of her, especially Peter. She is financially independent and remains true to Jesus even after the crucifixion.

Mary Magdalene is portrayed in the Bible as a whore, but recent evidence shows that this may not be true. She was not Jewish and there is also strong suspicion to believe that she may have been a priestess from another religious sect.

Women fielding their wares, as Mary is alleged to have done by the Church, were not known to be rich in those times. She is the first to witness the resurrection, a fact downplayed by the Church. ~see also Gospel of Mary and Pistis Sophia.

It is ironic that even up to the 4th century C.E. that many Christians still do not believe in the resurrection, although in ancient Egyptian teachings resurrection belief is quite common, "There is none other that knoweth thee except thy son Neferkhprrure-waenre. Thou hast caused him to be skilled in thy ways and in thy strength. The earth comes into being upon thy hand even as thou makest them. Thou hast shone forth and they live. Thou settest and thy die. Thou thyself art lifetime and men live by thee. Eyes are in presence of beauty until thou settest. All work is laid aside when thou settest on the right [West]. Rising thou makest prosper... For the king, movement is in every leg since thou didst found the earth." ~Akhenaton's Great Hymn To Aton as rendered by Sir Alan Gardiner in: Egypt of the Pharaohs, Oxford 1961, p.225f); cf. psalm 104.

Jesus is crucified, a common form of torture and death by the Romans. However, if his crime were against the Jews, of a sacrilegious nature, such as defiling their god, then his death would have been by stoning, as is Jewish Law.

"The reductio ad absurdum of these [Gnostic] unbridled speculations can be seen in the Pistis Sophia, in which light-maidens, paralemptores, spheres, Heimarmene, thirteen aeons, light-treasures, realms of the midst, realms of the right and of the left, Jaldabaoth, Adamas, Michael, Gabriel, Christ, the Savior, and mysteries without number whirl past and return like witches in a dance. The impression created on the same reader can only be fitly described in the words of "Jabberwocky." ~From Lewis Carroll, Gyre and Gimble on the Wabe, Pg 498.

The fact that he is 'Crucified' means that he must have committed a crime against the Romans and not the Jews who presented him to Pilate. There appears to be a cognitive dissonance here. What is said and what is done do not collaborate.

It appears that the early books written by the Apostles are already doctored to place the blame on the Jews who would be the enemy of the Christians and the Jews would be the scapegoat, the Jews would be the ones who take away the salvation of man, the Jews would bear this burden for centuries.

Why not? One cannot blame the Romans who were in power! By blaming the Jews for the death of their Messiah, the Christians will have martyred him in the eyes of his followers who were predominantly Jewish.

The Jews knew their Scriptures well and what sort of "Messiah" they were promised: a lineal descendant of David King of Israel, who should himself be King of Israel, and "Establish the Throne of David Forever" in their restored national land. Most special of all qualifications of promised Messiahship was, "He shall deliver us from the Assyrian, when he cometh into our land." ~Micah 5:5, 6.

"If the thing follow not, nor come to pass, that is the thing which Yahveh hath not spoken, but the prophet hath spoken it presumptuously." ~Deuteronomy 18:22.

The chief characteristic of prophecy, as of oracle, is the lack of precision of meaning, which gives it a ample latitude for interpretations and lends itself admirably to even maladroit manipulation by anyone who raises the cry, "Lo, here is Christ," or "There." But the "Prophecies of the Messiah," and the Gospel interpretations may now speak for themselves.

None of the "Fictitious Christs" meet any of the Old Testament "Prophetic" preparations, and yet Jesus is hailed by Christiandom as king for eternity. In beginning his campaign among the people, he sent forth his adjutants or disciples, and straightly commanded them: "Go not into the way of the Gentiles;... But go rather to the lost sheep of the house of Israel." ~Matthew 10:5-6.

So "He came unto his own, and his own received him not." ~John 1:11.

But when his own received him not, and repudiated both his claim of Messiah-ship and his claim to be the actual virgin-born Son of God, which, incidentally, was not a required attribute of the prophesied Messiah, "Lo, we turn to the Gentiles." ~Acts 13:46.

Paul, a learned man, being the chief persecutor of those who believed now becomes the chief propagandist of the new faith of dogma, formulated by by none other than himself. The Gentiles, in the time of Jesus, are the superstitious Pagans of Palestine, Asia Minor, and parts thereabouts who are saturated in beliefs in all the fables, legends, and myths of all the gods of the known heathen world. They know nothing of the Jewish Scriptures or of the promised Messiah, and they had no unwavering sense in religious matters, but, like Paul and his converts, "Believed all things and hoped all things."

A new God was to them just one more god amongst many to add to their collection. The Greeks even had an altar erected to this god, as a sort of insurance in case the others weren't real, "To the Unknown God." ~Acts 17:23.

The Gentiles did, however, already believe in virgin born gods and in resurrections from the dead, as many were followers of the myths of Attis, Adonis, Isis, and Tammuz, who were accepted articles of their Pagan faiths, thus they were fertile ground for a new faith with little or nothing new or strange regarding new beliefs and dogmas.

So to the Pagan Gentiles, the evil heathen propagandists turned, and strengthened their propaganda with marvelous tales of venerable "Prophecies" wonderfully fulfilled: "...And when the Gentiles heard this, they were glad, and glorified the word of Yahveh." ~Acts 13:48. cf. Isaiah 45:7, God creates evil.

Several centuries before Christ, the lamentations over Tammuz, which are followed by jubilation over his Resurrection, had already spread from the dying Empire of Babylon to Judea.

"If the Resurrection of Jesus cannot be believed except by assenting to the fantastic descriptions included in the Gospels, then Christianity is doomed. For that view of resurrection is not believable, and if that is all there is, then Christianity, which depends upon the truth, and authenticity of Jesus' resurrection, also is not believable. If that were the requirement of belief as a Christian, then I would sadly leave my house of faith. With me in that exodus from the Christian Church, however, would be every ranking New Testament scholar in the world--Catholic and Protestant alike: E. C. Hoskyns, C. H. Dodd, Rudolf Bultmann, Reginald Fuller, Joseph Fitzmyer, W. E. Albright, Raymond Brown, Paul Minear, R. H. Lightfoot, Herman Hendrickx, Edward Schillebeeckx, Hans Kung, Karl Rahner, Phyllis Trible, Jane Schaberg, D. H. Nineham, Maurice Goguel, and countless others." ~Bishop Spong, Bishop's Search for the Origins of Christianity.

The inspired formula of the new faith is Paul's own confession, "Believing all things, which are written in the prophets," and the Gentiles, ignorant and superstitious, will now believe anything that is presented to them as truth. ~Acts 24: 14.

The Truth? Ninety-nine point seven percent [99.7%] of Greek uncial New Testament manuscripts came after the time period when accusations of textual corruption were rampant. If we included the cursive manuscripts as well the percentage of 2nd century manuscripts, this percentage would become even smaller. Considering that only ten complete words of the New Testament are attested in manuscript form during the time of textual corruption, and not a single one is attested before that time.

If we were to assemble all the manuscripts from the 2nd and 3rd centuries, and just note those chapters, where even a part of a verse is attested, we would find that entire books are missing, including 1-2 Timothy, 1-2 Peter, 2-3 John and Jude, and of the twenty-eight chapters in the Gospel According to Matthew, there is no manuscript containing even a single verse of sixteen of these chapters before the end of the 3rd century. ~John Gee, Ph.D., The Corruption of Scripture in the 2nd Century.

And in, "Believing all things, hoping all things." ~2 Corinthians 13:7.

The new faith is to them "The substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." ~Hebrews 11:1, from, The Prophecies of Jesus Christ by Joseph Whelless.

In the rabbinical text known as "Tosefta Shebuot" 1:4, we have mention of two priests [Jesus and his brother James]. "Two priests who were brothers were running neck and neck up the ramp, and one of them got within four cubits of the altar before the other... Rabbi Tsedeq came and stood on the steps of the portico of the Temple mount and said, 'Hear me out, O Brothers of ours, House of Israel! Lo, it says, when a corpse is found, and your elders and judges go forth and measure. Now as it is to us-whether and whence, shall we measure? To the sanctuary? Or to the courtyard?' All the people groaned and wept after what he said." ~Compare this to Deuteronomy 21:1-9.

For having done nothing to stop the crucifixion, the Jewish community is believed to be just as culpable as the Sanhedren [Supreme National Tribunal in charge of life or death decisions] for the death of one of their priests.

Upon the death of Jesus it will be for Yacob ben Joseph, James, brother of Jesus, to carry on his teachings, but the "Spouter of Lies" will intercede becoming a ruthless adversary in pressing for his own interpretations. Members of the Old Jerusalem Church are dispersed by an edict from Roman Emperor Hadrian in AD 135, calling themselves Christian-Jews, their first leader is James, and later are to be called Ebionites.

"The Ebionites [the Poor Ones] maintained that Jesus was merely a man, a Prophet, a spokesman for God, as were the great Hebrew Prophets of the past. Although some of them accepted the Virgin Birth of Jesus, others are said to have taught that Jesus was the son of Joseph and Mary, that at his Baptism Christ descended upon him in the form of a dove, that he then proclaimed the unknown Father, but that Christ, who could not suffer, departed from him before his crucifixion and resurrection." ~Kenneth Scott Laroquette, Early Church History.

"Joseph had a large family to provide for. Beside Jesus there were four other boys; James, Joses, Jude and Simeon. There were also at least two girls [whose names are not mentioned]. Joseph had to work hard to feed and to clothe them all, as well as to pay his taxes both to the Romans and to his own people. His taxes had to be paid in money, but he was often paid in kind; in corn or wine or oil, for example. Mary did her own spinning and weaving to make clothes, as far as she could. People wore a cotton undergarment, tunics and cloaks and sandals on their feet. Men wore their headdress and women wore veils. Often Mary had to patch the children's torn clothes." ~Typical Jewish Childhood Of A Carpenter's Son, with 4 Brothers [and 2 sisters] by Norman Bull, M.A., Ph.D., Excerpted and Condensed from Jesus the Nazarene.

There are numerous religious sites, which contain Christian relics, so many claiming to have original artifacts, and manuscripts, that the Catholic Church does not like to discuss the issue, "Indeed, when in 160 Bishop Melito of Sardis went to Judea to discover what had become of the legendary Jerusalem Church, to his dismay he found not the descendants of the Apostles, but instead a small group of [...] Christians, who called themselves the Ebionites or 'Poor Men', [who] had their own Gospel of the Ebionites and also a 'Gospel of the Hebrews,' a 'Gospel of the Twelve Apostles,' and a 'Gospel of the Nazarenes.' All of these Gospels differed significantly from the Gospels of the New Testament." ~Lost Christianities by Bart Ehrman, 2003.

With the numerous changes made in Scripture, throughout history, the essence of Christianity has disappeared almost entirely, "In the development of Christianity itself, he [Schoeps] believes that they [the Ebionites] were in many respects closer to the teachings of Jesus than were the Gentiles. This is true particularly where the Ebionites differed from normative Judaism, as in rejecting animal sacrifice and in deleting certain passages from Scripture with the claim that they were interpolations." ~Howard Bream's review of H. J. Schoeps, Theologie und Geschichte des Judentums, 1949, in The Journal of Religion, 1952, p. 58.

"As presented by Paul, James is the Leader of the early Church par excellence. Terms like 'Bishop of the Jerusalem Church,' or 'Leader of the Jerusalem Community,' are of little actual moment at this point, because from the 40's to the 60's CE, when James held sway in Jerusalem, there really were no other centers of any importance.' There can be little doubt that 'The Poor' [referring to the Ebionites], was the name for James' Community in Jerusalem or that Community descended from it in the East in the next two-three centuries, the Ebionites." ~Eisenman, The New Testament Code, 1997, passim.

"Blessed are you 'Poor Ones,' for yours is the Kingdom of God." ~Isaiah 66:2.

"The vegetarianism of John the Baptist, and of Jesus, is an important issue too in the Ebionite interpretation of the Christian life." ~J. Verheyden, Epiphanius on the Ebionites, in The image of the Judaeo-Christians in ancient Jewish and Christian literature, eds Peter J. Tomson, Doris Lambers-Petry, ISBN 3-16-148094-5, pp. 188.

Jesus says, "Behold, I shall explain that ye shall know the all. Ye know of the corn, which groweth up into ripeness and is harvested, and then ground in the mill, and baked with fire into bread; of this is my body made, which ye see this night. And ye also know of the grapes, which grow on the vine unto ripeness, and are plucked and crushed in the wine-press and so yield the fruit of the vine of this fruit of the vine and of water is made my blood. For thine own eyes bear witness of me, that the Son of Man partaketh only of the fruits of the trees and the seeds of the herbs, as his food, and these are changed by the Spirit into my flesh and my blood. And of these alone and their like shall ye eat also, for whoso believe in me are my true disciples, for of these simple foods, in the Spirit, come life and health and every kind of healing unto man."

~The Essene Humane Gospel of Jesus, Translated From The Original Hebrew And Aramaic Texts, Typesetting by: Followers of the Essene Way [F.E.W.]

In the Dead Sea Scrolls discovered in 1947, the position that Jesus was a vegetarian Essene has now been become firm. Some of the scrolls contain ancient Essene traditional parables and phrases, which pre-date Jesus by a hundred years, yet they show, almost verbatim, the lines and verses now attributed to Jesus in the New Testament.

They deny the Divinity of Christ and the Virgin birth. Jesus is considered a great teacher [Rabbi], a mortal man. Saint Paul notes [in Galatians 4:4] that Jesus is born into a Jewish family, "Born of a woman, born under the Law," and that Jesus has a Davidic descent [not Virginal, see Romans 1:3], and that Jesus has several married brothers [I Corinthians 9:5], and a brother of Jesus [not a cousin] is named James. ~Galatians 1:19.

The Revelation of John makes it clear that early Christians did not look upon the phrase, "Born of a woman" as being indicative of human birth. John's End of Time makes it clear that the Christ is considered having been born in Heaven, to a pregnant, celestial female, "A great and wondrous sign appeared in Heaven: a woman clothed with the sun, with the moon under her feet and a crown of twelve stars on her head. She was pregnant and cried out in pain as she was about to give birth... She gave birth to a son, a male child, who will rule all the nations with an iron scepter. And her child was snatched up to God and to his throne. The woman fled into the desert to a place prepared for her by God, where she might be taken care of for 1,260 days.” ~Revelation 12.1-6.

“Seek not the Law in your Scriptures, for the Law is life, whereas the Scripture is dead. I tell you truly, Moses received not his Laws from God in writing, but through the living Word. The Law is living Word of living God to living prophets for living men. In everything that is life is the Law written. You find it in the grass, in the tree, in the river, in the mountain, in the birds of Heaven, in the fishes of the sea; but seek it chiefly in yourselves. For I tell you truly, all living things are nearer to God than the Scripture which is without life. God so mad life and all living things that they might by the everlasting word teach the Laws of the true God to man. God wrote not the Laws in the pages of books, but in your heart and in your spirit.”

Jesus is Jewish, yet Biblical writers will do all within their power to erase the Jewishness of Jesus. When Paul goes to Jerusalem to meet Cephas [Peter], he stays with Peter for 15 days, and states, “I did not meet any other of the Anointed's ambassadors except James, the actual brother of our Lord. What I am writing to you is the truth, I am not lying, so help me God.” ~Galatians 1: 19-20.

It must be undeniably an fearful career about, which even a careful historian can print without the possibility of a charge of slander or defamation such a summary passage as, “It is a fact that they did derive advantage thus and so persistently that the Greeks have some little foundation for saying, as they do, that the fabrication of documents is the characteristic industry of Rome. At these inventions Pope Gregory VII, as well as Pope Nicholas I, will himself be caught, and all the other Popes throughout the Middle Ages.”

~Guinebert, Triumph of Christianity, 248.

Paul is considered a traitor for declaring the supremacy of Christianity over Mosaic Law. Further research into the life of Jesus by way of his Jewish roots may be obtained by researching “The Book of Elxai.” In the reference to a man who is called the, “Egyptian,” in Acts 21:36, 22:7-10 it is believed to be none other than Jesus who is being referred to as a foreigner, due to his Egyptian religious teachings espoused by him to his Apostles.

His words speak strongly of Egyptian gods Isian and Osirian Mystery knowledge. The first Christian Pentecost, the Christian celebration on the seventh Sunday after Easter commemorating; the descent of the Holy Spirit upon the Apostles takes place, and we have the preaching of Saint Peter in Jerusalem, conversion of followers, baptism, and an alleged aggregation of some 3,000 persons to the first Christian community.

Saint Stephen, a deacon in the new Christian-Jewish faith, is stoned to death at Jerusalem, and is venerated as the first Christian martyr.

An early Biblical insertion is that of Jesus saving the adulterous woman, “Go to the Vatican Library today and look at the oldest manuscript that we have of the New Testament, which is known as the 'Codex Vaticanus,' and was probably one of the Bibles commissioned by [Emperor] Constantine. Another one to look at is in the British Library called codex 'Sinaiticus,' which was discovered in Mount Sinai at St. Catherine's Monastery. Look at those two texts, both from the 4th century, and try to find the famous story of Jesus rescuing the lady who is being stoned for adultery in John's Gospel Chapter 8. It is a very powerful story, but it is not contained in either of those manuscripts, which means that story was inserted into the text of the New Testament for the first time at least as late as the 4th century if not later. I can give you a hundred other examples.” ~Super Consciousness Magazine, Fall 2010, pg. 64. cf. Revelation 2:22-23.

“This Manuscript [Codex Vaticanus] is supposed, as we have seen, to have come from the same place as the 'Sinaitic Manuscript.' I have said that these two show connections with each other, and that they would suit very well as a pair of the fifty manuscripts written at Caesarea for Constantine the Great.” ~Dr. Gregory, Casper René, 1907, Canon and text of the New Testament, New York: Charles Scribner's Sons, 1907, p. 345.

Codex Vaticanus omits numerous portions of Scripture essential to understanding Christian doctrine. Vaticanus egregiously omits Genesis 1:1 through Genesis 46:28; Psalm 22; Psalms 106 through 138; Matthew 16:2, 3; Romans 16:24; the Pauline Pastoral Epistles; Revelation; and everything in Hebrews after 9:14.24

The Codex Vaticanus, which was referred to is written on 759 leaves of vellum in uncial letters. It has been dated palaeographically to the 4th century C.E., which means that it was not written by any of the alleged apostles [including Paul of Tarsus] or by any of the early church/Christian community figures.

Constantinople. It is quite possible that Aleph [Sinai] and B [Vatican] are two of these fifty.” ~Robertson, Archibald Thomas, 1925, An introduction to the textual criticism of the New Testament, London, Hodder & Stoughton, Limited

The fifty Bible copies of Constantine's were all uniform as to accepted deviation in color, type and adornment was strictly controlled, thereby exercising a great influence on future biblical copies, at least within the bounds of the patriarchate of New Rome, Constantinople. Most of the altered Bibles contain ancient mythology, and are the oldest known fragments of the New Testament from the Gospel of John, and date from the late 2nd century C.E. Some Council of Nicaea [The Great and Holy Synod] records survived, which provide us with an alarming implication for the Christian Church. Some old documents say that the First Council of Nicaea ended in mid-November 326, while others say the struggle to establish a God was so fierce that it extended “For four years and seven months” from its beginning in June 325 C.E. ~Secrets of the Christian Fathers, op. Cit.

Ironically, the Second Council of Nicaea in 786-87 C.E., denounced the First Council of Nicaea as, “A synod of fools and madmen,” and sought to annul “Decisions passed by men with troubled brains.” ~H. H. Milman, DD, History of the Christian Church, 1871.

Contrary to what many Christian authors write say, Constantine then ordered that all the earlier presbyterial manuscripts and the records of his Council be “Burned” and declared that, “Any man found concealing writings should be stricken off from his shoulders,” that is, beheaded. As the record shows, presbyterial writings previous to the Council of Nicaea [in 325 C.E.] no longer exist, except for a ver few fragments that have survived. ~Eusebius, Life of Constantine.

How accurate are the early translations? “Age alone cannot prove that a manuscript is correct. B and Aleph probably owe their preservation to the fact that they were written on vellum, whereas most other documents of that period were written on papyrus. Many students, including Tischendorf and Hort, have thought them to be two of the fifty copies, which Eusebius had prepared under the order of Constantine for use in the Churches of Constantinople. They are no doubt beautiful manuscripts, but their texts show scribal carelessness. B exhibits numerous places where the scribe has written the same word or phrases twice in succession. Aleph shows the marks of ten different correctors down through the centuries. Burgon's excoriation of Wescott and Hort's method cannot be considered too strong in the light of the facts concerning the character of these two manuscripts.” ~Dr. David Fuller.

It is this same Bishop Eusebius in his Life of Constantine, around 323 C.E., who presents Emperor Constantine with fifty magnificently scribed copies of his ‘Approved Gospels.’ [Gospels now corrected/altered/rewritten to Orthodox Church standards]. These beautiful books, which were magnificently illustrated, were the “New Testimonies,” and this is the first mention 331 C.E.] of the Christian's New Testament in the historical record, which, at that time, were called, “Word of the Roman Savior God.”

“These orders,” says Bishop Eusebius, “Were followed by the immediate execution of the work itself... We sent him [Emperor Constantine] magnificently and elaborately bound volumes of three-fold and four-fold forms.” ~Eusebius, Life of Constantine, vol. iv, p. 36.

“It happens, through the favoring providence of God our Savior, that great numbers have united themselves to the most Holy Church in the city, which is called by my name. It seems, therefore, highly requisite, since that city is rapidly advancing in prosperity in all other respects, that the number of Churches should also be increased. Do you, therefore, receive with all readiness my determination on this behalf. I have thought it expedient to instruct your Prudence to order fifty copies of the Sacred Scriptures (the provision and use of which you know to be most needful for the instruction of the Church) to be written on prepared parchment in a legible manner, and in a commodious and portable form, by transcribers thoroughly practiced in their art. The procurator of the Diocese has also received instructions by letter from our Clemency to be careful to furnish all things necessary for the preparation of such copies; and it will be for you to take special care that they be completed with as little delay as possible. You have authority also, in virtue of this letter, to use two of the public carriages for their conveyance, by which arrangement the copies when fairly written will most easily be forwarded for my personal inspection; and one of the deacons of your Church may be intrusted with this service, who, on his arrival here, shall experience my liberality. God preserve you, beloved brother!” ~From a Letter of Constantine to Eusebius, in Eusebius Life of Constantine, Book IV, chap. 36.

The first three Gospels in the current canon of the New Testament that are published by Watch Tower, Gideon, and other groups including mainstream presses of the Bible all begin with the narrative of a miraculous birth, of an alleged Jesus, who was of a supernatural birth, conceived by a young girl [virgin] Mary, which draws from the ancient Egyptian account of their God, Isis, who was artificially inseminated with the sperm of her brother/husband Osiris after he had been killed by his brother Set, who is later Resurrected and sits on the back of his mother to rule over the dead, in the Underworld, at a Last Judgment. The traditional three Gospels then record concisely the parallel the flight to Egypt; all resembling the Old Testament move of the family of Joseph to Egypt, as well as symbolic of the return of the Israeli from Egypt], and one look at the early childhood of the boy Jesus who was found lecturing the teachers in the Temple.

Only after this parallel do the Gospels drop their biographical accounts until Jesus begins his Ministry, and which are omitted in the Gospel According to John. The Egyptian God, Nut, is often pictured as a cow [Yeh] and from the union of sky [Heaven] and earth [the God Geb] becomes Yahweh.

Furthermore, its text differs from the corrupted Catholic Latin Vulgate and the Textus Receptus [which actually follows a 16th century Byzantine tract] and is considered more reliable by some scholars. ~See: S.P. Tregelles, An Introduction to the Critical study and Knowledge of the Holy Scriptures, London 1856, p. 108.

The Protestants, led by Martin Luther, will make a united assault upon the original documents to "Purify" them of any "Pagan influences," whereas there were no Pagan influences, but the actual documents as determined by the warrior Bishops meeting at Nicaea on orders of the Emperor Constantine to form a new state church, much in the manner of Luther who called the Germans to create their own brand of Christianity, a call originally denounced by King Henry VIII of England [thereby winning the King of England, the papal designation of "Defender of the Faith." ~Fidei Defensor. Invention of the Bible and Christianity by Fred Edwards.

Did Jesus truly live and die without any written correspondence whatsoever? The Church does not make public, or hasn't so far, the fact that somewhere in the dusty archives of the Vatican are Jesus' letters; letters allegedly written by Jesus in his own hand. "He who has an ear let him hear what the Spirit says to the churches. To him who conquers I will grant to eat of the Tree of Life, which is in the paradise of God." ~Jesus, To Ephesus [meaning ardent desire], 2:1-7.

AD34-Saint Paul, formerly Saul, a persecutor of Christians, is converted and baptized, and after three years of solitude in the desert, Paul joins the College of the Apostles. Paul makes three major missionary journeys and becomes known as the Apostle to the Gentiles. Paul is imprisoned twice in Rome for inciting the Jews, and is beheaded there between 64 and 67 C.E.

AD35-Paul is sanctified and water baptized from Heaven. ~Elijah 2.

AD36(?)- Yeshua [Jesus] is crucified, Friday, Nisan 14th, March 30th. ~Ref: John, Unauthorized Version/Fox.

The Last Supper would have been Thursday evening. [Church Tradition] 7 April 30 & 3 April 33, and possible Friday, 14/Nisan, the crucifixion date. The Last Supper is similar to existing Pagan tradition. A medieval Persian text, published by Franz Cumont relates the words of Jesus Christ with the sayings of Zarathustra, the great Zoroastrian prophet who lived a thousand years before Christ. First Zarathustra: "He who will not eat of my body and drink of my blood, so that he will be made one with me and I with him, the same shall not know Salvation." ~Vermaseren, M. Op. cit.

The equivalent in the Christian Last Supper tradition is: "This [bread] is My body, which is given for you.... This cup is the New Testament in My blood, which is shed for you." ~Saint Luke, 22:19-20.

Tertullian, an early Christian father, calls the Mithraist Last Supper meal "A devilish imitation of the Eucharist." He adds that the Mithraic initiates also enacted the Resurrection of their Pagan God to mock the Christians [who are non-existent two-hundred years before Christ]. "We have not a single witness to the Resurrection. None of the women or men who are supposed to have gone to the tomb and seen Jesus has left us any testimony. A late [Christian] writer forged a Gospel in the name of John. A still later writer forged in the name of Peter a Gospel with such fantastic details about the Resurrection that even the early Christians, whose faith was great, rejected it. And evidently this story of an apparition to five hundred, which circulated early, was in the course of time considered too strong, and was abandoned." ~The Myth of the Resurrection by Dr. Joseph McCabe, 1925.

The offended Tertullian attempts to piece together the fragments of this Pagan ritual: "At sunrise the priests would announce 'The God is born,' then would come rejoicing, followed by a meal representing the Last Supper, which Mithras ate with his Disciples before his ascension into Heaven." ~R. J Condon, Our Pagan

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

AD 36(?)-65? Period of oral tradition in Christianity between the time of Yeshua and the time the first Gospel of Mark is written; original Christians disperse throughout Judea and Samaria. ~Acts 8:1.

AD 36?-67- Period Kefa [Peter, Saul Pol, Shaul], travels to Rome. 36(?) -37, Paul of Tarsus has Stephen martyred and the Jerusalem Church [Church of James] destroyed.

“... The blunt conclusion emerges that the Gospel writers did not know the geography and customs of the Holy Land, and did not know Judaism itself. Meaning that they were not using historical traditions but were working with, and adapting, source materials having nothing to do with historical data of any kind. If the writers were ignorant of major elements in geography, custom and religion, how can they give direct verbatim reports of what Jesus said, and if they are wrong in so much why should we believe any part of their narrative?” ~Source unknown.

AD 37 (?) -The conversion of Paul of Tarsus, (?) -62(?) to Christianity. Paul is a Roman citizen, and as such enjoys certain freedoms. Paul is possibly a tentmaker.

Simon of Samaria, Simon the Zealot, Simon Cananaio, Lazarus, and also known as Simon the leper, a magician who performs tricks and adopts the identities of others, actually believes that ‘He,’ Simon, is the incarnation of God.

The curing of a leper has been curtailed in the Book of Matthew to fit into the story of the centurion’s servant, and because it says the Jews will never enter the Kingdom [Matthew 8:12], which could not have been Matthew’s original intent in writing the Gospel, we must conclude that an anti-Jewish Gentile editor has transferred the story from Luke into Matthew.

Jesus’ father, Joseph, was also a Zealot [Aramaic: Canaim], and was killed by the Romans, quite likely by crucifixion, in the year 23 C.E. This information becomes very important when we reconstruct Jesus’ real history using ancient information from India found in the book Kings of Kashmira. ” ~The Kingdom of God in the Wilderness by Norman Bull, M.A., Ph.D.

“And he hath on his vesture and on his thigh [sexual prowess] a name written, King of Kings, and Lord of Lords [another name credited to Jesus as Pravarasena I].” ~Kings of Kashmira, pg 38.

He gets into a dispute with Peter who confronts him on this matter and his attempt to buy the right to the Holy Spirit. Simon has a mistress, Helena, whom he found in a brothel in Tyre, and whom Simon states is the incarnation of the “Thought of God.” Helena is presented as a priestess/goddess by Simon perhaps to match the powers of Mary Magdalene and her beloved Jesus.

He [Peter] questioned them [the other apostles] about the Savior, “Did He really speak privately with a woman and not openly to us? Are we to turn about and all listen to her? Did He prefer her to us?” ~Peter, Gospel of Mary Magdalen.

Simon is also known as the first Anti-Pope.

The cross, the official monogram of the Egyptian “Savior” Osiris, and of Jupiter Ammon; consisted of the letters ‘X’ and ‘P,’ which in old Samaritan, as found on coins, stood for 400 and 200. It was also found on the coins of the Ptolemies and Herod the Great, forty years before this era.

The insignia on the walls of the Temple of Bacchus in Rome was a Roman cross and IHS, the three letters retained in Christian Churches, and falsely assumed to stand for “Jesus Hominum Salvator.” It is a Pagan sign for the heathen sun god Bacchus; for Bacchus in Hebrew was “Yahoshua,” or “Joshua,” which in Phoenician is Ies, and in Greek Iesous, pronounced *Yeasoo*s, from which, the name Jesus is derived, the monogram representing a Phallic vigor.

There is a medallion at Rome of Constantius, Constantine’s predecessor, with this inscription on it: “In Hoc Signo Victor Eris,” which shows that Emperor Constantine borrowed the idea allegedly conceived by him in his dream.

“On 28 October 312 C.E., the Christians suddenly and unexpectedly found themselves victorious. The victory was a miracle though opinions differed as to the nature of the sign vouchsafed to Constantine [In Hoc Vincas]. The winners became conscious of their victory in a mood of resentment and vengeance. A voice shrill with implacable hatred announced to the world the victory of the Milvian Bridge” “... And then, in the same article, a few paragraphs later... “The revolution of the 4th century, carrying with it a new historiography will not be understood if we underrate the determination, almost the fierceness, with which the Christians appreciated and exploited the miracle that had transformed Constantine into a supporter, a protector, and later a legislator of the Christian Church.” ~Amaldo Momigliano, 1959.

The triangle, trefoil, and tripod were all Pagan symbols of the various Trinitities. Roman Emperor [Constantine] insisted that the Trinitarian wording be inserted into the Latin Vulgate Bible, as it was being written [by Saint Jerome], and which explains how fraudulent texts have crept into virtually every modern English version of the Bible, and has even eluded being discovered by organizations that don't believe that God is a Trinity. ~A Collection of the Evidence For and Against the Traditional Wording of the Baptismal Phrase in Matthew 28:19 by A. Ploughman. Likely a pseudo name. He was a minister who lived in Birmingham, England. cf. 1 John 5:7, revelation 22:18-19, Matthew 22:18. In all of the earlier of Versions of Matthew don't contain the verse at all regarding the Trinity, "In the only codices, which would be even likely to preserve an older reading, namely the Sinaitic Syriac and the oldest Latin Manuscript, the pages are gone, which contained the end of Matthew." ~F.C. Conybeare. cf. Matthew 28:19. None of the Scriptures from Genesis thru Malachi make reference to any Trinitarian God, and from Mark thru Revelation, we don't find any evidence for a belief in any Trinity. Only in Matthew do we find a relatively old "Proof text" in support of a Trinity. "For there are three that bear witness in Heaven: the Father, the Word, and the Holy Spirit; and these three are one. And there are three that bear witness on earth: the Spirit, the Water, and the Blood; and these three agree as one." ~1 John 5:7-8, KJV [modified in the 16th century]. See The Textual Problem in 1 John 5:7-8 by Daniel B. Wallace PhD.

So, what we now have is a distinct situation in which pages from Holy Scripture may have been torn out, and words inserted to confirm the prevailing [contemporary] beliefs of the Church Fathers, to spread their "Works," "In the course of my reading I have been able to substantiate these doubts of the authenticity of the text of Matthew 28:19 by adducing patristic [L. pater: "Father"] evidence against it, so weighty that in the future the most conservative of Divines will shrink from resting on it any dogmatic fabric at all, while the more enlightened will discard it as completely as they have its fellow-text of the 'Three Witnesses.'" ~F. C. Conybeare in the Hibbert Journal.

"We look in vain for any contemporary notice of the Gospels, or Christ the subject of the Gospels, outside of the New Testament. So little was this 'King of the Jews' known, that the Romans were compelled to pay one of his apostles to turn traitor and act as guide before they could find him. It is impossible to observe this negative testimony of all history against Christ and his miracles, and not be struck with amazement, and seized with the conviction that he was not a God, and not a very extraordinary man." ~All History Ignores Him by Kersey Graves, 1875.

Corrupted Scriptural texts, which the Christian ministry proclaims as being the Truth? "In all extant versions the text is found in the traditional [Trinitarian] form, though it must be remembered that the best manuscripts, both of the African Old Latin and of the Old Syriac [Aramaic] Versions are defective at this point." ~Encyclopedia of Religion and Ethics.

The triangle is conspicuous as a sacred emblem in Hindu and Buddhist temples, sometimes with the mystical letters 'AUM' written on it, one letter at each angle = Brahma, Vishnu, and Siva, the Hindu Trinity. It is also seen on the obelisks and pyramids of Egypt. The trefoil adorned the head of Osiris, and also used among the ancient Druids of the British Isles.

In a theological debate involving Resurrection, Resuscitation, and Revivication, "Dr. Geisler made the statement that the Pagan Saviors were not like Jesus because they did not experience bodily Resurrection. But I want to assure you, my friends, that that is not so. O-s-i-r-i-s, write it down, O-s-i-r-i-s, he was an ancient Egyptian, Virgin-Born, Savior-God who died, and he was Resurrected. You research and you'll find that his [wife] searched for his body that had been torn to pieces, put it back together, sort of like in Frankenstein manner, and he was Resurrected bodily back to life. That's just one example that I could give you... He [Geisler] is depending upon your ignorance, people. And I'm not trying to be insulting to you. Your preachers do it all the time. You get the wool pulled over your eyes, and it's your own fault, because you don't know the Bible, first of all, and you certainly know very little about the history of religion. If you would go examine the evidence, you would see that many of the things that he is telling you have no basis in fact." ~The Geisler-Till Debate, 1994, Did Jesus of Nazareth Bodily Rise from the Dead? Featuring Norman L. Geisler and Farrell Till.

AD 37-101-Josephus, born Yosef ben Mattashyahu ben Gurion, Jewish historian, reveals a book that is attributed to King Solomon, which contains spells and charms to summon the spirits. It discloses how an angel is sent from God to bring Solomon a magic ring that would give him power over the demonic world [Denizens of Hell]

Such matters are also mentioned in later manuscripts in AD 1456 [Sigillum Salomonis, The Grimorium Verum, Clavicola di Salomone Ridolta & Clavicula Salomonis] Josephus' documentations in "Capture of Jerusalem” provides information taken directly from Pontius Pilate’s officials.

The face of Jesus(?) A warrant of arrest is issued to a man who states he is King of the Jews and the informant is Judas. Unfortunately, the original texts were systematically sought and destroyed, but a Slavonic text survives and we have a description of this hunted fugitive, “... Dark skin, small stature [three cubits high, one cubit = 18 inches, therefore this fugitive is 54 inches tall, or approximately 4 feet 5 inches tall], ...slightly hunchbacked with a long face, long nose and meeting eyebrows...Scanty hair with a parting in the middle of his head, after the manner of the Nazarites, the Nazarites being a religious sect, and not from the town of Nazareth, as many early scribes could not read, and merely copied documents set before them, this caused many errors attributed to earlier versions of the Scriptural translations, and with an undeveloped beard.”

Printers' Bible, 18th century edition, “Printers have persecuted me without a cause,” instead of “Princes.”

Many Scriptural errors can be attributed to the early Christian monks who could hardly read or write much less transcribe from Hebrew, a language they knew little of. Flavius Josephus is witness to the books used by the Jews in the 1st century, and Josephus says that the Jews have exactly 22 sacred texts, but the present Bible has 39 books of the Old Testament, and it is likely that certain books were folded together in the same scrolls [e.g., the Twelve Prophets], but consistent Jewish tradition after the second century, which would make 24 books, not 22. ~James A. Sanders, Canon: Hebrew Bible, Anchor Bible Dictionary, p. 840.

The only exceptions are a few Midrashim in which the rabbis count 35 books by unrolling The Twelve. It is interesting to note that the Essene high priesthood did not accept members who were physically disfigured. Is the report from Josephus a forgery? We do know that Jesus was of small stature. John the Baptist, “The Ginza,” lived in a cave out in the wilderness, was unkempt, and did not wear normal clothing, but that of the skins of beast and was a figure to behold, appearing as a wild man with his beard and unkempt manner.

From the ancient Gnostic writings, we find that his sect was known as “The Mandaean,” or “Sabian.” [The Dead Sea Scrolls are an Evolutionary depiction of man written mainly by the Essene Sect-Joseph, father of Jesus being of the Essene group who were known for their stern interpretations of scripture] It appears that Jesus may also have been of a similar scruffy appearance.

The mention of being hunchbacked [records of Flavius Josephus] is noteworthy in that in the Essene cult those with deformities were not accepted into the higher priestly classes as were the uncircumcised, married men, women, and those with other visible deformities.

The significant issue of forged documents to mislead, confuse, and lead astray those members of the new religious sect are rampant in the early centuries due to perceived threats of violence, misinformation as to their intent, and an unwillingness to accept another religion which denies the existence and regency of the Roman gods.

AD 38-Justus of Tiberias, born five years after the time assigned for the crucifixion of Jesus, writes a Jewish History, but it contains no mention of the coming return of Jesus, nor of the events concerning him, nor of the prodigies he is supposed to have wrought.

Anti-Semitism: Jewish philosopher, Philo of Alexandria, describes an attack on Jews in Alexandria in 38 C.E. in Flaccus, in which thousands of Jews died.

“Our increased knowledge of nature has gradually undermined the belief in the probability of miracles, and the time is not far distant when, in the mind of every man of any culture, all accounts of miracles will be banished altogether to their proper region, that of legend.” ~Dr. Oort.

AD 38-100-Flavius Josephus uses the books of the Maccabees with his own embellishments in his own historical presentation, “The Antiquities of the Jews,” and “The Jewish War.” In his Antiquities of the Jews, Flavius Josephus follows very closely the subject matter and order of narration of the early Old Testament, books, beginning with the Creation, giving full substance of these histories, and adding his own quaint comments and historical expansions, and embellishments unknown to or unrecorded by Moses. In Eden, not only the Talking Snake could speak, but all the now dumb animals are embellished with, “All living creatures had one language, at that time.” ~Forgery In Christianity: Hebrew Holy Forgeries by Joseph Wheless, as quoted in I. i. 4.

Christians are told to ignore the lies, "In this, I think, they do grievous wrong to the Disciples of Christ, by quoting their authority for the discordant and contradictory statements in these writings, saying that it was according to them that they wrote the Gospels, which are so full of errors and discrepancies, both in facts and in opinions, that they can be harmonized neither with themselves nor with one another. This is nothing else than to slander good men, and to bring the charge of dissension on the brotherhood of the Disciples. In reading the Gospels, the clear intention of our heart perceives the errors, and, to avoid all injustice, we accept whatever is useful, in the way of building up our faith, and promoting the Glory of the Lord Christ, and of the Almighty God, His Father, while we reject the rest as unbecoming the Majesty of God and Christ, and inconsistent with our belief." ~Faustus, 400 CE., Contra Faustus Manicheum.

Early recorded documentation of the rites, customs, and rituals pertaining to Jewish culture is gleaned from the many writings of Josephus, the Jews comprising only 10% of the Roman Empire by the end of the 1st century.

AD39- Cornelius, the Gentile, and his family are baptized by Saint Peter, which is considered a significant event signaling the mission of the Christian Church to all people.

September 4th, birth of the future Roman Emperor, Titus. He was not a tyrannical Tiberius or Caligula or Nero, or even a Claudius. But he does complete the famous Coliseum, the site of a quantity of the bloodiest activities yet to come in Roman history.

AD40(?)- Paul of Tarsus travels to Jerusalem to meet with the Apostles, Peter and James. Saul [Paul] of Tarsus, while on the road to Damascus, experiences a profound conversion to Christianity, and becomes known as Saint Paul. ~Galatians 1:18-20.

Citing Paul as Christianity's founder goes back to the 19th century, the Tübingen School, the Catholic Encyclopedia states, under the title: St. Paul: Theology of St. Paul: "According to them Paul was the creator of theology, the founder of the Church, the preacher of asceticism, the defender of the Sacraments and of the ecclesiastical System, the opponent of the religion of love and liberty, which Christ came to announce to the world."

AD41-January 21st, the infamous and perverted Roman Emperor Caligula is killed [assassinated] by one of his guards who had been frequently forced to kiss his royal middle finger in public, and other possessions in private.

AD45- Paul of Tarsus, Apostle to the gentiles, earliest alleged New Testament author 45~65 C.E.

AD46-120- Plutarch, a Greek prose writer, is born and lived most of his life at Chaeronea near Thebes, visited Asia, Egypt and Italy and had influential friends who lived in Rome; Plutarch wrote over 200 books; wrote 50 biographies, 23 comprise pairs of 'Parallel lives' [a Greek compared to a Roman citizen], which contain a large amount of historical information and considered a prime source for knowledge of the ancient world in the medieval and early modern periods, but no mention of Jesus in any of his writings.

It is argued by some Christian groups that Paul is the real founder of the Church of Jesus. ~A.N. Wilson, Paul: The Mind of the Apostle, 1997.

AD42-Persecution of Christians [The Romans consider them the same as Jews who wish to overthrow the Empire] in Palestine breaks out during the rule of Herod Agrippa. Saint James the Greater, the brother of Jesus, is the first Apostle to die, being beheaded in 44 C.E.

Saint Peter is imprisoned for a time, and Christians flee to Antioch, marking the beginning of the dispersion of Christians beyond the confines of Palestine. At Antioch, the followers of Christ are now called Christians for the first time.

AD44-The splinter group of Jews are known as Christian-Jews, because they are in effect un-circumcised Jews. ~Acts 15:1.

Eventually they will come to be known as Christians and hold a precarious position in the eyes of the Romans due to their Jewish lineage. Yaakov [James], brother of Yochanon [John], is executed by the sword of Herod Agrippa I. ~Acts 12: 1-3.

Theudas declares himself to be the long awaited Messiah, taking 400 people with him into the desert. Theudas is beheaded by Roman soldiers, which is recorded by Josephus.

"They appealed to the worst obsessions of the human heart, sowing the seeds of discord and hatred in every land along the way. Brother denounced brother, wives informed against their husbands, mothers accused their children, dungeons were crowded with the innocent; the flesh of the good and true rotted in the clasp of chains; the flames devoured the heroic, and in the name of the most merciful God, his children were exterminated with famine, sword, and fire. Over the wild waves of battle rose and fell the banner of Jesus Christ. For sixteen hundred years the robes of the Church were red with innocent blood. The ingenuity of Christians was exhausted in devising punishment severe enough to be inflicted upon other Christians who honestly and sincerely differed with them upon any point whatever.” ~Heretics And Heresies, 1874, by Robert Green Ingersoll.

AD 47-48-Paul of Tarsus visits Cyprus with Barnabas.

AD 48-An incident occurs at Antioch where Paul publicly condemns Peter. AD 48-57? [Shaul, Pol, Saul] Paul writes Galatians.

AD 49- Roman Christians are still considered members of a Jewish sect, and are adversely affected by a decree of Claudius, which forbids Jewish worship in Rome. The Church convenes a council in Jerusalem in which the participants adopt the missionary principle of Saint Paul [not Peter], which stresses the Universal scope of Salvation.

From its inception, Christianity will preach hatred and intolerance of the Jews, “Much of Christian hatred toward the Jews was based on the popular misconception... That the Jews had been the active persecutors of Christians for many centuries... The... Examination of the sources for 4th century Jewish history will show that the universal, tenacious, and malicious Jewish hatred of Christianity referred to by the Church Fathers and countless others has no existence in historical fact. The generalizations of patristic writers in support of the accusation have been wrongly interpreted from the 4th century to the present day. That individual Jews hated and reviled the Christians there can be no doubt, but there is no evidence that the Jews, as a class, hated and persecuted the Christians as a class during the early years of the 4th century.”

~James Everett Seaver, The Persecution of the Jews in the Roman Empire, pgs. 300-428, University of Kansas Publications, 1952. Humanistic Studies, No. 30. cf. Psalms 18:7-11.

AD 49-50-[Shaul] Paul is in Corinth. ~Acts 18.

Extra-Biblical sources also indicate that before 49 C.E. the Messianic believers [as well as believing Gentiles] are still seen as an extension of Judaism. ~F. F. Bruce, The Spreading Flame, 1958, p. 140.

“In the imperial city Christians are distinguished from Jews by A.D. 64, but not as early as A.D. 49. The State’s recognition of their separate status occurred somewhere between these two dates according to the Roman sources.” ~Leonard Goppelt, Les Origines de l’Église, 1961, p. 42.

AD 50-Before all the books of the Bible are written, there is talk that Christ’s return has already taken place. The Thessalonians panic on Paul when they heard a rumor that the Day of the Lord is at hand, and they have missed The Rapture.

Akiba ben Joseph lays the basis of the Mishnah by introducing the systematization of Jewish oral law. He also refined a method of scriptural explanation that is an attribute of Talmudic literature. He taught, “Love for one’s fellow humans is the central commandment, that people have free will, and that God’s attitude toward the world is one of justice and mercy.”

The early Gnostics competing against the Catholic Church are: Simon Magus of Samaria, Simonianism; Nicolaus of Antioch, Nicolaitans; Menander disciple of Simon Magus, Basilides of Alexandria, Satominius of Antioch, and disciples of Menander.

AD 50(?)- The Peshitta translation begins, Hebrew Old Testament-Syriac Aramaic, the Greek New Testament will begin in 400 C.E.

Ascension of Isaiah, original written in Hebrew [Ethiopic Bible].

AD 51- The Council of Jerusalem convenes in which all the apostles participate under the presidency of Saint Peter, decree that circumcision, dietary regulations, and various other prescriptions of Mosaic Law are not obligatory for Gentile converts to the Christian community in order to facilitate converts.

The crucial decree is issued in opposition to Judaizers who contend that observance of the Mosaic Law in its entirety [circumcision] is absolutely necessary for salvation.

AD 51-52- [Shaul] Paul is said to have written 1 Thessalonians.

“At this time another writer, Judas, discoursing about the seventy weeks in Daniel, brings down the chronology to the tenth year of the reign of Severus. He thought that the coming of Anti-Christ, which was much talked about, was then near. So greatly did the agitation caused by the persecution of our people at this time disturb the minds of many.” ~Prolegomena: The Life and Writings of Eusebius of Caesarea: Testimonies of the Ancients Against Eusebius.

AD52-Diviners and Astrologers are expelled from Italy by Emperor Claudius. Claudius, however, retains his own personal Astrologer [Court Astrologer Balbillus] in spite of this law and the same Balbillus is later Astrologer to Emperor Nero.

On Nero's burning of Rome, which he blamed on the Christians, Tacitus tells us, "... Neither human resources, nor imperial generosity, nor appeasement of the gods, eliminated the sinister suspicion that the fire had been deliberately started. To stop the rumor, Nero, made scapegoats, and punished with every refinement the notoriously depraved Christians [as they were popularly called]. Their originator, Christ, had been executed in Tiberius' reign by the Procurator of Judaea, Pontius Pilatus [governor from 26 to 36 C.E.]. But in spite of this temporary setback, the deadly superstition had broken out again, not just in Judaea [where the mischief had started] but even in Rome. All degraded and shameful practices collect and flourish in the capital. First, Nero had the self-admitted Christians arrested. Then, on their information, large numbers of others were condemned, not so much for starting fires as because of their hatred for the human race. Their deaths were made amusing. Dressed in wild animals' skins, they were torn to pieces by dogs, or crucified, or made into torches to be set on fire after dark as illumination... Despite their guilt as Christians, and the ruthless punishment it deserved, the victims were pitied. For it was felt that they were being sacrificed to one man's brutality rather than to the national interest." ~Tacitus, The Annals of Imperial Rome, Book XV, chapter 47, 64 C.E. Note: The people put to death by Nero were not "Christianos," but, "Chrestianos." Chrestes being usurers. Therefore, "Claudius banished from Rome the Jews, who were practicing usury and by that continually created unrest." See Acts 18:2.

C. Arrius Antoninus, the Roman Governor of Asia, executed a few Christians, but the rest demanded it as well, which so exasperated the governor that he responded, "You wretches, if you want to die, you have cliffs to leap from and ropes to hang by." ~Quoted by Bowersock, G. W., 1995, Martyrdom and Rome, Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, p. 1.

The first known Religious Convention, known as the Jerusalem Council, is called, at which point in history, the Christians are still considered Uncircumcised Jews or Christian-Jews. The Council sets about to eradicate this reference and any association with the Jewish Faith. Yehoshua ben Joseph exists no longer, for he is now the man, Jesus the Christ, the Savior of the New Christian World.

It must be remembered that all churches persecuted heretics to the fullest extent of their power as toleration does the beliefs of others only increases when the power of that church has diminished. The Catholic Church is no different, as history will tell. "And remember, where you have a concentration of power in a few hands, all too frequently men with the mentality of gangsters get control. History has proven that. All power corrupts; absolute power corrupts absolutely." ~Lord Acton, 1900.

There exists the same intolerance of other people of other faiths, creeds, and beliefs, and the same undying hatred of all who think for themselves, as well as the same determination to devastate, once and for all, the human knowledge inconsistent with their respective creed, for every church portends that it has received a revelation from God, and this revelation must be given to the people through the church; that the church acts through its priests, and that ordinary mortals must be content with their revelation, not from God, but from the church, through their self-appointed appointed ruling body.

Tradition has it that in the state of Kerala, India, that the Apostle Thomas converted Hindus to Christianity. "It was to a land of dark people he was sent, to clothe them by Baptism in white robes. His grateful dawn dispelled India's painful darkness. It was his mission to espouse India to the 'One-Begotten.' The merchant is blessed for having so great a treasure. Edessa thus became the blessed city by possessing the greatest pearl India could yield. Thomas works miracles in India, and at Edessa, Thomas is destined to baptize peoples perverse and steeped in darkness, and that in the land of India." ~Hymns edited by Lamy, Ephr: Hymni et Semones, IV.

AD53- Birth of Marcus Ulpius Trajanus, who becomes the Roman Emperor Trajan, the first non-Italian Roman Emperor. His accomplishments are many; in battle, and in the construction of public works. Most ancient sources discuss Trajan's homosexuality candidly, differing only in the stories used to illustrate his depraved sexual preferences.

End of the World: Perhaps the first incursion of Christianity into predicting Doom's Day. Prior to all the Books of the Bible being written, there is talk that Christ's return had already taken place. And the Thessalonians panic with reference to Paul. The Thessalonians hear a rumor that the day of the Lord is at hand, fearing they might miss the blessed Rapture. Many Christians believed that the End of the World, and the return of Jesus Christ, the Messiah, would happen within their lifetime, which is why the Apostles preached of no time for sex, one must devote their life to preparation for the next life. Before all of the books of the Bible were written, there was talk that Christ's return had already taken place. End of the World: The Thessalonians panicked before Paul, when they heard a rumor that the day of the Lord was at hand, and they had missed the rapture.

AD55(?)-135? Roman Procurator M. Antonius Felix massacres the "Egyptian Prophet" along with 30,000 unarmed Jews doing Exodus reenactment.

Epictetus, famous Greek moralist. A Phrygian slave who became one of the most notable of the many moralists of the Greek Roman world. Until 90 C.E., Epictetus taught philosophy at Rome. In that year the Roman Emperor Domitian, fearful of the dangers created by the teachings of the Stoics, exiled Epictetus and several other philosophers.

The "Encheiridion," Manual, and "Discourses" that we have were very probably transcribed by a pupil, as a form of shorthand was then well known. His teachings were ascetic and impracticable and in many respects very like the more ascetic counsels ascribed to Jesus, the golden rule, voluntary poverty, passive resistance, etc. He belongs to the small religious wing of the Stoic movement and his extravagances of virtue illustrate again the danger of introducing any mysticism into ethics.

The absurd suggestion that Epictetus borrowed from Christ is refuted by the dates. Epictetus held that human beings must, because of their own weaknesses, be tolerant of the faults of others. His primary contribution is to remind us that all the moral sentiment attributed to Jesus in the Gospels were already familiar in the first century.

AD55-Pershitta, an Eastern Aramaic [Syriac] translation of the Bible said to have been requested by King Izates II of Abiabene who converted to Judaism. Published in the Paris Polyglot Bible in AD 1645.

For a complete and comprehensive portrayal of the elements contributing to the Jewish Old Testament, one must look to the Ugarit Texts. Written in poetic format one will discover many similarities between the Bible of today and the Books of the ancient worlds.

Even in the Eastern Roman Empire, taxes are collected; chrysargyron, also called chrysargyrum or collatio lustralis, was an unpopular tax levied every four years, on people of all stations, rich and poor, slaves and freemen, and even a tax on animals and pets. The chrysargyron was originally paid in gold and silver every five years. By 370 C.E., the tax was only payable in gold.

AD 57-[Shaul] Paul's last visit to Jerusalem. ~Acts 21.

The first Gospel is written, that of The Acts of Saint Thomas [Acts of Thomas, aka the Gospel of Thomas], written in Greek and Coptic, with 114 sayings of Jesus, which the Church will disclaim for its not agreeing with church orthodoxy.

AD 58-[Shaul] Paul is arrested, imprisoned in Caesarea. ~Acts 25:4.

AD 59-First 32,000 remnant ascend into Heaven

AD 60-Papias [160 C.E.], Bishop of Hierapolis in Asia Minor, "He was a man of long ago and the disciple of one 'John' and a companion of Polycarp," according to Irenaeus [Caution: both are known to be great prevaricators when it comes to Christian history]. Papias was known to seriously expand on or upon the illusions and fantasies of The Apocalypse, which he did in his five volume work, "Expositions on the Sayings of the Lord." Since the Gospel [Apocalypse or Book of Revelation] originated at Ephesus, it seemed that John, Papias, the Gospel, and The Apocalypse were linked, and Papias' 5th book apparently confirms this. In later centuries references were made to it, where Papias boldly states that he had been John's scribe on the Gospel.

After rejecting the Jewish Torah and Hebraic roots, the non-Jewish believers will continue on to define themselves as "The Church," a body separate from and better than the people of Israel, God's New Chosen People.

End of the World: Interpreting the Epistles of Paul of Tarsus literally, his writings imply that Jesus will return and usher in a Rapture during the lifetime of the persons who are living in the middle of the 1st century. [Shaul] Paul is imprisoned in Rome. ~Acts 28:16.

AD 61-63(?)- Paul writes 1,2 Timothy, Titus, known as the "Pastoral Epistles."

AD 62(?)- Ananus calls a meeting [literally, Sanhedrin] of judges and brings into it the brother of Jesus-who-is-called, Messiah; James by name, and a few others. He makes the accusation that James has transgressed the Law, and he hands him, and the others over to be stoned. Yaakov [James] is written by a leader of the Jerusalem community(?) ~Galatians 2:9(?), Catholic Epistle.

Being therefore this kind of person [i.e., a heartless Sadducee], Ananus, thinking that he had a favorable opportunity because Festus has died and Albinus is still on his way, calls a meeting [literally, Sanhedrin] of judges and brings into it the brother of Yeshua-who-is-called-Messiah, Yaakov [James] by name, and some others.

Ananus then makes the accusation that they have transgressed the law, and he hands them over to be stoned. ~Jewish Antiquity, 20.9.1, Marginal Jew, p.57, Chronology of Christian/Jewish Related Events Since the First Century, a chronology by Paul Harvey, The World Almanac and Book of Facts, the Academic American Encyclopedia, Webster's New Collegiate Dictionary, The Jewish time-Line Encyclopedia and The English Versions of the Bible by John Berchmans Dockery O.F.M.

AD64 (?) - The Great fire of Rome is allegedly started by Emperor Nero who torches the poor ghettos and then blames it on the Christians. . . "Therefore to squelch the rumor, Nero creates scapegoats and subjects those accused to the most refined tortures those whom the common people called "Christians," [a group], which is despised due to their abominable crimes of atheism [unbelief in the Roman Gods], and total disregard of the Roman customs regarding the celebrations of their Gods. Their name comes from Christ, who, during the reign of Tiberius, had been executed by the procurator Pontius Pilate. Suppressed for the moment, the deadly superstition broke out again, not only in Judea, the land, which originated this infamous evil, but also in the city of Rome, where all sorts of horrendous and shameful practices from every part of the world converge and are fervently cultivated." ~Tacitus Annals, 15.44; Marginal Jew, Meier; p.89-90.

The Christian ministry proudly proclaims the willingness of the early Christians to die for their Savior. Would a man die for what he believes a lie? "Death by fire was not a form of punishment inflicted at Rome in the time of Nero [Roman Emperor 54-68 (37-68)]. It is opposed to the moderate principles on which the accused were then dealt with by the State. The use of the Christians as 'Living torches,' as Tacitus describes, and all the other atrocities that were committed against them, have little title to credence, and suggest an imagination exalted by reading stories of the later Christian martyrs. The often quoted statements of Juvenal and Seneca have no bearing on this; they are not connected with the Christians, and need not in the least be regarded as references to the members of the new sect sacrificed by Nero." ~The Witnesses to the Historicity of Jesus, by Arthur Drews, 1865-1935, Tr. Joseph McCabe, Watts, 1912. Amo reprint, 1972, The Annals of Tacitus, XV:44.

Nero initiates the first persecution against the Christians, and according to Seneca, Nero sentences hundreds of Christian-Jews to die by "Tunica molesta," a naphtha impregnated "Shirt of torture."

Saint Peter [Symeon], son of Juna, born in Bethsaida, whose brother is the Apostle Andrew, is a follower of John the Baptist and is also called Cephias [Kephas] by Jesus. He is usually referred to as Peter as Paul assumes the name Founder of the Church of Antioch. Peter preaches a doctrine dissimilar to Jewish teachings [Acts 15] for the Christian Jews [Gentiles].

The Jews have long practiced the permissibility of allowing Pagans to believe that Jewish priests are incarnations of Pagan gods [the Hellenized religion being the Greek Gods, such as Zeus, Artemis, and Hermes] and the Christians attempt to halt this practice.

Deception: In Acts 14:11, Paul and Barnabus, are mistaken for the Greek gods Hermes and Zeus by the gullible people of Lystra [part of Turkey], Barnabus & Paul being offered worship as if they are Pagan gods, to which they do not disclaim their divinity. ~Acts 19:23-34.

"Oh, what a tangled web we weave / When first we practice to deceive!" ~Sir Walter Scott.

This cult practice is common and rewarding to the ministers who receive gifts, financial rewards, and silver statuary from the devotees. Paul [Saul] alleged to have had involvement in the stoning of Saint Stephen, the first Christian martyr, is captivated by the notion that Jesus, a Jewish martyr, sacrificed himself for his followers and sets about to deify Jesus. James, brother of Jesus and leader of the Jewish-Christians in Jerusalem at that time opposes this veneration of men.

Further persecution breaks out in Rome under Nero, the Roman Emperor who is said to have accused Christians of starting the fire, which destroys half of Rome. Martyrdom of Saint Peter at Rome during the Neronian persecution takes place. Peter establishes his see and spends his last years in Rome after preaching in and around Jerusalem, establishing a see at Antioch, and presiding at the Council of Jerusalem.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

AD 64-95(?) 1 Peter is written in Rome, by Kefa [Peter] the apostle(?), Catholic Epistle.

Rome recognizes Gentile Christians as a new religious group, separate from Judaism, and in the following years copious events cause the new non-Jewish believers to visibly define themselves as an entity separate from Israel.

AD 65- Gospel of Thomas is originally written in [Koine] Greek. “Q” translation of Gospel is written, German: Quelle, meaning source, which is a hypothetical Greek text used in the writing of the Gospels of Matthew and Luke

AD 65-125- Period in which 4 Gospels, Acts, Revelations, and the remaining Epistles are written by Kefa [Peter] who is martyred before the 1st Holy Gospel is written; seven Popes before the last Epistle is completed.

AD 66-Emperor Nero, only seventeen when he became Emperor, the last Roman Emperor, executes two eminent Roman citizens for consulting the Egyptian Astrologer Pammenes. It is ironic in that both Emperor Claudius and Nero are devotees of the Isian Cult that is Egyptian.

The worship of Isis is to continue unabated for another three hundred years in the Roman Empire. Simon Magus [Acts 8], antagonist of Peter, claims knowledge of the magical arts he learned while in Egypt. Nero challenges Peter to prove that Jesus has greater abilities or powers.

A tower is constructed in the Campius Martius from where Simon Magus is to “Ascend to Heaven.” Legend has it that Simon Magus leapt from the tower, stretching out his hands and flies. And, Peter, when asked by the Emperor, who believes he has been tricked, if this meant Jesus and his followers were deceivers, then calls on Jesus to banish the Satanic Angels who are supporting Simon Magus who then falls to earth in the Sacra Via breaking into four pieces.

Nero is a tolerable ruler until his older age. It is now known that the Romans, whose cups & dishes contained lead, may have unwittingly been victims of lead poisoning and this may be accountable for the strange behaviors of the Roman rulers in their later years. Nero sets a slum area on fire and his henchmen blame the Christians.

The Christians are persecuted and their properties confiscated to help pay for the rebuilding of the city, to be named Norius, after Emperor Nero. As their temples are stripped of their valuables and the Romans continue to stalk them, two disciples, in 67 C.E., the Christians, Peter and Paul are captured and martyred in Rome. Nero, with his contemptuous lifestyle and mockery of Roman laws fetches the wrath of the Roman Senate that declares him an outlaw and condemns him to the death of a common criminal. He commits suicide in June of 68 C.E.

The early Christians developed a strong fixation on and for martyrdom, which was so strong it even took over the schools established by Christians. Because of the urgency of many Christians to be martyred, the Emperor Septimius Severus issued an edict in 202 “Dissolving the influential Christian School of Alexandria and forbidding future conversions to Christianity.” ~<http://countrystudies.us/egypt/14.htm>.

Eventually, to be more “Christ-like,” Justin Martyr will create letters to the New Testament as to the crucifixion and the Savior’s Resurrection and dying for sins. ~John 15:20.

AD 66-70-A comet is seen in the heavens and signifies a sign that a prophecy is to be fulfilled. The Jews revolt, the extremists, known as Zealots, mutiny against the ruling classes the Romans. This indiscretion does not go unpunished by the Romans who are disciplinarians and feel that the Jews who are allowed to practice their religious beliefs are extremely ungrateful. Emperor Nero quashes the revolt and in retaliation also destroys their temples.

The last Jewish stronghold, captured in AD 66, Masada, is re-captured by the Roman's Tenth Legion in AD 73 after a two-year siege. The new Jewish-Christian sect did not participate in this rebellion and was spared the full brunt of the scourge of the Romans. The fascination with comets is mostly out of fear [superstitious fear of the unknown], comets being associated with bad omens or extreme changes in weather. Comets are recorded in BC 240, BC 466, and have even been instrumental in the outcome of battles.

Halley's Comet, occurring approximately every 76 years, recently was last seen in AD 1986 [the next visit is projected in AD 2062]. Leonid's Meteor, also known as the Comet Temple-Tuttle makes a 33-year turnaround visit, its first known recording being in 1866. There are many medieval paintings and murals depicting comets because they were thought of as signs or messages from God.

The Jewish Revolt and the Roman War, which follows, cause the ruin of the Jewish Temple Cult and leave Judea completely devastated. The critical events of the early Christian-Jewish movement bring the curtain down on both Traditional Judaism and the early Jesus Movement, putting an end to the conflict between Paul and the Apostles. The surviving Jesus sect is unprepared for their new predicament, which in their time should have been foreseen.

The Roman War had left them with no Jewish environment in a hostile Roman world; the persecutions stripped away their authoritative leadership, and the power struggle between Peter and Paul in the real world is continued under the authority of their names long after their deaths.

The plethora of Pseudepigraphical Documents, which soon appears with their names or based upon their images is predicated upon the connection between Peter and Paul as major criterion in filling the leadership vacuum created by their absence. Paul is now dead but his legacy lives on in the Greek-Christian communities he founded in the Diaspora and Peter is deceased, but returns as the mythic leader of the new "Catholic Church."

Bishops are not mentioned in the Canonical Gospels, and the Gospel of Matthew [23:8-12], actually presents Jesus speaking out against such priestly authority, with Matthew being the only Canonical Gospel that even contains the word Church. Both uses of the word 'Church' in Matthew are within a context of discussion of authority, and it is highly improbable that these references are authentic sayings of Jesus. They seem to be attempts by Matthew to present Jesus giving authority to Peter and the Apostles [Jesus taught individual piety and direct communication between the individual and God, something many Christian religions have forgotten].

Paul is compelled to deal with numerous power struggles within his "Churches," which gives him ample opportunity to discuss the issue of Church Authority and he ends up contradicting Jesus in 1 Corinthians [4:14-15], whereby Paul promotes himself to the Authority Figure, as a "Father," in contrast to what Jesus said in Matthew 23:9. It is Paul who first promotes himself and the Apostles, Prophets, and Teachers as the leaders in the new Church.

AD67-76- Paul of Tarsus, the Apostle who never knew Jesus, and the first Christian missionary to people of all walks of life, is executed in Rome.

Pope [Saint] Linus, II Timothy 4:21, born in Tuscany, Italy, is said to have issued a decree requiring women to cover their heads in Church. This stems from the superstitious belief that women, who have menses, lose some of their powers, and the Church does not wish for them to contaminate the male congregation. Sacramental ceremonies in the early Roman Catholic Church are significantly influenced by the ancient Mystery religions. ~Edgar Wind, Pagan Mysteries in the Renaissance, New Haven, 1958.

AD67(?)-Saint Peter, is proclaimed the first recognized Pope of the Roman Catholic Church, from whom the present Pope obtains his authority, is a married man. The Roman Church adopts the existing Pagan beliefs in order to facilitate the world expansion of the new faith, and the existing Pagan Gods became, in effect, the "Saints" of the new cult, "The Saints are the successors to the Gods." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, Vol. XV, p. 710.

exception was if the command involved heresy or tended to the destruction of the Church.” ~Pope Innocent IV, 1243-1254, Comment. in Decreta, Francof. 1570, 555. [Apparatus in quinque libros decretalium, commentary on the Decretals of Gregory IX]
 Who is this man they call Peter? Who is this man who will someday become the iconic leader of one of the world's largest Churches? If we are to believe Scripture, then we must believe:

- † Peter, who is not the leader of the Apostles, “Now when the Apostles who were at Jerusalem heard that Samaria had received the word of God, they sent Peter and John to them.” ~Acts 8:14. If Peter is “The Head” of Jesus’ Apostles, he would have ordered the other Apostles to go various places to preach, but instead the other Apostles send Peter and John!
- † Peter, who makes ridiculous claims, which are from a dream, and Simon Magus says, “You claim that you have learned the things of your teacher exactly, because you have directly seen and heard him, but that it is impossible for another to learn the same thing by means of a dream or vision [oramati ê optasia; cf. 2 Corinthians 12:1].” ~Simon Magus, Eusebius, Homily, 17.13.1. cf. Revelation 13-17.
- † Peter, who only reluctantly admits he might be in error, “Whoever trusts an apparition, vision, or dream is prone to error [ho de optasia pisteuôn ê horamatikai enupniô epispalês estin]. He does not know whom he is trusting; for it is possible it may be an evil spirit or a deceptive spirit, pretending in his speeches to be what it is not.” ~Bishop Eusebius, Homily, 17.14.3-4.
- † Peter who argues over leadership of the Apostles, yet, “But by the grace of God I [Paul] am what I am, and his grace to me was not without effect. No, I worked harder than all of them, yet not I, but the grace of God that was with me.” ~1 Corinthians 15:10.
- † Peter, who denies the Virgin Mary’s role in Salvation [Mary is Mediator, Queen of Heaven, Mother of Mercies,] and who says of Jesus, “Nor is there Salvation in any other, for there is no other name under Heaven given among men by which we must be saved.” ~Acts 4:12.
- † Peter, who exalts Jesus and faith in His name for Salvation with no mention of Mary, “But we believe that through the Grace of the Lord Jesus Christ we shall be saved in the same manner as they.” ~Acts 15:11.
- † Peter, who never mentions the sacraments, church membership, attending mass, praying the Rosary, or any other Catholic distinctive as having any role in Salvation.
- † Peter, who should we believe Peter’s Primacy and the proper interpretation of Scripture when we consider the sum total of the Bible? ~Matthew 16:18.
- † Peter, who threefold denies Jesus. ~Mark 14:27 & 14:66 [after Jesus’ arrest], from the works of the Christian writer, B.A. Robinson.
- † Peter, who denies Jesus three times and then lies under solemn oath during the process. ~Matthew 26:70, 72.74-75.
- † Peter, who is obstinate, doesn’t understand Jesus’ teachings, and refuses to let Jesus wash his feet. ~John 13:6-16.
- † Peter, who is rebuked by Paul, and Jesus says, “The scribes and the Pharisees sit on Moses’ seat; therefore do whatever they teach you and follow it; but do not do as they do, for they do not practice what they teach.” ~Matthew 23:2-3; NRSV.
- † Peter, who is a racist, which in this matter, remember that Paul can hardly be held up as a champion of racial separation for he was, after all, he is the one who had opposed Peter, “To his face” for his failure to mix with the non-Jewish Christians. ~Galatians 2:11-14.
- † Peter, who will be denied by Jesus in Heaven, because he denies Jesus before mankind. ~Matthew 10:33.
- † Peter, who is a married man [First married Pope(?)], “Now when Jesus had come into Peter’s house, He saw his wife’s mother lying sick with a fever.” ~Matthew 8:14, NKJV.
- † Peter, who falsely, and deceptively, stated he would never desert Jesus, although all the others could. ~Matthew 26:33.
- † Peter, according to the New Testament, and to the Apocalypse, is the only one who witnessed the crucifixion. ~Hebrews 5:7.
- † Peter, who lied when he said he would stand behind Jesus to the very end. ~Luke 22:33.
- † Peter, who is consistently reprimanded by Jesus, “Peter, I have told you many times that they are blind ones who have no guide. If you want to know their blindness, put your hands before your eyes - your robe - and say what you see. " ~Apocalypse of Peter.

To Pope Pius XII, “I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians.” ~Mahatma Gandhi

- ✠ Peter, who is a pusillanimous, spineless follower, a coward, a Disciple fearful of attending the crucifixion for dread that he might be recognized and punished as an Apostle of Jesus, the Christ, the Messiah, the so-called long awaited God.
- ✠ Peter utters a Divine flattery to Jesus as Peter is yearning for when he [Peter] becomes promised all things on earth as the Devil promises all to Jesus, which both encountered in the desert. The sycophantic Simon Peter says to Jesus, "You are the Christ, the Son of the living God." ~Matthew 16:16-19 RSV.
- ✠ Peter, who is the Devil incarnate? "Simon, Simon, Satan has asked to sift you as wheat." ~Luke 22:31.
- ✠ Peter, who could neither read nor write, "Next in order come...The Twelve Apostles. We do not understand that the Ecclesiastical historians claim that these men left any writings, unless Peter be excepted; in fact the Church, on its own showing, admits that but one of the twelve could write [Luke, the physician]. In any event, all of the Epistles ascribed to the Apostles have been found by the critics to be spurious [fictitious]." ~Appendix to Hebrew and Christian Mythology. By Judge Parish B. Ladd, LL.B., Of the San Francisco Bar. New York: The Truth Seeker Company, 28 Lafayette Place. No date [Hebrew and Christian Mythology, c1896]. Note: The Church gets around this one by claiming that the Apostles dictated their words to scribes.
- ✠ The early Christian reprobates [sinners] will become rich off of the teachings of Peter. The destitute, among them Peter, will impose a communistic order to obtain the new members' fortune. The rich will have to hand over their properties, and money, to the bunch of criminals, calling themselves Children of God, and the followers of Peter, the destitute slaveholders, thus became rich.
- ✠ "And I say also unto thee, that thou art Peter, and upon this Rock I will build my Church; and the Gates of Hell shall not prevail against it." ~Matthew 16:18 KJV.
- ✠ Peter, who is called 'Satan' by an angry Jesus. "Get behind me, Satan..." ~Matthew 16:23, RSV.
- ✠ Peter, who readily admits that he is sinful. ~Luke 5:8.
- ✠ Peter, who proclaims, "...The free gift of God," yet his followers in the Church deny this free-gift, by requiring payments/tithes/offerings/blessings for its services. ~Acts 8:20.
- ✠ Peter, who draws his sword in anger, and violently inflicts harm upon his fellow man by cutting off a man's ear. ~John 18:10.
- ✠ Peter, who is rebuked by Jesus for having little faith in his leadership. ~Matthew 14:31.
- ✠ Peter, who is meddling into Jesus' affairs. ~John 21:21-22.
- ✠ Peter, who irreverently reprimands Jesus, leader, Christ, Messiah. ~Matthew 16:22.
- ✠ Peter, who impudently accuses Jesus of lying. ~Matthew 16:22.
- ✠ Peter, who repeatedly fails to stay awake at the Garden of Gethsemane when told to, "Stay awake," by Jesus. ~Matthew 26:40-45.
- ✠ Peter, a superstitious illiterate [as were all of the Apostles except Luke, who is a doctor]. "Anthropoi Agrammatoi Kai Idiotei," "Men without letters [idiots]." ~Acts 4:13.
- ✠ Peter, who wants to know what rewards are in it for him, financially, if he follows this man, called the Christ. ~Matthew 19:27.
- ✠ Peter, who shows contemptible lack of courage and shamefulness by refusing to eat with the converted Christian gentiles because Jewish legalists were approaching and could possibly see him and object. ~Galatians 2:11-12.
- ✠ Peter, who has a low respect for women believed the reporting of the 'Resurrection,' by the women was but a lie. ~Luke 24:10-12.
- ✠ Peter, who is ambitious, and argumentive, "Then a dispute arose among them as to which of them would be greatest." ~Luke. 9:46.
- ✠ Peter, the first Pope(?), who admits his sinfulness to Jesus, "Depart from me, Lord, for I am a sinful man." ~Luke 5: 8.
- ✠ Peter, who is conceited, "Now there was also a dispute among them, as to which of them should be considered the greatest." ~Luke. 22:24.
- ✠ Peter, who slanders Paul, "...There are some things that are hard to understand that the - ignorant and unstable distort to their own destruction, just as they do the other scriptures.*” ~2 Peter 3:16 NAB.

- ✠ Peter, who dares to defy Jesus and enters a Samaritan village in direct defiance of the command given. ~Matthew 10:5, and Acts 8:25.
 - ✠ Peter, who alleges that Lot was a righteous man despite the fact that Lot offered his virgin daughters to a crowd of strangers, was wicked like all the others, and did not deserve to be saved from Sodom and Gomorrah's destruction. ~2 Peter 2:7-8, Genesis 19:8.
 - ✠ When the loving couple Ananias and Saphira sell a private acre, both will be killed by Peter, the profit goes just as well to a Christian as well as to non-Christian [e.g. philosopher Celsus or Porphyry's], because reports have it that they did not hand over all the money to the avaricious primitive savagery of the new Christian sect. Peter after publicly embarrassing and accusing Ananias before the entire community and literally scaring the man to death, repeats the act same ill-mannered performance with Ananias' wife. ~Acts 5:1-10. Later Christians will attempt to disguise Peter's [perpetrated] double murder of Ananias and Saphira by claiming that Peter killed the couple only by a word.
 - ✠ Peter, who indulges in Black Magic, which is used to fool the masses.
 - ✠ Peter, whose mistress, Helena, is presented as a priestess/goddess by Simon, perhaps in an attempt to match the powers of Mary Magdalene and her beloved Jesus.
 - ✠ Peter, who is known also as Simon, who is also known as the first Anti-Pope. “Now this Simon of Samaria, from whom all heresies derive their origin... The successor of this man was Menander, also a Samaritan by birth; and he, too, was a perfect adept in the practice of magic.” ~Adverse Haeisies, vol. I, xxiii; Ante-Nicene Fathers, vii, i, 348.
 - ✠ Peter, who is a covetous person says, “Ananias, why has Satan filled your heart to lie to the Holy Spirit and to keep back part of the proceeds of the land?” ~Acts 5:1-11 RSV.
 - ✠ Of the Christian lack of love to each other causes the Emperor to say, “I experienced that even beasts of prey are not that hostile minded to human beings than Christian sinners to each other.” ~Roman Emperor Julian, 332-363 C.E.
 - ✠ Peter, who is defiant, and contradicts Jesus, in not showing concern for the sensibilities of others. When Hananias and Saphira sold a private acre, both partners became assassinated by Peter's words. ~ Acts 5:1-11 RSV.
 - ✠ Peter, who is deceptive in asking Jesus who is going to betray him. ~John 21:20.
 - ✠ Peter, who is present when Jesus exposes his future betrayer at the Last Supper, yet plays ignorance when Judas leads the soldiers to arrest Jesus. ~John 18:3-5, 10, Matt. 26:25.
 - ✠ Peter, who doubts, and who asks for a sign to be given to his generation in opposition to what Jesus said would be done. ~Mark 8:12, Acts 4:29-30.
 - ✠ Peter, who is adduced to be the leader of the Church of God, yet, the Gnostics believed that if Jesus had actually set out to found a new Church, then wouldn't he [Jesus] have set forth explicit doctrines to follow, instead of a single phrase, “Upon this rock...?” [Which is but a mere quotation from the Doctrine of Mithraism]. In its place, we have “Enter into thy closet, and when thou has shut the door, pray to thy Father which is in secret.” ~Matthew 6:5.
 - ✠ This is a clear indication that one's belief in God is solely between the individual and, God and not man and the Church. “Why callest me good? There is none good but one; that is God.”
 - ✠ Peter, who unjustly accuses Pontius Pilate of being responsible for the fate of Jesus. ~Acts 4:26-27.
 - ✠ Peter, who reprimands Pilate, who clearly says Jesus is innocent, and did not want to be associated with the taking of “This just person.” ~Matthew 27:24.
 - ✠ Peter, who is disposed to suspect rivalry and is extremely jealous of Mary Magdalene. In “The Gospel According to Thomas,” Peter states, “Mary Magdalene should leave us... Women are unworthy of the Life.” The 'Life' is referring to the inner circle of Jesus and the 'Mysteries.' Jesus defends Mary and says he will lead her, meaning he [Jesus] will teach her the “Mysteries,” which are denied the masses.
 - ✠ Peter, who says Jesus was killed, and then hanged on a tree. ~Acts 5:30.
 - ✠ Peter, who nowhere in the Bible is said to be the successor to Jesus, the Messiah, and Savior of all mankind.

- † Peter, who noted that the process of corruption had already started during his apostolic times, “And account that the long-suffering of our Lord is Salvation; even as our beloved brother Paul also according to the wisdom given unto him hath written unto you; As also in all his Epistles, speaking in them of these things; in which are some things hard to be understood, which they that are unlearned and unstable wrest, as they do also the other Scriptures, unto their own destruction.” ~II Peter 3:15-16.

On today's ministry, “Luke preached that all wealth should be distributed to the poor [Luke 18:22]; should this axiom not apply also to those who claim to represent the poor?” ~E. Christopher Reyes.

- † Peter, who rewrote the teachings of Jesus to enhance his personal wealth. To those who would abandon their families and their material possessions [to the clergy], he made the promise of immeasurable rewards, “There is no man that hath left house... Or lands for my sake, but he shall receive a hundredfold now in this time, houses... And lands; and in the world to come Eternal Life.” ~Mark 10:29, 30; Matthew 19:29; Luke 18:30 [This contradicts what Jesus had preached in giving freely and leaving your purse behind].
- † Peter, who stigmatizes and uses opprobrious [scurrilous] terms in describing the innocent Mary Magdalene [being promiscuous, a prostitute, Copiosa copulatio casualis etc.], when there is no evidence to prove such an allegation, which is another creation to alienate the believer, denigrate women, and sway the advocate from the fact that only the three Mary's had the courage to stand by Jesus, when the other disciples were fearful.
- † Peter, who denies that Jesus was crucified on the cross before he died. ~Matthew 27:40, 46, versus Acts 5:30.
- † Peter, who says that, God made Jesus both Lord and Christ, which would mean he was neither at one time. ~Acts 2:36.
- † Peter, who is alleged to have been given the Keys to Heaven, that, which he does on earth, so mote it be in Heaven, and yet history tells us that the word is hypocrisy. “I will give you the Keys of the Kingdom of Heaven, and whatever you bind on earth shall be bound in Heaven, and whatever you loose on earth shall be loosed in Heaven.” ~Matthew 16:18-19.
- † Peter, who is blamed for the lack of understanding in spreading the teachings of the Church, “When Peter was come to Antioch, I withstood him to the face, because he was to be blamed.” ~Galatians 2:11.
- † Peter, who is not in good standing with Jewish authorities, and when the Apostles are accused of using magic: after Peter and John healed the paralytic, the Sanhedrin inquisitively asks of them, “By what power or what name did you do this?” ~Acts 4:7.
- † Peter, the first Pope, who is married [and may also have been divorced], yet the Catholic Church forbids present-day priests and Popes to be married. ~1 Corinthians 9:5. Scripture also shows Peter, a.k.a. Cephas, as being married. John. 1:42. Peter's mother-in-law is the first person mentioned in Scripture as having been cured by Jesus, and to Peter's house all the sick and demoniacs are brought in the evening of the Sabbath to be healed. ~Mark 1:29-34 and parallels. From I Corinthians 9:5 it may be learned that Peter, like many of the other Apostles, traveled with his wife on his missionary journeys while he was supported by the Church.
- † Peter, who walks on water in the same manner as Jesus does. ~The original legend is found in John 21:1-24; cf. Luke 5:3-9; in the transfiguration story [Matthew 27:1-8] Peter stands out prominently; and he plays the chief rôle in the story of the coin found in the fish's mouth. ~Matthew 27:24-27.
- † Peter, who, in The Sacred History, is taken aloft by two Demons, “For then took place the well-known and celebrated encounter of Peter and Paul with Simon. He, after he had flown up into the air by his magical arts, and supported by two demons [with the view of proving that he was a God], the demons being put to flight by the prayers of the Apostles, fell to the earth in the sight of all the people, and was dashed to pieces.” ~Section 28, Sacred History.
- † Peter, who is accused by Paul of committing a sin! Paul tells Peter that he “Did not walk uprightly according to the Truth of the Gospel.”
- † Peter, who even the early Church Fathers deny being the first Pope, “The blessed Apostles, then, having founded and built up the Church, committed into the hands of Linus the Office of

See also Anti-Nicene Fathers, Volume VII, Book VI, Sec. IV, XLVI, Robert's, Alexander and Donaldson, James, Ante-Nicene Fathers: Volume VII.
- † Peter, who founded the Church "Of Cephas." ~1 Corinthians 1:12. Is this the Church the original Universal Roman Catholic Church claims as its foundation/origins?
 - † Peter, who is a Godless man, "Peter... A magician, a Godless man, injurious, cunning, ignorant, and professing impossible things." ~Simon Magnus.
 - † Peter, who accepts the laurels given unto Mary Magdalene as his own, "... Many of the finest Gnostic writings are of Alexandrian inspiration or origin. Alexandria is also the main source of Gnostic works linking Jesus with Mary Magdalene. According to this tradition it was through the Magdalen, rather than through Peter and the male Apostles, that Jesus transmitted his secret doctrine." ~The Cult of the Black Virgin, Ean Begg 272:128.
 - † Peter, who has no Eternal Life awaiting him, "... You know that no murderer has Eternal Life abiding in him [Peter]." ~1 John 3:15.
 - † Peter, who is accused by Jesus, as being Satan, "But he turned and said to Peter, 'Get behind me, Satan!...'" ~Matthew 16:23, RSV.
 - † The so-called ordination of Peter is, without a doubt, a later dutiful insertion. "Get behind me, Satan!..." ~Matthew 16:23, RSV.
 - † Peter, who is a liar, writing fictitious stories to attract followers, "To compose 'Letters' under another name, especially under the name of persons whose living presentment, or real or supposed spiritual equipment, it, was proposed to set before the reader, was then just as usual as was the other practice of introducing the same persons into narratives and reporting their 'Words' in the manner of which we have examples, in the case of Jesus, in the Gospels, and, in the case of Peter, Paul, and other Apostles, in the Acts." ~Encyclopedia Britannica vol. 3, 3481.
 - † Peter, whom, after all this, Jesus is then said to give Peter his second name to signify that upon Peter, as upon a Rock, His Church should be built. ~Luke 6:14; Matthew 21:18; John 1:42; Mark 3:12, which significantly omits the reason. Cf. Midr. Yalk. 1, 766 on Numbers 23:9: "Upon Abraham as top of the rocks God said I shall build my Kingdom."
 - † Peter, who contests all authority rooted in visions and to defend his own apostleship. The words here placed in his mouth resonate both with Paul's defense of his apostleship and with his accusations of Peter, "If our Jesus appeared to you in a vision, made himself known to you, and spoke to you, it was as one who is enraged with an adversary, and this is the reason why it was through visions and dreams [di' horamatón kai enupnión]." ~cf. Acts 18:9.
 - † Peter, who claims God spoke to him in a dream, revelations that were from without [di' apokalypseôn eksôthen ousôn]. ~cf. Galatians 1:16.
 - † Peter, who equivocates on the authority of dreams. Can anyone be rendered competent for instruction through apparitions [dreams]? ~cf. Galatians 1:11-12.
 - † Peter, who has mental reservations on his own credibility. How are we to believe Peter, when he tells us that God appeared to him? How is it that God appeared to Peter, when Peter entertain opinions contrary to his teachings? If Peter were seen and taught by God and became his apostle, even for a single hour, then he would proclaim his utterances, interpret his teaching, love his apostles, and not contend with who accompanied with him [emoi tô suggenomenô autô mê machou!] For Peter now stands in direct opposition to God [pros... enantios anthe stêkas moi], who am a firm rock, the foundation of the church (cf. Matthew 16:18)!
 - † Peter, who condemns Paul, If you say that I [Paul] am 'Condemned' [kategnôsmenous, Galatians 2:11], you bring an accusation against God, who revealed the Christ to me..." ~Eusebius, Homily, 17.19.1-6, cf. Galatians 1:11-2:21; 1 Corinthians 9:1-5; 15:7-9; 2 Corinthians 11:4-14.

If Peter is to be the primary leader of the new Church of Jesus, then why only his cursory mention in Scripture? "All the Gods of the heathen are Devils." ~Psalms 96:5, Vulgate Bible.

AD 69-The Roman Emperor Otho [Marcus Salvius Otho], literally rose to power on his knees before Emperor Nero, commits suicide [stabbing himself in the heart].

End of the World: Nisan 17, FDS2; appointed over all belongings, Jesus' Second Coming in the first presence ends and the Christian leadership begins revising Scripture to adjust to his not coming.

AD 70- About 40 years after Jesus' death, followers begin to realize that the promise of the 'Kingdom of God' will not come soon, and are said to begin to write down His teachings. The destruction of Jerusalem is ordered by Titus due to Jewish civil insurrection.

Jewish dissidents caused the Roman Emperors to examine the Jewish leaders, who were the descendants of Jesus' family, to see if they were a potential menace to the Empire, and from 90 C.E. the Jews banned them from the Synagogues, and from the middle of the 2nd century Catholic churchmen strongly condemned their beliefs as unworthy of Christ.

A group of 1st century Gnostics referred to themselves as Children of Light: "Then all the Children of the Light will be truly acquainted with the truth and their root, and the father of the entirety and the Holy Spirit. They will all say with a single voice, 'The father's truth is just, and the Son presides over the entirety, and from everyone unto the ages of ages, Holy, Holy, Holy! Amen!'" ~The Hypostasis of the Archons [The Reality of the Rulers], translated by Bentley Layton, selection made from James M. Robinson, ed, The Nag Hammadi Library, revised edition. HarperCollins, San Francisco, 1990.

"Signs Gospel" is written, a hypothetical Greek text used in Gospel of John in order to prove that Yeshua is the new Messiah. The Gospel according to Mark is written in Rome, by [Kefa's] Peter's interpreter(?) ~1 Peter 5,13, with the original ending apparently lost, new endings are added about 400 C.E.

"The Church Fathers will see the destruction of Jerusalem, and the Holy Temple in 70 C.E., and the exile of the Jewish nation, 135 C.E., as Divine signs that 'Adonai' had rejected Judaism [specifically the Mosaic covenant] as a religion and the Jewish people as the covenant people of Adonai." ~Seeds of Separation, Fruits of Replacement by Tony Robinson, cf. Hebrews 10:9.

Immediately upon finishing the wall around Jerusalem, to curtail the Jewish revolution, in the first watch of the night Titus inspects the wall. Escape is now impossible for the first time [defection still possible]. ~Luke 19:43 is fulfilled.

The Romans finish building their final dirt banks around Jerusalem, and whole area is now devoid of trees for 90 furlongs all around. Manneus the gate keeper, in charge of all dead bodies taken out of the city, is paid for by public stipend; 115,880 bodies, in all defected and lots of other eminent men followed, 600,000 poor thrown out of the gates.

Praying is a personal matter and Jesus says, "When thou prayest alone, enter into thy secret chamber, and after thou hast closed the door, pray to Abba Amma, Who is above and within thee, and thy Father-Mother Who seest all that is secret shall surely answer thee... But when ye are gathered together, and pray in the common place of thy brothers and sisters, even the Holy brotherhood, use not vain repetition, for your Heavenly Parent knoweth what things ye have need of before ye ask them. Pray ye, therefore after this manner, 'Our Father-Mother Who art above all in heaven and within every creature and thing: Hallowed be Thy sacred Name in twofold Trinity. In Wisdom, Love, Equity allow Thy Kingdom to come to all who love Thee. Let Thy will be done, as in Heaven, so in Earth. Give us day by day to partake of Thy Holy Bread, and the fruitage of the living Holy Vine. As Thou dost forgive us our trespasses, so may we be willing to forgive others who trespass against us. Shew upon us Thy goodness, that to others we also may shew the same. In the hour of temptation, deliver us from evil. For Thine are the Kingdom, the Power, and the Glory: From the Ages of ages, Now, and to the Ages of ages to come. Amen.'" ~The Essene Humane Gospel of Jesus, Translated From The Original Hebrew And Aramaic Texts, Typesetting by: Followers of the Essene Way [F.E.W.] cf. Matthew 6:5.

The Jews attack the new ramparts and fail, and Romans batter and undermine the 3rd wall a bit. Final assault begins. Mid-point of Armageddon for Jerusalem. The last day that Josephus records Jewish defectors as leaving.

Josephus speaks out on behalf of Emperor Titus, explaining how the Romans had accepted to be put to death if they ventured into the Jewish sanctuary, the Holy inner temple, and out of respect for the Holy place had allowed a sign in Greek, and Hebrew, to this extent. Josephus pleads for the Romans not to defile the sanctuary but to fight elsewhere, but the Jews make an impertinent reply, and Titus gives orders to besiege the temple starting at the 9th hour of the night. Those who had fled to Romans and been saved in Gophna, by Caesar's decree, were now paraded round the wall.

AD75-90-The Gospel, according to Luke is written, based on Mark and "Q."

In a letter, which Flavius Vopiscus attributes to Hadrian, the borrowing of existing Gods is put into plain words, "The land of Egypt... I have found to be wholly light-minded, unstable, and blown about by every breath of rumor. There those who worship Serapis are, in fact, Christians, and those who call themselves Bishops of Christ are, in fact, devotees of Serapis... Even the patriarch himself, when he comes to Egypt, is forced by some to worship Serapis, by others to worship Christ." ~Firmus, Scriptores, Historiae Augustae, Vol. Viii, Loeb Classical Library, III, 399f., ed and trans. by David Magic.

Amazingly, the fact that this letter is a palpable forgery does not detract from its value in reflecting the opinion of a 4th century non-Christian author who wrote perhaps during the Julian revival. Christian syncretism in Egypt emerges at least as early as the second half of the 2nd century when confident Gnostics established a Larium [in Alexandria(?)] where they publicly venerate the images of Jesus, Pythagoras, Plato, Aristotle, and other philosophers. ~Irenaeus. Adv. haer. I, xxv, 6 [I. 210, Harvey].

One local demi-god is even taken over by the Christian saints, whose names, in some cases, remind one of the original Pagan prototypes. Statues of the Egyptian goddess, Isis, holding the infant Harpocrates [The Egyptian Horus], as well as the glorious hymns in honor of the Egyptian Queen of Heaven, find their noticeable counterparts in the growth of the cult of Mary. Just as Sabazios with his characteristic gesture, that is three fingers raised, the thumb and other finger bent down, bless his adherents, so does the Catholic Bishop of the West give [and still gives] his bountiful blessing to the Christian faithful. Through various paths the ancient idea of refrigerium. ~Chr. Blinkenberg, Darstellungen des Sabazios und Denkmaler seines Kultus, in Archaeologische Studien, Copenhagen, 1904, pp. 66-128.

AD76- Ancient Homosexuality: Birth of Hadrian, who will one day become Emperor of Rome, and the lover of the beautiful Antinous [July 16 c.110] who pathetically drowns himself in the Nile at age 21, perhaps in as a self sacrifice to save the life of his lover and master.

AD79-August 24th, Mount Vesuvius erupts, thus preserving the homo-erotic, and other sexually explicit wall murals that would surely have been destroyed by later self-righteous Christian civilizations.

It is through the malicious efforts of the early Christian leaders that many valuable Christian writings were destroyed, "Probably, many of these manuscripts were kept in old monasteries in the 4th century, like Codex Cantabrigeniensis D. and Codex Syrus Sinaiticus, which both marvelously survived. At the time, 382 C.E., during the Pope Damasos, the canonical texts were adopted and in this connection all old documents were destroyed." ~Alfred Resch.

AD80 (?) -The apostles Paul and Barnabus are mistaken for the Greek God Zeus [Ruler of Heaven and earth] and Hermes [messenger of the Gods] by the people of Lystra [what is now Turkey]. ~See Acts 14:11.

End of the World: Ben Zakkai dies at about 80 years of age; he expected the Messiah about the time of his death.

AD81-96 Book of Revelation written, by Yochanon [John, son of Zebedee] and/or a disciple of his. Between 90-100 C.E., 1 John is written, by author(s) of 4th Gospel, the Catholic Epistle.

AD88 (?) -97(?) The Pontificate of Saint Clement I, third successor of Saint Peter as Bishop of Bishops, Bishop of Rome, also considered one of the Apostolic Fathers.

The First Epistle of Clement to the Corinthians, with which he has been identified, is addressed by the Church of Rome to the Church at Corinth, the scene of irregularities and divisions in the Christian community. Saint Clement I argues, "God delegates his authority to reign to rulers, and leaders on earth." The growing Church now flexes its power, and whoever disobeys the 'Divine Authority' could receive the death penalty as the Church perceives itself as the interpreter of the beliefs of God with power to act as disciplinarian [The Church now declares itself as the sole provider of faith to its members, the world, but, who will speak out about the wrongs of the Church?].

Paul of Samosata, Bishop of Antioch [now part of Turkey] preaches that Jesus is a mere man who does not become the 'Holy Spirit' until after baptism when he is then made the 'Son of God' through adoption, and this teaching is revived in the 8th century and declared Heresy. The crime of heresy is nothing to be scoffed at, "... It has been estimated by careful and reputed historians of the Catholic Inquisition that 50 million people were slaughtered for the crime of 'Heresy' by Roman persecutors between the 606 C.E., and the middle of the 19th century." ~Quoted in Estimates of the Number Killed by the Papacy in the Middle Ages and Later by David A. Plaisted, 2006.

The Pagans believed that Baptism in itself, washed away sins to which we have, "Poor wretch! Do you not see that, since these sprinklings cannot repair your grammatical errors, they cannot repair either the faults of your life?" ~Diogenes

Unrighteous Bible, A Cambridge edition of 1653, where the word "Not" was omitted, leaving "The unrighteous shall inherit the Kingdom of God." ~1 Corinthians 6:9.

The Gnostics claim a 'Secret Ritual' that has been handed down to them that can be traced from the apostles, and the Church then seeks a way of showing succession from Peter's Bishopric appointment as a means of continuation of the Papacy. The first followers of Jesus, 'Jesusites' or 'Yesuans,' were nearly all 'Essenes,' Jesus being one himself. The 'Yesuans' were not called 'Christians' till the latter part of the first century, at Antioch. It was to the espousal of the cause of Jesus by the Essene magicians that the future success of Christianity was due. They accepted Jesus the Nazarene whom the Jews, for very good reasons, rejected as the expected Messiah, or Avator.

"The only common character that runs through the whole body of heretical evidence, is that they [Gnostics] one and all, from first to last, deny the existence of Jesus Christ as a man, and professing their faith in him as a God and Savior, yet uniformly and consistently hold the whole story of his life and actions to be allegorical. The greatest part of the Gnostics [taking that name as the most general one for all the heretics of the three first centuries] denied that Christ was clothed with a real body, or that he suffered really." ~Moshem Johann Lorenz von Mosheim 1694 -1755]. Vol. 1, p. 136, 367.

AD90-The early Christian Gospel of Matthew blames the destruction of the Jewish Temple on the Jews' rejection of the Torah, as embodied in Jesus Christ, their Lord and Savior, and of Biblical prophets before him.

Rather than wait to be captured and tortured 960 members of the Israeli community at Masada collectively commit suicide in the 1st century C.E. The other alternative would have been being conquered and enslaved by the Romans.

Unfortunately, many like being a slave to an invisible entity, "Whenever a man believes that he has the exact truth from God, there is in that man no spirit of compromise. He has not the modesty born of the imperfections of human nature; he has the arrogance of theological certainty and the tyranny born of ignorant assurance. Believing himself to be the slave of God, he imitates his master, and of all tyrants, the worst is a slave in power." ~Robert Ingersoll, Some Reasons Why.

End of the World: Saint [Pope] Clement I predicts that the world's end will occur at any moment. Better be prepared!

At the Council of Jamnia, 90 C.E., the Rabbis made decisions about which books were to be included canon and which were not, that is, which books were to be kept in their list of books considered as Scripture and which were to be excluded [rejecting many books written in Greek].

AD90-100-The Gospel according to John is written, by [Yochanon] John [son of Zebedee], and others, the only eyewitness to Yeshua(?) A disciple Yeshua loved(?) A Gnostic(?)

Flavius Josephus claims exactly 22 Jewish [Old Testament] books: 5 Law, 13 History, and 4 Hymns.

AD91-101 Pope Clement I, the fourth Pope, writes a letter to Corinth in 95 called 1 Clement. ~ mentioned in Philippians 4:3.

AD94-"Jewish Antiquities," written by the historian, Flavius Josephus, in Aramaic, and then translated into Greek as Testimonium Flavianum where the new Christian religious leaders insidiously further develop their history of a now famous Jesus event by inserting, "At this time there appeared 'Yeshua,' a wise man. For he was a doer of startling deeds, a teacher of people who receive the truth with pleasure. And he gained a following both among many Jews and among many of Greek origin. And when Pilate, because of an accusation made by the leading men among us, condemned him to the cross, those who had loved him previously did not cease to do so. And up until this very day the tribe of Christians [named after him] has not died out." ~Jewish Antiquities, 18.3.3, Flavius Josephus, Meier redaction, Marginal Jew, p.61.

AD95- Domitian orders the persecution of Christians, principally at Rome.

AD96-Pope Saint Clement I is martyred and his wife is exiled, see Book of Judith.

AD98- The word 'Gospel,' in Greek, at first meant, "The reward for the bearer of good news." Then it developed in to, "The good news itself." Later the word, 'Gospel,' through the Christians, became more specific and limited to mean, "The good news that came to humanity by the coming of Jesus to redeem the human race." Or, "The book that tells the story of Jesus Christ."

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

Through centuries of amending the annals of history the 'Gospels' now contain the myths associated with the life of Jesus that allegedly fulfill the need for the saving of mankind. The 'Good News,' as it will turn out will not be so 'Good' to those who refuse to be saved.

Every word of Christ or about his mother is harsh, and she joined his brothers in wanting to have this aficionado put under some manner of official restraint. Jesus espoused the monastic, Essene, aversion from women... Jews had a profound veneration for their fathers and precious little consideration for their mothers. The hypocrisy of the Church lives on in Papias, the Bishop of Phrygia, who is said to have written five Books entitled, "Expositions of the Oracles of the Lord," that is, of the Old Testament 'Prophecies,' which are now lost, "Except a few precious fragments." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 6, 5.

Bishop Eusebius says, "Papias was a man of very small mind, if we may judge by his own words;" though elsewhere the good Bishop now contradicts himself and calls him "A man well skilled in all manner of learning, and well acquainted with the [Old Testament] Scriptures." ~Hist Encl., vol. iv, 36. Hist. Encl., vol. iii, 39, and quotes by Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 11, pg 549.

Eusebius also cites "A wild and extraordinary legend about Judas Iscariot attributed to Papias," wherein Eusebius says of the traitorous Judas, "... His body having swollen to such extent that he could not pass where a chariot could pass easily, he was crushed by the chariot, so that his bowels gushed out." ~Ante-Nicene Fathers, vol. i, 153.

"From the publication of the 'Ecclesiastical History' down to the modern era the history of early Christianity has been written and rewritten in the terms established by Eusebius." ~Arthur Droge.

"This also was known all the while to Eusebius, Bishop of Caesarea, who, at first identifying himself with the Arian heresy, and having after wards signed at the self-same synod of Nicaea, wrote to his own particular friends, firmly maintaining that, 'We have known of certain learned and renowned Bishops and writers among the ancients who have used the term hoomoou/sioj in reference to the Divinity of the Father and Son.'" ~Saint Athanasius, Treatise on the Synods of Ariminum and Selucia.

This Papias 'Conviction' impeaches both of the other contradictory Scriptural traditions of Judas, to wit, that, "... He went and hanged himself." ~Matthew 27:5.

It also contradicts Peter's alleged statement that, "Falling headlong, he burst asunder in the midst and all his bowels gushed out." ~Acts 1:15-18.

Bishop Eusebius says that Bishop Papias had reported that, "Those who were raised to life by Christ lived on until the age of Trajan," the Roman Emperor from 98-117 A.D. Father Papias falls into what would by the Orthodox be regarded as "Some" error, in disbelieving and denying the early crucifixion and resurrection of Jesus Christ, evidently not then a belief; for he assures us, on the authority of what "The disciples of the Lord used to say in the old days, that Jesus Christ lived to be an old man," and so evidently died in peace in the bosom of his ancestors. ~As confessed by Bishop Irenaeus.

Father Papias relates the raising to life of the mother of Manaimos; also the drinking of poison without harm by Justus Barsabas; which fables he supported by "... Strange parables of the Savior and teachings of His, and other mythical matters." ~Says Bishop Eusebius as quoted by the Catholic Encyclopedia. The importance of "... So venerable a person [Papias], who had lived with the Apostles, imposed upon the Church as genuine." ~Eusebius, Hist. Eccles. Bk. III, ch. 39.

"It is admitted that he could not have known many Apostles... Irenaeus and Eusebius, who had the works of Papias before them, understood the presbyters not to be Apostles, but disciples of disciples of the Lord, or even disciples of disciples of the Apostles." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 11, pg 458; see Eusebius, HE, III, 39.

Finally, Father Papias himself admits that he received his 'Apostolic' knowledge second and third hand, "If, then, anyone who had attended on the elders came, I asked minutely after their sayings, -- what Andrew or Peter said, or what was said by Philip, or by Thomas, or by James, or by John, or by Matthew, or by any other of the Lord's disciples: which things Aristion and the presbyter John, the disciples of the Lord, say. For I imagined that what was to be got from books was not so profitable to me as what came from the living and abiding voice." ~Papias, Frag 4; Anti Nicene Fathers, vol. i, 153.

"Mark, the interpreter of Peter, recorded with great energy, if not with great accuracy, everything that he could remember had been told about Jesus. He himself had never seen the Master. He was just the interpreter of Peter, and could only retell what he had heard at various instances; not always had he got everything well explained to him and commented. One should therefore not reproach Mark... ” ~Papias, perhaps one of the most predominant Christian prevaricators, next to Bishop Eusebius, Epistle to the presbyter, Johannes.

 “Our forefathers assigned this to their chief priests and prophets, and down to our own times these records have been, and I venture to say, will continue to be, preserved with scrupulous accuracy.” ~Flavius Josephus, on Jewish Scriptures, not Christian New Testament writings, Contra Apion, 1:29.

Is there any doubt that religions borrow from other existing religions and cultures? A sanitized historical presentation of Christianity is being offered to the world, which is more believable and acceptable than the truth. The first fatality of Catholicism was Truth. “We Catholics acknowledge readily, without any shame, nay with pride, that Catholicism cannot be identified simply and wholly with primitive Christianity, nor even with the Gospel of Christ.” ~Adam, Karl, 1928, The Spirit of Catholicism, New York: MacMillan, p. 2.

Early forgers were swollen with pride of their unique skills, as they creatively inserted dialogues for the Saints, wrote their own Gospels, as they creatively inserted fictitious conversations with their God, as they creatively slandered their adversaries, and as Suetonius pompously writes, “The Emperor Titus could compose speeches and verses in Greek or Latin with equal ease, and actually extemporized them on occasion... It often amused him to compete with his secretaries at shorthand writing, or so I have heard; and he claimed that he could imitate any handwriting in existence and might have been the most celebrated forger of all time.” ~Titus 3.

“Those who would seek the truth should take care that they may find it, and in finding it, be horrified.” ~Delos B. McKown.

AD100- The death of Saint John, the Apostle and evangelist, marks the End of the Age of the Apostles and the first generation of the new Christian Church.

By the end of the 2nd century, Antioch, Alexandria and Ephesus in the East and Rome in the West are established centers of Christian population and influence.

Occultism in the Bible:

- ✠ The occult [darkness] cannot overcome the light. ~John 1:5.
- ✠ Satan is the father of the occult. ~1 John 3:10.
- ✠ Satan has been judged. Jesus cast him out of the world. ~John 12:31.
- ✠ Satan, and the occult, will be cast into the lake of fire. ~Revelation 20:10.
- ✠ “And have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather expose them. For it is shameful even to speak of those things, which are done by them in secret. But all things that are exposed are made manifest by the light, for whatever makes manifest is light.” ~Paul in Ephesians 5:11-13.
- ✠ Christians have power to withstand Satan, the occult. ~Ephesians 6:10-18.
- ✠ We must put on the whole armor of God [righteousness, Gospel of peace, faith, Salvation, Word of God, prayer] whereby we are able to stand firm against the fiery darts of Satan.
- ✠ Christians overcome Satan by the blood of Jesus Christ. ~Revelation 12:11, The Occult, www.biblestudyguide.org.

Since the works of the Gnostics do not fully agree with the Orthodox Church, their writings are often ignored, “How much more will this be the case with anyone who by wicked doctrine corrupts the faith of God, for which Jesus Christ was crucified! Such a one becomes defiled. He will go away into everlasting fire, and so will everyone that listens to him [Ephesians 16]... But if, as some that are without God, that is, the unbelieving, say, He became man in appearance [only], that He did not in reality take unto Him a body, that He died in appearance [merely], and did not in very deed suffer, then for what reason am I now in bonds, and long to be exposed to the wild beasts? In such a case, I die in vain, and am guilty of falsehood against the cross of the Lord.” ~Saint Ignatius, Trallians, 10, 105 C.E.

Pictures, wall paintings, and marble reliefs survive from 1st century Secret Cults. The Isis Cult in Herculaneum; Eleusinian Mysteries in the Mediterranean, Osiris in Egypt; Bacchus, the Wine God in Pompeii; Mithraism in Persia.

Of Osiris, “Later, as they relate, Osiris came to Horus from the Other World and exercised and trained him for the battle.” ~Plutarch, Osiris and Isis.

To Pope Pius XII, “I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians.” ~Mahatma Gandhi

Philosophy is greater than religion when it comes to truth, "The true philosophy is of a quite different nature; it is a spring and principle of motion wherever it comes; it makes men active and industrious; it sets every wheel and faculty a-going; it stores our minds with axioms and rules by which to make a sound judgment; it determines the will to the choice of what is honorable and just; and it wings all our faculties to the swiftest prosecution of it. It is accompanied with an elevation of nobleness of mind, joined with a coolness and sweetness of behavior, and backed with a becoming assurance and inflexible resolution."
 ~Plutarch, Morals, Book II, p. 369.

"In this way we shall undertake to deal with the numerous and tiresome people, whether they be such as take pleasure in associating theological problems with the seasonal changes in the surrounding atmosphere, or with the growth of the crops and seed-times and plowing; and also those who say that Osiris is being buried at the time when the grain is sown and covered in the earth and that he comes to life and reappears when plants begin to sprout." ~Plutarch, Osiris and Isis.

One of the earliest known alchemists is a Jewish woman who was known as "Marie," who lived in Egypt about 100 C.E., who conducted experiments with mercury, silver-colored, and sulfur, whose yellowishness seemed interrelated to gold. In her work, Marie invented several devices for heating her ingredients, one of which is still used today, the double boiler, known in French as a Bain-Marie, or "Marie's bath."

Secret Book [Apocryphon] of James, Gospel of Mary Magdalene, Infancy of Jesus... "The method employed in these compositions is always the same, whether the author intended simply to collect and arrange what was floating in the general tradition, or whether he intended to produce a definite dogmatical effect. Rarely he threw himself on his own invention; but generally he elaborated what was only hinted at in the Canonical Gospels, or transcribed words of Jesus into action, or described the literal fulfillment of some Jewish expectation concerning the Messiah, or repeated the wonders of the Old Testament in an enhanced form, etc. The work done, he took care to conceal his own name, and inscribed his book with the name of some apostle or disciple, in order to give it authority." ~R. Hofmann, on the Apocryphal Gospels.

Thus, the Apocryphal Gospels often give details regarding those periods of Jesus' life about which the New Testament is prudently silent.

Of important concern is that none of the Gospels ever mention the devastating destruction and slaughter of the Jews of the Jewish temple in Jerusalem in 70 C.E., which was a momentous event, which leads many historians to believe that they were not written in the 1st century, as claimed. The gold in the Holy Temple was taken and melted down, and the historic stone walls, the Romans took apart, stone by stone, in order to steal the gold. This is significant because Jesus had prophesied concerning the temple when He said, "As for these things, which you are looking at, the days will come in which there will not be left one stone upon another, which will not be torn down ..." ~Luke 21:6, Matthew 24:1, and Mark 13:1. The Book of Acts also ignores this event.

End of the World: Rabbi Eliezer ben Hyrcanus [1st-2nd century] believed that the days of the Messiah would last 40 years. Before Bar Kochba the Messenger, man's lifespan was rather short, and longer afterward

AD 100-165-Justin of Caesarea, dies a martyr for his faith. Not known to have been a theologically trained or talented man, Justin failed to understand the Stoic or Pythagorean systems. "To your faith add knowledge." ~Saint Paul.

In Christianity, he found his calling. In his, "Apologiae," [AD 150-155] he argues that the Christians are simply following the Greek philosophy of Plato, who also maintained that there is also, only one God [Monotheism: a philosophy that has been followed by many freethinkers throughout history].

AD 100-170[?]-Ptolemy; astronomer and mathematician, whose theories on astronomy and the explanations of the orbits of the planets dominated scientific thinking until the 16th century [with the earth as the center of the Solar system], is also remembered for his contributions in the fields of mathematics, optics, and geography. Ptolemy's actual name, "Claudius Ptolemaeus," reflects that he may be of noble Roman background, while "Ptolemaeus" hints at Egyptian/Greek roots.

AD 100-165- Father Justin Martyr is a Gentile ex-Pagan of Samaria, turned Christian, and supposed to have suffered martyrdom in the reign of Marcus Aurelius, in whose name he forged a most preposterous rescript.

At a loss as to how to explain the multitude of similarities between the Pagan beliefs, and the Christian faith, Justin Martin describes the tradition of the Lord's Supper, as narrated in the Holy Gospels, but then he goes on to say, "Which the wicked Devils have imitated in the Mysteries of Mithra, commanding the same thing to be done. For, that bread and a cup of water are placed with certain incantations in the Mystic Rites of one who is being initiated you either know or can learn." ~Justin Martyr, quoted in Pagan & Christian Creeds: Their Origin and Meaning By Edward Carpenter, 1920.

His principal works, in Greek, are his two Apologies, the first addressed to the Emperor Antoninus Pius [whose reply he also forged], the second to "The sacred Senate" of Rome; his Dialogue with Trypho the Jew, and his Hortatory Address to the Greeks. He describes himself and fellow Christian Fathers as "We who formerly used magical arts." ~I Apology, Ch. xiv.

"The Church, including the Apostles themselves, was to be enlightened gradually as to the real import of the Master's teaching by the influence of the Spirit, and by the gradual course of Divine Providence. Especially is this true of His prophetic utterances, which offered glimpses of particular ends and under [Pagan] symbolic forms of the future of His Kingdom, the full meaning of which time alone could unveil."

Simon is worshiped as a god, "The evil spirits, not being satisfied with saying, before Christ's appearance, that those who were said to be sons of Jupiter were born of him, but after he appeared, ... And when they learned how He had been foretold by the prophets, put forward again other men, the Samaritans Simon and Menander, who did many mighty works by magic... And so greatly astonished the sacred Senate and people of the Romans that he was considered a god, and honored with a statue; ... Which statue was erected in the river Tiber, between the two bridges, and bore this inscription in the language of Rome: 'Simoni Deo Sancto' ... To Simon the Holy God." ~I Apology, chs. xxvi, lvi; Ante-Nicene Fathers, vol. i, 171, 182; cf. Iren. Adv. Haer. ch. xxiii; Ante-Nicene Fathers, i, 347-8; Euseb. HE. II, 13. Father Justin had convinced the Emperor of the fable of Simon Magus and his magical miracles in Rome, and attributes all of it to the work of devils.

Father Justin in many of his writings cites and appeals for his fellow Christians as substantiation to, "The Testimony of the Sibyl," of Homer, of Sophocles, of Pythagoras, and of the Greek Pagan, Plato. ~Add ad Grace. chs. 18-20; Ante-Nicene Fathers, i, 279-280.

Of the Sibyl, which Justin so often quotes, "And you may in part learn the right religion from the ancient Sibyl, who by some kind of potent inspiration teaches you, through her oracular predictions, truths which seem to be much akin to the teachings of the prophets. ... Ye men of Greece, ... Do ye henceforth give heed to the words of the Sibyl, ... Predicting, as she does in a clear and patent manner, the advent of our Savior Jesus Christ," Father Justin often quotes long verses of Christian fictitious nonsense which is plagiarized from Pagan gods. ~Ib. Chs. 37-38; Ante-Nicene Fathers, i, 288-289.

AD 105-115-Pope Saint Alexander I, is alleged to have introduced "Holy Water" [water mixed with salt] to purify the homes of the early Christians and protect them from evil spirits.

Again, the Holy Mother will borrow from her pagan sisters, "Every person, who came to the solemn sacrifices [of the ancient Greeks] was purified by water. To which end, at the entrance of the temples there was commonly placed a vessel of full of holy water." ~Potter.

How did this water get its Holiness? This water "... Was consecrated, by putting into it a 'burning torch' taken from the altar." ~Athenaeus. The burning torch is the express symbol of the 'God of Fire'; and by the light of this torch, so indispensable for consecrating "The Holy Water," we now see comes from the one immense part of the purifying virtue of "The water of the loud resounding sea," which is held to be so efficacious in purging away the guilt and stain of sins. "It is blessed on the eve of Pentecost, because it is the 'Holy Ghost' who gives to the waters of Baptism the power and efficacy of sanctifying our souls, and because the baptism of Christ is 'With the Holy Ghost, and with Fire.' In blessing the waters, a lighted torch is put into the font." ~Bishop Hay, see also Matthew 3:11.

The Pagan, Ovid sings, "From Greece the custom came, for Greece esteems those free from guilt who bathe in Sacred streams.' Bathing in the God, as it were, had regenerative properties. As even Church officers have allowed: 'John the Baptist simply adopted and practiced the universal custom of sacred bathing for the remission of sins. Christ sanctioned it, the Church inherited it.'" ~Rev. Lundy, J.P., as quoted in Bible Myths, The Pagan Saviours: Pagan Elements in Christian Ritual and Doctrine, 2000, Monograph Series No. 38.

Rome will keep alive the remembrance of the 'Fire-God' passing through the 'Holy Waters,' giving virtue to them, sanctifying the superstitious beliefs of its Pagan forefathers, so when it speaks of the "Holy Ghost suffering for us in baptism," it, in like manner commemorates that portion of Paganism, which is assigned to the Babylonian goddess when she also plunges into the cleansing waters [Venus Urania, or Dione, the

Heavenly Dove]

And even in ancient Mexico, we have Chalchivilycue, the "Goddess of the Waters," and "Mother" of all the 'Regenerated Souls,' represented as purging the 'New-born Infant from Original Sin,' and "Bringing it anew into the world," long before the advent of Christianity in their efforts to obtain substantial donations and gifts. ~On Original Sin, cf. Deuteronomy 24:16.

Lecky declared that Jonathan Edwards book on 'Original Sin' is "One of the most detestable books that have ever issued from the pen of man."

"Twice a year, in May and December, an image of the great God Huitzilopochtli was made of dough, then broken in pieces and solemnly eaten by his worshippers." ~Dr. James Frazer.

AD107- Saint Ignatius of Antioch is martyred in Rome. Ignatius is recorded as being the first writer ever to use the expression, "The Catholic Church."

AD 110-120-Redaction of Book of Luke & Acts [dated by Catholicism: 85 C.E.]

Seutonius writes that, "Penalties were imposed on the Christians, a kind of men [holding] a new superstition [that involved the practice] of magic." ~From the Jesus-People to Early Christianity 30-110 AD by Wim van den Dungen, Antwerp, 2010.

AD110-175-Valentinus, Saint Valentine, Egyptian poet and teacher to the Gnostic Christians, follower of Theodas, one of Paul's followers claiming to have access to Paul's esoteric writings and believer in the "Godhead," the Universal World Soul.

The Church manuscripts are not to be examined; only to be believed, for disgusting, impertinent, deceptive, and lecherous people composed the Church's early followers and leadership, "He [Celsus] was disgusted with their insistence upon Confession of Sin, and the pride, which they seemed to take in having no health in them; they spoke like worms in the mud... As a philosopher intent on the pursuit of Truth, he resented the Doctrine of Faith, which was offered, he thought, as an easy way to attain that, which the student gains with labor and difficulty; it puts the ignorant on an equality with the educated; it leads only to illusion."

"It cannot be doubted that all the explanations pretended to be made of the esoteric religion by Saint Jerome and the early Fathers are mere fables to deceive the vulgar. How absurd to suppose that when these men who were at the head of the religion were admitting that there was a secret religion for the initiated only, they would explain it to all the world! Their explanations to the vulgar are suitable to the vulgar, and were meant merely to stop their inquiries." ~Higgins, Anaclypsis, pg 647.

The Gnostics understood the world to be constituted of two realms. The imperfect world of reality made of flesh and carnal knowledge [senses] and the euphoric world that is the realm of God in which it can only be attained through knowledge of the heart and soul [spiritual] Man was once a spiritual being, who is now forced to live in a material world of sinfulness but through Gnosis [meaning: knowledge] man can realize redemption.

One serious flaw that can all too readily pour from the unending exercise of faith is that when not supported by factual data or of critical thinking, and knowledge, it exposes the person open to an excessive, and perilous expectancy, generating that of gullibility, "The primitive Christians perpetually trod on mystic ground, and their minds were exercised by the habits of believing the most extraordinary events. They felt, or they fancied, that on every side they were incessantly... Confronted by visions, instructed by prophecy and surprisingly delivered from danger, sickness and from death itself, by the supplications of the Church. The real or imaginary prodigies of which they so frequently conceived themselves to be the objects, the instruments or the spectators, very happily disposed them to adopt with the same ease... The [alleged] authentic wonders of the Evangelical history... It is this deep impression of supernatural truths, which has been so much celebrated under the name of faith; a state of mind described as the surest pledge of the Divine favor and of future felicity; and recommended as the first or perhaps the only merit of a Christian."

"The most extravagant legends, as they conduced to the honor of the Church, were apprehended by the credulous multitude, countenanced by the power of the clergy and attested by the suspicious evidence of Ecclesiastical history." ~Gibbon, Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire, p. 502.

Jesus is the provider of this secret knowledge. Valentinus believed the task of Jesus was to restore Sophia [Wisdom] to her status as part of the Universal Soul or Godhead. The Valentinians believed that there were thirty aeons (Ages), which included four pairings (Abys and Silence, Mind and Truth, Word and Life, and Man and Church). The belief that the pairs of aeons were of a sexual nature led to the libidinal celebrations which were held just prior to the Roman Fertility God, Lupercalia, festivities. This conflicted to condemnation from Clement of Alexandria, Irenaeus.

The customs associated with "Lover's Day," February 14th, may have had more to do with the customs of the Roman festival of the 'Lupercalia' than with Saint Valentine. The Valentinians, as Gnostics, were exterminated by the Christians by the 4th century.

They were noted in particular for their belief in "Free love" and liberal view of sexuality. The custom of choosing a lover on February 14th appears to have come from the Lupercalian ceremony of placing girls' names in a box from which boys drew their sweetheart for the following year.

During the middle ages, the church seeks to Christianize the custom by substituting Saints' names for those of the girls and encouraging the drawers to try to be like that Saint for the next year, but by the 16th century, this manipulation was discarded and girls names were once again selected from the box. This custom eventually gave way to the practice of sending cards to the object of one's affections.

"Letters of Ignatius," Bishop of Antioch, is martyred in Rome, his letters are caused to undergo to heavy Christian forgery esp. during the 4th century. ~Apostolic Fathers

AD112- Roman Emperor Trajan, in a rescript [official response] to Pliny the Younger, the Governor of Bithynia, instructs him not to search out Christians, but to punish them if they are publicly denounced and refuse to pay homage to the Roman gods. The rescript sets an example for future Roman magistrates in dealing with Christians.

AD114- 117- Pliny the Younger, Roman consul, records the Christian-Jews as "Singing hymns to Christ as to a God."

Jewish Revolt by a group called Zealots who want a country of their own free from political and religious rule from Non-Jews.

The two thieves [mentioned in the Gospels of Matthew, Mark, Luke and John] are NOT thieves, but Jewish Zealots who are crucified by the Romans. Zealots did not pay tribute [money] to the Romans, but use their money [tithes and offerings] to buy arms to overthrow their oppressors [Theft was not a crime punishable by death under Roman law].

"God loveth a cheerful giver," applies to the giving of the Word as well as to the giving of wealth [to the poor].

One is not to challenge these so-called pious leaders and writers of Church doctrines, "The Primitive Christians' were men whose ardor was fierce in proportion to their ignorance." ~Gerald Massey, Paul the Gnostic Opponent of Peter.

The Christian denunciation of their Jewish roots is pronounced in the Gospel of Saint Matthew in his diatribes against the Scribes and Pharisees. This anti-Semitic rhetoric may have been added later to the Gospel as it must be noted that Luke did not share this same anti-Jewish aspect. Lucius Mestrius Plutarchus was also known as "Luc," and he wrote Luke-Acts, and quite possibly Revelation, between 70 and 124 C.E.

The Gospel of John Davidson says, "Its existence [Gospel According to Luke] before 140 C.E., is incapable either of decisive or probable showing... The Johannine authorship has receded before the tide of modern criticism; and though this tide is arbitrary at times, it is here irresistible." ~cf. Davidson's Canon, 127.

It was quite common to write under an alias in these hard times, "There is [Luc] within a person of [Luke], and it shines on the whole world. If it does not shine, it is dark." ~Judas Didymos Thomas, Word Pictures in the New Testament - Luke by A. T. Robertson, 1863-1934.

"The actual historical legend of the Johannites is based on the Talmudic account of Jesus Ben Pandera. Supposedly Jesus was born illegitimately to Miriam, adopted by a Rabbi named Joseph who took him to Egypt. There he was initiated into the Mysteries of Osiris and consecrated Sovereign-Pontiff before returning to Judaea." ~Kenneth Mackenzie, The Royal Masonic Cyclopaedia.

Millions will be sacrificed upon the altars of superstitious ignorance and bigotry as the Catholics will murder the Jews, the Lutherans will kill Catholics, the Catholics will slaughter the Muslims, the Episcopalians torture the Presbyterians, the Presbyterians maim the Episcopalians, the Catholics kill the Protestants, and the Muslims kill the Catholics. All these denominations will kill in the name of God, all it could of every other; and each feels duty bound to exterminate every other religious group that denies the smallest fraction of its creed.

The fanatical religious groups existing today are fashioned by intolerance, bigotry, ignorance, tyranny and hypocrisy, working under the belief that the infinite ruler and creator of the universe commanded the destruction of heretics and infidels, these groups attempt to justify the atrocities committed upon others. The Churches will destroy honesty and reward Christian hypocrisy. "If the evidence supports the historical accuracy of the Gospels, where is the need for faith? And if the historical reliability of the Gospels is so obvious, why have so many scholars failed to appreciate the incontestable nature of the evidence?" ~Robert W. Funk, Honest to Jesus, San Francisco: Polebridge Press, 1996, p. 50.

"By the efforts of these infidels, the name of God was left out of the Constitution of the United States. They knew that if an infinite being was put in, no room would be left for the people. They knew that if any Church was made the mistress of the state, that mistress, like all others, would corrupt, weaken, and destroy." ~Ingersoll's Works, Vol. 3, p. 382.

"Thou didst create the earth after thy heart, being alone, even all men, herds and flocks, whatever is upon earth, creatures that walk upon feet, which soar aloft flying with their wings, the countries of Khor [Palestine and Syria] and of Kush, and the land of Egypt. Thou settest every man in his place, and makest their sustenance, each one possessing his food, and his term of life counted; tongues made diverse in speech and their character likewise; their complexions distinguished country and country."

~Akhenaton's Great Hymn To Aton as rendered by Sir Alan Gardiner in: Egypt of the Pharaohs, Oxford 1961, p.225f; cfpsalm 104.

AD115-The early Christian-Jews were persecuted as an offshoot Jewish sect. Suetonius, Historian to the Imperial Court, in referring to the early Christians writes, "...Or they were fastened on crosses, and, when daylight failed, were burned to serve as torches by night."

The early Christians were persecuted as a group that followed the ways of a man accused of magic, thought of as troublemakers, denying Roman Gods their respect, and executed for treason. In the Christian congregations of the first two centuries, the variety of rites and creeds was almost as great as in the mystery communities, which they replaced; few of the early Christian congregations could have been called orthodox according to present standards.

The calendar date of 25 December was most likely purposely fixed on this date to relegate into the background the illustrious festival of the 'Sun god,' and Epiphany on January 6th to supplant an Egyptian festival of similar savor, and in essence the Easter ceremonies would also rival the Pagan spring festivals. The religious art of the Christians would continue to perpetuate the pagan art of the preceding generations, as the Christian representations of the Madonna and child are distinctly the continuation of the representations of Isis and her son suckling her breast.

The Bible speaks poorly of women with small breasts [flat-chested], "We have a little sister, and she hath no breasts: what shall we do for our sister in the day when she shall be spoken for? If she be a wall, we will build upon her a palace of silver: and if she be a door, we will inclose her with boards of cedar." ~Solomon's Song 8:8.

The statue of the 'Good Shepherd' carrying his lost sheep and the pastoral themes on Christian sarcophagi were also assumed from Pagan manufacture in the Roman Mithra tradition. The early Church Fathers tended to favor the Mithraic winter-solstice festival called 'Dies Natalis Solis Invictus,' or 'Birthday of the Unconquered Sun,' blended with the a potpourri of Greek 'Sun-God' festivals of their Helia by the Emperor Aurelian; thus the December 25 nativity also honored such gods as Attis, Dionysus, Osiris, Syrian Baal, and other versions of the 'Solar Son of Man' who bore such titles as 'Light of the World,' 'Sun of Righteousness' and 'Savior.'

"India, even to this day, as Isi and Iswara; in Asia, as Cybele and Deoius; in Pagan Rome, as Fortuna and Jupiter-puer, or Jupiter, the boy; in Greece, as Ceres, the Great Mother, with the babe at her breast, or as Irene, the goddess of Peace, with the boy Plutus in her arms; and even in Thibet, in China, and Japan, the Jesuit missionaries were astonished to find the counterpart of Madonna and her child as devoutly worshipped as in Papal Rome itself; Shing Moo, the Holy Mother in China, being represented with a child in her arms, and a glory around her, exactly as if a Roman Catholic artist had been employed to set her up.” ~The Madonna is portrayed in various cultures, prior to the birth of Jesus, from The Two Babylons by the Late Rev. Alexander Hislop.

AD 115(?)-125(?) - Pope Saint Sixtus, also spelled Xystus. According to the “Liber Pontificalis” (ed. Duchesne, I, 128), he passed the following three ordinances:

- ✠ That none but sacred ministers are allowed to touch the sacred vessels.
- ✠ That Bishops who have been summoned to the Holy See shall, upon their return, not be received by their diocese except on presenting Apostolic letters.
- ✠ That after the Preface in the Mass the priest shall recite the Sanctus with the people. ~Acta SS., April, I, 531-4; Liber Pontificalis, ed. Duchesne, I (Paris, 1886), 128; Marini, Cenni storici popolari sopra S. Sisto I, papa e martire, e suo culto in Aletri (Foligno, 1884); De Persiis, Del pontificato di S. Sisto I, papa e martire, della traslazione delle sue reliquie da Roma ecc., memorie (Alatri, 1884); BARMBY in *Dict. Christ. The Roman Church uses forged documents to enhance its status, “In the ‘Liber Pontificalis’ it is recorded that such a Pope issued a decree that has been lost, or mislaid, or perhaps never existed at all. Isidore seized the opportunity to supply a ‘Pontifical letter’ suitable for the occasion, attributing it to the Pope whose name was mentioned in the ‘Liber.’” ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 5, pg. 774.

End of the World: Prophets and Prophetesses of the Montanist movement predict that Jesus will return soon; sometime during their lifetime and establish the New Jerusalem in the city of Pepuza in Asia Minor.

Deception is the basis of many faiths that claim to help mankind; the “Isidorian Decretals is the name given to certain apocryphal letters contained in a collection of canon laws composed about the middle of the 9th century... Nowadays every one agrees that these so-called Papal Letters are forgeries. These documents, about 100 in number, appeared suddenly in the 9th century and are nowhere mentioned before that time... He pseudo-Isidore makes use of documents written long after the times of the Popes to whom he attributed them. The Popes of the first three centuries are made to quote documents that did not appear until the 4th or 5th century, etc. Then again there are endless anachronisms. The Middle-Ages were deceived by this huge forgery, but during the Renaissance men of learning and the canonists generally began to recognize the fraud... Nevertheless the official edition of the ‘Corpus Juris,’ in 1580, upheld the genuineness of the False Decretals.” ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 6, 773.

AD 116(?)-150(?) -Valentinus, a Gnostic who believed that the Old Testament God was evil and Jesus is born to bring redeeming knowledge to the human soul. “If all the Old Testament influences were to be removed from the New Testament, the latter would in many areas consist little but meaningless shreds. Where the Old Testament is not actually quoted, its content and ideas provide subject matter and structure for the Christian author.” ~rom: 1506.

AD -117 (?)-Bishop Ignatius of Antioch, Syria, defends the hierarchal system of the Church being of three ranks: bishop, priest, and deacons, the same as the divine hierarchy in Heaven. As there is only one God in heaven, so there can only be one bishop over the priests. Saint Ignatius speaks of the heretics plaguing the Church, “They abstain from the Eucharist because they do not confess the Eucharist is the flesh of our Savior, Jesus.”

Eighteen hundred years ago, there were those who denounced the words of the Church and its sacraments, reaching from its continuation of the old pagan tradition, when the priests of Isis or Mithra once impressed their followers with the burning of candles to represent the spirit and the sacrament, representing the body of their Savior. Indeed it goes back to the sacrifices in the Jewish temple, the pageants on the great festivals of ancient Egypt, even to the ancient mysteries performed at the summit of lofty pyramid temples in ancient Babylon and Assyria where the crowd stood in awe in the solemn court yard.

Ignatius espouses the supreme rule of the council of priests by one Bishop who is to be obeyed as if he were God. He is later condemned to death by Roman officials who see this as evidence of treason against Rome. Politics and religion have formed an inseparable unity that will vie for complete control of the people for purposes of taxation.

Centuries later this will cause a Great Schism from within the ranks of the clergy. “I have no taste for corruptible food nor for the pleasures of this life. I desire the bread of God, which is the flesh of Jesus Christ, who was of the seed of David; and for drink I desire His blood, which is love incorruptible.” ~Saint Ignatius of Antioch, Epistle to the Romans, 105 A.D.

To Pope Pius XII, “I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians.” ~Mahatma Gandhi

Tacitus writes about the Christians, "This superstitious sect." ~Ibid.

The early Christians were a superstitious lot, not trusting the educated, and, since the disciples of Jesus were of the poor ignorant masses, they also were not trusted, nor looked upon with favor. In order to justify the writings of the Gospels of Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John, Christian apologists have resorted to having them tell of their accounts to scribes who wrote them down for time immemorial. Unfortunately the caste system, which existed during this time did not allow the co-mingling of the upper and lower classes, "Scotus Erigena indeed took good care to emphasize the difference between his theology, which was, he said, 'Vera theologia,' as well as 'Vera philosophia,' and the popular beliefs. As a matter of fact, the doctors who join with Gottschalk, Rabanus Maurus and Hincmar in the dispute over predestination or the effects of the consecration of the Eucharist, take no interest in the ordinary believers, nor do these ordinary believers take any interest in them. And although this aristocratic isolation of Christian thinkers with regard to the mass of Christians is nothing new, it is none the less disturbing. Not only will it favor the theological virtuosity, which plays with empty words and juggles with abstract ideas so remote from all religious experience and concrete reality, that it is so much lost time, but it will also turn the 'Intellectuals' of the Church aside from their real duty, which is to instruct and enlighten the ignorant, to safeguard them from themselves and the suggestions of their milieu, and to make them better people." ~Guignebert, Christianity Past and Present, p. 220. cf. Acts 4:13.

"Heretics abstain from the Eucharist and from prayer, because they do not confess that the Eucharist is the Flesh of our Savior Jesus Christ." ~Saint Ignatius of Antioch, Epistle to the Smyrneans, 105 A.D.

Saint Ignatius, the Bishop of Antioch, born in Syria, c. 50(?), died rather latitudinously [with extremely broad and liberal religious views], "Between 98 and 117 C.E."

More than one of the early ecclesiastical writers has given credence, though apparently without good reason to believe, in the legend that Ignatius was the child whom the Savior took up in his arms, as described in Mark. ~See Mark 9:35, Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 7, 644.

"If we include Saint Peter, Saint Ignatius was the 3rd Bishop of Antioch," ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 7, 644, The Sainly Fathers of the Faith by Joseph Wheless.

The Church wants its members to attend regular masses so that it may accumulate some of their financial wealth, "He, therefore, who does not assemble with the Church, has even by this displayed his pride, and he has condemned himself." ~Saint Ignatius of Antioch in Epistle to the Ephesians, 105 C.E.

The priests will vie with each other to accumulate such great wealth through deceit and corruption that the Pontifical hierarchy becomes jealous as the booty is not passed on to Rome, which later causes the Popes to declare celibacy in order to keep the riches within the Church and not be passed on to the heirs of the priests.

Saint Ignatius is the subject of extensive Catholic forgeries; fifteen Epistles bear the name of Ignatius, including one to the Virgin Mary, and her reply; two to the Apostle John, others to the Philippian, Tarsians, Antiocheans, Ephesians, Magnesians, Trallians, Romans, Philadelphians, Smyrneans, and to Polycarp, besides a forged Martyrium; the clerical forgers were very active with the name of Saint Ignatius. Of these, eight Epistles and the Martyrium are confessedly forgeries; "They are by common consent set aside as forgeries, which were at various dates and to serve special purposes, put forth under the name of the celebrated Bishop of Antioch." ~Ante-Nicene Fathers, vol. i, 46; E. vii, 645.

Note: Jesus, John the Baptist, and Paul were virgins. ~1 Corinthians 7.

"If the Martyrium is genuine, this work has been greatly interpolated." As to the seven, assumed by many Catholics to be genuine, "Even the genuine Epistles were greatly interpolated [to alter or corrupt by inserting new or foreign material] to lend weight to the personal views of its author. For this reason they are incapable of bearing witness to the original form." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 7, 645.

The authenticity of the "Genuine Seven" was zealously disputed for several centuries within the Catholic Church.

"Perhaps the best evidence for their authenticity is to be found in the letter of Polycarp to the Philippian, which mentions each of them by name ... unless, indeed, that of Polycarp itself be regarded as interpolated or forged." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 7, pg. 646.

In one of the earliest Encyclicals, which is not issued by a Pope, the astounding tale is told, “The Church of God which sojourns at Smyrna, to the Church of God sojourning in Philomelium, and to all the congregations of the Holy and Catholic [first use of this historical term] Church in every place,” and the Church Fathers proceeds in glowing words to recount the virtues, capture, trial and condemnation to death by fire, of the Holy Saint Polycarp, who, just before his capture, Polycarp dreamed that his pillow was afire; he exclaimed to those around, “Prophetically, I am to be burned alive.”

The forged and fabling Epistle proceeds, “Now, as Polycarp was entering into the stadium, there came to him a voice from heaven, saying, ‘Be strong, and show thyself a man, O Polycarp.’ No one saw who it was that spoke to him; but those of our brethren who were present heard the voice.” ~Forgery in Christianity by Joseph Wheless, 1930, from the Bank of Wisdom.

The Church gives exalted details of Saint Polycarp’s trial before the magistrates, and a verbatim report of his plea when led to his fiery fate: “When he had pronounced this ‘Amen,’ and so finished his prayer, those who were appointed for the purpose kindled the fire. And, as the flame blazed forth in great fury, we, to whom it was given to witness it, beheld a great miracle, and have been preserved that we might report to others what then took place. For the fire, shaping itself into the form of an archism, like the sail of a ship when filled with the wind, encompassed as by a circle of fire the body of the martyr. And he appeared within not like flesh which is burnt, but as bread that is baked, or as gold and silver glowing in a furnace. Moreover, we perceived such a sweet odor [coming from the pile], as if frankincense or some such precious spices had been smoking there. At length, when those wicked men perceived that his body could not be consumed by the fire, they commanded an executioner to go near and pierce him through with a dagger. And on his doing this, there came forth a dove, and a great quantity of blood, so that the fire was extinguished!” ~From Letter of the Church at Smyrna, Ante-Nicene Fathers, vol. i. 39-44; Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 12, 221.

And, even this Holy Encyclical is not without some suspicion, “The possibility remains that the subscription was tampered with by a later hand. But 155 must be approximately correct.” ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 12, pg. 221.

And the truth, which has been abysmally abused through the centuries, takes a step backward as the Church continues to propagate its own version of the history of Saint Polycarp and Saint Ignatius; Cardinal Newman, “The whole system of Catholic Doctrine may be discovered, at least in outline, not to say in parts filled up, in the course of his seven Epistles.” ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 7, pg. 646.

The forged Epistles include all the religious impossibilities of the new Catholicism for that period, of the collaborated hierarchy of the Imperial Church as having been instituted by the humble Nazarene, who was to “Come again” and put an end to all earthly things within his generation; the “Infallibility of the Church,” the ‘Supernatural Virtue’ of ‘Perpetual Virginity,’ and the ‘Primacy of the Holy See of Rome,’ at the supposed time of Saint Ignatius, and least, but not least those diminutive over zealous hordes of nondescript monks who burrowed into the hidden Catacombs of Imperial Rome to provide all that was asked, for a few pieces of silver, to the detriment of the ignorant masses!

In Christianity, virgins are the preferred manner of life for women, “I say to the unmarried and to the widows: It is good for them if they so continue, even as I.. He that gives his virgin in marriage does well; and he that gives her not does better.” ~1 Corinthians 7:8,38.

Of course, the astute Christian will quickly recognize the dichotomy in the Old Testament as Gods speaks, “Be fruitful and multiply, and fill the earth.” ~Genesis 1:28.

Father Saint Ignatius does not write anything authentic, yet he escapes the self-condemnation of the other Apostolic Fathers who are protected by their religion, but betrayed by the truth, which is forbidden in Catholicism via their ‘Cathecism.’

“The Dogma of the infallibility of the Bible is no more self-evident than is that of the infallibility of the Pope...Rome is the one great spiritual organization which is able to resist - and must, as a matter of life and death - the progress of science and modern civilization.” ~Thomas Huxley.

AD 117-138(?)- Persecution under Hadrian with many Acts of Martyrs date from this period.

AD 125- Christian Apologists' writings against Roman Paganism by Quadratus, in Apostolic Fathers collection. The spread of Gnosticism is due to a combination of elements of Platonic philosophy and

To Pope Pius XII, “I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians.” ~Mahatma Gandhi

Eastern mystery religions. Its adherents claimed that its secret-knowledge principle provided a deeper insight into Christian doctrine than Divine Revelation and faith. Gnostic beliefs deny the divinity of Christ; others deny the reality of his humanity, calling it mere appearance [Docetism, Phantasiasm].

AD 127-42 Ptolemy, an astronomer, geographer, and mathematician thrives in Alexandria, Egypt. His earth-centered model of the universe held the field until 1542, when Copernicus supplies a solar-centered model.

Ptolemy's estimate of the earth's circumference is only 30 percent below the actual value. Ptolemy teaches that the earth is flat and that the celestial bodies revolve around the earth. This is in contradiction to another Greek, Aristarchus, who preached that the world was round in BC 310 and the earth revolved around the sun. The Church takes up the position of Ptolemy and condemns as heresy anyone who advocates otherwise.

Remember, many clergy are illiterate, as well as superstitious. In their arrogance, they despise all those who dare challenge their authority and decisions regarding any matter. It is not until the renaissance period that individuals as well as groups finally take up the cause against the corrupt Church Officials. Celsus is considered a serious philosopher, a conservative person, who resented the disputation of Christianity, but all that remains of the writings are those of Celsus, which are contained in quotations, which Origen made for the purpose of refuting the Christian authority figures, "Certain most impious errors are committed by them," says Celsus, "Due to their extreme ignorance, in which they have wandered away from the meaning of the Divine enigmas." ~Origen, Con. Celsum, Ch. VI.

Ignorance is truly bliss, and no better place to begin could be found than in a passage from Saint Chrysostom as he glories in the ignorance of the Twelve Apostles, so often lauded as plain fishermen, and the more glorious for it, "Rather, let us charge the Apostles with want of learning; for this same charge is praise. And when they say that the apostles were rude, let us follow up the remark and say that they were also untaught and unlettered and poor and vile and stupid and obscure. It is not slander on the Apostles to say so, but it is even a glory that, being such, they should have outshone the whole world." ~Saint John Chrysostom [The Golden Mouthed], Homily III on I Corinthians, 1:10, cf. Acts 4:13.

The Jewish revolt against the harsh decrees of the Romans grows. Under Shimon Bar Kochba [Bar Kochba], the Jews eventually recapture Jerusalem, declare it a free city, and mint coins for their new state. Rabbi Akiva declares that Bar Kochba is the Mashiach.

AD 129- More than once Galen, 129-199 C.E., describes with great indignation how the medical works by both Hippocrates, 460-377 B.C.E., and himself have been corrupted by the interpolations [Minute Forgeries] of unscrupulous and uncritical editors. Because of the production and sale of forgeries of works under his name, Galen drew up a little tract entitled On His Own Books.

AD 130- Barnabas [Son of Encouragement] is a Levite Jew, a disciple, previously known as Joseph [Acts 4:36] who is also a friend of Paul [Saul of Taurus]. They differ over Mark traveling with them and later on have differences as to interpretation over Scriptures [see The Gospel of Barnabas]. ~Gospel of Barnabas, 13 C.E. Saint Barnabas is a self-styled Apostle, and variously a Bishop, of which, "Though nothing is recorded of Barnabas for some years, he evidently acquired a high position in the Church," for "A rather late tradition recorded by Clement of Alexandria and Eusebius [over 200 years later], says he was one of the Seventy Disciples; but Acts 4:36-37," indicates the quite the contrary, "Various traditions represent him as the first Bishop of Milan, as preaching at Alexandria and at Rome, whose fourth Bishop, Saint Clement, he is said to have converted, and as having suffered martyrdom in Cyprus. The traditions are all late and untrustworthy. He is credited by Tertullian [most likely fabricated] with the authorship of the Epistle to the Hebrews, and the so-called Epistle attributed to him." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 2, 300, 301.

Saint Barnabas, or his monk scribe and counterfeiter, had bizarre notions of natural history. Expounding the reasons why Moses banned certain animals as "Unclean" and unfit for "Kosher" food, the Sainly writer says, that Moses banned the hare [rabbit], "Because the hare multiplies, year by year, the places of its conception; for as many years as it lives, so many it has;" and the hyena, "Wherefore? Because that animal annually changes its sex, and is at one time male, and at another female;" and the weasel, "For this animal conceives by the mouth." ~See Epistle of Barnabas, Ch. 10, Ante-Nicene Fathers vol. i, 143.

Superstitions pervade Christian thinking, "The male hyena after seven years becomes a bat; that bat after seven years becomes a vampire; the vampire after seven years becomes a nettle; the nettle after seven years becomes a thorn; the thorn after seven years becomes a demon.” ~Everyman's Talmud p. 261.

Vampires also occurred in ancient China, where the monsters were called “Kiang shi.” In ancient India and Nepal, vampires may also have existed, at least in legend. Ancient paintings on the walls of caves depict blood drinking creatures; the Nepalese “Lord of Death” is depicted holding a blood-filled goblet in the form of a human skull standing in a pool of blood. Some of these wall paintings are as old as 3000 B.C.E., it is believed. Rakshasas are described in the ancient Indian Holy writings called the Vedas. These writings [1500 B.C.E.] depict the Rakshasas [destroyers] as vampires. There is also a monster in ancient India's lore, which hangs from a tree upside-down, not unlike a bat, and is devoid of its own blood. This creature, called “Baital,” is, in legend, a vampire. Malaysians also believed in a type of vampire called the “Penanggalan.” This creature consisted of a human head with entrails that left its body and searched for the blood of others, especially of infants. The creature lived by drinking the victims' blood. ~Vampires: The Mythological Neck Sucking Vampire

The known prevaricator, Papias of Hieropolis [Asia Minor], introduces Mark as the author of the first Gospel, and defines him as the commentator of Peter.

“To these belong his [Papias] statement that there will be a period of some thousand years after the Resurrection of the dead, and that the Kingdom of Christ will be setup in material form on this very earth. I suppose he got these ideas through a misunderstanding of the apostolic accounts, not perceiving that the things said by them were spoken mystically in figures.” ~Church History, Book III, Catholic Encyclopedia, From Nicene and Post-Nicene Fathers, Second Series, Vol. 1. Chapter 39, The Writings of Papias. Verse 39.

The followers of Paul were primarily “God fearers,” uncircumcised Romans who believed in Paul's Jewish teachings, or Diaspora Jews [from the Greek, 'Dispersion,' meaning the Jewish community residing outside of Israel]. The Jews outside of Israel considered themselves in exile [Hebrew: 'Galu']. “Fear believes; courage doubts. Fear falls upon the earth and prays; courage stands erect and thinks. Fear is barbarism; courage is civilization. Fear believes in witchcraft, in devils and in ghosts. Fear is religion, courage is science.” ~Robert G. Ingersoll.

The Jewish Diaspora begins with the exile of Judeans to Babylonia by Nebuchadnezzar in 586 B.C.E. Paul believes that his teachings should be accessible to the “Goyim” [non-Jews] even though they did not follow the strict tenets of the Laws of Moses.

Paul never calls Jesus, “God,” but the “Son of God,” believing that Jesus was not God, but possessed extraordinary powers and the “Spirit of God.”

The Gentiles were not always able to differentiate the subtle differentiations of God, his powers, his spirit, or, his essence.

The Christian dogma of the “Incarnation of Jesus: God in Human form,” was appalling to the Jews, the Jews believing he may have had some powers, but that they did not identify Jesus as the “Divine Essence.” Muslims will also find this blasphemous as Jesus is seen as a Great Prophet and not as the Divine God. Paul did not accept nor preach the concept of Jesus being a second being, next to God, for infinity. Jesus is presented as, distinct from and inferior to God.

Aramaic translations [the native tongue of Jesus] of Hebrew Scriptures are known as the “Targums,” which were being accumulated at the time, and the word “Memra” is used to describe the activities of God. A distinction is made between God's presence and the incomprehensible reality of God in the western churches, “Atonement” for the sins of Adam, “Original Sin,” will not emerge until the 4th century [Atonement is the punishment of sin and the promises of God by the incarnation and death of Jesus Christ]. Man is responsible for his own sins. ~Deuteronomy 24:16, Ezekiel 18:20, Jeremiah 31:30, Psalms 40:6, Isaiah 1:11, Micah 6:7-8, Matthew 9:13, 12:7.

The obedience of Christ to God, and in his death, on behalf of sinners, as the grounds for redemption and the sacrificial work of Christ for sinners is the theology of many Christian religions including most Universalists and Unitarians, atonement signifies the act of conveying the people to God, in contradistinction to the idea of merging an offended God to his creation. “As of the theology that is now studied in its place, it is the study of human opinions and of human fancies concerning God. It is not the study of God Himself in the works that He has made, but in the works or writings that man has made; and it is not among the least of the mischiefs that the Christian system has done to the world, that it has abandoned the original and beautiful system of theology, like a beautiful innocent, to distress and reproach, to make room for the hag of superstition.” ~Thomas Paine, Age of Reason, Note Paine's two-fold characterization of God: Power

The most repellent consequence of the characteristic doctrines introduced by the Christian religion is that young children, even babies, were condemned to Eternal Hell because they inherited Adam's sin [A fabrication of the Church in order to force its members to attend and donate to the Church, as original sin is not in the Bible or any other Scriptural work], this interpretation virtually bounds the Christians from cradle to grave in religious ceremonies executed to bring about Salvation.

NO CHILDREN: NO SEX: Jesus says of marriage, "But if they choose not to bear children, then let them remain chaste and pure and not defile their flesh with hot passions like burning fire as the lawless nations do. For the chaste life is pure and holy and is blessed among mankind." ~The Essene Humane Gospel of Jesus, Translated From The Original Hebrew And Aramaic Texts, Typesetting by: Followers of the Essene Way [FE.W.]

"How can you say, 'We are wise, and the law of the Lord is with us?' But, behold, the false pen of the scribes has made it into a lie." ~Jeremiah 8:8.

"There is no greater crime in the cosmos than to deliberately indoctrinate young trusting minds with false teachings for selfish ends. From this one heinous crime stems all crime. The perpetrators of this evil deed will pay a terrible price in mental remorse when they pass from this world." ~A History of

A special tax is levied on the already suffering Jews to pay for the upkeep of the Pagan temple of Jupiter Capitolinus.

In America, even in modern times, preachers in the backward agricultural districts notoriously cause terrible distress to mothers by insisting on various unfounded superstitions. In the Catholic Church the Original Horror is softened in two ways: children are Baptized and relieved of the terrible legacy a few days after birth, and the mediaeval theologians discovered that there was an annex of the nether regions, Limbo, with a more temperate climate to which the un-baptized infant could be sent [Again not included in Biblical works, but whose creations serves the ideological purposes of the Church].

As the dogma of Original Sin is not yet formulated into Christianity's stark barbarism until the time of Saint Augustine, AD 354-430, the so-called "Genius" of the Latin Church, this consequence is not at first felt; though the doctrine that any person who, "Committed a grave sin after Baptism was inexorably condemned to Hell," is brutal enough.

Here is the earliest development of the Christian Hell of Eternal Fire and brimstone for Everlasting torture and damnation, "The wicked shall go down into the Sheol of darkness and fire and dwell there forever;" this being, "One of the earliest mentions of Sheol as a Hell of torment." ~Catholic Encyclopedia. i, 602-3; Encyclopedia Britannica, vol. i, 223-5.

Baptism is on this account at first confined to adults, but an agitation for the Baptism of children did not begin until about the end of the 2nd century, and the repulsive teachings of Saint Augustine on their 'Inherited Guilt' eventually made it a general practice.

The Pelagians, whose idea was later taken up by the Schoolmen in modified form, said that un-baptized children could not go to heaven, but were not unhappy. Saint Augustine, Sermon 294, etc., dourly fought them, and has 'Infant Damnation' imposed upon the Church. ~For later developments see Dr. G. G. Coulton's, Infant Perdition in the Middle Ages, 1922, and -J. McCabe, Rationalists Encyclopaedia.

The phrase 'Baptized in the name of Jesus' is Luke's way to differentiate Christian Baptism from the other Baptisms of the period, such as John's Baptism, Jewish proselyte Baptism, and the baptisms of Pagan cults [Mithraism], [Trinitarian Baptism]. Baptism is distinguished elsewhere in ancient Christian narratives by being described as "In the name of Jesus Christ, our Lord, and Savior" as opposed to the "Baptism of John," etc. ~Jesus Name Baptism(?) Acts 2:38, 3:6, 4:18, 5:40, 9:27-28, 16:18; cf. those which Luke mentions in Acts 1:5, 22, 10:37, 11:16, 13:24, 18:25, 19:4.

What better way to increase membership than by guilt and fear by condemning one's children to eternal damnation? "When Pelagianism laid down the doctrine that man could attain a state of perfect sanctification, it affirmed also that the merits of saints and martyrs might be applied to the Church. A peculiar power was attributed to their intercession. Prayers were made to them; their aid was invoked in all the sorrows of life; and a real idolatry thus supplanted the adoration of the living and true God." ~J.H. Merle D'aubigne, History of the Reformation of the Sixteenth Century, 1848.

Saint Augustine, Bishop of Hippo was well acquainted with various Jewish Christian groups as late as 400

C.E. In Antioch, "The Synagogue on Saturday, the Church on Sunday," was a familiar summary of practice. John Chrysostom lamented the fact that some Catholics had begun to observe the Jewish Holy days and Sabbath, and admitted that many had high regard for the Jews and believed that their way of life was Holy.

The Church will retain the Latin services in that it is part of the accouterments that makes a separate and very superior caste of the priests. As in the black cassock or black suit, the reversed collar, the shaven poll which he is supposed to have, the incongruous title of "Father" for a man who professes to think paternity a weakness of the flesh, the ancient Roman garb he wears at the altar, the dividing sanctuary line, the 'Blessing,' which a good Catholic, on his or her knees, is supposed to ask when he enters a house, and so on, it marks him off as a member of a sacred caste.

"Christian Apologists" writings against Roman Paganism by: Justin Martyr, 165 C.E.; Athenagoras, 180(?); Aristides, 145(?); Theophilus of Antioch, 185(?); Tatian, 110-170; Quadratus, 130(?); Melito of Sardis, 180(?); Apollinaris of Hierapolis, 180(?); also Epistle to Diognetus in Apostolic Fathers. Taitan, about 172 C.E., composed the DiateSSaron [the Gospel harmony upon which Ephrem was commenting], on the basis of the Gospel texts current then. And this citation agrees precisely with Justin's, allowing for the differences in Syriac and Greek. We now have two independent sources, which show that the 2nd century manuscripts of this Gospel verse differ from what is written today.

Theophilus of Antioch is the first writer known to have used the term Trinity to describe the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit [180's C.E.] Like Saint Augustine, who follows, many early Christians will soon associate sex with sin, "Tatian, who maintaining the imaginary flesh of Christ, pronounces all sexual connection impure, [and] who was also the very violent heresiarch of the Encratites." ~Saint Jerome, Commentary on Galatians; English translation from the Nicene Fathers series.

Tatian is charged with having condemned marriage as a corruption and denied that Adam was ever saved, because Paul says, "We all die in Adam." He was an independent, vigorous and earnest man, but restless, austere, and sarcastic. ~History of the Christian Church: Chapter XIII: Ecclesiastical Literature of the Ante-Nicene Age, and Biographical Sketches of the Church-Fathers.

"We do not act as fools, O Greeks, nor utter idle tales, when we announce that God was born in the form of a man." ~Tatian in History of the Christian Church: Chapter XXI: Ecclesiastical Literature of the Ante-Nicene Age, and Biographical Sketches of the Church-Fathers.

Saint Jerome is said to have assiduously maintained his own personal scriptorium and staff of scribes, allegedly [falsely, because the Church had already influenced his thinking and his altered translations reflect this] transmitting his personal procedure to Saint Irenaeus, d.202, which is why Christian writers claim that their Scriptures are accurate, "You who will transcribe this book, I charge you, in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ and of His glorious Second Coming, in which He will come to judge the living and dead, compare what you have copied against the original and correct it carefully. Furthermore, transcribe this adjuration and place it in the copy." ~Saint Jerome, De Viris illustribus, 35.

The success of Tatian's DiateSSaron is "... A powerful indication that the fourfold Gospel contemporaneously sponsored by [Bishop] Irenaeus was not broadly, let alone universally, recognized." ~McDonald & Sanders, The Canon Debate, 2002, page 280.

Aquila produces a new, very literal Greek translation of the Old Testament. Aquila was a disciple of the Rabbi Akiba and a proselyte to Judaism. The purpose of his translation is to supplant the Septuagint. ~Note: Rabbi Akiba supported Bar-Cocheba, believing that he fulfilled Messianic prophecies.

End of the World: Rabbi Jose, the Galilean, a contemporary of Hyrcanus and Azariah, believes that the Messiah will come within three generations [60 years], after the destruction; namely 130 years. ~See Luther Martin, Date Setters, Guardian of Truth, Sept. 15, 1994.

AD132-35-The Bar Kokhba Revolt, 132-35, creates a large fissure between Judaism and the new Jewish Christians. Simon bar Kokhba is recognized as the Jewish Messiah by Rabbi Akiva, and the Christian-Jews, believing Jesus to be their Messiah, reject Bar Kokhba and refuse to join the revolt. The revolution turns against the Jewish Christians and some are killed. Jews and Jewish Christians are now barred from entry into Jerusalem, leaving the church in Jerusalem without a Jewish identity.

"The Ebionite Christians [...] believed that Jesus was the Jewish Messiah sent from the Jewish God to the Jewish people in fulfillment of the Jewish Scriptures. They also believed that to belong to the people of God, one needed to be Jewish. As a result, they insisted on observing the Sabbath, keeping kosher, and circumcising all males. [...] An early source, Irenaeus, also reports that the Ebionites continued to reverence Jerusalem, evidently by praying in its direction during their daily acts of worship. Their insistence on staying [or becoming] Jewish should not seem especially peculiar from a historical perspective, since Jesus and His disciples were Jewish. But the Ebionites' Jewishness did not endear them to most other Christians, who believed that Jesus allowed them to bypass the requirements of the Law for Salvation. The Ebionites, however, maintained that their views were authorized by the original disciples, especially by Peter and Jesus' own brother, James, head of the Jerusalem Church after the Resurrection."

~The Jesus Mysteries by Timothy Freke & Peter Gandy, 1999, Book Review.

Early mankind was a superstitious and gullible lot, "Satan, Angels, Immortality, Resurrection all Persian and Zoroastrian doctrines imbibed by the Jews... During the whole life of Christ, and the early propagation of the religion, it must be borne in mind, that they took place in an age, and among a people, which superstition had made so familiar with what were supposed to be preternatural events, that the wonders awakened no emotion, or were speedily superseded by some new demand on the every-ready belief." ~Dean Milman, History of Christianity, I, 93.

The Jews revolt against the tyranny of the Romans and religious scrolls are hidden in large urns for protection from the elements as well as the Roman Legionnaires who sought to destroy the Jewish Faith for rebelling. Some urns are placed in caves along the Dead Sea. Centuries later, when the "New Faith" will seek to destroy anything that contradicts their beliefs; it will be these very scrolls that will reveal the truth to the world. Horoscopes and other sectarian writings are included in the hidden scrolls.

It is probably for this reason of sedition [revolt] that the early Christian-Jews will extricate themselves from their Jewish ancestry and any reference of Jesus relating to the Jews [John 3:2, Jesus is referred to as a Rabbi]. Astrology is also included in these ancient writings of the Essene sect. The Essene are also known as the Nozrei ha-brit, Nozrim, Nasoreans, Nazarenes, and the "Keepers of the Covenant."

Later Christians will be called Nazarenes before they would be called Christians in Pagan Antioch. The town Nazareth is unknown in Biblical times as this name is not used until the 4th century. Therefore referring to Jesus as being from Nazareth is a misnomer as he was a Nazarene and there is no town of Nazareth for another 300-400 years later.

"As a name applied to Christ, the word Nazarene occurs only once in the Douai Version [Catholic], viz. in Matt., II, 23, where the Vulgate reading is Nazaroëus [Nazoraios]. Elsewhere [Matthew 26: 71; Mark, I, 24; 10, 47; 14, 67; Luke, 4, 34; John, 17, 5; Acts, II, 22 etc.] Jesus Nazarenus is uniformly translated 'Jesus of Nazareth.' In Acts, 24, 5 the Christians are spoken of by Tertullus as 'The sect of the Nazarenes' In Acts, 24, 5 the Christians are spoken of by Tertullus as 'The sect of the Nazarenes.'"

This early mistranslation of an ancient town for a religion is difficult for even the Catholic Church to explain as it had already taken a position based on erroneous translations and is now forced to defend this position. Nazareth the town, located in the hills of Lebanon, historically does not exist for another three hundred years. Jesus of Nazareth is equivalent to saying, "Jesus of Israel," Israel, a country, which does not exist until the 20th century.

The word Nazarite [from the Hebrew, meaning, 'Consecrated to God'] is further explained: "The name given by the Hebrews to a person set apart and especially consecrated to the Lord. Although Nazarites are not unknown to early Hebrew history, the only specific reference to them in the Law is in Numbers [vi, 1-21], a legal section of late origin, and embodying doubtless a codification of a long-standing usage. The regulations here laid down refer only to persons consecrating themselves to God for a specified time in virtue of a temporary vow, but there were also Nazarites for life, and there are even indications pointing to the consecration of children to that state by their parents." "According to the Law in Numbers. [vi, 1-21] Nazarites might be of either sex. They were bound to abstain during the period of their consecration from wine and all intoxicating drink, and even from all products of the vineyard in any form. During the same period, the hair must be allowed to grow as a mark of Holiness."

In the Old Testament there is condemnation of wine. ~Leviticus 10:9, Proverbs 4:17, 20:1, Isaiah 28:7, Hosea 4:11, Joel 1:5. "The Nazarite was forbidden to approach any corpse, even that of his nearest relatives, under pain of defilement and consequent forfeiture of his consecration. If through accident he finds himself defiled by the presence of a corpse, he must shave 'The head of his consecration,' and repeat the operation on the seventh day. On the eighth day he must present himself at the sanctuary with two turtle doves or young pigeons, one of which was offered as a holocaust and the other for sin, and furthermore, in order to renew the lost consecration, it was necessary to present a yearling lamb for a sin offering."

"At the expiration of the period determined by the vow the Nazarite brought to the sanctuary various offerings, and with symbolical ceremonies including the shaving of the head and the burning of the hair with the fire of the peace offering, he was restored by the priest to his former liberty [Num., vi, 13-21]. The meaning symbolized by these different rites and regulations was in part negative, separation from things worldly, and partly positive, viz. a greater fullness of life and holiness indicated by the growth of the hair and the importance attached to ceremonial defilement."

"The existence of a class of Perpetual Nazarites is known to us through occasional mention of them in the Old Testament writings, but these references are so few and vague that it is impossible to determine the origin of the institution or its specific regulations, which in some respects at least must have differed from those specified in Numbers [6:1-21].

"Thus of Samson who is called a 'Nazarite of God from his mother's womb.' [Judges, 13:5], it is merely said, 'No razor shall touch his head.'"

"No mention is made of abstention from wine etc., though it has been plausibly assumed by many commentators, since that restriction is enjoined upon the mother during the time of her pregnancy. That his quality of Nazarite was considered to be independent of defilement through contact with the dead is plain from the account of his subsequent career and the famous exploits attributed to him."

"The Prophet Samuel is generally reckoned among the Nazarites for life, but nothing is known of him in that connection beyond what is inferred from the promise of his mother: 'I will give him to the Lord all the days of his life, and no razor shall come upon his head' [I Kings, 1:11] It has likewise been inferred from Jer. [XXXV; cf. IV Kings, x, 15 sqq.] that the Rechabites were consecrated to the Lord by the Nazarite vow, but in view of the context, the protest against drinking wine, which forms the basis of the assumption is probably but a manifestation on the part of the clan of their general preference for the simplicity of the nomadic as opposed to the settled life."

Compare with, "Use a little wine for thy stomach's sake, and thy often infirmities?" ~1 Timothy 23.

"In a passage of Amos-2:11, 12, the Nazarites are expressly mentioned together with the Prophets, as young men raised up by the Lord, and the children of Israel are reproached for giving them wine to drink in violation of their vow."

"The latest Old Testament reference is in I Mach. [iii, 49, 50], where mention is made of a number of 'Nazarites that had fulfilled their days.' In the prophecy of Jacob [Genesis 49:26], according to the Douay Version, Joseph is called a 'Nazarite among his brethren,' but here the original word Nazir should be translated 'Chief or 'Leader,' Nazarite being the equivalent of the defective rendering Nazaroëus in the Vulgate. "The same remark applies to the passage in Deuteronomy (XXXIII, 16), and also to Lam. (iv, 7), where 'Nazarites' [Heb. Nezerim] stands for 'Princes' or 'Nobles.' Nazarites appear in New Testament times, and reference is made to them for that period not only in the Gospel and Acts, but also in the works of Josephus." ~cf. Antiquities Jud. XX, vi, 1, and Bell. Jud. II., xv, 1, and in the Talmud, cf. Mishna, Nazir, iii, 6.

Of the Book of Enoch, "Jewish Apocalyptic is an attempt to supply the place of prophecy, which had been dead for centuries, and has its roots in the sacred oracles of Israel... Naturally basing itself upon the Pentateuch and the Prophets, it clothed itself fictitiously with the authority of a patriarch or prophet who was made to reveal the transcendent future... Messianism of course plays an important part in apocalyptic eschatology, and the idea of the Messiahs in certain books received a very high development... The parables of Enoch, with their pre-existent Messiahs, mark the highest point of development [hence not Divine Revelation] of the Messianic concept to be found in the whole range of Hebrew literature." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, Vol. i, 601, 602.

"Foremost among them is generally reckoned John the Baptist, of whom the angel announced that he should 'Drink no wine nor strong drink.'" He is not explicitly called a Nazarite, nor is there any mention of the unshaven hair, but the severe austerity of his life agrees with the supposed asceticism of the Nazarites. From Acts [21: 23 sqq.] we learn that the early Jewish Christians occasionally took the temporary Nazarite vow, and it is probable that the vow of Saint Paul mentioned in Acts-18:18, was of a similar nature, although the shaving of his head in Cenchræ, outside of Palestine, was not in conformity with the rules laid down in the sixth chapter of Numbers, nor with the interpretation of them by the Rabbinical schools of that period. ~See Eaton in Hastings, Dictionary of the Bible, s.v. Nazarites.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

It was a long time before the New Testament as revised by Paul as we now know it was formalized [edited for Orthodoxy, corrections, and harmony], "Indeed, for them, Paul was not just wrong about a few minor points. He was the archenemy, the heretic who had led so many astray" by saying that you could be saved even without keeping the Jewish Law, "... And who forbade circumcision." ~Lost Christianities by Bart Ehrman, 2003. "If we are to believe the legend of Hegesippus quoted by Eusebius [Eusebius, Hist. Eccl., II, XXIII], Saint James the Less, Bishop of Jerusalem, was a Nazarite, and performed with rigorous exactness all the ascetic practices enjoined by that rule of life." ~From Meinhard, De Naziroeis, Jena, 1676; Lesetre, Nazaréat in Vig. Dictionary de la Bible, s.v. Nazaréat; Fouard, Saint Paul, ses missions, Paris, 1892, p. 268; Knabenbauer, Actus Apostolorum, Paris, 1899, 317 sqq. As presented in the Catholic Encyclopedia.

Today, the more than 8,000 extant manuscripts of Saint Jerome's Vulgate Bible show an abundance of cross contamination of all textual types, and thus not considered much help in discovering the original text of the New Testament. Thanks to Jerome, the original, ending of Mark, did not contain the Resurrection story of Mark 16:9-20, Jerome now cites the "Extended" ending of Mark found after Mark 16:14. ~Neither add or subtract from Scripture; cf. John 15:15, Hebrews 1:1-2, John 16:12-13, II Timothy 3:14-17, I Corinthians 13:8, II Corinthians 11:13-15, Matthew 11:13, Acts 20:20-27, II Peter 1:3, Deuteronomy 12:32, Proverbs 30:5-6, Isaiah 8:20, Acts 17:11, Galatians 1:6-9, I Thessalonians 5:21, I John 4:1, etc., etc. Constantine's Easter Letter And The Loss Of The Faith Once Given to The Saints by Bet Emet Ministry.

Harod, appointed Jewish heir to the throne, is seeking the rightful birth heir to the Jewish throne who he fears. He is respectful of the Essene, for they follow strict rules in the interpretation of scripture. Remember Herod, although respecting the power of the Essene, lived in fear of the Essene, for they were of the true line of David, through Joseph, father of Jesus, who was a 10th degree Essene priest [Mary being a 3rd Degree Priestess] The Jews are barred from Jerusalem and Emperor Hadrian erects a shrine to Jupiter and another to Venus to humiliate the Jews and their beliefs in monotheism.

AD 135- Declaration by Rabbi Akiva that Simon Bar Kochba is the Messiah makes it impossible for the Messianic Jews to participate in the Bar Kochba revolt since they believe that Yeshua is the true Jewish Messiah. Justin Martyr understands that the burning of Jewish cities, the fall of Jerusalem, and the exile of Jews from Jerusalem is a fitting judgment upon them because of their rejection of Yeshua and the Christian Good News [Gospels]. ~Justin Martyr, Dialogue with Trypho, 16.

"Although surprising to us now, to writers of the first few centuries CE these similarities between the new Christian religion and the ancient Mysteries were extremely obvious. Pagan critics of Christianity, such as the satirist Celsus, complained that this recent religion was nothing more than a pale reflection of their own ancient teachings. Early 'Church Fathers,' such as Justin Martyr, Tertullian, and Irenaeus, were understandably disturbed and resorted to the desperate claim that these similarities were the result of diabolical mimicry." ~Justin Martyr, Wicked Devils, Timothy Freke & Peter Gandy, 1999.

AD 140-160- Marcion of Pontus, the first Radical Paulinist and anti-Semite, inspired by Luke 5:36, claims that Jesus rejected the "Law & Prophets" from the Old Testament, claims to have recovered the lost original Gospel from Luke. "Any error may be founded on parts of Scripture; the Truth alone is based on the whole. Marcion's errors were the inevitable result of his accepting only what pleased him and rejecting the rest." ~The Pilgrim Church, E.H. Broadbent.

Marcion reached a conclusion that the God of the Old Testament is not the God of the New and that the God of the Old Testament was the demiurge who created the evil world. In other words, the world was created by an evil entity not a good; that the material world is evil. e.g., In 2nd Samuel 24:1, God tells David to take a census of his people, but in 1st Chronicles 21:1 the very same census is inspired by Satan; therefore God and Satan are one and the same, and thus not to be worshiped.

The Church Fathers argued over whether or not God would/could create evil, "Him we know to have received a body from the Virgin and to have refashioned the old man by a new creation, and to have passed in His life through every age, in order that He might be a Law to every age, and by His presence exhibit His own humanity as a pattern to all men, and thus convince man that God made nothing evil, and that man possesses free will, having in himself the power of volition or non-volition, and being able to do both. Him we know to have been a man of the same nature with ourselves." ~History of the Christian Church: Chapter XXI: Ecclesiastical Literature of the Ante-Nicene Age, and Biographical Sketches of the Church-Fathers.

Marcion will rewrite the Gospels, removing references to Jewish history, and insert his strong dislike of the Jews, even though Jesus was a Jew. Marcion of Pontus, promotes the Canon of heavily edited Gospel of Luke and Ten Pauline Letters and his own dogmatic "Antithesis." [direct opposite]. Yet, he is also described, "[Marcion is] Perhaps the most dangerous foe Christianity has ever known." ~Metzger, Bruce; Canon of the New Testament, The Catholic Encyclopedia, 1913.

"The victors in the struggles to establish Christian Orthodoxy not only won their theological battles, they also rewrote the history of the conflict. We have 4th century comparanda evidence for the modus operandi of the 'History rewrite' The victors retrojected the Nicaean Controversy into a fabricated pre-Nicaean history, by the insertion of references and mentions of popular 4th century 'Gnostic Gospels and Acts' into their special 'Ecclesiastical Version' of the 'Historia Augusta,' 'Later readers then naturally assumed that the victorious views had been embraced by the vast majority of Christians from the very beginning... And still assume... 'The practice of Christian forgery has a long and distinguished history... The debate lasted three hundred years.' " ~Bart Ehrman, on Christian Exterminators.

The Gnostics are feared, for they present a dominant competitive force against Christian proselytizing, and the Orthodox Church has them ruthlessly hunted down for their failure to acknowledge the necessity of a 'Spiritual Edifice' in which to practice their religious beliefs.

"... The chief importance of Marcion in the 2nd century lies in the reaction, which he provoked among the leaders of the Apostolic Churches. Just as Marcion's canon stimulated the more precise defining of the New Testament Canon by the Catholic Church, not to supersede but to supplement the Canon of the Old Testament, so, more generally, Marcion's teaching led the Catholic Church to define its faith more carefully, in terms calculated to exclude a Marcionite interpretation." ~F.F. Bruce, The Spreading Flame, Exeter: Paternoster Press, 1964, 252.

"And when thou prayest, thou shalt not be as the hypocrites are: for they love to pray standing in the Synagogues, and in the corners of the streets, that they may be seen of me... But when thou prayest, enter into thy closet, and when thou hast shut the door, pray to thy Father, which is in secret; and thy Father, which seeth in secret, shall reward thee openly." ~Jesus, as stated in Matthew 6:5-6.

The Gnostics believe that each individual is to decide for himself what the truth is and one need not proclaim his beliefs in a consecrated temple to be close to God [a church without walls].

Unfortunately, early Christians were concerned with proselytizing, and not history. "But I have good reason to distrust any historian who has nothing new to say or who produces novelties, either in facts or in interpretations, which I discover to be unreliable. Historians are supposed to be discoverers of truths. No doubt they must turn their research into some sort of story before being called historians. But their stories must be true stories. [...] History is no epic, history is no novel, history is no propaganda because in these literary genres control of the evidence is optional, not compulsory." ~Amaldo Momigliano, the rhetoric of history, Comparative Criticism, p. 260.

The growing, soon to be, Catholic Church now sets out to destroy all their books and literature due to their not agreeing with the accepted beliefs of the New Faith. Gnostics [knowledge] called themselves "Seekers of Truth" and begin to meet in secret to avoid persecution. If the Gnostics can pray to God without the need of Jesus as an intermediary, or without need of an edifice [Temple] then this would negate the efforts of the new religious movement who seek to inhibit the thinking of their followers.

The "New Church" is accommodating in its efforts to subscribe new members, adopting the practices of various other religions in diverse parts of the world in order to create a "Universal Religion" that is acceptable to all. Gnostics, with their radical thinking, unfortunately, cannot be accommodated into the new religion, therefore must be exterminated.

Saint John Chrysostom, 400 C.E., who is one of the most eloquent of all Christian literary advocates wrote, "We [the Christian leaders] practice abstinence from the flesh of animals to subdue our bodies... The unnatural eating of flesh meat is of demonic origin... The eating of flesh is polluting." Chrysostom also stated that, "Flesh meat and wine serve as material for sensuality, and are a source of danger, sorrow, and disease," and Chrysostom even quotes Jesus as saying to his followers, "Ye must be humane, to be my followers." ~Saint John Chrysostom, Homilies, quoted in The Essene Humane Gospel of Jesus, <http://www.subtleenergies.com/omus/jesus/humane.html>, Translated From The Original Hebrew And Aramaic Texts, Typesetting by: Followers of the Essene Way (F.E.W.). greatest disappointment, which was the Old Testament that he wanted to reorganize and edit for purity, but died before he ever got the chance. Jerome speaks forcefully against the many errors and interpolations of the Old Testament instituted by the Holy Mother, the Church, and he argues that a large amount did not belong, and that much had already been deleted [or left out that did belong] as each trace of the compassionate message of the Eternal Holy Law was deliberately deleted from the Old Testament and New Testament alike.

They will be sought and killed until the 4th Century when they will be all but obliterated. The Jerusalem Church and its teachings are founded by the brother of Jesus, James the Just, is all but forgotten after being wiped out by the Jewish revolt.

"The Disciples said to Jesus: 'We know that you are to leave us. Which of us is to be leader?' Jesus replied: 'Whenever you have gone, you will go to James the Just, for whom Heaven and Earth came into being.' ~Verse 12, from The Gospel According to Thomas.

The Romans make no clear distinction between the Jews and the new religious group, the Christian-Jews in their efforts to retaliate and subjugate the Jews. Many of the early teaching of the Gnostics have, until recently, have been only surviving interpretations and translations from the Church which did not necessarily agree with the Gnostic teachings, and with the discovery of the ancient writings of Qumran and Nag Hammadi Texts we now have actual manuscripts written by the religious sects of the times in their own words as to their beliefs taught during and shortly after the time of Jesus.

We now have surviving documents known as "The Apocalypse of Peter" "Letter of Peter to Philip" "The Secret Book of James" "Gospel to the Egyptians" "Gospel of Philip" "The Gospel of Truth" and "The Testimony of Truth."

All of these documents have been 'Legitimately authenticated' as between AD 50-140 in origin. Canonical? Only the Roman Church, with its institutionalized oligarchy can rule on that. An historical reconstruction had already begun as pertains to what happened in the past and the teachings of Jesus and the infallibility of the Church does not allow it to profess the Truth. Paul himself is said to have taught a "Secret wisdom" to a select few who were considered spiritually mature.

This secret tradition taught that the one creator [the Demiurgos], God is only the image of the True God. Valentinus traveled from Egypt to Rome with his new gained knowledge and taught that the creator makes false claims and candidates of Gnosticism are taught to reject the authority of the creator that is a creation derived from their own ignorance. Whoever comes to know the Divine Power comes to know himself and discovers his own true Father and Mother [apolytroxis: release]. Bishop Ignatius sees the Gnostics as a threat to clerical authority and recognizes the danger in this ideology.

The Gnostics believed and recognized the Bishops only as exerting authority over the naïve or uninitiated novices and not the enlightened ones. Theodotus, a Gnostic writer, claims that the Gnostic is one who knows who he is and what he is becoming. One who understands what birth is and rebirth. Abraxas [linked with magical and mystical powers] is also associated with Mithraism. Amulets are carved with his name to ward off evil powers. Later, Christians would use amulets with the inscription ICHTHYS [fish] inscribed on them to ward off evil. This practice would become popular in the 4th century but forbidden for priests and other clergy.

The Pagan origin and the Christian significance of the fish symbol are taken from the ancient Greek Sibyls. Letters of Marcion, the anti-Semite, produces his own canon without Old Testament Jewish beliefs and using only a heavily edited Luke, plus 10 Pauline Epistles, cites "Western" Gospel text-type, which contributes to the hatred of Jews, although Jesus was a Jew and even preached from the Torah.

"The most remarkable example of such a poem [acrostic or anagram] is attributed by Lactantius and Eusebius to the Erythrean Sibyl, the initial letters forming the words 'Iesus Xristos Theou Uios Soter [stauros] Omitting the doubtful parenthesis [cross], these words form a minor acrostic: Ichthys, fish, the mystical symbol of our Lord.' ~Catholic Encyclopedia, Vol. I, p. 111.

In 721 C.E., the Church will forbid amulets by all. The truth is banned along with the untruth. Some Gnostics during the decadent periods of Roman rule practiced immorality as did their Orthodox Christian counterparts. Most, however, practiced the ever-present struggle against good and evil forces and sought to improve the condition of man through meditation, prayer and practicing obedience to God. In the Gnostic Old Testament version of the Bible, Ialdabaoth [Lord of the World] rules over them.

The Gnostics believe that if Jesus actually set out to found a new Church, then wouldn't he have set forth explicit doctrines to follow, instead of a single phrase, "Upon this rock...?" [Is a quotation from the doctrine of Mithraism].

In its place, we have "Enter into thy closet, and when thou has shut the door, pray to thy Father which is in secret." "This is a clear indication that one's belief in God is between the individual and, God and not a Church. "Why callest me good? There is none good but one; that is God."

"Over 900 times, Scriptures mention giving [tithes, offerings, blessings, sacrifices, etc.], yet, not once does it ever mention giving money to enrich the priesthood." ~E. Christopher Reyes.

The reference here is clearly made to a separate and distinct God and Jesus is visibly not referring to himself, but to God. Early Church Fathers to gain converts [by deifying Jesus] claim that Jesus is all in one, God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Spirit, which is where the Orthodoxy separate from the Mother Church [and have so to this day]. "The Kingdom of Heaven is within you."

This is the essence of the Church's motive to eradicate the Gnostics. If God's Kingdom is within us, then we have no need for the institutions built by the Church, nor the tributes that they demand. Nowhere in the Bible does it say Jesus sought to preach from within the confines of a church.

Nowhere in the Bible does it say Jesus passed around a collection plate for offerings. Nowhere in the Bible does it say that Jesus asked for tithes or offerings for his services [He even admonished his Apostles to leave their purses behind when they ministered] In Matthew we have, "Freely ye have received, freely give." ~Matthew 10:8. Note: Religion is supposed to be free.

Tithes and offerings are supposed to go to the poor, not the clergy. The Acts of the Apostles asserts "All the believers were united and shared everything with one another. They made it their practice to sell their possessions and goods and to distribute the proceeds to anyone who was in need."

Ancient Gospel writers use the names of Jesus and his Apostles whenever they want to emphasize something, and often these individuals did not say what is quoted by these inspired writers. When asked by one of the Apostles of his incredible powers, Jesus says, "Verily I say unto you that, speaking from the heart, I tremble because by the world I shall be called God, and for this I shall have to render an account. As God liveth, in whose presence my soul standeth; I am a mortal man as other men are, for although God has placed me as a Prophet over the house of Israel for the health of the feeble and the correction of sinners, I am the servant of God, and of this ye are witness, how I speak against those wicked men who after my departure from the world shall annul the truth of my gospel by the operation of Satan..." ~Verse 52.

Early Christian authors felt free to invent many sayings, for the benefit of the Church, "If a writer in the Old Testament introduces God as speaking, and thus man is confident that he can speak as God, so also the [early] Christians are able to use transmitted sayings of Jesus and compose speeches such as the Sermon on the Mount or, in a freer manner, to produce discourses of Christ, as the Fourth Evangelist is generally acknowledged to have done. If one thus is able to speak freely as God and Christ concerning any historical tradition, then it is no great step beyond if one should believe himself warranted to write in the name of a Patriarch or of an Apostle." ~Arnold Meyer.

"Thou art foolish; pray to God who created thee, and he shall give thee health; for I am a man, as thou art." ~Verse 11.

"Cursed be every one who shall insert into my sayings that I am the son of God." ~Verse 53, "... As God liveth, I am not able to forgive sins, nor is man, but God alone forgiveth." ~Verse 71, From The Gospel of Bamabas, Begum Aisha Bawany WAQF.

These instructions leave little doubt as to their implications and to whom one owes allegiance. Is it no wonder the Church sought to destroy if not conceal these ancient manuscripts?

The Gnostic Gospels reiterate what I have already exposed. In addition, for this reason portions of the Gospels are declared heretical. How can this be, if the very Apostles themselves, who spoke with and listened to Jesus, wrote many of these Gospels?

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

Bishop Irenaeus counters with a list of his own of what the authoritative works should be and decrees that there are only four authentic Gospels. His logic being that there are four compass-points, four oceans, and four corners of the world; therefore it is Divinely decreed that there should only be four Gospels. The Four Gospels emerged victorious merely because they appeared to be the most plausible [believable] and historical. ~Cf. Apocalypse of Peter; Gospel According to Jude, Infancy of Jesus, etc.

Frequently omitted from Church teachings, and often condemned as heretical concoctions, were the Epistles of James, Jude, 2nd Peter, 2nd and 3rd John, and the Apocalypse of John, i.e. Book of Revelation, which is not fully accepted until the 10th century. Revelation 9:15, the 6th seal, speaks of great devastation, “And the four angels who had been kept ready for this very hour and day and month and year were released to kill a third of mankind.”

The Gospel of Judas is mentioned in the late 2nd century, “Others again declare that Cain derived his being from the Power above, and acknowledge that Esau, Korah, the Sodomites, and all such persons, are related to themselves. On this account, they add, they have been assailed by the Creator, yet no one of them has suffered injury. For Sophia was in the habit of carrying off that, which belonged to her from them to herself. They declare that Judas, the traitor, was thoroughly acquainted with these things, and that he alone, knowing the Truth as no others did, accomplished the Mystery of the betrayal; by him all things, both earthly and Heavenly, were thus thrown into confusion. They produce a fictitious history of this kind, which they style the Gospel of Judas.” ~Irenaeus, Against Heresies, 1.31, 180 C.E.

Revelation 4th Seal and 6th Seal. A calculation, assuming an initial population of 6 000 000 000: 1/4 are killed when the 4th seal is unlocked: 1/4 of 6.0 billion is 1.5 billion, leaving 4.5 billion survivors. 1/3 are killed then the 6th seal is opened: 1/3 of 4.5 billion is 1.5 billion, leaving 3.0 billion survivors. In plain words, half of Humankind is killed, and this calculation is only using two of the diabolical Biblical seven seals!

Raymond E. Brown writes that although the Gnostics interpreted John to support their doctrines, the author did not mean that. The Epistles were written, whether by the author of the Gospel or somebody else in his sphere, to argue against the Gnostic Doctrines, which teach that Jesus is the long awaited Savior of mankind, but not Divine [God].

In Mandaeist Gnosticism, the Mandaeans uphold that Jesus was a “Msiha kdaba” or the “False Messiah” who perverts the teachings entrusted to him by John the Baptist. A writer/interpreter of Scripture, Marcion, is labeled a Gnostic by Bishop Irenaeus who labels Marcion this because of Marcion expressing his core Gnostic belief, that the Creator, God of the Jews and the Old Testament was the demiurge [subordinate deity]. ~Oxford Dictionary of the Christian Church, Oxford University Press 2005 ISBN 978-0-19-280290-3: article Anius.

“Marcion, on the contrary, treats the Catholic Church as one that ‘Follows the Testament of the Creator-God,’ and directs the full force of his attack against this Testament and against the falsification of the Gospel and of the Pauline Epistles by the original Apostles and the writers of the Gospels. He would necessarily have dealt with the two Testaments of the Catholic Church, if the Church had already possessed a New Testament. His polemic [aggressive verbal attack] would necessarily have been much less simple if he had been opposed to a Church, which by possessing a New Testament side by side with the Old Testament, had ipso facto [inevitable result] placed the latter under the shelter of the former. In fact Marcion’s position towards the Catholic Church is intelligible, in the full force of its simplicity, only under the supposition that the Church had not yet in her hand any ‘Litera Scripta Novi Testamenti.’” ~Hamack’s Origin of the New Testament.

Parts of their texts are accepted while portions are declared apocryphal. Something definitely seems remiss here. Does one read and believe what the Apostles had to say about Jesus and his teachings or does one listen to what the Church says what the apostles said?

For the truth, one should go to the source. The choice is yours. One’s beliefs are between God and the individual; and the right to worship was not granted to the Gnostics who did not go along with Church doctrine, for to do so would have undermined the very authority of the Church. The Gnostics believed that, “Jesus did not appoint any Apostles or representatives in any of his speeches, therefore the Apostles must have appointed themselves after his death.”

Gnostics believing that the “Kingdom of Heaven is within man himself.” Jesus teaches, “Goodwill towards all men,” a fact which is quickly forgotten in the quest of the early Church Fathers to perpetrate a new religion in the name of God and to eradicate all opposition in their endeavors. Of the writers of the 1st century in the "Augustan Age of Letters," not one even mentions Jesus, his apostles, or his miracles. There were many ancient writers in History, Natural History, Medicine, Materia Medica, Astronomy, Miracles, Fables, Satire, etc., none of who mention this extraordinary man who once lived amongst them performing miracles such as healing the sick or resurrecting the dead. Such extraordinary events as feeding thousands of people with a few small loaves and fishes; bringing back to life those once lost; their ghosts walking about the streets; miraculous darkness covering all the land for several hours; earthquakes; mysterious voices from the clouds; rising through the air into the clouds, etc., all should have been topics of conversation, and should have found a place in the literature of the day. Cures being wrought must have interested the writers on medicine; but not a word on the subject. ~Bank of Wisdom, Box 926, Louisville, KY 40201

AD 140-202 (?)-Even the Bishop of Lyon, Irenaeus, claims that Jesus was never crucified, affirming this statement with the claim that he had gotten it directly from the Apostle John. Saint Irenaeus, the Greek, "Peacemaker," Christian prelate and a 'Father of the Church,' was born in Asia Minor, where, as a child, he heard the preaching of Saint Polycarp, the Disciple of Saint John.

Irenaeus is appointed Bishop of Lyon in 177 AD, in which office he makes many converts among the Gauls [French], and he contends that Jesus was not crucified, that Jesus lived to be over ninety years old, and died a natural death. Thomas Paine enunciated the same position in his paper, "The Age of Reason." Saint Irenaeus, Martyr, Bishop of Lyons; ex-Pagan of Smyrna, emigrated to Gaul [France] and became Bishop, but, "Information of his life is scarce, and in some measure inexact. ... Nothing is known of the date of his death, which may have occurred at the end of the 2nd or beginning of the 3rd century." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 7, 130.

Photius, the ablest early critic in the Roman Church, warns that in some of the devout Bishop Irenaeus' works "The purity of truth, with respect to ecclesiastical traditions, is adulterated by his false and spurious readings." ~Photius, Bibl. ch. Cxx., Of a total of 144,044 Lat in Inscriptions in vols. II through XIV of the Corpus Inscriptionum Latinarum, 10,576 are spurious

It is not true, Saint Irenaeus asserts, that Jesus Christ died so early in life and after so brief a career. "How is it possible that the Lord preached for one year only?" And on the quoted authority of John the Apostle himself, of "The True Gospel," and of "All the elders," the Saintly Bishop urges the falsity and "Heresy" of the Four Gospels on this crucial point. Saint Irenaeus denies Christianity's crucifixion death of Jesus Christ, the long awaited Messiah, "They, however, that they may establish their false opinion regarding that, which is written, 'To proclaim the acceptable year of the Lord,' maintain that he preached for one year only, and then suffered in the twelfth month. [In speaking thus], they are forgetful to their own disadvantage, destroying His work and robbing Him of that age which is both more necessary and more honorable than any other; that more advanced age, I mean, during which also, as a teacher, He excelled all others... Now, that the first stage of early life embraces thirty years, and that this extends onward to the fortieth year, every one will admit; but from the fortieth and fiftieth year a man begins to decline towards old age, which our Lord possessed while He still fulfilled the office of a Teacher, even as the Gospel and all the elders testify; those who were conversant in Asia with John, the disciple of the Lord, [affirming] that John conveyed to them that information. And he remained among them up to the times of Trajan, [Roman Emperor, 98-117 C.E.]. Some of them, moreover, saw not only John, but the other Apostles also, and heard the very same account from them, and bear testimony as to [the validity of] the statement. Whom then should we rather believe?" ~Irenaeus, Adv. Haer. Bk. II, ch. xxii, secs. 3, 4, 5; Ante-Nicene Fathers, i, 891-2.

"Now this Simon of Samaria, from whom all heresies derive their origin... The successor of this man was Menander, also a Samaritan by birth; and he, too, was a perfect adept in the practice of Magic." ~Adverse Haer. I, xxiii; Ante-Nicene Fathers, vol. i, 348.

AD 144-Marcion, one of the earliest contributors to the editing of the Bible [corruption], is excommunicated for rejecting the Old Testament, rejecting most of the New Testament, and teaching that Christ only appeared to be human [Docetism: that Christ only appeared to have a body and suffered on the cross]. Marcion's challenge eventually facilitates the Universal Church in realizing the necessity of a formally recognizing Canon.

The spread of Gnosticism is a combination of elements of Platonic philosophy [Hellenism] and Eastern mystery religions. Its adherents claim that its secret-knowledge principle provide a deeper insight into

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

Christian doctrine than divine revelation and faith. Gnostic opinion denies the divinity of Christ; others deny the reality of Jesus' humanity, calling it mere appearance [Docetism, or Phantasiasm].

Hellenism was furtively enjoined to the Christian doctrine, with scrupulous exactitude, and without the knowledge of the masses, "Naturally, however, open as the Christianity of the Post-Apostolic Age would be to influences of such a nature through the fluidness of its dogmatics, and flexible as it would have been rendered by the Pauline and Johannine speculative thought, it had not foreseen these developments nor did it possess any means of sifting and more sharply defining them. For this reason their first efforts to work them over were marked as much by disorder as by intensesness. Some time necessarily elapsed before the main body of the membership, always tardy in arriving at a clear consciousness of the real situation, sensed the fact that they were driving the faith in two very different directions ... The one movement tended to borrow from Hellenistic culture all of its ideas that were capable of rendering the early Christian Doctrine at once more profound and more beautiful. [Let it be noted that Christianity had to borrow from Greek philosophy to become both more profound and more beautiful!] It is evident that this process of assimilation cared little about scrupulous exactitude, and neither did it always find itself in complete accord with logic or reality. The same was true of its documents ... It only sought to establish a working agreement between the elements of its fundamental postulates and the most important principles of Greek thought." ~Guignebert, op. cit. p. 118.

Marcion, who revised much of the Old Testament to suit his anti-Semitic leanings, is excommunicated by the Roman community; Marcion proposed the distinction between texts that have authority and those that are spurious [the first are part of the 'Canon'] the exclusive Inspired Revelation of God's Word in the New Testament.

"He who knows only one religion knows none." ~Prof. Max Muller, [1823-1900.

Christians are taught to overlook the often spurious interpretations of their so-called Holy Bible, taught to consent to ridiculous explanations, taught to even listen to such absurd things as that a father-in-law should lie with his daughter-in-law, as Judah did; or a father with his daughters, as Lot did; or the great prophets with harlots, like Hosea; or that a husband should sell his wife for a night to her lover, like Abraham; or that a man should marry two sisters, like Jacob; or that the rulers of the people and the men you consider as most inspired should keep their mistresses by hundreds and thousands; or, according to the provision made in Deuteronomy about wives, that the wife of one brother, if he dies without children, should marry the surviving brother, and that he should raise up seed from her instead of his brother; and that if the man refuses to do this, the fair plaintiff should bring her case before the elders, that the brother may be called and admonished to perform this religious duty; and that, if he persists in his refusal, he must not go unpunished, but the woman must loose his shoe from his right foot, and strike him in the face, and send him away, spat upon and accursed, to perpetuate the reproach in his family; all of which are contained in the Holy Bible. ~Contra Faustus Manicheum.

AD 147- "Saint Gregory of Nyssa, with wanton eloquence, describes the Jews as 'Slayers of the Lord, murderers of the prophets, enemies of God, haters of God, adversaries of grace, enemies of their fathers' faith, advocates of the devil, brood of vipers, slanderers, scoffers, men of darkened minds, leaven of the Pharisees, congregation of demons, sinners, wicked men, stoners, and haters of goodness' - a veritable catalogue for future anti-Semites to pick from." ~Saint Gregory, Orat. i. 147, 341-420 C.E.

AD 150- In order to rid the ministry of women, Saint Clement of Alexandria states that, "Every woman should be filled with shame by the thought that she is a woman." ~Saint Clement of Alexandria, 150-215.

Clement of Alexandria is an apologist who uses Plato [Hellenism] to support Christianity, and attempts to reach out to the Gnostics by showing them that only the Christian has real "Gnosis." He helps to establish the allegorical method of interpreting Holy Scripture. His works make up a large proportion of The Ante-Nicene Fathers, Vol. II "Christian Apologists" writings against Roman Paganism by Epistle to Diognetus, in Apostolic Fathers collection.

The literal [unembellished] methods of interpretation soon replaces the allegorical, "It is not, therefore, Origen who ought to be termed the parent of allegories amongst the Christians, but Philo ... Many of the Jews, and in particular the Pharisees and Essenes, had indulged much in allegories before the time of Philo [then obviously even Philo was not the prime parent of this device], but of this there can be no doubt, that the praefects of the Alexandrian school caught the idea of interpreting Scripture upon philosophical principles, or of eliciting philosophical maxims from the Sacred writings by means of allegory, and that by them it was gradually propagated amongst the Christians at large. It is also equally certain that by the writings and example of Philo the fondness for allegories was vastly augmented and confirmed throughout the whole Christian world: and it moreover appears that it was he who first inspired the Christians with that degree of temerity which led them, not infrequently, to violate the faith of history and wilfully to close their eyes against the obvious and proper sense of terms and words... Particular instances of it, however, may be shown from Origen and others who took him for their guide and who manifestly considered a great part both of the Old and New Testaments as not exhibiting a representation of things that really occurred, but merely the images of moral actions.” ~Von Mosheim, History, I, 371.

After so many sacrifices for his Church, Origen is not only excommunicated by denied the Eternal Salvation he so desired, “It is impossible to deny a respectful sympathy, veneration and gratitude to this extraordinary man, who, with all his brilliant talents and a best of enthusiastic friends and admirers, was driven from his country, stripped of his sacred office, excommunicated from a part of the church, then thrown into a dungeon, loaded with chains, racked by torture, doomed to drag his aged frame and dislocated limbs in pain and poverty, and long after his death to have his memory branded, his name anathematized, and his Salvation denied, but who nevertheless did more than all his enemies combined to advance the cause of sacred learning, to refute and convert heathens and heretics, and to make the church respected in the eyes of the world.” ~History of the Christian Church: Ecclesiastical Literature of the Ante-Nicene Age, and Biographical Sketches of the Church-Fathers.

Marcion [AD 100-160] an anti-Semite, is the founder of a Christian sect to be called Marcionites. Born in Sinope, Pontus [now part of Turkey], and the son of the Bishop of Sinope, he travels to Rome about In 140 C.E., Marcion is excommunicated from the “New Christian Faith” as a heretic for his differing views of the established Church. “The most barbarous and melancholy thing about Pontus [dismal as the region is of itself] is that Marcion was born there.” ~Tertullian, Against Marcion 1.14.

The Marcionite sect is highly abstemious and celibate, but grows rapidly until it is second in strength the original Church [their Christian counterparts are more lenient with the interpretations of Scriptures as well as morals]. early Christian Bishop, founder of the Marcionites, one of the first great Christian heresies to rival Catholic Christianity. Marcion, and early Christian Bishop, taught in Asia Minor, then went [135 C.E.] to Rome, where he perfected his religious theory, omitting as much about the Jews as possible as he did not like them for denying Jesus as their Savior.

Marcion writes a book called ‘Antitheses,’ which deserves him excommunication by the early Christian leaders of Rome in 144. Excommunicated from the early Christian Church, he then forms a church of his own, which becomes widespread and powerful. Marcion taught that there are two Gds, proclaiming that the stern, law-giving, creator God of the Old Testament, and the good, merciful God of the New Testament. Marcion believes that the Creator God is the inferior of the two, also rejected the real incarnation of Christ, claiming that he is but a manifestation of the Father, though generally seen as one of the most important leaders of the somewhat loosely defined movement known as Gnosticism, he does not share some of the main premises of other Gnostic sects.

Much of what is written today about Marcion is absolute slander and misrepresentation and a general misunderstanding of not only what Marcion believed in but what the earliest Christians also believed regarding the early Gnostics and “The Christ.”

Gnostics will spread their version of Christianity, and, “That strange, obscure movement, partly intellectual, partly fanatical... In the 2nd century spread with the swiftness of an epidemic over the Church from Syria to Gaul.” ~Law, The Tests of Life, 26.

Various Christian sects vie against one another for membership. “Teachings of Silvanus,” a Gnostic, claim that Christ has a single hypostasis [hidden spiritual reality] and that Christ is incomprehensible with respect to his hypostasis.

The inspired(?) “Western Reviser” adds/subtracts from the original New Testament Acts to produce a more “Westernized” version, which is 10% larger and found in Papyrus P29,38,48 and the Codex Bezae. Dean Burgon, “As for the origin of these two curiosities [P75 and Codex B], it can perforce only be divined from their contents, that they exhibit fabricated texts is demonstrable. No amount of honest copying preserved in for any number of centuries could by possibility have resulted in two such documents.”

Separated from one another in actual date by 50, perhaps by 100 years, they must needs have branched all from a common corrupt ancestor, and straightway become exposed to fresh depraving influence."

There are far more insertions, than deletions in the Codex Bezae, which is notorious for adding material, and not subtracting it.

Another Codex, the Codex Gigas [Giant Book also known as the Devil's Bible and sometimes said to be the 8th Wonder of the World], is said to have been written [according to legend] by a scribe [monk] repenting his sins in a cell in Podlazice monastery [now Czechoslovakia] who had breached his sacred monastic code and sentenced to be walled up alive.

In order to withhold this harsh penalty the monk promised to create, in one single night, a book to glorify the monastery forever, including all of mankind's knowledge; near midnight he became so sure that he could not complete this task alone he sold his soul to the Devil for assistance. In exchange, the Devil asked to be portrayed in the book.

The Devil then completed the manuscript and the monk added the Devil's picture, out of appreciation for his aid.. Despite this fable the Codex was not forbidden by the Inquisition and was critically studied by many Christian scholars. It is said that the Codex's meticulous handwriting has not been found anywhere else. ~Bártl, S., Kostecký, J.: Ďáblova Bible. Tajemství největší knihy světa, Paseka, 1993. ISBN 80-85192-64-0.

Describing the Jewish uprising against the Roman Empire that has been acknowledged as the descending turning point in the course of the Empire, Dio Cassius fabricates stories of the Jews, "The Jews were destroying both Greeks and Romans. They ate the flesh of their victims, made belts for themselves out of their entrails, and daubed themselves with their blood... In all, 220,000 men perished in Cyrene and 240,000 in Cyprus, and for this reason no Jew may set foot in Cyprus today." ~Dio Cassius, 2nd century, Roman History.

Merely copying Scripture is said to offer Salvation, "The legend also underscores the Medieval belief that it was possible to atone for one's sins by copying the texts. In his Historia Ecclesiastica, Orderic Vitalis [1075-1142] relates a tale told by Abbot Thierry about a monk with a proclivity to sin who was an accomplished and devoted scribe. After his death, the work, which he copied was used as evidence to save him from Eternal Damnation. When each and every letter in his text was weighed against his sins, it turned out that he had formed one letter more than the number of his sins. His soul was permitted to reunite with its body and atone for his sinful ways." ~<http://www.czech.cz/en/news/culture/enormous-interest-in-the-devils-bible/>

The last important short work is an ancient Calendar, containing a list of saints and local Bohemian persons on the days on which they were commemorated. There is also one lost work, on leaves that have been cut out of the Codex manuscript, the Rule of Saint Benedict, the essential guide to monastic life written in the 6th century. ~About the Codex Gigas, <http://www.kb.se/codex-gigas/eng/short/>

Saint Jerome and Saint Augustine, credit the anti-Semite, Marcion, with being a man of letters. ~Lardner's Works vol. 4, p.526.

We also learn from Saint Jerome, that Marcion sent before him to Rome, a woman, to prepare the minds of the people for his doctrines. ~Saint Jerome, adv. Ctesiph. t.4, p.477.

"Saint Jerome, Church Father and Doctor of the Church, identified all Jews with Judas, the Apostle who betrayed Jesus in return for thirty pieces of silver: 'Who do you suppose are the sons of Judas? The Jews. The Jews take their name, not from Juda who was a Holy man, but from the betraye... [What nonsense! They were called 'Jews,' based on their forefather, Juda, centuries before Judas was born]. 'Synagogue was divorced by the Savior and became the wife of Judas, the betrayer.'" ~Saint Jerome, Church Father and Doctor of the Church

In the nearly two millenniums of Christianity, anti-Semitism has not abated, "If it is expedient to hate any men and to loathe any race I have a strange dislike for those of the circumcision [Jews]. For up to the present day, they persecute our Lord Jesus Christ in the Synagogues of Satan." ~Saint Jerome.

The saintly Jerome will acquaint his brethren with deceit and sexual depravity as metaphors for Jewish behavior and describes the Synagogue, "If you call it a brothel, a den of vice, the Devil's refuge, Satan's fortress, a place to deprave the soul, an abyss of every conceivable disaster or whatever else you will, you are still saying less than it deserves." ~Saint Jerome on the Jews.

Tertullian comments on Marcion, denouncing his teachings and his works, which he understood that he is arguing that the four Gospels must have been in existence before Marcion. Tertullian's argument, however, annihilates itself; since the early Apostles denounced by Marcion [in his Gospel] are Peter, James, and John, which only one takes credit for writing either of the four Gospels, while the other two are attributed only two of the Apocryphal Gospels.

Why didn't Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John use their names in their alleged Gospels? "To us the greater part of this material is not in any proper sense historical at all, but for the early Israelite as for the early Greek historian it was otherwise our distinction between authentic history, legendary history, pure legend, and myth, he made as little as he recognized our distinction of natural and supernatural. It was all history to him, and if one part of it had a better attestation than another, it was certainly the sacred history as it was told at the ancient sanctuaries of the land. The early Hebrew historians did not affix their names to their works; they had, indeed, no idea of authorship. The traditions and legends, which they collected, were common property, and did not cease to be so when they were committed to writing; the written book was in every sense the property of the scribe or the possessor of the roll. Only a part of the great volume of tradition was included in the first books. Transcribers freely added new matter from the same sources on which the original authors had drawn, the traditions of their own locality or sanctuary, variants of historical traditions or legend. Every new copy was thus in some measure a fresh rescension... Scribes compared different copies, and combined their contents according to their own judgment or interests... Of records or monuments there are but a few traces, and these for the most part doubtful." ~Encyclopedia Britannica, Book ii, 2075-76.

Marcion, most likely, referred to the corruption of "The Gospel," or "The Gospel of Our Lord," and not to any other written books that were in existence during his time [140 C.E.].

The first few centuries of Christianity are spent by the various Church Fathers pathetically explaining away the idiosyncratic similarities between their faith and that of the Pagans, "Of course, Tertullian calls again the Devil to his assistance, in order to explain away so complete a resemblance. But as there is not the slightest difficulty, without the intervention of the Devil, to perceive, that whenever two religions resemble each other so completely, the oldest must be the mother and the youngest the daughter, we shall conclude, that since the worship of Mithras is infinitely older than that of Christ, and its ceremonies a great deal anterior to those of the Christians, that therefore the Christians are incontestably either sectarians or plagiarists of the religion of the Magi." ~Charles François Dupuis, The Origin of All Religious Worship, 1798, chapter IX, starting on page 214, titled, An Explanation of the Fable, in which the Sun is worshiped under the name of Christ.

"These are Marcion's Antitheses, or contradictory propositions, which aim at committing the Gospel to a variance with the Law, in order that from the diversity of the two documents, which contain them, they may contend for a diversity of Gods also." ~Tertullian, AM 1.19, in Ante-Nicene Fathers, vol. 3, p. 285.

Epiphanius writes that Marcion, gives a list of 78 passages, in which he claims, Marcion corrupted the text of Luke.

The Gospels must be believable, even if the scribes have to add to Scriptures. In Luke 23:53, it is written that Yeshua [Jesus] was placed in a tomb, "Where no one had ever yet been laid." As a promising defense against an allegation of someone stealing the body, anonymous scribes seem to have added the words, "And he rolled a great stone before the door of the tomb."

The Codex Bezae was even altered to add, "And having placed Him there he positioned before the tomb a stone that scarcely twenty people could roll." ~New Testament Alterations, http://essenes.net/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=149&Itemid=563.

Marcion's Gospel closely resembles that of the Gospel of Luke [but Marcion's Gospel is much shorter]. Marcion, who supports Paul, himself also a Gnostic, are the original writers of the "Allegorical Christ," which are later made to be "Literal" by the Holy Universal Roman Catholic counterfeit mill.

All of the early doctrines depend upon who is calling the other, "Heretic." The original meaning of the word "Heresy" is neither insulting nor complementary as the word comes from the Greek, "Haerens," which means "An act of choosing," or "The course of action," or "Choice," foremost, to "The choice of philosophical principles" and to "Those who professed them," i.e. "A school or sect."

"That, after the most stratest sect, or heresy, of our region, I lived a Pharisee." ~Saint Paul in Acts 26:5.

"Many [Biblical] stories come in versions so distorted that it is hard to decide whether the principal characters were worthy successors to the Apostles, or the Devil's own agents. Perhaps their contemporaries were as uncertain as we are." ~Smith, M. A. From Christ to Constantine, London: Interscience Press, 1971, p.14. "A better God has been discovered," Tertullian sardonically writes, "One who is neither offended nor angry nor inflicts punishment... He is merely kind. Of course he forbids you to sin, but only in writing. It lies with you whether you consent to accord him obedience." ~Tertullian, IV.1.26f.

Justin Martyr, 100-165 C.E., writes in the 150's that Marcion is "Teaching men to deny that God is the maker of all things in Heaven and earth and that the Christ predicted by the Prophets is His Son." ~Justin Martyr, 1 Apology 58.15.

The Gnostics "Are therefore those Christians, who, in a swift advance, attempted to capture Christianity for Hellenic culture, and Hellenic culture for Christianity, and who gave up the Old Testament in order to facilitate the conclusion of the Covenant between the two powers and make it possible to assert the absoluteness of Christianity." ~History of Dogma, I, 227.

Marcion's most influential writing is a work entitled 'Antithesis,' which describes a "A highly competent work," which consisted of "Contrasted statements arranged to prove the incompatibility of the Law and the Gospel." ~Tertullian, Against Marcion, trans. and ed Ernest Evans, Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1972, p.xv.

The nature of that the heresy of the Gnosticism, as taught by Cerinthus may be stated in the words of Bishop Irenaeus, "A certain Cerinthus, in Asia, taught that the world was not made by the Supreme God, but by some power altogether separate and distinct from that Sovereign Power, which is over the Universe, and one ignorant of the God who is over all things. He taught, moreover, that Jesus was not Born of a Virgin [For this seemed to him to be impossible], but was the son of Joseph and Mary, born after the manner of other men; though preeminent above other men in justice and prudence and wisdom; and that after His baptism the Christ, in the form of a dove, descended upon Him from that Sovereign Power, which is over all things; and that He then announced the unknown Father and wrought miracles; but that, at the end, the Christ departed again from Jesus, and that Jesus suffered and was raised from the dead, while the Christ continued impassible, as a spiritual being." ~Mansel, The Gnostic Heresies, 74.

But Cerinthus claims a millennium also, by means of Revelations, which he pretends were written by a great Apostle, who brings before us spectacular effects, which he fallaciously claims were shown him by Angels; and Cerinthus says that after the Resurrection, the Kingdom of Christ will be set up on earth, and that the flesh dwelling in Jerusalem will again be subject to desires and pleasures. And being an enemy of the Scriptures of God, he asserts, allegedly with the purpose of deceiving men, that there is to be a period of a thousand years for marriage festivals. ~Cerinthus, Disputation, Church History, Book III, Catholic Encyclopedia, From Nicene and Post-Nicene Fathers, Second Series, Vol. I, Chapter 28. Cerinthus the Heresiarch.

Saint Jerome will state that both Mary, and Joseph are virgins, "You say that Mary did not continue a virgin: I claim still more, that Joseph himself, on account of Mary was a virgin, so that from a virgin wedlock a virgin son was born." ~Saint Jerome to the heretic Helvidius, The Perpetual Virginity of the Blessed Virgin, 21.

Saint Jerome's Biblical interpretation institutes a Christian tendency that becomes dominant in Western authors, that Scriptural commentators from Bede in the 7th century to Rabanus Maurus in the 9th, basing themselves on Saint Jerome, spoke of the life-long virginity of Saint Joseph. Saint Thomas also attacks the sticky issue regarding the alleged children of Joseph by a previously deceased wife, stating, "But this is false, for if the Lord did not wish his Virgin mother to be entrusted to the care of anyone but a Virgin [i.e., the Apostle John], how could he have suffered that her spouse was not a Virgin, and as such would have persisted?" ~Saint Thomas, Ad Galatas, I:19.

"Thereafter he [an Angel of God] appeared to Anna his wife, saying, 'Fear not, Anna, nor think that it is a phantom, which thou seest. For I am that angel who has presented your prayers and alms before God; and now have I been sent to you to announce to you that thou shalt bring forth a daughter, who shall be called Mary, and who shall be blessed above all women. She, full of the favor of the Lord even from her birth, shall remain three years in her father's house until she be weaned. Thereafter, being delivered to the service of the Lord, she shall not depart from the temple until she reach the years of discretion. There, in fine, serving God day and night in fastings and prayers, she shall abstain from every unclean thing; she shall never know man, but alone, without example, immaculate, uncorrupted, without intercourse with man, she, a virgin, shall bring forth a son; she, His hand-maiden, shall bring forth the Lord, both in grace, and in name, and in work, the Savior of the world.'" ~Ante-Nicene Fathers/Volume VIII/Apocrypha of the New Testament/The Gospel of the Nativity of Mary, Chapter Four., Anonymous, translated by Alexander Walker. From Wikisource.

By the middle of the 11th century, there was such a common conviction about it that Saint Peter Damian could say: "If it does not suffice for you that not only the mother is a virgin, there remains the belief of the Church that he who served as the father is also a virgin." ~Saint Peter Damian, Filas, 99, The Rosary Light & Life, Vol.54, No 4, July-Aug 2001, Discovering The Greatness of Saint Joseph, Part I: The Growth of His Devotion by Father Paul K. Raftery, O.P.

What effect does complete abstinence from marital relations have on the reality of Mary and Joseph's relationship as husband and wife? Is their marital bond truly present? Does their chastity thwart them from having a true marriage? Saint Thomas attempts to resolve the matter with these questions, but his explanation that the perfection of matrimony comes from what truly gives marriage its form, which is to say its most essential characteristic, that which distinguishes marriage from any other relationship between a man and a woman completely contradicts the Catholic Church's 21st century interpretation that a man and woman cannot be married if the marriage cannot be consummated, witness the Church's refusal to let a crippled man marry in South America in 2010. "The form, however, of matrimony consists in a certain indivisible union of souls, through which one spouse is held to maintain an unflinching fidelity to another." ~Saint Thomas, III, 29, 2.

Pope John Paul II will state, "We see that at the beginning of the New Testament, as at the beginning of the Old, there is a married couple. But whereas Adam and Eve were the source of evil, which was unleashed on the world, Joseph and Mary are the summit from which Holiness spreads all over the earth. The Savior began the work of Salvation by this virginal and Holy Union, wherein is manifested his all-powerful will to purify and sanctify the family, that sanctuary of love and cradle of life." ~Pope John Paul II, Guardian of the Redeemer, 7. Note: Joseph is 111 years of age when he died.

But, their first Pope was married; for Peter, and Philip, begot children; and Philip also gave his daughters in marriage. And Paul does not hesitate, in one of his Epistles, to greet his wife, whom he did not take about with him, that he might not be inconvenienced in his ministry. ~Church History, Book III, Catholic Encyclopedia, From Nicene and Post-Nicene Fathers, Second Series, Vol. 1. Chapter 30, The Apostles That Were Married.

Competition is not merely among the Pagans, but those infernal Gnostics also, who, "May be provisionally described as a number of schools of philosophy, oriental in general character, but taking in the idea of a redemption through Christ, and further modified in different sects by a third element, which may be Judaism, Hellenism, or Christianity... The Gnostics took over only the idea of a redemption through Christ, not the full Christian doctrine, for they made it rather a redemption of the philosophers from matter, than a redemption of mankind from sin." ~Dr. Gwatkin, Early Church History to AD 313, II, 20.

Religious doctrines differed, and philosophical beliefs varied greatly in the 2nd century, "Gnosticism may be described generally as the fantastic product of the blending of certain Christian ideas, particularly that of redemption through Christ, with speculation and imaginings derived from a medley of sources [Greek, Jewish, Parsic; philosophies; religions, theosophies, mysteries] in a period when the human mind was in a kind of ferment, and when opinions of every sort were jumbled together in an unimaginable welter. It involves, as the name denotes, a claim to 'Knowledge,' Knowledge of a kind of which the ordinary believer was incapable, and in the possession of which 'Salvation' in the full sense consisted. This knowledge of which the Gnostic boasted, related to the subjects ordinarily treated of in religious philosophy; Gnosticism was a species of religious philosophy.” ~ Dr. Orr, The Early Church, 71.

Paul in his letters knows nothing of a 'Divine Jesus,' he knows only of a human Jesus, the man who allegedly died on a cross. Who wrote the Bible? Who wrote the Gospels in Paul's and the other Apostles' names? “By the sharpest of ironies, it was the opponents who invented the human Jesus. The tactic used by Celsus and his aide was the same as that used by the opponents in the Age of Enlightenment, sixteen centuries later. In both eras they were erecting a human figure and a human biography to counter the portrait of Jesus as a Divinity.” ~Albert Schweitzer, 1875-1965.

The New Testament God is more forgiving and acceptable to the masses who tire of retribution, pain and continual revenge, and “Marcion sets up unequal gods,” Tertullian writes, “The one a judge, fierce and warlike, the other mild and peaceable, solely kind and supremely good.” ~Tertullian, IV.1.6.

Much of what Marcion believed and expressed in the First New Testament is not literal but allegorical. Saint Clement I briefly refers to Peter and Paul as “Illustrious Apostles,” indicating that the Gospel and Pauline traditions were united, but the letter has been proven to be a late forgery, being unsigned, and the earliest manuscript is late 4th century.

No other early Christian author, except, perhaps, Marcion, knows of both Peter and Paul until the end of the 2nd century. ~See the works of Irenaeus and Tertullian.

The Supreme Priest of Priests, Bishop of Bishops, “For Peter was probably in fact and effect the bridge-man [Pontifex Maximus, the Pagan title for Priest of Priests, head; a title which is assigned to Emperor Constantine and later to the Roman Catholic Popes, which signifies their authority over all faiths] who did more than any other to hold together the diversity of 1st century Christianity. James the brother of Jesus and Paul, the two other most prominent leading figures in 1st century Christianity, were too much identified with their respective 'Brands' of Christianity, at least in the eyes of Christians at the opposite ends of this particular spectrum. But Peter, as shown particularly by the Antioch episode in Galatians 2, had both a care to hold firm to his Jewish heritage, which Paul lacked, and an openness to the demands of developing Christianity, which James lacked. John might have served as such a figure of the center holding together the extremes, but if the writings linked with his name are at all indicative of his own stance he was too much of an individualist to provide such a rallying point. Others could link the developing new religion more firmly to its founding events and to Jesus himself. But none of them, including the rest of the twelve, seem to have played any role of continuing significance for the whole sweep of Christianity, though James, the brother of John, might have proved an exception had he been spared.” ~The Canon Debate, McDonald & Sanders editors, 2002, chapter 32, page 577, by James D. G. Dunn.

Christianity is not yet set in concrete and various Pagan beliefs began to spill over into Christianity, making it easier to convert the Gnostics, “For a long time the Pagan beliefs had ceased to be taken seriously by thoughtful men and had been displaced by various Creeds derived from philosophical speculation. These in themselves were abstract and unsatisfying, but had been partly vitalized by union with theosophies of the East. An attempt was made on the part of this philosophical religion to effect an alliance with Christianity. A section of the [early Christian] Church was dissatisfied with the simplicity of the Gospel, and sought to advance to something higher by adopting the current speculations... The late books of the New Testament are all occupied, more or less, with this movement, which was the more dangerous as it threatened the Church from within.” ~Professor E. Scott, The Apologetic of the New Testament, 14.

Christianity is believed to have exalted the poor Pagans into a higher form of faith and social demeanor, “On the other hand they rank immeasurably below the best Pagan civilizations in civic and patriotic virtue, in the love of liberty, in the number and splendor of the great characters they produced, in the dignity and beauty of the type of character they formed. They had their full share of tumult, anarchy, injustice and war, and they should probably be placed, in all intellectual virtues, lower than any other period in the history of mankind. A boundless intolerance of all divergence of opinion was united with an equally boundless toleration of all falsehood and deliberate fraud that could favor received opinions. Credulity being taught as a virtue and all conclusions dictated by authority, a deadly torpor [inactivity, stagnation] sank upon the human mind, which for many centuries almost suspended its action, and was only effectually broken by the scrutinizing, innovating and free-thinking habits that accompanied the rise of the industrial republics in Italy. Few men that are not either priests or monks would not have preferred to live in the best days of the Athenians or of the Roman Republics, in the age of Augustus or in the age of the Antonines, rather than in any period that elapsed between the triumph of Christianity and the 14th century.” ~Lecky, History of European Morals Vol. II, p. 15.

You can't say they didn't tell you they were lying, “The name Gospel, as indicating a written account of Christ's Words and deeds, has been, and still is, applied to a large number of narratives of Christ's life, which circulated both before and after the composition of our Third Gospel [cf. Luke 1:1-4]. The titles of some fifty such works have come down to us... It is only, however, in connection with some twenty of these 'Gospels' that some information has been preserved... Most of them, as far as can be made out, are productions, the Apocryphal character of which is generally admitted by contemporary [i.e., present day] scholars. Naming first as Nos. 1-4 'The Canonical Gospels,' now falsely labeled with the names of Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John, the twenty best known ones are listed as follows; viz: The Gospels According to the Hebrews; of Peter; According to the Egyptians; of Matthias; of Philip; of Thomas; the Proto-Evangelium of James, Gospel of Nicodemus [Acta Pilati]; of the Twelve Apostles; of Basilides; of Valentinus; of Marcion; of Eve; of Judas; the Writing Genna Marias; the Gospel Teleioseos.” ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. vi, p. 656.

Old Testament commandments “Are used in the distinctively Christian Scriptures as an instruction in righteousness.” ~The Scofield Reference Bible, ed. C. I. Scofield, New York: Oxford University Press, 1917, p. 1245.

There is no evidence of a canon of the New Testament before that of Marcion, about 140 C.E. This rich Christian challenged the rest of Church Doctrine by rejection of the Old Testament, and by collecting parts of what is now the New Testament, rejecting all those aspects, which he thought were too Jewish. Apelles, Marcion's disciple, composes a work similar to Marcion under the title of “Syllogismi.”

Marcion's Antitheses, which may still in part be restructured from Tertullian, Epiphanius, Adamantius, Ephraem, etc., possessed canonical authority in the Marcionite Church, and therefore takes the place of the Old Testament.

Bishop Ignatius, 117 CE, mentions Jesus' virginal conception but, according to many scholars, these ahistorical references are part of a creed; he has no knowledge of the birth stories of Jesus contained in Matthew and Luke.

In Matthew, we have Satan taking Jesus to a very high mountain and offering him all of the kingdoms of the world, if Jesus will only bow down and worship Satan as God. This passage connotes that the world belongs to the Devil, and that the Devil [evil], is able to give it away to Christ. However this passage also closely matches Gnostic belief very strongly. ~ Matthew 4:8-9.

Christianity will pick and choose what it wishes to be the Law of God, and conventional Christianity often commands that, which God forbids, “Forget the Sabbath. Ignore the Holy days and dietary laws, bring your tithes to the storehouse for the church is 'The storehouse' [which it is not!]. And shave that beard, so you'll look like a Christian!”

And many Bible colleges and seminaries now command their students to shave the beard, in spite of God's command. ~Leviticus 19:27. Note: The ten Commandments are taken from Spell 125 of the Egyptian Book of the Dead.

“... The Bible as we have it contains elements that are scientifically incorrect or even morally repugnant. No amount of explaining away can convince us that such passages are the product of Divine Wisdom.”

~Bernard J. Bamberger, The Story of Judaism.

Indeed, even Saint Ignatius never alludes to the Gospels or to the Jesus tradition. The Gnostic, Marcion, 135 CE, will facilitate in the union of the Church by denying the 'Jewishness' and 'Humanity' of Jesus. He will sever all connections between his Gnostic churches and that of Judaism, and his canons will reject the Jewish Scriptures, omitting any mention of things Jewish in his version of Luke, in ten of the Pauline letters, which he accepted as valid, and included in his own writings.

Bishop Irenaeus will copiously quote the Jewish Scriptures, the Pauline Corpus, the Gospels, and Acts as he struggles semi-convincingly to pull the Pauline and Jesus wings together, forcefully insisting that the Church had never been divided, that it came unified from God. He will assert that the canon had from the beginning contained only four gospels, and writes that, “The very ancient, and universally known church

[was] founded and organized at Rome by the two most glorious Apostles, Peter and Paul. ”

However, there are no writings now of any such tradition before him, other than the interpolated letter of Saint Clement I and Acts of the Apostles, and their Savior, Jesus Christ will not be declared to be God until the Council of Nicaea in 325 C.E. Saint Jerome declares that the Acts of the Apostles, the fifth book of the New Testament, was also “Falsely written.” ~The Letters of Jerome, Library of the Fathers, Oxford Movement, 1833-45, vol. v, p. 445.

The Marcionites have established their own churches and establish their own Episcopal hierarchy where they practice the Sacraments of Baptism and the Eucharist [without the use of wine]. Marcion reject the Old Testament and most of the New Testament and do not believe in the incarnation and the resurrection of Jesus, basing his teachings on ten of the Epistles of Saint Paul and an altered [non-Catholic] version of the Gospel of Saint Luke.

His Doctrines includes a belief in the eternity of matter, which is later improved upon by the Greek teacher Hermogenes, who believes in a dualistic interpretation of God, where God is separated into the righteous “God of Law,” severe in his punishment and who is the Creator of the Old Testament, and the “Good God,” the compassionate and infinitely greater deity as revealed by Jesus Christ the Savior. “... And when you tell me that your deity made you in his own image, I reply that he must be very ugly.” ~Victor Hugo, writing to clergy.

As much as the Christian Church dislikes talking about it, Hellenism greatly influenced the thinking of the early Christian fathers. According to Philo, a Jewish author, the creation of the universe was a gradual molding out of matter; hence, arises evil. “Throughout the 1970's I had been mainly studying Black Holes, but in 1981 my interest in questions about the origin and fate of the universe was reawakened when I attended a conference on cosmology organized by the Jesuits in the Vatican. The Catholic Church had made a bad mistake with Galileo when it tried to lay down the law on a question of science, declaring that the sun went round the earth. Now, centuries later, it had decided to invite a number of experts to advise it on cosmology. At the end of the conference the participants were granted an audience with the Pope. He told us that it was all right to study the evolution of the universe after the Big Bang, but we should not inquire into the Big Bang itself because that was the moment of Creation and therefore the work of God. I was glad then that he did know the subject of the talk I had just given at the conference, the possibility that space-time was finite but had no boundary, which means that it had no beginning, no moment of Creation. I had no desire to share the fate of Galileo, with whom I feel a strong sense of identity, partly because of the coincidence of having been born exactly 300 years after his death!” ~Stephen Hawking, A Brief History of Time, New York: Bantam, 1988, pp. 115-16.

Philo also taught the preexistence of the soul, which is now imprisoned in the flesh. The wise man, therefore, will break the thralldom of the flesh, and will rise by a sort of ecstasy to the immediate vision of God. “In reality, however, the Church is passing through a crisis of growth. The outcome of her 'Growing pains' will be an Orthodoxy, which will perpetuate the victory of the mass over the individual, and will lay the foundation for the necessity of intolerance in God's name... The formula prescribed settled down into a tyranny, the initiative native to religious sentiment grows feeble and personal enthusiasm renders one suspect of heresy. Henceforth doctrine will take control of faith, an event of capital importance in the history of the Christian life.” ~Guignebert.

Why wouldn't the Christians be influenced by the Egyptians? “Philo without doubt imitated the Egyptians [Alexandrian Codex]; Clement unquestionably followed the example of Philo; and Origen trod closely in the footsteps of both. The more recent Christian teachers, for the most part, formed themselves upon the model of this latter Father. The secret discipline of Philo consisted in the application of philosophical principles to religion and the Sacred writings; nor was that of Clement ever thought to differ from it, except by those who had not sufficiently informed themselves upon the subject.” ~Mosheim, History.

“Religion can be brusquely characterized as that philosophy, which is emotionalized, often consisting of neither fact nor any truly arguable elements.” ~E. Christopher Reyes.

It is now recognized Christian teachings, which assimilated into Christianity, and once assimilated by the various Gnostic sects. “Gnosticism is Christianity perverted by learning and speculation.” ~Dr. Gwatkin, Early Church History, pg. 73.

“With him God cannot exert any action upon the world of matter, except through intermediate agency, the Jewish angels and the heathen demons. Philo has much to say in regard to the 'Logos.' His utterances on this subject may be compared with what is said of the attributes of 'Wisdom' in chapter 8 of the Book of Prov, and also with the Logos or 'Word' of the Gospel of John. With Philo, the 'Logos' is the power of God, or the Divine reason endowed with energy, and embracing within itself all subordinate powers. The 'Logos' is impersonal in its relations to God; and herein is one huge difference between Philo's conception and that in the Gospel. Philo teaches that the 'Logos' is the only firstborn of God, the chief of the angels, the viceroy of God, and representative of man." ~Gnosticism by John Rutherford

Marcionism flourishes in the West until about the 4th century, where it is immersed by Manichaeism [Mani, AD 216-276, Persian youth who experiences visions in which an angel appoints him as the Prophet of the Ultimate Revelation. On his first missionary journey, Mani reaches India, where he is heavily influenced by Buddhism. Protected by the new Persian Emperor, Shapur I, who reigned from AD 241-72, Mani preaches throughout the Indian Empire and sends his missionaries as far away as the furthest boundaries of the Roman Empire, into South Africa and easterly into China. Traces of Manichaeism remain in the East into medieval times where it also becomes a rival to the established Church. Mani proclaimed himself to be the last Prophet in a succession that includes Zoroaster, Buddha, and Jesus, whose revelations he taught contained his own doctrines. Manichaeism mirrors the influence of Gnosticism, Zoroastrianism and Christianity. Christian writers such as Justin, Irenaeus, and Tertullian attack the tenets of Marcionism].

Myths are created to perpetuate both the dead and the living. "First among whom is named a certain king Nimrod, the magic art having been handed down to him as by a flash, whom the Greeks, also called Ninus, and from whom the city of Nineveh took its name. Thus, therefore, diverse and erratic superstitions took their beginning from the Magic art. For, because it was difficult to draw away the human race from the love of God, and attach them to deaf and lifeless images, the Magicians made use of higher efforts, that men might be turned to erratic worship, by signs among the stars, and motions brought down as it were from Heaven, and by the will of God. And those who had been first deceived, collecting the ashes of Zoroaster, who, as we have said, was burned up by the indignation of the Demon, to whom he had been too troublesome, brought them to the Persians, that they might be preserved by them with perpetual watching, as Divine fire fallen from Heaven, and might be worshiped as a Heavenly God." ~The Recognitions of Clement, About the Recognitions and Homilies. 4.29, Fire-Worship of the Persians.

"But the practice of superstition is so congenial to the multitudes that, if they are forcibly awakened, they still regret the loss of their pleasing vision." ~Gibbon, Rise and Fall, 418.

Jesus says... What did Jesus truly say? Biblical sayings of Jesus are paraphrased in numerous mythological narratives, which explains how the recitations from the ancient Indian epic, the Mahabharata, appear almost verbatim in the Christian Gospels of today. ~e.g., Matthew 1:25, 2:11, 8:1-4, 9:1-8, 9:18-26, and why passages from the Phenomena of the Greek statesman Aratus of Sicyon [271-213 B.C.E.] are also in the Christian New Testament.

Justin Martyr, previously a Pagan philosopher, will claim the heretics refuse the Communion. "This food is known among us as the Eucharist. We do not receive this as a common bread and common drink, but Jesus our Savior, being made flesh by the work of God."

"A heretic was defined as anyone who wavered in the slightest from the Catholic faith: 'If any man should disturb the Catholic faith, he is deserving of deportation [banishment, which meant loss of properties and other material wealth].'" ~Code 16.4.3.

The Christians will create a 'Humanized' version of the distant god[s] of the Pagans, borrowing as they will, so that man will be closer and more accepting of the priest-craft who have for mileniums have victimized the unknowing.

Marcion attempts to disentangle the Christian teachings from the Hebrew theology by canonizing New Testament Scriptures, editing his works with a strong Anti-Jewish sentiment [hence the name, "Jesus," which is the Greek version of "Yehoshua"].

Where's Jesus in literature? Where he could not be found the Christians created writings to confirm his existence. "As early as the first few centuries of the present era pious Christians searched the Jewish and Pagan writers for references to Jesus, convinced that such references ought to be found in them; they regarded with great concern the undeniable defects of tradition, and, in the interest of their faith, endeavoured to supply the want by more or less astute 'Pious frauds,' such as the Acts of Pilate, the letter of Jesus to King Abgar Ukkama of Edessa, the letter of Pilate to Tiberius, and similar forgeries. still was the reliance on the few passages in profane literature, which seemed to afford some confirmation of the historical truth of the things described in the Gospels." ~Arthur Drews.

"For one who is seeking historical truth... A record held sacred is for the most part fundamentally vitiated." ~[Vitiated [Random House]: 1. spoiled; marred. 2. perverted; corrupted. 3. rendered invalid.]. Tacitus, 1, 2, 13. p. 25-56

Marcion, the anti-Semite, places great emphasis on the Religious City, Jerusalem, and the site where King Solomon's Temple was destroyed and where the Jews are exiled by the Babylonians in the year 586 B.C.E. Jerusalem is the destination of the annual Jewish pilgrimages since religious obligations can only be fulfilled in the Temple. All sacred and secular Jewish law and power becomes concentrated in the city of Jerusalem.

In 539 B.C.E., the Persians conquered Babylonia and allowed the Jews to return to Jerusalem. The construction of a Second Temple is then undertaken on the top of the ruins of the old Temple. Jerusalem is then captured by Alexander the Great in 333 B.C.E., and after the death of Alexander, the "Sacred City," comes under the rule of the Egyptians and later, by the Syrians.

The Syrian ruler Antiochus IV attempts to wipe out the Jewish religion by destroying a large part of Jerusalem in BC 168. This causes a Jewish revolt by the Maccabees, under the leadership of Judas Maccabeus, a member of a priestly ruling family, the Hasmonaeans.

Antiochus forbids the practice of keeping kosher and studying the Torah; Torah scrolls are publicly burned, and swine are sacrificed over sacred Jewish books to defile them. Antiochus is obsessed by swine, knowing that this animal is particularly repugnant to the Jews, and forces the High Priest to institute swine sacrifices inside the Holy Temple in Jerusalem, permitting worship in the temple of a whole array of Greek gods. ~see 1 Maccabees 1:41-64.

Antiochus forbids circumcision, which to the Jews, is the physical, tangible sign of their covenant with God, and also the one thing the Greeks, who worship the perfection of the human body, find most abhorrent [Alexander the Great also found mutilation of one's self a barbaric custom]. To the Greeks, circumcision is a mutilation of the body.

"Women who allowed their sons to be circumcised were killed with their sons tied around their necks. The scholars of Israel were hounded, hunted down and killed. Jews who refused to eat pork or sacrifice hogs were tortured to death... Even the smallest hamlet in Judah was not safe from the oppression of the Hellenists." ~Rabbi Berel Wein, Echoes of Glory.

In the second half of the 2nd century, a Christian convert named Montanus succeeds in convincing many that he had been given a personal revelation directly from God that the Second Coming was at hand. It would happen at Pepuza [near modern Angora]. "The prophet's personality and eloquence won him a host of disciples, who flocked in such numbers to the appointed spot that a new town sprang up to house them."

Like the early Christian Fathers [the Orthodox Church], he was also after the tithes and offerings meant for the poor. But hear his own words respecting Montanus, "His actions and his teaching show who this new teacher is. This is he who taught the dissolution of marriage; who made Laws for fasting; who named Pepuza and Tymion, small towns in Phrygia, Jerusalem, wishing to gather people to them from all directions; who appointed collectors of money; who contrived the receiving of gifts under the name of offerings; who provided salaries for those who preached his doctrine, that its teaching might prevail through gluttony." ~Prolegomena: The Life and Writings of Eusebius of Caesarea: Testimonies of the Ancients Against Eusebius.

"That Jesus on His coming was seized and slain by the Jews, with at least the connivance of the Demiurge, Marcion admitted. But as this might seem like a defeat of the Supreme Being by His inferior, he was forced to accept the theory called Docetism, which was in favor with many other Gnostics. According to this, the body of Jesus was not real flesh and blood, and had indeed no actual existence, but was a phantasm, which only appeared to mankind in the likeness of a man. Hence it mattered nothing that this body, which did not really exist, appeared to suffer, to be slain, and even to Rise Again. The Supreme God was not mocked, and the resurrection of the body was to Marcion [who helped write the Gospels and add anti-Semitic prose] a thing unthinkable." ~Forenumners and Rivals of Christianity, From 330 B.C. to 330 A.D., Francis Legge, vol. 2, 210-211.

Maccabeus liberates Jerusalem from the Syrians in BC 165 and later extends the Hasmonaean rule over a large part of Judea. This Jewish history of subjugation and revolt is balked at by Marcion who sees the constant threat of the Romans hanging over the new religion [Christianity] due to its Jewish teachings and strong Jewish ties [holding sacred Jewish holidays, practicing Jewish rituals, etc].

The power of the Romans had been manifested by the conquest of Jerusalem in BC 63 by the Roman General Pompey the Great, and Herod the Great becoming the Roman appointed king of Judea in 37 B.C.E. During his administration [lasting until BC 4], Herod rebuilds the Sacred Temple of the Jews, constructing a fortress like structure, and embellishing other buildings in the city of Jerusalem.

The retaining walls built by Herod [part of the Temple Mount] stands today as the Western Wall. Subsequent to Herod's reign, a series of Roman governors are installed. 26 to 36AD, the ruling governor is Pontius Pilate, who sentences Jesus to be crucified for treason [Jesus is believed to be a zealot attempting to overthrow the Roman regime. If the Jews had sentenced Jesus to death he would have been "Stoned to death," as is prescribed by Jewish Law].

Marcion, knowing the history of the Jewish revolts against the Roman rulers, the most recent two being in AD 66 [In the Jewish attempt to grasp a glimpse of freedom by capturing parts of Jerusalem in the face of a Roman Legionnaire who laid siege until AD 70], and the last revolt in AD 132-35, sees a way to gain acceptance from the Roman oppressors.

Marcion perceives of an alliance with the Romans in which the New Faith will denounce its ancestry and proclaim itself as independent of the Jews. Titus, son of the Roman Emperor Vespasian, in his anger against the rebellious Jews, has their Temple destroyed [except for the Western Wall] and captures Jerusalem [The city suffers near complete destruction during this last Jewish Rebellion] defeating the Jews being led by the zealot Simon Bar Kokhba, and consequently, banishing the Jews from the city. Roman Emperor Hadrian rebuilds Jerusalem as a Pagan city, and changes its name to Aelia Capitolina.

By denouncing the Jews Marcion hopes to gain favor in the eyes of the Romans and present the "New Faith" as a friend of the conquerors. Marcion's major claim to fame, as generally acknowledged by most Christian historians, is that he produced the earliest known New Testament canon, which paved the way for the Catholic version of Christ.

The New Faith, having no history of rebellion and being declared the enemy of the Jews who killed their "Savior" can assist the Romans in their quest for peace and domination in Jerusalem. Romans were drawn to the Judaism and its high moral character, but were reluctant to being circumcised. Accepting parts of the Torah made them a sort of "Honorary Member," and they became known as "God fearers."

By affiliating with the Christians, they could accept the faith without the strict requirements of the Jews and their suspicious history of revolutions. Hence, we have an accord in which the Romans continue to exterminate the Jews and the new Christian-Jewish faith doing naught to protect them, although many Christians can claim, and rightfully so, that many Popes have passed encyclicals in protection of their Jewish brethren.

Yet, history will also show that over twenty proclamations throughout the past have done little to protect the mass murder of Jews as most Popes were reluctant to enforce their decrees or punish the sinners.

"In the early days of Christianity all sensible Jews were witnesses against the faith [Christianized-Jews], and in this way excited the hostility of the orthodox. Every sensible Jew knew that no miracles had been performed in Jerusalem. They all knew that the sun had not been darkened, that the graves had not given up their dead, that the veil of the temple had not been rent in twain, and they told what they knew. They were then denounced as the most infamous of human beings, and this hatred has pursued them from that day to this." ~The Jews by Robert Green Ingersoll History will now be re-written by the Christianized Jews for the new Christians are now separated from their previous Christian-Jewish "Nom de plume" and have now formed an "Unholy Alliance" with the Romans in which they share a mutual condemnation of all Jews, which will elevate the status of the new church and its followers [so they think, but new Roman Emperors will prove them wrong in the 3rd and 4th centuries].

The term, "Purity of Faith" is a term to be coined later to justify the discriminating changing of the old Scriptures [the Jewish Laws] to reconcile the attitudes and beliefs of the New Church Fathers. The death of Jesus will be laid on the Jews and for one thousand eight hundred and fifty years, the Jews will now suffer the scourge of the Christians for killing their "Savior."

The cruel injustices imposed upon the people and the monarchies began to instill a sense of restlessness and of nationality in the civil rulers. "Fear is the parent of cruelty, and therefore it is no wonder if cruelty and religion go hand in hand." ~Lord Bertrand Russell.

Much of the cruelties, diabolical tortures of the Inquisition, and burning at the stake, attributed to the Dark Ages, and Middle Ages, can also be credited to Augustine, "His [Augustine's] doctrine constitutes a landmark, erects a ledge, as it were, in the increasingly steep climb upwards of the faith. For this reason it can be said with equal exactness that all the Medieval evaluation of Christian theology in the West originated with Saint Augustine. He is the founder of the Mysticism of the Reformation as well as of the Middle Ages, and he is an inspiration to Protestantism as he was to the Medieval Church... His doctrine is looked up to as the supreme authority by the doctors of all schools... Finally his opinions upon certain essential points of the faith, on grace and on predestination, for instance, or upon the connection between reason and revelation, from his times to our own, have supplied the grist for all the discussions of the theologians. His dread statements also on the necessity of punishing the sacrilegious furnish the justification in advance, of all the later Medieval intolerance and the Inquisition." ~Shadow of the Third Century: A Reevaluation of Christianity by Alvin Boyd Kuhn, PH. D.

To forestall and check the dangerous restlessness of its people, Kings, and nascent nationality, the Church devised that since Christian time-honored conspiracy of joining restless factions in a war on some common enemy. Thus to prevent domestic difficulties and continue in its quest for 'World Domination,' was born the gargantuan wickedness and wrong of the Crusades, for the pretended rescue of the empty and apocryphal "Sepulchre of Christ from the Infidel." The crusades were anything but Holy or staffed with an enlisted army of spiritually minded people. They consisted mainly of poor working class people, thieves, and murderers who were told their all their sins would be forgiven if they took up the sword for Jesus by Pope Urban II.

The crusades were among the bloodiest and vilest epochs in human history, with the Christian crusaders more terrorist than theologians, giving vent to rampage, rape, sodomy, and the murder of women and children, leaving the Muslims and Jews of the time (and to this day) to understand the word "Crusade" to mean "Slaughter and defilement of women and children." ~Albertus Aquensis [Albert of Aix], Liber Christianae Expeditionis pro Ereptione, Emundatione et Restitutione Sanctae Hierosolymitanae in Recueil des Historiens des Croisades. Historiens Occidentaux, 5 vols, Paris, France: Académie des Inscriptions et Belles Lettres, 1872-1906. vol. IV: I, 16-22, pp. 284-289.

"The religious crusades were nothing more than mass execution orders aimed at true Christians (Essenes), for the Roman Church feared the True Gospel more than anything else in the world, because it revealed the true nature of Jesus' life style and true message for the people. Hence it should come as no great surprise that such humane teachings were banished in the first place, for there was simply no room for law-loving people, who would not raise arms against their fellow man or any creature of God, who would not vote in political parties, or compromise true Kingdom loyalty, who could not be ordered to steal others' goods, or to cheat someone of their rightful inheritance, who could not be made to eat animal flesh or drink blood even at the threat of losing their lives-no, who could not be made or forced to compromise pure worship of the only True God, and the keeping of His Holy Laws." ~The Essene Humane Gospel of Jesus, Translated From The Original Hebrew And Aramaic Texts, Typesetting by: Followers of the Essene Way [F.E.W.]

No one's life is spared in the Vatican's war against heretics, Jews, and non-Catholics. A papal representative, writing to Pope Innocent III in Rome, announced proudly that, "Neither age nor sex nor status was spared." ~Eric Wynants, The Church's War On The Cathars.

"Those persons who may be discovered to deviate even in a minor point of doctrine from the tenets and the faith of the Catholic religion are included in the designation of heretics, and must be subject to the sanctions issued against these heretics." ~Code 16.5.28.

"He [Jesus] did not come bearing a new religion, nor even a new rite... Nor did He aim at changing either its Creed or its Law or its worship. The central point of His teaching was the Messianic idea, which was common property to nearly all his compatriots as much as to him, and only his conception of it was his own." ~Charles Guignebert, Ancient, Medieval and Modern Christianity, p. 44.

Religious miscreants from all walks of life will join the Crusades in order to have conferred upon them the 'Rights of passage' bestowing upon them 'Eternal Bliss' given by the Vicars of Christ for defending the Church by murdering all who oppose the 'Faith.' This Catholicized titanic scheme and its purposes are naively confessed by the mammoth tome of Christianity in which they coerce the world, under threat of fear, torture, persecution, excommunication, and even death to come under their universal dominion.

"The idea of the Crusades corresponds to a political conception, which was realized in Christendom only from the 11th to the 15th century: this supposes a union of all peoples and sovereigns under the direction of the Popes... The history of the Crusades is therefore intimately connected with that of the Popes and the Church. These Holy Wars were essentially a Papal enterprise. The idea of quelling all dissensions among Christians, of uniting them under the same standard and sending them forth against the Mohammedans was conceived in the 11th century, at a time when there were as yet no organized states in Europe." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 4, 543, 556.

And with the Crusades came the infamous 'Inquisition,' the villainous and evil 'Gestapo' of the Roman Church, improperly called upon in 1231, with the constitution 'Excommunicamus' of Pope Gregory IX, to impress upon the innocents the 'New World Order' of Christianity endearing unwilling subjects by fear and if need be, brute force. What happened to Scripture? "Owe no man anything, but to love one another." ~Romans 13:8.

The Catholic Inquisition will torture, maim, and murder while acting courteously after their atrocious crimes; horrific religious butchery, all in the name of God, "... The Inquisition's secret procedures, its eagerness to accept denunciations, its use of torture, the absence of counsel for the accused, the lack of any right to confront hostile witnesses, and the practice of confiscating the property of those who were condemned and sharing it between the Inquisition, the crown, and the accusers, all this inspired great terror, as indeed it was meant to do..." ~Encyclopaedia Britannica, article: Spanish Inquisition.

The world would be compelled to bow down to the Vicars of Christ. "The Church has received from God the power to reprove those who wander from the 'truth,' [the declared continually changing Papal version] not only by spiritual but by corporeal penalties, such as imprisonment, flagellation, mutilation and death." ~Reinach. Cf Luke 14:23.

"Countless people will hate the New World Order and will die protesting against it. When we attempt to evaluate its promise, we have to bear in mind the distress of a generation or so of malcontents, many of them quite gallant and graceful-looking people." ~The New World Order, H. G Wells, 1939.

And with the death of hundreds of thousands of Jews murdered along the 'Yellow Brick Road' on the Holy Journey to Jerusalem, and the deaths of thousands of infidel Muslims killed because they believed in Christ, but not the Church, the Holy Mother, the Roman Church has the impudence and audacity to claim that significant good came of their efforts in proselytizing the world.

Hitler loved the dynamic methods used by early Christianity. What the Christian Crusades could not accomplish the Inquisition will, or nearly succeed, "... To rid the land of the Jews who persisted in their ancestral belief was not within the jurisdiction of the [Catholic] Church. That belonged to the state, and, according to the Canon Law, the Jew was not to be molested in the practice of his religion. But the moment Jews or Moors submitted to Baptism they became amenable to ecclesiastical discipline. Converted Jews in Spain were called 'Conversos,' or 'Maranos,' the newly converted, and it was with them, in its first period, that the Spanish Inquisition had chiefly to do. After Luther's doctrines began to spread it addressed itself to the extirpation of Protestants, but, until the close of its history, in 1834, the Jewish Christians constituted most of its victims." ~Encyclopaedia Britannica, article: Spanish Inquisition.

"Science built the Academy, superstition the Inquisition." ~Robert G. Ingersoll, 19th century American Free thinker.

In order to convert the Jews, and Pagans, circumcision is done away with in the Christian ritual, "But as [Jewish] circumcision was discarded by Christianity, and the sacrifices had ceased, Baptism remained the sole condition for initiation into religious life. The next ceremony, adopted shortly after the others, was the Imposition of Hands, which, it is known, was the usage of the Jews at the ordination of a Rabbi. Anointing with oil, which at first also accompanied the act of Baptism, and was analogous to the anointment of priests among the Jews, was not a necessary condition." ~Jewish Encyclopedia: Baptism.

"The Crusades brought about results of which the Popes had never dreamed, and which were perhaps the most important of all. They reestablished traffic between the East and West which, after having been suspended for several centuries, was then resumed with even greater energy; they were the means of bringing from the depths of their respective provinces and introducing into the most civilized Asiatic countries Western knights, to whom a new world was thus revealed, and who returned to their native land filled with novel ideas... Moreover, as early as the end of the 12th century, the development of general culture was the direct result of these Holy Wars... If, indeed, the Christian civilization of Europe has become Universal Culture, in the highest sense, the glory redounds, in no small measure, to the Crusades!" ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 4, 556.

What culture can the Church claim other than its vitriolic renditions of professed Holiness under the guise of being for the good of their benevolent Jesus? Quite the opposite occurred as the Church grudgingly admits, "The original aim of the Crusades, it is true, was not attained. But the civilization of Western Europe gained from the Orient the best the East had to give and thus was greatly aided in its development." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 5, 612.

And yet, few will ever hear or read of the atrocities committed in the name of the Lord, their Savior, as the Crusaders of Christ, the deputized military rabble of the Pope, captured Jerusalem in 1099 and rushed in to rescue the tomb of their dead God from the Infidels, and the streets of the Holy City ran with human blood up to the horses' bridles as "The Christians entered Jerusalem from all sides [July 15, 1099] and slew its inhabitants regardless of age or sex!" ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 4, 547, including the Christians who resided within the walls co-existing peacefully with the Muslim brothers.

Several Crusades will be launched to allegedly free the Holy Land from the Infidels [non-Christian Muslims], Christians believing that they are justified in killing non-Christians, for they are now the "New Chosen People," along the way to Jerusalem, hundreds of thousands of innocent Jews across Europe will pay penance for the pronouncement of this developing religion that the Jews are the ones that murdered the Redeemer.

They will be slaughtered by the millions during WWII, deprived of their lands in Germany, Spain, Russia, and all across Europe. The Jews' only sin is in believing in "God the Father" and not "God the Son." It will be nearly a century later, on September 17, 1187, when the great Muslim leader, Saladin, and his "Infidel hosts" recaptures the city and overthrows the Christian Kingdom of Jerusalem. ~Note: WWII is found in Daniel.

"The terrible religious wars that inundated the world with blood tended at least to bring all religion into disgrace and hatred. Thoughtful people began to question the Divine origin of a religion that made its believers hold the rights of others in absolute contempt. A few began to compare Christianity with the religions of heathen people, and were forced to admit that the difference was hardly worth dying for. They also found that other nations were even happier and more prosperous than their own. They began to suspect that their religion, after all, was not of much real value." ~Robert G. Ingersoll, The Gods, 1872.

"The first world was destroyed, as a punishment for human misdemeanors, by an all-consuming fire that came from above and below. The second world ended when the terrestrial globe toppled from its axis and everything was covered with ice. The third world ended in a universal flood. The present world is the fourth. Its fate will depend on whether its inhabitants behave in accordance with the Creator's plans." ~Hopi Myth.

Few Christians will ever read the truth... Not a murderous nor act of violence is perpetrated upon the Christians, or an outrage committed on the inhabitants, and the murderous hordes of Christ, after surrendering, were allowed to depart in peace. The Christians were beginning to learn what civilization was all about. Who now are the heathens? "And remember, where you have a concentration of power in a few hands, all too frequently men with the mentality of gangsters get control. History has proven that. All power corrupts; absolute power corrupts absolutely." ~Lord Acton, 1900.

The Crusades as acknowledged by the Church, "Those magnificent expeditions which, inspired and supported by the Church, brought huge masses of people into contact with the Orient... They were the means of spreading... The theories and methods of Arabian scholarship, at that time quite advanced, and thereby placing the researches of Western scholars on entirely new bases, and putting before them new aims and objects." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 6, 448.

"Inspired? The Bible is not even intelligent. It is not even good craftsmanship, but is full of absurdities and contradictions." ~E. Haldeman-Julius, The Meaning Of Atheism.

Jesus points to the Arabs as the future race when he calls them, "Another race." Even the New Testament supports this, "Therefore say I unto you, The Kingdom of God shall be taken from you, and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof." ~From the King James Version of the Bible, Matthew 21:43, www.answering-christianity.com/god_kingdom.htm.

A colossal confession of Christian failure, yet the Muslims are still portrayed as the adversary, being evil, cruel and diabolical in westernized movies today.

The proud and victorious Infidels travel Westward in their route of conquest, "The Moslems even crossed the Pyrenees, threatening to stable their horses in Saint Peter's at Rome, but were at last defeated by Charles Martel at Tours, in 732, just one hundred years from the death of Mohammed. This defeat arrested their Western conquests and saved Europe... They were finally conquered by the Mongols and Turks, in the 13th century, but the new conquerors adopted Mohammed's religion, and in the 15th century, overthrew the tottering Byzantine Empire [1453]. From that stronghold [Constantinople] they even threatened the German Empire, but were successfully defeated at the gates of Vienna, and driven back across the Danube, in 1683." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 10, 425.

During three hundred years of bloody and fanatical "Holy Wars," which helped to unite Christendom, but which also lost millions of lives and treasure in its vain efforts to "Liberate" the unoccupied grave of its Savior from the impudent impostors, the Crusading armies of the Cross were beaten and driven back from their sacred goal.

"This immense fact sowed the seeds of distrust throughout Christendom, and millions began to lose confidence in a God who had been vanquished by Mohammed... At that time the world believed in trial by battle, that God would take the side of the right, and there had been a trial by battle between the Cross and the Crescent, and Mohammed had been victorious." ~Col. Ingersoll.

It will not be until the year 2000 when Pope John Paul II personally seeks forgiveness from the Jewish Rabbis in Jerusalem that, "The Truth" makes a somewhat obscure appearance. The Pope had made previous gestures to the Jewish community but the Rabbis rebuked his efforts, because the Rabbis felt he should speak to them face to face rather than through written correspondence.

From the Christian perspective the vicarious sacrifice of their Messiah, Jesus on the cross, which is the forgiveness of our sin, is the derivation of their Gospel, but Jesus does not propose any condition for forgiveness of our sins as their ministry often claim, that condition is not Jesus' vicarious death on the cross as Jesus merely states that we shall be forgiven as we forgive, and we shall be judged as we judge others.

Dr. Tregelles assigns the insertion of the doxology [the forms of doxology: liturgical expressions to describe God] at the close of the Lord's Prayer in Matthew 6, which is lacking in most of the preeminent early Biblical authorities. Perhaps also Acts 8:37, containing the baptismal profession of faith, which is entirely lacking in the best authorities, found its way into the Latin text in this manner.

A step in the right direction has been made, but the Catholic Church still lacks "Transparency," and "Openness" with its congregation as it hoards hundreds of millions of dollars in ill gotten monies taken from the Jews, while Catholics now proclaim John Paul as being one of their 'Great Popes.' Pope John Paul II's apology is "A unilateral pronouncement by one party, which presumes to redress on its own terms a wrong that it does not admit..." ~Rabbi David Polish.

"It is obvious indeed that most religions, if analyzed into intellectual beliefs, are false; and I suppose that a thoroughly Orthodox member of any one of the million religious bodies that exist in the world must be clear in his mind that the other million minus one are wrong, if not wickedly wrong." ~Sir Gilbert Murray, Five Stages of Greek Religion, p. 21.

Unfortunately, Pope John Paul II speaks with a forked tongue, as he asks for forgiveness for the pedophiles in the Catholic Church, while, at the same time hides court documents and secrets away potential witnesses, whose testimony could be detrimental to the Church, e.g. Cardinal Law, of the Boston Archdiocese. The leopard has not changed its spots, and furthermore, the Papacy continues to suppress the whereabouts of another half dozen or so pedophiles sequestered within the Vatican walls. "The church has contributed nothing to civilization. It has progressed somewhat, and it has become a little more decent, in reflection of the movements of civilization that have taken place outside of the church and usually in the face of the strong opposition of the Church." ~E. Haldeman-Julius, The Church Is a Burden, Not a Benefit, In Social Life.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

Many of the early Christian concerns were about pedophilia, and not homosexuality between consenting adults, and even pedophilia was accepted among early Christians and Christian leaders for a long time ~Boswell, 1980, pages 131-132.

Saint John Chrysostom especially mentions the "Thousand arguments" that he was answered with for his criticism of pederasty among the Christians, "If [the chaste or disapproving] happen to be insignificant, they are beaten up; if they are powerful, they are mocked, laughed at, refuted with a thousand arguments... The parents of the abused youths bear this in silence and neither sequester their sons nor seek any remedy for the evil." ~Boswell, 1980, pages 362-3, J. Boswell, Christianity, Social Tolerance, and Homosexuality, Chicago, U of Chicago P, 1980, quoted in Saint Paul's Lists of Sins <http://www.geocities.com/pharsea/PaulineLists.html>

Chrysostom's disapproval of child molesting is ordinary to modern ears as his passion for the subject may well arise from his having been a victim in his youth. Chrysostom's testimony provides us with how unusual his opinion was at the time. Child molesting was/is a form of both heterosexuality and homosexuality, but it is by no means the only overt appearance. "But those who roam outside of these, they seek after pleasures beyond nature, desiring to [do what the arsenokoitai do]." ~Bishop Eusebius.

The significant repudiation and alienation of Christians from their Jewish roots may have been caused by the change in the membership of the Church that took place by the end of the 2nd century, with the Gentiles being accepted into the fold in vast numbers without the required ritual of circumcision, and were frowned upon by the Jewish hard liners who saw this "Easy way" as not abiding to their Jewish laws. The Christians, with Gentile backgrounds, began to outnumber their Jewish Christians members.

The creative work of the Apostle Paul is influential, in that being born a Jew, and having traveled, he became profoundly involved in the destiny of the new Christian-Judaism. As a result of his conversion, he believed that he alone was the "Chosen Mechanism" to bring the message of the Resurrected Christ to the Gentiles. Paul is the one who formulates in his Epistles to the early Christian congregations, many of the ideas and terms that are to constitute the essence of Christian belief. After Christ's so-called Resurrection His disciples continued to remain within the religious fold of Judaism, and this small community of believers was later called a sect by the Jews. ~Acts 24:5, 28:22.

With the assimilation of Judaism, Paganism, and Hellenism, the now Church controlled the thinking, implementation, and influence of the New Faith, with the strictest of authority, "An edifice for which Judaism provided the foundations, and all the materials of the superstructure were obtained from the Hellenistic world in which Greek and more accurately Eastern [Asiatic, Syrian, Mesopotamian, Iranian and Egyptian] influences were mingled, from the time of Alexander. The Western world was prepared for Christian permeation by the propaganda done on their own behalf, on the long commercial routes or in the camps, by various Oriental religious Redeeming cults, such as that of Isis and the Great Mother [Cybele] of Phrygia, of Mithra and others. But it took no part itself in the formation of the new religion. It gulped it down whole, as it were, and after assimilation by it, Christianity became more massive and stricter." ~Guignebert.

But it was still purely Jewish. Although their teachings were highly unpopular, Christians continued to the Temple to worship and to preach their version of the Gospel. ~Acts 2:46-47, 3:1, 5:20.

The New Jerusalem Bible, in its Introduction to Paul, makes this declaration, "It is important to remember that Paul's letters were not meant as theological treatises: most of them represent his response to a particular situation in a particular Church... Paul's letters do not give any systematic and exhaustive exposition of his teaching; they presuppose the oral teaching, which preceded them, and enlarge and comment only upon certain points of that." ~The New Jerusalem Bible, ed. Henry Wansbrough, New York: Doubleday and Co., 1985, p.1852f.

Paul's letters are translated based on the Codex Claromontanus. The remainder of the New Testament is based upon the Codex Alexandrinus. The Church Excommunicates Marcion, Bishop and heretic, who claims that there is total opposition and no connection at all between the Old Testament and the New Testament, and no correlation between the God of the Jews and the God of the Christians, and that the Canon [list of inspired writings] of the Bible, which consists only of parts of Saint Luke's Gospel and the ten letters of Saint Paul.

Marcionism is checked at Rome by 200 C.E., Marcion is condemned by a council held there about 260 C.E., but his heresy persists for several centuries in the East and has some adherents as late as the Middle Ages.

AD144-Iraneaus of Lyon directs his Adversus Haereseis primarily against the Paganistic Gnostics, and uses the Canonical Gospels to defend his position. He distinguishes between the 'Old' and the 'New' Testaments. Iraneaus is the first Christian theologian [amalgamating the apologetic focus on the teachings of Jesus with the Paulinian view on the redemptoric power of Christ's Passion & Resurrection and the primacy of the Bishops and the Bishop of Rome as suggested by Clement I]. But, Iraneause implies Jesus did not die on the cross but survived his ordeal! "The first Christians are Jews without exception. For them this is not simply a fact, but a part of their conscious conviction. For them their faith is not a new religion, which leads them away from the Jewish religion." ~Hans Conzelmann, History of Primitive Christianity, p. 37.

"The Apostle Paul was not acceptable to the Elkasites, and Mani's at least partial acceptance of him was no doubt a very controversial issue amongst his monastery and early followers. Mani was able to accept the writings of Paul because of the distance between himself and this apostle, whereas the earlier tradition had certain cultural apprehensions about accepting him and his writings due to the tension that then existed between the Nazorean and Roman Christian cultures. By Mani's day the affect Paul might have on the traditional Nazorean culture was minimal, yet even the Manichaeans warned that many untrue things yet lurked in Paul's writings... The Bishop Faustus would later remark in a public debate with Augustine that he did not believe many of the things written in the writings ascribed to Paul. This cautionary approach to Paul was no doubt begun by Mani despite his acceptance of Paul's rapture experiences."

~Nazorean Commentary.

AD150-215-Clement of Alexandria, the ologian, at times considered a Saint, expounds upon the idea of the "Divine Nature" of Christ [Mark 1:9-11.] Akin to Adoptionism that states, "Although Christ is the Son of God, in respect to divine nature as a man, he is only adopted to be the firstborn Son of God."

Later, Synods in AD 792, 794 and 799 denounce this rational as heresy by accepting the definition of Saint Augustine [AD 354].

Adoptionism attempts to explain the moment of Christ's becoming identified as God, which is with his Baptism, when a dove descends from heaven and a Divine voice announces that Christ is the "Son of God" [Mark 1:9-11]. This Doctrine gives occurrence to three Synods, meeting at: Ratisbon [AD 792], Frankfort [AD 794], and Aix-la-Chapelle [AD 799], and at each of these Synods Adoptionism is condemned as heresy, as we have a conflict between the empire builders versus the truth seekers.

Jesus is represented in the catacombs as two fishes crossed, not unlike "The sacred monogram." ~The Dagon is mentioned in 1 Samuel 2.

The dove is the symbol of the "Spirit" among all the nations of antiquity, as it is now with Christians. The Samaritans had a "Brazen fiery dove," instead of a "Brazen fiery serpent;" both referring to fire as the symbol of the "Holy Ghost." Buddha is represented, as is Jesus, with a dove hovering over his head. The goddess Juno is often represented with a dove on her head. It is also seen on the heads of the images of Astarte, Cybele, and Isis.

The Virgin Mary, ascending upon the crescent moon, is frequently seen in pictures as the modern adaptation of Isis rising heavenward. The dove, sacred to Venus, was intended as a symbol of the "Holy Spirit;" signifying incubation, by which was figuratively expressed the fructification of inert matter, caused by the vital spirit or breath, ruach in Hebrew, and Pneuma in Greek. Where would Fishermen [the Apostles], learn of the Pneuma of God? ~Cf. Acts 4:13.

Mary, the mothr of Jesus, also has her numerous religious relics:

1. 55. Hair, ranging from blond to black.
2. 56. robes and mantles.
3. 57. veils.
4. Girdles: the one dropped by Mary when ascending to Heaven, at Prato. In 1638 Ann of Austria, pregnant of Louis XIV, had this girdle sent twice to her from Puy Notre Damae in Anjou.
5. Slippers.
6. Crown.
7. Chapelet.
8. Tears.
9. Autograph.
10. Coffin. Emperor requested Bishop Juvenalis to send it to Constantinople, which is quite

To Pope Pius XII. "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

incomprehensible since Mary [allegedly] ascended into Heaven.

11. House at Nazareth: discovered by the Roman harlot, now Empress Helena, translated later by angels to Loretto [Italy].

Fasting, scourging, shaving of heads [Pope Stephan VII], "Tonsure," rosary beads, white surplices, mitres, craziers, etc., were customs and symbols of the ancient Egyptians, and some, also, of the Babylonians.

Unable to endure their Lord Jesus being born of woman, the Holy Fathers derived the analogous proposal, to save their endangered virginity of "The prolific but ever Virgin Mother of God," Saint Mary, that she "Per Aurem Concepit" ... "Conceived through her ear," as sung in the sacred Hymn of the Church: "Gaude Virgo, Mater Christi, Quae Per Aurem Concepisti, Gabriels Nuntio." ~From Lecky's, Rationalism in Europe, 1, p. 212. Note: The Rosary, according to Catholic Tradition, was also originally designed as an instrument to aid in the battle against Albigensians.

From the very beginning the Church has sought to obscure the truth, "For even if they should say something true, one who loves the truth should not, even so, agree with them. For not all true things are the truth, nor should that truth which merely seems true according to human opinions be preferred to the true Truth, according to Faith." ~Clement of Alexandria, 2nd century C.E. regarding other religious sects.

What a preponderance of pomposity and verbal excesses. The Catholic Church can claim whatever it wants without having to make sense logically, rationally, philosophically, religiously, morally and sometimes even ethically.

This predominance of verbosity lacking substance shall continue for centuries and into the modern day era. Papal Infallibility has declared that, "It will never be lawful to restrict inspiration merely to certain parts of the Holy Scripture, or to grant that the sacred writers could have made a mistake. ... They render in exact language, with infallible truth, all that God commanded and nothing else; without that, God would not be the Author of the Scripture in its entirety." ~Pope Leo XIII, Encyc. Provid. Deus; Catholic Encyclopedia. Vol. ii, 543.

Religion is quite hypocritical as the announcement of 'Divine Inspiration' is an effective police, it should therefore be discarded, except for such good moral precepts as are to be found in it as in all religions and all moral systems.

It "Requires the acceptance and practice not of the religion one may choose, but of that, which God prescribes... To be the only true one," as asserted by His Holiness, the Roman Catholic Pope Leo XIII, in the Encyclical 'Immortale Dei,' of November 1, 1885. ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 14, 764.

The Greek priest who forged the "Gospel According to Saint Matthew," having before him the false Septuagint translation of Isaiah, fables the Jewish Virgin Mary yielding to the embraces of the Angel Gabriel to engender Jesus, and backs it up by appeal to the Septuagint translation of Isaiah 7:14, "Behold, a virgin shall be with child, and shall bring forth a son, and they shall call his name 'Emmanuel.'" ~Matthew 1:23.

Throughout the Bible, angels [Sons of God] are continually referred to as only men, "It is logical to say... That the female was created specifically for the human race in order that it could be kept in existence; and that all Angels were created males, in as much as their kind is kept in existence without the reproduction process. Angels were created innumerable to start with [Hebrews 12:22] whereas, the human multitudes began with one pair." ~Finis Drake, cf. Matthew 22:30.

These "Sons of God" were sent down to teach mankind truth and justice; and for three hundred years did indeed teach Cain's son Enoch all the secrets of Heaven and of Earth. ~The Sons of God and the Daughters of Men: Notes from the Books of Ysrael. From Hebrew Myths: The Book of Genesis By Robert Graves and Raphael Patai, <http://www.piney.com/index.html>, Chapter 18 p. 100-107. cf. Genesis 6:1-7.

"Two things, however, rendered the Septuagint unwelcome in the long run to the Jews. Its divergence from the accepted text [afterward called the Masoretic] was too evident; and it therefore could not serve as a basis for theological discussion or for homiletic interpretation. This distrust was accentuated by the fact that it had been adopted as Sacred Scripture by the new faith [Christianity]. A revision in the sense of the Canonical Jewish text was necessary. This revision was made by a proselyte, Aquila, who lived during the reign of Hadrian, 117-138 C.E." ~Jewish Encyclopedia: Bible Translations: Aquila.

Christians, the world over, have been deceived with false translations of Isaiah's original Hebrew, with the mistranslated words of, "Hinne ha-almah harah ve-yeldeth ben ve-karath shem-o immanuel," which, falsely translated by the insincere pen of the pious translators, runs thus in the English: "Behold, a virgin shall conceive and bear a son, and shall call his name Immanuel." ~Isaiah 7:14.

The Hebrew words ha-almah means simply the young woman; and harah is the Hebrew past or perfect tense, 'Conceived,' which in Hebrew, as in English, represents past and completed action, but Saint Jerome's Hebrew is not as good as the Church professes.

Honestly translated, the verse reads: "Behold, the young woman has conceived [is with child], and beareth a son and calleth his name Immanuel."

Almah means simply a young woman, of marriageable age, whether married or not, whether a virgin or not; in a broad general sense exactly like the word girl or maid in English, when we say shop-girl, parlor-maid, bar-maid, without reference to or vouching for her technical virginity. In Hebrew, virgin, is always expressed by the word bethulah.

But in the Septuagint translation into Greek, the Hebrew almah was erroneously rendered into the Greek parthenos, virgin, with the definite article ha' in Hebrew, and e in Greek, then rendered into the indefinite 'A' by later falsifying translators. ~See Is It God's Word? pp. 277-279; EB. ii, 2162; New Commentary on the Holy Scripture, Pt. I, p. 439.

"The Catholic Christians are guilty of committing the moral crime of appropriating the Sacred Writings of another people in order to validate the existence of their Divine hero. They forged and otherwise fabricated the entire literature of their Church in order to provide an historical foundation for their faith. Along with their fellow Christians, they have corrupted the minds of countless millions over the centuries." ~Nicholas Carter, The Christ Myth Indicts the Christians.

The deception by the early Christian Fathers cannot be stressed enough, for two thousand years later, they will still deny the religious ruse perpetrated upon their flock. Rebekah was a "Bethulah, neither had any man known her." ~Genesis 24:16.

"He shall take a wife in her virginity [bethulah]. A widow, or a divorced woman, or profane, or a harlot, these shall he not take: but he shall take a virgin [bethulah]" ~Leviticus 21: 13, 14.

"If a damsel [naarah] that is a virgin [bethulah] be betrothed," etc. ~Deuteronomy 22:23.

If a husband find his new wife "Not a maid [bethulah]," then upon his complaint her parents must "Bring forth the tokens of the virginity [bethulah] of the maid [naarah]." ~Deuteronomy 22: 14, 15.

Jephthah's daughter, doomed to be a living sacrifice to Yahveh, asked time to "Bewail my virginity [bethulah]." ~Judges 11:37, 38.

Biblical citations should suffice to make clear the correctness of definitions, but they don't, "Bethulah conveys the idea of virginity, of a young unmarried woman; 'almah' is used simply of a young woman of marriageable age." ~New Standard Bible Dictionary, p. 939.

Saint Jerome, in his Biblical translation [Vulgate], falsely uses the Latin word 'Virgo,' but a virgin birth appeals to the Church, since the Pagans also had their virgins births, this would help facilitate conversions, and although Jerome received much criticism from his colleagues, the Church chose to keep his version.

The early Gospels have been decadently corrupted, tainted, and stained by those who claim to represent the Lord, and Savior, Jesus. They have "Been altered in many places" and are, "Not to be accepted as true."

"As early as the 2nd century B.C.E. the Jews perceived the error and pointed it out to the Greeks; but the [Christian] Church knowingly persisted in the false reading, and for over fifteen centuries she has clung to her error." ~So states the distinguished Hebrew scholar and critic, Salomon Reinach, Orpheus, p. 197.

The Church will not always be able to rely on its congregation not questioning their edicts for this translates to, "Do not think, just follow!" Upon the death of Peter, Mark travels to Alexandria whereupon he completes his Gospel. Theologians still argue as to the Gospel of Mark as there appears to be a cognitive dissonance in the manner in which it is written; The oldest manuscripts of the Gospel of Mark end at verse 5:8, ch. 16, as the rest of the last chapter is in an entirely different style, which flatly negates what precedes. In Mark 5:7 an Angel says to the women: "Go your way, tell His disciples and Peter that he goeth before you into Galilee; there shall ye see Him, as He said unto you." According to the writer of the Gospel, as it originally appeared, the three women told nobody, for they were all afraid.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

So the new writer of Mark [v 9] makes Jesus appear in person to one of the women, and she goes to tell the "Mourning and weeping" Disciples. The Disciples refuse to believe in the women; and a second apparition was heard of by them with the same refusal to believe. These knowledgeable men had, presumably, seen daily proof for two or three years that Jesus was God, and Mark says that he had foretold of Jesus' Resurrection to them; but they stubbornly refused to believe in his power to come to life again and they timorously thought that the whole business was finished!

The entire passage from Mark, v 9 onward is preposterous. The whole final added narrative of Mark is a tissue of controversial interpolations and contradictions. Joseph of Arimathea had already [Mark 15:46] had Jesus' body properly prepared for burial, and even the officer in charge of the soldiers is made to say, at the cross, "Truly this man was the Son of God."

God reincarnated in human shape has died and released mankind from the curse of Adam and Eve. Yet the women weep profusely, being 'Amazed,' 'Afraid,' they sneak off into quiet corners to whisper to each other. Of the beauty of Resurrection and life Renewed, yet, it is a most clumsy supplementary fabrication created in a feeble attempt to justify the incongruities of the previous chapters in the Book of Mark. The Christian Church, which the Catholic oligarchy imagines as "Guarding the deposit of Revelation" is continually improving upon itself every half century.

Of this, Clement says, "...One must never give way, nor, when they put forward their falsifications, should one concede that the Secret Gospel is by Mark, but should even deny it on oath. For, not all true things are to be said to all men...The light of truth should be hidden from those who are mentally blind."

From this we can deduce that:

- ✠ The Church is not concerned with Truth.
- ✠ It is okay to lie to conceal the Truth.
- ✠ Truth should only be divulged to a select few.

However, who is to decide who shall hear the Truth and who shall discern who is to know the Truth? Who shall decide what is the Truth? Are not these same errors and omissions of the Church actually 'Untruths?' The Church is quick to refute the Secret Gospel of Mark, which may be specifically due to the following paragraph, which has Jesus accepting a young man into his innermost circle, "They came to Bethany. There was one woman there whose brother had died. She came and prostrated herself before Jesus and spoke to him. 'Son of David, pity me!' But the Disciples rebuked her. Jesus was angry and went with her into the garden where the tomb was. Immediately a great cry was heard from the tomb. And going up to it, Jesus rolled the stone away from the door of the tomb, and immediately went in where the young man was. Stretching out his hand, he lifted him up, taking hold his hand. And the youth, looking intently at him, loved him and started begging him to let him remain with him. And going out of the tomb, they went into the house of the youth, for he was rich. And after six days Jesus gave him an order and, at evening, the young man came to him wearing nothing but a linen cloth. And he stayed with him for the night, because Jesus taught him the Mystery of the Kingdom of God. And then when he left he went back to the other side of the Jordan." ~Secret Gospel of Mark, inserted after Mark 10:34-35, 2nd century, The Strange Case of the Secret Gospel According to Mark: How Morton Smith's Discovery of a Lost Letter by Clement of Alexandria Scandalized Biblical Scholarship by Shawn Eyer, from an article originally published in Alexandria: The Journal for the Western Cosmological Traditions, volume 3, 1995, pp. 103-129: discovery 1958-60.

By way of careful and select remonstrances, the Christian Fathers are able to seduce their followers into wanting to be accepted into the so-called Mysteries, "By a like example, other men in other places built temples, set up statues, instituted Mysteries and ceremonies and sacrifices, to those whom they had admired, either for some arts or for virtue, or at least had held in very great affection; and rejoiced, by means of all things belonging to gods, to hand down their fame to posterity; and that especially, because, as we have already said, they scented to be supported by some phantasies of magic art, so that by invocation of Demons something seemed to be done and moved by them towards the deception of men. To these they add also certain solemnities, and drunken banquets, in which men might with all freedom indulge; and demons, conveyed into them in the chariot of repletion, might be mixed with their very bowels, and holding a place there, might bind the acts and thoughts of men to their own will. Such errors, then, having been introduced from the beginning, and having been aided by lust and drunkenness, in which carnal men chiefly delight, the religion of God, which consisted in continence and sobriety, began to become rare amongst men, and to be well-nigh abolished." ~The Recognitions of Clement, About the Recognitions and Homilies. 4.30, Hero-Worship.

"Then he came into Jericho. And the sister of the young man, whom Jesus loved, was there with his mother and Salome, but Jesus would not receive them." ~Secret Gospel of Mark, to be inserted after Mark 10:46. With the slew of adaptations and modifications in the Christian faith, from the 1st to 4th century, Jesus himself would not recognize the faith, "Thus by a sort of unintentional collaboration of influences of somewhat diverse origin, yet convergent in their effect, a religion very different from the Christianity that we caught a glimpse of in the beginning of the 3rd century acquired shape and form in the 4th and has become practically mistress of the Roman world when the 5th century opens." ~Guignebert.

Was this some water baptism, which was administered by Jesus to preferred disciple, singly and by darkness; a costume, for the disciple, which was a mere linen cloth worn over his naked body? A cloth, which was in all probability removed for the baptism proper, a full immersion in water, which was now reduced to a preparatory purification, after which, by some now forgotten ceremony, the Disciple is overcome by Jesus' spirit and so united with Jesus? "We know that the Gospel of John long has been known as possibly containing both Gnostic and homosexual motifs. John may have been written at approximately the same time as Mark. What difference does it make to us if Jesus is not separated from a homosexual situation?" ~Quoted from Anitra Kolenkow's response to Reginald Fuller, Longer Mark, 33. This tale reeks of homosexuality, which the Church abhorred, and therefore destroyed or suppressed extant copies. But, not all. Today's response? "Unfounded... Wildly speculative... Pockmarked with irresponsible inferences... Highly speculative... Operates with the presupposition that Jesus could not have been the incarnate Son of God filled with the Holy Spirit... Simply absurd... Unacceptable... Highly speculative... Numerous other fundamental weaknesses... Highly speculative... Irresponsible... Will not fool the careful reader." ~Ronald J. Sider's review in Christianity Today.

All of which, "Strongly suggest that early Christians possessed a larger, markedly more diverse body of writings and traditions on the life of Jesus that appears in what has been handed down to us in the New Testament." ~Elizabeth Claire.

Was Jesus practicing magic? ~ Shenker, A Scholar Infers Jesus Practiced Magic.

"The prescriptive distinction that states that we practice religion but they practice Magic should be seen for what it is, a political validation of the approved and the official against the unapproved and unofficial." ~John Dominic Crossan, The Historical Jesus

"Many scholars, maybe even most, would now accept the authenticity of the Clement fragment, including what it said about the Secret Gospel of Mark." ~Prophet, The Lost Years of Jesus, quoting Birger A. Pearson, 434n16, cf John 11:3-11, John 11:36, Magdalene Gospel 80:1-7.

"Clement's quotation in Secret Mark, 'And he comes into Jericho', is the only time his citations differ in any way from our text of canonical Mark... His quotation here is in the singular, 'He comes', but Mark 10:46 has, 'And they came to Jericho...' That reads as if Mark took a singular [He] and pluralized it..." ~J. D. Crossan, Four Other Gospels, Winiston, 1985.

There is nothing new in the Christian faith, which was not already practiced by Pagan and Gnostic sects, "The new sect put forth the same dogmas, doctrines, tenets under the same types, accompanied by the same rites and ceremonies... Became the first publishers of the ancient religion with a new interpretation of the Christ made flesh. The Gnostics did try to say, with the suppressing hand on their mouths, 'You are only publishing our Secrets with a lying gloss put on them'; but this slight protest was unheard amidst the loud clamor of the fanatically ignorant." ~Massey, The Natural Genesis, Vol. II.

AD 155-222(?)-Tertullian is "The first of the Latin theological writers... And the first witness to the existence of a Latin Bible... Tertullian's canon of the Old Testament included the Deutero-Canonical Books [i.e. the admittedly forged Apocrypha] He also cites the Book of Enoch [Enoch] as inspired,... Also recognizes IV Esdras and the Sibyl." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 14, pg. 525.

"The placement of Enoch after Shem may be a significant indicator that the Biblical chronology deviated from the truer Gnostic one, for the Biblical order has Enoch as seventh from Adam and three generations before Noah. Nazorean chronology stretches hundreds of thousands of years into the past, not just four or five like the Tavush Bible of the Jews, and condemns the Jewish Bible as a later fabrication." ~Nazorean

Commentary.

Believable? "The Biblical account of Noah's Ark and the Flood is perhaps the most implausible story for Fundamentalists to defend. Where, for example, while loading his ark, did Noah find penguins and polar bears in Palestine?" ~Judith Hayes, In God We Trust: But Which One? Madison, WI: FFRF, 1997.

Tertullian accuses the early Christians of moral laxity [a free moral lifestyle indicating that even in its early stages of conception corruption has already permeated the faith and its religious leaders] and believes that the good Christian should welcome persecution, as did Jesus, rather than flee from it.

Tertullian also believed that the Christian's concept of God dealt more with Greek philosophy than the Bible. He preached that God had permitted Astrology before the Incarnation.

"Other matters for shame I find none which can prove me to be shameless in a good sense, and foolish in a happy one, by my own contempt for shame. The Son of God was crucified; I am not ashamed [to believe it] because men must needs be ashamed of it. And the Son of God died; it is by all means to be believed, because it is absurd. And He was buried and rose again; the fact is certain because it is impossible." ~De Carne Christi, ch. v; Ante-Nicene Fathers, iii, 525.

Tertullian's sumptuary diatribes on woman's dress, a favorite theme of the Vicars of God, though nowadays the complaint is of nether brevity, he warns and assures, "To us the Lord has, even by revelations, measured the space for the veil to extend over. For a certain sister of ours was thus addressed by an angel, beating her neck," and telling her that she had as well be "Bare down to your loins" as any elsewhere below the neck. ~On the Veiling of Virgins, ch. xvii; Ante-Nicene Fathers, iv, p. 37.

Religion is not seen as a matter of individual conscience and free will. A perspective the Church will not accept until it seeks expansion through converts as it fails to protect the rights of the individual in religious freedom. Tertullian is the first Christian to formulate the "Nature of the Trinity" based on his knowledge of Greek literature and his acquaintance with Latin Law. "Since the Christians still know themselves to be Jews, they appear to have continued to participate in the Jewish worship in the temple and the synagogue. But this participation now has acquired a new sense. It documents the fact that the Christians hold to their membership in the Chosen People and confess the God of Israel." ~Hans Conzelmann, History of Primitive Christianity, p. 49.

Tertullian claims that only the Church has the absolute authority to decide on what is or is not approved Christian teaching [what happened to the Original Holy Scripture?] The Church is now attempts to force its own interpretations into other ancient religious beliefs.

It is not until the Middle Ages that this rational is formally contradicted by the Protestant Movement. Through the misogynist, Father Tertullian, the Church chastises women as being evil temptresses and an eternal danger to man beginning with Eve, the first woman [Saint Augustine goes one step further and declares the sex act as being evil in that it takes man's mind away from God]...Do you know that you are each an Eve? ...If morality did really depend on other worldly sanctions, the religious changes of the last fifty years would by now have dissolved society at large." ~Julian Huxley in his Religion Without Revelation, pg 52.

"The sentence of God on this sex of yours lives in this age: the guilt must of necessity live too. You are the devil's gateway; you are the un-sealer of that forbidden tree; you are the first deserter of the divine law; you are she who persuaded him whom the devil was not valiant enough to attack. You so carelessly destroyed man, God's image. On account of your desert, even the "Son of God" had to die." ~From, On Female Dress.

Augustine objected to the Immaculate Mother being called the "Bearer of God," because he believed that she did not bear the Word in her womb, the natural habitat of the Word being in the mind, not the womb. The Church goes from praising women to chastising and condemning them. This perspective lives on today to various degrees worldwide.

Tertullian is also the first to cite "Original Sin," [that is never mentioned in the Bible], but is interpreted as being referred to in John 5:15 and Luke 11:13. A concept to be taken up and discussed in controversy by later Church Councils. This policy of reading into the Bible when it suits the ruling authorities will go unnoticed by the masses seeking religious truth.

Luke writes three versions of Paul's alleged claim to conversion, and none of the three agree on the details. ~Read Acts 9:3-17, 22:6-21, and 26:12-18.

Magic admirably supplements nature and medical remedies as a cure for the scorpion's sting says the good Father Tertullian, "Among cures certain substances supplied by nature have very great efficacy; magic also puts on some bandages." ~Scorpiace, Ch. i; Ante-Nicene Fathers iii, 633.

He gives full faith and credit to the Pagan gods, as "Effective witnesses for Christ." Suppressed for centuries, few are aware that the early Christian Fathers, were also Pagans in their religious beliefs.

"Yes, and we shall prove that your own Gods are effective witnesses for Christ... Against the Greeks we urge that Orpheus, at Piera, Musaeus at Athens, imposed religious rites... Numa Pompilius laid on the Romans a heavy load of costly superstitions. Surely Christ, then, had a right to reveal Deity."

~Apology, ch. xxi; Ante-Nicene Fathers, iii, 36.

And for centuries more, man will murder man, brother set against brother, family against family, in defense of the blasphemies of the Holy Mother the Church well into the 20th century and the beginning of the 21st unknowing of the lies perpetrated upon them in the name of Jesus, by religious miscreants, continuing to forge ahead via the Pagan customs.

Saint Polycarp, Bishop of Smyrna and a Disciple of Saint John the Evangelist, is martyred.

In Mesopotamian Ur, from which Abraham's family emigrated, Sin, the Moon, was Queen of Heaven, and the day on which she changed her phase every seventh day was observed as a taboo day on which nothing would prosper and therefore no work was done. To this day, the old-fashioned Hassidic Jews still observe the first Sabbath of the month when the New Moon can be seen at evening, and Sabbaths every seven days after that, including two consecutive Sabbaths if the New Moon does not appear on the twenty-eighth day.

So the great Holy Day of the Hebrews continues with their Moon-worshipping of Ur and perhaps of ancestral peoples beyond history and memory. ~Jewish Tradition, History and Culture by Janice Barsky, October 14, 2000.

Abraham is said to have come into existence [genesthai] whereas Jesus purely [ego eimi]. Christian scholar and apologist Robert M. Bowman Jr., in his response to Jehovah's Witnesses, states: "What is it about this contrast between 'genesthai' and 'eimi' that has led to such a solid consensus throughout the centuries among Biblical scholars that the words contrast created origin with uncreated Eternal existence? By itself, of course, the word 'eimi' does not connote 'Eternal Pre-existence.' However, placed alongside 'genesthai' and referring to a time anterior to that indicated by 'Genesthai,' the word 'Eimi' [or its related forms], because it denotes simple existence and is a durative form of the verb to be, stands in sharp contrast to the 'aorist genesthai,' which speaks of 'Coming into Being.' It is this sharp contrast between being and becoming, which makes it clear that in a text like John 8:58 'eimi' connotes Eternality, not merely temporal priority." ~Bowman, Jehovah's Witnesses Jesus Christ & The Gospel of John, Baker Book House; Grand Rapids, MI, 1995, p. 114.

"He [Jesus] chose the term 'That Would Most Strongly Contrast' the created origin in time of Abraham with his own timeless eternity, the present tense verb 'eimi'... Thus, had Jesus wished to say what Jehovah's Witnesses understand him to have said, that he merely existed for a long time before Abraham, he could have said so by saying, 'Before Abraham came into existence, I was,' using the imperfect tense 'Emen' instead of the present tense 'eimi' [This point was made by Saints Chrysostom and Augustine, and reaffirmed by such Reformers as Calvin, and is also a standard observation found in most exegetical commentaries on John and never, to this author's knowledge, disputed in such works]. Such a statement would have left open the question of whether or not Jesus had always existed, or whether [like the Angels] he had existed from the earliest days of the universe's history. Or, had he wished to make it clear that [as Jehovah's Witnesses believe] he had himself come into existence some time prior to Abraham, he could have said so by stating, 'Before Abraham came into existence, I came into existence' [by using the first person 'aorist egenomen' instead of 'eimi'], or perhaps more simply, 'I came into existence before Abraham.' Having said neither of these things, but rather, having chosen terms, which went beyond these formulations to draw a contrast between the created and the uncreated, Jesus' words must be interpreted as a claim to eternity." ~Ibid., pp. 115-116.

"Calvin founded a little theocracy, modeled after the Old Testament, and succeeded in erecting the most detestable government that ever existed, except the one from which it was copied." ~Heresies and Heresies, Ingersoll's Works, Vol. 1, p. 226.

"Behold, behold that 'I Am He' [ego eimi], and there is no God beside Me: I kill, and I will make alive: I will smite, and I will heal, and there is none who shall deliver out of My hands." ~Deuteronomy 32:39-40.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

The early Christian Father, Tertullian, reveals the existence of similar Pagan rites and celebrations, "By us, who are strangers to Sabbaths, and new moons, and festivals, once acceptable to God, the Saturnalia, the feasts of January, the Brumalia, and Matronalia, are now frequented; gifts are carried to and fro, new year's day presents are made with din, and sports and banquets are celebrated with uproar; oh, how much more faithful are the heathen to their religion, who take special care to adopt no solemnity from the Christians." ~Father Tertullian, from 'The Two Babylon's' By The Late Rev. Alexander Hislop.

The hypocrisy of the Church is best exemplified by the statements of Tertullian himself when attempting to explain this new religion, "It is true because it is absurd, I believe it because it is impossible." ~De Carne Christi, Ch.5, Ante Nicene Fathers, Book iii, 525.

It is most unfortunate this type of rationale has survived through to the 21st century and is later expounded upon by none other than Saint Augustine who declares, "The Church said it, that settles it."

Are we to accept blindly the dictates of a corrupt and misleading oligarchy that professes to know what is good for us in every aspect of our lives? How many times will we hear words similar to these from politicians who allegedly act on our behalf to protect our interests and whom we later find have also abused their authority to accrue vast riches?

"Next to the judicial murders perpetrated by the Inquisition, its chief evil was the confiscation of estates. The property of the conversos [Jewish population] offered a tempting prize to the cupidity of the inquisitors and to the crown. The tribunal was expected to live from the spoils of the heretics...." ~History of the Christian Church, by Philip Schaff, Volume VI, Chapter 7, § 60.

Tertullian declares "The Acts of Paul and Thecla" as being a forgery by a Presbyter of Asia [priest] who, having been convicted of a crime, confesses that he wrote the Acts out of respect for Saint Paul and Pope Gelasius in support of the Pope's Degree against apocryphal books. A Church Father, Tertullian believes that the "Blood of the martyrs" will become the "Seed of the Church."

In the 4th century, Christianity had developed such a following and grown so much in size and in strength that it had to be, eradicated or accepted by the ruling oligarchy.

Attempting the first, Emperor Diocletian tried and failed. Donatism arose as a heretical Christian movement during the 4th and 5th century claiming that the validity of the Sacraments depended upon the moral character of the minister and came about as a result of the consecration of a Bishop of Carthage in 311 C.E.

One of the three consecrating Bishops is believed to be a "Traitor," guilty of surrendering his copy of the Bible to the tyrannical forces of the Roman Emperor Diocletian. An opposing group of 70 Bishops forms itself into a Synod at Carthage and hence, declares the consecration of the Bishop invalid.

The Bishops held that the Church must prohibit from its membership persons accountable of serious sin, and therefore, a "Traitor" could rightfully perform no Sacrament. The Carthaginian Bishop, when he refused to appear before the Synod, was excommunicated. Upon the death of the new Bishop, four years later, the theologian Donatus the Great became Bishop of Carthage and the movement took its name from him. The Roman Emperor Constantine the Great, in an attempt to settle the dispute, had it submitted to various Ecclesiastical bodies, and in AD 316, it reverted back to the Emperor himself. In each case the consecration of the Bishop elected originally, in AD 311, was upheld.

"Far from having transformed the Graeco-Roman world, Christianity was really absorbed by it and applied to its own atavistic needs and customs in the whole domain of both mind and body." ~Guignebert, Triumph of Christianity, Shadow of the Third Century: A Reevaluation of Christianity by Alvin Boyd Kuhn, PH. D.

Constantine the Great at first attempts to ruthlessly suppress the Donatists, but in 321, he succumbs to a policy of tolerance. Emperor Constantine the Great does the second and creates the Christian Empire. Constantine saw Christianity as a means of subjugating the masses and keeping the peace in his kingdom at a price far less than maintaining a standing army. The Donatist Bishop Gaudentius says, "God appointed prophets and fishermen, not princes and soldiers, to spread the faith."

Cardinal Farley adds this, "The Popes were temporal rulers of the civil territory and they naturally had recourse to force the re-establishment or extend the States of the Church until the conclusion of peace was confirmed... Their attempts to purify particularly the Duchy of Rome caused them considerable distress and the need to resort to violence, but always on the side of mercy... Lives were lost in the service of truth but the legal basis for the Christian Church to hold and transmit properties for the benefit of revenues was given to them [the Popes] by Emperor Constantine in 312." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, Pecci ed, vol. ii, pp. 157—169.

The Roman Catholic Church condemns as adulterous the marriage of a Catholic with a Protestant.

There still remains in force, as established by the Eastern Church of the Council at Trullo in the 7th century, the nullity of marriages between Catholics and heretics. The Greek Church also forbids the marriage of one of its followers with a Roman Catholic.

"A Roman Catholic worships a God who speaks through the Pope, while a Baptist worships a God who does not. They cannot be worshipping the same God." ~Judith Hayes, In God We Trust: But Which One? Madison, WI: FFRF, 1997.

"The dignity of marriage was restored by the Christian... The Christian princes were the first who specified the just causes of a private divorce; their institutions, from Constantine to Justinian, appear to fluctuate between the custom of the Empire and the wishes of the Church, and the author of the Novels too frequently reforms the jurisprudence of the Code and the Pandects.... The successor of Justinian yielded to the prayers of his unhappy subjects, and restored the liberty of divorce by mutual consent." ~Gibbon, Rise and Fall of the Roman Empire.

The Jewish Law does not recognize the marriage of a Jew with a person of another belief, and the Great Church Father, Tertullian, branded as fornication the marriage of a Christian with a Pagan. ~From The Ten Commandments by Joseph Lewis.

AD156-End of the World: Montanus declares himself to be the "Spirit of Truth," the personification of the Holy Spirit, which is mentioned in the Gospel of John, who was to reveal all truth. Montanus quickly gathers followers, including a pair of far-seeing "Prophetesses," who claimed to have visions and ecstatic experiences supposedly from God. The Prophet Montanus in Phrygia [now part of Turkey] appears in a small village, falls into a trance, and began prophesying in what he claims is the voice of the "Holy Spirit." With the assistance of two young women, Prisca and Maximilla, he travels about teaching his doctrine throughout Asia Minor.

Montanists believe that the Holy Spirit [Paraclete] appeared through Montanus and his associates. Montanists teaching that Christ's second coming is imminent and that one fallen from grace cannot be redeemed. Followers are instructed to seek persecution and even martyrdom if necessary and not to flee from it.

Montanism found devotees at the time that the state's opposition to Christianity was declining. Followers of Montanism shunned the material world focusing on preparations for their Christ's return. AD 177, Church leaders, fearing the potentially disruptive effects of the movement, excommunicate the Montanists. A separate sect of Montanism reaches a zenith in the 3rd century in Carthage, where it receives support from the Roman theologian Tertullian.

In most Christian sects, Jesus is accepted as both the Prophet and as fulfillment of all prophecy. The claims of Montanus, to be the spirit of truth as prophesied by Jesus, and the spread of Montanism among Asian and African Christians from 2 to 9 C.E., are denounced as heretical by the Popes. Beginning of Montanism, a form of religious extremism.

Its principal tenets were the imminent second coming of Christ, denial of the divine nature of the Church and its power to forgive sin, and excessively rigorous morality. The heresy, preached by Montanus of Phrygia and others, is condemned by Pope Saint Zephyrinus, 199-217.

AD160-Tertullian objects to Justin's use of philosophy to defend Christianity, saying "What has Athens to do with Jerusalem?" Late in life Tertullian becomes a Montanist and writes, Against Praxeas, which helps the church understand their Trinity Doctrine.

AD 161-180- The reign of Marcus Aurelius whose persecution launches in the wake of natural disasters, are more violent than those of his predecessors.

AD 165- Saint Justin, an important early Christian writer, is martyred in Rome.

AD170-235-Hippolytus of Rome, Saint Hippolytus, fights against Monarchianism, which is opposed to the "Doctrine of the Trinity." He challenges the Papal selection process and declares himself Pope [the first official Anti-Pope. Simon Magus is the first Biblical anti-pope]. Hippolytus is arrested in AD 235 and dies shortly thereafter while in exile in a mine in Sardinia. Pope Fabian has his remains returned to Rome for a Christian burial. Hippolytus wrote "The Refutation of All Heresies."

Saint Justin of Rome describes Simon Magus as a man who, at the instigation of demons, claimed to be a god. Justin says further that Simon came to Rome during the reign of the Emperor Claudius and by his magic arts won many followers so that these erected on the island in the Tiber a statue to him as a Divinity with the inscription "Simon the Holy God." ~Saint Justin of Rome, First Apology, xxvi, lvi; Dialogus c. Tryphonem, cx. In the "Philosophumena," the doctrine of Simon and his followers is treated in great detail. The work relates, circumstantially, how Simon labors at Rome and wins many followers by his magic arts, and how he disagrees with the Apostles Peter and Paul who oppose him.

According to this account, the reputation of the magician, Simon, is greatly wronged by the efforts of the two Apostles and the number of his followers become continuously smaller. He consequently leaves Rome and returns to his home at Gitta. In order to give his scholars a confirmation of his higher nature and divine mission and thus regain his authority, he boldly has a grave dug and permits himself to be buried in it, after previously prophesying that after three days he will rise alive from it. ~ Hippolytus of Rome, Philosophumena, vi, vii-xx. Note: The promised resurrection does not take place, and Simon unfortunately dies in the grave.

Saint Peter gives an entirely different account of Simon Magus's conduct at Rome and of his unforeseen death, "Die apokryphen Apostelgeschichten und Apostellegenden." ~ II, Pt. I, Brunswick, 1887.

In this work also great stress is laid upon the struggle between Simon and the two Apostles Peter and Paul at Rome. By his magic arts Simon had also sought to win the Emperor Nero for himself, an attempt in which he had been thwarted by the Apostles. To Nero, King Tiridates says, "I have come to thee, my God, to worship thee as I do Mithras."

"This is indeed true of Nero, and no one contradicted him in anything, what ever he said, or affirmed that anything he commanded was impossible to perform, so that even if he ordered anyone to fly, the man promised that too and for a considerable time he would be maintained in the imperial household in the belief that he would fly." [...] Describing Emperor Nero's ultimate demise and popularity, "Indeed the truth about this has not come out even yet; for so far as the rest of his subjects were concerned, there was nothing to prevent his continuing to be Emperor for all time, seeing that even now everybody wishes he were still alive. And the great majority do believe that he still is, although in a certain sense he has died not once but often along with those who had been firmly convinced that he was still alive." ~Dio Chrysostom, [40-120] Discourse 21, On Beauty, 9-10. Loeb, vol II, p. 281. Dio is writing about the vast corruption of absolute power in the Roman Empire.

As proof of the truth of his doctrines Simon offered to ascend into the Heavens before the eyes of Nero and the Roman populace; by magic he did rise in the air in the Roman Forum, but the prayers of the Apostles Peter and Paul caused him to fall, so that he was severely injured and shortly afterwards died miserably. Arnobius reports this alleged attempt to fly and the death of Simon with still other particulars." ~Lipsius, Adv. Nationes, vol. ii, xii; cf. Const. Apost., vol. vi, ix.

"Neither human resources, nor imperial generosity, nor appeasement of the Gods, eliminated the sinister suspicion that the fire had been deliberately started. To stop the rumor, Nero, made scapegoats, and punished with every refinement the notoriously depraved Christians [as they were popularly called]. Their originator, Christ, had been executed in Tiberius' reign by the Procurator of Judaea, Pontius Pilatus [who was actually a Praefectus, not a Procurator]. But in spite of this temporary setback, the deadly superstition had broken out again, not just in Judaea [where the mischief had started], but even in Rome. All degraded and shameful practices collect and flourish in the capital. First, Nero had the self-admitted Christians arrested. Then, on their information, large numbers of others were condemned, not so much for starting fires as because of their hatred for the human race. Their deaths were made amusing. Dressed in wild animals' skins, they were torn to pieces by dogs, or crucified, or made into torches to be set on fire after dark as illumination... Despite their guilt as Christians, and the ruthless punishment it deserved, the victims were pitied. For it was felt that they were being sacrificed to one man's brutality rather than to the national interest." ~Tacitus.

Simon's writings and almost all of his direct sources of information were destroyed by fanatical early Christians in the first five centuries, and only distorted facts and legends are now available.

AD170-The Anti-Popes represent a period in Catholic history in which others, seeing the corruption and the accumulated wealth, also sought the religious office. Where else could a poor illiterate individual have the opportunity to acquire great wealth and power?

The Church, refused to acknowledge any lineage, which did not originate from the Holy See, seeing these imposters as lacking a Pontifical Canonically Electorate. At various times in history, often times with the support of monarchs, the illegal pretenders to the Papacy rose to defy the Church, using their alleged acquired powers to frequently exercise pontifical functions in defiance of the true occupant.

The following is a list of these pretenders:

Pausanias visits Arcadia and hears of the Lykanian werewolf rites.

AD177-Christians are arrested and tortured in Rome. While still not wholly accepted as formal practicing Jews, they still do not accept the gods of the Romans. Gladiator battles at the stadium have become a rather expensive feature to entertain the people and the Christians are now used as cheap entertainment to amuse the Romans in athletic exhibitions, being fed to wild beasts, and used for gladiator fighting [previously boxers, swordsmen, and wrestlers had to be paid to perform].

The gladiatorial events were in honor of the Roman Emperors who are often worshiped as Gods in which an early Christian, Tertullian, attempts to provide an account of the derivation of gladiatorial contests: "... The origins of the spectacles... Are somewhat obscure and, therefore, unknown among most of our people... The real issue is idolatry. For, since the games also went under the general name of Liberalia, they clearly proclaimed the honor of Father Liber. They were first held in honor of Liber by the countryfolk because of the blessing, which they say he bestowed upon them by making known to them the delicious taste of wine."

The Church Fathers will lure the ignorant into believing idolatry is the entry into sinfulness, yet will allow the masses to maintain and worship their statuary, "For, whereas at first, men worshiping a righteous and all-seeing God, neither dared sin nor do injury to their neighbors, being persuaded that God sees the actions and movements of every one; when religious worship was directed to lifeless images, concerning, which they were certain that they were incapable of hearing, or sight, or motion, they began to sin licentiously, and to go forward to every crime, because they had no fear of suffering anything at the hands of those whom they worshiped as Gods. Hence the madness of wars burst out; hence plunderings, rapines, captivities, and liberty reduced to slavery; each one, as he could, satisfied his lust and his covetousness, although no power can satisfy covetousness. For as fire, the more fuel it gets, is the more extensively kindled and strengthened, so also the madness of covetousness is made greater and more vehement by means of those things which it acquires.” ~The Recognitions of Clement, About the Recognitions and Homilies 4.31, Idolatry Led to All Immorality.

To Pope Pius XII. "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

“Put to death therefore what is earthly in you: fornication, impurity, passion, evil desire, and covetousness, which is idolatry. On account of these the wrath of God is coming.” ~Colossians 3:5-6. The intense loyalty of the early Christians to “Jesus the Christ as Lord,” is irreconcilable with the worship of the Romans to their emperor as “Lord.” The Emperors, such as Trajan and Marcus Aurelius, who are deeply committed to harmony and reform, are also the ones who perceive the Christians as a threat to their goals of unity and Roman rule and undertake to eliminate that threat.

“Man is certainly stark mad; he cannot make a flea yet he makes Gods by the dozen.” ~Michel Eyquem

De Montaigne, French moralist and Free thinker, 1533-1592

AD 178 [-]Celsus, a Pagan philosopher, accuses the Christians of being narrow minded in their ultra-conservative view of God. Why should the Christians claim a “Special Revelation” making God unavailable to all but them? Aurelius Celsus, wrote an encyclopedia on the subjects of medicine, rhetoric, history, philosophy, warfare, and agriculture. Part of this work, the eight books on medicine, De Medicina, were translated into English in 1756; three are still in print.

He is remembered from a work written against him by the most learned of the Fathers, Origen, who evidently finds him the most formidable opponent of the Church. Origen, Justin Martyr, and Tertullian will make the explicit claims that the Jews have been displaced by God and replaced by Christians.

Celsus admits the need for recognition of miracles in the Church, instancing the case, of the miracle worker, Aesculapius, who confer benefits on many, and who foretold future events to entire cities, “... Citing instances. If there had been no miracles among the Hebrews “They would immediately have gone over to the worship of those demons, which gave oracles and performed cures.” ~Contra Celsum, III, ch. ii-iii; ANF. iv, 466. The ‘Golden beams’ portrayed around the head of Aesculapius are intended to mark the purging by fire of the child of the Sun, or the Sun incarnate. The “Golden beams” around the heads of pictures and images called the Christ, were intended also to show the Pagans that they might safely worship them, as the images of their well-known divinities, though called by a different name. Aesculapius, in a time of deadly pestilence, had been invited from Epidaurus to Rome. The god, under the form of a large serpent, entered the ship that was sent to convey him to Rome, and having safely arrived in the Tiber, was solemnly inaugurated as the guardian god of the Romans.

From that time forth, in private as well as in public, the worship of the ‘Epidaurian Snake,’ the serpent that represents the ‘Sun-Divinity,’ incarnate, in other words, the ‘Serpent of Fire,’ becomes almost universal. The phallic symbolism of the snake led to widely held myths that sex is evil and that Cain was the son of the snake. According to other ancient legends other than those in the Bible, Cain is the son of the Devil, which legends form the basis of I John. ~1 John 2:12.

Sex is sinful, “Let the race die rather than propagate it with the sin of sexual intercourse.” ~Saint Ambrose.

Cain is said to have co-habited with his mother and that he practiced cannibalism, was an exile and outcast; drank Abel's blood; introduced murder to the world; was the cause of all strife, particularly between brothers; that his offer was rejected because he used the worst of his crops, even mixing it with thorns; that he was avaricious and greedy; that he practiced blasphemy; that he was the cause of war and rebellion; that he grew a pair of horns signifying his reputed father, the Devil; that he and his mother, the evil pair, were the cause of evil which led to the flood; that his progeny were the monsters of the Old Testament, et cetera.

~see Williams 1982, for a comprehensive discussion.

Saint Matthew is sent to preach into the Land of the Cannibals, “At that time all the Apostles were gathered together and divided the countries among themselves, casting lots. And it fell to Matthias to go to the land of the Anthropophagi [cannibals]. Now the men of that city ate no bread nor drank wine, but ate the flesh and drank the blood of men; and every stranger who landed there they took, and put out his eyes, and gave him a magic drink, which took away his understanding." ~M.R. James-Translation and Notes, The Apocryphal New Testament, Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1924.

Many early Christians were despised for their alleged cannibalism, "And now, as wicked things advance more fruitfully, and abandoned manners creep on day by day, those abominable shrines of an impious assembly are maturing themselves throughout the whole world. Assuredly this confederacy ought to be rooted out and execrated. They know one another by secret marks and insignia, and they love one another almost before they know one another; everywhere also there is mingled among them a certain religion of lust, and they call one another promiscuously brothers and sisters, that even a not unusual debauchery may by the intervention of that sacred name become incestuous: it is thus that their vain and senseless superstition glories in crimes. Nor, concerning these things, would intelligent report speak of things so great and various, and requiring to be prefaced by an apology, unless truth were at the bottom of it. I hear that they adore the head of an ass, that basest of creatures, consecrated by I know not what silly persuasion, a worthy and appropriate religion for such manners. Some say that they worship the genitals of their pontiff and priest, and adore the nature, as it were, of their common parent. I know not whether these things are false; certainly suspicion is applicable to secret and nocturnal rites; and he who explains their ceremonies by reference to a man punished by extreme suffering for his wickedness, and to the deadly wood of the cross, appropriates fitting altars for reprobate and wicked men, that they may worship what they deserve." ~The Ritual Cannibalism Charge Against Christians From Minucius Felix. Octavius.

"These serpents nestled about the domestic altars," says the author of Pompeii, "And came out, like dogs or cats, to be patted by the visitors, and beg for something to eat. Nay, at table, if we may build upon insulted passages, they crept about the cups of the guests, and, in hot weather, ladies would use them as live boas, and twist them round their necks for the sake of coolness... These sacred animals made war on the rats and mice, and thus kept down one species of vermin; but as they bore a charmed life, and no one laid violent hands on them, they multiplied so fast, that, like the monkeys of Benares, they became an intolerable nuisance. The frequent fires at Rome were the only things that kept them under." ~The Two Babylons by Rev. Alexander Hislop.

The Imperial standard, the standard of the Pagan Emperor of Rome, Pontifex Maximus, in honor of the serpent of fire-worship and serpent worship, has a serpent elevated on a lofty pole, and so colored, as to exhibit it as a recognized symbol of fire-worship.

"Let it be granted that the responses delivered by the Pythian and other Oracles were not the utterances of false men who pretended to a Divine Inspiration; but let us see if, after all, that they may be traced to wicked Demons, to spirits, which are at enmity with the human race... It is said of the Pythian priestess, that when she sat down at the mouth of the Castalian cave, the prophetic spirit of Apollo entered her private parts; and when she was filled with it, she gave utterance to responses which are regarded with awe as Divine Truths. Judge by this whether that spirit does not show its profane and impure nature." ~Contra Celsum, VII, iii; Ante-Nicene Fathers, iv, 611-612.

"It is not, then, because Christians cast insults upon Demons that they incur their revenge, but because they drive them away out of the images, and from the bodies and souls of men." ~Contra Celsum, c. xliii, p. 655.

The pious and self-proclaimed faithful [Christian followers] burned all of Celsus' works due to his denigration of Christianity. He appears to have been an Epicurean and to have made hilarious attacks on the Gospel story of Jesus.

"The essence of Revelation lies in the fact that it is the direct speech of God to man," says the Vicar of Christ, speaking through the Vatican Council, 1870, thus confirming what I have above said, that "Divine Revelations" cannot evolve from Pagan myths already current and long known to everyone. The same Pope Pius IX will explain to the ignorant masses what a Revelation is.

"Revelation may be defined as the communication of some truth by God to a rational creature through means which are beyond the ordinary course of nature. The truths thus revealed may be such as are otherwise inaccessible to the human mind mysteries, which even when revealed, the intellect of man is incapable of fully penetrating." ~Pope Pius IX, 1870

The Decree 'Lamentabili,' 3 July, 1907, further declares that the spiritual dogmas, which the Church proposes as revealed are 'Truths, which have come down to us from heaven' and not 'An interpretation of To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi religious facts, which the human mind has acquired by its own strenuous efforts.” ~Vatican Decrees, 1870; Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 13, 1.

Pius IX, of which, “Blessed Memory,” the Catholic writer generally adds, although most Italians who knew him have written some witty things about Pope Pius IX who opened the series in 1864 with the Encyclical ‘Quanta Cura’ and the ‘Syllabus.’ Your apologists now hardly mention it. Pope Pius having still at that time the reactionary French Emperor to protect him against the wicked Italians, scorched the whole ‘Reform Movement’ with the choicest Papal invectives. ~Joseph McCabe.

And, “The existence of revelation is as reasonably established as any historical fact!” ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 13, 607. “Divine Revelations” are thus, of that substance not previously known to mankind, and to which the revelation devoid intellect of man is incapable of acquiring or inventing by his own efforts.

And the Church Fathers thus claim that with the Holy Mother, the Roman Church’s interpretation of “Revelation,” if a claim is made, such as Mohammed’s or Joseph Smith’s, who also claim that they received personal visits from angels, or from some god, the only way they can get a valid patent of authenticity and credibility for their “Revelation,” is to prove that its subject-matter has never before been known or been in credulous circulation.

The Church, by its own admission, negates its own ‘Divine Revelations’ as the ancient Babylonians, Egyptians, and Greeks had previously claimed such revelations in their literature. The instant the search of the records, documents, or scrolls, reveal the same proposition has been previously known, is current, in use, and practiced among some other priest-craft and its votaries, then that item is no longer a revelation and the most recent claim is declared a fraud.

The early Christians are accused of being “Atheists” by the Romans because their concept denies the traditional gods of their Roman rulers, hence their persecution by the Romans. “Contra Celsus,” Against Celsus, is a strongly articulated apologetic work refuting the arguments advanced by the philosopher Celsus, a Platonist of Alexandria, and is the first serious critique of Christianity. By failing to respect the gods of the Romans, the Christians unwittingly cause their own discrimination by the Romans who also interpret their beliefs as being barbaric and completely ignoring the achievements of a superior civilization.

The early Church leaders will write all-embracing religious literature on discriminatory practices to be enforced against the un-baptized and the intolerant treatment of non-Christians, “For these unclean spirits love to dwell in the bodies of men, that they may fulfill their own desires by their service, and, inclining the motions of their souls to those things, which they themselves desire, may compel them to obey their own lusts, that they may become wholly vessels of Demons. One of whom is this Simon, who is seized with such disease, and cannot now be healed, because he is sick in his will and purpose. Nor does the Demon dwell in him against his will; and therefore, if any one would drive it out of him, since it is inseparable from himself, and, so to speak, has now become his very soul, he should seem rather to kill him, and to incur the guilt of manslaughter. Let no one of you therefore be saddened at being separated from eating with us, for every one ought to observe that it is for just so long a time as he pleases. For he who wishes soon to be baptized is separated but for a little time, but he for a longer who wishes to be baptized later. Every one therefore has it in his own power to demand a shorter or a longer time for his repentance, and therefore it lies with you, when you wish it, to come to our table, and not with us, who are not permitted to take food with any one who has not been baptized. It is rather you, therefore, who hinder us from eating with you, if you interpose delays in the way of your purification, and defer your baptism. Having said thus, and having blessed, he took food. And after wards, when he had given thanks to God, he went into the house and went to bed; and we all did the like, for it was now night.” ~The Recognitions of Clement, 2.72. The Remedy, www.compassionatespirit.com

AD 180-Irenaeus, a writer on Biblical matters, Bishop of Lyons, speaks of the heretics possessing more Gospels than there really are. His most famous work is, “The Destruction and Overthrow of Falsely So-called Knowledge.” In this effort, he denounces “The Gospel of Truth” as blasphemous as the Church denounces all scripture not corresponding with its interpretations.

The “Book of Thomas” written by a disciple of Jesus is considered blasphemous because it denounces the death of Jesus on the cross, and the “Gospel of Barnabus” is another book written by a follower of Jesus, and is also claimed to be blasphemous. [One must remember that the Church is not disclaiming the authenticity of the author nor its antiquity, only that its contents are not supportive of Church Doctrine and therefore blasphemous].

Saint Irenaeus, Bishop of Lyons and one of the great early theologians, writes "Adversus Haereses," stating that the teaching and tradition of the Holy Roman See is now the standard for all religious beliefs. In AD 185, Bishop Irenaeus imposes the present day version of the Gospels upon the Christians. Irenaeus believing in Christ being the Divine "Logos" who had become man that we might learn from a man on how to become God.

Hegesippus of Palestine, a Jewish convert, is instrumental in combating Gnosticism and Marcionism. The Philosopher, Celsus, claims the Christians, "Remodeled their Gospel from its first written form and reformed it so that they may be able to refute objections." ~Celsus in: Origen, Eight books of Origen on Celsus, book II:27, 180 C.E.

Celsus also finds the Doctrine of Incarnation and Crucifixion repugnant and denounces Gospel accounts of virgin birth as being "Fabricated." ~Celsus in: Origen, Eight books of Origen contra Celsus, book I, chapter 32 with thanks to contributing editor Hans H. Atrott.

"Always the Church has forcefully molded words, and even concepts [such as Savior, Epiphany, Baptism, Illumination, Mysteries, Logos], to suit her own Dogma and its expression. It was thus that John could take the [Pagan] expression 'Logos,' mould it to his Dogma, cut short all perilous speculation among Christians, and assert once for all that the 'Word was made Flesh' and was Jesus Christ." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 11, pg. 92.

The first to use the term, "New Testament," is Irenaeus, who is also the first to give the explicit formation of four Gospels, and no more. The first Christian writer to include a New Testament author among the "Holy Scriptures and all the inspired men" was Theophilus of Antioch, about 180 C.E. ~Theophilus of Antioch, Ad Autolyicum, 2.22; as cited by Grant, CHB, p. 294.

However, he also regarded the Sybils, female Pagan oracles, as inspired.

AD 185-284-Origen, a pupil of Clement of Alexandria, further develops the allegorical method. This and his desire to relate to the Neoplatonists in Alexandria lead him away from orthodoxy in some material. But he is still essential to the church. On First Principles is the first systematic theology.

But, the Church Fathers will not have their brethren believing in philosophy, a perspective which initiates questioning, inquiring, and analytic thought, "No objections of any weight, no arguments but such as are sophistical, can be urged against this most sublime theory, which is so congenial to the unperverted conceptions of the human mind, that it can only be treated with ridicule and contempt in degraded, barren and barbarous ages. Ignorance, and priestcraft, however, have hitherto conspired to defame those inestimable works [of the Neoplatonists] in which this and many other grand and important dogmas can alone be found, and the theology of the Greeks has been attacked with all the insane fury of Ecclesiastical zeal and all the imbecile flashes of mistaken wit, by men whose conceptions on the subject, like those of men between sleeping and waking, have been turbid and wild, fantastic and confused, preposterous and vain." ~Taylor, Introduction to his great work on The Six Books of Proclus on the Theology of Plato, p. x.

What happened to the eighteen missing years of Jesus' existence? Origen, 185-254, cites the account that Jesus worked as laborer in Egypt and learned magic before claiming his God title. ~Origen, Eight Books of Origen Contra Celsus, book I, chapter 28.

In the 3rd century, Origen writes of different Gospels, "I know a certain Gospel which is called, 'The Gospel According to Thomas,' and a 'Gospel According to Matthias,' and many others have we read; lest we should in any way be considered ignorant of those who imagine they possess some knowledge if they are acquainted with these. Nevertheless, among all these we have approved solely what the Church has recognized, which is that only four Gospels should be accepted." ~Origen, Homily on Luke, 1:1, 254 C.E.

And, what of the thousands of Christians persecuted under the Romans? Origen claims that few Christians died from Roman persecutions "And only from time to time, and at intervals." ~Ibid

Origen, now a Platonist, philosopher, Christian writer, theologian, and teacher, is also known as Adamantius, father of the "Allgorian Method" of scriptural interpretation. Origen makes no mention of the works of Josephus [Judah ben Mathias], and his exclusion of Jesus in his voluminous literature therefore later remarks to the writings of Josephs regarding Jesus are believed to have been added around the 4th century. At the age of twenty, Origen, is beginning to formulate a strong passion for martyrdom being the way to Heaven. His father, Leonides, having died four years earlier, Origen had contemplated suicide and was saved by his mother. Origen further develops the concept of Christ as the 'Logos' [Incarnate Word]. ~John 1:1.

Origen taught that, "Christ the Son" is subordinate to the "Father" and the pre-existence of the "Soul" and its reincarnation in previous lifetimes. Saint Gregory refers to him as "The Prince of Christian learning..." The shrewder Romans said, "The common people like to be deceived; deceived let them be." Celsus, in common with most Greeks, looked upon Christianity as a "Blind faith" that "Shunned the light of reason."

~Bank of Wisdom, Box 926, Louisville, KY 40201.

When the religionist cannot explain faith via logic, he uses blind faith, "Faith is a cop-out. It is intellectual bankruptcy. If the only way you can accept an assertion is by faith, then you are conceding that it can't be taken on its own merits." ~Dan Barker.

Father Origen "So far from disowning an agreement between [Pagan] Platonism and Christianity, that a great part of his book 'Contra Celsum' consists in showing the conformity between them."

Something, which the Church does not promote. Origen also stated, of Saint John the Evangelist, "Per Jovem, barbarous iste cum nostro Platone sentit." Or, in English, "By Jove, this barbarian agrees with Plato."

Canon Muratorian, is the 1st extant for the New Testament(?), written in Rome by Hippolytus(?), it excludes Hebrews, James, 1-2 Peter, 3 John; but it does include Wisdom of Solomon, and the Apocalypse of Peter.

"Senza Aristotele noi mancavamo di molti Articoli di Fede" _____ "Without, Aristotle we should be without many Articles of Faith." ~Quoting the celebrated saying of Cardinal Palavicino, Collins, Discourse of Free Thinking, p. 127.

For the sake of God [Jesus Christ], Origen made himself "A eunuch for the Kingdom of Heaven's sake," and died in Tyre [or Caesarea] about 254, and was the first of the Christian Fathers said to be born of Christian parents; he was a pupil and protégé of Clement of Alexandria, and recognized as the greatest theologian and Biblical scholar of the Church in his time. He was the author of the famous 'Hexapla,' a comparative edition of the Bible in Hebrew, with Greek transliteration and the Greek texts of the Septuagint and other versions. in six parallel columns.

Origen was influenced by the Arian heresy which denied the divinity of Jesus Christ, and was deposed from the priesthood, but his deposition was not generally recognized by all the Churches, which goes to show that they were not then subject to the superstitions of Rome. "Equally bad is superstition, which is exemplified by the unworthy stories and ideas about the Gods current in the popular theology, and by the fear, the cringing before their power and the distrust of their will, engendered by the traditional religion. Indeed the Orthodox notions are bound to sow and foster atheism." ~B. A. G. Fuller, History of Philosophy.

For sheer credulity and nonsense Father Origen was the peer of any of the Pagan-born Patriarchs of "The new Paganism called, Christianity."

He accepted as living realities the heathen Gods and their miracles, and argued that the Hebrews must have had genuine miracles because the heathens had many from their Gods, which are only Devils; that the Hebrews viewed, "With contempt all those who were considered as gods by the heathen," as not being gods, but demons, "For all the Gods of the nations are Demons." ~Psalms 96:5, Forgery in Christianity by Joseph Wheless, 1930, from the Bank of Wisdom.

The early Christians debated on the forces of evil and its origination with make-believe dialogues, "Then Simon, I shall enforce myself to bear patiently your unskilfulness, that I may show that you indeed wish to seduce the people, but that I teach the truth. But now I refrain from a discussion concerning that boundless light. Answer me, therefore, what I ask of you. Since God, as you say, made all things, whence comes evil?" ~The Recognitions of Clement, About the Recognitions and Homilies. 3.15, Simon's Arrogance.

In AD 250, Emperor Decius has Origen imprisoned, tortured, and not released until a year later. Origen's teachings will have a major impact on Christian thought in future years, although, parts of his theological concepts are condemned by the Ecumenical Council of AD 553 [Anathemas Against Pre-Existence] and later in the 9th century. In speaking of Christians and miracles Father Origen forever denounces any type reasoning.

"They are forever repeating, 'Do not examine; only believe, and thy faith will make thee blessed; wisdom is a bad thing in life, foolishness is to be preferred.'" ~Origen, Cont. Celsus, Bk. 1, Ch. 9.
To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

"No one custom of antiquity is so frequently mentioned by ancient historians as the practice which was so common of making votive offerings to their deities, and hanging them up in their temples -- images of metal, stone, and clay; arms, legs, and other parts of the body, in testimony of some divine cure effected."

It was a popular adage among the Greeks who claimed... "Miracles for fools." Stars and comets are believed to herald great disasters or significant happenings for centuries. Father Origen believed the Pagan superstition that comets and new stars portend and herald great world-events, and urges that this undoubted fact gives credibility to the fabled Star of Bethlehem, "It has been observed that, on the occurrence of great events, and of mighty changes in terrestrial things, such stars are wont to appear, indicating either the removal of dynasties or the breaking out of wars, or the happening of such circumstances as may cause commotions upon the earth." ~Contra Celsum, I, lix; ANP. iv, 422, and Isaiah 14:12.

All the stars and heavenly bodies are living, rational beings, having souls, as Father Origen believes that the stars are alive and control the destinies of man.

*"Let us see what reason itself can discover respecting sun, moon, and stars... To arrive at a clearer understanding on these matters, we ought first to inquire whether it is allowable to suppose that they are living and rational beings; then, whether their souls came into existence at the same time with their bodies, or seem to be anterior to them; and also whether, after the End of the World, we are to understand that they are to be released from their bodies; and whether, as we cease to live, so they also will cease from illuminating the world... We think, then, that they may be designated as living beings, for this reason, that they are said to receive commandments from God, which is ordinarily the case only with rational beings: Thave given commandments to all the stars." ~See Isaiah 14:12, so saith the Lord, De Principiis, I, vii; Ante-Nicene Fathers, iv, 263.*

AD188-Birth of the Roman Emperor Caracalla who is homosexual, but not leather, and sets the standard for the Roman bath houses. The word "Arsenokoitai" appears in 1 Corinthians 6 and 1 Timothy, but the KJV of the Bible was not completed until 1611 C.E., when there was no single English word that referred to either homosexuals or homosexuality.

The Bible translators were therefore forced to use this awkward phrase. The term 'Homosexual' was only created in the late 19th century. "Arsenokoitai" in the Greek version is word that appears to have been created by Saint Paul when he was writing. ~1 Corinthians 6:9-10, 55 C.E.

No record remains of any writer having using the term before Saint Paul who is alleged to hve spoken fluent Freek. It has been translated as "Abusers of themselves with mankind" in the King James Version [KJV]: "Know ye not that the unrighteous shall not inherit the Kingdom of God? Be not deceived: neither fornicators, nor idolaters, nor adulterers, nor effeminate, nor abusers of themselves with mankind, nor thieves, nor covetous, nor drunkards, nor revilers, nor extortioners, shall inherit the Kingdom of God." The original Koine Greek referred to men only, but the English translation refers to both males and females; i.e. to gays and lesbians. ~Note: Paidensste is the standard Greek term at the time for sexual behavior between males.

AD189-199(?) -Pope St. Victor, the First Black Pope, is only a Deacon when he becomes Pope. He died a martyr in 199 C.E. Pope Saint Victor I, was known for a treatise he wrote on "Dice throwing."

Pope Saint Victor causes great dissension amongst the various Christians sects when he has the Roman Christians celebrate Easter on the 14th day of Nissan regardless of what day it falls on. ~Note: Easter is mentioned only once in the Bible: in Acts 12:4.

Nissan, near the first of the year, being equivalent to the months of March-April, is when the Jewish Festivals of Passover, Unleavened Bread, and First fruits are celebrated. Although there is no direct reference to Asherah in the Old Testament, there remains numerous references to her symbol as an upright post, which is itself a phallic symbol. Solomon had two massive pillars erected at the entrance to his temple, and these pillars were adorned with hundreds of pomegranates, also a symbol of fertility most likely derived from Greek mythology. ~1 Kings 7:16-22; 41-42.

"These are their Mysteries, murders in short, and burials! And their priests, whom those concerned call 'Lords of the Mysteries,' invent more wonders to add to the tragedy, forbidding to set a whole root of parsley on the table, because they think forsooth that parsley has sprung from the blood, which streamed forth from the Corybant; just as the women who celebrate the Thesmophoria guard against eating the seeds of the pomegranate, for the drops, which fell on the ground from the blood of Dionysus they suppose to have grown into pomegranates.” -Eusebius of Caesarea: Præparatio Evangelica [Preparation for the Gospel], Tr., E.H. Gifford, 1903. Many Christians do not realize that most of their major festivals still adhere to Jewish customs and the Jewish lunar calendar [only Christmas and New Year being fixed]. Therefore, many of the Christian feasts are not set. The primary holiday, Easter, always falls on the first Sunday following the full Moon that falls on or after the vernal equinox. Therefore, most of the church year, including the pre-Easter season of Lent, is adjusted to the date of Easter.

The Calendar [Codex-Calendar of 354] was an illustrated Calendar, a section based entirely on Pagan and secular imagery and recording only 'Pagan Festivals' and imperial anniversaries, which, "Reinforces other evidence for the enduring vitality of the 'Cult of Sol'... The cult of Sol had so many devotees that Saint Augustine considered it necessary to preach against them." ~From: On Roman Time, The Codex-Calendar of 354 and the Rhythms of Urban Life in Late Antiquity, Michele Renee Salzman, U. California, 1990.

In his early years, Saint Augustine encouraged Manicheism, which is a dualistic doctrine that posed that there are two ultimate principles, one is to blame for good, and the other is accountable for evil. The Christians condemned the numerous works of Mani, "At this time, the madman, named from his demoniacal heresy, armed himself in the perversion of his reason, as the Devil, Satan, who himself fights against God, put him forward to the destruction of many. He was a barbarian in life, both in word and deed; and in his nature demoniacal and insane. In consequence of this he sought to pose as Christ, and being puffed up in his madness, he proclaimed himself the Paraclete and the very Holy Spirit, and afterwards, like Christ, he chose twelve disciples as partners of his new doctrine. And he [Mani] patched together false and Godless doctrines collected from a multitude of long-extinct impieties, and swept them, like a deadly poison, from Persia to our part of the world. From him the impious name of the Manicheans is still prevalent among many. Such was the foundation of this 'Knowledge falsely so-called,' which sprang up in those times." ~Prolegomena: The Life and Writings of Eusebius of Caesarea: Testimonies of the Ancients Against Eusebius, Chapter XXXI, The Perverse Heresy of the Manicheans Which Began at This Time.

The Quartodecimans are persuaded to celebrate Easter on a Sunday [a declaration of exclusion from the Church is forth coming if they refuse], but an Oriental named Blastos opposes the Pope with a small contingent of followers. Theodotus of Constantinople, under Pope Saint Victor, teaches a doctrine of professing that Christ is merely a man endowed by the Holy Ghost at Baptism with Super Natural Powers. Theodotus is condemned as a heretic and excluded from the Church.

Homosexual Saint: Saint Sebastian, a handsome young Roman Centurion, is beloved by the Emperor Diocletian, who turns against him when he embraces Christianity. Sebastian is stripped naked and tied to a tree and shot full of arrows by his fellow centurions, but he miraculously survives only to die many years later in a second martyrdom when he is inhumanly stoned to death. Saint Sebastian has been called the patron saint of gays [and the patron saint of SM].

AD 190-The Roman Church commences to compile a list of books acceptable to all Christian Churches. Disputes as to what is doctrine and what is not will lead to the creation of minor sects preaching contradictory dogmas. Another problem is illiteracy, which plagues the Church in its dissemination of uniform written material on clerical dogma, a predicament that is not officially addressed until Pope Innocent III, in AD 1215, issues an edict regarding this matter and actually removes a Bishop from office due to his incompetence from illiteracy.

"Literature, science, taste, were words scarce in use during the ages we are contemplating; or if they occur at any time, eminence in them is ascribed to persons and productions so contemptible that it appears their true import was little understood. Persons of the highest rank, and in the most eminent stations could not read or write. Many of the clergy did not understand the Breviary, which they were obliged daily to recite; some of them could scarce read it." ~Gibbon, 1737-1794, Dict. Nat. Bio. Vol. i. p. 18.

The Christian council, under Pope Victor I, 189-199 C.E., makes Easter Sunday the official day of celebration for Christians in Rome. Nowhere in the Bible does it state that Sunday is the Sabbath. Victor I then excommunicates the Eastern Churches for not recognizing or observing the Roman Church's official Easter Sunday.

Mithraism [BC 600] is the predominant religion amongst the Roman Legionnaires and poses an obstacle to the new followers of "The Way." The striking similarities of the two religions [Christianity borrowed from this cult], makes it easy to convert the followers. Clement is appointed Bishop of Alexandria.

Clement, on the vices of the Pagan Greeks says, "For example, as I said before, since at that time no Laws were yet administered, nor punishment suspended over evil deeds, they recorded as rightful and brave deeds, adulteries and sodomy, and incestuous and unlawful marriages, and bloodshed and parricides, and murders of children and brethren, and moreover, wars and seditions actually carried on by their own champions, whom they both accounted and called Gods, and bequeathed the remembrance of them as worshipful and brave to later generations." -Eusebius of Caesarea: Præparatio Evangelica [Preparation for the Gospel], Tr., E.H. Gifford, 1903.

AD196- The Easter Controversy, concerning the day of celebration a Sunday, according to practice in the West, or the 14th of the month of Nisan [in the Hebrew calendar], or no matter what day of the week, according to practice in the East.

The controversy is not resolved at this time. The Didache, whose extant form dates from the 2nd century, is an important record of Christian belief, practice and governance in the 1st century. Latin is introduced as a liturgical language in the West. The other liturgical languages are Aramaic and Greek. The Catechetical School of Alexandria, founded about the middle of the century, gains increasing influence on doctrinal study and instruction, and interpretations of the Bible.

AD200 (?) -258(?) -Novatian becomes the second Antipope in AD 251. He is the first Roman theologian to write in Latin and believes that no forgiveness should be granted for grave sins after baptism. He has himself declared Pope by three Bishops who are later excommunicated and establishes his own church in conflict with the Roman Catholic Church.

He disagrees with Pope Cornelius AD 251, who is in favor of forgiveness for the Christians who denied their faith rather than be tortured by Emperor Decius of Rome and wish to re-unite with the Catholic Church. His works include "On the Trinity" and "On Jewish Foods" His followers are reunited with the Church one hundred and twenty-five years later [AD 325], when the Council of Nice declares Jesus to be God.

The prophet Mani: The Mandeans, who to this day live in Southern Iraq, also formed part of this baptist sectarian world which surrounded the young Mani. When he was twelve years old, in about 228-29 C.E., Mani had his first vision in which his Heavenly double, his "Twin," his "Partner" or "Companion," appeared to him and assured him of his constant protection and help. Later, Mani saw in this the effective revelation of the "Comforter," or the "Holy Spirit," who had revealed to him the "Mysteries" of his teaching. ~The Church's War On The Cathars By Eric Wynants.

The early Christians believed in a God who was neither male nor female, "This day is this Scripture fulfilled, yea even as ye heard with ears of flesh. For I say unto ye all, I am the Christ who Isaiah spake of and did know. And the poor of the land are they of humble heart and spirit who listen to my voice, even as I heal the brokenhearted who know not the root from whence they came, but do know I come to heal them with truth and mercy.' Yea, I preach deliverance to the captives, even all of mankind enslaved to Satan's unmerciful laws and of angels imprisoned in darkness. And to the blind, I restore unto them light, my holy law, that they may know Truth and see, both spiritual and physical marvels of God. And to those bound, yea even every beast of the field and every flying creature of the Heaven, I set free, for I come also to put an end to every form of sacrifice in my Father's Holy Name; for at no time did my Father-Mother, God in Heaven ask such cruelty, but wanted only of man the Pure Oblation. Yea, I am come to fulfill all spoken of me, and so shall all be fulfilled through my presence." ~The Essene Humane Gospel of Jesus, Translated From The Original Hebrew And Aramaic Texts, Typesetting by: Followers of the Essene Way [F.E.W.]

"The Mysteries of the Gnostics were continued, with a difference, as Christian ... The first Christians built on Secret Doctrines that were only explained to initiates during a long course of years. These Mysteries were never to be divulged or promulgated [and were not] until the belief in historic Christianity had taken permanent root. We are told how it was held by some that the 'Apocrypha' might only be read by those who were perfected, and that these writings were reserved exclusively for the Christian adepts. It must be obvious that the doctrine or knowledge that was forced to be kept so sacredly secret as that, could have had no relation to the human history, personality or teachings of an inspired founder of that primitive Christianity supposed to have had so simple an origin... Now there is plenty of evidence to show that these sayings, which are the admitted foundations of the Canonical Gospels, were not first uttered by a personal Founder of Christianity, nor invented after wards by any of his followers. Many of them were pre-extant, pre-historical and pre-Christian." ~Gerald Massey, The Logia of the Lord, or Pre-historic Sayings Ascribed to Jesus the Christ, p. 4.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

AD 200-The Golden Rule as preached by Diogenes “We should wish our friends to behave as us.” Twenty of the twenty-seven Books of the New Testament are accepted as authoritative by Church Authorities. Disputed are: Books of James, Hebrew II, III John, II John, II Peter, and Revelations. Rejected are: Books of Barnabus, I Clement [containing letters from Clement I, later Saint Clement] Hermas, and The Didache.

“The whole purpose of the brief 2nd Book of John is to admonish followers not to listen to the many people who were telling them the simple truth that Jesus never existed. The Catholic Bible dates the 2nd Book of John to 90 C.E.” ~Even in Biblical Times People Asserted Christ Never Existed by Robert Taylor Diegesis, 1829.

The Old Testament is translated during the 3rd century and the Christians insert NEW passages. The Jews are accused of altering Scripture by omitting these alleged sacred passages and books.

From very early days of Christianity, Church orations and Christian theological writings almost invariably include passionate anti-Jewish incitement, although the Christian Savior once preached from the Torah.

“In the lists of the Seventy Apostles by the Pseudo-Doretheus and the Pseudo-Hippolytus [two more forgeries], Saint Hermas figures as Bishop of Philippi. No one supposes that he was the author of the ‘Shepherd of Hermas,’ the date of which is about 40 A.D., though from Origen onwards, Church writers have expressed this view, and accordingly have given that allegorical work a place among the writings of the Apostolic Fathers.” ~Encyclopedia Britannica, vol. 2, 2021; cf. Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 7, 268. The Catholic Encyclopedia says that this “Work had great authority in ancient times and was ranked with Holy Scripture” and included as such in the MSS. of Holy Writ; but yet it is still called Apocryphal and false.

History is being re-written to show the world the new faith is the faith of Jesus, the Son of God. The new faith borrows what it needs from the Jewish Scriptures and declares what it does not need as heretic or blasphemous. This denial of Jewish history continues and in 1242, Paris, France, Jewish Scriptures are stolen from the synagogues and burned, and in spite of the Papal decrees declaring previously that the Jews are not to be wronged.

Anti-Semitic dialogue begins with the early fathers who will twist history to serve the Church; twenty-seven of the thirty-two surviving works of Tertullian, 160-225, a priest from Carthage who is considered the first theologian of the West, contain anti-Jewish discourse. Tertullian writes, “Though Israel may wash all its members every day, it is never clean. Its hands... Are always stained, covered forever with the blood of the prophets and of our Lord himself.” ~Tertullian, De Oratione, p. 146, 240 C.E.

AD 202-Persecution continues under Septimius Severus who wants to establish a simple common religion in the Empire, therefore brutally discriminating against all others. Septimius Severus tries to unite the Roman Empire under one religion, the worship of the Unconquered Sun [Sol Invictus], the faith of the first Christian Emperor, Constantine, but, both Jews and Christian-Jews refuse to convert for which they are vehemently persecuted.

AD 201-51-Gaius Messius Quintus Tratanus Decius, Emperor of Rome [AD 249-51] perpetrates the first extensive persecution of Christians for their refusal of honoring pagan gods. The Christians are to be hunted down and exterminated for believing in one god [Monotheism] and not the many Gods of the Romans. Amongst his many victims is Pope Fabian [This ruthless dealing with religious followers of another god is later to be adopted and the accepted norm for the Christians].

The early Christian Fathers will recognize the God of the Jews as the God of Gods, “Listen, then,” says Peter, “That you may know, first of all, that even if there are many Gods, as you say, they are subject to the God of the Jews, to whom no one is equal, than whom no one can be greater; for it is written that the prophet Moses thus spoke to the Jews, ‘The Lord your God is the God of Gods, and the Lord of lords, the great God.’ Thus, although there are many that are called Gods, yet He who is the God of the Jews is alone called the God of Gods.” ~The Recognitions of Clement, 2.41. The Answer, Continued.

AD 205-270-Plotinus, Roman philosopher, who founded Neoplatonism. Plotinus was born in Asyut, Egypt, and studied with the philosopher Ammonius Saccas at Alexandria for ten years. In 244 C.E., Plotinus went to Rome, where he established a school. Plotinus taught Pythagorean and Platonic wisdoms well as asceticism with such elation, that his audience sometimes gave their fortunes to the poor, set their slaves free, and dedicated themselves to lives of study and abstinence and piety.

Homosexual Rome: The birth of Marcus Aurelius Antoninus, who will become Heliogabalus, the boy

Emperor of Rome. Unashamedly homosexual he is married twice in one night, choosing a well hung charioteer as his husband, and a boy named Hierocles as his wife. He sends out his representatives to round up the men with the largest penises in the Roman Empire. Eventually his own guards thrust a sword up his ass and abandon him in a sewer. He was only seventeen.

Note on Jesus and homosexuality: "It is worthwhile to check the words attributed to Jesus by the author of the Gospel of Matthew. He also had a list of sins that could bring doom on a person: Matthew 15:18-20: '... Those things, which proceed out of the mouth come forth from the heart; and they defile the man. For out of the heart proceed evil thoughts, murders, adulteries, fornications, thefts, false witness, blasphemies. These are the things, which defile a man...'" ~Note: the Gospel According to Matthew Gospel contains 92% of the text that already appears in Mark.

Matter is seen as the root cause of all evil, which is seen as materialism, and one's object in life should be to escape this material world of the senses, and thereby abandon all earthly interests for those of "Intellectual meditation." By spiritual purification by the exercise of thought, man can gradually lift himself up to an intuition of the "Nous," and ultimately to a complete and ecstatic union with the "One," that is, God. Plotinus is claimed to have experienced this "Divine Ecstasy" on several occasions during his life.

At the age of 60, with permission of the Roman Emperor Gallienus, Plotinus planned to establish a communistic state, one modeled after the famous book, "The Republic," written by Plato, but the endeavor failed due to the opposition of Gallienus's counselors. His works comprise 54 treatises in Greek, called the "Enneads," 6 groups of 9 books each, an arrangement made by his student Porphyry, 232-304, who edited his writings that attacked the Gnostic view that the material world is essentially evil. Plotinus found Christianity an objectionable faith, yet his influence upon monotheists for generations in all three major religions is still felt.

Forgery is approved in the name of God or the Church, "There are few among you fully acquainted with the dishonest practices commonly resorted to by the early Christian writers. They were notorious forgers—rarely scrupling to spin evidence out of their own brains when none could be found in authentic documents suitable for their purpose. To ward off the blows aimed at them by the Pagans and Infidels, no weapons were considered unlawful: nor was this all, for the old saints seemed to glory in their infamous prowess, wearing their vileness, as a dancing-girl her plumes and jewels, for show and ornament, as though rascality, in aid of what they had themselves determined, was the true religion, was the measure of Holiness! It was not uncommon for these pious fathers and teachers of Christ's Word, to forge certain documents or paragraphs, and then charge the Jews, or others, with having erased them from the Bible. Thus, Justin Martyr, a most zealous Christian writer, of great reputation for sanctity, charges the Jews with having erased from the book of Ezra the following words, 'And Ezra said unto the people, This Passover is our Savior and our refuge; and if you will but persuade to be convinced in your hearts that we are to humble to him in a sign or figure, and afterwards to put our trust in him, this place shall not be made desolate to all ages, says the Lord of Hosts; but if you do not believe in him, nor attend to his preaching, you shall be as dirt to the nations,' which passage Justin did most scandalously charge the Jews, because of their enmity to Christ, with blotting out of the book, evidently with the two-fold object of aspersing the Jews, and by a lie, strengthening the belief in Christ; for, as the editor of Justin justly remarks, 'This passage is not to be found in any copies of the Apocryphal or Canonical Ezra, nor in any other Christian writer, except Lactantius, and instead of being expunged by the Jews, appears to have been forged by the Christians.'" ~From: The Existence of Christ Disproved, by Irresistible Evidence, in a Series of Letters, From a German Jew, Addressed to Christians of all denominations. [202-203]

AD 206- Tertullian, a convert since 197 C.E., and the first great ecclesiastical writer in Latin, joins the heretical Montanists. Tertullian dies in 230 C.E.

AD 210- Judah HaNasi, the head of the Sanhedrin, writes down the Oral Law into a six-volume legal code, the "Mishnah."

The Gospel According To Thomas states that early Christian writings were written in a secret Code, "These secret sayings were spoken by the living Jesus and they were inscribed by his twin, Judas Thomas. "Whoever discovers the interpretation of these sayings will never die. Those who seek should not stop seeking until they find. Seekers should not abandon their search before they make an unsettling discovery completely amazing them. They will then become rulers over everything." ~Charles Hedrick, Unlocking the Secrets of

To Pope Pius XII. "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

AD215- The death of Clement of Alexandria, professor of Origen and a founding father of the School of Alexandria. ~Note: Clement was aware of Buddhism.

AD216- 276-Mani, founder of Manichaeism, fuses Persian, Christian, and Buddhist elements into a major new heresy, which competes against Christianity. Mani, Manichaeus, son of a Babylonian prince, has a vision of an angel at age twelve who designates him as the Prophet for the New Revelation. Founder of Manichaeism, believes that sin is a manifestation of the human spirit's decline from the divine realm to its imprisonment in the evil world of materialism.

The Church contradicts this doctrine, for it believes sin is the opposition to the will of God. Mani travels to various regions and studies Buddhism after which he is granted an audience with King Shapur who is impressed by his teachings on Light and Darkness. Shapur dies in 273 and his son Bahram I, a supporter of Zoroastrianism, asks why the angels would designate Mani and not the King as Prophet. Mani declares that it is God's Will [Divine Right vs. Divine Will, a debate, which will be taken up throughout the course of history between kings and the Church leaders]. Thallus, in the 3rd century, is said to have written that Jesus' death was accompanied by earthquakes and darkness.

"One extreme, known as 'Radical Preterism,' sees the entire sermon as a reference to the destruction of Jerusalem in 70 C.E. Preterists point to such things as documented reports by Josephus, Tacitus and others in 70 C.E., describing false prophets and false Messiahs leading many people astray, chariots in the clouds, voices from Heaven, and signs in the sky. While such supernatural events may well have taken place, they do not prove that radical Preterism is the answer. This view is fraught with difficulties since those holding it must believe that the rapture and final battle of Armageddon have already taken place. That leaves no room for a return of Christ in Glory that the entire world will see, as he promised. It seems highly unlikely that the entire Christian Church missed the much anticipated final return of Christ just 40 years after it was forged with such passion and persecution. Other difficulties include the lack of physical events such as the earthquake that would split the Mount of Olives in two." ~George Pytlík, Deliver Us From Evil, 1998. cf. Romans 16:17; II Peter 2:1.

King Bahram is not pleased and has Mani shackled and imprisoned. Mani regarded himself as the last of the great succession of prophets that includes Buddha, Zoroaster, and Jesus. Mani saw Adam and Eve as offspring of two demons, Asqalun and Namrael. Mani felt it was his role as spiritual leader to awaken the light in mankind as Ohrmazd-Jesus had done for him. In 276 C.E., Mani is crucified and flayed alive. His followers are forced to carry on his teachings by way of a secret organization with initiations and the use of secret passwords and symbols to identify and protect themselves.

Dagon, the fish-god of the Babylonians, Assyrians, and Phoenicians, was sacred to Venus; and, curiously enough, Catholics now eat fish on the day, which was dedicated to Venus, Dies Veneris, or Friday, "Fish day" as it was called. The dag or fish, was an ancient symbol of the productive power, and was the emblem of fecundity or reproduction. Vishnu, the Hindu "Matsya," or "Messiah," "Preserver," "Mediator," and "Savior," is identical to the Babylonian "Dagon," or "Fish-God."

He becomes a fish to save the "Seventh Manu," the progenitor of the human race, from the 'Universal Deluge' or 'Great Flood.' The earliest emblems of the Christian Savior are "The good shepherd," "The lamb," or ram, and "The fish," both the lamb and fish being of zodiacal origin [Aries and Pisces].

AD217- 222-Pope Saint Calixtus I of Rome: in his First Epistle to Bishop Benedict, writes on the seasons for fasting and the accusations against teachers. In his Second Epistle, to the Bishops of Gaul [France], Saint Calixtus writes against the Ecclesiastical conspiracies; Bishops prying into the affairs of other diocese, marriages between blood relatives, and other moral irregularities.

"... Among the Popes were a large number of married men, some of whom gave up their wives and children in exchange for the Papal Office. Many were sons of Priests, Bishops and Popes; some were bastards; one was a widower, another an ex-slave; several were murderers, some unbelievers; some were hermits, some heretics, sadists and sodomites; many became Popes by buying the Papacy [simony], and continued their days selling Holy things to rake in the money; one at least was a Satan-worshiper; some fathered illegitimate children, some were fornicators and adulterers on a grand scale; some were astonishingly old, some even more astonishingly young; some were strangled; worst of all were those who worshipped a granite God." ~Robert M. Price, Acts 8:18-24.

Marriage, in fact, which the Church professes to have raised to the rank of a sacrament in the interest of civilization, is one of the most lucrative interests of the Black International, clergy. It is hedged with restrictions from which a dispensation must be obtained from Rome.

The Catholic must not marry one who is related to him or her, either by blood or marriage within the fourth degree. A dispensation is needed to marry a non-Catholic, and disputes arise about the validity of the marriage as its consummation which may lead to 'Causes Celebres,' costing thousands of dollars, at the Roman Tribunals.

The amazing procedure is a concoction, which the Catholic Church finds expedient to alter for a sufficient remuneration thereby nullifying what they say. And the non-Catholic who imagines that matrimony is a simple matter in the Roman Church, that the priest links you to a man or woman, and you remain linked for life, is also therefore very far astray. And this is only one source of the petitions and cases that are submitted daily to the "Sacred Congregation" of Cardinals in Rome.

Surely, the dissolution of marriage, within the Catholic Church, remains for the rich and infamous via the Holy Office, once the dreaded Inquisition and now a very tame bureau of radiant priests granting, for a reasonable consideration, certain classes of matrimonial dispensations. "Whosoever doeth not righteousness is not of God, neither he that loveth not his brother." ~1 John 3:10.

Pope Calixtus also declares that priests who sinned may resume their duties after repenting: "Then shall I offer a bullock upon Thy altar."

AD217-235: Saint Hippolytus becomes the first anti-pope, reconciles to the Church while in prison during persecution in 235.

AD220- Tertullian: b. 160(?), a Carthaginian lawyer, and Christian convert in 193 C.E., then modifies his beliefs to Montanism in 207 C.E., "Father of Latin Church," coins the "Trinity," which in the "New Testament," claims the two-natures doctrine [Jesus is both fully human and Divine], and advocates the exclusion of all women from the priesthood, writes: "Father, Son, Holy Spirit are one substantia yet three persona, cites rumor Jesus son of prostitute [Spectaculis 30.6], cites Western text-type." ~Loeb Classics, Latin, Ante Nicæan Fathers, v.3-4.

Note: Rehab, the prostitute, became the grand-grand-mother of David, ancestor of Jesus Christ, as described in the genealogy of Jesus. ~Matthew 1:5; see also Hebrews 11:31, Joshua 6.

"The first two chapters of Matthew, the virgin birth and Jesus' genealogy, were not contained in the first versions of Matthew's Gospel, but were added at a much later date." ~The Gospel of Matthew, the Fraud! The Text by Vexen Crabtree, 1999.

Pious frauds are politely approved, if for the benefit of the Church, "Among the Jews, in the later period of their history, prior to the birth of Christ, many pseudonymous works were composed. This was true mostly of the Alexandrians, but not of them exclusively... At first and often this was a literary device, no deceit being intended. It early led, however, to intentional fraud. The same practice passed into those Christian circles where Judaism and Judaizing influences were potent. A distinction was made between esoteric [obscure], and exoteric [suitable to be imparted to the masses] doctrine, between what the enlightened may hold, and what it was expedient to impart to the people, a distinction, which had its prime source in the Alexandrian philosophy [Egyptian/Greek]. Under the cover of this false ethical principle, writings were fabricated like the Sibylline [Greek] oracles and the Pseudo-Clementine Homilies. But pious frauds of this nature were possible only where there was a defective sense of obligation to Truth. They are utterly repugnant to a sound Christian feeling; nor is there ground for supposing that in the ancient Church, generally speaking, they were regarded otherwise than as at present. Speaking of one of these fabricated books, Acta Pauli et Theclae, Tertullian says that 'In Asia, the Presbyter who composed that writing, as if he were augmenting Paul's name from his own store, after being convicted and confessing that he had done it from love of Paul, was removed from office.' This act is indicative of the judgment that would be formed of such an imposture by Christians generally at that time." ~George P. Fisher, The Beginnings of Christianity.

Paul is the first Christian fund raiser:

✠ "Now concerning the collection for the saints. As I directed the churches of Galatia, so you also are to do. On the first day of every week, each one of you should set aside a sum of money in keeping with his income." ~1 Corinthians 16:1-2.

✠ "For you know the generous act of our Lord Jesus Christ, that though he was rich, yet for your sakes he became poor, so that by his poverty you might become rich." ~II Corinthians 8:7.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

✠ Paul appeals to selfishness, which promises a bountiful return to the Christian Church, "But this I say, He, which sows sparingly shall reap also sparingly, and he, which sows bountifully, shall reap also bountifully. Every man according as he purpose in his heart, so let him give; not grudgingly, or of necessity; for God loves a cheerful giver." ~II Corinthians 9:6-7.

✠ "See that you abound in this grace also..." ~II Corinthians 8:7, 9:2-5.

Without Judaism, there would be no Christian history, "The ritual development of Christianity advances step by step with the dogmatic, and by the same process. It began with very simple practices, all taken from Judaism, baptism, the breaking of bread, the imposition of hands, prayer and fasting. Then a meaning more and more profound was assigned to them. They were amplified and gestures familiar to the Pagans added; they were loaded with the larger interests, for example, embraced in the rites of the Greek and Oriental Mysteries, and thus charged, as it were, with the ancient formidable power of Magic [Mysticism]. This work was instituted as soon as the Apostolic faith was transported from Palestine to Greek soil." ~Gignebert, Christianity Past and Present, p. 121.

In the synod of 220, Bishops [only a small fraction of the total episcopate] gathered by Constantine in Nicæa in 325 had, in order to legitimize the Imperial Order, to canonize dogma's pertaining to the nature of the founder of Christianity. Regarding this conflicts had arisen between the Roman position and the Bishops of the East, which caused Constantine to want do identify the Christian founder with God, and Jesus is made Divine.

The Emperor, not being God, would now also become the "Divine" guardian of God's Empire on Earth and so become a sort of third God. As long as conflicting views about this founder existed, Constantine could not safeguard the "Divine Truth," which would give new meaning and justification to his Imperial Order, which was precisely what the great Emperor strategist needed. ~The Christ-Emperor, Christos Basileus.

AD221- Julius Africanus writes a history of the world [Chronographiai, five books], from Creation to the year AD 221, encompassing, according to his calculations, 5723 years. Julius calculates the period between Creation and Jesus as 5500 years, placing the Incarnation on the first day of AM 5501 [our March 25, 1 B.C.E.]. ~according to Venance Grumel, La Chronologie, 1958.

He attempted to place Biblical events in their proper chronological perspective, "Julius Africanus was well acquainted with Hebrew, and Socrates classes him for learning with Clement of Alexandria and Origen. His chief work is his chronography, in five books. It commenced with the creation [5499 B.C.E.], and came down to the year 221, the fourth year of Elagabalus. It is the foundation of the medieval historiography of the world and the Church. We have considerable fragments of it and can restore it in part from the Chronicle of Eusebius. A satisfactory estimate of its merits requires a fuller examination of the Byzantine and oriental chronography of the Church than has hitherto been made. Earlier writers were concerned to prove the antiquity of the Christian religion against the heathen charge of novelty by tracing it back to Moses and the prophets who were older than the Greek philosophers and poets. But Africanus made the first attempt at a systematic chronicle of sacred and profane history. He used as a fixed point the accession of Cyrus, which he placed Olymp. 55, 1, and then counting backwards in sacred history, he computed 1237 years between the Exodus and the end of the seventy years captivity or the first year of Cyrus. He followed the Septuagint chronology, placed the exodus A. M. 3707, and counted 740 years between the Exodus and Solomon. He fixed the Lord's birth in A. M. 5500, and 10 years before our Dionysian era, but he allows only one year's public ministry and thus puts the crucifixion A. M. 5531. He makes the 31 years of the Savior's life the complement of the 969 years of Methuselah. He understood the 70 weeks of Daniel to be 490 lunar years, which are equivalent to 475 Julian years. He treats the darkness at the crucifixion as miraculous, since an eclipse of the sun could not have taken place at the full moon." ~History of the Christian Church: Ecclesiastical Literature of the Ante-Nicene Age, and Biographical Sketches of the Church-Fathers. Letter to Aristides.

AD223-The Church claims that Mary Magdlene is a prostitute, although it does not state so Scripturally. Tertullian, 160-225, cites a rumor that Jesus is a son of a prostitute.

Prostitution takes place, "Even the very prostitutes, the victims of public lust, are brought upon the stage, creatures feeling yet more wretched in the presence of women, the only members in the community who were unaware of their existence; now they are exhibited in public before the eyes of persons of every age and rank; their address, their price, their record are publicly announced, even to those who do not need the information, and [to say nothing of the rest] things, which ought to remain hidden in the darkness of their dens so as not to contaminate the daylight." ~Tertullian.

AD224-The first recorded literature of a plague is recorded in China. One thousand ninety-five years later, a similar plague would return and spread throughout Europe changing the religious beliefs of man. Europeans would interpret this [plague] as a sign from God that he is displeased with man.

AD 224-241-Ardashir I is worshipped as a God during his lifetime and declares Zoroastrianism as the national religion of Persia.

AD232-254- Origen establishes the School of Caesarea after being deposed in 231 as head of the School of Alexandria by the early Church Fathers; he dies in 254 C.E. A scholar and voluminous writer, he is one of the founders of systematic theology and wields wide influence for many years over the early Christian beliefs.

Origen writes that the Jews, "Have committed the most abominable of crimes" in conspiring against Christ, and for that reason And "The blood of Jesus falls not only on the Jews of that time, but on all generations of Jews up to the End of the World." ~Origen of Alexandria in De Oratone by Tertullian, p. 146, 248 C.E.

With Church leaders continually changing Scripture, there arose a small faction of Christians who rose up against the autocratic regime, "Long before the times of which we now treat [370-400 C.E.] some Christians had seen it their duty to withdraw from the communion of the Church of Rome. The first instance of this that we find on record, if we except that of Tertullian [the Montanist], is the case of Novatian, who, in the year 251 C.E., was ordained the pastor of a Church in the city of Rome." ~William Jones, History of the Christian Church, chap. 3, sec. 2, p. 180.

Origen of Alexandria is posthumously anathematized at Fifth Ecumenical Council due to his thinking not following exact Christian positions. "The Jewish nation was driven from its country, and another people was called by God to the blessed election." ~Origen of Alexandria.

End of the World: The Bible says that the world will be destroyed once more, but this time by fire.

- † "The present Heavens and earth, by His word, are being reserved for fire, kept for the Day of Judgment and the destruction of ungodly men." ~2 Peter 3:7.
- † "But the day of the Lord will come like a thief in which the Heavens will pass away with a roar and the elements will be destroyed with intense heat and the earth and its works will be burned up." ~2 Peter 3:10.
- † "The inhabitants of the earth are burned and few men are left" ~Isaiah 24:6.
- † "The hills melt and the earth is burned up." ~Nahum 1:5.
- † "A third of the earth was burned up and a third of the trees were burned up and all the green grass was burned up. A great mountain [asteroid?] burning with fire was thrown into the sea and a third of the sea became blood and a third of the creatures which were in the sea and had life died and a third of the ships were destroyed. And a great star [meteor, comet?] fell from Heaven burning like a torch and it fell on a third of the rivers and springs of water." ~Revelation 8:7-11.
- † "The sun scorched men with fire." ~Revelation 16:8.

In an older version of 2 Peter we have, "May grace and peace be multiplied to you in the knowledge of God and of our Lord Jesus." ~2 Peter 1:2.

AD234- Vast forgeries of additional Christian works in the name of Porphyry [234 C.E.], who was perhaps the leading academic of the Roman Empire at the turn of the 4th century, against the Christian religion, enabled Emperor Constantine to be reasonably justified to be incensed and to edict for the destruction of the writings of Porphyry [and, incidentally, that "Porphyrian" heathen, Arius].

AD 240 (?) - Reprobis, Saint Christopher [a lycanthrope], converts from Paganism to Christianity. He is removed from Sainthood on May 9, AD 1969 by Pope Paul VI. Many so-called Saints have lived less than saintly lives, obtaining their credentials through monetary contributions to the church and higher authorities for recommendations for beatification and sainthood or simply helped spread the word of Catholicism by whatever means they thought necessary at the time [another embarrassment to Church officials].

Although Saint Christopher is one of the most popular saints in the East and in the West, almost nothing certain is known about his alleged life or death although his Canonization began in the 15th century. In 1969, the Catholic Church took a long look at their so-called saints on the calendar to see if there was any historical evidence that the saint actually existed and lived a life of true Holiness. In taking this long look, the Church discovered that there was little proof that many of their 'Saints,' together with some very popular ones, ever lived.

Legend says: "A heathen king [in Canaan or Arabia], through the prayers of his wife to the Blessed Virgin, had a son, whom he called Offerus [Offro, Adokimus, or Reprebus] and dedicated to the Gods Machmet and Apollo. Acquiring in time extraordinary size and strength, Offerus resolved to serve only the strongest and the bravest. He bound himself successively to a mighty king and to Satan, but he found both lacking in courage, the former dreading even the name of the Devil, and the latter frightened by the sight of a cross at the roadside." ~The Catholic Encyclopedia, article: Saint Christopher.

Sailors often wear a pendant of Saint Christopher who is considered a saint that receives thousands of prayers a day from the faithful, and has always been a powerful figure. But the greatest secret of all is that Saint Cristopher is a Cynocephali, a dog-head, a werewolf. The fact is Saint Christopher is a Cynocephali, who was, like a ghost, removed from most of Western literature.

Some of the best literature of the Saints life is located in Ireland and Celtic culture of Britian, which is why it probably survived there due to the facts that the Irish Monks knew Greek and that the Irish Celtic culture was not romanized nearly as much as most of the rest of Europe.

An 8th century list of Saints expounds upon the fable that Saint Christopher, "Was one of the Dog-heads [werewolves(?)], a race that had the heads of dogs and ate human flesh. He meditated much on God, but at that time could only speak the language of the Dog-heads." ~The Greatest Werewolf Secret from The Best Within by Adam Douglas.

Walter of Speyer writing in the 10th century, states that Saint Christopher "Took his origins from the Cynocephali, a people in speech and continence dissimilar to others."

Saint Christopher is more popularly pictured as a giant carrying the Christ child across a river. Saint Christopher was a horrifying sight to behold, "... Four cubits in height, and his face was like unto the face of a great dog, and his eyes were like unto lamps of fire which burnt brightly, and his teeth were like unto the tusks of a wild boar, or the teeth of a lion, and the nails of his hands were like unto curved reaping hooks, and the nails of his toes were like unto the claws of a lion, and the hair of his head came down over his arms like unto the mane of a lion, and his whole appearance was awful and terrifying." ~ Contendings of the Apostles.

Biblically, we have toward the end of King Nebuchadnezzar's reign, a King mentally ill, and given the accounts of his behavior, it is now believed that he suffered from a form of Lycanthropy [believes that he is a werewolf], or the disease long associated with the werewolf myth.

Much of what is known about Nebuchadnezzar come from either Daniel's accounts in the Bible or the writings of Flavius Josephus. "Then Daniel, who was also called Belteshazzar, was puzzled for one hour, and his thoughts troubled him. The king said, 'Belteshazzar, do not let not the dream or the meaning of it trouble you.' Belteshazzar answered, 'My lord, if only the dream applied to those who hate you, and its meaning to your enemies!'" ~Daniel 4:19.

"The tree you saw, which grew and was strong, whose height reached to the sky, visible to all the earth; Whose leaves were fair and the fruit plentiful, providing food for all; under which the beasts of the field lived, and upon whose branches the birds of the air had their nests, that tree is you, 'O king! You have grown and become strong; for your greatness has grown to reach the sky, and your dominion to the end of the earth. You, O king saw a watcher, a holy one, coming down from Heaven saying, 'Chop the tree down and destroy it; yet leave the stump of the roots of it in the earth, with a band of iron and brass, in the tender grass of the field. Let him be wet with the dew of Heaven and let his portion be with the beasts of the field, till seven times pass over him.'" ~Daniel 4:20-26.

"Even the man who is pure in heart and says his prayers by night may become a wolf when the wolfbane blooms and the Moon is pure and bright..." ~Actress Maria Ouspenskaya's famous lines in The Wolf Man, 1941.

Anti-Semitism is inculcated in the early Church, as Origen of Alexandria writes that the Jews, "Have committed the most abominable of crimes" in conspiring against Christ, and for that reason "The Jewish nation was driven from its country, and another people was called by God to the blessed election." ~A Catholic Timeline of Events Relating to Jews, Anti-Judaism, Antisemitism, and the Holocaust From the 3rd Century to the Beginning of the Third

Millennium prepared by Jerry Darrin

AD242-Manichaeism originates in Persia; considered by Christians to be a combination of errors based on the assumption that two supreme principles [good and evil] are operative in creation and life, and that the supreme objective of human endeavor is liberation from evil [matter]. The heresy denies the humanity of Christ, the Sacramental system, the authority of the Church [and state], and endorses a moral code, which they believe, and preach, threatens the very fabric of Christian society. In the 12th and 13th centuries, it takes on the features of Albigensianism and Catharism.

Where did the Christians obtain this idea of Sacraments? The Pagans, Egyptians, Greeks, and Gnostics already had their Sacraments in place long before the advent of the Christian Church, "It is sometimes very difficult to tell exactly from which Pagan rite a particular Christian rite is derived, but it remains certain that the spirit of Pagan ritualism became, by degrees, impressed upon Christianity, to such an extent that at last the whole of it was distributed through its ceremonies... Moreover, the power of the clergy was singularly enhanced by the almost exclusive right, which they very early acquired, despite some faltering objections of ordering and dispensing the Magic power inherent in the rites known as Sacraments."

~Guignebert, Christinity Past and Present, p. 121.

Decadence, debauchery, moral depravity, and dissipation were often ignored amongst their ranks in the 3rd to 4th century. Such was the flagrant corruption among even the Bishops that Ammonius had his ear cut off to disqualify himself from being appointed a Bishop. He was called by the Greek name "Parotes" because of the severed ear, and Synesius, Bishop of Ptolemais, "But of doubtful orthodoxy," because he was a great Kabalist, wrote, "The people will always mock at things easy to be misunderstood; it must needs have impostures... A spirit that loves wisdom and contemplates Truth close at hand, is forced to disguise it, to induce the multitude to accept it. Fictions are necessary to the people, and the Truth becomes deadly to those who are not strong enough to contemplate it in all its brilliance." ~Shadow of the Third Century: A Reevaluation of Christianity by Alvin Boyd Kuhn, PH. D.

It was due more to the accumulation of corruption of the Church, than laxity, that the common masses did not respect Christianity, "But when on account of the abundant freedom, we fell into laxity and sloth, and envied and reviled each other, and were almost, as it were, taking up arms against one another, rulers assailing rulers with words like spears, and people forming parties against people, and monstrous hypocrisy and dissimulation rising to the greatest height of wickedness, the Divine Judgment with forbearance, as is its pleasure, while the multitudes yet continued to assemble, gently and moderately harassed the Episcopacy." ~Prolegomena: The Life and Writings of Eusebius of Caesarea: Testimonies of the Ancients Against Eusebius, Chapter I, The Events Which Preceded the Persecution in Our Times.

Corruption was a common thing amongst the early Christian priesthood, something you seldom, if ever, have heard of "There arose a quarrel between the high priests on the one hand and the priests and leaders of the people of Jerusalem on the other. And each of them collected a body of the boldest and most restless men, and put himself at their head, and whenever they met they hurled invectives and stones at each other. And there was no one that would interpose; but these things were done at will as if in a city destitute of a ruler. And so great was the shamelessness and audacity of the high priests that they dared to send their servants to the threshing-floors to seize the tithes due to the priests; and thus those of the priests that were poor were seen to be perishing of want. In this way did the violence of the factions prevail over all justice."

~Prolegomena: The Life and Writings of Eusebius of Caesarea: Testimonies of the Ancients Against Eusebius, Chapter XX, The Events, Which Took Place in Jerusalem During the Reign of Nero.

"Try to picture to yourself the life of nine out of ten in Christendom at that time. Cut out those pictures of occasional saints or scholars, or silk-robed merchants and gay tournaments. Follow the life of the man working from dawn to sunset, then returning to a sty, the floor unpaved, the cesspool and mud heap at the door, the filthy interior without the cheapest comfort or adornment. Imagine the woman bearing her seven or eight children in it, doing twice the work of the poorest modern woman, brutally treated by most husbands; a cow... And the same gossipy and crassly superstitious little village round her from cradle to grave, the scold's bridle or the dunking stool if she dare assert herself, the superstition of witchcraft if she wondered if the gentle Jesus did really arrange all of this, the sudden departure of the man for war, the famine drawing on with fiendish slowness, the plague spreading over the countryside. And there you have the true picture of the 13th century." ~Father Joseph McCabe on the Catholic Church.

Superstition: From supersisto, "To stand in terror of the deity." ~Cicero, De Nat. deorum, I, 42, 117.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

From superstes, surviving: "Qui totos dies precabantur et immolabant, ut sibi sui liberi superstites essent, superstitiosi sunt appellati," i.e., "Those who for whole days prayed and offered sacrifice that their children might survive them, were called superstitious." ~Cicero, ibid, II, 28, 72.

AD 247-End of the World: Christian prophets declare that the spreading persecutions of Christians by the Romans as a sign of the impending return of Jesus.

AD 248-During the same period in which the Gospels are being fabricated, the Church historian Origen, 185-254, unflinchingly cites the account that Jesus is a fabricated virgin birth, and that Mary committed adultery with a Roman soldier named Panthera. Verbatim: "... When she [Mary] was pregnant, she was turned out of doors by the carpenter to whom she had been betrothed, as having been guilty of adultery, and that she bore a child to a certain soldier named Panthera." ~ Origen, Eight Books of Origen Contra Celsum I, 32. Revelation 2:22-23.

"If a man commits adultery with his neighbor's wife, both the adulterer and the adulteress shall be put to death." ~Leviticus 20:10, Ezekiel 16:40, John 8:3.

Unscrupulous Christian try ridiculing this bastard birth account of Jesus by citing a Greek pun until in the 20th century, which states a "Tombstone of a soldier was found in Bingerbrueck, Germany, inscribed: Tiberius Julius Abdes Pantera of Sidon [ancient city on the Mediterranean coast of Lebanon], aged 62, a soldier of 40 years' service, of the first cohort of archers, lies here." ~M.D. Magee, Birth Narratives II, 2004, with thanks to contributing editor Hans H. Atrott.

Saint Cyprian writes that the Jews have fallen under the heavy wrath of God, because they have departed from the Lord, and have followed idols. The Jews never worshiped idols, but this is but another form of slander against these people.

AD 249 to 251-Decius persecutes Christians, but not because he despised their religion, but because the Christians refuse to sacrifice to the Roman Gods [and Emperors], and the safety of the state can only be assured by the prayers to the Gods. During the Christian persecutions, Emperor Decius executed Pope Fabianus, after which he supposedly remarks, "I would far rather receive news of a rival to the throne than of another Bishop in Rome."

"The Christians were persecuted for a variety of reasons. First, they denied the basis for the Roman imperium [Command, rule, empire, supreme power] by advocating that their God was the only real God. This denied the existence of the Pagan Roman Gods. These same Roman Gods, in a sense, founded Rome, because according to legend and popular belief, Romulus, the offspring of the Roman God of War, Mars, founded the city of Rome in 753 B.C.E. This gave the Romans a Divine basis for their temporal power. When the Christians denied the existence of Mars, they attacked the foundation of Roman power. Since they were attacking Roman authority and power, the Romans came to view Christians as a threat to the state..." ~ www.answering-christianity.com/crucified.htm, http://wesley.nnu.edu/biblical_studies/noncanon/apoc/fgapcpt.htm

AD 250-336-Arius, ordained in the Christian faith, Arius of Libya, studies at the School of Lucian of Antioch. Arius believes that God is unbegotten and without beginning. The son, second person, is begotten, therefore cannot be God in the same manner that the Father is.

The Bishop of Alexandria, Peter, ordains him a deacon [but later excommunicates him] Achilles, successor to Peter, ordains Arius as a priest, however, Alexander, the next Bishop of Antioch, excommunicates him again for denying the full Divinity of Christ as accepted in Pauline Christianity.

Arius understood that no matter how Jesus may have surpassed the wisdom and actions of man in this world, he is still a mere man. A controversy that has been debated for two hundred years is now an inferno. Either Christ, the "Word" is of the "Divine Realm" or the "Created Order." Arius is exiled in AD 325 by the Council of Nice to Libya.

Paul of Samosata, Bishop of Antioch from AD 260-272, also believes Jesus is a mere man, in whom the "Word" and "Wisdom" of God dwelt as a temple. This position is declared as heresy in AD 264 and condemned by the Synod of Antioch. The Bishop retains his See with the assistance of Queen Zenobia of Palmyra [The difficulties lay in the perception of Jesus being 'Divine' and with the equally strong conviction that 'God was One.']

The Bishop of Antioch, Lucian, speaks against the belief in the "Trinity" and believes it is a discourse not included in earlier Gospels. He is martyred [Judged with extreme prejudice by church authorities] in AD 312 for his views. Arianism is outlawed by the Roman Emperor Theodosius I in AD 379. The son of Emperor Constantine, Constantius II likes the Arian Doctrine and in 359 adopts it as the official faith of his realm.

It is difficult to realize the mass plagues, famines, and continuous starvations endured by the early Romans, which caused being a priest a good profession to be in. Josephus writes, "Of all evils, indeed, famine is the worst, and it destroys nothing so effectively as shame. For that which under other circumstances is worthy of respect, in the midst of famine is despised. Thus women snatched the food from the very mouths of their husbands and children, from their fathers, and what was most pitiable of all, mothers from their babes, and while their dearest ones were wasting away in their arms, they were not ashamed to take away from them the last drops that supported life. And even while they were eating thus they did not remain undiscovered. But everywhere the rioters appeared, to rob them even of these portions of food. For whenever they saw a house shut up, they regarded it as a sign that those inside were taking food. And immediately bursting open the doors they rushed in and seized what they were eating, almost forcing it out of their very throats. Old men who clung to their food were beaten, and if the women concealed it in their hands, their hair was torn for so doing. There was pity neither for gray hairs nor for infants, but, taking up the babes that clung to their morsels of food, they dashed them to the ground. But to those that anticipated their entrance and swallowed what they were about to seize, they were still more cruel, just as if they had been wronged by them. And they, devised the most terrible modes of torture to discover food, stopping up the privy passages of the poor wretches with bitter herbs, and piercing their seats with sharp rods. And men suffered things horrible even to hear of, for the sake of compelling them to confess to the possession of one loaf of bread, or in order that they might be made to disclose a single drachm [Greek silver coin] of barley, which they had concealed. But the tormentors themselves did not suffer hunger. Their conduct might indeed have seemed less barbarous if they had been driven to it by necessity; but they did it for the sake of exercising their madness and of providing sustenance for themselves for days to come. And when any one crept out of the city by night as far as the outposts of the Romans to collect wild herbs and grass, they went to meet him; and when he thought he had already escaped the enemy, they seized what he had brought with him, and even though oftentimes the man would entreat them, and, calling upon the most awful name of God, adjure them to give him a portion of what he had obtained at the risk of his life, they would give him nothing back. Indeed, it was fortunate if the one that was plundered was not also slain." ~cf. Luke 15:8-9, Maccabees 4:19, 10:20, 12:43, quoted in Prolegomena: The Life and Writings of Eusebius of Caesarea: Testimonies of the Ancients Against Eusebius, Chapter VI, The Famine, Which Oppressed Them.

Why haven't the Christians ever thought of early Christian coins? Why, no Christian coins in the 1st, 2nd, 3rd centuries C.E.? Because their so-called historical events, were literary events; Fictitious, invented, imaginary!

The Christian council of Rome, via Demetrius Bishop of Alexander condemns Origen who in 248 C.E., cites a rumor recorded by Celsus that, "Jesus fabricated the account of his birth from a virgin. In reality, Jesus' mother was driven out by the carpenter husband to whom she was betrothed because she had committed adultery with a [Roman] soldier named Panthera [thus the ben Pantere of Jewish sources]. Left poor and homeless, she gave birth to Jesus in secret. Jesus later spent time in Egypt, where he hired himself out as a laborer, learned magic, and so came to claim the title of God." ~Chronology of Events by Fr. Johnson Panchakonam, Origen, Contra Celsus.

AD 250-325-Iamblichus, Neoplatonic mystic, one of the authors of "The Chaldean Oracles" and "On the Mysteries," about sacred Magic and the lifting up of the soul through prayers and incantations is highly later regarded by Emperor Julian the Apostate. Christians, atheists, are still being crucified for refusing to believe in the Roman pagan gods, especially their 'Sun God.'

"This order of clergy presides over the rites, which more or less directly borrowed from Judaism or the Pagan Mysteries, though entirely re-adapted to Christian uses and reinvested, the chief of them at any rate, with the Magic mysterious power, which the secret cults of Greece and the Orient had rendered familiar to the men of those days. Nevertheless Christianity became a real religion, the most complete of them all, because it has taken the best they possess from all of them." ~Guignebert, Christianity Past and Present, p. 123.

Julian the Apostate is known as the 4th century Roman Emperor who tried to turn his Roman subjects away from the "Galileans" [Julian's epithet for Christians] and return them to the old religion and philosophy of the Greeks. Julian is reported in a letter that, to punish Arian Christians in Edessa for persecuting Valentinians, he had confiscated all of their properties.

These Christians, Julian noted, preached that believers should sell their goods and give to the poor in order,

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

"That they may attain more easily to the Kingdom of the Skies."

"The Church was founded upon, and through the Dark Ages of Faith has battered on [yet languishes decadently upon] monumental and petty forgeries and pious frauds, possible only because of its own shameless mendacity and through the crass ignorance and superstition of the sodden masses of its deluded votaries, purposely kept in that base condition for purposes of ecclesiastical graft and aggrandizement through conscious and most unconscionable imposture." ~1878: There Is No Such Thing As A Really Convincing Witness [To Jesus Christ] In Profane [Pagan] Literature, Forgery in Christianity, A Documented Record of the Foundations of the Christian Religion by Joseph Wheless [1858-1950].

"In its earliest days as a world religion, then, Christianity had absorbed much from more than one historical source of 'Sun Worship.' In the Catholic Churches the symbolism has very largely remained.

It is present everywhere—in Church building and church furniture and in many of the ritual enactments of the Christian year ... Much of the rest of the early Christian Year runs side by side with the cycle of the sun. Thus after the Nativity at the winter solstice, Easter is on the Sunday following the first full moon after the Vernal Equinox, an appropriate date to celebrate the Resurrection ... From my childhood an extraordinary longing for the rays of the god penetrated deep into my soul." ~Emperor Julian, 361-363 AD, from: Man and The Sun, Jacquetta Hawkes.

Of the greatest importance to Christianity, whether they realize it or not, is that all things, "That breathe and move upon the earth," "And have a share in existence and a reasoning soul and intelligence, but above all others it is of importance to myself. For I am a follower of King Helios... From my childhood an extraordinary longing for the 'Rays of the God' penetrated deep into my soul; and from my earliest years my mind was so completely swayed by the light that illumines the Heavens that not only did I desire to gaze intently at the sun, but whenever I walked abroad in the night season, when the firmament was clear and cloudless, I abandoned all else without exception and gave myself up to the beauties of the Heavens; nor did I understand what anyone might say to me, nor heed what I was doing myself... The profoundly man-centered cosmology and theology of Christianity [derived from ancient Judaism and enhanced]. Literal belief in the idea that sun, moon, stars and all life on earth were created for man, and that the 'One God' should know self-sacrifice on his behalf, must have encouraged the past [present and future] aggressiveness and intolerance of Christians, I prefer the humble place accepted by most primitives, the Sumerian convictions that men were made as slaves for the Gods or the wayward, often jocular relationship of gods and men in classical Paganism.." ~Excursus: from: The Works of the Emperor Julian, English Translation by Wilmer Cave Wright, in Three Volumes, Harvard U., 1962 (1913), Vol. I [353].

AD 250-356- Anthony of Egypt, a black saint, founder of Monasticism; as a young man of twenty he was impressed by the Christian teaching. "Go, sell what you possess and give to the poor, and you will have treasure in Heaven." ~ Matthew 19:2.

In traditional pseudepigraphic fashion the author of The Gospel According to Mathew was based on a historic character, in this case on Mattai. Mattai was a disciple of Yeishu ben Pandeira, who lived in Hashmonean times, and whose stories have many similarities to that of Jesus. ~ The Crucifixion Facade by Vexen Crabtree, 2002.. see also Hayyim ben Yehoshua.

Born of wealthy parents in Koma, Egypt, he inherited their wealth, but his desire to imitate the poverty of Jesus led Saint Anthony to sell all he had and withdraw from civilization living a life devoted to prayer, fasting and piety. He became famous for his spiritual wisdom and battles with the Devil.

A man who lived a life of self-denial of the basics of existence and a recluse who has demonic visions is believed to have suffered from hallucinations which may have been from his native diet and lack of nutritional fiber due primarily to his sparse diet. Perhaps his consumption of stale bread infected by ergot [fungus] is the cause. He felt tormented by evil spirits that were jealous of man and the religious monks whom the spirits could not bear to see living saintly lives on earth [We now know that spiral fungi are the elements in LSD].

Was Anthony witness to the first documented, Biblical, reference to an alien being? Saint Anthony states, "Yet once more the enemy [the devil], seeing his zeal and wishing to check it, threw in his way a 'large disc of silver.' Anthony, understanding the deceit of the Evil One, stood and looked at the disc and confuted the demon in it, saying, "Whence a disc in the desert? This is not a trodden road, and there is no track of any faring this way. And it could not have fallen unnoticed, being of huge size. And even if it had been lost, the loser would certainly have found it had he turned back to look, because the place is a desert. This is a trick of the devil. You will not hinder my purpose by this, Satan; let this thing perish with thee." And as Anthony said this, it disappeared like smoke before the face of a fire." ~The Holy Bible.

What is the true purpose of religion? It is for the perpetuation and sustenance of a priestcraft, that they [priesthood] may live in perpetual squalor and sumptuous surroundings, "Revealed religion, which he drew in with his mother's milk, and has in innocent ignorance suffered in his system ever since, is simply a veneered Paganism, unrevealed and untrue; is a huge scheme of priestly imposture to exploit the credulous and to live in power and wealth at his expense. Luther hit the bull's-eye of the System, before he established another to pass the same old counterfeit: The Church exists mostly for wealth and self-aggrandizement; to quit paying money to the priests would kill the whole scheme in a couple of years...."

~1878: There Is No Such Thing As A Really Convincing Witness [To Jesus Christ] In Profane [Pagan] Literature, Forgery in Christianity, A Documented Record of the Foundations of the Christian Religion by Joseph Wheless [1858-1950].

In the Holy Bible the mythical dragon is altered from a monstrous beast into a giant whale after the naive followers stopped believing in dragons. Paintings from Val Camonica, Italy, around 10,000 B.C.E., supposedly show extraterrestrial visitors, and ancient astronaut theories center around the proposal that the Earth had, at some point in the distant past, been inspected by some intelligent extraterrestrial beings, and such physical contact is coupled to the origins of [or the physical development on] human cultures and their technologies.

AD 250-300-Philosopher's Stone: believed to be the element that could change base metals into silver or gold, sometimes referred to as the "Power of Projection." The Philosopher's Stone is considered a special "Medicine," much sought after by European alchemists, which some claimed to have knowledge of, in order to bring about a permanent metamorphosis of base metals into gold. The Philosopher's Stone went by several names: "Materia prima" and the "Magnum opus."

Many "Concoctions" for the Philosopher's Stone were conceived of throughout the Middle Ages. A small quantity of the Philosopher's Stone was all that was needed to transform large quantities of base metals into gold. The "Seed of gold," [early experimenters believed that gold could be grown as from a seed], was to be extracted to form the Stone, according to "Eirenaeus Philalethes."

The stone is known as the "Soul of the World" and the "Spirit of Truth," to be understood only with the aid of the "Holy Ghost." This helped to prevent the Church from declaring Alchemists as procurers of evil and demonic potions. It was known not only as a transmuting agent but also as a potential source of "Wisdom" and of "Healing," described and illustrated both cryptically and symbolically.

The Philosopher's Stone's power as a healer and a restorer of life is epitomized in legends of the "Elixir of Life," where a solution of the Stone in spirits of wine when consumed by the alchemist, would restore health and restore youth. It could not prevent death, but could impede it, capable of cleansing the body of natural impurities, prolonging life and restoring vigor.

The idea of a solution containing gold or the Philosopher's Stone prolonging life led to a number of yellow or gold-tinged liquids being "Foisted upon a credulous public" for the supposed medicinal value of the liquid. First mentioned by Zosimos the Theban, in the 3rd century.

Throughout generations, the Philosopher's Stone took on an immense range of powers; desired by kings and the rich not only for its ability to restore youth, but also for its secrets of health, longer life, and its "Spiritual significance."

Unlike many of the present day Christian ministry, early Christian writings did not embellish the lives or Salvation of the rich, Codex Vaticanus, "... Fiesmenon; idou oi ta malaka forounte V en toi V oikoi V tw n basilewn. 9 alla ti exhlqate; profhthn idein; nai, legwumin, kai perissoteron profhtou. outo V estin periou gegraptai, idou egw apostellw ton aggelon" ... "Behold, those who wear soft clothes are in kings' houses. But why did you go out? To see a prophet? Yes, I say to you, and much more than a prophet. This is He of whom it is written, Behold, I send my messenger ..." ~ Matthew 11:8b-10a

Passionate scribes, functionally literate copyists, scholarly revisions, and other fanatical translators contributed to the numerous adulterated translations of Scriptures, "The impurity of the text exhibited by these codices [Vaticanus and Sinaiticus] is not a question of opinion but fact... In the Gospels alone, Codex B [Vatican] leaves out words or whole clauses no less than 1,491 times. It bears traces of careless transcriptions on every page. Codex Sinaiticus abounds with errors of the eye and pen to an extent not indeed unparalleled, but happily rather unusual in documents of first-rate importance. On many occasions 10, 20, 30, 40 words are dropped through very carelessness. Letters, and words, even whole sentences, are frequently written twice over, or begun and immediately cancelled; while that gross blunder whereby a clause is omitted because it happens to end in the same words as the clause preceding, occurs no less than 115 times in the New Testament." ~Dr. John W. Burgon.

Jesus said... What did Jesus truly say... It appears that, "... The personage of Jesus Christ was made narrator for many religions." ~Dr. Tischendorf, in his 15,000 page critique of the Sinai Bible.

The notion of its sacred qualities extended until the 13th century when a religious program evolved that led the alchemist through a strict devotional ritual and purification. Only after completing this ceremony was he was thought worthy to perform his activities. Some perceived the Philosopher's Stone as being able to denote the force behind the evolution of life and the universal requisite power which had the ability to unite the intellect and souls into a human oneness, representing the purity and sanctity of the highest realm of chaste thought and altruistic existence.

The Philosopher's Stone, the White Stone, the Sword in the Stone, all representative of man's quest for a higher power and a better world, knowledge of creation, a symbol that represents the final outcome of man's inner transformation.

AD 250-Saint Denis, also known as Saint Dionysius, the Patron Saint of France and first Bishop of Paris. According to the account of Gregory of Tours in his 'Historia Francorum,' Denis set out from Rome about 250 to preach the Gospels in Gaul [now France] and, after settling on an island near the present city of Paris, made numerous converts. His arrest was ordered by the Roman governor of Gaul, and Denis and his two companions, a priest and a deacon, were tortured and beheaded.

The Roman Church is quick to contest imposters who challenge her authority, but reluctant to admit its own miscreants and myths. Saint Denys, on being beheaded and cast into the Seine, as the legend states, after floating awhile in the waters, to the amazement of the spectators, is said to have taken his head in his hand, and so marched away with it to the place of his burial.

In commemoration of so stupendous a miracle, a hymn is duly chanted for many a century in the Cathedral of Saint Denys, at Paris, containing the following verse, "Se cadaver mox erexit, Truncus truncum caput vexit, Quem ferentem hoc direxit Angelorum legio." ~The Ultimate Deception-The Two Babylons or The Papal Worship Proved To Be The Worship of Nimrod and His Wife, By The Late Rev. Alexander Hislop

At last, even the Vatican became so ashamed of such atrociousness and absurdities being celebrated in the name of religion, that in 1789, "The office of Saint Denys" is abolished. Saint Denys, or Denys, aka Denis, is usually represented on medallions and in paintings in this act. According to other accounts, the bodies of the three martyrs were thrown into the Seine River, from which they were recovered by a Christian woman named Catulla, who gave them a proper burial.

A chapel is later built over their tomb, and on the same site in 626 Dagobert I, king of the Franks, founded the Abbey of Saint Denis. In the 9th century the legend of Saint Denis is projected back into the earliest period of Christianity by the false identification of the martyr Denis with Dionysius the Areopagite. Pseudo-Dionysius the Areopagite is the author of The Divine Names, The Mystical Theology, The Celestial Hierarchy, The Ecclesiastical Hierarchy, and the non-extant Theological Outlines; quoted extensively in the Summa Theologica of Saint Thomas Aquinas. This identification led to a new version of the saint's legend, according to which he was sent on his mission by Pope Clement I. The feast day of Saint Denis is October 9 in the Roman Catholic church, and October 3 in the Eastern church. ~From the Microsoft Encarta Encyclopedia, 1998.

The Catholic Church will expand its definition of sodomy to include everything but the "Missionary position," yet it still allows the practice of prostitution during this era to thrive. It was believed that men needed an outlet to release their sexual tension or they would commit acts of adultery, rape or homosexuality. The Catholic Church and Saint Thomas Aquinas saw prostitution as a "Necessary evil."

The Apostolic Constitutions (7.2) forbade all non-procreative genital acts, including anal sex and oral intercourse. The sensual art displayed by prostitutes consisted in making full use of sexual techniques, which would increase their clients' pleasure. Therefore Lactantius will condemn sodomy, oral intercourse and prostitution. Divin. Inst. 5.9.17. The definition of sodomy is expanded again in the 14th century by the Catholic Church to include masturbation, oral sex, and any "Sex between the legs and from behind" by same-sex male couples. Saint Thomas Aquinas expands the definition of sodomy even further to include lesbian sex and any sexual act where the woman was not in the bottom submissive position. ~Sodomy, Sex And The Catholic Church, March 29th, 2005, By VL Carey.

The impostors Adelbert and Clement, who opposed the authority of the Catholic Church, and Saint Boniface in Germany about the year 744, claimed to have been honored with supernatural favors from birth. Adelbert drew the people away from the churches, and gave the masses pieces of his nails and hair as relics, and told them that it was unnecessary for them to confess their sins to him because he had already read their hearts. Pope Clement, a Scotsman, rejected the Canons of the Church regarding marriage vows and other disciplinary issues and maintained that Jesus, in his descent into Hell, had set free all the souls confined there, even the lost and the un-baptized ones.

The question of these heretical Bishops was referred to Rome and discussed by Pope Zacharias in a Council held in 745, at which time there was read a miraculous letter, allegedly from Jesus, which Adelbert claimed had fallen from Heaven and had been picked up by the Archangel Michael.

The climax was the Council pronounced sentence of 'Deposition,' and 'Excommunication' against the two accused. ~Hefele, from the German Concilien Geschichte, §§ 363-367; Hauck, and Kirchengeschichte Deutschlands, I, 554 seq., as well as noted in the Catholic Encyclopedia.

AD 257-258-Pope Sixtus II, Sixtus Philosophus, like Origen, believed that sex is a corrupting force, and openly advocated mutilation of the genitals for the repression of sexual desires. As a result of this mania, an epidemic broke out among the Christian Fathers and each attempted to outdo the other in religiously inspired self-castration. At this time while Origen was conducting catechetical instruction at Alexandria, a deed was done by him, which evidenced an immature and youthful mind, but at the same time gave the highest proof of faith and continence. For he took the words, "There are eunuchs who have made themselves eunuchs for the Kingdom of Heaven's sake, in too literal ad extreme a sense. And in order to fulfill the Savior's Word, and at the same time to take away from the unbelievers all opportunity for scandal, for, although young, he met for the study of Divine things with women as well as men, he carried out in action the word of the Savior. He thought that this would not be known by many of his acquaintances. But it was impossible for him, though desiring to do so, to keep such an action secret. When Demetrius, who presided over that parish, at last learned of this, he admired greatly the daring nature of the act, and as he perceived his zeal and the genuineness of his faith, he immediately exhorted him to courage, and urged him the more to continue his work of catechetical instruction." ~Prolegomena: The Life and Writings of Eusebius of Caesarea: Testimonies of the Ancients Against Eusebius.

Sex will later be condoned for procreation and not recreation, and only because it is necessary to perpetuate the race. "God gave us eyes, not to see and desire pleasure, but to see acts to be performed for the needs of life; so too, the genital [generating] part of the body, as the name itself teaches, has been received by us for no other purpose than the generation of offspring." ~Lactantius, in The Instructor of Children, 6:23:18.

"They [certain Egyptian heretics] exercise genital acts, yet prevent the conceiving of children. Not in order to produce offspring, but to satisfy lust, are they eager for corruption." ~Epiphanius of Salamis, Medicine Chest Against Heresies 26:5:2, 375 C.E.

It should be noted that all the early Christian Fathers, for the first two centuries plus, were ex-Pagans, with the alleged exception of "Pope" Clement, were Greeks, whose works were of strewn parts of the Roman Empire, and each wrote, taught, and spoke in Greek, with the very questionable exception of Clement. Each also had nothing to do with "The Church, which sojourns at Rome." Each was a Bishop with his own local, and independent, Church; and never once does anyone of them, except perhaps Clement of Rome, in a forged Epistle, speak of or mention the Church of Rome, or more than scarcely mentions Saint Peter, and only then as one of the Apostles.

No one mentions or quotes a single book from the New Testament, though they are quite profuse in their quoting from the Old Testament books, Canonical and Apocryphal, the Pagan gods, and the Sibylline Oracles, as the inspired testimonies of Jesus Christ. ~From Forgery in Christianity by Joseph Wheless, 1930, presented by the Bank of Wisdom.

Cannot get the facts straight. Pope Clement is alleged to be the first, second, third, or sometimes, even the fourth, Bishop, or Pope, of Rome. ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 4, 13.

From 180-250 there will reign nineteen emperors of which only one will die of natural causes. Emperor Valerian is at first well disposed towards the atheists [early Christians], and Saint Denis of Alexandria would say that his palace was almost a church. "He was kind and well-disposed to the people of God, and none of his predecessors, not even the emperors who were openly known to be Christians, showed them more sympathy and made them more welcome than did Valerian at the beginning of his reign.”

But, four years later, with the influence of his chief adviser, Macrinus, a change of posture will bring the emperor to a renewal of the methods of the previous Emperor Decius. The cause of the change, apparently, is the increasingly desperate situation of the Empire, now under attack on all its frontiers at once, the Rhine, the Danube, the Sahara, Mesopotamia and Armenia, while pirates are ravaging the coasts of Britain and of Asia Minor.

Macrinus, a devotee of the old cults, resolutely superstitious, and a zealously responsible official, is thought to have interpreted the disasters as signs that the wrath of the gods provoked by the toleration of the empire's arch-enemy, the religion of Christ. The first edict, August, 257, is directed against the persons of the Christianized clergy and against the reunions of the faithful as the Bishops in each town, and his priests, are summoned to sacrifice to the Pagan Gods of the Roman State, and those who refused are exiled, and the cemeteries and other places of worship are seized by the State, “For there are, and there were men who, being present and being seen, though they only breathed and spoke, were able to scatter the counsels of the sinful demons. And he induced him to practice initiations and abominable sorceries and to offer unacceptable sacrifices; to slay innumerable children and to sacrifice the offspring of unhappy fathers; to divide the bowels of new-born babes and to mutilate and cut to pieces the creatures of God, as if by such practices they could attain happiness.” ~Prolegomena: The Life and Writings of Eusebius of Caesarea: Testimonies of the Ancients Against Eusebius.

Christians who persisted in meeting for religious purposes are to be punished with death. A year later a second edict is issued and the penalties are increased and the proscription is given a much wider field. No longer will exile be instituted, death will now be the penalty for the clergy who refuse to sacrifice to the Roman pagan gods; and reckoning is to be carried out immediately upon their refusal. The laity also are brought within the terror as nobles who admit they are Christians are to lose their rank, their properties and their lives, while those specially attached to the Emperor's personal service, the Caesariani, are to suffer confiscation of goods and to be reduced to serfdom.

The new legislation is rigorously applied, and at Rome the newly-elected Pope, Sixtus II, is arrested, tried and beheaded within a few days, his more famous deacon Laurence. At Carthage Saint Cyprian, exiled under the first edict, is now recalled and put to death under the second edict. The nocturnal devotions of Cyprian, at Carthage, are known to be notorious for its carnival like atmosphere: drinking, dancing, lewd songs, and all in the presence of the body of the martyr.

AD 258-Early forgeries abound as Cyprian, Bishop of Carthage, accuses his Christian leaders of “Faking his letters,” and other forgeries within the Roman Church.

Another alleged fake is the letter of Jesus to King Abgar, “Blessed are you who believed in me, not having seen me... Now concerning what you wrote to me, I must first complete here all for which I was sent, and after thus completing it be taken up to Him who sent me, and when I have been taken up I will send one of my Disciples to heal your suffering and give life to you and those with you.” ~Eusebius, Letter from Jesus to King Abgar.

Eusebius often dwells, with greater fullness, more upon the virtues than upon the vices of the early Church, more upon its glory, than upon its shame, and he tells us openly that it is his intention so to do, but he never embarks upon concealing the numerous sins of the Christians, which, in his writings contain a strong denunciation of their corruptness, and wickedness uttered in no faint terms. ~Eusebius, Hist. Eccl., Book VIII, 2.

Eusebius propagated the profanation that Jesus Christ was a “Created” God, which is later declared false doctrine, but is embraced to by the Jehovah's Witnesses, who obtained much of their teachings from the Alexandrian Text's rendition of John 1:1-5 and John 3:13, which is considered heresy by many Christian sects, a version, which Origen is to blame when he reworked the Universal Text to read in agreement with his personal unorthodoxy!

Once considered as a pure copy, the Universal Text was carried down into Egypt, where it was recopied, but during the progression of this recopying, it was revised by scribes and copyists who did not revere it as truly the Word of their God.

AD 260-272-Paul of Samosata, Bishop of Antioch, believes that Jesus was only a man in whom the Wisdom of God dwelt as a temple, a theology that is to be later condemned. Given forth about the year 260, Saint Paul's teaching are condemned by a Council at Antioch in 264.

The Catholic Church is against independent thinkers and declares all who think contrary to its espoused policies as heretics. The Church has already reneared their decision on free thinking; penalties shall be swift and brutal.

AD260-340-The great Church of Rome, through its Vicar of Christ will attempt to erase the past, thereby creating themselves as the first and the last. From the very beginning, a multiple of factions challenge the authority of the Church, and Pope Dionysius, 260-268, now accuses the early Christian leaders of "Faking his own letters just as they had changed the Gospels."

"We know from Eusebius, that it was the policy of the triumphant Church, after the pact with Emperor Constantine, to destroy all the writings of the heretics, and that this policy was continuous is shown by the advice given by Saint Augustine to burn, without regard for their volume or beauty, all the manuscripts of the Manicheans." ~Fore runners and Rivals of Christianity, From 330 B.C. to 330 A.D., Francis Legge.

"The plain fact is that Christian destruction of the ancient records and literature, sometimes dramatic as when Bishops led mobs to burn libraries as at Alexandria [Egypt], in the main not dramatic but routine clerical activity of destruction going on for centuries, did succeed in preventing humanity from ever successfully reconstructing what the others, 'Rivals of Christianity,' were like." ~See: The Dark Side of Christian History, vol. 5, 162.

AD274- "It was not really till the 3rd century A.D. that the old political religion began wearing somewhat thin as Rome suffered grievous defeats at the hands of Persia, where the religion of Zoroaster flourished, which spoke of the battle of light versus darkness, with the Sun portrayed as one of their great generals. On the eastern borders of the Roman empire itself in Syria, the Sun was also worshipped. Perhaps the Sun could bring a new vitality and power to Rome. So in 274 AD, the soldier-emperor Aurelian established the Sun as the great god of Rome. He enacted many laws, laws of considerable value at that. He reorganized the priesthoods, founded the Temple of the Sun and gave it a strong College of Priests; in addition he established a fund for repairs and for staff salaries..."

The literary sources reduce this fact to trivia, however, the coins of the era show that Aurelian was not just establishing an additional god, but a new Divine Overlord. The sun, the lord of the Roman Empire. ~H. Mattingly and E.A. Sydenham The Roman Imperial Coinage VI Aurelian 319-22.

Emperor Aurelian adopts the Sun as the Supreme God of the Roman Empire. Later, the pagan Emperor Constantine is to project some of the same basic tenets of this "Supreme Sun God" into the Christian faith when the winter solstice is celebrated on the 25th of December celebrating the "Invincible Sun."

Many early Christians wanted the birth of Jesus to coincide with the birthday of the "Unconquered Sun," known as "Natalis Solis Invicti." The festival celebrates the sun appearing to climb higher in the sky. December 17th was the celebration of Saturnalia, which was a time for festivities and exchange of gifts [later to become Sun-day].

December 25th was reserved for Mithra, in honor of the "Sun of Righteousness."] Many people mistake the symbol of the Sun God for that of Christianity, The symbol of the Sun God being a cross with the sun superimposed on it].

The earliest rapprochement to the births of Christ and the Sun God is recorded in Cyprian.

"O, how wonderfully acted Providence that on that day on which the Sun was born... Christ should be born." ~DePasch. Comp. xix.

In the 4th century Saint Chrysostom says, "But our Lord too is born in the month of December (25). ... But they call it the 'Birthday of the Unconquered.' Who is so unconquered as our Lord? Or, if they say that it is the Birthday of the Sun, He is the Sun of Justice." ~Saint Chrysostom, De Solst. et AEquin., II, p. 118.

John Chrysostom, a 5th century theologian and erstwhile Bishop of Constantinople, is another deceiver of truth, "Do you see the advantage of deceit? ... 'For great is the value of deceit, provided it be not introduced with a mischievous intention. In fact action of this kind ought not to be called deceit, but rather a kind of good management, cleverness and skill, capable of finding out ways where resources fail, and making up for the defects of the mind... And often it is necessary to deceive, and to do the greatest benefits by means of this device, whereas he who has gone by a straight course has done great mischief to the person whom he has not deceived.” ~Chrysostom, Treatise On The Priesthood, Book 1.

In 397, Saint John “The Golden-Mouthed” Chrysostom restructured the writings of Apollonius of Tyana, a 1st century wandering sage, and made them part of Constantine’s version of the Gospels, the New Testimonies. ~Secrets of the Christian Fathers, op. cit.

“Gospel stories are so close to similar stories of the miracles wrought by Apollonius of Tyana, Pythagoras, Asclepius, Asclepiades the Physician, and others that we have to wonder whether in any or all such cases free-floating stories have been attached to all these heroic names at one time or another, much as the names of characters in jokes change in oral transmission.” ~Robert Price, Deconstructing Jesus, p. 258-9.

The Pagan celebration of the Sun will be recognized by Christians throughout the world as Sunday, “... Pope Leo I bitterly reproves such ‘Solar Survivals’ and the Christians on the very door-step of the Apostles’ Basilica turn to adore the rising Sun. But even should a deliberate and legitimate ‘Baptism of a Pagan feast be seen here, no more than the transference of the date need be supposed. The abundance of midwinter festivals may have helped the choice of the December date, the same instinct, which set ‘Natalis Invictis’ at the winter solstice will have sufficed, apart from deliberate adaptation or curious calculation, to set the Christians feast there too.” ~Catholic Encyclopedia, Vol. III, pp. 724-727.

So, we have the over-up extending into the 21st century. “With regard to the circumstances connected with the introduction of the festival [Christmas] at Antioch, we are fully informed by Saint Chrysostom in a sermon he preached there on the 20th December in 386 AD. The festival had been known in Antioch for about ten years already, and a certain party there among the faithful were in the habit of celebrating it publicly, but its official introduction was first effected by Bishop Flavian, who was seconded in this by Saint John Chrysostom, recently ordained priest in the February of the same year.... Many Christians observed the Jewish festivals as well as their own. On this account Chrysostom departed from his first subject and directed his first four sermons against the Jews.” ~see Jews and Christians in Antioch, Meeks, and Wilken, c1978.

“Then this eloquence was directed to the task of winning over the faithful of Antioch to the observance of Christmas.” ~From: Heortology, A History of the Christian Festivals From Their Origin to the Present Day, Dr. K.A. Heinrich Kellner, 131-132.

AD 284-305-Diocletian becomes Emperor of Rome and institutes reforms that consolidate and establish uniformity in the administration of the Empire, bringing the army under effectual control of the government, restoring the financial situation by stabilizing the Roman currency and, to confirm the whole exertion, elevate the position of the Emperor to a Divinity [Diocletian claims to be descendent of the Roman God Jupiter].

Diocletian orders the destruction of all Egyptian secret alchemical writings, concerned that alchemists' gold could fund a rebellion.

AD 287-Diocletian orders two hundred and eighty-seven declared heretics [Manichaecans] burned at the stake. Throughout history, the Catholic Church may object to this harsh treatment of heretics, but does little or nothing to stop it [compare their procedures or lack of same to the holocaust during World War II when the Church attempts to deny they had knowledge of tortures and genocide in Europe, and the lawsuits against the Vatican Bank]. It is ironic that the Church is against killing [Commandment number six] yet this does not deter them from killing. Even Moses is guilty of killing. ~Exodus, Chapter 2, verse 12-15.

As late as the 16th century, children were baptized by full immersion; but the right arms of the males were carefully held above water in order that, not having been dipped in the sacred stream, they might strike a more deadly blow.

The fanciful origin and fabrication of old Scriptural texts attributed to Moses, are brought to light in 2 Chronicles 34: 14, which expounds upon the falsifications with, “Hilkiah, the priest, found the book of the law of the Lord given by Moses. And Hilkiah, the priest, said to Shaphan, the scribe, I have found the book of the law in the house of the Lord, and Hilkiah delivered the book to Shaphan. And Shaphan, the scribe, told the king, [Josiah,] saying, Hilkiah, the priest, hath given me a book.”

And this pretended finding was a thousand years after the time that Moses is said to have lived. Before this pretended finding, there was no such thing practiced or known in the world as that which is now called the Law of Moses. There being every apparent evidence that the books called the books of Moses are forgeries contrived between a priest and a branch of the law.

A French pamphlet states, “And when, on the contrary, we have the strongest reasons for regarding such assertions as one of the means of error and oppression invented by priests, kings, and attorneys...” since the most scandalous hypocrisy has made of Religion a profession and the basest trade... To take from us not our vices but our money." ~Conway, Lettre de Thomas Paine sur les Cultes, A Paris, Imprimerie-Librairie du Cercle-Social, rue du Theatre-Francaise No. 4. 1797.

The Church admits falsehoods, lies, and deception, yet continues to preach them as the truth. "The principal historians of the patristic period cannot always be completely trusted." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 6, pg. 14.

And who were these great Catholic historians? They were none other than the Saints and early Christian Fathers themselves. "The greater Saint, the greater Liar." ~Diegesis.

AD288-337-Emperor Constantine: The glorification of Constantine "The Great" has been popularized by Christian writers because he helped establish Christianity in the Empire, but is not substantiated by modern historians. Constantine was most likely the illegitimate son of Emperor Constantius of which Saint Ambrose says in an important sermon, De Obitu Theodosii, §42, that his mother was "A tavern-girl." His division of the Empire and building of Constantinople further weakened it, and it is now generally agreed that he was compelled to leave Rome because in a fit of jealousy he had ordered the murder of his wife, his son, and a boy-nephew as documented by Saint Jerome. ~Chronicle, AD 326.

Saint Jerome has said, that no one would have believed the Virgin-birth of Jesus or that his mother was not an adulteress, "Until now, that the whole world has embraced the faith," and would therefore believe anything, except the truth!

All who did not believe such things, when related by the ex-Pagan Christians, were heretics instigated by the devil; for "The Devil, seeing the temples of the Gods deserted, and the human race running to the name of the living Mediator, has moved the heretics under the Christian name to resist the Christian Doctrine."

~Forgery in Christianity by Joseph Wheliss, 1930, from the Bank of Wisdom.

"This name [Christian] occurs but three times in the New Testament, and is never used by Christians of themselves, only as spoken by or coming from those without the Church. The general names by which the early Christians called themselves were 'Brethren,' 'Disciples,' 'Believers,' and 'Saints.' The presumption is that the name 'Christian' was originated by the Heathen." ~Abbott and Conant, Dic. of Relig. Knowledge, art. Christian.

It is impossible to determine in what sense he [Emperor Constantine] was really a Christian for throughout his life he bore pagan offices and titles, and he was baptized only in his last days; and his death was followed by an appalling massacre of relatives in his palace in the interest of his sons, who proved to be a very degenerate brood.-from Gibbon, Ch. XXIII.

His legislation was of very mixed value, and his patronage of Christianity and rewards for baptism divided and weakened the Empire and led to a still more debilitating and truculent persecution. Against the Emperor Constantine, the Church hurled no anathemas for his dastardly acts. She has accepted the story of his vision in the clouds, and his Holy memory has been guarded by priest and Pope. His later years were passed in an effeminate luxury, which provoked the derision of the Romans. ~The chapter on him in the Cambridge Mediaeval History: Vol. I. is by an ecclesiastical writer, and uncritical, but the article in the Encyclopaedia Britannica is sound and has escaped the Catholic censors of the last edition. See also J. B. Firth's Constantine the Great, 1905, a critical biography is still to be written.-from the works of J. McCabe, Rationalists Encyclopaedia.

The Ecclesiastical hierarchy was changing continuously due to the rampant corruption of Roman government and the hedonistic desires of the Pagan populace. "This change, in the form of Ecclesiastical government, was soon followed by a train of vices, which dishonored the character and authority of those to whom the administration of the Church was committed. For, though several yet continued to exhibit to the world illustrious examples of primitive piety and Christian virtue, yet many were sunk in luxury and voluptuousness, puffed up with vanity, arrogance, and ambition, possessed with a spirit of contention and discord, and addicted to many other vices that cast an undeserved reproach upon the Holy religion, of which they were unworthy professors and ministers." ~An Ecclesiastical History, Vol. I, Cent. III, pp. 258, 259.

The non-Christian [Pagan] Emperor, in 325 C.E., forces his Pagan will upon the Christian Aristocracy to impose peace in his domain. The religious emblem of the Emperor is easily and readily accepted as that of Christ, for it is the Sun God, a cross with rays radiating from the crossroads, resembling the icon of the Christians, and who dares defy the Emperor and the accepted Church [faith] of the Emperor?

Jesus never claimed to be God, and it will take four councils, at Nicaea, to resolve the matter of Jesus and God, "Jesus was closer to God than any other human being, but he was born a man, and had no prior existence. On the other hand, God has been in existence forever." ~Arius, 250-336 C.E.

Jesus is worshiped as the "Prince of Peace," yet, the early Church Fathers will abuse their self-endowed powers by invoking an ostensible "Divine Right" to enforce the powers of God on earth, by creating an elaborate hierarchy, which will impose punishments upon mankind for not abiding by Church rules, "Wherefore begin now with better understanding to resist yourselves in those things, which you do not rightly desire; if so be that you can in any way repair and restore in yourselves that purity of religion and innocence of life, which at first were bestowed upon man by God, that thereby also the hope of immortal blessings may be restored to you. And give thanks to the bountiful Father of all, by Him whom He has constituted King of Peace, and the treasury of unspeakable honors, that even at the present time your sins may be washed away with the water of the fountain, or river, or even sea: the threefold name of blessedness being called over you, that by it not only evil spirits may be driven out, if any dwell in you, but also that, when you have forsaken your sins, and have with entire faith and entire purity of mind believed in God, you may drive out wicked spirits and Demons from others also, and may be able to set others free from sufferings and sicknesses. For the Demons themselves know and acknowledge those who have given themselves up to God, and sometimes they are driven out by the mere presence of such, as you saw a little while ago, how, when we had only addressed to you the word of salutation, straightway the Demons, on account of their respect for our religion, began to cry out, and could not bear our presence even for a little." ~The Recognitions of Clement, About the Recognitions and Homilies. 4.32, Invitation.

Now, there will be internal struggles as to who represents the Lord Jesus, and which is his True and Apostolic Church, a debate which continues today, "With regard to the second main point of the controversy, the idea of the Church, Novatian maintained that, purity and Holiness being one of the essential marks of a true Church, every Church which, neglecting the right use of discipline, tolerates in its bosom, or readmits to its Communion, such persons as, by gross sins, have broken their Baptismal vow, ceases by that very act to be a true Christian Church, and forfeits all the rights and privileges of a true Church. On this ground the Novatianists, as they held themselves to be alone the pure immaculate Church, called themselves... the Pure." ~Augustus Neander, General History of the Christian Religion and Church, Vol. I, p. 343. London: Henry G. Bohn, 1853.

Both Pagans and early Christians are Sun worshipers, "Through the 310's the Sun continues to appear on the coins, over the whole Empire, and in all the mints. In 317 C.E., Licinius put on his coin Jupiter the Protector, Constantine put the 'Unconquered Sun'.... Even later, when the Sun disappears from the coinage, and the characteristic epithet 'INVICTVS,' unconquerable, is replaced by 'VICTOR,' victorious, the residual devotion [to the Sun] is clear, and in 321 C.E., the proclamation of Sunday as a day of rest was made precisely because it was Sun-day. Even in the new Christian capital of Constantinople the emperor's statue stood as Apollo—Helios with a radiate crown, formed, as he believed, of nails of the true Cross; the inscription ran, 'To Constantine who shines like the Sun.' Constantine's God was a fusion of the 'Unconquered Sun' and 'Christ the Victorious,' but he remained a god of power, not of love... And the Christians retained the image they had begun to hold, of Christ as sun of truth, Sun of resurrection and Sun of Salvation." ~From: The Religions of the Roman Empire, John Ferguson, Aspects of Greek and Roman Life, General Editor: H.H. Scullard, Cornell, 1970.

In Saint Peter's, there is a portrait of Christ sweeping across the Heavens in the Sun-God's chariot. "Christ as the Sun-God," "The drives his two horse chariot." Just prior to his death, in 337 C.E., Emperor Constantine abolished the crucifixion as veneration of Jesus.

Christians believe that Jesus, also a man of exceptional ability, was born circa the year 1 B.C.E., offered himself as the Son of Jahwe, and was deified upon his death. A Christian cannot enter Heaven through a belief in Jahwe, only through Jesus, "I am the way, the truth, and the life: no man cometh unto the Father, but by me." ~Saint John 14:6.

When Jesus came to be baptized by his cousin John, The New Testament and other religious manuscripts tell us that John did not recognize Jesus; obviously, if Jesus and John lived together at Qumran, they would have recognized each other. ~Introduction To The Ancient Essenes And The Modern Essene Church of Christ by Rev. Abba Nazariah, D.D.

AD 292-373-Saint Athanasius, at the Council of Nicaea in 325, opposes Arius, the Alexandrian priest who advanced the doctrine known as Arianism. "We certainly know of a greater number of interpolations and corruptions brought into the Scriptures... by the Athanasians, and relating to the Doctrine of the Trinity, than in any other case whatsoever. While we have not, that I know of, any such interpolation or corruption, made in anyone of them by either the Eusebians or Arians." ~Whiston, Second Letter to the Bishop of London, 1719, p.15.

His life is closely connected with the progress of the Arian debate, and he is the most formidable antagonist encountered by the declared heresy of Arianism. The earliest exact reference to the complete New Testament, as it is known today, is in the year 367 CE, in an Easter Letter by Athanasius.

Athanasius formulates the "Homousian Doctrine," according to which the "Son of God" is of the same substance as the Father; Arius, on the other hand, maintains that the Son was of a different substance than that of the Father and is merely a man, much more perfect than that of any other man, who is used by God in subsequent works of creation.

Saint Athanasius, postures himself politically to lend credence to the 'Doctrine of the Trinity' presented before Emperor Constantine in AD 325. Arius is well liked by the Emperor and has many friends in his court.

Not all the Christian leaders can agree as to what is inspired and what is not, much less what should be Church Canon, "Although some individuals in the early church had a high regard for the Apocrypha, there were many who vehemently opposed it. For example Athanasius, Cyril of Jerusalem, Origen, and the great Roman Catholic biblical scholar and translator of the Latin Vulgate, Saint Jerome, all opposed the Apocrypha." ~Norman Geisler and Ralph E. MacKenzie, Baker Books, Grand Rapids, Michigan, Roman Catholics and Evangelicals: Agreements and Differences, 1995, p. 162.

Noted for the Athanasian Creed [which he did not write but which is attributed to several writers, and first mentioned by Caesarius of Arles] and adopted by the Council of Chalcedon in AD 451. Of the countless Sects of Christians, one alone asserts itself to be the 'True Faith,' all the challengers being declared false and beyond the hope of heaven, "Whoever will be saved, it is necessary above all else that he hold to the Catholic Faith," and so it is written in the venerable, but forged, Athanasian Creed. ~Catholic Encyclopedia Vol.2, 33, 34.

Romance is in the air, and the vast populace is wanting for quixotic and fantasy novels of their God, and the Church will not disappoint them, "The genuine Gospels are silent about long stretches of the life of our Lord, the Blessed Virgin, and Saint Joseph. This reserve of the Evangelists did not satisfy the pardonable curiosity of many Christians eager for details. Enterprising spirits responded to this natural craving by pretended Gospels full of romantic fables, and fantastic and striking details; their fabrications were eagerly read and accepted as true by common folk who were devoid of any critical faculty and who were predisposed to believe what so luxuriously fed their pious curiosity. Both Catholics and Gnostics were concerned in writing these fictions. The former had no motive other than that of a Pious Fraud." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. i, p. 606.

"The Gospel story of Jesus is itself apparently mythic from first to last. In the Gospels the degree of historicization is actually quite minimal, mainly consisting of the addition of the layer derived from contemporary Messiahs and prophets, as outlined above. One does not need to repair to the epistles to find a mythic Jesus. The Gospel story itself is already pure legend. What can we say of a supposed historical figure whose life story conforms virtually in every detail to the Mythic Hero Archetype, with nothing, no 'Secular' or mundane information, left over?" ~Robert Price, Deconstructing Jesus, p. 260.

"A vast and ever-increasing crowd of converts from Paganism, who had become such from worldly considerations, and still hankered after wonders like those in which their forefathers had from time immemorial believed, lent a ready ear to assertions which, to more hesitating or better-instructed minds, would have seemed to carry imposture on their very face." ~Draper, The Intellectual Development of Europe, vol. i, 309.

Thus frankly confessed, one clerical writer describes the general character of these pious Christian frauds, "The Christian Apocryphal writings in general imitate the books of the New Testament, and therefore, with a few exceptions, fall under the description of Gospels, Acts, Epistles, and Apocalypses." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. i, 606.

Individual Gospels were audaciously forged in the names of each of the Twelve Apostles of Jesus, severally, and a joint fabrication under the name of "The Gospel of the Twelve," was placed into the mouths of the twelve Apostles, using the first person to give the ear-marks of authenticity, and authority, to their mischievously forged utterances, and separately, "Almost every one of the Apostles had a Gospel fathered upon him by one early sect or another." ~Encyclopedia Britannica, vol. i, p. 259.

This authority also lists the famous forgeries of the Protevangetium Jacobi, or Infancy Gospel of James, the Arabic Gospel of the Infancy, that of Gamaliel, the Gospel According to the Hebrews, also According to the Egyptians; of the Nazarenes; Gospels of St. Peter, of St. Philip, of St. Thomas, of St. Bartholomew, of St. Andrew, of Barnabas, of Thaddeus, even notable forged Gospels of Judas Iscariot, and of Mother Eve; also the Gospel by Jesus Christ.

Aius and two of his followers refuse to endorse the Creed on May 20th AD 325. Saint Athanasius is strongly anti-Arianism and writes many works expounding upon the Trinity and the Incarnation. He is exiled five times during his lifetime, yet he is considered one of the Doctors of the Church. The Church forced the Trinity upon the masses in complete disregard of:

- † “The Lord, YHWH, is God, and there is none else beside Him.” ~ Deuteronomy 4:35.
- † “See now that I, even I am He, and there is no God with me. I kill and make alive, I wound and I heal, neither is there any that can deliver out of my hand.” ~ Deuteronomy 32:39.
- † “O Lord, there is none like thee, neither is there any God beside thee.” ~ I Chronicles 17:20.
- † “Thou, even Thou, art Lord alone.” ~ Nehemiah 9:6.
- † “Thou are God alone.” ~ Psalm 86:10.
- † “I am the Lord and there is none else, there is no God beside me that they may know from the rising of the sun and from the west that there is no God beside Me. I am the Lord, and there is none else.” ~ Isaiah 45:5-6.

All conversation and fellowship with the Jews is forbidden to the clergy by the anti-Semitic Council of Nicaea.

AD 296-Emperor Diocletian decreed against the Manichaeans, “We order that their organizers and leaders be subject to the final penalties and condemned to the fire with their abominable Scriptures, which resulted in numerous martyrs in Egypt and North Africa.” The fiction of “Christian Persecutions” by Diocletian [and numerous other Christian authors] were based upon historical truth being slightly bent to accommodate Christian wishful thinking.

“It is also acknowledged that ignorance and delusion in regard to the Gods is irreligiousness and impurity, and that the superior knowledge in respect to them is Holy and helpful: the former being the darkness of ignorance in regard to the things revered and beautiful, and the latter the light of knowledge. The former condition will cause human beings to be beset with every form of evil through ignorance and recklessness, but the latter is the source of everything beneficial.” ~Iamblichus, The Egyptian Mysteries, p. 13.

“At the same time, as Irenaeus tells us, the Gnostics, of whom Marcion was one, charged the Apostles with hypocrisy, because they 'Framed their doctrine according to the capacity of their hearers, fabling blind things for the blind according to their blindness; for the dull according to their dulness; for those in error according to their errors.’” ~Massey, brochure on Paul the Gnostic Opponent of Peter.

AD 300-Egyptian alchemists turned to mystical means, Zosimos, whose recipes sometimes came to him in dreams wrote, “The soul of copper must be purified until it receives the sheen of gold and turns into the royal sunmetal.”

Canons are established by the Roman Catholic Church. ~based on Acts 15:1.

Christianity replaces Druidism in Britain. The similarities that facilitate the bringing about of conversion are immortality of the soul, belief in reincarnation, and a belief in miracles. Again, rebirth, the soul, and miracles are not an invention of Christianity, but merely a continuation of existing beliefs from adapted from various cultures.

Has the creation of Christianity made this a better world? “The Ages of Faith, which are praised by our neo-scholastics, were the time when the clergy had things all their own way. Daily life was full of miracles wrought by saints and wizardry perpetrated by devils and necromancers. Many thousands of witches were burned at the stake. Men's sins were punished by pestilence and famine, by earthquake, flood, and fire. And yet, strange to say, they were even more sinful than they are now-a-days.” ~Bertrand Russell, A Debate on the Existence of God, 1948, in Bertrand Russell on God and Religion, Buffalo, NY: Prometheus, 1986, p. 208.

The concept of “Karma,” “Astrology,” “Numerology,” and “Reincarnation” are removed from the Christian Bible via the Council of Trent in 300 C.E., and the Council of Constantinople in AD 553, aided by Emperor Justinian and his Empress Theodora with the approval of Pope Vigilius. “It is reckoned that during the reign of Justinian, Africa lost five millions of inhabitants; thus Arianism was extinguished in that region, not by any enforcement of conformity, but by the extermination of the race, which had introduced and professed it." ~History of the Christian Church, J.C. Robertson, Vol. 1, p. 521.

The 'Modus Operandi' of the Holy Council in eventually canonizing Saint Jerome's corrupted Vulgate Version, and its dishonest motive for doing so, are thus exposed by the keen pen of a scrupulous author, "When the Council of Trent resolved to pronounce sentence on the Canon of Scripture, the opinion, which prevented, after some debate, was to declare the Latin Vulgate authentic and 'Almost' infallible, and this sentence, which was guarded by formidable Anathemas, secured all the Books of the Old and New Testament, which composed that ancient version... When the merit of that version was discussed, the majority of the theologians urged, with confidence and success, that it was absolutely necessary to receive the Vulgate as authentic and Inspired, unless they wished to abandon the victory to the Lutherans, and the honors of the Church to the Grammarians." ~Gibbon, Rise And Fall, A Vindication, v, 2; Istoria del consiglio Tridentino, L. ii, p. 147.

The Empress Theodora indulged in a variety of extraordinary pleasures, including masturbation while watching men being castrated and tortured for homosexuality. Homophobia may be primarily a masculine hatred, but not entirely. It is not even entirely a heterosexual hatred, for some of Empress Theodora's relationships were lesbian as well as incestuous.

Astrological predictions in Genesis: According to some authors, the story of Abram's relationship with God in Genesis also contains astrological references.

At one point [Genesis, Chapter 15] Abram even questions God's pledge that he will have children, since he is already of difficult age: "How do later Rabbis handle this problem? They handle it astrologically. Let me quote from the Midrash Rabbah to Genesis: 'And Abram said: 'Behold, to me thou hast given no seed ...'" ~Genesis 15:3.

Rabbi Samuel ben Isaac comments that Abram said: "My planetary fate oppresses me and declares 'Abram cannot beget a child.' Said the Holy One, Blessed Be He to him, 'Let it be even as thy words; Abram and Sarai cannot beget, but Abraham and Sarah can beget.'" ~Jewish Tradition, History and Culture by Janice Barsky, October 14, 2000.

Theodora had a notorious history and was known to have frequented banquets assiduously, offering herself to whomever could afford her services, including servants. She followed her lover to Libya after he had been appointed Governor of Pentapolis, but he soon threw her out, and she then applied her talents in Alexandria and subsequently all over the East. Empress Theodora is said to have known all the methods which would immediately provoke an abortion. ~Anecd. 9.20. cf. Numbers 5:27-28.

Upon her return to Constantinople, she bewitched Justinian who was then still only the heir to the imperial throne. He elevated his mistress to Patrician rank. Upon the death of the Empress, his aunt and the wife of Justin II [who would never have allowed a courtesan at his court], Justinian forced his uncle Justin II to abrogate the law, which forbade senators to marry courtesans. Soon, he became co-emperor with his uncle and at the latter's death, as sole emperor, immediately allied his wife to the throne. ~Anecd. 9.1-10.

Long before her puberty, Theodora had worked in a Constantinopolitan brothel where [according to the court-historian Procopius of Caesarea's Secret History] Theodora was hired at a shameful rate by slaves as all she could do then was to act the part of a Male prostitute, however, as soon as she became sexually mature, she went on stage, but as she could neither play the flute nor harp, nor even dance, she became nothing but a common courtesan, but once promoted to the rank of actress, she stripped in front of the audience and lay down on the stage as slaves emptied buckets of grain into her private parts, which geese would peck at.

After all its sacrilegious boastings and high pretensions, perpetual doubt instilled as to man's salvation, to his life's end and everlastingness, inculcated as a duty to subservience; it is peremptorily decreed as an article of faith by the Council of Trent, "That no man can know with infallible assurance of faith that he has obtained the Grace of God."

Another council will convene in which a Bible, legible to the common people, is denounced as evil, "Inasmuch as it is manifest from experience that if the Holy Bible is translated into the vulgar tongue [common language spoken by the people], and indiscriminately allowed to anyone more evil than good will arise from it." ~Council of Trent, 1546, Fourth Rule of the Index.

"Salvation, taken from the hands of God, fell into those of the priests, who set themselves in the place of our Lord. Souls thirsting for pardon were no more to look to heaven, but to the Church, and above all to its pretended head. To these blinded souls the Roman pontiff was God. Hence the greatness of the Popes, hence unutterable abuses.” ~D' Aubigne.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

One of the first claims of the Church against science is the Flat Earth theory. Each nation had its own God(s); “These Gods did not even know the shape of the worlds they had created, but supposed them perfectly flat. Some thought the day could be lengthened by stopping the sun, that the blowing of horns could throw down the walls of a city, and all knew so little of the real nature of the people they had created, that they commanded the people to love them. Some were so ignorant as to suppose that man could believe just as he might desire, or as they might command, and that to be governed by observation, reason, and experience was a most foul and damning sin. None of these Gods could give a true account of the creation of this little earth. All were woefully deficient in geology and astronomy. As a rule, they were most miserable legislators, and as executives, they were far inferior to the average of American Presidents.”

“Scientific hypotheses are always tentative; they are designed to be held only so long as they conform to the evidence. Proponents of the theistic hypothesis, on the other hand, are already sure that their hypothesis is correct; they only seek evidence to buttress a foregone conclusion.” ~Keith Parsons, Is There a Case for Christian Theism? Does God Exist? Buffalo, NY: Prometheus, 1991, p. 190.

The Church is already mired in philosophical, theological, and scientific debates and their leaders now even preach against the great Greek philosopher, Aristotle, “Those who defend these marvelous fictions, why all things do not fall into that lower part of the Heaven... They have once erred, consistently persevere in their folly, and defend one vain thing by another... They either discuss philosophy for the sake of a jest, or purposely and knowingly undertake to defend falsehoods...” ~Lucius Lactantius, Divinae institutiones, Book III, Of the False Wisdom of Philosophers, 300 CE..

The Church initiates Prayers for the dead and Genuflecting [making the sign of the cross].

Lactantius Firmianus, 260-340 C.E., called the “Christian Cicero,” predicts, “The fall and ruin of the world will soon take place, but it seems that nothing of the kind is to be feared as the city of Rome stands intact.” ~Lactantius Firmianus, Divinae Institutiones, that Rome will fall in 410 C.E. The End of Time by Damian Thompson, University Press of New England, 1996, pg. 27.

AD301 to 305-Emperor Diocletian and Galerius issue 4 edicts, which harshly persecute the Christians by ordering their churches destroyed, their books burned, their priests jailed, and the Christians are compelled to offer sacrifices to the official state [Roman] Gods. The Christians are forbidden to assemble and are placed outside the law, and those who refuse to sacrifice to the Pagan Gods are ordered to be put to death.

When Diocletian celebrates his vicennial in Rome, he ordered that all the jailed Christians be forced to sacrifice to the Gods, and the jails become so full there is soon no more room for the criminals.

AD302-Diocletianus excommunicates the Christians. Also Decius, 249 – 251, and Valerianus, 257- 58, before him had organized important religious persecutions, although authorities had been more tolerant in the last part of the 3rd century. Valerianus had tried to destroy the Bishops leading local Christian communities. Their administrative power was considerable and mistrusted by Romans confronted with a failing imperial system.

During Diocletianus' time, only those possessing a “Libellus,” and had fulfilled their offer to the emperor-God [Emperor worshiping like the Pharaohs]. The Early Christians refused to use incense [burned to worship the Roman Emperor]. “To refuse to participate in the Pagan Emperor cult was a political as well as a religious act, and could easily be construed as dangerous disaffection.” ~Gwatkin, H.M., Early Church History, Vol. 1. London: MacMillan & Co., 1912, p.77.

When things settled down, many “Libellatici” asked for reintegration. Diocletianus' decrees forced the Christian clergy to worship the Roman Emperor and proclaim the latter's Divine [equal to a God] status. Christian churches were closed & their “Holy Books” destroyed. No more than 10% of the population adhered to this new and persecuted faith.

AD 303-Saint Gregory the ‘Illuminator,’ in AD 301, a recluse, emerges from a stone pit in Armenia, imprisoned for thirteen years, refusing to renounce his faith in Christianity. ‘Saint Gregory the Illuminator,’ in 303 C.E., converts King Tiridates III, after having performed a miracle in healing the King of madness and converting him to Christianity along with members of his court.

Christianity is further reinforced in Armenia by the translation of the Bible into the Armenian language by the Armenian monk and scholar St. Mesrob.

Victorinus of Pettau is the author of On the Creation of the World and a Commentary on the Apocalypse of the Blessed John.

In 410 C.E. the Armenians acquired an alphabet invented by St. Mesrob. Literature composed of this new alphabet appears in the 5th century, and in the written language of that era, which is called Grabar or Classical Armenian. Armenian Christians refuse to accept the decisions of the Council of Chalcedon and form a separate church, referred to as the Gregorian Church, and in 1439, reluctantly form a union with the Roman Catholic Church that is accepted by many members of the Armenian Church.

This is later renounced, but a group of Armenian Catholics accept Roman Papal Supremacy and the authority of the Catholic Armenian Patriarchate of Sis or Cilicia [in Beirut, Lebanon], is established in AD 1742. Armenia is the first country to officially accept Christianity.

"When one religion supplants another, it generally takes over from its predecessor such of its usages as seem harmless or praiseworthy. The traditional policy of the Catholic Church in this respect was declared by Saint Gregory the Great, when he told the Apostle to the Saxon heathens that such of their religious and traditional observances as could by any means be harmonized with Orthodox Christianity were not to be interfered with, and this was probably the policy pursued with regard to the converts from the worship of Serapis." ~Fore runners and Rivals of Christianity, From 330 B.C. to 330 A.D., by Francis Legge.

"Those who worship Serapis are Christians, and those who call themselves Bishops of Christ are vowed to Serapis." ~From: Scriptores Historiae Augustae

Early Christians and heathens are often one and the same, "There those who worship Serapis are, in fact, Christians, and those who call themselves Bishops of Christ are, in fact, devotees of Serapis. There is no chief of the Jewish Synagogue, no Samaritan, no Christian Presbyter, who is not an astrologer, a soothsayer, or an anointer. Even the Patriarch himself, when he comes to Egypt, is forced by some to worship Serapis, by others to worship Christ. They are a folk most seditious, most deceitful, most given to injury; but their city is prosperous, rich, and fruitful, and in it no one is idle. Some are blowers of glass, others makers of paper, all are at least weavers of linen or seem to belong to one craft or another; the lame have their occupations, the eunuchs have theirs, the blind have theirs, and not even those whose hands are crippled are idle. Their only god is money, and this the Christians, the Jews, and, in fact, all nations adore..." ~Hadrian, vol. xv. 8; xxiii.

AD 304-384-Pope Saint Damasus I, Saint, Pope from 366 to 384, who, along with Pope Innocent I, and Leo I, contributed the most to the development of the Papacy as a monarchical institution. During his pontificate, Damasus made Latin the principal liturgical language in Rome, replacing Greek. He fell foul of the civic police of Rome on a serious charge of moral turpitude. Saint Damasus' fondness for women earns him a nom de plume, "The enemies of Damasus styled him Auriscalpius Matronarum, the ladies' ear-scratcher." ~Edward Gibbon.

Wars and disputes had arisen between Rome and the earlier Etruscans; although the highest of the noble youths of Rome were still being sent to Etruria to be instructed in the sacred sciences, which flourished there. The consequence being, that under the influence of men whose minds were moulded by those who nonetheless clung to their ancient idol-worship, the Romans brought back much of the idolatry, which they had formerly repudiated and cast off.

Numa, 715-672 B.C., in setting up his religious system, deferring to the prevailing customs of his day and forbids image-worship, yet in the alliance subsisting between Rome and Etruria, regarding sacred things, matters were put in place for the ultimate subversion of that prohibition.

The college of Pontiffs, of which the legendary second king of Rome laid the foundation, in process of time came to be substantially an Etruscan College, and the Sovereign Pontiff that presided over that college, and that controlled all the public and private religious rites of the Roman people in all essential respects, became in spirit, and in practice an Etruscan Pontiff. He was still a devoted worshipper of the Babylonian god; but he was not the legitimate representative of that God, as the true legitimate "Babylonian Pontiff" had his seat beyond the bounds of the Roman Empire.

That seat, after the death of Belshazzar, and the expulsion of the Chaldean priesthood from Babylon by the Medo-Persian kings, was at Pergamos, where afterwards was founded one of the seven churches of Asia. There, in consequence, for many centuries, states the New Testament, was "Satan's Seat." ~Revelation 2:13.

To Pope Pius XII. "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

To call Rome the city "Of the seven hills" was by its citizens held to be as descriptive as to call it by its own proper name. Hence Horace speaks of it by reference to its seven hills alone, when he addresses, "The gods who have set their affections on the seven hills." Martial, in like manner, speaks of "The seven dominating mountains."

In times long subsequent, the same kind of language was in current use; for when Symmachus, the prefect of the city, and the last acting Pagan Pontifex Maximus, as the Imperial substitute, introduces by letter one friend of his to another, he calls him "De Septem Montibus Virum" or "A man from the seven mountains," meaning thereby, as the commentators interpret it, 'Civem Romanum,' or "A Roman Citizen."

Rome has been well marked and defined as it has always been unproblematic to show, that the Church which has its seat and headquarters on the seven hills of Rome could be appropriately called "Babylon," inasmuch as it is the chief seat of idolatry under the New Testament, as the ancient Babylon was the chief seat of idolatry under the Old Testament.

There has never been any obscurity in the minds of the enlightened Protestants in identifying the woman "Sitting on seven mountains," and having on her forehead the name written, "Mystery, Babylon the Great," as that of the Roman Apostacy. ~Revelations 17:5.

"No other city in the world has ever been celebrated, as the city of Rome has, for its situation on seven hills. Pagan poets and orators, who had no thought of elucidating prophecy, have alike characterised it as 'The seven hilled city.'"

Thus Virgil refers to, "Rome has both become the most beautiful (city) in the world, and alone has surrounded for herself seven heights with a wall." Propertius, in the same strain, speaks of it (only adding another trait, which completes the Apocalyptic picture) as "The lofty city on seven hills, which governs the whole world." Its "Governing the whole world" is just the counterpart of the Divine statement, "Which reigneth over the kings of the earth." ~Revelations 17:18.

"Still such licence was preferable to the straits in which philosophical speculation now found itself. Christianity was founded on Revelation... But now the true version of the nature and the constitution of reality, which in the past had been sought by the use and tested by the standards of reason, was made manifest once and for all to all mankind by God, speaking at sundry times and in divers manners by the Hebrew prophets and in these latter days by Christ. There was no gainsaying the content of this Revelation, however repugnant to reason it might seem. Even to question it was heresy, and heresy might mean death." ~Fuller, History of Philosophy.

"Like the Old Testament, the New has its Deutero-Canonical [i.e. doubted, specious, forged] books and portions of books, their Canonicity having formally been a subject of some controversy in the Church. These are, for entire books: the Epistle to the Hebrews, that of James, the Second and Third of John, Jude, and Apocalypse; giving seven in all as the number of the New Testament contested books. The formerly disputed passages are three: the closing section of St. Mark's Gospel, xvi, 9-20, about the apparitions of Christ after the resurrection; the verses in Luke about the bloody sweat of Jesus, xxii, 43, 44; the Pericope Adulterae, or narrative of the woman taken in adultery, Saint John, vii, 53 to viii, 11. Since the Council of Trent it is not permitted for a Catholic to question the Inspiration of these passages." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. iii, p. 274.

It is shameful to think that, notwithstanding all the revelations made from time to time of the true character and origin of the Papacy, 'Ritualism' still makes progress in the Churches, and that men of the highest influence in the State are so infatuated as to seek to strengthen their political position by giving countenance to a modified system of ancient Pagan idolatry, still practiced today as Catholicism.

The Church condones drinking of alcoholic beverages, which helps them acquire followers:

- ✠ "... The best wine." ~John 2:3-10, New Jerusalem Bible.
- ✠ However, the Church does caution against excesses. ~Isaiah 48:17.

- ✠ "Drunkards will not inherit the 'Kingdom of God.'" ~1 Corinthians 5:19-21.
- ✠ Alcoholics Beware: Getting drunk and wild parties is not the Christian way. ~Galatians 5:19, Proverbs 23:29-33.

emblem of a woman holding a "Golden Cup in her hand... Making all nations drunk...
With the wine... Of fornication." ~Revelations 17:2, 18:3.

Damasus is known as the first Pope to use Matthew 16:18 in support of the doctrine of 'Roman Primacy.' He takes a special interest in providing adequate housing for the Papal Archives and in restoring the catacombs, actively fostered the cult of the martyrs, and he composed a number of metrical epitaphs for the tombs of the martyrs who had become the objects of special veneration.

However, a contemporary writer, Clement, in the sixth book of his Hypotyposes, writes, "For they say that Peter and James and John after the Ascension of our Savior, as if also preferred by our Lord, strove not after honor, but chose James the Just, Bishop of Jerusalem."

Therefore, James, and not Peter, nor Damasus, is the first Pope. And after James, "... After James the Just had suffered martyrdom, as the Lord had also on the same account, Symeon, the son of the Lord's uncle, Clopas, was appointed the next Bishop. All proposed him as second Bishop because he was a cousin of the Lord. Therefore, they called the Church a virgin, for it was not yet corrupted by vain discourses."

~Hegesippus.

James is the son of Joseph, and Mary, and the full biological brother of Jesus, which is denied by most Christian groups. ~See: James, the brother of the Jesus, Mark 6:3.

Christ, accompanied by a band of angels, comes down to receive his mother's soul, "The Apostles bear the body to Gethsemane and deposit it in a tomb, whence it is taken up alive to Heaven," this being an extraordinary miracle, for the body was dead and the soul carried to Heaven from her home and the dead body laid in the grave, where it comes to life again for the Heaven-trip. This clumsy fable, "Influenced the early Church Fathers," who were notoriously credulous and childish-minded. Another noted and notorious forgery was the Gospel of Paul and Thecla, of which Father Tertullian relates, that this story was fabricated by an Elder of Asia Minor, who, when convicted of the fraud [this being the only known instance of such action], confessed that he had perpetrated it "For the love of St. Paul." ~Reinach, Ophelus, p. 235, www.bankofwisdom. "Is not this the carpenter, the son of Mary and brother of James and Joses and Judas and Simon, and are not his sisters here with us?" ~Matthew 13:55.

Jesus has siblings as also witnessed in Mark 3:31-32 [also Matthew 12:46-50; Luke 8:19-21]; Then his [Jesus'] mother and his brothers come; and standing outside, they sent to him and called him. A crowd is sitting around him; and they say to him, "Your mother and your brothers and sisters are outside, asking for you."

Acts 12:1-2, which describes the death of one James; Acts 12:17, 15:13, 21:18; Galatians 1:18, "Then after three years I did go up to Jerusalem to visit Cephas and stayed with him fifteen days; but I did not see any other apostle except James, the Lord's brother." ~Note: Paul does not qualify what he means by the word 'brother.' Galatians 1:19, 2:9, 12; I Corinthians 9:5 [Jesus had more than one brother]; and I Corinthians 15:7.

The Latinized name for Apollonius is "Paulus," and the Church today calls those writings the Epistles of Paul. Apollonius's personal attendant, Damis, an Assyrian scribe, is called Demis in the New Testament. ~A Latin-English Dictionary, J. T. White and J. E. Riddle, Ginn & Heath, Boston, 1880. cf. II Timothy 4:10. See also Apollonius of Tyana.

The Catholic Church alleges that brothers and sisters is the common designation of followers of Jesus, "After this he [Jesus] went down to Capernaum with his mother, his brothers and his disciples..." ~John 2:12. "All these were constantly devoted to prayer, together with certain women, including Mary the mother of Jesus, as well as his brothers." ~ Acts 1:14.

"While they [Joseph and Mary] were there, the time came for the baby to be born, and she gave birth to her firstborn, a son." ~Luke 2:6-7.

Eusebius, 260-340 C.E., in his book The History of the Church [2:23:3-18] quotes the 2nd century Christian, Hegesippus [110-180 C.E.] on the martyrdom on James in which Hegesippus clearly calls James, "The Lord's brother." ~See also Tertullian's work, [160-225 C.E.] Against Marcion 4:19.

What is heresy? Heresy is whatever the Church Fathers say it is; church Fathers who will lie, cheat, and falsify history to gain a larger following, "Yet what was Christian heresy? And for that matter, what was the Church? Most of our knowledge of early Christian history comes from the writings of Bishop Eusebius of Caesarea in the 4th century. Eusebius was in many ways a conscientious historian, and he had access to multitudes of sources, which have since disappeared... He wanted to show that the Church he represented had always constituted the mainstream of Christianity, both in organization and faith. The truth is very different... A dominant Orthodox Church, with a recognizable Ecclesiastical structure, emerged only very gradually.” ~Paul Johnson, History of Christianity, p. 43.

The Protoevangelium View claims James as its author and establishes James as the elder biological brother of Jesus. “But some say, basing it on a tradition in the Gospel according to Peter, as it is entitled, or The Book of James, that the brethren of Jesus were sons of Joseph by a former wife, whom he married before Mary. Now those who say so wish to preserve the honor of Mary in virginity to the end... And I think it in harmony with reason that Jesus was the first-fruit among men of the purity which consists in chastity, and Mary among women; for it were not pious to ascribe to any other than to her the first-fruit of virginity.” ~Origen, Protoevangelium, Book of James, and Gospel of Peter.

The first fruits is a derivative from the ancient Greek theology; Porphyry, “But when the sacrifices of first-fruits were allowed by mankind to run into great disorder, they began to adopt the most dreadful offerings full of cruelty, so that the curses formerly denounced against us seemed now to have received accomplishment, by men cutting the victims' throats, and defiling the altars with blood, from the time that they experienced famines and wars, and had recourse to bloodshed. Therefore the deity, as Theophrastus says, indignant at these several crimes, seems to have inflicted the suitable punishment, inasmuch as some men have become atheists, while others would more justly be called evil-minded than impious, because they believed the Gods to be in their nature vile and no better than ourselves. Thus some of them, it appears, came to differ no sacrifices, while others offered evil sacrifices and had recourse to unlawful victims.” ~Eusebius of Caesarea: Præparatio Evangelica [Preparation for the Gospel], Tr., E.H. Gifford, 1903.

Mary's deification begins around 200 C.E. [among others, by the said Bishop Irenæus], and not concluded until almost 2000 years after her death [1 November 1952], when Pope Pius XII, in the Papal Bull, Munificentissimus, finally defines the bodily ascension of Mary into Heaven.

“Then after three years I did go up to Jerusalem to visit Cephas and stayed with him fifteen days; but I did not see any other Apostle except James, the Lord's brother.” ~Galatians 1:18.

Modern translations add “The wife” to Clopas, as the original Greek is missing that term and the phrase could easily be read, ambiguously, as “Mary of Clopas.”

Saint Jerome understood John 19:25 to mean that Mary of Clopas is the sister of Jesus' mother, also called Mary, which does not make sense having two girls in a family named Mary. “From a purely philological and historical point of view, the most probable opinion is that the brothers and sisters of Jesus were his siblings.” ~J.P. Meier, Catholic theologian, Jesus, A Marginal Jew, Vol I, p. 331.

The first Bishop, then, is James, the so-called brother of the Lord; the second, Symeon [Son of Clopas; 62 C.E.]; the third, Justus; the fourth, Zacchæus; the fifth, Tobias; the sixth, Benjamin; the seventh, John; the eighth, Matthias; the ninth, Philip; the tenth, Seneca; the eleventh, Justus; the twelfth, Levi; the thirteenth, Ephraim; the fourteenth, Joseph; and finally, the fifteenth, Judas.

These are the Bishops of Jerusalem that lived between the age of the apostles and the time referred to, all of them belonging to the circumcision.

Perhaps James is not popular by Christian writers because, “He was holy from his mother's womb; and he drank no wine nor strong drink, nor did he eat flesh. No razor came upon his head; he did not anoint himself with oil, and he did not use the bath.”

Pope Damasus I, 382 C.E., commissions Saint Jerome, his secretary and adviser, to revise the existing Latin text of the Bible, which becomes known as the ‘Vulgate.’ Embraced within the Catholic Church's confessions of patristic untrustworthiness and perversion of truth is virtually every “Father” and Founder of the Church of Christ of the first three centuries of the fabrication of the new Faith. Yet upon these gross prevaricators and forgers does the truth and validity of their Christ and the Christian religion solely and altogether depend. They are the destroyers of their own doings. “Learned men, so called Correctors were, following the church meeting at Nicaea 325 C.E., selected by the Church authorities to scrutinize the Sacred texts and rewrite them in order to correct their meaning in accordance with the views, which the [Catholic] Church had just sanctioned.” ~Prof. Eberhard Nestle, an expert in original evangelical texts, comment on this situation in his Einführung in die Textkritik des griechischen Testaments.

The Fathers and framers of the American Constitution and form of government, were men of personal honor and of public virtue; though most of them were Infidels. The “Fathers” and founders of the early Christian religion and Church of Christ were, all of them, ex-Pagan charlatans, admitting, “We who formerly used magical arts,” as Father Justin Martyr admits. ~Father Martyr, I Apology, xiv.

“The Framers wrote the Constitution as a secular document not because they were hostile to Christianity but because they did not want to imply that the new federal government would have any authority to meddle in religion." ~Robert Boston, Why The Religious Right is Wrong About Separation of Church & State, Buffalo, NY: Prometheus, 1993, pp. 223-24.

They took up the new Christian superstition and continued to ply their same old magical arts under a new veneer, upon the ignorant and superstitious Pagans and near-Pagans, for monetary compensations. "Superstition is the baseless fear of the Gods, religion the pious worship." ~Cicero.

History now shows us that the Christian 'Fathers' have shown themselves to be wholly destitute of common sense, egotistical, opinionated, and of lack of common honesty of statement, credulous and mendacious to the extreme degree. ~From The Sainly Fathers of the Faith by Joseph Whelless.

"In the past religion has bound minds together effectively only at a low level of intellect. It is a vital question whether men can find a way of using religion as a cohesive and protective force in binding together minds determined to intellectualize conflict and so to achieve a common purpose at high levels of self-understanding." ~William H. Sheldon, Psychology and the Promethean Will.

With the New Faith, Divine Philosophy, all other philosophical discussion is no longer to be tolerated, "Under Christianity, then, the status of philosophy was reduced in theory at least to that of a slave. She was deprived of her essential activity of inquiring freely into the nature of the Real and of fearlessly publishing the conclusions drawn from her investigations. Her task, none the less menial for the greatness of the cause into whose service she was impressed, was to expound and defend the content of Revelation in terms acceptable to the intellect as far as this was possible." ~Fuller, History of Philosophy.

"There is nothing more despicable than an ignorant priest." ~Cardinal Farness, Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 5, 788-9.

Father Martyr's whole faith is in Christ and in Christianity, he declares, he is confirmed by the heathen precedents and analogies: "Be well assured, then, Trypho, that I am established in the knowledge of and faith in the Scriptures by those counterfeits which he who is called the Devil is said to have performed among the Greeks; just as some were wrought by the Magi in Egypt, and others by the false prophets in Elijah's days. For when they tell that Bacchus, son of Jupiter, was begotten by [Jupiter's] intercourse with Semele, and that he was the discoverer of the vine; and when they relate, that being torn in pieces, and having died, he rose again, and ascended to Heaven; and when they introduce wine into his mysteries, do I not perceive that [the Devil] has imitated the prophecy announced by the patriarch Jacob, and recorded by Moses? ... And when he [the Devil] brings forward AEsculapius as the raiser of the dead and healer of all diseases, may I not say in this matter likewise he has imitated the prophecies about Christ? ... And when I hear that Perseus was begotten of a Virgin, I understand that the deceiving Serpent counterfeited this also." ~Dialogue with Trypho, ch. lxix; Ante-Nicene Fathers, vol. i, 233, Bank of Wisdom Box 926, Louisville, KY 40201. cf. Romans 16:17; II Peter 2:1.

A fabulous tale to say the least, "If it were desirable upon the part of God to send his son to save the world from eternal perdition, why was it that, when he did arrive, so many nations were kept in ignorance of his mission? Even the Jews, God's chosen people, had no knowledge than an incarnate deity was to expire on the Cross. If the regeneration of the world had been the object of Christ, would it not have been better, instead of ascending to Heaven, for him to have remained on earth, teaching practical truths, and showing by his own personal example how the world could be rescued from that moral and intellectual darkness and despair to which it had been reduced by the influence of a degrading theology?" ~Charles Watts, The Death of Christ: An Anthology of Atheism and Rationalism, ed. Gordon Stein, Buffalo, NY: Prometheus, 1980, p. 217.

On makeup, dress, and other attire of the commonfolk, "If they deny that their prophets have received gifts, let them acknowledge this: that if they are convicted of receiving them, they are not prophets. And we will bring a multitude of proofs of this. But it is necessary that all the fruits of a prophet should be examined. Tell me, does a prophet dye his hair? Does a prophet stain his eyelids? Does a prophet delight in adornment? Does a prophet play with tables and dice? Does a prophet lend on usury? Let them confess whether these things are lawful or not; but I will show that they have been done by them." ~Heinichen.

Father Justin accepts the heathen [Pagan] Gods as genuine 'Divine Beings;' but says they are only wicked demons who lead men astray; and he says that these "Evil demons, effecting apparitions of themselves, both defiled women and corrupted boys." ~Apologetics, ch. v, eh. liv, passim.

The Pagan myths and miracles, if they be true, are therefore like the fables of the Christ, and worthy of belief, "And when we say also that the 'Word,' who is the first-born of God, was produced without sexual union, and that He, Jesus Christ, our Teacher, was crucified, and Rose Again, and ascended into Heaven, we propound nothing different from what you believe regarding those whom you esteem sons of Jupiter... But as we have said above, wicked devils perpetrated these things. And if we assert that the 'Word of God' was born in a peculiar manner, different from ordinary generation, let this, as said above, be no extraordinary thing to you, who say that Mercury is the angelic word [Logos] of God... And if we even affirm that He was born of a virgin, accept this in common with what you accept of Perseus. And in what we say that he made whole the lame, the paralytic, and those born blind, we seem to say what is very similar to the deeds said to have been done by Esculapius." ~Justin Martyr, I Apology, chs. xxi, xxii; Ante-Nicene Fathers, vol. i, 170; cf. Add. ad Grace, ch. lxix; Ib. 233.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

"Nothing is so pleasing to these Gods as the butchery of unbelievers. Nothing so enrages them, even now, as to have someone deny their existence." ~Robert G. Ingersoll, The Gods, 1872.

"The Christian religion cannot be believed without a miracle by any reasonable person." ~J. L. Mackie, The Miracle of Theism, New York: Oxford University Press, p. 12.

"Undoubtedly we are called Christians, for this reason, and none other, than because we are anointed with the oil of God [not Jesus]." ~Theophilus of Antioch, in Ibid. p. 399.

Emperor Diocletian's legislation will be, by far, the most severe so far and the most systematic as a host of new and horrible punishments are devised to terrify the weak into submission, and the Christians are rounded up by the hundreds, summoned to sacrifice, and massacred. In one case at least, in Phrygia, where the whole population is Christian, a whole town is wiped out.

A phrase in the authentic acts of one of the victims of this time, Saint Philip, Bishop of Heraclea, summarises the spirit of the new savagery. "You have heard the law of the Emperor," says the judge, speaking to the accused. "It commands that throughout the world members of your society must either sacrifice or perish." ~Saint Philip, Bishop of Heraclea.

AD 305- Elvira, Spain, in Andalusia, near Granada, the first known laws of any church council against the Jews appears. Christian women are forbidden to marry Jews unless the Jew first converts to Christianity. Jews are forbidden to extend hospitality to Christians. Jews could not keep Christian concubines and are forbidden to bless the fields of Christians. ~Persecution of the Jews in Europe by Ted Thornton.

AD 306-For the first time in the history of the Church, witchcraft is addressed with the "Council of Elvira."

Canon 6, refuses the Holy Viaticum to any person who has killed a person by a spell [per maleficium], and states that the reason that such a crime could not be effected "Without idolatry," [without the aid of the Devil], being that devil-worship and idolatry are the same.

The anti-Semitic Council will decree that Christians and Jews cannot intermarry, have sexual intercourse, or eat together [306-373].

"The Jews have fallen under the heavy wrath of God, because they have departed from the Lord, and have followed idols." ~Saint Cyprian, 1p. 146, 306 C.E.

Constantine the Great, Emperor of Rome, the first Christian Emperor, rules the Roman Empire as Emperor from 306-337; b.274(?). In the early 4th century C.E., the Emperor Constantine publicly declares that Christianity is to be the new state religion of the Empire; Christianity is deemed the only religion, and the Jews are mandated to convert. But, when Jews refuse to convert, they are excluded from citizenship, and regarded as outcasts, or pariahs in league with the Devil.

AD 308- Lactantius' works are a digest of Pagan mythology accepted by Christian as 'Divinely True' and inspired antecedents and evidences of the fictitious "Facts" of the new Paganism called Christianity.

"There is nothing insane, nothing irrational in it, when considered in the light of evolution, and when its mode of expression by sign language is thoroughly understood. The insanity lies in mistaking it for human history or Divine Revelation. Mythology is the depository of man's most ancient science, and what concerns us chiefly is this, when truly interpreted once more, it is destined to be the death of those false theologies to which it has unwittingly given birth." ~Luniatry, p. 2.

Many of the tributes to the Sibyls are soon related as prophecies of Jesus Christ, "God in his forethought, lest the devil, to whom from the beginning He had given power over the earth, should by his subtlety either corrupt or destroy men... Sent Angels for the protection and improvement of the human race; and inasmuch as He had given these a free will, He enjoined them above all things not to defile themselves... He plainly prohibited them from doing that, which He knew that they would do, that they might entertain no hope of pardon. Therefore, while they abode among men, that most deceitful ruler of the earth... Gradually enticed them to vices, and polluted them by intercourse with women. Then, not being admitted into Heaven on account of the sins into which they had plunged themselves, they fell to the earth. Thus from Angels the Devil makes them to become his satellites and attendants. ” ~www.infidels.org

It is important to keep in mind that there are numerous people in the Talmud with the same name as Jesus. R. Aaron Hyman in his biographical work on the sages of the Talmud, Toldot Tannaim VeAmoraim, lists 14 Hillels, 61 Elazars, and 71 Hunas.

Flavius Josephus in the 1st century also lists approximately twenty different men named Jesus, at least ten of whom lived in the same time as the famous Jesus. ~cf. John P. Meier, A Marginal Jew, p. 206 n. 6, quoted in The Jesus Narrative In The Talmud by Gil Student.

The new Christians obtain further inspirations from their Pagan contemporaries, “But they who were born from these, because they were neither Angels nor men, but bearing a kind of mixed nature, were not admitted into hell as their fathers were not into Heaven. Thus there became two kinds of demons; one of Heaven, the other of the earth. The latter are the evil spirits, the authors of all the evils, which are done, and the same Devil is their Prince. Whence Trismegistus calls him the ruler of demons... They are called demons, that is, skilled and acquainted with matters; for they think that these are Gods.” ~From the works of Joseph Wheless.

If others [Pagans] could speak to God, why not the Christians? “They are acquainted, indeed, with many future events, but not all since it is not permitted to them entirely to know the counsel of God. These contaminated and abandoned Spirits, as I say, wander over the whole earth, and contrive a solace for their own perdition by the destruction of men. Therefore they fill every place with snares, frauds and errors for they cling to individuals, and occupy whole houses from door to door... And these, since spirits are without substance and not to be grasped, insinuate themselves into the bodies of men; and secretly working in their inward parts, they corrupt the health, hasten diseases, terrify their souls with dreams, harass their maids with frenzies, that by these means they may compel men to have recourse to their aid.” ~Lactantius, Divine Instit. II, xv; Ante-Nicene Fathers, vol. VII, 64.

“Religion being a matter of the will, it cannot be forced on anyone; in this matter it is better to employ words than blows [verbis melius quam verberibus res agenda est] Of what use is cruelty? What has the rack to do with piety? Surely there is no connection between truth and violence, between justice and cruelty... It is true that nothing is so important as religion, and one must defend it at any cost [summâ vi]... It is true that it must be protected, but by dying for it, not by killing others; by long-suffering, not by violence; by faith, not by crime. If you attempt to defend religion with bloodshed and torture, what you do is not defense, but desecration and insult, for nothing is so intrinsically a matter of free will as religion.” ~Lactantius, from The Catholic Encyclopedia.

“For though He was the Son of God from the beginning, He was ‘Born Again’ a second time according to the flesh: and this two-fold birth of His has introduced great terror into the minds of men, and overspread with darkness even those who retained the mysteries of true religion. But we will show this plainly and clearly ... Unless by chance we shall profanely imagine, as Orpheus supposed, that God is both male and female. ... But Hermes also was of the same opinion, when he says that He was ‘His own father’ and ‘His own mother’ ... John also thus taught: ‘In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the ‘Word was God.’ The same was in the beginning with God. All things were made by Him, and without Him was not anything made.” ~Father Lactantius.

Being “Born Again” is borrowed from the Pagan worshipers, and in some of the Greek Mysteries the newly admitted Initiates were fed for some time after on milk only, “As though we were being ‘Born Again.’” ~Sallustius, quoted by Gilbert Murray.

The Trinity is addressed with the Hermes Trismegistus so often quoted and vouched for as the god Mercury “Thrice Greatest,” and is the furthestmost of the Christian witnesses to the plagiarism of old. In many chapters the “Divine Testimonies” of Trismegistus, Apollo, and the other Demon Gods, are confidently appealed to and their proofs recited.

He proves the immortality of the soul and the resurrection of the dead by renewed appeals to Hermes,

To Pope Pius XII, “I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians.” ~Mahatma Gandhi

Apollo, and the Sibyl: "Of the Soul, and the Testimonies concerning its Eternity." ~Lact. Divine Instit. Ch. xiii.

"And I will now allege the testimony of the Prophets... Hermes, describing the nature of man, that he might know that he was made by God, introduced this statement... Let us therefore seek greater testimony. A certain Polites asked Apollo of Miletus whether the soul remains after death or goes to dissolution; and he replied in these verses [quoting the response]. What do the Sibylline poems say? Do they not declare that this is so, when they say that the time will come when God will judge the living and the dead? -- Whose authority we will hereafter bring forward... Therefore the Son of the most high and mighty God shall come to judge the quick and the dead, as the Sibyl testifies and says [quoting]. ... 'Dies irae, dies illa, Teste David et Sibylla.'" ~Lactantius, Divine Instit., VII, chs. xiii, xxii; Ante-Nicene Fathers, vol. vii, 210, 218.

It is most unfortunate that the Church ignores Lactantius and instead employs their own doctrine of, "Purity of Faith" to establish the Inquisition to impose their will upon the masses worldwide, it [the Inquisition] being used for both religious and political purposes wherever it is established.

How can there be such a thing as 'Purity of Faith.' when the 'Faith' has borrowed from every existing and pre-existing faith ever established? Lactantius assures us with much details, "That Demons have no Power over Those who are Established in the Faith." ~Lact. Divine Instit. II, Ch. Xvi.

"That Astrology, Soothsaying, and Similar Arts are the Inventions of Demons." ~Lact. Divine Instit. II, Ch. xvii.

However, the contradictory Bible espouses astrology, "We are told in the Bible, that greatest of all astrological works, that Abram or Abraam [i.e., a Brahmin] came from the East, and being conversant with the languages of the different peoples, came to Egypt and taught them Astrology, or the worship of the true God. Josephus is our authority that he taught astrology. Now, this Abraam, or, rather, Abram, was accompanied by Sara, his wife." ~Karl Anderson.

Something the Church and the Inquisitors forget in their material voracity, "Jesus, in my opinion, was the most important Master Teacher in the history of humankind. The reason he was so important was that he taught Love. He carried the message of a Loving God-Force." ~Codependence: The Dance of Wounded Souls by Robert Bumei.

It appears the authors have forgotten the thousands of victims tortured by the Church Authorities in the name of Jesus Christ our Lord and Savior. Or perhaps they think this modern generation lacks the knowledge of researching historical facts, the millions of Jews tortured during WWII without assistance from the Pope, or the conspiracy acts of the Vatican in their financial dealings will lend credence to this hypocrisy.

Christian Tolerance: The Council of Elvira decrees that Christians and Jews cannot intermarry, have sexual intercourse, or eat together.

AD 311-314-The Second Black Pope: Pope Saint Miltiades [Melchiodes], signed Emperor Constantine's famous "Edict of Milan" in 313 C.E., which allegedly ends the religious persecutions, and makes Christianity the established religion of the Roman Empire. Emperor Galerius issues an edict shortly before his death, which tolerates the Christian religion throughout the Empire, and allows reconstruction of their churches; Galerius believed his fatal illness to be the vengeance of the Christian God.

Saint Augustine spoke of him as, "A son of peace and father of Christians."

AD 312-Emperor Constantine claims that Christ appeared to him in a dream before the battle of Milvian Bridge, becoming the Church's first defender. Constantine makes Christianity the official religion of the Roman Empire: the first blood ever shed over doctrinal differences is between Athanasian and Eusebian sects.

With official recognition, the Christians will now condemn all Pagan religions as demonic, and Emperor Constantine authorizes official demolition of temples or conversion to Christian shrines. ~Eusebius, The Life of the Blessed Emperor Constantine, Book 3, chapter 54-59.

Christian priests such as Mark of Arethusa and Cyril of Heliopolis were known as "Temple destroyers." Between 315 and the 6th century, thousands of Pagan believers are slain. In the early 4th century the philosopher Sopatros is executed by command of Christian authorities. Pagan services become punishable by death in 356. In 415, the famous female philosopher Hypatia of Alexandria is torn to pieces with glass fragments by a Catholic mob, in a church by an hysterical rabble led by none other than a priest called Peter the Reader.

Christian Emperor Theodosius [408-450], has children executed, because they played with the remains of Pagan statues. ~Christian Terror: Events That Testify To God's Divine Glory by Mahlon H. Smith.

AD313-Edict of Milan, issued by Emperor Constantine, gives atheist Christians the right to practice their religious beliefs under Roman law without persecution. He also, addresses the issue of the Church and its accumulation of wealth, power, selling of indulgences, and corrupt ways. ~Simony-See Acts 8:11-24 for referenceto abuses.

"The liberality of the faithful was a constant incitement to depart from the rule of poverty. This liberality showed itself mainly in gifts of real property, for example, in endowments for prayers for the dead, which were then usually founded with real estate. In the 14th century began the land wars and feuds [e.g. the Hundred Years' War in France], which relaxed every bond of discipline and good order." ~The Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 6, 284.

The Jews pay heavy taxes to co-exist in the Roman Empire, and only tolerated so that they may witness the coming of the Messiah, "Jews accounted for 10% of the total population of the Roman Empire. By that ratio, if other factors had not intervened, there would be 200 million Jews in the world today, instead of something like 13 million." ~James Carroll.

"... The faults and wealth of the clergy must have contributed something. The spiritual ruler seemed almost merged in the sovereign of Rome and the feudal lord of Sicily. Money was needed, and in order to obtain it funds had to be raised... And by means, which aroused much discontent and affected the credit of Rome. ... Even in the 12th century complaints of venality were frequent and bitter." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 3, 703.

A religion once scorned and maltreated is now coming into its own power. The Latin language is used in Scriptural interpretations and the Church continues its fall into similar moral decay, as did the predecessors of the Roman Empire. Possession of books declared heretical is a criminal offense.

Scripture is what the Church says it is, "As a result of some of these rules of interpretation the literal sense of certain passages of the Bible must be excluded altogether; e.g., passages in which according to a literal interpretation something unworthy is said of God; or in which statements are made that are unworthy of the Bible, senseless, contradictory, or inadmissible; or in which allegorical expressions are used for the avowed purpose of drawing the reader's attention to the fact that the literal sense is to be disregarded." ~cf. Cannons of Allegory, De Victimis Offerentibus, §5 [ii. 255]; Laws of Allegory, De Abrahamo, §15 [ii. 11]; De Somniis, ii. 2 [i. 660].

Such books are set ablaze and destroyed. Saint Pachomius, seeks to preserve these rare documents, a follower of Saint Anthony, he takes the banned books and hides them in jars along the Nile in Egypt [the manuscripts are similar to the Nag Hammadi Texts, & Books of Gnosticism].

Gnostic Divine Revelation becomes an anathema to early Christianity, "While Gnosticism drew from and influenced in turn many traditional religions, its effect was most clearly felt on nascent Christianity... The designation Gnosticism... Is a term of modern scholarship. Evidence for the Gnostic phenomenon... Reveals a diversity in theology, ethics, and ritual that defies strict classification. Yet Gnostic sects appear to have shared an emphasis on the redemptive power of esoteric knowledge, acquired not by learning or empirical observation but by 'Divine Revelation'..." ~ www.britannica.com.

The Gnostics believed that Christ's Resurrection was symbolic and not literal and are persecuted and even ordered exterminated by the new order or "True Faith," Bishops and clergy who claim to be guardians of the Church of Rome [Perpetration of Faith vs. Perpetration of the Church] and declare they are only saving the faith from contamination.

The Orthodox [Catholic] Church will now pawn off their teachings as the True Faith, and their writings as being the Truth, while all others are said to be forgeries, yet, "We have to handle many, partly contradictory texts, which were written in the time period of 50-150 C.E. In the New Testament were no less than four evangelical texts included. One tried to bring about some kind of unity, which was presented as an unadulterated, true narrative of the life and teachings of Jesus, complementing each other, and which together, though apparently dissimilar, formed the only true Evangelical text. In order to bring the various passages in harmony of each other, they were subjected to a thorough revision. As a first measure one rewrote the Evangelical handwritten manuscripts, disregarding parts, which did not conform, and wrote comments to make them compatible with each other. One then took to the clerical art of interpretation in order to explain the contents in such a way that a unified evangelical text could be created." ~Prof. Detlef AD314-335-Emperor Constantine gives Pope Miltiades, 311-14, the Christian Church's first papal palace as gift. Constantine will defend the Christian massacre of Pagans all across Egypt and Palestine.

Constantine, the Great, is described as, “One of the most abominable butchers and fiends of cruelty that ever lived,” after executing own son and boiling wife alive. ~Voltaire, Philosophical Dictionary, article Constantine, see: See: GW Foote & JM Wheeler, Crimes of Christianity, London, Progressive Publishing Company, 1887, Chapter: 2.

Saint Sylvester I, Catholic Christianity as it is practiced today begun with the Satanic alliance between the barbaric, concubine-sired Emperor Constantine and Pope Sylvester, then Bishop of Rome. “The Santa myth is one of the most effective means ever devised for intimidating children, eroding their self-esteem, twisting their behavior, warping their values, and slowing their development of critical thinking skills.”

About the name of Pope Sylvester I, 314-335, there arose, “The Sylvester Legend later surrounded with that network of myth, that gave rise to the forged document known as the ‘Donation of Constantine.’”

~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 14, 257.

Christian Persecutors: Immediately after its full legalization by Constantine, the Christian Church attacks the Pagans [non-Christians]. The Council of Ancyra denounces the worship of the Pagan Goddess Artemis. Nicholas of Cusa was among the first to conclude that Constantine never made any such Donation. Lorenza Valla in Italy gave a brilliant demonstration of its spuriousness in 1450 C.E. ~See Christopher B. Coleman's Treatise of Lorenzo Valla on the Donation of Constantine, New York, 1927.

The ‘Donatio Constantini’ document is without doubt a forgery, fabricated somewhere between the years 750 and 850 C.E., with its falsity known and boldly demonstrated by the Church Fathers. Fraud is a resource the Catholic Church has not forgotten as in the 20th century, which causes many documents to be committed to the deliverance of the priesthood from pedophile charges. “Fraud is the resource of weakness and cunning; and the strong, though ignorant barbarian, was often entangled in the net of sacerdotal policy... The ‘Decretal and the ‘Donation of Constantine,’ the two Magical Pillars of the spiritual and temporal monarchy of the Popes. This memorable donation was first introduced to the world by an Epistle of Saint Adrian I, who exhorts Charlemagne to imitate the liberality, and revive the name, of the great Constantine. ... So deep was, the ignorance and credulity of the times, that the most absurd of fables was received, with equal reverence, in Greece and in France, and is still enrolled among the decrees of the canon law. The emperors, and the Romans, were incapable of discerning a forgery, that subverted their rights and freedom... The Popes themselves have indulged a smile at the credulity of the vulgar; but a false and obsolete title still sanctifies their reign; and, by the same fortune which has attended the Decretals and the Sibylline Oracles, the edifice has subsisted after the foundations have been undermined.” ~Gibbon, Rise and Fall of the Roman Empire, ch. xiv, pp. 740, 741, 742.

Pope Adrian, 772-795, in whose court the incredulous document was forged, specifically reminds the illiterate Christian Emperor Charlemagne that it was the basis of the swollen territorial claims of the Papacy, and this makes it clear that the forged document was shown to the Frank Monarch when he was taken, melodramatically, to the “Tomb of Saint Peter,” to sign the document which, by the way, mysteriously disappeared, in which he awarded nearly the whole of Italy to the Pope. The famous poet to the Pope, Dante, appears to have taken the forged Donation of Constantine's authenticity for granted; and although there is possible doubt, he does not fearlessly venture to dispute it, however, Dante does deny Emperor Constantine's power or right to give, if he did give. ~Dante., Divine Comedy, aka Dante's Inferno, 19:115, De Monarch, 4.

Interestingly, of the 262 documents, which have survived over the name of Charlemagne 100 or so are forgeries. And the forgers include more than backroom anonymouses, for example, Archbishop Hincmar of Reims, 845-882, Bishop Pilgrim of Passau, 971-991, and even Pope Calixtus II, 1119-1124. Hincmar apparently took to writing counterforgeries when presented with inconvenient documents, indeed, took forgeries, reformed them, and threw them back at his opponents. ~Forgery, False Attribution, and Fiction: Early Modern German History and Literature by Frank L. Borchardt.

“The ‘Donation of Constantine’ is the name traditionally applied, since the later Middle-Ages, to a document purporting to have been addressed by Constantine the Great to Pope Sylvester I, which is found first in a Parisian manuscript [Codex lat. 2777] of probably the beginning of the 9th century. Since the 11th century it has been used as a powerful argument in favor of the Papal claims, and consequently since the 12th it has been the subject of a vigorous controversy. At the same time, by rendering it possible to regard the Papacy as a middle term between the original and the medieval Roman Empire, and thus to form a theoretical basis of continuity for the reception of the Roman Law in the Middle-Ages, it has had no small influence upon secular history.” ~The New Schaff-Herzog Encyclopedia of Religious Knowledge, vol.3, art. Donation of Constantine, pp. 484, 485.

The Columbia Encyclopedia adds that, “It was not, as is sometimes asserted, universally accepted in the Middle Ages.” There are claims that from the date of Emperor Charlemagne's award in 774 C.E. to within a few years of the end of the Middle-Ages it was universally accepted, and we have proof that it was utilized by Pope John Paul II to discern his authority. ~From The Columbia Encyclopedia's, Crimes Against The Truth, by Joseph McCabe, Haaldeman-Julius Publications, Girard, Kansas.

History identifies the Catholic Pope that decreed the change from the Sabbath to Sunday as Pope Sylvester I.

Emperor Constantine had by then already murdered Crispus, his son by his first wife, and in 326 CE, drowned his second wife while she was taking a bath, killed his eleven-year-old nephew, and then his brother-in-law, all in the year that he convened the Council of Nice [Nicaea] to decide on whether Jesus was a man or the Son of God.

Both benefited, enormously, from this Unholy Alliance between Altar and Throne, the power of the Pulpit aligning with the terror of the Sword, a formidable foe that would crush all opposition. The Church will soon learn to use non-negotiable force to gain its end results. ~from J. McCabe, Rationalist Encyclopaedia.

The Council of Ancyra denounces worship of Greek nature and the moon goddess, Artemis.

The ‘Donatio Constantini’ document is without doubt a forgery, fabricated somewhere between the years 750 and 850 CE, with its falsity known and demonstrated by the Church Fathers.

Ironically, in the 20th century, Pope John Paul II will give a speech to the world referring to the Papacy's Divine Right to rule, “... Its genuinity was yet occasionally defended, and the document still further used as authentic, until Baronius in his ‘Annals Ecclesiastici’ admitted that the ‘Donatio’ was a forgery, whereafter it was soon universally admitted to be such. It is so clearly a fabrication that there is no reason to wonder that, with the revival of historical criticism in the 15th century, the true character of the document was at once recognized... The document obtained wider circulation by its incorporation with the ‘False Decretals,’ [840-850].” ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol.5, pgs.118, 119, 120.

Fraud, fraud, and yet, more fraud, “... But Ecclesiastical forgery never ceased. Dominican writers themselves confess that St. Thomas of Aquinas had been deceived by a forgery when he relied on certain passages of the Greek fathers, more especially of Cyril of Alexandria, to introduce into dogmatic theology the Doctrine of the Infallibility and Absolute Power of the Pope; and that St. Thomas, himself deceived, deceived a long succession of subsequent theologians and canonists. And to the same end served many a history of the Church, deliberately falsified. When one considers all that flowed from this systematic fraud, all the struggles between Popes and secular rulers, the depositions of kings and emperors, the excommunications, the inquisitions, indulgences, absolutions, persecutions and burnings, and reflects that all this miserable history was the direct product of a series of forgeries of which the ‘Donation of Constantine,’ and the ‘False Decretals’ [Papal Decrees] were not indeed the earliest, but the most important, one is disposed to wonder whether falsehood rather than truth has not had the more permanent effect on the destinies of mankind.” ~Literary Forgeries by James Anson Farrer, 1849-1925, With an Introduction by Andrew Lang, Longmans, Green, and Co., 39 Paternoster Row, London, New York, Bombay, and Calcutta, 1907.

To Cardinal Nicholas de Cusa and Laurentius Valla belongs the honor of first establishing the truth; and remarkable it is that, despite the damaging blows dealt by Valla's treatise at the papal system, he was taken into the service of Pope Nicholas V after its appearance, and received both from him and his successor, Calixtus III, signal marks of their favor.

AD 314-Canon 24 of the "Council of Ancyra" imposes a five-year penance on anyone consulting with a magician [witchcraft or seeking other spirits]. The offence is treated as participatory upon the seeker.

The conception of Simon Magus as a magician is provided by the account in the eighth chapter of Acts, and his labors in Rome, which are mentioned by Justin Martyr.

AD 315-403-Saint Epiphanius writes of a festival in Alexandria held on the 6th day of January celebrating the Year of God. Aion, The Shining One, is offered to the virgin goddess Kore, a relic of Greek religion that is a Hellenized version of the Egyptian transformation of Isis.

The naked idol with signs of the cross and a God star marked on her brow, hands, and knees, is carried in the evening seven times around the temple. By adopting bits and pieces of ancient cults, the Church finds it easier to gain the converts it so desperately needs for financial gain.

"The learned Bishop Epiphanius of Salamis, who lived in Cyprus at the end of the 4th century, in his answer to the Alogoi [A group of heretics in Asia Minor A.D. 170]." [Oxford Dictionary, C.C.] gives the chronology of our Lord's life, according to which the 6th of January is the day of our Lord's birth, and the 8th of November the day of His Baptism in Jordan. For him the Epiphany [4th] was plainly the festival of Christ's nativity." ~From: Heortology, A History of the Christian Festivals From Their Origin to the Present Day, Dr. K.A. Heinich Kellner 1837 - 1915, pg. 128-129, Professor of Catholic Theology in the University of Bonn

AD 315-387-Saint Cyril of Jerusalem, Saint, Christian minister, Father of the Church and Doctor of the Church, is born in Jerusalem. In AD 351, he is elected Bishop of Jerusalem. His contemporary is Arius, Bishop of Caesarea, with whom he will soon engage in conflict concerning the rights of his office but in due course extending to differences of Church Doctrine.

Of the contemporaries of Josephus, why didn't Lucius Plutarchus, who lived in the midst of the Jerusalem religious turmoil, write nothing about Jesus, Paul, or any version of early Christianity. Yet, Lucius' Pythagorean philosophy mirrored descriptions of the lifestyle and doctrine of Jesus and his closest disciples. In 359, before the Council at Caesarea, whose expertise Cyril did not acknowledge, Arius accuses him of selling the treasures of the Church to feed the poor. The assembly removes Cyril from office. Cyril appeals to the larger Synod, held at Seleucia, which restores him to office.

The following year, due to the persevering hostility of Arius, he is deposed once again. The second time by the Council assembled in Constantinople [Istanbul, Turkey]. Upon the death of Constantius II, Emperor of Rome, Cyril is again restored to his Episcopate, and several years thereafter his archenemy Arius dies.

Saint Cyril becomes involved in further difficulties and is banished in 367 by Valens, Roman Emperor of the East, but returns after the Emperor's death in 378.

Saint Cyril is remembered for his detailed accounts on the history of the Church, baptism, the Eucharist, and chrism. "He Himself, therefore, having declared and said of the Bread, 'This is My Body,' who will dare any longer to doubt? And when He Himself has affirmed and said, 'This is My Blood,' who can ever hesitate and say It is not His Blood? Do not, therefore, regard the Bread and Wine as simply that, for they are, according to the Master's declaration, the Body and Blood of Christ. Even though the senses suggest to you the other, let faith make firm. Do not judge in this matter by taste, but be fully assured by faith, not doubting that you have been deemed worthy of the Body and Blood of Christ." ~Saint Cyril of Jerusalem, Mystagogic, 350 A.D.

The Edict of Milan, along with Constantine's evolving state religion caused a major concern for a Christian army. The Catholic Church strongly held that members shouldn't fight in the army because this would violate the sixth Commandment. ~Exodus 20:13.

"The bread and the wine of the Eucharist before the holy invocation of the adorable Trinity were simple bread and wine, but the invocation having been made, the bread becomes the Body of Christ and the wine the Blood of Christ." ~Saint Cyril of Jerusalem, "Catechetical Lectures," 350 A.D.

AD 319-Constantine passes a law excusing Christian clergy from paying any taxes or from serving in his army. The law attracts new priests, but for the wrong reasons.

The Alexandrian priest Arius, 250-336, poses a serious threat to the Church's tax-exemption status by publicly denouncing the Divinity of Jesus Christ. Arius, ordained a priest, is commanded by the Bishop of Alexandria to cease and desist in the propagation of his beliefs and interpretations of Scripture or he would be declared a heretic during the First Council of Nice.

Arius preaches a non-god concept, Jesus could not be God because he was a man, and God is God therefore what the Church is teaching is blasphemous. The Church puts this thinking to a vote and the unfortunate Arius loses. The writings of Arius are ordered to be destroyed by the Church in 325 as well as the works of many other Bishops present at the first Church Summit. What happens to all the manuscripts and sacred documents presented in this congregation of Bishops is not recorded. We can only speculate that those documents not concealed and secreted away are destroyed.

AD 321- The first Christian "Sabbath," day is first instituted in the year 321 by Emperor Constantine, who spoke of Sunday as "The venerable Day of the Sun."

The Pagans celebrated it as a festival in the religious rites of Mithraism, a Sun-Worshipping religion [Although the Church claims Constantine as a Catholic] Unable to suppress these early pagan celebrations, the early Christians succumbed to embracing these holidays and gave them Christian significance, merging them into the new religion of Christianity.

The early Church Fathers, strenuously opposed to the observance of the Sabbath, and the early Christians also tried to abolish it. Evidence exists from the testimony of the Church itself as even Martin Luther, is so incensed at its observance as a religious function that he reprimanded his followers to violate it. Martin Luther is one of the first to revive catechetical instruction and to print [his version] of catechisms.

Luther's famous "Enchiridion," which was really the third edition of his smaller catechism, was published in 1529, and speedily ran through a number of editions; it is still used in Germany and in other Protestant countries.

In his encyclical, Acerbo nimis, Pope Pius X will attribute the world's present religious crisis to the widespread ignorance of Divine Truth, and lays down strict regulations concerning the duty of catechizing. John Knox and John Calvin opposed it.

Calvin even threatened to change the weekly day of rest to Thursday, so as to make a distinctly separate day of observance from that of the Romanists [Catholics]. Luther doubts the Canon both of the Old Testament and the New, stating, "I so hate Esther and II Maccabees that I wish they did not exist. There is too much Judaism in them and not a little heathenism." ~The Canon of the Bible By Larry A. Taylor, 1999.

"When the child is fighting its way through the temptations of the world, it will have to draw far more largely on its stock of piety than on its stock of knowledge." ~Furniss, Sunday School or Catechism(?)

Anti-Semitism goes back into history, "There is a certain people scattered abroad and dispersed among the peoples in all the provinces of your realm. Their laws are different from those of every people. They do not observe even the king's laws..." ~Book of Esther, 111:3.

The cold, but delicious dish of ice cream covered with syrup now known as a "sundae" is an invention to circumvent the law passed in many States prohibiting the sale of ice-cream sodas on Sunday as a desecration of the Sabbath. Soda dispensers circumvented the law by serving ice cream, which was considered a food, covered with syrup, as a Sabbath substitute for ice-cream sodas, and so the "Sundae" came into existence! ~From The Ten Commandments by Joseph Lewis.

The German Empire, "Germania Magna," is not known. The first dependable document relating to a large and well-organized Jewish community in these regions dates from 321 CE, and refers to Cologne on the Rhine; it indicates that the legal status of the Jews there was the same as elsewhere in the Roman Empire.

AD 322- The Council of Bishop at Nicene. This group of Bishops, of the Roman Catholic Church, met upon an Edict of the Sun worshipping Emperor Constantine to take action on the Books of the Bible, along with the settlement of Mary's "Immaculate Conception" and the "Virgin Birth" of Jesus Christ. None of the Ancient Church Fathers, or Church Doctors knew anything of the modern Roman dogmas of the immaculate conception, which was not confirmed until 1854, and Papal Infallibility, which was invented in 1870. ~ Note: The Papacy did not begin until the 7th century. Cf. Romans 3:22-24 place of the sun, and pay him the adoration originally payed to the sun." ~Thomas Paine 1737-1809.

AD323-323 The Bishops of Nicene [on a majority vote, not an unanimous vote] approve the "Immaculate Conception," and the Doctrine of "Virgin Birth of Jesus Christ to Mary."

Jesus Christ is now declared to be "God the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost," which is today's Spirit.

AD324-Emperor Constantine I is the sole ruler of the Roman Empire, and in keeping with the system of making the Emperor a Divinity [started by Diocletian], Constantine declares himself the representative of God and earth and becomes head of Christian Church [Does this also make Emperor Constantine the first Pope?]

The Emperor Constantine declares Christianity as the only officially recognized religion of the Roman Empire. In Dydimia, Minor Asia, he sacks the Oracle of the God Apollo and tortures the Pagan priests to death. Constantine also evicts all non-Christian peoples from Mount Athos and destroys all the local Hellenic [Greek] temples, after sacking them of all their valuable statuary, paintings, etc.

AD325-Emperor Constantine calls for Christendom's 250 Bishops to a mandatory attendance at the First Nicaean Council to settle disputes over nature of Christ and other church doctrines. As Pontifex Maximus, Constantine is Priest of Priests over all the Pagan faiths, and now sits in council as Bishop of Bishops, which would make the sun worshiping Constantine [Pagan] the first Catholic Pope. Constantine was attempting to emulate the Persian King Ardashir's creation of the Iranian monotheism, with a total restructure of religious and other written records.

At the Nicene Council, the God-man [Jesus] is promoted, and "Christ is Divine."

The beliefs of Arius separated the Bishops in their voting, "Moreover, Theodore of Mopsuestia relates that there were only nine persons out of all whom the decrees of the Synod did not please, and that their names are as follows: Theognis of Nicaea, Eusebius of Nicomedia, Patrophilus of Scythopolis, Eusebius of Caesarea in Palestine, Narcissus of Neronias in Cilicia, which is now called Irenopolis, Paulinus of Tyre, Menophantus of Ephesus, Secundus of Ptolemais, which borders upon Egypt, and Theonas of Marmarica."

~Nicetas, in his The xunus of the Orthodox Faith, Book F. Chap. 7.

Jesus has relatives who are never mentioned in Christian theology, "They came, therefore, and took the lead of every church as witnesses, and as relatives of the Lord. And profound peace being established in every church, they remained until the reign of the Emperor Trajan, and until the above-mentioned Symeon, son of Clopas, an uncle of the Lord, was informed against by the heretics, and was himself in like manner accused for the same cause before the governor Atticus. And, after being tortured for many days he suffered martyrdom, and all, including even the proconsul, marveled that, at the age of one hundred and twenty years, he could endure so much. And orders were given that he should be crucified." ~Hegesippus, quoted in Prolegomena: The Life and Writings of Eusebius of Caesarea: Testimonies of the Ancients Against Eusebius.

"Side by side with the data of the Apostolic faith are fundamentally dissimilar religions and philosophical ideas borrowed from the complex surroundings in which Christianity has been living its life, and a union is effected between them by arguments very similar to those in use by Greek sophistry, concealed beneath more or less ingenious formulas, but at bottom empty and deceptive. In this work the influence can be specially traced of the aristocrats of the intellect, the men of letters and the philosophers whom the faith has won over. I must repeat that in adopting Christianity these men have not divested themselves either of the substance or even more particularly of the method and forms of speculation, which they had hitherto used." ~Guignebert, op. cit. p. 181.

The smooth generalization, which so many historians are content to repeat, that Constantine "Embraced the Christian religion," and subsequently granted, "Official toleration," is "Contrary to historical fact," and should be erased from our literature forever. ~Catholic Encyclopedia, Pecci ed, vol. iii, p. 299, passim.

At the Nicene Council a confession of faith was drawn up by unanimous consent, by order of the Emperor, and signed by all the Bishops, at the order of the Emperor [Constantine], and all those who signed the creed, affirmed that Jesus Christ was "Very God of Very God" and "Of one substance with the Father by whom all things were made," were also invited to stay on as Constantine's guests in honor of his twentieth anniversary as Emperor, and for all those who refused to sign the [Nicaean] Creed were threatened by the Emperor with eternal banishment. Obviously, thinking of Arius, they all signed. "Life can be beautiful, profound, and awe-inspiring, even without an irate God threatening us with eternal torment." ~Judith Hayes, In God We Trust: But Which One? Madison, WI: FFRF, 1997. cf. I Timothy 6:10.

Emperor Constantine, alone, determined that the names of two 1st century descendants, Jesu Cunobeline, and Judas Khrestus, be joined as one, Jesu Khrestus, and that would be the official name of the new Roman God. A vote was subsequently taken and it was with a majority show of hands that both men became one God..161 votes to 157.

The great Druid God, Hesus, will now be joined with the Eastern Savior-God, Krishna, of which Krishna is Sanskrit for Christ, and thus Hesus Krishna will now be the official name of the new Roman God, with both Divinities becoming one God. ~Acta Concilii Nicaeni, 1618.

That purely political act of deification effectively and legally placed Hesus and Krishna among the Roman Gods as one individual composite. That abstraction lent Earthly existence to amalgamated doctrines for the Empire's new religion; and because there was no letter "J" in alphabets until around the 9th century, the name subsequently evolved into "Jesus Christ."

Constantine then instructed the obsequious Bishop Eusebius to organize the compilation of a uniform collection of new [fabricated] writings developed from primary aspects of the religious texts as submitted to his council. "I deny that the man [Bishop Eusebius] has yet arrived at an accurate knowledge of the doctrines; wherefore he ought to be given place to so far as regards his great learning, but as regards his knowledge of doctrine he ought not. But, moreover, we know him to have been altogether lacking in such accurate knowledge." ~Antipater, Bishop of Bostra, in his First Book against Eusebius Apology for Origen.

Yet Constantine's instructions are, "Search ye these books, and whatever is good in them, that retain; but whatsoever is evil, that cast away. What is good in one book, unite ye with that, which is good in another book. And whatsoever is thus brought together shall be called 'The Book of Books.' And it shall be the doctrine of my people, which I will recommend unto all nations, that there shall be no more war for religions' sake." ~God's Book of Eskru, op. cit., chapter xlviii, paragraph 31.

Christian are called, "People of the One Book," which is dangerous, because it keeps them in eternal darkness [ignorance], "Beware of the man of One Book." ~Saint Thomas Aquinas.

With the world's greatest story writers present, "Make them to astonish," said Emperor Constantine, and "The books were written accordingly." ~Eusebius, Life of Constantine, vol. iv, pp. 36-39.

Eusebius then amalgamated the numerous "Legendary tales of all the religious doctrines of the world together as one," using the widely available Greek and Pagan God-myths from the presbyters' manuscripts as his models, thus, merging the supernatural "God" stories of Mithra, and Krishna with the British Culdean beliefs, thus effectively joining the orations of Eastern and Western presbyters together "To form a new Universal belief," one God out of many, one Universal faith, one belief out of many, one conviction, which all must accept. ~Eusebius, Life of Constantine, vol. iv, pp. 36-39.

Constantine believed that the amalgamated collection of myths would unite variant and opposing religious factions under one representative [fictitious] story, and he was right. Today, millions of Christians still believe these fantastic tales or lore created for their benefit.

However, Eusebius of Nicomedia, Maris of Chalcedon and Theognis of Nicaea soon after wards now regretted having put their signatures to the Nicene formula, as they so stated in a letter to Constantine written by Eusebius of Nicomedia: "We committed an impious act, O Prince, by subscribing to a blasphemy from fear of you." ~Ian Wilson, Jesus the Evidence, New York: Harper and Row, 1984, p. 168.

Without fear there can be no religion, Dionysius of Halicarnassus states that, "And in order that the people might have no timorous scruple, as having neglected their ancestral sacrifices, he taught the inhabitants to appease the wrath of the God, by substituting for the men whom they used to cast into the stream of the Tiber bound hand and foot, images made like men and arrayed in the same manner as the former, and to throw them into the river in order that the foreboding, whatever there was of it remaining in the souls of all, might be removed as the likenesses of their old suffering were still preserved. And this the Romans continued to do even to my time, a little after the spring equinox, on the so-called Ides in the month of May, meaning this day to be the division of the month, on which day, after sacrificing the customary victims, the so-called Pontifices, the most distinguished of the priests, and with them the Virgins who guard the undying fire, and the Praetors, and those of the other citizens who have the right to be present at the sacred services, throw from the sacred bridge into the stream of the Tiber images fashioned in human forms, which they call Argēi." ~Eusebius of Caesarea: Præparatio Evangelica [Preparation for the Gospel], Tr., E.H. Gifford, 1903.

AD 325-In AD 325, the Council of Nice [Nicaea] is still dependent upon the Jewish calendar, Jewish holidays, Jewish rituals, and Jewish history. Constantine realized the confused system of fragmented Christian dogmas, and saw the opportunity to create a new and combined State religion, which would be neutral in concept, and protected by Imperial Law. After he conquered the East in 324 C.E., he sent his Spanish religious adviser, Osius of Córdoba, to Alexandria with several letters to a number of Bishops, exhorting them to make peace among themselves.

However, the mission failed, and Constantine, perhaps at the suggestion of Osius, then issued a decree commanding all of the recalcitrant presbyters, and their subordinates, “Be mounted on asses, mules and horses belonging to the public [as a sign of humiliation], and travel to the City of Nicaea” in the Roman province of Bithynia in Asia Minor. The Bishops were instructed to bring with them their sacred and holy manuscripts, the testimonies they orated to the rabble, “Bound in leather” for protection during the long journey, and to surrender them to Constantine upon arrival in Nicaea. Later, the sacred writings not accepted would be ordered destroyed. ~The Catholic Dictionary, Addis and Arnold, 1917, Council of Nicaea, entry.

It's hard to imagine that, these writings totaled, “In all, two thousand two hundred and thirty-one scrolls and legendary tales of Gods and Saviors, together with a record of the doctrines orated by them.” ~Eusebius, Life of Constantine, op. cit., vol. ii, p. 73; Nicene and Post-Nicene Fathers, op. cit., vol. i, p. 518.

Because of his Sun worshiping beliefs, Constantine instructed Eusebius to convene the first of three Bishopric sittings on the summer solstice, 21 June 325 C.E. ~Catholic Encyclopedia, New Edition, vol. i, p. 792.

Before the Council of Nicaea, Constantine set unambiguous and political precedent. He arranged for the execution of leading priests at a number of ancient Pagan temples, and for the destruction of other shrines of worship.

AD 325- At Nicaea Constantine burned the written petitions of attendees whom he had supremely summoned, in their presence. After Nicaea he legislated for the destruction by fire of the writings of the famous Hellenic academic and philosopher Porphyry, for the destruction by fire of the writings of the Hellenic philosopher and logician Arius of Alexandria, and for the death by beheading of anyone caught concealing said writings.

Constantine declared that, “Socrates' critical questioning... Was a menace to the state,” and Constantine declared that, “Pythagoras had stolen his teaching from Egypt.” He declared that, “Plato believed there were many Gods... and strived for the unknowable.” Constantine declared that poets “Wrote falsely about the Gods” and were worse than philosophers. “In a few broad sweeps, Constantine had dammed the free use of reason and banished poetic imagination.” ~P.R.F. Brown, quoted in Constantine Invented Christianity: A thesis in the field of Ancient History.

From many Gods, the Christians must choose the One True God, “To this Simon replied, 'From the words of your master I shall refute you, because even he introduces to all men a certain God who was known. For although both Adam knew the God who was his creator, and the maker of the world; and Enoch knew him, inasmuch as he was translated by him; and Noah, since he was ordered by him to construct the ark; and although Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, and Moses, and all, even every people and all nations, know the maker of the world, and confess him to be a God, yet your Jesus, who appeared long after the patriarchs, says, 'No one knows the Son, but the Father; neither knoweth any one the Father, but the Son, and he to whom the Son has been pleased to reveal Him. Thus, therefore, even your Jesus confesses that there is another God, incomprehensible and unknown to all.'” ~The Recognitions of Clement, 2.47. Simon's Cavil [frivolous objections].

Creative history is no good, unless it is oft quoted, which makes it palatable to the masses, hence accepted as truth. Constantine then declared that a dove, such as that, which had served Noah, had alighted upon the Virgin Mary. He then declared that an ancient Sibyl, a priestess from Erythrae who had served Apollo at the 'Serpents Tripod' at Delphi had prophesied the birth of Jesus in the 1st century B.C.E. Constantine then quotes [in the Greek] thirty-four hexameters, from his 'Inspired Truth' of the Greek Sibyl.

And most notably in Christian chronicles we have the acrostic formed by the first Greek letter of each line, which spelled, “Jesus Christ, Son of God, Savior, Cross,” but the clever inventiveness of a military mind had already, in advance, completely out-manoeuvring the anti-Christian arguments of academic skeptical inquiry, “They suspect that 'Someone of our religion, not without the gifts of the prophetic muse, had inserted false lines and forged the Sibyl's moral tone. These skeptics were already known to Origen.'” ~Ibid. The Emperor is on record, in his Oration to the Saints, for absolute fraudulent misrepresentation of the ancient patristic literature, and Antioch is simply the microcosm of the macrocosm.

Many Christian commentators highlight the fact that one sentence of the Oration trod unwarily on Arius' ground, which opinion of Arius needs to be perceived in a new ancient historical light.

An Imperial law of 333 C.E., commanded the state officials to enforce the decisions of the Christian Bishops, a Bishop's testimony should be considered sufficient by all judges and no witness was to be summoned after a Bishop had testified. These concessions were so far-reaching that the Church itself felt the great increase of its jurisdiction as a constraint.

Later Roman Emperors would limit this jurisdiction to cases of voluntary submission by both parties to the Episcopal Court. The new Christian Church will receive financial benefits, that is regular payments from state funds and Sunday is declared as a Day of Rest [the new Sabbath], which for the non-Christians is seen as the feast of the Sun God [Sol Invictus].

Constantine and his family gave great sums of money so that new Christian Churches and basilicas might be built throughout the pagan Empire. Constantine also donated his own palace on the Lateran to the Church and built a great basilica nearby [San Giovanni in Laterano]. The extent of Constantine's secular bequest to the Christian Church formed much of the basis for the Pope's later claim to secular power and rule during the middle ages and renaissance [The falsified Donation of Constantine].

After years of research, I finally discovered that tiny morsel of evidence, which contradicts the Christian's often cited pseudo-fact, that Constantine [Constantine, the King to the Bishops and nations everywhere] did not order the burning of Christian manuscripts. In a Letter of Constantine, following one of his Councils [and also contrary to what the Christian ministry likes to say of Constantine never having destroyed any religious writings], we have a pompous Emperor declaring death to those who refuse to heed his will, "Constantine the King to the Bishops and nations everywhere. Inasmuch as Arius imitates the evil and the wicked, it is right that, like them, he should be rebuked and rejected. As therefore Porphyry, who was an enemy of the fear of God, and wrote wicked and unlawful writings against the religion of Christians, found the reward, which befitted him, that he might be a reproach to all generations after, because he fully and insatiably used base fame; so that on this account his writings were righteously destroyed; thus also now it seems good that Arius and the holders of his opinion should all be called Porphyrians, that he may be named by the name of those whose evil ways he imitates: And not only this, but also that all the writings of Arius, wherever they be found, shall be delivered to be burned with fire, in order that not only his wicked and 'Evil Doctrine' may be destroyed, but also that the memory of himself and of his doctrine may be blotted out, that there may not by any means remain to him remembrance in the world. Now this also I ordain, that if any one shall be found secreting any writing composed by Arius, and shall not forthwith deliver up and burn it with fire, his punishment shall be death; for as soon as he is caught in this he shall suffer capital punishment by beheading without delay." ~Socrates, Scholasticus' Ecclesiastical History, 1.9. A translation of a Syriac translation of this, written in 501 C.E., is in B. H. Cowper's, Syriac Miscellanies, Extracts From The Syriac Ms. No. 14528, in The British Museum, Lond. 1861, p. 6-7.

The Christian clergy brags about how the Inspired Bishops voted unanimously in support of Jesus being God, Jesus, the Savior of mankind, Jesus, the essence of his Father, but, "In every city," writes one historian, "Bishop was contending against Bishop, and the people were contending against one another, like swarms of gnats fighting in the air." ... "In former times, the Church was attacked by enemies and strangers from without. Today those who are natives of the same country, who dwell under one roof and sit down at table together, fight with their tongues as if with spears." ~What exactly happened at the famous Council of Nicea, when the Roman Emperor convened some 250 quarreling Christian Bishops? by Robert Payne.

Roman Emperor Constantine convenes the council to consolidate the various Christian factions and to sever all Jewish ties. Christian groups such as the Ebionites [the Poor Ones], that insist upon circumcision, and other aspects of Jewish law, are increasingly disparaged as Judaizers, especially after the 3rd century. It appears that the earlier version of Matthew's Gospel differed seriously from the one now in use by the Christian churches, "Their [Ebionite] own version of Matthew, however, may have been a translation of the text into Aramaic. Jesus himself spoke Aramaic in Palestine, as did His earliest followers. It would make sense that a group of Jewish followers of Jesus that originated in Palestine would continue to cite His words, and stories about him, in his native tongue. It appears likely that this Aramaic Matthew was somewhat different from the Matthew now in the [Christian] canon. In particular, the Matthew used by Ebionite Christians would have lacked the first two chapters, which narrate Jesus' birth to a virgin, a notion that the Ebionite Christians rejected. There were doubtless other differences from our own version of Matthew's Gospel as well.” ~Lost Christianities by Bart Ehrman, 2003.

AD 325- The Date of the Birth and Death of Jesus as December 25 is said to be due to a mistaken calculation based on the Roman Calendar by Dionysius Exiguus in 525 C.E., it was long held that Jesus was born in the year 1 B.C.E., making the following year, AD 1, the first throughout, which he was alive. Many chronologists today conclude that the year 6 B.C.E., is the most likely year of Jesus' birth.

“They too accept the Matthew's Gospel, and like the followers of Cerinthus and Merinthus, they use it alone. They call it the Gospel of the Hebrews, for in truth Matthew alone in the New Testament expounded and declared the Gospel in Hebrew using Hebrew script.” ~Epiphanius, Panarion, 30.3.7.

- † To separate the Christian Jews from the Jewish community, “All the brethren in the East who have hitherto followed the Jewish practice will henceforth observe the custom of the Romans and of yourselves and of all of us who from ancient times have kept Easter together with you.”
- † Conversations and fellowships with Jews is now strictly forbidden to the new Christian clergy by the Council of Nicaea, which is also on the verge of declaring that the denial of Jesus is a sin and soon to be, a crime.
- † Beginning of state sanctioned terrorism. The Council of Nicaea resolves to separate the Christian celebration of Easter from the Jewish Passover, and states, “Let us have nothing in common with this odious people...”

In his writing, Ephraem refers to God's punishment for the Jews. - † The Catholic Encyclopedia admits Easter is identical to the Jewish passover; “In fact, the Jewish feast was taken over into the Christian Easter celebration.” ~Catholic Encyclopedia, Vol. 5, p. 225.
- † The name Easter, according to the Venerable Bede, “Relates to Eostre, a Teutonic goddess of the rising light of day and spring.” ~Catholic Encyclopedia, Vol. V, p. 224.
- † But Easter is heralded by an even more pagan origin than Judaism, with its festivals of “New moons;” its Pagan solar character is shown by the time of its celebration, “Easter was celebrated in Rome and Alexandria on the first Sunday after the first full moon after the Spring Equinox. ... Already in the 3rd century 25 March, was considered the day of the crucifixion.” ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 5, p. 225.

The Kingdom of Aksum, which is now modern Ethiopia, declares Christianity as the official state Religion, becoming the second country to do so.

You can't say they didn't tell you, “A great number of Pagan customs, celebrating the return of spring, gravitated to Easter.” ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 5, p. 227.

AD 325- It is fascinating that the first ten Bishops of the Jerusalem Church [Church of James, brother of Jesus, known as the Jerusalem Church] are all circumcised Jews, keeping Jewish dietary laws, Jewish liturgy, Jewish Sabbaths, Jewish festivals, and Jewish atonements. “Christian initiative was such that it did not hesitate to appropriate Jewish goods also. Pseudo-Philo's 'Liber Antiquitatum Biblicarum' was originally a Jewish handbook of Biblical history. It seems to have been written in Hebrew for Jews in the 1st century A.D., it was later done into Greek, and, to all appearances, in, the 4th century, it was changed into a Christian handbook and translated into Latin.” ~Amaldo Momigliano, 1908-1987, Pagan and Christian Historiography in the Fourth Century A.D., 1960.

Nowhere in the Old or New Testament is it written that anyone should rest on the first day of the week, Sunday. As a matter of fact, a non-Jew is not commanded to rest on any day of the week.

The commandment to rest on the Sabbath, the seventh day of the week, is given by God to the Jewish people.

“The Gnostics claimed to have an intuitive understanding of the Mysteries of God and Earth. It was an understanding that resulted from rigorous training, initiation, and intuitive experiences, not simply intellectual study. The [Roman Catholic] Church found Gnostics particularly dangerous, for they disdained the need for a hierarchy of priestly officials to interpret the word of God. Far from dangerous heretics, these passive Christians claimed to be the keepers of secret knowledge as indicated by the Gnostic papyrus books discovered at Nag Hammadi in 1945. It was this discovery, which first afforded any view of Gnosticism other than the damning rhetoric of the Church... Gnostics seek to know the 'Secrets' of God, looking for answers within the sacred texts of whatever religion they accept. They seek the understanding of existence through interpretation of what they perceive as deeper meaning within the symbology of religious literature... Gnosticism flourished until declared a heresy by a council of Bishops of the Roman church in A.D. 325. Gnosticism was an integral part of the Ancient Mysteries since both involved the belief that only personal inner enlightenment could bring understanding." ~Jim Marrs, Rule by Secrecy, pgs. 346-7.

"Wherefore the children of Israel shall keep the Sabbath, to observe the Sabbath throughout their generations, for a perpetual covenant. It is a sign between Me and the children of Israel forever."

A non-Jew is bound by the covenant that God made with Noah; "While the earth remaineth, seedtime and harvest, and cold and heat, and summer and winter, and day and night shall not cease." ~Genesis 8:22. Seedtime and harvest shall not cease. God did not command a day of rest for the Noachides, non-Jews. Therefore a Noachide can not stop working on the Sabbath or on any other day, thinking he is doing that because God commanded it to him. What did Jesus, who was a Jew, do in this respect? Luke 4:16: "And as his custom was, he went to the Synagogue on the Sabbath day."

The various Christian sects differed in both philosophical beliefs as well as religious dogma. They did, however, have one thing in common, a determination to espouse their beliefs and an abstemious and intolerant minded ascetic determination to force their tenets upon the world as a universalized adaptation of Pagan beliefs.

Constantine wanted a unifying religion, "There is plenty of other evidence, however, that the internal conversion of the Roman Empire to the Christian religion had effected no visible improvement in the common morals. The world was worse, rather than better. Out of its besetting temptations men fled to save their souls. They fled from the world, which in the 1st century was believed by the Christians to be doomed and liable to be destroyed by Divine fire before the end of the year... They fled also from the Church, which they accused of secularity and hypocrisy. Many of the monks were laymen who in deep disgust had forsaken the services and sacraments. They said their own prayers and sought God in their own way, asking no aid from the priests. They were men who had resolved never to go to church again." ~Hodges.

"It is manifest that a dogma so mysterious presupposes a Divine Revelation." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 9,

But that "Divine Revelation" was let into the consecrated clerical mind only through the efficacious grace of clubs, stones and knives, by force of fraud and devilry, as thus witnessed, "The great definition of the Homousion, promulgated at Nicaea in 325, so far from putting an end to further scussion, became rather the occasion of keener debate and for still more distressing confusion of statement in the formulation of theories on the relationship of Our Lord to His Father."

Christian Emperors of Rome formally decree that Christians converting to Judaism, and Jews obstructing the conversion of their fellow Jews to Christianity, will incur the death penalty; Jews cannot marry Christians, or hold public office, or own Christian slaves.

"At Ariminum for the West, and at Seleucia for the East, in 359. At both Councils, as the result of dishonest intrigue and an unscrupulous use of intimidation, ... the Homousion was given up and the Son was declared to be merely similar to no longer identical in substance with the Father. Saint Jerome's characterization of the issue still affords the best commentary: 'The whole world groaned in wonderment to find itself Arian'" ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 1, 79.

"The accession of Constantine found the African Church rent by controversies and heresies: Catholics and Donatists contended not only in a wordy warfare, but also in a violent and sanguinary way. ... repression, an ever-growing discontent, and an enmity that became more and more embittered. ... One act of violence followed another and begot new conflicts... Even in such condition of peril -- [the bitter reprisals of the Arian Vandals, which filled the 5th century], the Christians of Africa were far from showing those virtues, which might be looked for in a time of persecution ... Crimes of all kinds made Africa one of the most wretched provinces in the world." ~Forgery in Christianity by Joseph Wheless.

Saint Jerome, Saint Augustine, and Clement, etc. thought that since the persecutions had stopped, and they were now worshipping in large buildings, with decorative gold, silver, and jewels, that the Millennium had come.

The competency in religious matters by the Council is not to be challenged under threat of severe penalties, and the superstitions, fallacious thinking regarding Scripture, science, and anything else the Church cares to entertain, as being within their domain of authority, is accepted by this Council, and not to be questioned because it now has the supreme backing of the Emperor. This passive acquiescence is indicative of the thinking of many third world Christian nations today, teaching their submissive members not to challenge authority.

The priesthood feeds upon the ignorance of the masses. "When the people failed to worship one of these Gods, or failed to feed and clothe his priests, he generally visited them with pestilence and famine. Sometimes he allowed some other nation to drag them into slavery; to sell their wives and children; but generally he glutted his vengeance by murdering their firstborn. The priests always did their whole duty, not only in predicting these calamities, but in proving, when they did happen, that they were brought upon the people because they had not given quite enough to them." ~Robert G. Ingersoll, The Gods, 1872.

If the Church challenges the authority of third world dictatorial, totalitarian, or corrupt governments it stands to lose the support of that country and hence suffer significantly in revenue sharing. If the Church does nothing it will be seen as a participant or supporter of graft and corruption in that country. The Church cannot walk the fence, supporting the poor people on one hand, and supporting corrupt government on the other. Emperor Constantine, a Pagan, who believes in Solar Henotheism, believes his God [God of his Father] has chosen him to over-see the gathering of the Christian Bishops.

"Others say, It is wicked if we do not worship those idols, which have come down to us from our fathers, and prove false to the religion bequeathed to us by our ancestors. On this principle, if any one's father was a robber or a base fellow, he ought not to change the manner of life handed down to him by his fathers, nor to be recalled from his father's errors to a better way; and it is reckoned impious if one do not sin with his parents, or does not persist in impiety with them." ~The Recognitions of Clement, About the Recognitions and Homilies. 5.30, Religion of Fathers to Be Abandoned.

God of my Father, "Sol Invictus is the 'God' of his [Emperor Constantine, the Sun worshipping Pagan] 'Father,' which means the personal God of his family. For it had been a familiar Christian symbol prior to his conversion." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 8, pg 718.

In actuality, it was not the cross of Christianity, but that of a cross with the 'Sun' super-imposed upon the cross, representing the 'God of his Father,' 'Sol Invictus,' which is the 'Sun' emblazoned upon a cross designating the 'Sun God' and mistaken for the cross of Jesus.

The new Christian theologians in their quest for unification of thought in the new religion of Christianity endeavor to reach a consensus that will please the majority. The sixty-eighth Psalm is indubitably a song to the 'Sun God!' It opens with the invocation, 'Let God arise,' literally meaning, "Let the Mighty One arise," and bids all inferior creatures to "Cast up a highway for him that rideth through the heavens by his name, Yah." The frequent references to 'Sun Gods' under various names in the Bible has long been disguised by the Roman Church and their English versions.

Constantine died in 337 C.E., and the by-product of his numerous now-called Pagan beliefs into one new religious system, no doubt, brought many converts. Later Church writers made him "The great champion of Christianity," which he gave, "Legal status as the religion of the Roman Empire." ~Encyclopedia of the Roman Empire, Matthew Bunson, Facts on File, New York, 1994, p. 86.

It was "Self-interest" that led Constantine to create Christianity. ~A Smaller Classical Dictionary, J. M. Dent, London, 1910, p. 161.

Yet it wasn't called "Christianity" until the 15th century. ~How The Great Pan Died, Professor Edmond S. Bordeaux [Vatican archivist], Mille Meditations, USA, MCMLXVIII, pp. 45-7.

"Once the arguments for and against an auto-Christonous Sun Cult in Rome have been weighed, it can only be concluded that the Romans worshiped and prayed to 'Sol' as one of their 'Di Indigites' [(provisional) local Gods]... There is no difficulty in placing the worship of the Sun God in the earliest times, when it slowly took on a natural pattern and form determined by observation of the solar cycle... This was certainly the case for most of the groups that inhabited the Italian peninsula. Although it is the sun chariot and the solar disc that are most often found on rocks and in caves, the first traces of an anthropomorphic representation of the Sun Deity have also been found there... When mention is made of Sol Indiges [provisional local Sun God], therefore, a Sun God is meant who was worshipped in Rome as early as the 4th century B.C.E." ~from: The Cult of Sol Invictus, Gaston H. Halsberghe, Brill, 1972.

"... I am inclined to see the influence of Constantine; the worship of the 'Unconquered Sun' of Paganism may have formed for many the bridge by which they passed into the Christian Church: this would help to explain the Christian 'Worship of the Sun' in Egypt, and the Christian worship of the sun in Rome against which Eusebius of Alexandria ..." ~Raleigh Lecture on History: Constantine The Great and the Christian Church, Norman H. Baynes, Read March 12, 1930, "Milford [1930?]" ["5th or 6th century?" (Encyc. Rel., Ethics)] and Pope Saint Leo the Great [d. 461] protest ed.

"In spite of the reticence of the Gospels on the Ascension, literal belief in it soon led to the making of innumerable [evidence?] pictures of Christ ascending into the skies either in an aureole or in a fiery chariot of evident solar ancestry." ~from: Man and The Sun, Jacquetta Hawkes [1910 -], Cresset, 1962.

AD325-Emperor Constantine is one who claims "Divine Authority" over the affairs of the Church and the Church acquiescing and subordinating its rights to a Pagan Emperor. Emperor Constantine liked this new Christian religion in that their beliefs teach followers to "Turn the other cheek," be "Meek and mild," etc., which he believes is good for his kingdom and his reign.

"It is reported by the Pagans that Emperor Constantine, after slaying some of his nearest relations, and particularly after assenting to the murder of his own son Crispus, repented of the evil deeds, and inquired of Sopater, the philosopher, [not the Roman Church] concerning the means of purification from guilt. The philosopher, so the story goes, replied that such moral defilement could admit of no purification, The Emperor was grieved at this repulse; but happening to meet some Bishops who told him that he would be cleansed from sin, on repentance and on Baptism, he was delighted with their representations, and admired their Doctrines, and became a Christian, and led his subjects to the same faith. It appears to me that this story was the invention of persons who desired to vilify the Christian religion... It cannot be imagined the philosopher was ignorant that Hercules obtained purification at Athens by the celebration of the mysteries of Ceres after the murder of his children, and of Iphitus, his guest and friend. That the Greeks held that purification from guilt of this nature could be obtained, is obvious from the instance I have just alleged, and he is a false calumniator who represents that Sopater taught the contrary... For he was at that period esteemed the most learned man in Greece." ~Sozomen, i, 5; ii, 242-3.

The Roman Church claims the Emperor as one of their own [Christian] although other historical documents show the opposite, while other historians claim the Emperor was Baptized upon his death bed which means he lived a Pagan life.

"After his adoption of Christianity the Emperor Constantine ordered the building of the new basilica of Saint Peter's on the Vatican Hill [using many of the stones from the Roman Coliseum], a plan which involved covering over a cemetery part Pagan and part Christian. When in the 1950's excavations were made below the cathedral in the hope of finding the tomb of Saint Peter, this necropolis was found and in it the earliest known Christian mosaic. It showed 'Christ as Sun God' driving a chariot with flying cloak and a rayed nimbus behind his head." ~from: Man and The Sun, Jacquetta Hawkes [1910 -], Cresset, 1962. [found c. 1993]. [a.Must. See book!] [note no references or bibliography. Appendices]. [204].

It is said that the rebuff of Sopater denying Pagan absolution to the Emperor, was the motive of his murder by the Christianized Constantine. However, Constantine cautiously denied himself the saving Christian rite of Baptism until he was on his deathbed, in Nicomedia, in the year of his forgiving Lord 337 AD. ~Eusebius, Life, iv, 62; Soc., i, 39; Soz., ii, 34; Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 1, 709.

The Emperor remained until death, the Pagan, 'Pontifex Maximus,' [Priest of Priests/Bishop of Bishops] or 'Sovereign Pontiff' of the Pagan 'Sun Worshipping' religion, a title which the Christian Bishops could not arrogate [claim or sieze without justification] until the Christian Emperors abandoned it, and as Pontifex Maximus he ordered the auspices or divination by inspection of the entrails of birds, and on his death,

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

profusely Baptized with blood and by the deathbed heretic Christian rite, Constantine was apotheosized according to Pagan custom and raised... as a 'God to Heaven,' along with his Christian Sainted Mother, Saint Helena.

Emperor Constantine went without the sacrament of reconciliation straight to Hell and everlasting torment; not for his crimes but for his errant creed, as a disbeliever in the 'Divinity of Jesus Christ' and in the Catholic 'Holy Trinity,' which had not been yet invented.

The title 'Adonai,' is the Phoenician name for the 'Sun God,' and is translated by the Church Fathers as, "The Lord," but, when it is met with in conjunction with 'Yahuh' or 'Elghiin,' it is translated, "The Lord God." Psalm 110:1 should read, "Yahuh said to Adonai," or "To our Adonis," "Sit at my right hand." The popular deity of Thebes, Egypt, Amen- Ra, is met with in the Psalms as "Ammon, the Hidden Sun." He is one with Adonai; with "The Stygian Jupiter" when he descended to the lowest point of his annual declination in December; with the Olympian Zeus, rising to his highest point of ascension in June; and with the Jupiter Ammon, worshipped as the hidden or occult God, and reappearing in the sign 'Aries.' ~See Isaiah 45:15.

The Latin monks, in addition to using the now Christianized word "Amen," added more functional terms such as "Explicuit," "The End," or "Explicuit feliciter," which is "Thank goodness it's finished!" Expressions of relief.

The name "Ammon," in Isaiah 45:16, is twice erroneously rendered as "The God of Truth," instead of "The God Ammon." This deity is also alluded to in Psalms 10:1, where "Lord" should read, "Yahuh," and again in Psalms 89:46, "Yahuh, how long wilt thou hide thyself?" and verse 52, "Blessed be Yahuh for ever more [who is] Ammon, even Ammon."

The Egyptian name Ammon, in its shortened form of "Amen," found its way into the Greek language, and is used in the sense of 'Truly,' but in the Apocalypse the word is written with, "Ho," prefixed, where it is rendered, "The Amen," being a senseless expression. In Revelation 3:4 it should read, "These things, saith Ammon, the true and faithful witness." ~From the works of M. D. Aletheia, Author of A Rationalist Catechism, and The Agnostic's Primer.

Another name for the 'Hebrew Sun God' is 'Shaddai,' sometimes conjoined with the prefix 'El,' or 'Bel,' the Babylonian Sun God, and 'Baal,' the Syrian Sun God. 'Yahuh,' or 'Yahweh,' is usually written 'Jehovah,' which does not convey any concept of the true Hebrew pronunciation of "Yahouyeh."

The name is pronounced by the Semites generally, by whom 'Yahuh' was worshipped, as 'Yahuh,' 'Yahu,' or 'Yho.' In the reign of the Assyrian King Sargon II, the throne of Hamath was occupied by 'Yahou-behdi,' which literally means the "Servant of Yahuh." The Phoenicians venerated this deity also, for in the inscriptions of "Assur-bani-pal," another Assyrian King, we read that the name of the then crown-prince of "Tyrenus Yahu-melek," meaning, "Yahuh is my King."

On a coin from Gaza of the 4th century B.C.E., is a figure of a deity in a chariot of fire, over whose head is written 'Yho' in old Phoenician characters. But 'Yahuh' held only a subordinate position in the general mythology of the Semites, and he only owes his notoriety to the fact that he was chosen as the patron deity of the 'Beni-Israel.'

The word 'Ashera' or 'Asherah' is now admitted in the preface to the Revised Bible to be "Uniformly and wrongly rendered grove" in the authorized version. In order, most likely, to conceal the fact that the gross character of the thing signified, 'The Ashera' was an upright stone, and was undoubtedly a Phallic symbol. To the Emperor Constantine, the new religion [Christianity], is merely a useful and inexpensive tool to be used for the good of his kingdom for the subjugation of the masses by way of a religious philosophy versus a monarchical military order [It's good for peace and order. This train of thought will be carried on into the Middle Ages by other European Monarchies who seek to expand their realms by using Friars and other religious groups to convert the masses to Christianity and declare their lands conquered].

In France, it is the clergy who form, "A wealthy body of men, gradually extending their possessions throughout the kingdom" during the Middle Ages. ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 1, 795.

"In 1384 almost a third of the land in the kingdom of Bohemia belonged to the [Catholic] Church." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 2, 613.

In 12th century Germany, "The difficulty of administering the vast landed possessions caused the abbots to grant certain sections in fief." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 6, 314.

Emperor Constantine will order all Goddess temples destroyed and forbids the worship of Mary, mother of Jesus. "The Melchite section," the representatives of the Christianity of Egypt, "Held that there were three persons in the Trinity--the Father, the Virgin Mary, and Messiah their Son."

Many Christians wonder as to what Mary might have looked like, "Per Epiphanius, an early Christian: Mary had brown eyes and dark eyebrows, with an oval face visage. Her skin color-complexion resembled wheat. She wore linen or wool clothes, weather determinative, with wooden, or leather sandals, or even bare feet bare. A veil covered her hair, such as in Iraq these days. Traveling into the streets, she wore an over robe or sometimes a heavier gown. Early Byzantine, Orthodox, and Latin Rite Christian art, including Byzantine, shows Mary in paintings or the Madonna such as those from the Saint Luke, the Apostle. It is said in tradition that Luke once painted her atop a wood table, as well as the Disciple carved small statues of her." ~<http://www.angelfire.com/realm/blackcatholic/JamesWeslySmith.html>, Apostle Do's Roxas Press/JamesWeslySmith 1997-2007.

AD 325-The Nicene Council will now tend to glorify Mary. "Thus, the controversy opened a question which it did not settle. It discovered a new sphere, if we may so speak, in the realms of light, to which the Church had not yet assigned its inhabitant. Thus, there was a wonder in Heaven; a throne was seen far above all created powers, mediatorial, intercessory, a title archetypal, a crown bright as the morning star, a glory issuing from the eternal throne, robes pure as the Heavens, and a sceptre over all. And who was the predestined heir of that majesty? Who was that wisdom, and what was her name, the mother of fair love, and fear, and holy hope, exalted like a palm-tree in Engaddi, and a rose-plant in Jericho, created from the beginning before the world, in God's counsels, and in Jerusalem was her power? The vision is found in the Apocalypse 'A Woman clothed with the Sun, and the moon under her feet, and upon her head a crown of twelve stars... The votaries of Mary, do not exceed the true faith, unless the blasphemers of her Son came up to it. The Church of Rome is not idolatrous, unless Arianism is orthodoxy.'" ~Father Newman.

The Divinity of the Christian Christ is now made to stand, or fall with the Divinity of His mother. "To the Virgin Goddess of Loretto, the Italian race, devoted to her Divinity, have dedicated this temple." ~Inscribed in a small Catholic church in Lisbon.

The Goddess once worshipped in Babylon and Egypt as the 'Tabernacle' or 'Habitation of God,' is identical with the new Christianized heroine, who, under the name of Mary, is called by Rome, "The House Consecrated to God," "The Awful Dwelling-Place," "The Mansion of God," the "Tabernacle of the Holy Ghost," and the "Temple of the Trinity."

"Know ye not that ye are the temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you?" ~Saint Paul in 1 Corinthians 3:16.

Jesus till this time had not been venerated as highly as the Magi or Mary, but the population refuses to worship Jesus without Mary, so in the 6th century Mary is permitted, a halo in religious art and in the 9th century is finally declared "Queen of Heaven," adopting the Babylonian interpretation of their virginal goddess. In May of the year AD-325 the Council of Nicaea [Nice] to bring a unification of doctrine to this new faith of Christian Jews also decides to use the Greek version of Jehoshua ben Joseph, 'Jesus,' instead of the Jewish given name for their Savior.

The greatest assemblage of Bishops ever gathered together at one time and yet, little is known of what they discussed, what documents were presented before the council in support of the various conflicting beliefs, and how they reached their consensus. We do know one important item. From this Council Christians will acquire the Holy Trinity [Tritheism?] It will also mark the beginning of the schism between Western and Eastern thinking regarding the interpretations of Scripture.

This illustrious council gathers ancient documents from all over the known world dealing with the teachings of Christ and the Old Testament for review. Specific details regarding the selection of books accepted to form the New Testament were allegedly resolved by 'Divine Intervention.' [A word you will come across quite often in history, alleging that God had a hand in the decision making process]. Yet, very few documents are available or have been brought forward to record this fact. Pagan individualism will be conquered by Christian theological domination.

Constantine's version of the Gospels, the New Testimonies were expanded upon as "Interpolations" were then added and other writings included. ~Catholic Encyclopedia, Farley ed, vol. vi, pp. 135-137; also, Peccied, vol. ii, pgs. 121-122. teachings of Jesus, being the 'Son of God,' and the 'Spiritual Essence,' it is decided [by the Church Fathers] that Jesus must be all in one; God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Spirit [Holy Ghost]. This is an acceptance of Tertullian thinking, which I find difficult if not impossible to accept. Ask your good parish priest to translate, "Di citur et vivens alio sub corpore sexus, Mirifice solito dis pungere sanguine menses." ~Tertullian.

When presented with this new doctrine, Emperor Constantine accepts the decision and any thinking contrary to this line of schooling from this point forward will not be tolerated. Anything and everything contradicting the accepted position of the Emperor, is thereby ordered to be destroyed.

This priestly group will invent a whole new vocabulary and include new terminology in an attempt to force this newly created religion and its newly declared doctrines upon the masses. The use of religion to control people as well as a means to increase the Church treasuries will be the main reason clergy are dispatched along with the military in future expeditions of world conquest by the Church.

The Christian Church will give its all-encompassing permission to the kings and queens to take any land that is not Christian, and the Church now continues upon its historical reconstruction, with the approval of the Emperor that will remove all traces of written works and artifacts contrary to its proclaimed position. Many of the early writings of Appolonius of Tyana are subverted to serve the Church.

Monarchs throughout Europe will begin to construct small rooms called "Cabinets" in which to enjoy their arts such as painting, old Bibles, sculptures, and amulets that the Church deems sacrilegious or heretical. The Church would collect old Bibles and sell the owners new Bibles.

The Bibles could not be changed and declared Scripture if the older versions were still in circulation [hence the need for the secret chambers to conceal and preserve the family Bibles]. Controversy regarding what is or is not Scriptural today dates back to the burning and destruction of ancient texts, scrolls, books, and manuscripts by the Church. Religious leaders are all too aware of the history of the Scriptures in their unsuccessful attempt to keep hidden their true secret meanings.

The Pagan Emperor Constantine made Christianity the official religion of the Roman Empire and other Hellenistic beliefs [Greek thinking] are suppressed for their heathen associations, but many of the forbidden manuscripts are saved by dissident Christians, called Nestorians, who take them to Persia about 400 CE. They reluctantly acquiesce to the new regime and its self proclaimed leader, the Emperor, and the Jews are reviled because they refuse to engage in Emperor worship.

It is also alleged that these manuscripts are the ire of the Popes and eventually one of the causes for the Crusades [being the attempted obliteration of the Jews].

AD 325-787- The First Ecumenical Council is held in Nikaia, called by Emperor Constantine to resolve the dispute of an Alexandrian priest, Arius, and his Bishop, on the nature of the Divinity of Christ; Arianism is the belief that Christ was a created being [material being] and thus not fully Divine; therefore Jesus is not yet considered a God by many Christians. But this belief will have negative ramifications by the ruling junta of Bishops who will chastise and banish the wayward thinkers. Constantius [Emperor Constantine's son], will support Arius and the government and does not renounce this heresy until 381 C.E. The Arian controversy arose in opposition to the fraudulent historical claims of numerous Christians who were rewriting history.

The Bishops adopt the Greek word 'Homoousion,' for the substance of the Father, and then debate its interpretation, "Of the Objection and Defense of Eusebius two books have been read, also other two, which although differing in some respects from the former two, are in other respects the same with regard to both diction and thought. But he presents certain difficulties with regard to our blameless religion as having originated with the Greeks [the adoption of the Greek Homoousion]. These he correctly solves, although not in all cases. But as regards his diction, it is by no means either pleasing or brilliant. The man is indeed very learned, although as regards shrewdness of mind and firmness of character, as well as accuracy in doctrine, he is deficient. For also in many places in these books it is plain to be seen that he blasphemes against the Son, calling him a second cause, and general-in-chief, and other terms which have had their origin in the Arian madness. It seems that he flourished in the time of Constantine the Great. He was also an ardent admirer of the excellences of the Holy martyr Pamphilus, for which cause some say that he took from him the surname Pamphili." ~Prolegomena: The Life and Writings of Eusebius of Caesarea: Testimonies of the Ancients Against Eusebius, Photius, in his Bibliotheca, chap. 13.

The poor masses eagerly accepted the profound leadership of the early Church Fathers, never contesting them, because they were acknowledged as being educated, “They were made up mostly of the poor and obscure, who were drawn to embrace the Gospel by an inward need, and whose low position in the social scale was a standing ground of reproach against the new religion from the side of its adversaries. Moved thus by spiritual hunger, and by no motive of self-interest, they laid hold of the priceless boon offered them in the Gospel with all sincerity and earnestness.” ~Fisher, The Beginnings of Christianity, 576-7.

Jesus, as God, did not exist before 325 C.E., “There was time when He was not [He did not exist before Constantine]; Before He was born He was not [Jesus is a fabrication], He was made out of nothing existing [He is a fiction]; He is/was from another subsistence/substance [He is fictitious]; He is subject to alteration or change [His fictions are alterable]. Based on his intelligence, Constantine had personally summoned key attendees selected from the newly subjugated Eastern Empire, to Nicaea [325 C.E.].” ~P.R.F. Brown, Constantine Invented Christianity: A thesis in the field of Ancient History.

An Oath was taken around to each of the attendees by Constantine's legal notaries, led by Philumenus, the “Master of Offices.” The attendees had essentially two choices; either you can agree with Arius, taking your life in your hands, or agree with the Emperor, and live to disagree another day. The signatures of all attendees were thus given under military duress.

The Oath of the attendees of the Nicene Council was binding them to Supreme Imperial Power, and this arrangement was personally chosen by Emperor Constantine. The Oath contained not only the disclaimer clause consistent of the words of Arius, but also an appended list of twenty-two administrative formalities to be associated with the newly accepted [tainted] Roman Church hierarchy.

Jesus, the Prophet, is made a God. In the year 325 C.E., is perpetrated one of the most colossal frauds and deceptions in the annals of history and mankind. This is the date of the Council of Nicaea, whose primary task it is to create a new religion, one that will be acceptable to the sun worshiping totalitarian Emperor Constantine, who, at the time, is engaged in the bloody persecution of those communists and pacifists of ancient times who are known as early Christians. ~Apollonius the Nazarene: The Historical Apollonius Versus The Mythical Jesus By Dr. R. W. Bernard, B.A., M.A., Ph.D. 1964.

The Christianized Roman Emperor now has a duty to suppress schism and heresy, and forced Christian conversions will use Luke as their authoritative source. ~Luke 14:23.

“And the Master said to the slave, 'Go out into the roads and the fenced-in places, and compel them to come in, that my house may be filled.”

And, with these words of Luke 14:23, one day the Church of Christ will justify sending its murderous band of Crusaders throughout the lands to force the masses to bow down to her will.

Seven Ecumenical Councils are convened during this period of time [Ecumenical-the Inhabited World.] Many Scriptural manuscripts are either deleted or rejected during this period. It is not a matter of Scriptural relevance or by any purpose or design that many books are declared either heretical or non-Scriptural other than political motivations, petty jealousies, bigotry, and persecution.

Churchmen during this era are of a diffuse nature hoping to instill their version of Biblical expression and later forcing us to accept their decisions as Divinely Inspired or in conclusion, to prevent further dissention, it is further declared that their final decision to omit other Sacred Documents is of Origin Divine [Inspired by God].

“Aware that the old religion of Rome was in a state of advanced decay and was daily losing its hold on the people, while the persecuted cult of the Essenes, or early Christians, in spite of all the efforts to suppress it through the most bloody and inhuman means, continued to thrive and win the increasing respect of the masses, the Church Fathers, themselves previously Pagans whose hands were stained with the blood of those from whom they stole their religion, saw that by adopting Christianity [in a revised form] they could take advantage of the popular prestige created by the martyrdom of the early Christian saints and at the same time win the support of Constantine who, in being converted to the Christian faith, could cover up his own past crimes, gain increased public favor and extend and consolidate his Empire.” ~Apollonius the Nazarene: The Historical Apollonius Versus The Mythical Jesus By Dr. R. W. Bernard, B.A., M.A., Ph.D. 1964.

Again, one cannot argue with something being of ‘Divine Origin.’ It is during this early period that the

To Pope Pius XII, “I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians.” ~Mahatma Gandhi

Bishops addressed "Corporeal sin" with the following passage, "But if with the passage of time some sin of sensuality is discovered with regard to the person and he is convicted by two or three witnesses, such a one will be suspended from the clergy. If anyone contravenes these regulations, he will be liable to forfeit his clerical status for acting in defiance of this great synod." ~Catholic Encyclopedia.

Furthermore, "This great synod absolutely forbids a bishop, presbyter, deacon or any of the clergy to keep a woman who has been brought in to live with him, with the exception of course of his mother or sister or aunt, or of any person who is above suspicion." ~Catholic Encyclopedia.

Concubines, consorts, and female companionship will be the subject of discussion for centuries to come, and the Church's inability to take a definite stand and/or enforce its own rulings will eventually lead to the separation of various factions within the Church, later to be known as the Protestant Movement. There appears to be a clear separation now between the Pauline followers and those of Peter.

If Paul did not honor the Gods of old, Christianity would have no history. Paul, who never met Jesus; who never once uses Jesus' blessed name; who never once uses Jesus' sayings; who never once mentions Yeshua Mashiyach in his plagiarized writings; actually quotes directly from the ancient Pagan Greek and Indian writings; from Arastus, 300 B.C.E.; Epimenides, 600 B.C.E.; Menander, 350 B.C.E.; Hippolytus, 430 B.C.E.; Terence, 200 B.C.E.; Pagans who were extolling their idol 'Zeus,' God of Gods, and Pauleven quotes from the Buddhist Scriptures, 500-250 B.C.E.:

- ✠ From Arastus, "We [Christians] are his [Zeus] offspring." ~Acts 17:28.
- ✠ Paul quotes from Epimenides "God [Zeus] is not far from each one of us for in him we live and move and have our being." ~Acts 17:27-28.
- ✠ From Epimenides, "Cretans are always liars, evil brutes lazy gluttons." ~Titus 1:12.
- ✠ From Menander, "Bad company corrupts good character." ~1 Corinthians 15:33.
- ✠ From Hippolytus, "The good that I would I do not, but the evil, which I would not do, that I do." ~Romans 7:19.
- ✠ From Terence, "But if any widow has children or nephews, let them learn first to show piety at home." ~1 Timothy 5:4.
- ✠ From Mahaparinibanasuta Buddhist Scriptures, "Work out your own Salvation with fear and trembling." ~Philippians 2:12.

"Concerning the former Paulinists who seek refuge in the Catholic Church, it is determined that they must be re-baptized unconditionally. Those who in the past have been enrolled among the clergy, if they appear to be blameless and irreproachable, are to be re-baptized and ordained by the Bishop of the Catholic Church. First of all the affair of the impiety and lawlessness of Arius and his followers was discussed in the presence of the most pious emperor Constantine. It was unanimously agreed that anathemas should be pronounced against his impious opinion and his blasphemous terms and expressions, which he has blasphemously applied to the Son of God, saying, 'He is from things that are not,' and 'Before he was begotten he was not,' and 'There once was when he was not,' saying too that by his own power the Son of God is capable of evil and goodness, and calling him a creature and a work."

Against all this, the Holy Synod pronounces anathemas, and did not allow this impious and abandoned opinion and those blasphemous words even to be heard. Of that man and the fate, which befell him, you have doubtless heard or will hear, lest we should seem to trample upon one who has already received a fitting reward because of his sin. Such indeed was the power of his impiety that Theonas of Marmarica and Secundus of Ptolemais shared in the consequences, for they too suffered the same fate. What happens to all the documents and manuscripts submitted to the Council, which are not accepted or recorded?

Once more, we can only speculate that these precious historical documents not concealed and secreted away were most likely destroyed. The Church is already in progress of condemning those who disagree with its religious stands. Apostolic Succession, also known as the Donation of Constantine, [the Pope] is declared as being a direct successor to Saint Peter and as head of the Church Bishops has full authority to rule over its congregation. An 8th century discovery alleged to be instructions from Emperor Constantine, that the Church has secular powers because Saint Peter passed it on to the Bishop of Rome [the document has been declared a forgery].

The 'Donation of Constantine,' by which the Popes claim the Emperor Constantine has bequeathed nearly the whole of Italy to the Papacy, is an embarrassing document to mention, especially when the Catholic

Encyclopedia acknowledges that it was a forgery, yet the Columbia Encyclopedia sashays gracefully obscures this issue, much more easily than its Catholic colleague, by stating that it was “Never of great practical value.”

Note: Philostratus' biography of Apollonius of Tyana is not permitted to be published in Europe until the year 1501. Blount's notes on this book raised such an outcry that in 1693, the book was condemned by the Universal Roman Catholic Church and its further publication forbidden. Concerning the effects of Blount's translation, Campbell, in his “Apollonius of Tyana,” then writes, “Fierce passions were let loose. Sermons, pamphlets and volumes descended upon the presumptuous Blount like fireballs and hailstones and his adversaries did not rest until the authorities had forbidden him to print the remaining six books of his translation.”

AD 325-For those die-hard Christians that still believe in Biblical inerrancy, “Some are not aware that, after the Council of Nicaea, A.D. 325, the manuscripts of the New Testament were considerably tampered with. Prof. Nestle, in his 'Introduction to the Textual Criticism of the Greek Testament,' tells us that certain scholars, called 'Correctores,' were appointed by the Ecclesiastical authorities, and actually commissioned to correct the text of the Scripture in the interest of what was considered orthodoxy.” ~Archdeacon Wilberforce. The teachings of Apollonius of Tyana are reverberated in, “What these 'Correctores' did was to cut out of the Gospels with minute care, certain teachings of our Lord, which they did not propose to follow, namely, those against the eating of flesh and taking of strong drink, and everything, which might serve as an argument against flesh-eating, such as the accounts of our Lord's interference on several occasions, to save animals from ill-treatment.” ~Rev. G. J. Ouseley in Gospel of the Holy Twelve.

By a series of small steps a complex weave is created of historical Biblical fantasy, woven as the Church Fathers willingly admit, “I will only mention the Apostle Paul... He, then, if anyone, ought to be calumniated; we should speak thus to him, 'The proofs, which you have used against the Jews and against other heretics bear a different meaning in their own contexts to that, which they bear in your Epistles. We see passages taken captive by your pen and pressed into service to win you a victory, which in volumes from which they are taken have no controversial bearing at all... The line so often adopted by strong men in controversy, of justifying the means by the result.” ~Saint Jerome, Epistle to Pammachus, xlviii, 13; Nicene and Post-Nicene Fathers, Book vi, pgs. 72-73.

Was Saint Paul an unabashed liar? From this verse in Romans it would appear so, “For if the truth of God hath more abounded by my lie unto his glory, why yet am I also adjudged a sinner?” ~Saint Paul, Romans 3.7. Furthermore, there is also evidence to indicate that not only were the original doctrines of early Essene Christianity drastically changed at the Council of Nicaea and replaced by others entirely different beliefs, but that the man whose very life is an embodiment of the original doctrines is likewise replaced by another man who now exemplifies the new doctrines.

The very first act of the Church Fathers, after they create their new religion and its new Messiah, neither of which existed previously, is to order the burning of all books they could lay their hands on [by Saint Athanasius], which are deemed contradictory, especially those written during the first few centuries, and which also make no mention of Jesus and which refer to Apollonius as the spiritual leader of the 1st Century, realizing as they did so that such books, if not destroyed, could constitute a dangerous menace to the survival of their faith and deception.

History shows how the famous Alexandrian Library, in Egypt, with its 400,000 volumes, is burned to the ground by edict of Theodosius, and when a Christian mob additionally destroys the Serapeum where the ancient sacred scrolls and manuscripts are kept. This destructive act of is carried out in the year 389 C.E. [or 64 years following the Council of Nicaea].

Miraculously, among the works, which are saved from the flames of the burning of the Alexandrian Library, the one which has created the most widespread and long-continued argument is the The Life of Apollonius of Tyana, written by Flavius Philostratus at the beginning of the 3rd Century regarding a religious man of the 1st century, with no mention whatsoever of any Jesus, Christ, Savior, Messiah, or Virgin birth. One Christian writer, lettering on The Apollonius of Philostratus, calls Philostratus' biography a “Pagan counterblast to the Gospel of Galilee, representing a Greek Savior as an alternative to the Semitic one.” ~W. B. Wallace, Westminster Review, July-Dec. 1902.

While other Christian apologists have asserted that Apollonius is not born until the 4th century, which is incorrect, since we have knowledge of his travels from other sources of the 1st and 2nd century. Lampridius, who lived in the 3rd Century, informs us that the Emperor Alexander Severus, 222-235 C.E., placed a beautiful statue of Apollonius in his labarium side by side with one of Orpheus.

To Pope Pius XII, “I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians.” ~Mahatma Gandhi

While other Roman Emperors, Vespasian, Titus, and Nerva, were all, prior to their elevation to the throne, also friends and admirers of Apollonius, while Emperors Nero and Domitian regarded the philosopher with apprehension.

Apollonius is held in esteem, from temples whose long-disused rite he restores, from traditions, from epistles of Apollonius addressed to kings, and sophists, and from his letters, of which the Emperor Hadrian makes a collection, which he deposits in his palace at Antium. "Thankful Tyana, like ungrateful Nazareth, had nursed a Prophet of blameless life, of miraculous power, of super-abundant loving-kindness, and of heroic virtue. Both Apollonius of Tyana and Jesus of Nazareth were born in the same lustrum, if not the same year." ~Apollonius the Nazarene: The Historical Apollonius Versus The Mythical Jesus By Dr. R. W. Bernard, B.A., M.A., Ph.D. 1964. Cf. Acts 11:19; 24:5.

"As the existence of the Christians became more widely known, it became increasingly clear that they were (a) anti-social, in that they did not participate in the normal social life of their communities; (b) sacrilegious, in that they refused to worship the Gods; and (c) dangerous, in that the Gods did not take kindly to communities that harbored those who failed to offer them cult. By the end of the 2nd century, the Christian apologist [literally, 'Defender' of the Faith], Tertullian could complain about the widespread perception that Christians were the source of all disasters brought against the human race by the Gods. They think the Christians the cause of every public disaster, of every affliction with which the people are visited. If the Tiber rises as high as the city walls, if the Nile does not send its waters up over the fields, if the Heavens give no rain, if there is an earthquake, if there is famine or pestilence, straightway the cry is, 'Away with the Christians to the lion!'" ~Apology 40; Bart D. Ehrman, A Brief Introduction to the New Testament, Oxford University Press, 2004. ISBN 9780195369342, pp. 313-314.

"Orthodox Christians had been accustomed to affirm boldly the finality of Mary's son, but like a bolt from the blue, here was Philostratus opposing himself to Matthew, Mark, Luke and John and offering an alternative Messiah." ~Apollonius the Nazarene: The Historical Apollonius Versus The Mythical Jesus By Dr. R. W. Bernard, B.A., M.A., Ph.D. 1964. Cf. Acts 11:19; 24:5.

Where are all the authors of Jesus' time, where are the comments from other sources regarding this man called Jesus, which the Bible states was well known? So well known that the Romans had to pay a traitor in silver to show him where he was and then identify him when they got there. Why do the Jewish chief priests need Judas to identify Jesus in order to arrest Jesus, who, according to the Gospels enthralled the multitudes with his miracles? This makes absolutely no sense, since many of their number had debated him in person, and his face, after a triumphal entry and a violent tirade in the temple square, could hardly have been more public. ~Review of The Homeric Epics and the Gospel of Mark by Dennis R. MacDonald; Yale University, 2000, by Richard Carrier.

"Author after author, volume after volume, of the life of Christ may appear until the archives of the universe are filled, and yet all we have of the life of Jesus is to be found in Matthew's Gospel. Not a single person specially associated with Jesus impinges history." ~Tschendorf.

It looks as if there was an earlier, original, work called Matthew's Gospel, which was written in ancient Hebrew, and not Koine Greek, because many early Church Fathers speak of it; Papias, 150-170 C.E., Bishop Irenaeus, 170 C.E., Origen, 210 C.E., Bishop Eusebius, 315 C.E., Epiphanius, in 370 C.E., and Saint Jerome, in 382 C.E. It would have been a collection of sayings similar to "Q."

These Jewish-Christians, "Did not call themselves Christians but Nazarenes," They are basically complete Jews. "They use not only the New Testament but the Old Testament as well, as the Jews do ... They have no different ideas, but confess everything exactly as the Law proclaims it and in the Jewish fashion, except for their belief in the Christ, if you please! For they acknowledge both the Resurrection of the dead and the Divine Creation of all things, and declare that God is one, and that His son is Jesus Christ. They are trained to a nicety in Hebrew. For among them the entire Law, the Prophets, and the... Writings... Are read in Hebrew, as they surely are by the Jews. They are different from the Jews, and different from Christians, only in the following. They disagree with Jews because they have come to faith in Christ, but since they are still fettered by the Law—circumcision, the Sabbath, and the rest—they are not in accord with Christians ... They are nothing but Jews... ” ~Epiphanius, Panarion.

“We have investigated the claims of every document possessing a plausible claim to be investigated, which history has preserved of the transactions of the 1st Century and not so much as a single passage, purporting to have been written at any time within the first hundred years, can be produced to show the existence of such a man as Jesus Christ, or of such a set of men as could be accounted to be his disciples.” ~Taylor, Diegesis, 1829, Oaknam, England.

“On the other hand we have abundant proof that Jesus Christ is founded on the known Life of Apollonius of Tyana, the earthly existence of whom has never been questioned, to which is added passages from the lives of various personages and teachings concerning the mythical Gods of other lands. The Prometheus of the Greeks was the character, which suggested the crucifixion [also the crucifixion of Krishna in Kristosite traditions]. The Eleusinian Mysteries suggested that the 'Last Supper,' And these together with doctrines of ancient sun worship, were gathered and represented to be a history of the events connected with the life of the Christian Jesus. Prometheus on the crag, suffering for the good of mankind, suggests Jesus on the cross, changing Prometheus for Jesus and the Scythian crag for the cross.” ~J. M. Roberts, Antiquity Unveiled, 1892, Oriental Publishing Co., Philadelphia.

Many Christians believe that one cannot attain Grace unless one suffers, “For to you it has been granted on behalf of Christ, not only to believe in Him, but also to suffer for His sake, having the same conflict which you saw in me and now hear is in me” ~Philippians 1:29-30.

AD 325-In all their revised Gospels, forged documents, historicized fictions, Christians cannot even get their dates consolidated enough to decide on what fictionalized data to present, In the first chapter of Matthew the genealogy of Jesus is given as the twenty-eighth generation from David down through Jesus' earthly father, Joseph, to Christ, the Savior, but, in the third chapter of Luke the same genealogy is given as being the forty-third generation from Christ through Joseph to David.

The only passage referring to Jesus, from the 1st century is a Christian forged one, which historians now recognize as being a 5th to 8th century falsification. The fact that no one wrote about Jesus is not remedied by the Christians until the late 5th or early 6th century when words are inserted into the works of Flavius Josephus, but historians had already been reading his writings for five hundred years and yet none of them ever mention Josephus and Jesus together until almost six hundred years later, suddenly, a Christian miracle, “There is not a word or, better, there is no longer a word in the works of Flavius Josephus [1st century writer] about the Messiah, the Christ crucified by Pontius Pilate, except for a crude interpolation, quite obviously false... The silence of Josephus is not due to disdain or studied neutrality.” ~Dr. Edmond B. Szekely, Origin of Christianity.

Seeking a substitute for the vegetarian Apollonius, who would not be accepted by meat eating partying Greeks, the early Church Fathers seized upon Jehoshua; and changed his name to that of the Druid Sun God “Hesus” and then shifted the date of His birth forward a century, thereby transforming him into Jesus, the Savior, King of Kings, Son of the Sun. ~see Romans 14:1.

Romans will not accept the New Faith, if they cannot enjoy their wines, and meats, therefore, “Probably the most interesting of the changes from the familiar New Testament accounts of Jesus comes in the Gospel of the Ebionites description of John the Baptist, who, evidently, like his successor Jesus, maintained a strictly vegetarian cuisine.” ~Bart D. Ehrman, 2003, Lost Christianities: The Battles for Scripture and the Faiths We Never Knew, Oxford University Press, pp. 102-103.

Jesus says, “Behold these poor innocent beasts of thy earth, they harm not themselves, nor man, nor any other creature. Yea, they eat the green vegetation of the field, sinless and without blood guilt they have remained since their creation. Faithful and obedient they remain to their masters in hope that humane feelings be their reward in life, but instead they receive every hurt and death at man's hand.”

Apollonius, 1st century, prophet, miracle worker, and evangelist, at the age of twelve studied at Tarsus, which was Paul's city, and also one of three basic centers of Hellenic culture.

Most of the early Christian followers were vegetarians, “Judas, called Maccabaeus, however, with about nine others, withdrew into the wilderness and lived like wild animals in the hills with his companions, eating nothing but wild plants to avoid contacting defilement.” ~II Maccabees 5:27.

To Pope Pius XII, “I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians.” ~Mahatma Gandhi

Adam and Eve were Commanded by God to eat “Fruits, grains, and herbs” after they were created on the 6th day. ~Genesis 1:29-30.

Not until after the Great Flood is man permitted a flesh diet, but with restrictions. ~Genesis 9:3-5.

When God restricted Israel's diet to “Manna” they “Lusted” for meat, and God sent them quail, which they consumed so much of, many died. ~Numbers 11:34.

Daniel and his companions were specially blessed with superior knowledge when they refused meat from the king's table, and chose to eat “Pulse,” [vegetables]. ~Daniel 1:8-20.

“The ‘Gospel of the Ebionites,’ as quoted by the 4th century writer Epiphanius. The Greek word for locusts [akris] is very similar to the Greek word for ‘Honey cake’ [ekris] that is used for the ‘Manna,’ that the Israelites ate in the desert in the days of Moses [in Exodus 16:32], and, ‘There is an old Russian [Slavic] version of Josephus’ Antiquities, that describes John the Baptizer as living on ‘Roots and fruits of the tree’ and insists that he never touches bread, even at Passover.” ~Tabor, Jesus Dynasty, p.334, note 9, 2006.

“John [unlike Jesus] was both a ‘Rechabite,’ or ‘Nazarite,’ and vegetarian,’ ... ‘One suggestion is that John ate ‘Carobs’ [aka Saint John's Bread]; there have been others. Epiphanius, in preserving what he calls The Ebionite Gospel,’ rails against the passage there claiming that John ate ‘Wild Honey,’ and ‘Manna-like vegetarian cakes dipped in oil...’ John would have been one of those wilderness-dwelling, vegetable-eating persons, ‘They [the Nazirini] ate nothing but wild fruit milk and honey, probably the same food that John the Baptist also ate.’ ‘We have already seen how in some traditions ‘Carobs’ were said to have been the true composition of John's food.’ ‘His [John's] diet was stems, roots and fruits. Like James [the Just], and the other Nazirites/Rechabites, he is presented as a vegetarian...” ~Eisenman, 1997, passim.

Referring to Epiphanius' quotation from the Gospel of the Ebionites in Panarion 30.13, “And his food, it says, was wild honey whose taste was of manna, as cake in oil.” ~Bart D. Ehrman, 2003, Lost Scriptures: Books that Did Not Make It into the New Testament, Oxford University Press, p. 13.

“As to these translators it should be stated that Symmachus was an Ebionite. But the ‘Heresy of the Ebionites,’ as it is called, asserts that Christ was the son of Joseph and Mary, considering him a mere man, and insists strongly on keeping the Law in a Jewish manner, as we have seen already in this history. ‘Commentaries of Symmachus’ are still extant in which he appears to support this heresy by attacking the Gospel of Matthew. Origen states that he obtained these and other commentaries of Symmachus on the Scriptures from a certain Juliana, who, he says, received the books by inheritance from Symmachus himself.” ~Saint Jerome, De Viris Illustribus, chapter 54, Church History, VI, 17; Symmachus, Hypomnemata, as mentioned by Eusebius, Historia Ecclesiae, VI, xvii.

AD 325-Early Christian were vegetarians with a disdain for the eating of meat and even the Temple slaughter of animals, preferring the ideals of the pre-Flood diet and what they took to be the original ideal of Christian worship. ~Genesis 9:1-5; Jeremiah 7:21-22; Isaiah 11:9; 66:1-4.

In The Gospel of Jesus we have Jesus looking upon a man with hunting dogs, which presents a sad countenance and Jesus says, “Thou truly lacketh wisdom and love from above, for lo, every creature, which God hath made, hath its own end and purpose in the Kingdom of Life, and who can say what good is there in it? Or what profit to thyself, or mankind? For it is not thy part to judge the weak as inferior to the strong, for the weak were not delivered unto man as food or for sport. But as for man's living, I tell ye, behold the fields yielding their daily increase, and the fruit-bearing trees, and the herbs; what needest thou more than these which honest work of thy own hands will not give to thee? For I say unto ye this day, before men and angels, Woe to the strong who misuse their strength! Woe to the crafty who hurt and destroy the creatures of God! Yea, woe to the hunters, for they will be hunted, and with what mercy they shew unto their innocent prey, the same will they receive at the hands of unworthy men! Leave off from this foul work of evil men, work what is good in the eyes of the Lord and be blessed, lest ye be cursed on thy own account.” ~The Essene Humane Gospel of Jesus, Translated From The Original Hebrew And Aramaic Texts, Typesetting by: Followers of the Essene Way [FE.W.]

The Gentiles were supposed to abstain from meats sacrificed to idols, from fornication, from eating the meat of strangled animals, and from blood. These were the four proscriptions. ~Leviticus 17-18.

Jesus condemns all blood sacrifices, “Woe to such blasphemers who reject the Holy Law of the sacredness of all life! Woe to such blind guides with hearts of stone, who use their eyes to lust after things they need not nor are lawful unto them! For they transgress the Law of Moses to maketh themselves fat on the flesh and blood of innocent victims, that God Commanded them not even since the beginning! Woe be unto this very temple built by human hands, for the Temple made without hands is here in their midst, but they see or hear not! For I come to end all sacrifice and bloodshed and tell ye, if ye cease not offering and eating of flesh and blood, the wrath of God shall not cease from you, even as it came to your fathers in the wilderness, who under Moses lusted for flesh, which they ate to their fullness, and were filled with rottenness, and the plague consumed them according to their evil desires.” ~The Essene Humane Gospel of Jesus, Translated From The Original Hebrew And Aramaic Texts, Typesetting by: Followers of the Essene Way [F.E.W.]

“This further explains why Helena, the mother of Constantine, within three hundred years after the death of Jesus, was unable to find in all of Jewry any man who had even heard of him. According to the story, she finally came upon one aged man who claimed to have heard that Jesus had lived.” ~Ibid

Although Christians think they know approximately the path taken by Jesus on his way to the cross [the Via Dolorosa, the Way of Pain], they do not know exactly where each specific event [called stations] of that infamous walk took place. But, the Empress, Helena, Emperor Constantine's mother, miraculously, shows them the precise spots, which she indicates have now become accepted by Christian tradition. It is probable that she not only showed them where the known events took place; she may have incorporated some new events as well, thus creating a fictitious number named the fourteen Stations of the Cross.

Queen Helena discovers the stump of the tree, which allegedly provided the wood for Jesus' cross, she allegedly found the wood itself three hundred years after the death of Jesus, she discovers the very spot where Jesus' miracle of fish and bread took place, and she determines the place where Jesus stood when he gave his celebrated Sermon on the Mount.

The formidable Queen Helena even marks the spot where Mary was told that she would give birth to Jesus [an event called the Annunciation], she designates, which room was Joseph's carpentry shop, she points to the spot where Jesus was born, the field where the shepherds saw the Star of Bethlehem, and the very inn where the Good Samaritan took care of the beaten man.

Also, miraculously, Helena is said to have discovered the foreskin of the baby Jesus, milk from the virgin mary [This is surely a miracle], the sword that pierced the side of Jesus when he hung on the cross, and many other sacred Christian items. Helena has a glorious church built on the very spot where Jesus is said to have been crucified and buried [the first of the Holy Sepulcher churches], indicates where Mary went into an eternal sleep, indicated to where Judas kissed Jesus thus identifying him to the Romans who did not know what he looked like, although the Christian Bible, by this time, states that he had performed miracles before a multitude of people, spotted the room where Jesus turned water into wine at Kafir Kana, and even identified the spot where Jesus was baptized by John the Baptist.

Many of the sites, which Queen Helena pointed out, were already considered holy shrines commemorating specific events in Jesus' life. Helena's personal guided tour lent an enormous amount of legitimacy to the original Christian traditions; no one will argue with the mother of the Emperor of Rome, and thanks to Constantine's mother, the Christian tradition today has as many holy sites and shrines in Israel as do the Jews and Muslims combined. Judea will become the Holy Land for Christians, and hundreds of thousands will make pilgrimages to these holy sites. Instead of being just a small outlying province of the declining Roman Empire, Judea now becomes a Christian center. ~Adapted from: The Early Church and the Beginnings of Anti-Semitism by Rabbi Lipman.

Is it no wonder that historians claim, “The world has the incontrovertible testimony that Christianity is of spurious origin and the most consummate piece of plagiarism in human history.” ~J. M. Roberts, Antiquity Unveiled.

More Christian lies, “Take as examples, the shameful birth of Jesus from a woman, His being circumcised like the Jews, His offering sacrifice like the Gentiles, His being baptized in a humiliating manner, His being led about by the Devil in the wilderness, and His being tempted by him in the most distressing way. With these exceptions, besides whatever has been inserted under the pretense of being a quotation from the Old Testament, we believe the whole, especially the Mystic nailing to the cross, emblematic of the wounds of the soul in its passion; as also the sound moral precepts of Jesus, and His parables, and the whole of His immortal discourse, which sets forth especially the distinction of the two natures, and therefore must undoubtedly be His. There is, then, no reason for your thinking it obligatory in me to believe all the contents of the Gospels; for you, as has been proved, take so daintily a sip from the Old Testament, that you hardly, so to speak, wet your lips with it.” ~Contra Faustus Manicheus.

What of the Biblical Jesus Said? “Many things have been inserted by our ancestors in the speeches of our Lord which, though put forth under his name, agree not with his faith; especially since, as already it has been often proved these things were written not by Christ, nor [by] his Apostles, but a long while after their assumption, by I know not what sort of half Jews, not even agreeing with themselves, who made up their tale out of reports and opinions merely, and yet, fathering the whole upon the names of the apostles of the Lord or on those who were supposed to follow the Apostles, they maliciously pretended that they had written their lies and conceits according to them.” ~Eustus, 5th century Bishop.

“Philostratus seems to have made it his chief aim to deprecate both the Christian faith and Christian doctrine, both of which were progressing wonderfully at that time, by the exhibition on the opposite side of that shallow representation of a miraculous science, Holiness and virtue. He invented a character in imitation of Christ, and introduced almost all the incidents in the life of Jesus Christ into the history of Apollonius, in order that the Pagans might have no cause to envy the Christians, by doing which he inadvertently enhanced the Glory of Christ, for by falsely attributing to another the real character of the Savior, he gave to the latter the praise which is His just due, and indirectly held Him up as the admiration and praise of others.” ~Bishop of Avranches, writing in the 17th Century.

Forgeries continue as Pope Adrian, 772-795, in whose court the ‘Donation of Constantine’ is forged, expressly reminds the illiterate Christian Emperor Charlemagne has four successive wives and five mistresses [or concubines]. His abounding vitality made him extremely sensitive to feminine charms; and his women preferred a share in him to the monopoly of any other man.

His harem bore him some eighteen children, of whom eight were legitimate. The Donation of Constantine is the basis of the swollen territorial claims of the Papacy, and this makes it clear that the forged document is shown to the Frank Monarch when he is taken, melodramatically, to the “Tomb of Saint Peter,” to sign the document which, by the way, mysteriously disappeared, in which he awarded nearly the whole of Italy to the Pope.

The Columbia Encyclopedia adds that, “It was not, as is sometimes asserted, Universally accepted in the Middle Ages.” The undisputed fact is that from the date of Charlemagne's award in 774 C.E. to within a few years of the end of the Middle Ages it was universally accepted. ~From The Columbia Encyclopedia's, Crimes Against The Truth, by Joseph McCabe, Haaldeman-Julius Publications, Girard, Kansas.

Dealing with the extraordinary legendary works of the glorified Apostles in diverse countries, Chrysostom writes, “But it is to be feared that not one of them is true, and, in fact, apart from the early chapters of the Acts of the Apostles [which we possess only in the form of a second-hand adaptation of the first edition], there exists no information really worthy of credence about the life and work of the immediate Apostles of Jesus ... Their immediate and direct influence upon the history of Christianity is practically negligible.”

Saint Augustine complains vehemently, “It is possible to enumerate those who have translated the Scriptures from Hebrew into Greek, but not those who have translated them into Latin. In sooth, in the early days of the faith whoso possessed a Greek manuscript and thought he had some knowledge of both tongues was daring enough to undertake a translation.” ~De Doct. Christ. II, xi; Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 9, pg 20.

The Donation of Constantine, the blatant forgery by which the Popes claimed that the Emperor Constantine had bequeathed nearly the whole of Italy to the Papacy, may seem an awkward document to mention when even the Catholic Encyclopedia acknowledges that it was a blatant forgery. But the Columbia Encyclopedia glides gracefully over this issue, much more easily than its Catholic colleague. It seems that it was “Never of great practical value.” The Columbia Encyclopedia adds that, “It was not, as is sometimes asserted, universally accepted in the Middle Ages.”

After his death, Emperor Constantine is deified by the Roman Senate, and his sons had commemorative coins struck in his name in the time-honored style, “A coin ... [had] on one side a figure of our Blessed Prince, with head closely veiled; the reverse showed him sitting as a charioteer drawn by four horses, with a hand stretched downward from above to receive him up to Heaven.” ~Bishop Eusebius, 4.37.

“Not long after, the Emperor Constantius, who through his entire life was most kindly and favorably disposed toward his [Christian] subjects, and most friendly to the Divine Word, ended his life in the common course of nature, and left his own son, Constantine, as Emperor and Augustus in his stead. He was the first that was ranked by them among the Gods, and received after death every honor, which one could pay to an Emperor.” ~Prolegomena: The Life and Writings of Eusebius of Caesarea: Testimonies of the Ancients Against Eusebius, Chapter XIII, The Bishops of the Church that Evinced by Their Blood the Genuineness of the Religion Which They Preached.

That Saint Peter gave the sacred Keys to Heaven to the Pope is another religious ploy. About 378, the Pope, Saint Damasus, alleges that he fell heir to the keys that were the symbols of two well-known Pagan divinities at Rome. Janus bore a key, and Cybele bore a key; and these are the two keys that the Pope emblazons on his arms as the ensigns of his spiritual authority. “For, though you think Heaven is still shut, remember that the Lord left to Peter and through him to the Church, the keys of it.” ~Tertullian, 211 C.E., Scopiacae, vol. X; Ante-Nicene Fathers, vol. iii, pg. 643. cf. Matthew 16:16-20, 17:19.

The Pope felt, that if he could only get it believed among the Christians that Peter alone had the Power of the Keys, and that he was Peter's successor, then the sight of these keys would maintain the delusion, that the Pope, as Vicar of Christ, had the powers bestowed upon him by Peter via Jesus, and on this policy it is evident he acted.

The Two Babylons, expounds upon the connection between the Keys of Roman Catholicism and the Keys of Janus and Cybele: “If there be any who imagine that there is some occult and mysterious virtue in an Apostolic Succession that comes through the Papacy, let them seriously consider the real character of the Pope's own orders, and of those of his Bishops and clergy. From the Pope downward, all can be shown to be now radically Babylonian.” ~Rev. Alexander Hislop, The Two Babylons.

By replicating the Pagan beliefs, the Christians, will have a better acceptance by the non Christians who can now easily assimilate the new faith, which differs little from theirs, “Few lies could be more gross; but, in course of time, it came to be widely believed; and now, as the statue of Jupiter is worshiped at Rome as the veritable image of Peter, so the Keys of Janus and Cybele have for ages been devoutly believed to represent the [sacred] keys of the same Apostle. While nothing but judicial infatuation can account for the credulity of the Christians in regarding these keys as emblems of an exclusive power given by Christ to the Pope through Peter, it is not difficult to see how the Pagans would rally round the Pope all the more readily when they heard him found his power on the possession of Peter's Keys.” ~Ibid.

Some time was allowed to pass away, and then, when the secret working of the ‘Mystery of Iniquity’ had prepared the way for it, for the first time did the Pope publicly assert his preeminence, as founded on the keys given to Saint Peter.

Lying by omission: Christian Apologists strongly challenge the fact that Emperor Constantine ordered all religious books not approved by him to be destroyed. Perhaps documentation is not conclusive enough, but we do know that Saint Athanasius, who lived during the same period, ordered that all religious manuscripts not approved by the Universal Roman Catholic Church be destroyed or the owners would be subject to heresy, persecution, banishment, torture, or death.

“Among the other things, which we have ordained for the public advantage and profit, we formerly wished to restore everything to conformity with the ancient laws and public discipline of the Romans, and to provide that the Christians also, who have forsaken the religion of their ancestors, should return to a good disposition. For in some way such arrogance had seized them, and such stupidity had overtaken them, that they did not follow the ancient institutions, which possibly their own ancestors had formerly established, but made for themselves laws according to their own purpose, as each one desired, and observed them, and thus assembled as separate congregations in various places. When we had issued this decree that they should return to the institutions established by the ancients, a great many submitted under danger, but a great many being harassed endured all kinds of death.” ~Prolegomena: The Life and Writings of Eusebius of Caesarea: Testimonies of the Ancients Against Eusebius, Chapter XVII, The Revocation of the Rulers.

In 431 C.E., and not before, did the Pope publicly lay claim to the possession of Peter's so-called Keys to Heaven. Of the forgery of Matthew 16, says Reinach, “Is obviously an interpolation, made at a period when a church, separated from the synagogue, already existed. In the parallel passages in Mark [7:27-32], and in Luke [9:18-22], there is not a word of the Primacy of Peter, a detail, which Mark, the disciple of Peter, could hardly have omitted if he had known of it. The interpolation is posterior to the compilation of Luke's Gospel.” ~Reinach, Orpheus, pp. 224-225.

“The Keys that the Pope bore were the keys of a ‘Peter,’ well known to the Pagans initiated in the ‘Chaldean Mysteries.’ That Peter the Apostle was ever Bishop of Rome has been proved again and again to be an arrant fable. That he ever even set foot in Rome is at the best highly doubtful. His visit to that city rests on no better authority than that of a writer at the end of the 2nd century or beginning of the 3rd viz., the author of the work called 'The Clementines,' who gravely tells us that on the occasion of his visit, finding Simon Magus there, the Apostle challenged him to give proof of his miraculous or magical powers, whereupon the sorcerer flew up into the air, and Peter brought him down in such haste that his leg was broken. All historians of repute have at once rejected this [preposterous] story of the Apostolic encounter with the magician as being destitute of all contemporary evidence; but as the visit of Peter to Rome rests on the same authority, it must stand or fall along with it, or, at least, it must be admitted to be extremely doubtful."

"Because they received not the love of the Truth, that they might be saved... For this cause God shall send them strong delusion, that they should believe a lie." ~2 Thessalonians 2:10-11.

As the statue of Jupiter is worshipped at Rome as the veritable image of Peter, so are the keys of Janus and Cybele, for ages, devoutly believed to represent the keys of the same apostle. The Church Fathers accept only four books and reject fifty other books written not only by the Apostles but also, during the same time period as those accepted. The rationale will become quite clear later on in history.

Christianity preaches that religion is for all and sundry, and professes no secrets, condemning other religions that do, yet maintains a shroud of mystery over its own Messiah. Many of the documents, manuscripts, and ancient scrolls are allegedly written by the apostles themselves.

Saint Matthew is credited with the writing of, "The Gospel of the Birth of Mary" is accepted as authentic and genuine by many of the Christian sects, and is found in the writings of Saint Jerome, who is declared to be a Father of the Church. Epiphanius, Bishop of Salamis, also mentions this Gospel, "Marriage replenishes the earth, virginity fills Paradise," says Saint Jerome. ~Adv. Jovianum, I, 17; N&PNE. vi, 360.

"Oh, threats of Hell and Hopes of Paradise! One thing at least is certain, This life flies; One thing is certain and the rest is lies; The Flower that once has blown forever dies." ~Omar Khayyam, 11th century, The Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam.

Perhaps the rejection by the Roman Church is due to the fact that in this Gospel of Mary, which it is purported that Jesus is not the Son of God until after the Baptism, that the mother of Jesus, Mary, is not of the house of David, but of the tribe of Levi, her father, Joachim being a priest.

This is important in that the Jews are matrilineal and not patrilineal, and after spending hundreds of years tracing Jesus' lineage from his father Joseph, the Church is caught in an embarrassing position of attempting to prove his heritage from Mary, which is solved by declaring that Jesus is God, therefore his birth is the Immaculate Conception. ~Cf. Romans 3:22-24

But, the Church does not recognize Jesus as God until the 4th century, when with a document, it is written, "Brethren, we ought so to think of Jesus Christ as of God... For if we think meanly of him, we shall hope only to receive some small things from him." ~2 Clement.

But, Jesus is not God, the Mother of Jesus is not the Mother of God... And both heresies are condemned at the Council of Ephesus in the 5th century... But there are many Christian denominations today who still do not honor the Mother of God, and some even gossip bad about the Mother of Jesus and even abhor her. ~See Nestorius.

Jesus is not God! "Is it not written in your Law, I said, 'Ye are Gods?' If he called them Gods, unto whom the Word of God came, and the Scripture cannot be broken; 'Say ye of him, whom the Father hath sanctified, and sent into the world, Thou blasphemest; because I said, 'I am the Son of God?'" ~Jesus, John 10:33-36.

"God came from Teman, the Holy One, from Mount Paran. Selah His glory covered the Heavens and his praise filled the earth. His splendor was like the sunrise; rays flashed from his hand, where his power was hidden." ~Habakkuk 3:3-4, cf. Revelation 1:12-18.

Jesus makes it a point that to call himself "God" [=Elohim], which would not be blasphemy since there is a Biblical precedence for it as applied to all the people. Jesus points out that He did not in fact even make that claim, as His accusers maintain, but that He claimed to be the "Son of God."

In making this distinction, Jesus denies the expression "Son of God" refers to Deity. Jesus defines what being the "Son of God" means:

- ✠ Being sanctified by God.
- ✠ Being sent into the world.

Jesus prays that even his followers might also be One, even as "We are." Therefore, if the Oneness of Jesus and the Father implies that Jesus is Divine, it must also imply that in precisely the same way his followers are also Divine.

Instead of Three Persons in the Godhead [Trinity], we are now confronted with millions, or perhaps billions. There are many ways in which to be One; in purpose, in will, in motive, in thought, in action, in many ways, without being One in essence and being. ~see John 17:11, 21-23.

Jesus claimed to be able to forgive sins, which is also true by Jewish law that this prerogative is restricted to God alone. ~Isaiah 43:25.

"The Roman Church has never erred, nor will it err to all eternity. No one may be considered a Catholic Christian who does not agree with the Catholic Church. No book is authoritative unless it has received the Papal Sanction... The Pope is the only person whose feet are to be kissed by all princes... The Pope may depose emperors and absolve subjects from allegiance to an unjust ruler." ~Cited by Robinson, The Ordeal of Civilization, pp. 126, 128; Library of Original Sources, vol. iv, p. 126-321.

If Jesus were the 'Son of God,' would he need to have his sins washed away? Jesus, in the Canonical Gospel is born of her; meaning Mary is not a virgin. Joseph, father of Jesus, born in BC 44, son of Jacob-Heli, born BC 70, and twenty-six when Joseph is born, first to preach the Golden Rule [Matthew 7:12] is a descendent of King David, and an Essene. Joseph becomes a 10th Degree Rabbi in this group while Mary rises to the 3rd Degree [this being the highest level a woman can rise to in the priesthood]. Lent [as a means of fasting to show penitence] is relegated to forty days.

Until this period, it had been thirty-six days [plus or minus a few days depending upon the locale]. In the 2nd century, Saint Irenaeus, AD 177-202, reduces it to a much shorter duration, oftentimes lasting only a day or two. In the 7th century forty days is the accepted norm for fasting [prescribed by either Pope Saint Gregory I or Pope Gregory II].

The Church Fathers fight desperately to make Christmas a Christian celebration. They fight centuries of Paganism and succeed only after centuries of superstition, tyranny, and continued ignorance of the masses. The paganized Romans are converted, but many retain their family gods [a sort of insurance policy] Saturnalian, Isirians, and followers of Sol Invictus [the Sun God] survive.

Even unto the 21st century the Christian ministry continues to deny its Pagan roots, "The ritual development of Christianity advances step by step... It began with very simple practices, all taken from Judaism; Baptism, the breaking of bread, the imposition of hands, prayer and fasting. Then a meaning more and more profound and mysterious was assigned to them. They were amplified, and gestures familiar to the Pagans added... It is sometimes very difficult to tell, exactly from which pagan rite a particular Christian rite is derived, but it remains certain that the spirit of Pagan ritualism became by degrees impressed upon Christianity, to such an extent that at last the whole of it might be found distributed through its ceremonies." ~Hans Conzelman, Ancient, Medieval and Modern Christianity, p. 121.

In their endeavors for world leadership religious Canons are to be drafted by the priesthood and accepted for the followers. No other faith is to be accepted under penalty of being cast out of the Christian 'Heaven.' CANON I-"If anyone saith, that man may be justified before God by his own works, whether done through the teaching of human nature, or that of the law, without the grace of God through Jesus Christ; let him be anathema."

CANON II-"If any one saith, that the grace of God, through Jesus Christ, is given only for this, that man may be able more easily to live justly, and to merit eternal life, as if, by free will without grace, he were able to do both, though hardly indeed and with difficulty; let him be anathema."

CANON X-"If any one saith, that men are just without the justice of Christ, whereby He merited for us to be justified; or that it is by that justice itself that they are formally just; let him be anathema." ~Catholic Encyclopedia.

It is now the Church's position that nothing can happen to mankind without the grace of Jesus the Christ, no one can reach an elevated state of consciousness or of being without Jesus the Christ, and no one can obtain any level of spirituality... of course without the permission and knowledge of the Church, the sole representative and declared inheritor of the words of Jesus the Christ.

Constantine sacks many Pagan temples in Asia Minor and Palestine and orders the execution by crucifixion of "All magicians and soothsayers." Martyrdom of the Neo-Platonist philosopher Sopatrus. ~An Alternate Theory of the History of Christianity Article 60: Summary of events after the Council - Vlasia Rassias Web Publication by Mountain Man Graphics, Australia.

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

AD 326-Queen Helena, mother of Emperor Constantine converts to Catholicism and sets about to find all the historical sites mentioned in the Bible. Her supporters find the place where Jesus died, the exact place where Jesus ascended to Heaven, the site of the birth of Jesus, the foreskin of the circumcised baby Jesus, the site where God spoke to Moses, the cross of Jesus [even the king of the Jews plaque] and her supporters allegedly find anything and everything the Queen is looking for.

Constantine, following the directions of his mother Helen, destroys the temple of the God Asclepius in Aigeai Cilicia and many of the Pagan temples: Goddess Aphrodite in Jerusalem, Aphaca, Mambre, Phoenicia, Baalbek, etc.

Emperor Constantine the Great fixes the site of the Church of the Nativity. These decisions are not based on historical or biblical proof but on the say so of Queen Helen and her followers. Truth is unimportant, what is important is what the Queen says is important with the Church relinquishing its approval somewhat hesitantly to her declarations of historical locations and charm. "One fool will deny more truth in half an hour than a wise man can prove in seven years." ~Coventry Patmore.

November 18 Pope Sylvester I consecrates the Basilica of Saint Peter, built by the Roman Emperor Constantine the Great, over the tomb of the Apostle.

In a Roman law of 326 it is called, "Facinus atrocissimum, scelus immane." ~Codex Theod. l. ix. tit. 7, l. 1. 1 sq.

And the definition of adultery, too, was now made broader. According to the old Roman law, the idea of adultery on the part of the man was limited to illicit intercourse with the married lady of a free citizen, and was thought punishable not so much for its own sake, as for its encroachment on the rights of another husband's property [chattel].

AD 329-89-The Trinity: Confusion as to the fundamentals of the Trinity are so rampant and details so vague that Gregory of Nazianzus cannot state predilection. Gregory of Nazianzus is one of the Four Great Doctors of the Eastern Church; one of three Orthodox saints honored with the title "The Theologian;" one of the Three Holy Hierarchs.

"No sooner do I conceive of the One than I am illumined by the splendor of the Three; no sooner do I distinguish Three than I am carried back into the One. When I think of any of the three, I think of him as the whole, and my eyes are filled, and the greater part of what I am thinking escapes me." ~Gregory of Nazianzus.

Instead of attempting to understand and follow the teachings of Jesus, the early Christians argued and quarreled over the nature of Jesus' Divinity and the newly created Trinity. They called each other heretics and persecuted each other by burning each other at the stake and the cutting off of heads. There was even a great and violent controversy at one time among different Christian sects over the specifics of a certain poly-syllabic term included in Scripture. One party said the word Homo-ousion should be used in a prayer; the other wanted Homo-iousion, this difference had reference to the Divinity of Jesus. Over this diphthong a fierce war was waged and large groups of people were massacred.

What greater rhetoric can one expect from those who are still encapsulated in superstition and mythical lore? Saint Gregory is responsible for the Trinity's acceptance by the Christian Church and here he admits that even he is confused as to what he is trying to say.

From the very first early centuries, Christianity changed, and continues changing today; the early Church was a sect within Judaism, and not a new religion, "The religion known as Christianity is an anachronism, meaning an institution out of its proper time. By adopting the trappings of Paganism, Christianity reverted to an ancient past. Yet Paganism as a religious movement had been slowly dying out among the educated classes of the Roman Empire. In a curious twist of fate, educated Romans were moving toward the monotheism that Judaism had embraced for centuries. By converting to Catholicism, they fell back into a form of polytheism evidenced by belief in the Trinity." ~Schonfield, Those Incredible Christians.

The human birth and so-called existence of the Christos must be seen as a miracle, and the worship of Mary must take on the color of Goddess veneration, and the adoration of Saints must therefore facilitate in keeping alive that sense of polytheism. Logic and truth have nothing to do with Church Doctrine, only what will gain converts [the truth already being systematically destroyed by the followers of the Church] "Truth is so rare that it is delightful to tell it." ~Emily Dickinson.

Many of the Early Church leaders are illiterate, a fact which contributes to their ignorance in interpreting Scriptures and is not seriously addressed until AD 1215 when Pope Innocent III removes a Bishop from the ranks due to his inability to read or interpret Church Doctrine as prescribed by Church Authorities. "A Bishop of Dunfeld congratulated himself on having never learned either Greek or Hebrew. The monks asserted that all heresies arose from those two languages, and particularly from the Greek. 'The New Testament,' said one of them, 'Is a book full of serpents and thorns. Greek,' continued he, 'Is a new and recently invented language, and we must be upon our guard against it. As for Hebrew, my dear brethren, it is certain that all who learn it immediately become Jews.'" ~D'aubigne.

Even though the Gospels are written in [Koine] Greek, the Church discourages their reading, "Even the faculty of theology at Paris scrupled not to declare to the parliament: 'Religion is ruined, if you permit the study of Greek and Hebrew.'" ~D'aubigne.

Galgotha [sometimes spelled Golgotha], is the place where Jesus is crucified, is conquered by Christians, and becomes a shrine. Galgotha is Hebrew for "skull," the Greek word being Calvaria where we get the word "Cranium." Greek Evangelists use this interpretation for the word Calvary. -Matthew 27:33-35.

The statue Venus had been erected at the site where Jesus was allegedly crucified by Emperor Hadrian. Constantine orders the statue of Venus destroyed and the alleged tomb of Jesus is miraculously discovered. Another phenomenon uncovered by the royal family to impress their subjects. God is un-begotten without beginning beliefs are condemned by the Council of Nice. The Church will use what they call Inspired Gospel to dispel any future logic or refutation of Scripture. The basic principles are now set and need only refinement to convince its members of the truths espoused by the Church.

"Egypt, which you commended to me, my dearest Servianus, I have found to be wholly fickle and inconsistent, and continually wafted about by every breath of fame. The worshipers of Serapis are called Christians, and those who are devoted to the God Serapis, call themselves Bishops of Christ." ~Hadrian, in a letter to Servianus, 134 A.D., Giles, Hebrew and Christian Records, vol. ii. p. 86. London: 1877.

AD 329-379-Saint Basil, Father of the Church, is asked by the Bishop of Caesarea to defend the Christian Doctrine against the heretical attacks of the Arians. In 370 he is elected Bishop of Caesarea, a post he holds until his death on January 1, 379. His writings include, "Against Eunomius," three books aimed at the Arian leader Eunomius, "On the Holy Spirit," a doctrinal treatise, and the "Moralia," a compilation of New Testament verses.

Saint Basil was also a vegetarian, "With sober living, wellbeing increases in the household, animals are in safety, there is no shedding of blood, nor putting animals to death. The knife of the cook is needless, for the table is spread only with the fruits that Nature gives, and with them they are content." ~Saint Basil, 375 C.E.

Saint Basil is also assisted by his younger brother; Gregory, Bishop of Nyssa [335-395] and his friend Gregory of Nazianzus [329-391] in his writings, and collectively they are known as the "Cappadocians." He also wrote the Liturgy of Saint Basil, still used in the Byzantine ceremony.

The early Christian Fathers will plagiarize the works of the 'Torah' while at the same time attempting to deny the works as Scriptural.

"Listen and hear well, all you who have ears. Keep yourselves from bloodshed, and all manner of blood, from anything strangled, and from dead bodies of birds and beasts, and fish eat ye not. And from all deeds of cruelty, and from all that is gotten of wrong, yea, contrary to natural laws of good and humane love. For, do ye think the blood of beasts and birds will wash sin? I tell ye, Nay, therefore ye must all speak the truth, and be just. Ye must be merciful to one another and to all creatures that live, thereby walking humbly with thy God, Who loveth the Pure Oblation only." ~John the Baptist.

"The discovery and decipherment of the Assyrian records have raised the curtain upon forgotten dramas of the earth's history, and have removed the Jewish writings from the solitary position they once occupied. We have now before us the voluminous literature of a race allied to the Jews in blood, creed, thought, and language. The stories of Creation, Deluge, and Tower of Babel are shown to be Babylonian; the ritual, dress, and furniture of the Temple were Babylonian; and the religious poetry of the Hebrews is anticipated by that of Babylon. The history and chronology of the Hebrew Scriptures are proved faulty and unreliable, and the whole evidence at command supports the opinion of critics as to the very late date of the Jewish literature." ~Mr. Edwards, Witness of Assyria, p. 9.

"Do not devote your attention to the fallacies of artificial discourses, nor the vain promises of plagiarizing heretics, but to the venerable simplicity of unassuming truth." ~ Saint Hippolytus, Refutation Of All Heresies, 205 A.D.

AD 330-Arnobius, author of Against the Heathen.

On May 11, 333, Constantinople [New Rome] is solemnly inaugurated as Emperor Constantine moves the capital of the Roman Empire to Byzantium, renaming it New Rome.

AD 331-363-Julian the Apostate, full name Flavius Claudius Julianus, Roman emperor, 361-363, tries to restore Paganism after the adoption of Christianity by the murderous Constantine the Great. A nephew of Constantine, Julian is brought up as a Roman Catholic, but he later renounces the faith.

History says that the Emperor Julian was an 'Apostate' and that although he was once a Christian; that he fell from grace, and that in his last moments, throwing some of his own blood into the air, he cried out to Jesus Christ, "Galilean, thou hast conquered!"

"The distinction of intellectual and corporeal 'Sun' is beautifully set forth in the admirable and really superb discourse that the Emperor Julian addressed to the Sun, which contains the principles of the theology of that age, and furnishes the best explanation of the two natures of Christ and his incarnation, that foolish fanatics talk so much and know so little about, which conception of the two natures originated the fable believed literally by imbecile and ignorant Christians, which relates that Christ took a body, was born of a virgin, died, and was resuscitated!" ~See: A History of Free Thought in the Nineteenth Century; J.M. Robertson, vol. 1, 76.

"No wild beasts are as hostile to men as Christian sects in general are to one another." ~Emperor Julian.

Julian changes the religion of the Roman Empire, and diverts the revenues of the Church. Whomever steps between a priest and his salary, will find that he has committed every crime. No matter how often the slanders may be refuted, they will be repeated until the last priest has lost his body and found his wings. The falsehoods about Julian were invented some fifteen hundred years ago, and they are repeated today by just as honest and just as respectable people as these who told them at first. It must be remembered that the Christians had persecuted and imprisoned Julian; that they had exiled him, and they had threatened him with death. Many of his relatives were murdered by the Christians. He became Emperor, and Christians conspired to take his life. The conspirators were discovered, but they were pardoned.

He did what he could to prevent the Christians from destroying each other. He held pomp and pride and luxury in contempt, and led his army on foot, sharing the privations of the meanest soldier. Upon ascending the throne, he published an edict proclaiming Universal Religious Toleration.

He was then labeled a Pagan. It is claimed by some that he never did entirely forget his Christian education. In this I am inclined to think there is some truth, because Julian revoked his edict of toleration, and for a time was nearly as unjust as though he had been a saint. An education in Biblical history offers an insight into a religious work of accumulated confusion by demented, fanatical, and tormented writers and would-be oracles.

Julian is Emperor one year and seven months, and in a battle with his secular enemy, the Persians, he is mortally wounded, "Brought back to his tent, and feeling that he had but a short time to live, he spent his last hours in discoursing with his friends on the immortality of the soul. He reviewed his reign and declared that he was satisfied with his conduct, and had neither penitence nor remorse to express for anything that he had done."

His last words were: "I submit willingly to the eternal decrees of Heaven," convinced that he who is captivated with life, when his last hour has arrived is more weak and pusillanimous than he who would rush to voluntary death when it is his duty still to live. A Christian Emperor murdered Julian's father and most of his kindred, and that he narrowly escaped the same fate, we can hardly blame him for having a little prejudice against a church whose members were fierce, ignorant, and bloody, whose priests were hypocrites, and whose Bishops were mere assassins.

If Julian had said he was a Christian, no matter what he actually was, he would have satisfied the Church. The story that the dying Emperor acknowledged that he was conquered by the Galilean was originated by some of the so-called Fathers of the Church, probably by Pope Gregory or Theodoret.

Would a Christian Emperor Julian have inserted into the mouth of the Savior, Lord Jesus, these words, "He that is a seducer, he that is a murderer, he that is sacrilegious and infamous, let him approach without fear!"

For with this water will I wash him and will straightway make him clean. And though he should be guilty of those same sins a second time, let him but smite his breast and beat his head and I will make him clean again.” ~P.R.F. Brown, Constantine Invented Christianity: A thesis in the field of Ancient History.

Julian's charges against the earlier Emperor are directly related to the fraudulent misrepresentation of ancient history in which Emperor Constantine had fabricated the New Testament, and forcefully implemented, assisted by his rightful role as the Pontifex Maximus [Bishop of Bishops], the new religious order of a new and “Chrestus” [χρηστός in the Greek; good] God. ~Ibid

The original three books of Julian's contained the following opening address, which is followed by a formal legal disclaimer about modification of his words, “It is, I think, expedient to set forth to all mankind the reasons by which I was convinced that the fabrication of the Galileans is a fiction of men composed by wickedness.” ~Ibid. Emperor Julian 362 C.E.

Whenever the Church cannot answer the arguments of an opponent, she attacks their character. She resorts to falsehood, and in the domain of calumny she has stood for fifteen hundred years without a rival. ~from the Internet of Robert Green Ingersoll

They are the same wretches who said that Julian sacrificed a woman to the moon, tearing out her entrails with his own hands. We are also informed by these hypocrites that he endeavored to rebuild the temple of Jerusalem, and that fire came out of the earth and consumed the laborers employed in the sacrilegious undertaking.

In times of war, captives were chosen for sacrifice; but in times of peace, they offered their slaves. In great calamities or famines the king was, on the least pretext, sacrificed, as being the highest price with which they could purchase the divine favor. Kings also offered their children. “The altar of Moloch reeked with blood.” Fair virgins and children are sacrificed by being thrown into a fiery furnace shaped like a bull, “While trumpets and flutes drowned their screams, and the mothers looked on, and were bound to restrain their tears.” ~bankofwisdom.com.

To the ever present famines, Josephus, after relating other things, adds the following, “The possibility of going out of the city being brought to an end, all hope of safety for the Jews was cut off. And the famine increased and devoured the people by houses and families. And the rooms were filled with dead women and children, the lanes of the city with the corpses of old men. Children and youths, swollen with the famine, wandered about the market-places like shadows, and fell down wherever the death agony overtook them. The sick were not strong enough to bury even their own relatives, and those who had the strength hesitated because of the multitude of the dead and the uncertainty as to their own fate. Many, indeed, died while they were burying others, and many betook themselves to their graves before death came upon them. There was neither weeping nor lamentation under these misfortunes; but the famine stifled the natural affections. Those that were dying a lingering death looked with dry eyes upon those that had gone to their rest before them. Deep silence and death-laden night encircled the city. But the robbers were more terrible than these miseries; for they broke open the houses, which were now mere sepulchers, robbed the dead and stripped the covering from their bodies, and went away with a laugh. They tried the points of their swords in the dead bodies, and some that were lying on the ground still alive they thrust through in order to test their weapons. But those that prayed that they would use their right hand and their sword upon them, they contemptuously left to be destroyed by the famine. Everyone of these died with eyes fixed upon the temple; and they left the seditious alive.” ~Prolegomena: The Life and Writings of Eusebius of Caesarea: Testimonies of the Ancients Against Eusebius, Chapter VI, The Famine, Which Oppressed Them

Carthage was a notable place for human sacrifices. The offering of human sacrifices to the sun in Mexico and Peru was extensively practiced. The ancient Egyptians annually celebrated the resurrection of their god and savior Osiris, and at the same time commemorated his death by eating the consecrated wafer which had become “Veritable flesh of his flesh,” the body of Osiris, thus eating their God, as the Christians do. Bread and wine were brought to the temples as offerings.

The Essenes, or Therapeuts, worshippers of Mithra, the Persian Sun-God, the second person of the Trinity, introduced the Eucharist idea, along with Baptism, and other Pagan rites, among the early Christians. When it was introduced into Rome by the Persian magicians, the Eucharistic Mysteries were celebrated in a cave. The ancient Greeks had their “Mysteries,” wherein they “Celebrated the sacrament of the Lord's Supper,” called also “Eleusinian Mysteries.”

These were offered every fifth year by the Pagan Athenians in honor of “Ceres,” the “Goddess of Corn.”

To Pope Pius XII, “I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians.” ~Mahatma Gandhi

She was supposed to have given "Her flesh to eat," and Bacchus, the God of Wine, "His blood to drink." "Many of the forms of expression in the Christian solemnity are similar to those that appertained to the Pagan rite." ~Rev. R. Taylor.

The early Christians will also borrow other attributes from the Pagan Goddess, thus becoming in actuality, "Children of the Corn." In almost all lands, great Goddess have been described with golden or yellow hair, and of fair complexion, showing that there must have been one grand prototype, to which they were all made to correspond. 'Flava Ceres,' the Roman Goddess of agriculture, 5th century B.C.E., the "Yellow-Haired Ceres," as the "Yellow-Haired" is borrowed from the corn that was supposed to be under her guardian care.

"The primitive conception of him as he 'Corn God,' comes clearly out in the festival of his death and Resurrection, which was celebrated the month of Athyr. That festival appears to have been essentially a festival of sowing, which properly fell at the time when the husbandman actually committed the seed to the earth. On that occasion an effigy of the 'Corn God,' molded of earth and corn, was buried with funeral rites in the ground in order that, dying there, he might come to Life Again [Born Again] with the new crops. The ceremony was in fact a charm to ensure the growth of the corn by sympathetic magic, and we may conjecture that as such it was practiced in a simple form by every Egyptian farmer on his fields long before it was adopted and transfigured by the priests in the stately ritual of the temple." ~Dr. James Frazer.

But many other Goddesses have the very same epithet applied to them. Europa, whom Jupiter carried away in the form of a bull, is called "The yellow-Haired Europa."

Minerva is called by Homer the "Blue-eyed Minerva," and by Ovid the "Yellow-haired;" the great huntress Diana, who is commonly identified with the moon, is addressed by Anacreon as the "Yellow-Haired Daughter of Jupiter," a title, which the pale face of the silver moon could surely never have suggested. Perhaps this is why there is such a strong affinity towards fairness and dislike of darker skinned peoples. ~From The Two Babylons by Rev. Alexander Hislop.

Dione, the mother of Venus, is described by Theocritus as, "Yellow-Haired." Venus herself is frequently called "Aurea Venus," the "Golden Venus." The Indian goddess Lakshmi, the "Mother of the Universe," is described as of "A golden complexion." Ariadne, the wife of Bacchus, was called the "Yellow-Haired Ariadne."

Jesus is said to have traveled to India, "Heal this man now, even as thou hast healed Gentiles in faraway lands, yea even India and Egypt. For we have heard of your travels to many lands and the marvels thou worketh among the peoples." ~The Essene Humane Gospel of Jesus, Translated From The Original Hebrew And Aramaic Texts, Typesetting by: Followers of the Essene Way [F.E.W.]

Jesus, ruling Kashmir under the name Meghavahana, had become both a Zealot and a "Controversial Christ" in that country also. The "Protector of animals" both "Small and great." ~King of Kashmir, about 25 C.E., where he is known as Prince Meghavahana.

"Gopaditya, the king of Gandhara, in the hope of conquering Kashmir, had given shelter to the great grand-son of Yudishthira. This exiled prince had a son named Meghavahana, whom his father had sent to the country of east Yotisha to be present at the Sayamvara marriage of the daughter of its king who was a Vishnuvite; and he had the fortune of being selected as the husband of the princess. He [Prince Meghavahana] was also presented with an umbrella, which was got from Varuna [an ancient Indian God of the Sea] by king Naraka, and which cast its shade on none but a paramount king [in short, a magical umbrella that originally belonged to an Indian God]." ~Kings of Kashmir. NOTE: By the 1st century C.E., Lord Shiva of Kashmir had taken over his identity.

Joseph, Jesus' father, was crucified by the Romans about 23 C.E., but rescued by Lord Shiva and resuscitated in God's spacecraft, carried back to Kashmir, where he continued his 47 year reign. But Joseph was in poor mental condition after his near-death experience and looking for a chance to retire. Then comes a story of Meghavahana, as a militant missionary of vegetarianism, traveling throughout India convincing other kings to enforce vegetarianism in their countries also! "And he [Jesus] saith unto them, "Come, now, follow me, and I will make ye fishers of men; leave ye off from disturbance of God's creatures and learn ye to give life, not taking life from any living thing under the Sun." ~The Essene Humane Gospel of Jesus, Translated From The Original Hebrew And Aramaic Texts, Typesetting by: Followers of the Essene Way [F.E.W.]

Humans, inherently are for a life saving religion, a religion, which promises Eternal Bliss after death, a religion, when laid hold of by a body of alleged highly ethical and spiritually wise leaders can have a profound affect upon society. Unfortunately, these leaders, many of whom were ignorant of their own developing faith, incapable of interpreting it in its esoteric sense, tainted it through ignorance into a corpus of false beliefs, the obvious literal preposterousness of which has brought havoc upon humankind. How deficient were these early devotees of the new popular faith, which corrupted not only itself but the Pagan beliefs it assimilated?

"If they disclosed dark features of human imperfection, they at the same time give one a glimpse of the mighty power of that new religion [which we now know was not new in any single feature], which was laying hold of the poor and untutored, and was beginning its work as a leaven in the midst of a corrupt and decaying world." ~Fisher, Beginnings of Christianity, 580.

"In the first place it was the work of ignorant folk who obviously can scarcely take in anything above ordinary inventions and inflations." ~Guigenbert, Christianity Past and Present, p. 150.

Simple folk can make nothing of the venerable formulas and rolling phrases of ancient cosmogony without help from the Greek schools, which they often knew nothing about. The learned leadership despised the ignorant Christians, and they were disliked by the bulk of the common people as well, "Accordingly they apply them [the principles of Greek philosophy] to the premises of the faith and to the suggestions, which they draw from the religious sentiments of the ignorant." ~Guigenbert, Christianity Past and Present. of Acts 4:13.

Christianity also borrowed from the world around it as extracts from the Hymn to Zeus, written by Greek philosopher Cleanthes, 331-232 B.C.E., are also found in today's Gospels, as are 207 words from the Thais of Menander, 343-291 B.C.E., one of the "Seven wise men" of Greece, and quotations from the semi-legendary Greek poet Epimenides, 7th or 6th century B.C.E., are also furnished to the lips of Jesus Christ, as well as seven passages from the quizzical Ode of Jupiter, 150 B.C.E.; from an unknown author, are also printed again in the New Testament, only with an innovative author.

Dryden refers to her golden or yellow hair, "Where the rude waves in Dian's harbor play, the fair forsaken Ariadne lay; there, sick with grief and frantic with despair, her dress she rent, and tore her Golden Hair." The Greek Gorgon 'Medusa' before her transformation, while celebrated for her beauty, is equally celebrated for her golden hair, "Medusa once had charms: to gain her love a rival crowd of anxious lovers strove. They who have seen her, own they ne'er did trace more moving features in a sweeter face; but above all, her length of hair they own In Golden Ringlets waved, and graceful shone."

The Pagan priest dismissed his congregation with "The Lord be with you," an expression retained to this day in the English Protestant Church, and in the Catholic Church as "Dominus Vobiscum."

Constantine commissions Eusebius to deliver 50 Bibles for the Church of Constantinople. Bishop Eusebius, the official Christian propagandist for Emperor Constantine, entitles the 32nd Chapter of his 12th Book of Evangelical Preparation, "How it may be Lawful and Fitting to use Falsehood as a Medicine, and for the Benefit of those who Want to be Deceived." ~Eusebius, Book of Evangelical Preparation.

Eusebius is the notorious prevaricating [lying] author of a great many Christian works, but then he does warn us in his infamous history, "We shall introduce into this history in general only those events which may be useful first to ourselves and after wards to posterity." ~Eusebius, Ecclesiastical History, Vol. 8, chapter 2.

"It [the word Ecclesia] had no meaning whatever as a religious institution until decades after the death of Jesus Christ. In the year 30 C.E., no one on earth would have known what Jesus meant if he had said that he was going to 'fund' an Ecclesia or Church, and that the powers of darkness would not prevail against it, and so on. It would sound like the talk of the Mad Hatter in Alice in Wonderland." ~Dr. Joseph McCabe, The Story of Religious Controversy, p. 294.

AD335-The Church of the Holy Sepulcher is erected over the site where the statue of Venus was destroyed inside the ancient city walls of Jerusalem. The Garden Tomb, Turkish Jerusalem, challenges the burial site as being the actual site of Jesus being at the Church of the Holy Sepulcher, which originally lay outside the ancient city walls.

The Council in Jerusalem, reverses Nicaea's condemnation of Arius; consecrates Jerusalem Church of the Holy Sepulcher.

"In a word, his [Leucius Charinus aka Arius of Alexander: The author of the five Leucian Acts] books contain a vast amount of childish, incredible, ill-devised, lying, silly, self-contradictory, impious, and ungodly statements, so that one would not be far wrong in calling them the source and mother of all heresy." ~Photius

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

AD 336-Christmas: The first documentation of the celebration of Christmas in Rome, literally the Mass celebrated on Christ's birthday, the word itself does not appear until the 11th century and is now applied to the day itself, December 25th. The birth-story, which is not in the Book of Mark, belongs to the later stratum of Gospel legends, which gives no indication of a date.

Pope Damasus will commence the Church's onslaught on the married priesthood by declaring that priests can continue to marry, but that the priests are not to be allowed to express their love sexually with their wives.

"Of the delights of this world, man cares most for sexual intercourse, yet he has left it out of his Heaven."

~Mark Twain [Samuel Clemens, author, Free Thinker].

In the ferocious battle for religious adherents, the Christian propagandists sought to outdo each other at every opportunity, which included, by the 5th century, four very different endings, which existed in Mark's Gospel, Codex Bezae Cantabrigiae ends Mark at verse 16:8, without any post-crucifixion appearances; it lacks both the 'Short Version' [that of Jesus sending followers to 'East and West'] or the 'Long version,' that fabulous fable of post-death apparitions, where Jesus allegedly promises his Disciples that they will be immune to snake bites and poison.

"In Rome, 25 December was the feast of the 'Birth of the Unconquered Sun,' which commemorated the winter solstice, when the days begin to get lighter. The Roman Catholic Church replaced this by the celebration of the birth of the 'Sun of Righteousness' and the coming of the 'Light of the World.'" ~From:

The Christian Calendar, A Complete Guide to the Seasons of the Christian Year Telling the Story of Christ and the Saints from Advent to Pentecost, Text by L.W. Cowie and John Selwyn Gummer, G & C Merriam, 1974.

In a letter sent to the President Thomas Jefferson, on Christmas Day, 1802, "...I congratulate you on the birthday of the 'New Sun,' now called Christmas Day; and I make you a present of a thought on Louisiana." ~From the Writings of Thomas Paine, 1737-1809, Collected by Moncure Daniel Conway.

"... The Christian religion is a parody on the worship of the sun, in which they put a man whom they call Christ, in the place of the sun, and pay him for the same adoration, which was originally paid to the sun."

The feast is, in fact, so thoroughly Pagan that as early as 245 we find Origen protesting against the very idea of celebrating the birthday of Jesus as if he were an earthly king, and the date of birth is fixed by such fantastic calculations that almost every month of the year was selected in one or other part of the Church. The first undisputed reference to a celebration on December 25th, Christian scholars admit that references to it in the 2nd and 3rd centuries are spurious, occurring after the middle of the 4th century.

With all the inbred religious hatred spread by the so-called advocates of the Prince of Peace, "If Christ were here now there is one thing he would not be, a Christian." ~Mark Twain, Notebook.

This was a time when education was held in high esteem and the lower classes [ignorant, dumb masses] looked upon with contempt; in the Scholars Version of the Bible, we read, "As for this rabble, they are ignorant of the Law! Damn them!" ~John 7:49.

From 360 to 450, the celebration spreads from Rome to the leading cities, but the remoter Greeks and the Armenians cling to January 6. ~See Conybeare, Myth, Magic, and Morals, 1909, pg. 176.

There is no great festival and no general agreement about the date until the 5th century. Modern divines assign various strained reasons for the adoption of December 25th in a ludicrous attempt to obscure the fact that it was borrowed from the various rival religions, hence the long struggle against it, which they admit located the birth of their savior gods in mid-winter.

The choice of December 25 was obviously part of the general policy to contain the Pagans and Mithraists when the cults are censored, and it began, significantly, at Rome. In Roman days, the birth of a solar or a vegetation-god, saving the world from the darkness, discomfort, and sterility of winter, was widely celebrated during winter solstice, December 21st, or just after it, when the days began to lengthen again. "Forbidding to marry, and commanding to abstain from meats." ~Paul, in 1 Timothy 4:3.

From very early times, the Romans had celebrated their Saturnalia in honor of the old vegetation-god at this time with a great display of presents, candles, and dolls, perhaps in reminiscence of an earlier sacrifice of children. From the reign of the Emperor Aurelian, AD 270-6, who introduced a solar cult of a high ethical character, December 25th was the outstanding day of their calendar and was officially described as "The Birthday of the Unconquered Sun."

The coming of Mithraism from Persia confirms the date. The Mithraic cave-temple was on the Vatican Hill, close to the Christian settlement, and the midnight celebration of the birth of the savior-god, with a blaze of candles and clouds of incense, similar to the Catholic "Midnight mass" today.

The Egyptian gods Isis and Horus were also honored at Rome, and from Macrobius, "Saturnalia," I, 18), who is confirmed by the Christian Paschal Chronicle. ~See Migne, Greek Series, XCII, 384.

We learn that the Egyptians at this period celebrated the birthday of the sun god, Horus, in midwinter, having a tableau of a Divine Baby, the sun at its feeblest, or just reborn, in a manger and the mother beside it.

The Christian Holy Day will be changed from Saturday to Sunday, for a reason. Sunday is celebrated as Mithras's special day, which was, as the name suggests, the Day of the Sun, and was also dedicated to Apollo. Mithraic worship is always described as taking place in caves, as befitted the God "Born of a rock." Later Christian symbolism of the birth of Christ in a cave is an obvious match. The early Christians will later go to the trouble of locating a cave in which Jesus is said to have been born. There is an altercation when Saint Jerome discovers, to his horror, that it had originally been the shrine of another Pagan God, Adonis. ~Saint Jerome, Epistle 58, Ad Paulinum.

Epiphanius further tells us, that in Alexandria, there was a Temple of the Virgin, Koreion, in which, on the same date, the people, after praying all night, burst into rejoicing because Kore, the Virgin, had "Given birth to the Eternal."

Even the Teutonic barbarians, who are said to have been, after becoming Christians, the first to fix Christmas on December 25th, had a great mid-winter festival. ~See Conybeare and J. M. Robertson, Christianity and Mythology (1900, 163-197); and for Christmas customs C. A. Miles, Christmas, 1912, also the works of J. McCabe, Rationalists Encyclopaedia.

"Long before the invasions of the Barbarians the histories written by Greek and Latin authors concerning the annals of the ancient peoples had been falling into disfavor. Even the best of them were little read, for the Christians felt but slight interest in these Pagan narratives, and that is why works relating to the history of antiquity were already so scarce." ~La Croix, quoted in Statistical Method Proves Cicero Work Is A Forgery, <http://www.tcnj.edu/~colrel/releases/1999/cicero.html>

It is not until 379 AD, that the 25th of December is actually celebrated for the first time as Christmas in Christian Constantinople by Saint Gregory Naz. The Christians stole a birthday, for Jesus, December 25th, and they continued the pagan custom of decking their houses with evergreens and mistletoe in spite of Biblical Scripture. Tertullian, a father of the Church, writing, 200, to his brethren, accuses them of "Rank idolatry for decking their doors with garlands and flowers on festival days according to the custom of the heathen."

Foliage, such as the laurel, myrtle, ivy, oak, and evergreens, were 'Dionysiac' plants; symbols of the "Generative power, signifying perpetuity and vigor." The Pagans actually believed that the deciduous plants actually died and came back to life each year.

The festival is kept in India and China. Buddha, the son of the Virgin Maya, on who, according to Chinese tradition, the Divine Power, or Holy Ghost, had descended, was said to have been born on this day. It was also the birthday of the Persian Sun God and Savior, Mithra. The ancient Egyptians, centuries before Jesus lived, kept this day as the birthday of their Sun Gods. Isis, their Queen of Heaven and Virgin Mother, was delivered on this day of a Son and Savior, Horus. His birth is one of the greatest Mysteries of their religion with pictures of Horus decorating the walls of their temples; images of the virgin with child, and effigies of the son lying in a manger, being common.

Horus is the Egyptian God, born on December 25th of the virgin Isis-Meri. His birth was accompanied by a star, which appeared in the East, which in turn, three kings followed to locate and adorn the new-born Savior. At the age of twelve, Horus was known as a prodigal child teacher, and at the age of 30 he was baptized by a figure known as Anup and thus began his ministry. Horus also had twelve disciples whom he traveled about with, performing miracles such as healing the sick and even walking on water. Horus was known by many gestural names such as, The Truth, The Light, God's Anointed Son, The Good Shepherd, The Lamb of God, and many others. After being betrayed by Typhon, Horus was crucified, buried for three days, and then, Resurrected. ~How Does Christians Explain The Similarities Between Jesus' Life and Pagan Gods That Existed Before Him? <http://au.answers.yahoo.com/question/index?qid=20080414142317AAOZBvj>

The Truth is what the ancients said it was, and modernists tend not to disagree, that, "When these Greek-To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi Jews of Alexandria were employed to translate the Prophet and the Psalms into Greek, that they availed themselves of the opportunity to introduce their tenants and rites into their version of the translation. This version is called the Septuagint and is a grossly mistranslated version of the Jewish Scriptures. Millions of Christians are not aware of this and many of the Christian scholars stop short to examine the evidence for themselves; simply they just don't know it happened. ~Christian Ginsburg, The Essenes, Their History and Doctrines, pg. 32.

At Christmas time, the image of Horus was brought out of the sanctuary with great ceremony, as the image of the Infant Bambino, or black child, is still brought out and exhibited in Rome. Among the Greeks, the births of Hercules, Bacchus, and Adonis were celebrated on this day.

In Rome the festival was observed as "Natalis Solis Invicti," the "Birthday of Sol the Invincible," the Unconquered Sun of Emperor Constantine; on which day they held their "Saturnalia," whence comes the Christmas "Lord of Misrule."

There was no Christian religion at Emperor Constantine's time, and the Catholic Church finally acknowledges that the tale of his "Conversion" and so-called "Baptism" are "Entirely legendary." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, Farley ed., vol. xiv, pp. 370-1.

A few days before the winter solstice, the Calabrian shepherds came into Rome to play on the pipes. Here we see the origin of our "Waits." "Perhaps the most visible part of Constantine's Christianizing program was a hurried campaign to build large and resplendent Churches everywhere." ~Constantine's Sword, p. 196.

Constantine will change the course of history as he supports the new Christian faith, and under his absolute rule declares that, "Socrates' critical questioning... Was a menace to the state," and declares that, "Pythagoras had stolen his teaching from Egypt." He declares that, "Plato believed there were many Gods... And strives for the unknowable," declaring that poets "Wrote falsely about the Gods," and were worse than philosophers. Fox writes "In a few broad sweeps, Constantine had damned the free use of reason and banished poetic imagination." ~Quoted in Constantine Invented Christianity: A Thesis In The field of Ancient History by P.R.F. Brown.

Constantine audaciously declares that a dove, such as that, which had served Noah, had alighted upon the Virgin Mary, and then declares that an ancient Sibyl, a priestess from Erythrae who had served the great Greek God, Apollo at the "Serpents Tripod," at Delphi had prophesized the miraculous birth of Jesus in the 1st century B.C.E., and then quotes [in the Greek] thirty-four hexameters, from the Inspired Truth of the Sibyl. And most notably, the acrostic formed by the first Greek letter of each line spelled, "Jesus Christ, Son of God, Savior, Cross." But the clever and inventive military mind of Constantine had already in advance completely out-maneuvered the arguments of academic skeptical inquiry, "They suspect that Someone of our religion, not without the gifts of the prophetic muse, had inserted false lines and forged the Sibyl's moral tone. These skeptics were already known to Origen." ~ibid

It should be noted that Ecclesiastical writers, after the 4th century, now referred to the "Nicene Fathers" as "The Fathers of the Church." It was not until Cyril of Alexandria set the precedent of the "Seal of the Fathers" in the 5th century, that the "Fathers of the Church" began to be seen as "Pre-Nicene Authors" of antiquity. The tax exempt Bishop [Saint] Cyril was both a political censor and a hit man who fraudulently covered up the fact that Emperor Julian's invectives were based upon the common knowledge of the epoch, that Constantine, and "That wretched Bishop Eusebius" had fabricated the new Roman religion, to which the Nicene Oath had been pledged under extreme duress, by the first Eastern Christian Bishops, who were personally appointed by Constantine.

The ancient Germans celebrated their "Yule Feast" centuries before Christianity. "Yule" was the old German name for Christmas, as "Noel" was the French, and signified the "Revolution of the year."

The word was derived from the Hebrew, Chaldee "Nule." On this festival the gods were consulted as to future predictions, sacrifices were offered to them, and jovial festivities took place. ~Bank of Wisdom, Box 926, Louisville, KY 40201.

Saint Cyril, faced with three controversial books by Emperor Julian, the Apostate, which continuously reiterated the invention [falsification] of the Christian religion by his predecessor, Emperor Constantine, reluctantly resolved that Julian's ceaseless turning over of arguments were not addressed to a baseless invective, but to an honest and justifiable conviction, which related to the political pseudo-history of 4th century events, and the use of further Christian fraudulent misrepresentations. ~P.R.F. Brown, Constantine Invented Christianity: A thesis in the field of Ancient History.

Bishop Eusebius was Constantine's religious adviser because the Emperor, "Never acquired a solid theological knowledge," and "Depended heavily on his advisers in religious questions." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, New Edition, vol. xii, p. 576, passim.

AD 337-Emperor Constantine, whom the Catholics claim converted to Christianity, abolishes the crucifixion as veneration of Jesus. On May 22: Constantine the Great dies and is Baptized shortly prior to his death, which means he was not a Christian as Christian writers claim, but merely accepted the Sacrament as an insurance policy to the Christian Heaven.

"The rites and institutions, by which the Greeks, Romans, and other nations, had formerly testified their religious veneration for fictitious deities, were now adopted, with some slight alterations by Christian Bishops, and employed in the service of the true God." ~Mosheim, Century IV, Part II, chap. 4:4.

Writings of Jesus: God [Jesus] is said to have written to his mother [as per the Donation of Constantine], which is cited in writing by no less than ten Popes as proof of their civil authority and sovereignty over Rome [and what will someday come to be known as the Papal States], which will include, at one time, one-third of all of Italy, but the documents are eventually exposed as a pious fraud in 1440 C.E., by Laurentius Valla who proves the documents not to have been written until several centuries after the death of Emperor Constantine [337 C.E.], and the Vatican will retaliate by condemning Valla's scholarly work by listing it in the Index Librorum Prohibitorum [The Index of Prohibited Books of 1559].

Emperor Constantine is Baptized a Christian, by an Arian Bishop, upon his deathbed, which means he sat in on the Council of Nicaea as a Pagan God, and not a Christian [and the possibly the first Pope of Rome as a Pagan Sun worshiper]. Constantine is succeeded by his three sons, Constantine II, Constantius II and Constans I.

According to Irenaeus, Peter and Paul founded the Church of Rome and appointed her first Bishop, Linus, and that Clement was the third in this line of Apostolic Succession, taking the office after Anacletus. Hence, Peter is not the first Pope, "The tradition derived from the Apostles, of the very great, the very ancient, and Universally known Church founded and organized at Rome by the two most glorious Apostles, Peter and Paul; as also [by pointing out] the faith preached to men, which comes down to our time by means of the successions of the Bishops... The blessed Apostles, then, having founded and built up the Church, committed into the hands of Linus the office of the episcopate. Of this Linus, Paul makes mention in the Epistles to Timothy. To him succeeded Anacletus; and after him, in the third place from the Apostles, Clement was allotted the Bishopric." ~Irenaeus Against Heresies 3:3:2-3.

AD 339-Conversion to Judaism now becomes a major criminal offense.

AD 340-397-Saint Ambrose is appointed Bishop of Milan. After his election he joins the Church, becomes baptized, and is ordained. "Perhaps you may be saying: 'I see something else; how can you assure me that I am receiving the Body of Christ?' It but remains for us to prove it. And how many are the examples we might use! Christ is in that Sacrament, because It is the Body of Christ." Saint Zeno of Verona, 375 A.D., calls Christ "Sol Noster, Sol Verus." ~Saint Ambrose, The Mysteries, 390 A.D. from Essays by Tom Jensen.

Of Jesus, Saint Ambrose says, "He is our New Sun [Hic Sol Novus noster]." ~Excursus: from: The Fathers of the Church, Saint Augustine [354 -430], Sermons on the Liturgical Seasons, Translated by Sister Mary Sarah Muldowney, R. S. M., The Catholic University of America Press, 1977, 1959.

And of the Jews, the anti-Semite, Saint Ambrose, calls the Jewish Synagogue, "A place of unbelief, a home of impiety, a refuge of insanity, damned by God Himself." ~Saint Ambrose, 388 C.E.

AD 341-Flavius Julius Constantius persecutes, "All the soothsayers and Hellenists," and many gentile Hellenists are either imprisoned, or executed.

The Christian Emperors of Rome decree that Christians converting to Judaism, and Jews obstructing the conversion of other Jews to Christianity, will incur the death penalty, and that Jews can not marry Christians, or hold public office, or own slaves [331-396 C.E.]

AD 342-420-, Saint Jerome, Eusebius Sophronius Hieronymus, secretary of Pope Damasus I, translates the Scriptures from the Early Greek Versions classifying the Old Testament as Scripture only that which is written in Aramaic. Included are Greek translations that he feels are substandard and calls them "Apocrypha." ~The Council of Trent in 1546 declares the Apocrypha sacred and canonical.

According to Eusebius, 260-339 C.E., Constantine noted that among the presbyterian factions, "Strife had grown so serious, vigorous action was necessary to establish a more religious state," but he could not bring about a settlement between the rival God factions [Christian vs. Christian and Christian vs. Pagan].

To Pope Pius XII, "I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians." ~Mahatma Gandhi

~Eusebius, Life of Constantine, op. cit., pp. 26-8.

Eusebius declares both Peter, and Paul as liars, and Apollonius of Tyana, just short of being a God, “And this point is also worth noticing, that whereas the tales of Jesus have been vamped up by Peter and Paul and a few others of the kind, men who were liars and devoid of education and wizards, the history of Apollonius was written by Maximus of Aegae, and by Damis the philosopher who lived constantly with him, and by Philostratus of Athens, men of the highest education, who out of respect for the truth and their love of mankind determined to give the publicity they deserved to the actions of a man at once noble and a friend of the Gods.” ~The Treatise of Eusebius, The Son of Pamphilus, Against The Life Of Apollonius of Tyana, written by Philostratus, Occasioned By The Parallel Drawn by Hierocles Between Him and Christ, Translated by F.C. Conybeare, 1912. Transcribed from the Loeb Philostratus, vol. 2, pp. 484-605, cf. Hierocles, Lover of Truth.

The Latinized translation by Saint Jerome [The Vulgate] is commissioned by Pope Damasus I, in 382, to revise the Old Latin versions of the Gospels. Completed in 405. Saint Jerome is first to employ the word Lucifer to Satan [with a small “s” in the Old Testament]. The Biblical origin of Lucifer begins in Isaiah 14:12, “How you are fallen from Heaven O Lucifer, son of the morning!” This quotation is from the King James Version of the Bible, but the Hebrew text says, “How you have fallen from heaven O morning star, son of the dawn!” The Hebrew text does not contain the proper name of any God, and it is unknown whether the ancient Israelites actually identified the morning star with any angel or God [Venus(?)].

The word “Lucifer,” many will be surprised to learn, means “Light giver or bringer of light.” The Vulgate is used to determine the meaning of ancient words no longer used today as portrayed in the Septuagint. Saint Jerome [and Saint Augustine] manifest a neurotic loathing of sex [sex is sinful whether married or not] that is reflected in his writings and perpetuated by the Church today. In 382, Saint Jerome returns to Rome, where he is made secretary to Pope Damasus I and becomes a significant Church figure.

“... The text of the Septuagint was regarded as so unreliable, because of its freedom in rendering, and of the alterations, which had been introduced into it, etc., that, during the 2nd century of our era it was discarded by the Church.” ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. iv, 625.

The Church admits to unauthorized, un-enlightened additions to Scripture, “Copies of the Septuagint.” Says the Catholic Encyclopedia, “Were multiplied, and, as might be expected, many changes, deliberate as well as involuntary, crept in.” ~Catholic Encyclopedia, Vol. xiii, 723.

Christianized Roman Punishment: The Roman Emperors Constantius and Constans inherit much of the Empire from their father, the so-called first Christian Roman Emperor, Constantine, call for “Exquisite Punishment” for homosexuality.

Many people place themselves within his spiritual guidance, including a noble widow named Paula and her daughter, who follow him to the Holy Land in 385 after the death of Pope Damasus I. Jerome becomes despondent after the sack of Rome in 410 and the death of Paula and her daughter, which contributes to his increasing isolation.

Like Saint Augustine and Tertullian, Saint Jerome then writes against the virtues of womankind as his writings show that the good Saint Jerome had strong feelings as regards to sex and marriage [temptations of the flesh]

“How often, where I was living in the desert and the solitude that affords a savage dwelling place, parched by a burning sun, how often did I fancy myself amid the pleasures of Rome. I sought solitude because I was filled with bitterness. Sackcloth disfigured my misshapen limbs, and my skin had become by neglect as black as an Ethiopian's. Tears and groans were every day my portion. I, who from fear of hell had confined myself to that prison where I had no other companions but scorpions and wild beasts, fancied myself amongst bebies of young girls. My face was pale and my frame chilled with fasting; yet my mind was burning with the cravings of desire, and the fires of lust flared up from my flesh that was as that of a corpse. I do not blush to avow my abject misery... So long as we are borne down by this frail body; so long as we have treason within this earthly vessel, so long as the flesh lusteth against the spirit and the spirit against the flesh, there can be no sure victory.” ~Saint Jerome, The Ten Commandments by

Joseph Lewis

AD 346-395- Theodosius I, born in Spain, Flavius Theodosius, is a strong supporter of the early Christian movement. He is vehement in his persecution of the Arians and discourages the practice of the old Roman pagan religions. In 390, he orders the massacre of 7,000 citizens in Greece and is ordered excommunicated by the Bishop of Milan [later to become Saint Ambrose].

The Bishop demands public penance for his act of barbarism before lifting this ban. "Great importance was soon attached to external marks of repentance to tears, fasting, and mortification of the flesh; and inward regeneration of the heart, which alone constitutes a real conversion, was forgotten." ~D'aubigne. "As confession and penance are easier than the extirpation of sin and the abandonment of vice, many ceased contending against the lusts of the flesh, and preferred gratifying them at the expense of a few mortifications." ~D'aubigne.

With all his acknowledged sins, he is still known as "Theodosius the Good," for he is responsible for the destruction of the Serapeum [Guardian of God's Throne] by which the early Church then claims itself to be the archrival of wisdom [Sainthood is granted for helping the Church, not necessarily man]

Four hundred thousand parchment scrolls are also consecrated by being burned beyond use or recognition with the torching of the great library. The true mysteries of Egyptian Magic will be lost for eternity. Theodosius has helped the Church Fathers continue their quest in historical restructuring.

Christians deny the influence of the Egyptian priests and the philosophers from India, yet, "It is then not unreasonable on my part, I think, to have yielded myself to a philosophy so highly elaborated, to a philosophy, which, if I may use a metaphor from the stage, the Indians mount, as it deserved to be mounted, upon a lofty and Divine mechanism before they wheel it out upon the stage. And that I was right to admire them, and that I am right in considering them wise and blessed, it is now time to learn." ~The Treatise of Eusebius, The Son of Pamphilus, Against The Life Of Apollonius of Tyana, written by Philostratus, Occasioned By The Parallel Drawn by Hierocles Between Him and Christ, Translated by F. C. Conybeare, 1912. Transcribed from the Loeb Philostratus, vol. 2, pp. 484-605.

Large scale persecutions against non-Christian peoples in Constantinople continue and banishment of the famous orator, Libanius, who is accused of being a magician. ~cf. John 7:20; 10:20

AD347-419-Saint Jerome's Latin "Vulgate," is the basis for the Jesuit's "Reheims-Douay" text published in 1582, attempting to downplay William Tyndale's English text, which later will become the King James Version of 1611 [present edition 1769].

AD347-407-Saint John Chrysostom, born in Antioch Syria [now Turkey], ordained by Bishop Flavian in 386, fought against corruption and vices. The patriarch Theophilus of Alexandria and Empress Eudoxia have him banished in 403 & 404. Pope Innocent I appeals on his behalf to the Byzantine Emperor for his reinstatement.

The Johnites in Persia reject his teachings and are later brought under the domain of Christian thought. Upon hearing of the destruction and burning of the famous Library of Alexandria by Christians under the leadership of Bishop Theopophilus, Saint John Chrysostom comments, "Every trace of the old philosophy and literature of the Ancient World has vanished from the face of the earth." ~Bible Myths and Their Parallels in Other Religions, by T.W. Doane.

Fortunately, he was wrong, for copies of many religious works escaped the clutches of the religious fanatics, the Catholics [the Dead Sea Scrolls amongst them], and 1600 years later, Christians will claim their religion is the one and only true religion of God. This is difficult to refute when those who profess the Truth, yet endeavor to conceal or destroy it have eradicated all contrary evidence.

The Eleusinian Mysteries, with their water purification rites; cleansing in the sea, practicing a ritual of birth, death, and resurrection continue their practices until the 4th century. The Church's perspective regarding women is best reflected by Saint John Chrysostom. "Based partly on the Judaic Temple service, partly on Greek Mystery rituals of purification, vicarious sacrifice, and participation through communion in the death overcoming powers of the deity, the Mass grew slowly into a rich congeries of prayers, psalms, readings, sermon, antiphonal recitations, and, above all, that symbolic atoning sacrifice of the Lamb of God!..." ~Will Durant, Caesar and Christ, p. 599.

"Marriage is good, but virginity is better than marriage. If you would have my candid opinion on the matter, it is that I consider virginity to be as high above marriage as the Heavens are above the earth."

At first men were allowed to marry sisters, but then came polygamy, and the next progress was monogamy, with continence, but the perfect state is celibacy for the Kingdom of Christ, according to his mysterious hint in Matthew 19:12, the recommendation of Paul, 1 Corinthians 7:1, 7, 34, 40, and the passage in Revelation 14:1-4, where "A hundred and forty-four thousand virgins" are distinguished from the innumerable multitude of other saints.

Saint Thomas Aquinas states that virginity alone could make us equal to the angels. These 'Inspired' opinions were confirmed by the decrees of the synods, and are embodied in the canon of the Council of Trent, in which it is laid down that, "Whosoever saith that the marriage state is to be placed above the state of virginity or of celibacy, and that it is not better and more blessed to remain in virginity or in celibacy, than to enter marriage, let him be anathema." ~Note: There wasn't anything written in Scripture to back the new-found Church doctrine of celibacy for the priests, but the Bible does speak of the latter days when people will be forbidden to marry.

Celibacy is considered by some in the priest craft via their interpretation of Scripture:

- ✠ "You shall love the Lord your God with all your heart and with all your soul and with all your mind." ~Matthew 22:37.
- ✠ "An unmarried man concerns himself with the Lord's work, because he is trying to please the Lord, but a married man concerns himself with worldly matters, because he wants to please his wife; and so he is pulled in two directions. An unmarried woman or a virgin concerns herself with the Lord's work because she wants to be dedicated, both in body and spirit; but a married woman concerns herself with worldly matters, because she wants to please her husband... I want you... To give yourself completely to the Lord's service without any reservation." ~1 Corinthians 7:32-35.

The Christian Fathers regarded 'Woman' as did Saint Chrysostom, as "A necessary evil, a natural temptation, a desirable calamity, a domestic peril, a deadly fascination, and a painted ill!"

The pious Father Tertullian, in his 'Exhortation to Chastity,' has chapters captioned, "Second Marriage a Species of Adultery," and "Marriage Itself Impugned as akin to Adultery." ~On Chastity, chs. ix, x; Ante-Nicene Fathers, iv, 55.

Strangely enough, and perhaps upon what may have appeared as good physiological reasoning, Tertullian "Denies the virginity of Mary, the mother of Christ, in part, though he affirms it ante partum." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 14, 523.

And of the virginity in men, Tertullian declares, "So many men-virgins, so many voluntary eunuchs." With a marked approval, Tertullian, supports the fanatical incitation of the Christ to self-mutilation, "For the Kingdom of Heaven's sake." ~Matthew 19:1.

"The Lord Himself opens the Kingdoms of Heaven to eunuchs, as being Himself a Virgin; to whom looking, the Apostle [Paul] also, for this reason, gives the preference to continence." ~1 Corinthians vii, 1, 7, 37, 40.

The Church taught that when a woman marries, she should feel the deepest sorrow for the loss of her virginity; also that if anyone felt the slightest passion in nudity with the opposite sex, he was a depraved human being. "Every woman," said Clement of Alexandria, "... Ought to be filled with shame at the thought that she is a woman."

He stoutly maintained that marriage and fornication were not the same, but that the difference between marriage and adultery was so fine that it resolved itself into a mere legal fiction. Tertullian said that a, "... Stain upon our chastity is accounted by us as more dreadful than any punishment or any death." ~From The Ten Commandments by Joseph Lewis.

"But fornication and all impurity or covetousness must not even be named among you, as is fitting among Saints... Be sure of this, that no fornicator or impure man, or one who is covetous [that is, an idolater], has any inheritance in the Kingdom of Christ and of God. Let no one deceive you with empty words, for it is because of these things that the wrath of God comes upon the sons of disobedience... Take no part in the unfruitful works of darkness, but instead expose them. For it is a shame even to speak of the things that they do in secret; but when anything is exposed by the light it becomes visible, for anything that becomes visible is light." ~Ephesians 5:3-13.

Is it no wonder that the Church still seeks to prevent women becoming priests? The Religious Man Society feels they [women] are inferior and were the ones to corrupt mankind to eternal damnation.

Codex Vaticanus (B): the earliest Christian Bible (LXX - 1-4 Maccabees - Psalms of Solomon - Psalms 151 + 27

New Testament), missing Genesis 1-46:28, Psalms 105:27-137:6, 1 Timothy-Phm, Hebrews 9:14, and the end of the Alexandrian text-type, which is considered the most accurate text-type of the Gospels. The Codex Vaticanus, so called because it is the most famous manuscript in the possession of the Vatican library, is generally believed to be from the 4th century, and is thought to be the oldest [almost] complete copy of the Greek Bible in existence.

Lacking are most of the Book of Genesis, Hebrews 9:14[to the end], the Pastoral Epistles, and the Book of Revelation; these parts were lost by damage to the front and back of the volume, which is common in ancient manuscripts. The writing is in capital letters [called uncial script] without spaces between words [scriptio continuo], and is arranged in three columns on the page [Koine Greek]. ~Note: Some Egyptian elements, such as the pre-Christian Book of Revelation was originally called The Mysteries of Osiris and Isis.

AD351-Council of Chalcepon argues, “How can God be One? If Jesus is Divine, how can he be human?” In order to solve this dilemma the words “Born of the Virgin Mary” are added to the creed in Church Doctrine. “The worship of the Virgin as the Theotokos or Mother of God, which was introduced into the Catholic Church about the time of the destruction of the Serapeum [391 C.E.], enabled the devotees of Isis to continue unchecked their worship of the Mother Goddess by merely changing the name of the object of their adoration, and Prof. Drexler gives a long list of the statues of Isis, which thereafter were used, sometimes with unaltered attributes, as those of the Virgin Mary. The general use of images, the suspension in the churches of ‘Ex voto’ representations of different parts of the human body in gratitude for miraculous cures of maladies, and the ceremonial burning of candles, may also be traced to the same source; while the institution of monachism which had taken a great hold on Christian Egypt, is now generally attributed to Saint Pachomius, who had actually been in his youth a recluse of Serapis.”

~Forenners and Rivals of Christianity, Francis Legge

The Apostle's Creed in itself is not of Apostolic derivation, but adopted from the 2nd Century Greek philosophical and religious interpretations of ancient Greek Gods. The “Descent into hel” was not added to the Apostles' Creed until after the 6th century.

The Greeks had their Gods, but not all Greeks believed in the Gods; Gods which often had human attributes, “Nor do I myself think that such stories are fit to be told. Nor yet, said I, about Gods going to war with Gods and plotting and fighting [untrue as such things are] ought anything at all to be said, if at least the future guardians of our city are to regard it as very disgraceful to be lightly quarreling one with another. Much less must we invent fables about wars of the giants, and work them in embroidery, with numberless other quarrels of all kinds of gods and heroes against their own kith and kin. But if there were any chance of our persuading them, that no citizen was ever at enmity with a fellow citizen, and that such a thing was unholy, rather should tales of this kind be told to children from the first by old men and old women and by those of mature age, and the poets should be compelled to make their tales like these.” ~Plato speaking in Eusebius of Caesarea: Præparatio Evangelica [Preparation for the Gospel], Tr., E.H. Gifford, 1903.

The Creed before that stood as follows: “I believe in God the Father Almighty; and in Jesus Christ, his only begotten son, our Lord; who was born of the Holy Ghost and Virgin Mary; and was crucified under Pontius Pilate, and was buried; and the third day rose again from the dead; ascended into Heaven; sitteth on the right hand of the Father; whence he shall come to judge the quick and the dead; and in the Holy Ghost; the Holy Church; the remission of sins; and the Resurrection of the flesh... Amen.”

The story of Jesus descending into Hell had its origin in the old Pagan story of a war in heaven. This story, besides being given in the Apocalypse or Revelation, is to be found in the Persian Zend Avesta, and was known to the Assyrians, Egyptians, Greeks, ancient Mexicans, the natives of the Caroline Islands, the Hindus, etc. The concept of Hell is born out of ignorance, brutality, fear, cowardice, superstition, and revenge by a barbaric society eager to advance themselves as a revered group.

Wittingly or otherwise, the priestly class, soon come to abuse their powers in seeking riches by telling the people that the evil forces reward now while God rewards in the hereafter, and that they, the priestly class, and they alone, could intervene in dispensing fortunes in an eternal world. Each religious group learning from the proclaimed priests to kill those who did not believe as they believed.

The Inquisition will help make the priest craft rich, “Above all, it made it overwhelmingly to its interest to procure the conviction of all who were brought before it, especially when they were persons of great [financial] means. Nothing else, perhaps, was more instrumental in draining the Peninsula of its accumulated wealth during the course of the 16th, 17th, and 18th centuries. It was a weapon, which struck at the whole of a man's family, and might reduce it in a moment from affluence to beggary, while through its means the economic life of the whole country was liable to be disorganized.” ~Encyclopaedia Judaica, ed. Cecil Roth, Oxford/Jerusalem 1971.

“... Whose life was threatened by the tyrant Kansa, who had heard a prediction that Krishna [or Christma] would one day slay him. The child escaped and grew up among rustic cowherds. Among the miracles he performed was the raising of a widow's son from the dead. He slew Kansa, and descended into Hell [the underworld] to restore certain children to their sorrowing mothers.” ~Told of the infant Krishna, Fore runners and Rivals of Christianity, Francis Legge

In Egypt, Typhon was the “God of Evil;” and Anubis, the “Jackal-headed genius of death,” conducted souls to the land of shades. Osiris was “God of the underworld and judge of the dead.” ~Bank of Wisdom, Box 926, Louisville, KY 40201.

Borrowing from other faiths facilitates the conversion of the Pagans, “Christians incorporated the celebration of other religions into their own traditions... One new festival the Church established about this time [4th century] was Epiphany. The Alexandrian Church of Isis had long celebrated the day, which became Epiphany as the birthday of Osiris from the Virgin. The Mysteries of Isis originated under the Ptolemies as an Egyptian form of the Eleusinian Mysteries of Greece [?] and had been imported into Rome by the 1st century B.C.E. For several centuries, the Alexandrian Church of Isis represented serious competition to the Christian Church in the Roman world. It was from the tradition of the Alexandrian Church that Christianity garnered the practice of having daily liturgical services in large ornate temples.’

The Papacy is weak in its claim that it deives its powers from Peter, and therefore is want to create a stronger position of legitimacy, thereby creating more lexis for their proclaimed ‘Saints.’ “[Jesus says,] ‘Simon, my follower, I have made you the foundation of the Holy Church. I betimes called you Peter, because you will support all its buildings. You are the inspector of those who will build on Earth a Church for me. If they should wish to build what is false, you, the foundation, will condemn them. You are the head of the fountain from which my teaching flows; you are the chief of my Disciples. Through you I will give drink to all peoples. Yours is that life-giving sweetness, which I dispense. I have chosen you to be, as it were, the first-born in my institution so that, as the heir, you may be executor of my treasures. I have given you the keys of my kingdom. Behold, I have given you authority over all my treasures.’” ~Saint Ephraim of Syria Homily 4, 351 A.D.

And again we have further claims, “In the city of Rome the Episcopal chair was given first to Peter, the chair in which Peter sat, the same who was head, that is why he is also called Cephas, ... Of all the Apostles, the one chair in which unity is maintained by all. Neither do the Apostles proceed individually on their own, and anyone who would [presume to] set up another chair in opposition to that single chair would, by that very fact, be a schismatic and a sinner... Recall, then, the origins of your chair, those of you who wish to claim for yourselves the title of Holy Church.” ~Saint Optatus The Schism of the Donatists, 367 A.D.

“They [the Novatian heretics] have not the succession of Peter, who hold not the ‘Chair of Peter,’ which they rend by wicked schism; and this, too, they do, wickedly denying that sins can be forgiven [by the Sacrament of Confession] even in the Church, whereas it was said to Peter: ‘I will give unto thee the Keys of the Kingdom of Heaven, and whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth, shall be bound in Heaven, and whatsoever thou shall loose on earth shall be loosed in Heaven.’” ~Saint Ambrose of Milan On Penance, 388 C.E.

Novatian was a kind of minister who refused to take any part in the apostasy. His character, and some of the evils that forced him to separate from the main body of Christianity, are set forth by Robinson, Novatian was “A man of extensive learning, and held the same doctrine as the Church did, and published several treatises in defense of what he believed. His address was eloquent and insinuating, and his morals were irreproachable. He saw with extreme pain the intolerable depravity of the Church. Christians, within the space of a very few years, were caressed by one Emperor and persecuted by another. In seasons of prosperity, many rushed into the Church for base purposes. In times of adversity, they denied the faith, and ran back to [Pagan] idolatry again. When the squall was over, away they came again to the Church, with all their vices, to deprave others by their examples. The Bishops, fond of proselytes, encouraged all this, and transferred the attention of the Christians from the old confederacy for virtue, to vain shows at Easter, and other Jewish ceremonies, adulterated too with Paganism... In the end, Novatian formed a Church, and was elected Bishop. Great numbers followed his example, and all over the Empire Puritan Churches were constituted and flourished through the succeeding two hundred years. After ward, when penal laws obliged them to lurk in corners, and worship God in private, they were distinguished by a variety of names, and a succession of them continued till the Reformation.” ~Robert Robinson, Ecclesiastical Researches, p. 126. Cambridge: Francis Hodson, 1792. quoted in Separations From the Church, Chapter XIX, <http://www.whitestate.org/books/agp/AGPc19.html>

It is ironic that Jesus never mentions any succession; the Bible never mentions any succession either before or after Jesus, “It is within the power of all, therefore, in very Church, who may wish to see the truth, to contemplate clearly the tradition of the Apostles manifested throughout the whole world; and we are in a position to reckon up those who were by the Apostles instituted Bishops in the Churches, and [to demonstrate] the succession of these men to our own times; those who neither taught nor knew of anything like what these [heretics] rave about.” ~Saint Irenaeus, Refutation of Heresies, Book 3, Chapter 1. 1.

It will be very difficult for Christians to rid themselves of nearly two thousand years of hatred of the Jews, as their saints spew their toxic venom. In his writings, Saint Ephraem refers to God's punishment for the Jews.

- ✠ Because the Jews reviled Jesus, “The Lord has banished them from their land, and now they are condemned to wander over the whole face of the earth.” ~ Saint Ephraem.
- ✠ Saint John Chrysostom stigmatizes the Jews, writing that, “The Jews behave no better than hogs and goats in their lewd grossness and the excesses of their gluttony.”
- ✠ “The Church admits and avows the Jewish people to be cursed, because after killing Christ they continue to till the ground of an earthly circumcision, an earthly Sabbath, an earthly passover, while the hidden strength or virtue of making known Christ, which this tilling contains, is not yielded to the Jews while they continue in impiety and unbelief, for it is revealed in the New Testament. While they will not turn to God, the veil which is on their minds in reading the Old Testament is not taken away... The Jewish people, like Cain, continue tilling the ground, in the carnal observance of the law, which does not yield to them its strength, because they do not perceive in it the grace of Christ.” ~Saint Augustine, 347-407 C.E.

The strengthening of the Church's position does not occur until over three hundred years after the death of Jesus, and only after the Gnostics proclaim that they have documents proving their legitimacy. Saint Jerome even believes that a second deluge will occur, “I follow no leader but Christ and join in communion with none, but the chair of Peter. I know that this is the rock on which the Church has been built. Whoever eats the Lamb outside this house is profane. Anyone who is not in the ark of Noah will perish when the flood prevails.” ~Saint Jerome, Letter 15, 396 A.D.

“Simon Peter, the son of John, from the village of Bethsaida in the province of Galilee, brother of Andrew the Apostle, and himself chief of the Apostles, after having been Bishop of the Church of Antioch and having preached to the Dispersion... Pushed on to Rome in the second year of Claudius to over-throw Simon Magus, and held the sacerdotal chair there for twenty-five years until the last, that is the fourteenth, year of Nero. At his hands he received the crown of martyrdom being nailed to the cross with his head towards the ground and his feet raised on high, asserting that he was unworthy to be crucified in the same manner as his Lord.” ~Saint Jerome Lives of Illustrious Men, 396 A.D, for the Catholic defense see the Internet: www.catholic-defense.com.

“The Church forgery mill did not limit itself to mere writings but for centuries cranked out thousands of phony 'relics' of its 'Lord,' 'Apostles,' and 'Saints'... There were at least 26 'Authentic' burial shrouds scattered throughout the abbeys of Europe, of which the Shroud of Turin is just one... At one point, a number of churches claimed the one foreskin of Jesus, and there were enough splinters of the 'True Cross,' that Calvin said the amount of wood would make 'A full load for a good ship.'” ~Acharya S, The Christ Conspiracy.

“The worship of the martyrs, the origin of the worship of saints, took the place of the worship of the Greek heroes, and sometimes adopted even their names and their legends.” ~Reinach

AD 353-An edict of Constantius orders the death penalty for all those who worship through pagan sacrifices and “Idols.”

“If any person should be converted from Christianity to Judaism, then his property shall be forfeit to the [Roman] treasury.” ~Code 16.8.7, dated 353 C.E., showing that Judaism was still gaining converts.

AD 354-430-13 November: Saint Augustine is born in what is now known as Algiers. Augustine lives with To Pope Pius XII, “I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians.” ~Mahatma Gandhi a Carthaginian woman, who bears him a son in 372, whom they name Adeodatus. The mother of Augustine, a devout Catholic, prays for his conversion and acceptance of Jesus Christ as his Savior. Augustine is a wild young man, and eventually accepts the new religion, Christianity, but later falls away, and returns to Catholicism and is Ordained in 391.

Suicide is declared a Mortal Sin: During the time of Saint Augustine, early Christian followers would repent and then be immediately baptized, and then without delay commit suicide, expecting to enter God's Kingdom of Heaven, because they now felt they had no chance to sin. Saint Augustine was then compelled to make suicide a "Mortal Sin" in order to stop the practice, which would definitely curtail future followers.

Saint Augustine alleges the act of "Original Sin" [The Christian Doctrine of the Primal Fall] is transmitted to each successive generation [through evil womankind] during procreation; hence, man is forever condemned until Baptized [it appears that the Church sees the sexual act like a venereal disease, to be avoided, and may be the reason why the Church is so set against women being ordained].

Saint Augustine said, "Suppress prostitution, and capricious lusts will overthrow society."

Saint Jerome recognized prostitution and argued that, "... As Mary Magdalene had been saved, so might any prostitute who repented....," although implied by the Church, Biblically, prostitution is not the crime of Mary Magdalene.

In 1431, at the Council of Basle, a high Church dignitary presented a discourse on the subject of prostitution in which he implied that it was the only a safeguard of good morals. ~Read The Ten Commandments by Joseph Lewis

Saint Augustine, on 23 September, 417, announces from the pulpit [Sermon, cxxxii, 10 in P. L., XXXVIII, 734], "Jam de Hac Causa Duo Concilia Missa Sunt ad Sedem Apostolicam, Inde Etiam Rescripta Venerunt; Causa Finita Est."

Two synods having written to the Apostolic See about this matter [infant baptism and original sin], the replies have come back; the question is settled. Do not challenge authority.

"The Roman Empire was stained with the blood of infants, till such murders were included, by Valentinian and his colleagues, in the letter and spirit of the Cornelian Law. The lessons of jurisprudence and Christianity had been inefficient to eradicate this inhuman practice, till their gentle influence was fortified by the terrors of capital punishment." ~Gibbon, Rise and Fall, Codex Theod., iii. 3, 1; Codex Justinianus iv. 43, 1; viii. 52, 3.

Did Jesus have carnal desires like most other men? One reason the Gospel of Philip is not accepted at the Council of Nicaea, because Jesus, "Loved her [Mary Magdalene] more than all the disciples and used to kiss her often on the mouth... The rest of the disciples offended by it and expressed disapproval. They said to him, 'Why do you love her more than all of us?...' ~Gospel of Philip Death does not come to Adam [first man] from a physical necessity, but through sin, mankind being ensnared by the first woman, and Saint Augustine felt that during the sexual act that man is too engrossed in the earthly pleasures to be thinking of God because of Adam's sin [Original Sin].

Augustine felt that man is condemned to eternal damnation due to Adam's original sin, and this inherited guilt is passed on to all the descendents of mankind through the "Sexual act," called "Concupiscence," which he believed is the irrational desire to take pleasure in other creatures, rather than God.

Another new edict orders the closing of all the Pagan temples, and some of which are profaned and turned into brothels or gambling establishments. The execution of Pagan priests follows as the Emperor is determined to make the world Christian.

The first burning of libraries in various cities of the Roman Empire is ordered to remove any hint of Paganism in Christianity. Lime factories are being organized next to the closed Pagan temples, and a major portion of the holy architecture of the Pagans is turned into lime.

"What is the difference, whether it is in a wife or a mother, it is still Eve the temptress that we must beware of in any woman." ~Saint Augustine.

Personally, I believe that when Saint Augustine left his girlfriend [or she left him] and it left an indelible mark upon him and eventually all Christendom as Augustine will declare sex a sin.

In his writings, "Confessions," Augustine states, "Give me chastity and continence, but not just now." [Augustine made this statement while still with his mistress who gave him a son]. "Saint Augustine had to exhort the brethren not to solemnize the day on account of the sun like the heathen, but rather on account of him who made the sun. Pope Saint Leo the Great, rebuked those who thought that Christmas was observed for the solstice and not the nativity of Christ.” ~from: Man and The Sun, Jacquetta Hawkes

He later felt that Christianity entailed celibacy, and was reluctant to take that final step, having fathered a son and now attached to a new mistress, much to the chagrine of his mother.

Saint Augustine believed that some species of plants and animals had developed from earlier creations of God thereby being one of the first Christians to have a concept of evolution [preceding Charles Darwin in the early 19th century].

Here we have the clear purpose of the sexual act described as being for “Procreation, not recreation,” and the Roman Fathers are quite emphatic in their feelings regarding the carnal act.

“For necessary sexual intercourse for begetting [children] is alone worthy of marriage. But that which goes beyond this necessity no longer follows reason but lust.” ~Saint Augustine of Hippo The Good of Marriage, 401 A.D.

“They [the Egyptian heretics] exercise genital acts, yet prevent the conceiving of children. Not in order to produce offspring, but to satisfy lust, are they eager for corruption.” ~Saint Epiphanius of Salamis Medicine Chest Against Heresies, 375 A.D.

“But I wonder why he [the heretic Jovianianus] set Judah and Tamar before us for an example, unless perchance even harlots give him pleasure; or Onan, who was slain because he grudged his brother seed. Does he imagine that we approve of any sexual intercourse except for the procreation of children?” ~Saint Jerome Against Jovinian, 393 A.D.

“And then, fearing because of your law against child-bearing... They copulate in a shameful union only to satisfy lust for their wives. They are unwilling to have children, on whose account alone marriages are made. When this is taken away, husbands are shameful lovers, wives are harlots, bridal chambers are brothels, fathers-in-law pimps.” ~Saint Augustine of Hippo Against Faustus, 400 A.D.

The superstitious Augustine accepts the earth is flat and inhabited on the upper side only, “As to the fable that there are Antipodes, that is to say, men who are on the opposite side of the earth, where the sun rises when it sets to us, men who walk with their feet opposite ours, is on no ground credible.” ~Saint Augustine, Civ. Dei, Bk. xvi, 9; p. 315.

And, like his lying predecessor, Augustine, Martin Luther will also engage in fantastically ridiculous stories, “I myself saw and touched at Dessay, a child of this sort, which had no human parents, but had proceeded from the Devil. He was twelve years old, and, in outward form, exactly resembled ordinary children.” ~Martin Luther, 1521.

Saint Augustine’s interpretation of Biblical Scripture essentially denounces a world having existed for thousands of years prior.

“They are deceived, too, by those highly mendacious documents which profess to give the history of many thousand years, though reckoning by the sacred writings, we find that not yet 6,000 years have passed... There are some, again, who are of opinion that this is not the only world, but that there are numberless worlds... For as it is not yet 6,000 years since the first man, who is called Adam, are not those to be ridiculed rather than refuted who try to persuade us of anything regarding a space of time so different from, so contrary to, the ascertained truth?” ~Saint Augustine, Civ. Dei, Bk. xii, 10, 11; N&PNF.

Werewolves On The Other Side of the World: The superstitions that prevailed during Saint Augustine’s era are too numerous to proclaim, and Augustine’s embarrassments are further obfuscated [darkened, hidden] by Christian writers who omit these chapters in Augustine’s writings. ~Read City of God, which omits numerous chapters by Saint Augustine.

The saintly, but prevaricating [lying] Augustine states, “It is reported that some monstrous races of men have one eye in the middle of the forehead; some, the feet turned backward from the heel; some, a double sex, the right breast like a man, the left like a woman, and that they alternately beget and bring forth; others are said to have no mouth... They tell of a race who have two feet but only one leg, and are of marvelous swiftness, though they do not bend the knee; they are called Skiopedes, because in the hot weather they lie down on their backs and shade themselves with their feet. Others are said to have no head on their shoulders... What shall we say of the Cynocephali [Werewolves], whose doglike head and barking proclaim them beasts rather than men? But we are not bound to believe all we hear of these monstrosities...

To Pope Pius XII, “I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians.” ~Mahatma Gandhi

But who could enumerate all the human births that have differed widely from their ascertained parents? No one will deny that all these have descended from that one man ... That one first father of all... Accordingly, it ought not to seem absurd to us, that as in the individual races there are monstrous births, so in the whole race there are monstrous races; ... If they are human, they are descended from Adam... There are in Cappadocia mares, which are impregnated by the wind, and their foals live only three years.”
 ~Forgery in Christianity by Joseph Wheless, 1930, from the Bank of Wisdom.

“... If it was good company and conversation that Adam needed, it would have been much better arranged to have two men together as friends, not a man and a woman.” ~Saint Augustine, The Literal Meaning of Genesis 9:5-9.

Saint Augustine accepts as historical truth the fabulous founding of Rome by Romulus and Remus, their virgin-birth by the God Mars, and their nursing by the she-wolf, but attributes the last to the provident interference of the Hebrew God.

Some of Augustine's comments might be applicable to one later Virgin-born, “Rhea, a vestal virgin, who conceived twin sons of Mars, as they will have it, in that way honoring or excusing her adultery, adding as a proof that a she-wolf nursed the infants when exposed... Yet, what wonder is it, if, to rebuke the king who had cruelly ordered them to be thrown into the water, God was pleased, after divinely delivering them from the water, to succor, by means of a wild beast giving milk, these infants by whom so great a City was to be founded?” ~Forgery in Christianity by Joseph Wheless, 1930, from the Bank of Wisdom..

Saint Paul followed similar lines of superstitious thought and some claim that Paul, a bachelor, was a misogynist and because of this Saint Paul says to the Romans, “Not in riots and drunken parties, not in eroticism and indecencies, not in strife and rivalry, but put on the Lord Jesus Christ and make no provision for the flesh and its lusts.”

“If we marry, it is only so that we may bring up children.” ~Saint Justin Martyr First Apology, 160 A.D.

During his time, he writes many manuscripts condemning Pelagius and the idea of “Free Will.” Pelagius was a man of considerable learning and austere moral character. Upon arriving in Rome 390, he is appalled by the lax morals of the Roman Christians. He preaches Christian simplicity and recruits many followers with his strict moral teaching and has particular success in southern Italy and Sicily.

Augustine preached openly until his death [455] and one of his foremost disciples is Julian of Eclanum. He argued that the corruption of man is not innate, but is due to bad examples and habits, and that the natural faculties of man are not negatively affected by Adam's fall.

Human beings can lead lives of virtue and thereby warrant Heaven by their own efforts. Pelagius asserted that, “True Grace” lies in the natural gifts of humanity, including free will, reason, and conscience. In 412, St. Augustine writes a series of works in which he attacks the Pelagian Doctrine of “Human Moral Autonomy,” and develops his own creation of the relationship of human freedom to Divine Grace.

As a result of Augustine's strong criticisms, Pelagius is eventually accused of heresy, but is acquitted at Synods at Jerusalem and Diospolis. In 418, a Council at Carthage condemns Pelagius and his followers. Pope Zosimus also condemns him.

The Priscillianists, a religious sect, during the time of Augustine acknowledge the signs of the Zodiac with the Old Testament and the names of Angels are given to the planets. Augustine himself is a practicing Manichean for nine years before converting to Christianity. Since the Essenes were also interested in calendars and astrology, there is an even more amazing pun on Nazareth, “Mazzaroth,” which is the Hebrew word for Zodiac, and since Jesus came to be seen as a Sun God in the Roman Empire, and there is little doubt that Joshua was a Sun God to the children of Israel, although this may seem significant.

Then Augustine condemns Astrologers and accounts for their successes in divination being due to their inspiration by spirits. Reluctantly Augustine approves of the Church's edicts to punish heretics. In 1231, the church will establish a formal body to deal with these heretics called the “Inquisition.”

Was there a “God the Father” before the world was created? The Church is unable to answer this question until the arrival of Saint Augustine who condemns all who question the Church.

“God had spent that time building a special Hell for those that ask such questions.” ~Saint Augustine.
 To Pope Pius XII, “I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians.” ~Mahatma Gandhi

Religious perspectives from the Church have concluded that history is an illumination of God's plan for the world and therefore it has purpose. St. Augustine elaborated on this thesis in the 5th century, and in the 17th century, the French theologian, Jacques-Benigne Bossuet, proceeds to elaborate on the idea further in his "Discourse on Universal History," 1681.

The rise and fall of Empires is dependent upon, in Bossuet's thought, on the secret works of "Providence." It is in the New Testament that the term "Saints" is used to refer to All Believers in Jesus the Christ [be they dead or alive]. ~For Biblical references see: Job 5:1, Proverbs 2:8, Isaiah 2:9, Daniel 4:17, 7:18, 7:21, 7:25, 7:27, Acts 26:10, Romans 12:13, 1 Corinthians 6:2, Ephesians 3:8, 4:12, Psalms 31:23, 37:28, 50:5, 97:10, 116:15, 145:10, 7:6, 1 Thessalonians 5:13, 1 Timothy 5:10, Matthew 27:52, Jude 3, Philippians 4:21, and Revelations 5:8, 7:6, 11:18, 13:7, 18:24.

Originally the term Saints referred to the prophets and the clergy [rabbis]. The Church will proclaim as Saints almost all of the first fifty Popes, many of who acted less than Sainly. On idolatry Saint Augustine speaks out against the statesman Seneca, who, against his better knowledge, took part in idolatrous worship. St. Augustine says, "He was the more to be condemned for doing mendaciously what people believed him to do sincerely."

AD 357-Emperor Constantius outlaws all methods of divination [Persian, Greek, and Egyptian astrology not excluded].

Council of Sirmium, issues their so-called Blasphemy of Sirmium or Seventh Arian Confession, called the high point of Arianism [Jesus is not Divine].

AD 359-In Skythopolis, Syria, the Christians will organize the first death camps for the sole purpose of torturing and executing the arrested non-Christians from around the Roman Empire. It will be nearly 5 centuries before another Christian accomplishes this feat again. ~see Adolf Hitler. ~Note: Adolph Hitler received training in a Benedictine school.

Council of Rimini, Dated Creed [Acacians]; Pope Liberius rejects Arian Creed of Council [Jesus is not God]

AD 360-433-Cassian, John, Johannes Eremita or Johannes Massiliensis: Cassian is one of the first of the Semi-Pelagians, who rejects the interpretations of Saint Augustine that mankind is condemned by the original sin of Adam and souls are saved purely through the Grace of God, which cannot be earned [Pelagianism].

Cassian also opposes the Augustinian concept of moral choice in attaining Salvation. Codex Vaticanus (B): the earliest Christian Bible (LXX – 1-4 Maccabees - Psalms of Solomon - Ps151 + 27 New Testament), which is missing Genesis 1-46:28, Psalms 105:27-137:6, 1 Timothy-Phm, and Hebrews 9:14; the end of the Alexandrian text-type, aka Minority Text, which is considered the most accurate text-type of the Gospels. Scriptures are continually changed, even in early Christianity, but not without objections, a later [minuscule aera] scribe complains about the change of text in Hebrews 1:3: "Fool and knave, can't you leave the old reading alone and not alter it!" ~Fuldensis, Sigla for Variants in Vaticanus and 1 Corinthians 14:34-5.

The Minority Texts are believed to be the work of unbelieving Egyptian scribes who did not accept the Bible as the Word of God or Jesus Christ as the Son of God, but accepted by the Roman Church and rejected early Protestant Reformers! ~Note: The Minority Texts omit approximately 200 verses from the Holy Scriptures.

Julian, Constantius cousin, defeats the Germans in their futile invasion and is declared Emperor by his victorious army, which is dissatisfied with Constantine's successor, Constantius. Julian reverts to Paganism, which wins him the title of "Julian the Apostate."

The Synod of Elvira, 306 C.E., prohibited intermarriage and sexual intercourse between Christians and Jews, and even prohibited them from eating together.

AD 360-Saint Ambrose challenges the writings of Josephus, the Jew, for his exclusion of Jesus in his writings. Josephus was a prolific writer using exceptional details in his works of governmental affairs and events of his day. Included are the mundane affairs of petty crimes and arrests as well as extraordinary happenings.

The fact that he reduces the mentioning of "Jesus" and the performance of the many miracles to just a paragraph [also believed to be a forgery and added later], adds little credence to the Church's position that these events actually occurred. Josephus wrote volumes on every aspect of Roman Administrative occurrences with such detail that it is difficult to comprehend a motive for deleting or omitting the events of Jesus.

Jesus is relegated to a few short fictitious lines in the works of Josephus, as the later notations are not of his writing style, believed to have been added by someone else, and nowhere describing the arrest of a man named Jesus, which is a common name at this period, or of his arrest and/or condemnation. If Flavius Josephus believed that Jesus is the Jewish messiah, then why did he relegate so few words to this revelation? "Christ's humble and obscure life, ending in the ignominious death on the cross, was the very opposite of what the Jews expected of their Christ." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. i, pg. 620.

The Disciples of Jesus were Jewish, and "Christianity took its rise in Judaism; its Founder and His Disciples were Orthodox Jews, and the latter maintained their Jewish practices, at least for a time, after the day of Pentecost. The Jews themselves looked upon the followers of Christ as a mere Israelitish sect... The sect of the Nazarenes, [Acts 24:15], "the believers in the Promised Messiah." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. iii, pg. 713. "To make the human heart a temple, the soul an altar, and the mind a priest. These were the missions of Jesus the Nazarene." ~Kahlil Gibran

There is no mention is made of his many followers, his ministry, his miracles, or of his alleged Resurrection. Surely, such an event as this would have merited documentation if not an investigation.

Now, in the earlier parts of the New Testament there is nothing whatever mentioned about a miraculous birth of Jesus, yet the Paul appears quite certain of the Resurrection. Unless we deny the genuineness of the whole of the Epistles, which is a fraught venture, Paul appears absolutely convinced of the Resurrection; and this proves that it was already believed by many a few years after the death of Jesus, but Paul's insistence in the Epistles shows, of course, that it was disputed.

The statement was a piece of folly and would be a distinct stumbling block to the Christian converts from Paganism; precisely because they saw Pagan Resurrection celebrations every year in their provinces. But the belief existed, and Paul was sure of it, within a few years of Jesus' Crucifixion. "The Crucifix is the emblem and symbol of the Son of God, not because Jesus shed his blood upon the cross for the sins of man, but because the Christ is crucified perpetually so long as sin remains." ~The Book of Illuminations.

In one Biblical tradition, following Jesus Christ's death, and Resurrection, Mary Magdaalen uses her position to gain an invitation to a banquet given by Emperor Tiberius Caesar, and when she meets him, she is holding an egg in her hand and exclaims, "Christ is risen!" Caesar [a name of rank] laughs, and then says that Christ rising from the dead is as likely as the egg in her hand turning red while she held it.

Before he finishes speaking, the egg in Mary's hand turns a bright red, and she continues proclaiming the Gospel to the entire imperial house. It has been suspected that perhaps Josephus was prejudiced [a claim by the Church] against the Jews or of certain sects, however this theory does not hold credence in that he documented other minor Jewish events as well as the major rebellion.

Emperor Julian, the Apostate, becomes the last non-Christian Roman Emperor.

AD 361-Apollinarianism: the heresy taught by Apollinaris the Younger, Bishop of Laodicea in Syria about 361, not to be confused with Apollonius of the 1st century who is used as the model for the Christian's Jesus. Apollinaris taught that the Logos of God, which became the Divine Nature of Christ, took the place of the rational human soul of Jesus and that the body of Christ was a glorified form of human nature. Thus is, Jesus a mere man, He did not have a human mind but that the mind of Christ was solely Divine. Apollinaris taught that the two natures of Christ could not coexist within one person, and his solution was to lessen the human nature of Christ.

AD 362-Edict of Emperor Julian in 362, closes the teaching profession to Christians. "It is, I think, expedient to set forth to all mankind the reasons by which I was convinced that the fabrication of the Galileans is a fiction of men composed by wickedness. Though it has in it nothing divine, by making full use of that part of the soul, which loves fable, and is childish, and foolish, it has induced men to believe that the monstrous tale is truth." ~Emperor Julian's invective/insult, 362 C.E.

Satires and vindictive tales spread of the Christians, Julian's Saturnalia Party: Satire written about 362 C.E., in which Constantine finds Jesus while living a life of pleasure and incontinence. Julian places the following words into the mouth of Jesus, and finally has Constantine and his sons punished by avenging deities for their impiety, and utter irreligiousness, "He that is a seducer, he that is a murderer, he that is sacrilegious and infamous, let him approach without fear! For with this water will I wash him and will straightway make him clean. And though he should be guilty of those same sins a second time, let him but smite his breast and beat his head and I will make him clean again." ~Three New Ideas In the Field of Ancient History, 2011, <http://www.mountainman.com.au/essenes/>

AD 364- The Canonized Bible by the "Council of Laodicea" is compiled, which generally agrees on which books to include in the New Testament are to be decided on by a vote of the council members. The Canonized Bible by the "Council of Laodicea" is compiled, which is generally agreed upon, that, which books are to be included in the New Testament are decided by a vote of the council members.

Emperor Jovian orders the burning of the Library of Antioch to further destroy any traces of Paganism coming forth, which may corrupt Christianity.

The Church Council of Laodicea [Phrygia, Western Asia Minor] orders that religious observances are to be conducted on Sunday and not on Saturday to differentiate between the Jewish faith. Sunday becomes the new Sabbath. The practice of staying at home and resting on Saturday is declared sinful an anathema to Jesus Christ.

The Christian Council of Laodicea ruled in great detail against the Christian observance of the Jewish Sabbath [Saturday], their acceptance of unleavened bread from Jews, and their keeping of Jewish [Holy Day] festivals, and soon, the truth left by the Apostolic Church was not easily distinguishable. ~ Robin Lane Fox, Pagans and Christians, p. 482.

"... Leaven in the ancient world was a symbol of moral corruption [since it was] made by taking a piece of bread and storing it in a damp, dark place until mold forms. The bread rots and decays... Modern yeast... Is domesticated... In Israel there is an equation that leaven is the unholy everyday, and unleaven the Holy, the sacred, the feast." ~ Bernard Brandon Scott, Hear Then the Parable: A Commentary on the Parables of Jesus, 1989.

The Council of Laodicea, Canon 29 decrees anathema for all Christians who rest on the Sabbath; the disputed Canon 60 names only 26 New Testament Books [excludes Revelation].

AD 365- November 17th, an Imperial edict forbids Pagan officers of the army holding command over any Christian soldiers.

End of the World: Hilary of Poitiers announces that the End of the World will happen this year. But, again, it didn't. ~ Matthew 16:27-28 [Jesus fails to make good on his promise to return during the lifetime of his disciples], Matthew 24:34-35, Mark 9:1, 13:30 and Luke 9:26-27.

The Council of Laodicea, in 365, forbids the Catholic clergy to be astrologers.

AD 366- 384-Pope Saint Damasus, his father is Saint Lorenzo [the priest]. Damasus, is a Spanish priest to become the thirty-seventh Pope, in the list, of whose character we have reliable and fairly ample knowledge.

His name is inscribed in the calendar of Saints, Damasus was a man of significant immorality, degenerate, and decadent character, and his story illustrates the generally low moral quality of the new Church established by Emperor Constantine, which follows in the footsteps of the Roman Emperors.

"An enormous train of different superstitions were gradually substituted in the place of true religion and genuine piety." ... "When we cast an eye toward the lives and morals of Christians at this time, we find, as formerly, a mixture of good and evil; some eminent for their piety, others infamous for their crimes. The number however, of immoral and unworthy Christians, began so to increase, that the examples of real piety and virtue became extremely rare." ~ Mosheim, An Ecclesiastical History, Vol. I, Cent. IV, pp. 355, 372.

Bishop Hippolytus', "Refutation of All Heresies," Bk. IX, Ch. VII, states that Pope Saint Callistus, 217-22, an unscrupulous ex-slave adventurer, was equally lacking in moral character and his slave escapades is justified by the greatest fight in the emancipation of the Negro slave, which was to overcome the sanction of the appalling institution by the numerous texts in the Bible, which maintained that slavery is prescribed by God. "That slaves formed the household of the Pope, and that, by law, they were yet liable to torture. This seems clear from the words of Ennodius." ~ Comp. Hefele, Conciliengeschichte, ii. p. 620; and Milman, Latin Christianity, vol. i. p. 419, Am. ed., who infers from this fact.

The Catholic Church aided and abetted slavery, owning slaves, and even actively engaged in the most revolting forms of slavetrade, "Pope Clement V, 1309, decreed that resisting Venetians should be sold into slavery, and Pope Gregory XI and Pope Sixtus IV [of blessed memory] decreed the same for the Florentines, and Pope Julius II for both Florence and Bologna. The Bull by which Pope Nicholas V, 1442, encouraged Portugal to what became the organized trade in negro slaves... In 1538 Pope Paul III decreed slavery against all Englishmen who should dare to support King Henry VIII against the Pope!" ~Encyclopedia Britannica vol. 19, pg 35, 14th Edition.

"For centuries Christianity treasured the great commandment of love and mercy as traditional truth without recognizing it as a reason for opposing slavery, witch burning and all the other ancient and medieval forms of inhumanity. It was only when Christianity experienced the influence of the thinking of the 'Age of Enlightenment' that it was stirred into entering the struggle for humanity. The remembrance of this ought to preserve it forever from assuming any air of superiority in comparison with thought." ~Dr. Albert Schweitzer, Out of My Life and Thought: An Autobiography.

The contemporary and uncompromising Roman writer Ammianus Marcellinus, commenting on the appallingly savage electoral fight for the Papacy which takes place in the Vatican says that the Roman Bishops lived like princes, "Res Gestae, XXVII, 3," and the maneuvering for the position of Pope is vicious.

Why the Cardinals Are Sequestered When Electing A Pope: Saint Jerome, secretary to Damasus, briefly confirms the account of the vicious massacres in his "Chronicle," in the year 366, and the story is told by two Roman priests in a petition to the Emperor, in "Migne, Libellus Precum," vol. XIII.

The only difference between them is whether the supporters of Damasus, at the election, murdered 137 or 160 of his rival's supporters. ~See Petrucci della Gattina's Histoire Diplomatique des Conclaves, 4 vols., 1864-6, in French or Miss V. Pirie's Triple Crown, 1935.

The Pope is considered the material being on earth who represents the Son of God, the vicar of Christ, and who "Takes the place" of the Second Person of the omnipotent God of the Trinity, which, Vicar is, hypothetically, supposed to clearly represent, substitutes for, or "Takes the place" of another, and consequently, symbolizes "The Son of God," thus, is translated in Latin as "Vicarius Filii Dei," as a triple-tiered papal tiara, worn by Pope Paul VI, which declares him to be King of Heaven, earth, and of Purgatory. Dr. Adam Clarke claims also that Origen was the first Christian to teach Purgatory.

The Pope is proclaimed to have dominion over the whole world, "Receive the tiara adorned with three crowns and know that thou art Father of Princes and Kings, Ruler of the World, Vicar of our Savior Jesus Christ." ~Pontificale Romanum Clementis VIII, Editio Princeps, 1595-1596, the official liturgy of the Roman Catholic Church.

"The earliest reference to the Trinitarian Doctrinal insertion is found in the 'Didache.' The 'Didache' is a collection of fragments of writings from five or more documents. They were originally written, it is thought, between 80 and 160 C.E. Although we now have only 99 verses, those verses contain the seeds of many false teachings that developed into the Papal Superstitions. The seeds of Indulgences, the Mass, the Confessional, the substitution of sprinkling for immersion and other gross errors are to be found in that disreputable pseudo-Christian document." ~Refs: IV1, IX2-4, X2-6, XIII3, XVI1 and IV6.

Numerous Christian writers have published their books, claiming to reveal the hidden eighteen years of the Jesus, amongst which even claim, erroneously, a historical document is behind their false texts.

After years of anonymity, was Jesus a member of the secretive and austere Essenes? "It will hardly be doubted that our Savior himself belonged to this Holy brotherhood. This will especially be apparent when we remember that the whole Jewish community, at the advent of Christ, was divided into three parties, the Pharisees, the Sadducees, and the Essenes, and that every Jew had to belong to one of these sects. Jesus, who, in all things, conformed to the Jewish Law, and who was Holy, harmless, undefiled, and separate from sinners, would therefore naturally associate himself with that order of Judaism, which was most congenial to his Holy nature. Moreover, the fact that Christ, with the exception of once, was not heard of in public until his thirtieth year, implying that he lived in seclusion with this fraternity, and that though he frequently rebuked the scribes, Pharisees and Sadducees, he never denounced the Essenes, strongly confirms this conclusion." ~Ginsburg Essenes, p. 24.

The Trinity is another new creation of the early Church, “Go ye, therefore, and teach all nations, Baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost.” ~Matthew 28:19.

The Father didn't die, nor did the dedicated Spirit. The Bible says, “Buried with Him [Yeshua] in immersion,” not with the Father, the Son, and not with the Holy Spirit. ~Romans 6:3-5.

“The command to baptize into the threefold name is a late doctrinal expansion. Instead of the words baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost we should probably read simply, ‘Into my name.’” ~Dr. Peake, Bible Commentary, page 723.

No Trinity? “The exclusive survival [of the traditional text of Matthew 28:19] in all manuscripts, both Greek and Latin, need not cause surprise.... But in any case, the conversion of Eusebius to the longer text after the Council of Nicaea indicates that it was at that time being introduced as a Shibboleth of Orthodoxy into all codices... The question of the inclusion of the Holy Spirit on equal terms in the Trinity had been threshed out, and a text so invaluable to the dominant party could not but make its way into every Codex, irrespective of its textual affinities.” ~Conybeare, Hibbert Journal.

“Clerical conscience much troubled [see Comp. Bible App. 185] that the Apostles and Epistles never once employ the Triune name of Matthew 28:19. Even Trinitarians, knowing the idea of the Trinity was being resisted by the Church in the 4th century, admits [e.g. Peake], ‘The command to baptize with the threefold name is a late doctrinal expansion,’ but still prior to our oldest yet known manuscripts [early 4th century]. Its sole counterpart is, 1 John 5:7 is a proven interpolation. Eusebius [264-340 C.E.] denounces the Triune form as spurious, Matthew’s actual writing having been baptizing them ‘In my name.’” ~F. Whiteley, The Testimony, footnotesto Article: Baptism, 1958.

There are no records of a man called Jesus, of a Messiah known as Jesus, or any Savior called Jesus; Eusebius is the first person to quote anything as evidence for Jesus outside the traditional Gospels in 324 C.E. None of the early Church Fathers before him knew about the passage regarding Jesus in Josephus’ Antiquities, and if they did, they would surely have used it to help them in their many controversies with the Jews. Many knew, before Eusebius, about Josephus and his numerous writings, especially of the various crimes in and around the Roman Empire.

The books of Josephus appeared in Greek, and we give the list of names [Jesus characters] in their Greek form, as given in the index or in the text:

1. Jesus son of Naue.
2. Jesus son of Saul.
3. Jesus, high priest, son of Phineas.
4. Jesus son of the high priest Jozadak
5. Jesus son of Joiada.
6. Jesus, high priest, son of Simon.
7. Jesus, high priest, son of Phabes.
8. Jesus, high priest, son of Seë.
9. Jesus the Christ
10. Jesus son of Damnaeus, became high priest.
11. Jesus son of Gamliel, became high priest
12. Jesus son of Sapphas.

To Pope Pius XII, “I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians.” ~Mahatma Gandhi

13. Jesus, chief priest, probably to be identified with 10 or 11.
14. Jesus son of Gamalas, high priest.
15. Jesus, brigand chief on borderland of Ptolemais.
16. Jesus son of Sapphias.
17. Jesus brother of Chares.
18. Jesus a Galilean, perhaps to be identified with 15.
19. Jesus in ambush, perhaps to be identified with 16.
20. Jesus, priest, son of Thebuti.
21. Jesus son of Ananias, rude peasant, prophesies the fall of Jerusalem. ~Note: Why didn't Josephus write, Jesus, son of Joseph? Or Jesus, the Christ?

"The striking contrast and the illogical internal incoherence of the passage [Matthew 28:19]... Lead to a presumption of an intentional corruption in the interests of the Trinity. In ancient Christian times a tendency of certain parties to corrupt the text of the New Testament was certainly often imputed. This increases our doubt almost to a decisive certainty concerning the genuineness of the passage." ~E.K., Fraternal Visitor, Article: The Question of the Trinity and Matthew 28:19, 1924, p. 147-151, from Christadelphian Monatshefte. Cf. Deuteronomy 4:2.

In comparing Matthew 28:9 with Matthew 10:5-7, not only had Jesus given his devoted Disciples exactly the opposite instructions, he certainly never Baptized, or ordered the Baptism of, anybody; and Jesus never taught any cut-and-dried Trinitarian Doctrine of Father, Son or Holy Ghost. In Literal Translation of the Bible, the Trinitarian "Names" of Matthew 28:19 are placed in parentheses, to indicate that the words are of doubtful authenticity. ~Dr. Robert Young, Literal Translation of the Bible.

It will take the Church three more centuries to settle this matter, and even the orthodox theologians reluctantly admit that this ending was flagrantly tacked on to the Gospel of Matthew in the 4th century.

Saint Jerome has said, that no one would have believed the Virgin-birth of Jesus or that his mother was not an adulteress, "Until now, that the whole world has embraced the faith," and would therefore believe anything, except the truth! ~From the works of Joseph Wheless.

In 378, the Pope is charged in the civil court at Rome with adultery, as the semi-official 'Pontifical Chronicle' reluctantly admits. Even Mgr. Duchesne, "History of the Christian Church," II, 37, falsely states that we do not know the charge, and the "Catholic Encyclopaedia," which admits the charge, deceptively states that the Emperor [Gratian], on receiving an appeal, tried and acquitted the Pope. ~Mansi, Coll. Conc., III, 628.

The official authoritative response of the docile and youthful Emperor, Gratian, shows that, under pressure from Saint Ambrose to avert scandal, he held no trial, but quashed the proceedings.

Under the persuasion of Ambrosius, Emperor Gratian prohibited Pagan worshiping in Rome, and refused to wear the insignia of the "Pontifex Maximus," which Emperor Constantine had worn as priest of priests, which Gratian felt as unbecoming a Christian. He ordered the removal of the Pagan Altar of Victory from the Senate floor at Rome, and despite remonstrations of the Pagan members of the Senate, Gratian ordered the confiscation of tax revenues, banned legacies of real property to the Vestals, and even abolished some of the privileges belonging to the senators and to the Bishop of Bishops. ~Note: the title, Pontifex Maximus, is now claimed by the Pope in Rome, which is embodied in the Pope's triple crown.

The petitioning priests say that the Pope was familiarly known in his Church as "The tickler of matrons' ears," and even Saint Jerome describes the Church as extraordinarily corrupt in both clergy and laity.

It is Pope Damasus who reopens the Catacombs, and the highest Catholic authorities reluctantly admit that his stories of the martyrs are now fictitious. Mgr. Duchesne maliciously adds that the quality of the poetry in which he glorified them was as bad as his history. ~from the works of the priest, J. McCabe, Rationalists Encyclopaedia

AD 366-By the year 366 C.E., more than 160 of the supporters of the rival candidates of the Papal chair had to be buried, and as late as 1492 the 'Butcher's bill' was more than 200 clerics who aspired to the position of 'Holy Father,' and were assassinated by the victors.

The struggle is now more refined; though when the Pope says his first Mass he still has nobles at hand to take the first sip of the wine to see that it has not been poisoned. The propitious man who at last gets the required majority vote states, "I am not worthy," and, because a Pope was once taken seriously when he said this, scampers quickly for the pontifical robes, which are waiting (in three sizes).

Then they take him out on the balcony to show to the public. The historical record of these Conclaves by Petrucelli della Gattina a good deal of it is translated in Miss V. Pirie's Triple Crown, 1935, beats the history of Tammany for clean fun.

AD367-Bishop Athanasius of Alexandria, later to become Saint Athanasius, in his 39th letter officially lists as Canonical the Twenty-Seven books of the New Testament. The books selected by saint Athanasius will become the Western Catholic Canon. “[Saint] Athanasius... Met Flavian, the author of the Doxology, which has since been universal in Christendom: ‘Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, etc.’ This was composed in opposition to the Arian Doxology: ‘Glory to the Father, by the Son, in the Holy Spirit.’” ~Robert Roberts, Good Company, Vol. iii, page 49.

The Eastern Orthodox churches will also accept the 27 books plus a few others, with the Coptic church having the most books. There are now three accounts given as to how the books, which now appear in the New Testament were chosen:

- ✠ By Popius in his ‘Synodicon’ to the Council of Nicaea, saying 200 “Versions of the Gospel were placed under a Communion table, and, while the Council prayed, the ‘Inspired Books’ jumped on the slab, but the rest remained under it.”
- ✠ By Irenmus, “The Church selected the four most popular of the Gospels.”
- ✠ By the Council of Laodicea, 366, saying, “Each book was decided by ballot. The Gospel of Luke escaped by one vote, while the Acts of the Apostles and the Apocalypse were rejected as forgeries.”

AD367-376-Saint Hilary of Poitiers refers to Jews as a perverse people who God has cursed forever, while Saint Ephroem refers to Jewish Synagogues as brothels.

AD370 (?) -455-Pelagius, Roman-British monk; taught strict morality and denied the existence of Original Sin and the need for baptism. Corruption of man is not inborn, but due to the acquisition of bad habits and environment. Man can restrain himself and merit heaven through Free Will [which opposes that of God’s Will].

Valens orders a sizeable persecution of all non-Christian peoples in all the Eastern Empire. In Antioch, among many other non-Christians, the ex-governor Fidustus and the priests Hilarius and Patricius are executed, and tons of non-Christian books are burned in the squares of the cities of the Eastern Empire. All the friends of Julianus are persecuted [Orebasius, Sallustius, Pegasius etc.], and the philosopher Simonides is burned alive by order of the good Christian authorities, and the great philosopher, Maximus, is ordered decapitated.

Optatus of Milevis is in conflict with the sectarian Donatists who stressed unity and Catholicity as marks of the Church over and above Holiness, and also that the Holy Sacraments derived their validity from God, and not from the priest.

The growing corruptions and moral laxities of the Christian Churches soon led to a separation, “He [Donatus] was a man of learning and eloquence, very exemplary in his morals, and, as would appear from several circumstances, studiously set himself to oppose the growing corruptions of the Catholic Church. The Donatists were consequently a separate body of Christians for nearly three centuries, and in almost every city in Africa, there was one Bishop of this sect and another of the Catholics. The Donatists were very numerous, for we learn that in the year 411 C.E., there was a famous conference held at Carthage between the Catholics and Donatists, at which were present 286 Catholic Bishops, and of the Donatists, 279.” ~William Jones, The History of the Christian Church, chap. 3, sec. 5, p. 222.

As usual, with the case of any religious dissenters, the Catholic Church endeavored to exterminate the Donatists, but the Donatists continued to flourish, that is, until the middle of the 6th century, “The Donatists have never been charged, with the slightest show of truth, with any error of doctrine, or any defect in church government or discipline, or any depravity of moral practice.” ~George Waddington, A History of the Church From the Earliest Ages to the Reformation, p. 153. New York: Harper & Brothers, 1834.

Saint Augustine, Saint Celestine I, Saint Innocent I, Saint Jerome, Saint Leo, and Saint Patrick attack the teachings of Pelagius. In 418, the Council at Carthage along with Pope Zosimus condemns him and his followers.

Jerome, Praef. in Jerem., lib. I and III, ridiculing Pelagius as a “Scot,” loc. cit., “Habet enim progeniem Scoticae gentis de Britannorum vicinia,” who being “Stuffed with Scottish porridge,” Scotorum pulibus proegravatus, suffers from a weak memory. Rightly arguing that the “Scots” of those days were really the Irish. ~H. Zimmer, Pelagius in Ireland, p. 20, Berlin, 1901.

To Pope Pius XII, “I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians.” ~Mahatma Gandhi

Tall in stature and portly in appearance Saint Jerome, loc. cit., "Grandis et corpulentus."

Pelagius, who is highly educated, speaks and writes in Latin as well as Greek with great fluency. During his trips to Rome he composed several works: "De fide Trinitatis libri III," "Eclogarum ex Divinis Scripturis Liber Unus," and "Commentarii in Epistolas St. Pauli," attributed to Saint Jerome, which Pelagius denies the primitive state in paradise and original sin (cf. P. L., XXX, 678, "Insaniunt, qui de Adam per Traducem Asserunt ad Nos Venire Peccatum," insisting on the naturalness of concupiscence and the "Death of the Body," [the material world] and ascribes the actual existence and universality of sin to the bad example Adam set by his first sin.

Christ's redemption was, in Pelagius' opinion, limited mainly to instruction [Doctrina] and example [exemplum]. St. Paul is silent on one chief point of his doctrine [the significance of infant baptism], which supposed that the faithful were even then clearly conscious of the existence of Original Sin in children.

Pagans in the ancient Roman Empire had a very diverse views about the value of human life than we do today, and infanticide was legal as well as encouraged in ancient Pagan Greece and Rome.

Other Pagan societies, such as the Carthaginians, went so far as to kill their children as religious sacrifices to their gods. According to Plutarch, the Carthaginians, "Offered up their own children, and those who had no children would buy little ones from poor people and cut their throats as if they were so many lambs of young birds; meanwhile the mothers stood by without a tear or moan."

The infant was simply held underwater until it was dead. "Infanticide was one of the deepest stains of the ancient civilization." ~Christian Colligation of Apologetics Debate Research & Evangelism Pagans, Christianity, and Infanticide by Christopher Price.

The Twelve Tables of Roman Law held, "Deformed infants shall be killed." ~De Legibus, 3.8.

Christians will emphasize the guilt rather than its punishment, as the chief characteristic of Original Sin, the Greeks placed greater stress on the punishment than on the guilt.

Theodore, of Mopsuestia, went even so far as to deny the possibility of original guilt [sin] and consequently the penal character of the death of the body.

Caelestius, in his work "Contra Traducem Peccati," declares:

- † Even if Adam had not sinned, he would have died.
- † Adam's sin harmed only himself, not the human-race.
- † New Born babies are in the same state as Adam before his fall.
- † The human race neither dies through Adam's sin or death, nor rises again through the Resurrection of Christ.
- † The Mosaic Law [Hebrew] is as good a guide to heaven as the Gospel.
- † Even before the advent of Christ, there were men who were without sin.

Caelestius is summoned to appear before a synod at Carthage, 411, but he refuses to retract any of his statements alleging that the inheritance of Adam's sin is an open question and hence its denial is no heresy. Excluded from ordination and his six theses condemned, Caelestius wishes to appeal to Pope Innocent I, but instead went to Ephesus in Asia Minor, where he was ordained a priest.

In recompense for the Church, Saint Augustine, in 412, writes, "De Peccatorum Meritis et Remissione Libri III," attempting to establish the existence of Original Sin, the necessity of Infant Baptism, the impossibility of a life without sin, and the necessity of interior grace (spiritus) in opposition to the exterior grace of the law [litera].

AD373-New prohibitions on all divination methods, and the term 'Pagan,' [pagani, villagers, equivalent to the modern insult, peasants]) is introduced by the Christians to demean all non-Christians.

AD375-The Church institutes the worship of Saints and Angels.

Saint Ambrose, who was one of Emperor Gratian's closest educators, persuades the Emperor to further suppress Paganism. It isn't just the Emperors who persecute the Pagans; lay Christians also take advantage of the new Anti-Pagan laws by destroying and plundering their religious temples. Christian Theologians and prominent ecclesiastics soon follow. Saint Ambrose, Bishop of Milan is close to Emperor Gratian, and at [Saint] Ambrose's advice, confiscates the properties of the Pagan temples; seizes the properties of the vestal virgins, and Pagan priests, and removes the statue of the Goddess of Victory from the Roman Senate.

AD375- 400- End of the World: Saint Martin of Tours, a student of Hilary, is convinced that the end will happen sometime before 400 C.E. ~Matthew 16:27-28 [Jesus fails to make good on his promise to return during the lifetime of his disciples], Matthew 24:34-35, Mark 9:1, 13:30 and Luke 9:26-27.

AD376 (?) - The Christians exterminate the last remnants of Mithraism cult. Although today many of the rites, doctrines, and ceremonies are now part of the new faith adopted by the Church, it is not until the 20th century that Pope John Paul II admits to this. Tarsus is one of the main centers of Mithra worship, formerly the home of Paul, who never knew Jesus, who uses Mithra "God out of the Rock" to enhance the new religion of Christian-Jews. ~I Corinthians 10:4.

"... In things religious there is no middle ground among the uninstructed. They fly to the opposite pole. Therefore when the new impulse seizes upon people, we are to have a breaking down of old barriers and a striving after a new order of things, but at the same time a wild intolerance, a glorification of ignorance, a wholesale condemnation; a social upheaval, followed by a political triumph. One thing, however, is acquired definitely, a new lease of life for faith." ~G. R. S. Mead in his Fragments of a Faith Forgotten.

Paganism still maintains its powerful influences over Rome in 376 C.E., even after State support is withdrawn, the name of Paganism almost entirely disappears; the younger Theodosius, in an edict issued in 423 C.E., uses these words: "The Pagans that remain, although now we may believe there are none."

Paganism had control in the Imperial City, even after the fire of Vesta is extinguished, and State support is withdrawn from the Vestals, and in the words of Gibbon, "The image and altar of Victory were indeed removed from the Senate-house; but the Emperor yet spared the statues of the Gods, which were exposed to public view; four hundred and twenty-four temples or chapels still remained to satisfy the devotion of the people, and in every quarter of Rome the delicacy of the Christians was offended by the fumes of idolatrous sacrifice... The ruin of Paganism, in the age of Theodosius, is perhaps the only example of the total extirpation of any ancient and popular superstition; and may therefore deserve to be considered as a singular event in the history of the human mind." ~The Two Babylons by Rev. Alexander Hislop.

AD376-444 Saint Cyril of Alexandria assists in the condemnation of the Jewish sects and is ruthless in his pursuit of having their homes destroyed in order to drive them out of the city. Those heretics whose religious beliefs are found to contradict Christian Doctrine are stoned, threatened, and sometimes killed. They are also to have their temples, and sometimes homes, looted and destroyed. Appollinaria, Bishop of Laodictia, in Syria, is declared as a heretic in 377 & 381.

Saint Cyril states that Roman Emperor Julian thinks and affirms that Christianity is not worth anything, that this is pure drivel in Julian, and that Julian just amuses himself to attack Christianity alone! Yet Cyril then says that "It cannot be doubted for one moment that the direction of the expressions employed by Julian agrees with the nonsense of the Greeks." ... "If there is a plot, it is a plot of the Greeks: It is they who gathered... This hateful 'Fiction,' which set up this 'Deception,' like some trap aimed at simple souls." ~Constantine Invented Christianity: A Thesis In The field of Ancient History by P.R.F. Brown.

In order to ameliorate and censor the constant assertions of fiction, rewriting of history, and fraud, Saint Cyril claimed that Emperor Julian, the Apostate, had revealed, "A kind of disorder in the articulation of his discussion, and, fatally, those who wanted to argue against him seemed constantly to be repeating themselves instead of finishing them once and for all. Therefore, Cyril selected to create appropriate divisions and classification, and he gathered Julian's ideas by categories and faced each one of these categories not on several occasions, but only once. Cyril then goes on to write, 'Thus, at the beginning of his book against us, Julian says, 'It is, I think, expedient to set forth to all mankind the reasons by which I was convinced that the fabrication of the Galilaeans is a fiction of men composed by wickedness.'" ~P.R.F. Brown, Constantine Invented Christianity: A thesis in the field of Ancient History.

"By 'Galilaeans', he means the Holy Apostles, I think," says Cyril, "And by a 'Fantastic account' the writings of Moses, the predictions of the Holy Saints and their declarations Inspired by God." Saint Cyril believed that Christ was a spiritualized and glorified form of man. In the Council of Ephesus, called in 431 by Emperor Theodosius II, Saint Cyril is the religious leader who condemns the Nestorian sect for not accepting Mary, mother of Jesus, as mother of "God the Sun." Saint Cyril is considered a "Father of the Church."

The most illustrious representative of Greco-Roman culture in Alexandria, Egypt, about this time was Hypatia, the gifted daughter of Theon, a mathematician and a philosopher of considerable renown. To pursue her studies, she persuaded her father to send her to Athens, where her earnest work, her devotion to philosophy, the readiness with which she sacrificed all her other interests to the cultivation of her mind, earned for herself the laurel wreath, which the university of Athens conferred only upon the foremost of its pupils. Hypatia wore this wreath whenever she appeared in public, as her best ornament.

Upon her return to Alexandria, she was elected president of the Academy, which at this period was the rendezvous of the leading minds of the East and West. In fact, it was at this academy that the efforts of the advanced thinkers to bring about a pacification between the culture of Europe and that of Asia originated. Early in the morning, with flushed suddenness, five hundred men, all dressed in black and cowled, monks from the sands of the Egyptian desert, soldiers of the cross, followers of the forgiving Christ, like a devastating Black Plague, swoop down the barren path, board her chariot, and, pulling her off her vest, dragged her by the hair of her head into a church! Some historians intimate that the monks asked her to kiss the cross, to become a Christian and join the nunnery, if she wished her life to be spared.

The monks, under the leadership of Saint Cyril's right hand man, Peter the Reader, stripped the non-believer, philosopher, Hypatia, and shamefully close to the altar and cross, scraped her quivering body of the flesh from her bones with oystershells as her blood drenches the white alabaster marble floors of the church.

Even Saint Augustine condemns the murder of Hypatia and the closing of the Library at Alexandria. In contradiction we have, "During one of the riots, the noted philosopher Hypatia was torn apart by a mob of Christians; there is no evidence, however, for the supposition that Cyril was instrumental in her death." ~From the 1998 Microsoft Encarta Encyclopedia.

Who does one believe? Saint Cyril, the Archbishop of Alexandria, who had persuaded himself that the Empress Hypatia's good name and talents were giving the cause of Paganism a dangerous prestige, Saint Cyril, who was jealous and envious of the marvelous talents of one so fair and beautiful, and thereby stood as an immovable threat, preventing the progress of the new Pagan faith [Christianity]? Hypatia was indeed a great power in Alexandria.

She was the most popular personage in the city. When she appeared in her chariot on the streets people threw flowers at her, applauded her gifts, and cried, "Long live the daughter of Theon." Poets called her the "Virgin of Heaven," "The spotless star," "... Of highest speech the flower."

Judging by the chronicles of the times, it appears that her beauty, which would have made even a Cleopatra jealous, was as great as her modesty, and both were matched by her eloquence, and all three surpassed by her learning.

Do we believe the Church in saying that Saint Cyril did not relish Hypatia's popularity? Her learning was rubbish to him. Her charms, temptations for the ruin of man. He hated her because she, a frail woman, dared to be free and to think for herself. He argued in his mind that she was competing with Christianity, taking away from Christ the homage, which belonged to him. He was a jealous man and his was a jealous God.

With Hypatia out of the way the people would turn to God, and give him the love and honor, which they were wasting upon her. She was robbing God of his rights, and she must fall. Such was the reasoning of Cyril, whom the Church has canonized.

Moreover, Orestes, the Prefect of Alexandria, respects Hypatia, and was a constant attendant at her lectures. Cyril believed that she influenced the Prefect and tainted him with her Paganism. With Hypatia crushed, Orestes would be more responsive to Christian influences. The mutilated body, upon which the representatives of Christ, fanatical murderers, had feasted upon was then flung into the fires to be consumed. Ten centuries of darkness are to follow with the rule of the Church supreme and its victims willing servants to this institution which professes to follow the teachings of a gentle man.

AD 379-Emperor Gratian delegates the government of the Eastern half of the Roman Empire to Theodosius the Great in 379 as the situation now becomes worse for the Pagans. Theodosius prohibits all forms of Pagan worship and allows their temples to be robbed, plundered, and callously destroyed by monks and other innovative Christians.

AD 380- Paganism is officially prohibited and Christianity is made the authorized religion of the Roman Empire with severe consequences for those who do not abide.

On February 27, Emperor Theodosius I issues the edict Cunctos populos declaring Christianity as the official state religion of the Roman Empire, imposing a ban on all non-Christian religions, except Judaism and kindred religion of the Samaritans. "It is our pleasure that all nations, which are governed by our clemency and moderation, should steadfastly adhere to the religion, which was taught by Peter to the Romans... We authorize the followers of this doctrine to assume the title of Catholic Christians; and as we judge, that all others are extravagant madmen, we brand them with the infamous name of Heretics.”

~Roman Emperor Theodosius, 380 C.E.

Thanks to Marcion, hatred of the Jews is now spouted from all corners of the Roman Empire, Saint Gregory of Nyssa refers to the Jews as “Murderers of the Lord, assassins of the prophets, rebels and detesters of God,... Companions of the devil, race of vipers, informers, calumniators, darkeners of the mind, pharisaic leaven, Sanhedrin of demons, accursed, detested,... Enemies of all that is beautiful.”

It is believed that Marcion's Gospel was the original from which the later four Canonical Gospels were afterwards fabricated by Christian plagiarists who appealed to the Pagan masses.

Even Saint Augustine admits that if the Church did not judge it so, he would not believe many of the fantastic tales held fast as True, Holy, and Sacred, “So this great ex-Pagan Saint of the Church surrenders his reason to faith and avers, 'I would not believe the Gospels to be true, unless the authority of the Catholic Church constrained me.'” ~Saint Augustine, De Genesi.

AD380-Donatists [North African Christian sect], predict the End of the World. ~Matthew 16:27-28 [Jesus fails to make good on his promise to return during the lifetime of his disciples], Matthew 24:34-35, Mark 9:1, 13:30 and Luke 9:26-27.

AD381-Second Ecumenical Council declares the Holy Spirit is a creature like the Son. The Church is still working on the Trinity concept, see AD 400, The Synod of Side in Pamphilia in 383, condemns the Euchites and in 431, the Ephesus that is a form of Quietist movement [teachings similar to Pantheism, Brahmanism, and Buddhism] [see AD 1311]. “The Trinitarian formula [Matthew 28:19] was a late [3rd or early 4th century] addition by some reverent Christian mind.” ~James Martineau, Black's Bible Dictionary, article Seat of Authority.

First Council of Constantinople, the 2nd Ecumenical, declares that Jesus had true human soul, Nicene Creed of 381 C.E. Whereas the fourth Evangelist had preached the Gospel of Love, and Paul had announced redemption by an inner and spiritual identification with Christ, “As in Adam all die, so in Christ shall all be made alive;” and whereas some, at any rate of the Pagan cults, had taught a glorious salvation by the new birth of a Divine being within each man, “Be of good cheer, O initiates in the Mystery of the liberated God; For to you too out of all your labors and sorrows shall come Liberation,” the Nicene Creed had nothing innovative to propound except some extremely futile speculations about the relation to each other of the Father and the Son, and the relation of both to the Holy Ghost, and of all three to the Virgin Mary, mere speculations, which only served for the renewal of shameful strife and animosities, riots and bloodshed and murder, within the Church, and the mockery of the heathen without. ~Pagan & Christian Creeds: Their Origin and Meaning By Edward Carpenter, 1920.

At the Council of Constantinople, “Holy Spirit” is declared “Divine” [now part of a Triune God]. On 2nd May, Emperor Theodosius deprives of all their rights the Christians that return back to the Pagan religion, and in all the Eastern Empire, the Pagan temples and libraries are looted or burned down. “The obvious explanation of the silence of the New Testament on the Triune name, and the use of another formula in Acts and Paul, is that this other formula was the earlier, and that the Triune formula is a later addition.” ~Encyclopedia of Religion and Ethics.

On 21st December, Theodosius outlaws all visits to the temples of the Pagan Hellenes. In Constantinople, the temple of Aphrodite is turned into a brothel and the temples of Sun and Artemis into stables.

End of the World: The return of Christ; Tichonus a writer of the 4th Century. ~Luther Martin, Date Setters, Guardian of Truth, Sept. 15, 1994.

AD382-The Catholic Council of Rome under Pope Damasus I sets the Biblical Canon, listing the inspired books of the Old Testament and the New Testament [disputed].

Pope Damasus I has Saint Jerome revise and unify Latin Bibles, which are translated from ancient Hebrew, which Jerome professes to understand.

St. Augustine describes the sectarian struggles in North Africa, in which believers had their eyes torn out and one Bishop had his hands and tongue cut out. ~Augustine, Epistles, 44.7.

“Hallelujah,” “Glory to Yahweh,” is imposed upon the Christian mass.

Egypt, celebrating Easter on the day set aside by the local non-Roman Christian sect is punishable by death.

AD 383-Spain, Urbanica is stoned to death, and her Bishop, Priscillian, executed for their non-Roman Christian beliefs.

AD 384-After granting religious tolerance to his people, Emperor Constantine's law is rebuked by the newly decreed pagan religion, Christianity.

Love and forgiveness is absent in Christianity, "We desire that all the people under the rule of our clemency should live by that religion, which Divine Peter, the Apostle, is said to have given the Romans... We desire that heretics and schismatics be subjected to various fines... We decree also that we shall cease from making sacrifices to the Gods. And if any one has committed such a crime, let him be stricken with the avenging sword." ~CodexTheod. xvi, 1, 2; 5, 1; 10, 4.

Where is the tolerance and forgiveness that this Christianized paganistic faith now proclaims has been their history? And the new faith shall set upon a path of vengeance against all who would deny their god using Scripture, "If thy brother, the son of thy mother, or thy son, or thy daughter, or the wife of thy bosom, or thy friend, which is as thine own soul, entice thee secretly, saying, Let us serve other Gods, and... Thou shalt not consent unto him, nor hearken unto him; neither shall thine eye pity him, neither shalt thou spare, neither shalt thou conceal him: But thou shalt surely kill him; thine hand shall be first upon him to put him to death, and afterwards the hand of all the people. And thou shalt stone him with stones, that he die."

"The man that will do presumptuously, and will not hearken unto the priest, even that man shall die."

"He that despised Moses, 'Llaw died without mercy... Of how much sorer punishment, suppose ye shall he be thought worthy, who hath trodden under foot the Son of God?" ~Hebrews 10: 28, 29.

All such shall be vanquished as "Are set forth for an example, suffering the vengeance of Eternal Fire."

~Jude 7.

The ancient priesthood once enjoyed a life of sumptuousness, which the new priesthood of Christianity will endeavor to recuperate. "That they might all be damned who believed not the truth." ~2Thessalonians 2:12.

And the truth will be what the often illiterate and superstitious priesthood says it is for they now have the power to enforce their edicts through fear, and their so-called 'God Inspired Scriptures,' which will even attempt to assault the very minds of man, "He that doubteth is damned!" ~Romans 14:23.

The eminent Christian, Saint Paul, who with such bigoted presumptions. 'Deals damnation 'round the land on all he deems the foe," and of his dogmas, is first seen "Consenting to the death" the first martyr Saint Stephen, a preview of things to be in the new Christianized Paganism. ~Acts 8:1.

Paul will bully his way through the illiterate peasants of the countryside, "Breathing out threatenings and slaughter against the disciples of the Lord." ~Acts 9:1.

Further grounds for the rejection of the Church to allow its devotees to read the Bible. When Paul, the sanctified icon of Christianity, suddenly professes a miraculous "Conversion" himself, his old masters turn on him and seek to kill him, and he flees to these same disciples for safety, to their great alarm. -Acts 9:23-26.

And immediately, Paul began to bully and threaten all who would not believe his new preachments.

To Elymas, who "Withstood them," the indomitable new hypocrite "Set his eyes on him," and thus blasted him with magnified vituperation [abuse], "O full of all subtlety and all mischief, thou child of the devil, thou enemy of all righteousness, wilt thou not cease to pervert the right ways of the Lord?" -Acts 8-10.

Jesus will proclaim, "Fear him, which is able to destroy both soul and body in Hell," but this will not sway the Church of Christ from challenging all who would rebuke their new faith. -Matthew 10:28.

Paul, at first, will be admonished by the followers of Jesus for adding terror unto belief, and Paul climaxes his allocation of shocking terror with, "It is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God." ~Hebrews 10:31.

The distinguished Christianized Paul will be the forerunner of the Roman Church's attitude voiced to the world's tribes and nations who will be given the choice between Christianity and death as early history abounds in instances.

"The Hungarians adopted Christianity as the alternative to extermination in A.D. 1000; also the pagan Wends when conquered in 1144, and most of the pagan Teutonic tribes. [The illiterate Emperor] Charlemagne required every male subject of the Holy Roman Empire above the age of twelve to renew his oath of allegiance and swear to be not only a good subject but also a good Christian. To refuse baptism and to retract after baptism were crimes punishable with death. It was indeed fearful danger and death by torture, rack, and fire to show the faintest symptoms of doubt of the faith of the Holy Church." ~Is It God's Word by Joseph Wheless.

AD 385-Maternus Cynegius is encouraged by his fanatic wife to rid the land of Hellenistic worshipping. Bishop, "Saint" Marcellus, with his thugs, embarks upon scouring the countryside, sacking and destroying hundreds of Hellenic Temples, shrines and altars. Amongst others they destroy the Temple of Edessa, the Cabeireion of Imbros, the Temple of Zeus in Apamea, the Temple of Apollo in Dydima and all the Temples of Palmyra.

Thousands of innocent Gentiles from all sides of the Roman Empire suffer martyrdom in the notorious death camps of Skythopolis.

Porphyry says that Zeus, is God of Gods, is invisible, and has supreme gifts, "Zeus, therefore, is the whole world, animal of animals, and God of Gods, but Zeus, that is, inasmuch as he is the mind from which he brings forth all things, and by his thoughts creates them. When the theologians had explained the nature of god in this manner, to make an image such as their description indicated was neither possible, nor, if any one thought of it, could he show the look of life, and intelligence, and forethought by the figure of a sphere. But they have made the representation of Zeus in human form, because mind was that according to which he wrought, and by generative laws brought all things to completion; and he is seated, as indicating the steadfastness of his power: and his upper parts are bare, because he is manifested in the intellectual and the heavenly parts of the world; but his feet are clothed, because he is invisible in the things that lie hidden below. And he holds his scepter in his left hand, because most close to that side of the body dwells the heart, the most commanding and intelligent organ: for the creative mind is the Sovereign of the World. And in his right hand he holds forth either an eagle, because he is Master of the Gods who traverse the air, as the eagle is master of the birds that fly aloft, or a victory, because he is himself victorious over all things." - Eusebius of Caesarea: Præparatio Evangelica [Preparation for the Gospel], Tr., E.H. Gifford, 1903.

The Roman Church, for centuries has claimed, and still does, that she supports the family, yet, Pope Siricius abandoned his own wife and children in order to gain his Papal position, and then, he immediately decreed that all priests can no longer be married [but he is unable to enforce compliance].

"Nothing is so powerful in drawing the spirit of a man downwards as the caresses of a woman." ~Saint Augustine.

Prefect Maternus Cynegius, encouraged by his fanatical extremist wife, and Bishop [Saint] Marcellus, along with his gang of ruffians, scour the countryside and sack and destroy hundreds of pagan Hellenic temples, shrines and altars. Among others they destroy the temple of Edessa, the Cabeireion of Imbros, the temple of Zeus [God of Gods, Lord of Lords] in Apamea, the temple of Apollo in Dydima, and all the temples of Palmyra.

AD 386-It is Pope Siricius who attempts to ban the clergy from having sex with their wives [couldn't stop them from having sex with their mistresses either]. Sex and the human body is so repulsive to the Church that Saint Anthony was never found guilty of washing his feet.

Saint Abraham for fifty years rigidly refused to wash either his face or his feet. St. Poemen consented to such an heretical act only when confronted by an old man who said that he had "... Learnt not to kill the body, but his passions." Saint Euphraxia joins a convent of one hundred and thirty nuns who never washed their feet and who shuddered at the mention of a bath.

In order to live a life of chastity, men have been known to wear enormous rings on their foreskin so as to make sexual congress impossible. The Christian sects of Skots, during the reign of Catherine II and Alexander I of Russia, resorted to castration as their means of assuring chastity. They destroyed the testicles with a hot iron, calling the operation a 'Baptism of Fire.'

Even though Origen, an early Father of the Church, castrates himself, the Church praises his works, but later issues a Church Canon, "[I]f anyone in sound health has castrated [sterilized] himself, it behooves that such a one, if enrolled among the clergy, should cease [from his ministry], and that from henceforth no such person should be promoted. But, as it is evident that this is said of those who willfully do the thing and presume to castrate themselves, so if any have been made eunuchs by barbarians, or by their masters, and should otherwise be found worthy, such men this canon admits to the clergy." ~Council of Nicaea I, Canon 1, 325 C.E..

come from, forever exposed to barbarian invasions, and to these ignorant the Church addressed its doctrines, "In my capacity, as Bishop of the Church, I shall continue to disseminate the fables of our religion; but in my private capacity I shall remain a philosopher to the end." ~Synesius, Bishop of Alexandria, 4th century.

If burning the testicles did not prove successful in completely destroying man's passion of the flesh, the penis itself is cut off. In women, the genitals are mutilated, and if that is not sufficient, the nipples of the breasts, and sometimes the entire breasts are amputated. To them, Original Sin did not consist in eating the fruit of the tree of knowledge, but in relations between the sexes. ~Read, The Ten Commandments by Joseph Lewis. cf. Deuteronomy 23:1.

AD388- A mob of Christians, at the instigation of their reverent Catholic Bishop, loot and burn the Jewish Synagogue in Callinicum, a small town on the Euphrates. The Emperor Theodosius [Theodosius the Good] claims that those responsible shall be severely punished and the Synagogue will be rebuilt at the expense of the Bishop, but Saint Ambrose, the Bishop of Milan, coerces the Emperor to relent and disregard the action, which he does.

AD390- Pelagius, Roman British monk, strong religious follower, advocated a doctrine of human free will and denial of redemption. He denied the existence of Original Sin and preached that man is free to obey or disobey. In 390, an edict of Emperor Theodosius I threatened the populace with the death penalty the forcing or selling of males into prostitution [Codex Theo. 9.7.6].

Behind this edict lay not a disgust of prostitution, but the fact that the body of a man would be used in homosexual intercourse in the same way as that of a woman, which was unacceptable, for Saint Augustine had already stated that, "The body of a man is as superior to that of a woman, as the soul is to the body." ~De Mend. 7.10.

Saint Augustine, Bishop of Hippo, and Saint Jerome, equivocate over Jerome's new Latin translation of the Old Testament [Catholic Vulgate]. Up to this time all Latin versions had been based upon the Greek version [called the translation of The Seventy or the Septuagint], but Augustine learns that Jerome is now making another translation, this time from the ancient Hebrew text, which differs in numerous places from the Christian accepted Septuagint [Jerome had previously translated from the Septuagint, but after 390 C.E., Jerome begins to translate directly from the ancient Hebrew]. Augustine calls upon Jerome to validate this radical departure from the customary text, which tells of a commotion, which later arises on this account between the two Saints, and Augustine urges Jerome to reconsider his actions, but Jerome replies with his characteristic hard-headedness. ~See Letters of Augustine, No. 28, 71, 82, and the Letters of Jerome, No. 112, in A Select Library of Nicene and Post-Nicene Fathers of the Christian Church, Translated into English with Prolegomena and Explanatory Notes under the Editorial Supervision of Henry Wace and Philip Schaff, Oxford: Parker; New York: Christian Literature Co., 1890-1900.

"... I beseech you not to devote your labor to the work of translating into Latin the sacred Canonical Books, unless you follow the method in which you have translated Job, viz. with the addition of notes, to let it be seen plainly what differences there are between this version of yours and that of the Septuagint, whose authority is worthy of highest esteem. For my own part, I cannot sufficiently express my wonder that anything should at this date be found in the Hebrew manuscripts, which escaped so many translators perfectly acquainted with the language. I say nothing of the Seventy, regarding whose harmony in mind and spirit, surpassing that which is found in even one man, I dare not in any way pronounce a decided opinion, except that in my judgment, beyond question, very high authority must in this work of translation be conceded to them. I am more perplexed by those translators who, though enjoying the advantage of laboring after the Seventy had completed their work, and although well acquainted, as it is reported, with the force of Hebrew words and phrases, and with Hebrew syntax, have not only failed to agree among themselves, but have left many things, which even after so long a time, still remain to be discovered and brought to light." ~Saint Augustine to Saint Jerome. Written about 394 C.E.

Christian Roman Punishment: The Roman Emperor Theodosius sets the punishment for homosexuality as death by burning.

Apollinaris, Bishop of Laodicea, believes that Jesus had human body but also a Divine Spirit.

"In Hoc Signo Vincens" [Latin for: "By this sign [the cross] you conquer."] ~Emperor Constantine, who did not realize this miracle until four years later in conversation with the sycophant, Bishop Eusebius.

The Christian Church of 390 C.E., had no crucifixes nor sacred images because, "The first mention of Crucifixes are in the 6th century” and “The whole tradition of veneration of holy images gradually and naturally developed.” ~Catholic Encyclopedia, Vol. VII, p. 667.

Therefore, the claim of Emperor Constantine, of seeing a Christian Cross up in the sky, which inspired him, is fallacious.

AD 391-The Christian Authorities order the destruction of the Serapeum in Alexandria [containing a labyrinth of catacombs for sacred burials] and take harsh measures to squelch the religious followers of Isis, the last Isis festival being celebrated in 394.

The Isian cult [BC 3500-3000] is similar to Osiris in their belief in:

- † Immortality via an afterlife
- † Personal salvation through good deeds
- † Attainment of spiritual fulfillment by participation in their rituals.
- † Sins are forgiven via immersion in water [spiritual purification]
- † December 25th is the great Isian Celebration of Horus the Resurrected Son.

The Theodosian decrees outlaws most Pagan rituals that are still practiced in Rome. The Edict of Theodosius declares that Christianity is henceforth to be the only legal religion in the Roman Empire. The language of ancient Christian Rome was mainly Greek, down to the 3rd century.

Saint Paul wrote the Epistle to the Romans in [Koine] Greek. When Clement of Rome in the last decade of the 1st century wrote an epistle in the name of the Roman church to the Corinthians, he wrote in [Koine] Greek. Justin Martyr, and the heretic Marcion, alike also wrote from Rome in [Koine] Greek.

AD 391-On 24th February, a new edict of Theodosius prohibits visits to Pagan temples, and even looking at the vandalized statues. New heavy persecutions occur all around the empire. In Alexandria, Egypt, Pagans, led by the philosopher Olympius, revolt, and after a number of street fights they lock themselves inside the fortified temple of the God Serapis [the Serapeion]. After a violent siege, the Christians take over the building, demolish it, burn its famous library and profane the various Pagan cult images.

AD 392- On 8th November, Emperor Theodosius outlaws all the non-Christian rituals and names them “Gentilicia superstio.” New full level Christian persecutions are ordered against the Pagans. The Mysteries of Samothrace are ended and the priests being slaughtered by Christians.

In Cyprus the local Bishop “Saint” Epiphanius, and “Saint” Tychon adeptly destroy almost all the temples on the island and exterminate thousands of non-Christians. The local Mysteries of Goddess Aphrodite are ended.

The Christian Emperor Theodosius's edict declares, “The ones that won't obey pater Epiphanius have no right to keep living in that island,” and the Pagans revolt against the Emperor and the Church in Petra, Aereopolis, Rafia, Gaza, Baalbek and other cities of the Middle East. Upon the blood of Pagan martyrs the Christian faith is built AD 394- Formal Mass is first instituted.

Diodore of Tharse, who died in 394 C.E., Théodore of Mopsueste & Nestorius, 428 C.E., who in order to stress the redemptive power of Jesus, emphasized Jesus' humanity [Greek influence: Hellenism], and argued against Mary's title as the “Mother of God,” and stated that God, the “Word,” did not suffer and die on the cross, while Jesus the man did; Eutyches, 448 C.E., a Catholic monk, is condemned for stressing the Divinity of Christ, and teaching the humanity of Christ was not made of the same substance as that of other men.

Many educated Romans read and wrote Greek, yet Christian writers still insist that the Greeks have nothing to do with their Scriptures, “Christianity is but a combination of Pythagorean spiritualism with the essential features of Pagan supernaturalism, in which every trace of the original spiritualism has been distorted or suppressed; and the symbols greatly exaggerated and interpreted literally as Christianity.”

~J.R.L. Morrell, Spiritism and the Beginnings of Christianity.

AD 395-395: Official separation of the Eastern and Western halves of the Roman Empire and commencement of the construction of the wall fortification of Constantinople.

Saint John Chrysostom is then in Patmos, and immediately after 395 C.E., is recalled to Rome to become a presbyter; but Rome finding that the so-called “Second Coming” does not take place, argues that Chrysostom has deprived them and therefore banishes him as a “False Prophet.”

AD 397-Saint Ambrose of Milan, one of the Four Great Doctors of the Western Church; strongly opposes

To Pope Pius XII, “I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians.” ~Mahatma Gandhi

Arianism, which denies Jesus as God.

At the 4th Church Council of Carthage, the Christian Synod draws up a list of approved books of the Catholic Canon, and at the same time institutes a prohibition on anyone, including the Christian Bishops, from studying any Pagan literature. All non-Christian teachers, army officers, public employees and judges are henceforth dismissed from public office.

Early in the 5th century John Chrysostom [the erstwhile patriarch in Constantinople] records, with delight, “And as for the writings of the Greeks, they are all put out and vanished.” ~Saint John Chrysostom, Homily 2, Trinity, Sophists, Philosophers, 5.

AD 398-403-Saint Chrysostom, the Bishop of Constantinople, chooses December 25th as the day to celebrate the birth of the True Son of God [Jesus], which event replaces that of Mithra, the Sun God [Sol Invictus].

The Roman Church has long supported discrimination and slavery; was it not the great Christian, Saint John Chrysostom, Bishop of Constantinople, 398-403, who quotes Titus 2:9-10 to support slavery: “The slave should be resigned to his lot; ‘In obeying his master he is obeying God.’”

“We are asked to justify these frightful passages, these infamous Laws of war, because the Bible is the ‘Word’ of God. As a matter of fact, there never was, and there never can be, an argument even tending to prove the ‘Inspiration’ of any book whatever. In the absence of positive evidence, analogy and experience, argument is simply impossible, and at the very best, can amount only to a useless agitation of the air. The instant we admit that a book is too sacred to be doubted, or even reasoned about, we are mental serfs. It is infinitely absurd to suppose that a God would Address a communication to intelligent beings, and yet make it a crime, to be punished in eternal flames, for them to use their intelligence for the purpose of understanding his communication. If we have the right to use our reason, we certainly have the right to act in accordance with it, and no God can have the right to punish us for such action.” ~Robert G. Ingersoll, The Gods, 1872.

AD 398-Dudymus the blind; teacher of Saint Jerome and Rufinus; follower of Origen and an opponent of Arianism and the Macedonian heresy. His works are condemned at the Fifth Ecumenical Council and the Sixth Ecumenical Council.

Armenians, through Saint Gregory the Illuminator's Church, celebrate Christmas in January.

AD 400-That Jesus had been God in human form is finalized in Christian Doctrine. Various Christian sects debated amongst each other on this issue and with the Council of Nice in 325, the issue is put to rest with the approval of a One-Doctrine Concept. The Church has already destroyed all documents contradicting its authority [all known or found documents].

The Council of Carthage in 390 states that celibacy is of Apostolic origin. Saint Epiphanius of Salamis, 315-403 C.E., states, “It is the Apostles themselves who decreed this law.” Saint Jerome, 342-420 C.E., states, “Priests and deacons must be either virgins or widowers before being ordained, or at least observe perpetual continence after their ordination... If married men find this difficult to endure, they should not turn against me, but rather against Holy Writ and the entire ecclesiastical order.”

Pope Saint Innocent I, 401-417, says, “This is not a matter of imposing upon the clergy new and arbitrary obligations, but rather of reminding them of those, which the tradition of the Apostles and the Fathers has transmitted to us.” ~Read Saint Jerome in his treatise, Adversus Jovinianum.

Saint Peter Damian, 1007-1072, C.E., will write, “No one can be ignorant of the fact that all the Fathers of the Catholic Church unanimously imposed the inviolable rule of continence on clerics in major orders.”

Saint Augustin of Hippo promulgates the Doctrine of the “Just War.”

Original Sin is formally conceived and the Christian religion now has a new tool to oblige the congregation to attend church services [threats of eternal damnation, excommunication, torture, and coercion].

Religious groups of necessity must change as they develop new doctrines in order to increase their following. This is necessary to perpetuate the group. Before long the writings of the famous poet to the Pope [1265-1321-Dante] will be used to show a burning inferno of fire and brimstone awaits all nonbelievers. Only the tribe of Levi was permitted by God to write the Scriptures. ~1 Chronicles 16:4.

The Church is determined in its attempt to convert the world to Christianity, a zealot belief similar to the fundamentalist Muslims in the late 20th century and early 21st century. To the Evangelist Christian, no one knows anything but them, “In the Fundamentalist view, unbelievers have only two relevant attributes:

They are potential converts and sources of temptation. As objects of evangelism, they are called 'Crops to be harvested,' 'Sheep to be found,' and 'Fish to be netted.' Because of the danger of worldly influence [much like a contagious disease], relationships with 'Them' must be handled gingerly. Contacts must be superficial, geared toward evangelism only, and cut short if there is not a positive response. Since Christians are already full of truth, there is no need for them to listen, nothing for them to learn, and much for them to lose by admitting alternative views into their consciousness.” ~Marlene Winell, Leaving the Fold, Oakland, CA: New Harbinger, 1993, p. 76-77.

Saint Jerome's Vulgate Latin edition and translation of the Bible is published along with its errors, which the Church denies. We learn particulars from the letter of Jerome, in 383, transmitting to his patron [Pope Damasus] the first installment of his revision, the Gospels. "Thou compellest me," he writes, "To make a new work out of an old so that after so many copies of the Scriptures have been dispersed throughout the whole world I am as it were to occupy the post of arbiter, and seeing they differ from one another am to determine, which of them are in agreement with the original Greek." ~The Old Latin Version by Thomas Nicol. Note: Books of Wisdom, Ecclesiasticus, 1 and 2 Maccabees, and Baruch are left unrevised in Jerome's Vulgate translations, and are simply added to the Vulgate from the Old Latin version.

Not everyone deems a new translation necessary, and anticipating attacks from critics, Saint Jerome states, "If they maintain that confidence is to be reposed in the Latin exemplars, let them answer which, for there are almost as many copies of translations as manuscripts. But if the truth is to be sought from the majority, why not rather go back to the Greek original, and correct the blunders, which have been made by incompetent translators, made worse rather than better by the presumption of unskillful correctors, and added to or altered by careless scribes?" ~Ibid.

Christians are to reject the "Doctrines and traditions" of men, which have been added to the pure Torah of Moses, including scribal alterations of the texts of Scripture. ~Jeremiah 8:8.

Accordingly, Saint Jerome hands to the Pontiff [Damasus] the four Gospels to begin with after a careful comparison of old Greek manuscripts.

Ethiopic Bible in Ge'ez, 81 books are the in standard Ethiopian Orthodox Bible.

The Peshitta Bible in Syriac [Aramaic], Syr(p), Old Testament + 22 New Testament, excludes: 2 Peter 2-3 John, Jude, Revelation; standard Syriac Orthodox Church Bible.

The Christian world is changing, as is the world about them. Jude's Epistle is regarded by some modern scholars as one of the last literary remains of Jewish Christians from Jerusalem, being written soon after the fall of Jerusalem. What is significant is that the primitive Catholic [Orthodox] Church was being threatened from within, and true Christians were forced to begin to defend their faith against men who now called themselves brothers in Christ. The Apostle Jude, also the brother of Christ, urged Christians at the end of the 1st century: to, "Beloved, while I was very diligent to write to you concerning our common Salvation, I found it necessary to write to you exhorting you to contend earnestly for the faith, which was once for all delivered to the saints." ~Jude 3.

End of the World: Hippolytus "Calculated that 5,500 years separated Adam and Christ and that the life of the world was 6,000 six full Days' of years until the seventh the day of rest." Hippolytus' calculations in 234 C.E., indicated there were still two centuries left. ~A History of the End of the World, Rubinsky and Wiseman, 1982.

End of the World: Rabbi Dosa [2nd-3rd Century] says that the Messiah will come at the end of 400 years. This is based (?) on Genesis 15:13. ~Luther Martin, Date Setters, Guardian of Truth, Sept. 15, 1994.

AD 401-417-Pope Innocent I, son of Pope Anastasius I, 399-401.

Pope Innocent I, 401-417, decrees that Roman custom be the norm for Christianity, in opposition to true Essene customs observed by Yeshua [Jesus] and his disciples.

AD 406-Armenian Bible, translated by Saint Mesrob is now the standard Armenian Orthodox Bible.

The Roman laws are aimed at ethnic cleansing... "... A perversity that is Jewish and alien to the Roman Empire... It is more grievous than death and more cruel than murder that [if] any person of the Christian faith shall [should] be polluted by Jewish unbelief [disbelief]." ~Code 16.8.20, dated 409 C.E.

AD 410- 24 August, the sack of Rome by Alaric [a Christian] and his Visigoths. Rome falls to the barbarian Goths, and after standing 800 years in Imperial glory, a new despotic era begins, the Christian Dark Ages.

By vilifying the Pagans, and Gnostics, the Christians sought to promote their faith as the True Faith, "That the rabble were the victims of a degrading superstition I have no doubt. This was produced by the knavery of the ancient priests, and it is in order to reproduce this effect that the modern priests have misinterpreted the doctrines of their predecessors. By vilifying and running down the religion of the ancients they have thought they could persuade their votaries that their new religion was necessary for the good of mankind; a religion, which in consequence of their corruptions has been found to be in practice much worse and more injurious to the interests of society than the older one.” ~Higgins, Anac., p. 50.

This era is diabolical in its crimes and religious transgressions, not because of the barbarians but to the Church as freedom is curtailed in both thought and deed, and up until around 1500, religion will play a sturdy role in politics and any scientists who disagree with the Church will be executed.

AD412- Saint Augustus attacks Pelagius' Doctrines in his rationalism of what is considered man's free will and is the deciding factor in the approval of Church Doctrine relating to obtaining human perfection.

Pelagius claimed that the need for Divine Grace and Redemption is not necessary and denies the existence of Original Sin and the need for Baptism as the essence of religion and moral action. Infant Baptism is not contained in the Bible but is later inferred by religious leaders for ceremonial as well as financial purposes. It wasn't until 411 or 412 C.E., that a synod excommunicated those who asserted that Adam was created mortal, and that he did not suffer death as a punishment for his sin; also those who declared that infants newly born had no need of baptism, because they were not liable to Original Sin from Adam; also those who affirmed that there was a place midway between hell and paradise, to which infants dying unbaptized were removed, there to live in a state of blessedness. Six other similar articles, which hold the first place in the heresies of Pelagius and Coelestius, were also anathematized. ~Acts of the Synod of Carthage, 411 or 412 C.E., against the Pelagians.

AD 413- A group of Christian monks sweep through Palestine, destroying Jewish Synagogues and massacring the ill-fated Jews in front of their sacred Western Wall.

AD 414- Saint Cyril of Alexandria expels the Jews from his city.

Eunapius, [d. 414], wrote numerous histories of other Pagan philosophers of his period where there are descriptions of triumphant Christians gleefully destroying the Pagan temples in both Egypt and Greece.

AD 415- Catholic Monks and zealot followers of Saint Cyril will beat to death the beautiful female philosopher, Hypatia, leader of the Alexandria library, Egypt, and it is generally believed that they are also responsible for burning down the library, destroying the precious scientific and cultural tomes inside of it and wiping out access to virtually all ancient texts and technology accumulated.

“On a fatal day, in the Holy season of Lent, Hypathia was torn from her chariot, stripped naked, dragged to the church, and inhumanly butchered by the hands of Peter the Reader and a troop of savage and merciless fanatics; her flesh was scrapped from her bones with sharp oyster shells, and her quivering limbs were delivered to the flames. The just progress of inquiry and punishment was stopped by seasonable gifts; but the murder of Hypathia has imprinted an indelible strain on the character and religion of Cyril of Alexandria.” ~Edward Gibbon, Rise and Fall.

AD416- The inquisitor Hypatius, alias “The Sword of God,” exterminates the last remaining Pagans of Bithynia.

Emperor Theodosius II, in Constantinople, 7th December, orders all non-Christian army officers, public employees and judges dismissed. All this was done to coerce the Pagans to convert to Christianity. Theodosius also persecuted Judaism, destroying a number of their sacred synagogues.

AD418- Pope Zosimus condemns Pelagius, the Roman monk who denies ‘Original Sin.’ The Catholic Church decides that all children are born demonic as a result of the sexual union of Adam and Eve and mankind can only be redeemed through Baptism.

The concept of the sin of first man is foisted upon the children of humanity to increase the donations to the coffers by obligating them to baptism through the Church.

Pelagian intrigues continue to develop in Rome, but Pope Zosimus, whom the subterfuge of Celestius had for a moment deluded, and being enlightened by Saint Augustine, pronounces the solemn condemnation of these heretics in 418.

Threats, intimidation, fear, perpetuate this new religion, and in the 13th century a new peril evolves, an eternal existence of the soul in a burning hell via Dante's Inferno.

It is none other than Saint Augustine who puts eternal fear into the hearts of parents and fear into the hearts and minds of innocent children with his conception of Original Sin, which the Church wholeheartedly accepts in order to strike horror into the psyche of its followers. The argument is over pre-destinations, and unable to admit the absolute gratuitousness of pre-destination, the followers of Pelagian thereafter seek a middle course between Saint Augustine and Pelagius, and maintain that grace must be given to those who merit it and denied to others; hence goodwill still has the precedence, it desires, it asks, and God will reward it.

Informed of their views by Prosper of Aquitaine, the Holy Doctor [Augustine] once more expounds, in "De Praedestinatione Sanctorum," how even these first desires for Eternal Salvation are due to the Grace of God, which therefore absolutely controls man's predestination [no free will].

"All diseases of Christians are to be ascribed to these Demons; chiefly do they torment fresh-Baptized Christians, yea, even the guiltless new-born infant." ~De Divinatione Daemononum, ch. Iii.

What greater glory is there than instilling fear into the hearts of innocent children to gain future converts? "... Little children who have begun to live in their mother's womb and have there died, or who, having just been born, have passed away from the world without the sacrament of Holy Baptism ... must be punished by the eternal torture of undying fire." ~From a Christian tract entitled, Hell.

AD 418-422-Pope Saint Boniface is a son of a priest.

AD 420-The Council of Seleucia-Ctesiphon forbids monks and nuns from the eating of meat.

AD 423-Emperor Theodosius II declares on the 8th of June, that the religion of the Pagans is nothing more than "Demon worship," and orders all those who persist in this practice to be punished by imprisonment and/or torture.

AD 429-The Pagan temple of Goddess Athena [Parthenon] on the Acropolis of Athens is sacked, and the Athenian Pagans are persecuted.

AD 431-Council of Ephesus condemns Nestorius of Constantinople who denies the title "Mother of God" to the Virgin Mary, mother of Jesus on grounds that she is not of Jesus' Divine Nature.

Council of Ephesus, 3rd Ecumenical, repudiates the Nestorianism, decrees Mary is the Mother of God, and forbids any changes to Nicene Creed of 381, which was rejected by Assyrian Church of the East. The Council of Ephesus, known as the "Robber Synod," promotes their God-man, Jesus claiming, "Christ is complete God, and complete man."

AD 421±- "Maroni, the last of the Nephite prophet-historians, sealed the Sacred record and hid it up unot the Lord, to be brought forth in the latter days, as predicted by the voice of God through his ancient prophets." ~The Book of Mormon.

It is interesting to note that in Genesis 6:4 and also in Numbers 13:33, the Bible tells of a people called the Nefilim [from the Semitic: those who were cast down upon the earth] ~See The Twelfth Planet by Zecharia Sitchin. Knowing how words have become corrupted through various translations and interpretations, one wonders if these same people are not also the ancestors to a race of people mentioned by De Soto, Hernando, 1500?-1542?, the Spanish explorer.

De Soto traveled up the Mississippi, and in his travels mentions a race of Giant people with light complexion and eyes whose feet would drag on the ground when they rode upon the Spaniards' horses. Unfortunately, on his return trip they had disappeared, victims of the diseases brought by the earlier explorers.

The Mormons believe that in the scattering of the tribes of Israel, one faction migrated to America. In 1 Nephi, Chapter 19, of the Book of Mormon, it tells of the God of Israel coming in six hundred years from the time Lehi leaves Jerusalem. This would place the Second Coming of Christ around the year 1000. Read AD 968 in this book regarding the fair complected god of the Aztecs. Is this merely a Coincidence? You be the judge.

The early Mormons practiced polygamy in the 1800's, but these Mormons also had secret sexual practices in which the women were shared among the inner circle of male leaders in the early days of the church, a practice, which was common among patriarchs of the Bible; Abraham, Israel, King David and King Solomon.

AD 423- There was a call for the removal of Jews [ethnic cleansing(?)] from all contact with Christians, to avoid pollution. The removal being to Jewish Ghetto areas [perhaps Hitler got his Ghetto solution from history]. The preferred method of choice was setting fire to the Holy Synagogues, this being the inference that the statute provided no penalty for those that set the fires, merely the pious utterance that, “Now and henceforth no person shall seize and [or] burn their synagogues [compare: posted ‘Off limits’ lists, for sailors, which served as tips, when going ashore].” ~Code 16.8.25, dated 423 C.E.

Hence, we have the first Jewish Ghetto created by inspiration of the Catholic Church in the 5th century.

AD 425- Emperor Theodosius II’s Code of Law outlines further social restrictions against the Jews, limitations placed on where they can live, what they can wear, and Jews may neither hold public office, build synagogues, hold slaves [indulge in no agriculture] and are subject to extraordinary taxation.

Saint Cyril of Alexandria, 315-386, will expel the Jews from Jerusalem and make the Jews as required by the new law to observe Christian feasts and fasts and to listen to sermons designed to persuade them to convert. The Synagogue in Constantinople is converted into a Christian church.

AD 430- Pope Celestine sends Bishop Palladius to preach Baptism to the Scots.

AD 431- The worship of the Virgin Mary begins, which backfires on the Church, which will later have regrets when Mary is worshiped more than their Jesus Christ, the Savior.

The Ecumenical Council of Ephesus condemns Nestorianism, which denies the unity of the Divine and human natures in the Person of Christ; defined Theotokos [Bearer of God] as the title of Mary, Mother of the Son of God made Man; condemns Pelagianism.

The heresy of Pelagianism, proceeding from the assumption that Adam had a natural right to supernatural life, held that man could attain salvation through the efforts of his natural powers and free will; it involved errors concerning the nature of Original Sin, the meaning of grace and other matters. Related Semi-Pelagianism was condemned by a council of Orange in 529.

Saint Augustine, b. 354, begins the origin of “Original Sin,” which church fathers & philosophers, write: Saint Augustine, the African Bishop’s “The City of God,” and “Confessions,” are the greatest contribution to Christianity when Saint Augustine makes sex a sin. ~Loeb Classics 10 v., Latin.

Christianity did not pursue a smooth an evolutionary pathway after the Mother Church in Jerusalem was scattered, but divided and split itself into numerous sects. Over time a collection of followers, who called themselves Catholic, decided to accept certain doctrines, doctrines which were not the ones upon which the first early Church was founded upon but ones which had been allegorized and reconfigured to their suit their innovative ideas and values. ~E. Christopher Reyes, In His Name.

What does Christianity teach man? “Christianity teaches that the human race is depraved, fallen, and sinful.” ~D. James Kennedy, Why I Believe, World Publishing, 1980.

Under Emperor Theodosius and a later Emperor, Valentinian, all writings hostile to the Catholic Church, including all earlier Christian works deemed heretical, were burned.

AD 432 (?)-Saint Celestine I, later to become Pope Celestine I, 422-432, confiscates the churches of the Novatian followers forcing them underground and to gather in smaller groups and practice their beliefs in private homes. He censures the Bishops of Southern Gaul (France) for moral abuses [a very delicate use of words for an extremely delicate situation not mentioned in mixed company].

AD 432- Saint Patrick begins mission in Ireland. Almost the entire nation is confirmed Christians by the time of his death in a conversion that is both incredibly successful and largely bloodless.

Saint Patrick also known as Succat, in his own writings does not believe in the virgin birth, does not believe that Jesus is of a Divine Spirit, does not believe the New Testament supersedes the Old, does not believe the Catholic version of Original Sin, and it is not until the Christian Synod of Whitby in 664 that the Celtic Church is brought under the auspices of the Catholic Church.

The early teachings and beliefs of Saint Patrick are suppressed by the Roman Catholic Church [Saint Patrick and Saint Columba are converted Jews who do not share all the Christian beliefs, a fact not made public by officials].

The Christian faith is said to have been introduced to the British Isles by Joseph of Arimathea, a rich Jew, who was probably a member of the ruling Sanhedrins, who after the crucifixion of Jesus, asks for his body from the Romans and buries it in his family tomb.

Joseph and his family are said to have secret knowledge that is unknown to the Roman Catholic Church. The crucifixion of saviors is not unique to Christianity as at the death of the Hindu savior, Krishna a miracle similar to that of Jesus on his death is documented.

"A black circle surrounded the moon, and the sun was darkened at noon-day; the sky rained fire and ashes; flames burned dusky and livid; demons committed depredations on earth. At sunrise and sunset thousands of figures were seen skirmishing in the air; and spirits were to be seen on all sides."

~Amberley's Analysis of Religious Belief.

At the conflict between Buddha, the "Savior of the World," and the "Prince of Evil," a thousand appalling meteors fell; darkness prevailed; the earth quaked; the ocean rose; rivers flowed back; peaks of lofty mountains rolled down; a fierce storm howled around; and a host of headless spirits filled the air.

"It is asserted by calm thinkers, like Dean Mansel, that within two generations of the time of Alexander the Great, the missionaries of Buddha made their appearance at Alexandria. In this he was supported by philosophers of the calibre of Schilling and Schopenhauer, and the great Sanscrit authority, Lassen. Renan also sees traces of Buddhist propagandism in Palestine before the Christian era." ~Arthur Lillie, Buddha and Early Buddhism, p. vi.

Ego gets the best of Alexander and he claims to be the son of the might Zeus, "If Alexander wants to be a God, let him be." ~Sparta.

When Prometheus was crucified by chains on Mount Caucasus, the whole frame of nature became convulsed, and the earth quaked; thunder roared; lightning flashed; winds blew; and the sea rose. The ancient Greeks and Romans also believed that the births and deaths of great men were announced by celestial signs. On the death of Romulus, founder of Rome, and the sun was darkened for six hours.

When Hercules died, darkness set upon the face of the earth, thunder crashed through the earth. Zeus, "The God of Gods," carried his son home, and the halls of Olympus were opened to welcome him, where he now sits, clothed in a white robe, with a crown upon his head. When Alexander the Great died, similar events are said to have occurred.

When Atreus, of Mycenae, murdered his nephews, the sun, unable to endure a sight so horrible, turned his course backwards and withdrew his light. When the Mexican crucified savior, Quetzalcoatl, died, the sun was darkened.

"When beggars die there are no comets seen. The Heavens themselves blaze forth the death of princes." ~Hamlet, Shakespeare, in Scene 1, Act 1.

When Julius Caesar is murdered, there is said to appear a darkness for six hours. When Aesculapius, the "Savior," was put to death, the sun shone but dimly from the heavens, and the birds were silent, while the trees bowed their heads in sorrow, etc. ~Bank of Wisdom, Box 926, Louisville, KY 40201.

AD433-Pope Sixtus III notes, "...All know that to assent to [the Bishop of Rome's] decision is to assent to Saint Peter, who lives in his successors and whose faith fails not."

Cyprian of Carthage, in 256, states, "Would the heretics dare to come to the very seat of Peter whence apostolic faith is derived and whither no errors can come?"

Augustine sums up the ancient attitude when he remarks, "Rome has spoken; the cause is concluded."

Saint Augustine believed whole heartedly that the Greek Sibyls influenced their Christ. ~Note: Saint Augustine's exactly exegetical works are far from equaling in scientific value that of Saint Jerome as his knowledge of the Biblical languages was insufficient: Augustine read Greek with difficulty; as for Hebrew.

"We must be on our guard against giving interpretations, which are hazardous or opposed to science, and so exposing the Word of God to the ridicule of unbelievers." ~Saint Augustine, De Genesi ad litteram, I, xix, xxi, especially n. 39.

The Greek symbol [anagram] for 'Fish' is adopted by the early Christians, "This Sibyl certainly wrote some things concerning Christ, which are quite manifest...A certain passage, which had the initial letters of the lines so arranged that these words could be read in them: 'Iesous Xristos Theou Uios Soter,' If you join the initial letters in these five Greek words, they will make the word Ixthus, that is, 'fish,' in which word Christ is mystically understood, because he was able to live, that is, to exist, without sin, in the abyss of this mortality as in the depths of water." ~Forgery in Christianity by Joseph Wheless.

"All these warnings being scorned and condemned before their sin expiated, before confession has been made of their crime, before their conscience has been purged by sacrifice and by the hand of the priest, before the offense of an angry and threatening Lord has been appeased, violence is done to His Body and Blood; and they sin now against their Lord more with their hand and mouth than when they denied the Lord.” ~Saint Cyprian of Carthage, The Lapsed, 251 C.E.

The Church stands united against all who stand in her way, “Peter answered Him, Lord, to whom will we go? ... Peter, on whom the Church was to be built... Taught and showed in the name of the Church that a rebellious and arrogant multitude may depart from the Church. I speak of those who will not hear and obey. However, the Church does not depart from Christ. And the Church consists of those who are a people united to the priest. It is the flock that adhere to its pastor. Therefore, you should know that the Bishop is in the Church and the Church is in the Bishop. If anyone is not with the Bishop, he is not in the Church... The Church is Catholic and is One. It is not cut or divided. Rather it is connected and bound together by the cement of priests who cohere with one another.” ~Saint Cyprian of Carthage in The Unity of the Catholic Church, 250 A.D. Biblical quotation from the King James Version or the Douay-Rheims Version of the Bible, www.catholic-defense.com secured April 5, 1999.

If one wishes to know what the Church stands for, visit Rome and ask a tour guide to point out the residences of the young women who are kept, often not so discreetly, by the clergy, Bishops, and Cardinals of Rome.

For centuries, the Church has sought to suppress of the rights of the individual and force the beliefs of the Church upon mankind, while they luxuriate in decadent opulence, often maintaining many mistresses.

Pope Sixtus III lasciviously seduces a nun, and successfully defends himself by repeating the story of the woman taken in adultery by arrogantly quoting the words of Jesus: “He who is without sin should cast the first stone.”

The Holy Pope is not convicted of lasciviousness and immorality and one historian reviewing the history and causes of immorality among the celibate priesthood documented their crimes.

God never meant man to be celibate, “Be fruitful and become many and fill the earth and subdue it, and have in subjection the fish ... And the flying creatures... And every living creature.” ~ Genesis 1:26-28.

“In other cities, the right to commit fornication with impunity for a lifetime could be obtained by the payment of a quarter cask of wine to the Bishop's officer, who drew this privilege from the ‘Canon De Dilectissimis’ in the Decretals of the Pope.” ~Crime: Its Causes and Remedies by Cesare Lombroso.

Pope John XXIII, anti-Pope Baldassare Cossa, was condemned for notorious incest, adultery, defilement and homicide. He confessed to having violated over two hundred maidens, including a number of nuns. After being deposed, he became Dean of the Sacred College!

A hundred years later, the Archbishop of Canterbury made an endeavor to curb the licentiousness of a certain Bishop whose mistress had confessed that she had borne him five children. The Bishop admitted his guilt to the Archbishop, but claimed immunity on the ground that the acts had taken place in the confessional! Saint Brice, in the diocese of Tours, was the father of a child born unseasonably to a nun. ~From The Ten Commandments by Joseph Lewis.

AD 435-End of the World: The Messiah comes; Rabbi Judah ha-Nasi [135-220 C.E.] believes the promised Messiah will come 365 years after the Jewish Temple is destroyed in 70 C.E. ~Luther Martin, Date Setters, Guardian of Truth, Sept. 15, 1994.

On 14th of November, a new edict by Emperor Theodosius II orders the death penalty for all of the remaining heretics, and Pagans of the Empire, and Judaism is considered the only legal non-Christian religion.

AD 438-Emperor Theodosius II issues a new edict on the 31st of January, against the Pagans, incriminating their “Idolatry” as the reason of a recent plague!

The Shroud of Turin: mentioned in the Bible as the garment of Jesus has significant value to Christian groups. The First Known Exposition is not until 1357 [others claim 1349]. This date is significant for the Shroud is not mentioned in any previous historical references until after this date; all dates previous to this are alleged discoveries or rumors. The clothing must have had some value as the Roman Legionnaires were tossing dice to see who would retain custody of it. It is rumored that the Shroud [14.5 feet x 3.9 feet] was originally sent to Edessa [known as Urhai, Urfa, and now Sanliurfa] an ancient Mesopotamian City, and later led to the conversion of King Abgar in 1350(?) Empress Eudosa is alleged to have sent the Shroud from Jerusalem to Constantinople in 438.

The Roman Catholic Church through Pope John Paul II visits the Shroud in 1998. The Shroud is alleged to have mysteriously disappeared for several centuries to reappear in the 6th century and is displayed in Edessa. In 944, the shroud is alleged to be sent back to Constantinople where it remains until the invasion of the Crusaders.

Baldwin I unites with the 4th Crusades to help Byzantine Emperor Isaac II Angelus gain leadership of the city, but Isaac II fails to pay the Crusaders for their services and they kill him and his son, and in 1204 Count Baldwin of Flanders is then crowned as the new Emperor of Constantinople.

Sins: The distinction between 'Mortal' and 'Venial sin' is set forth in the Catholic Scriptures. ~From Saint, John, v, 16-17.

The Roman Church making it quite clear that there are some sins "Unto death" and some sins not "Unto death," i.e., mortal and venial sin, and the archetypal text for the distinction of mortal and venial sin is that of Saint Paul. ~1 Corinthians 3:8-15.

From their interpretations of the Saints, Paul and John, the Church will justify their use of the sword, murdering all who stand in its way of Global Dominance. Atrocities of a multitude of despicable actions will be justified in the name of their Savior, with no one to answer to but their own God who sits in Heaven; truth, justice, and equality being what the Holy Mother the Church says it is.

The Holy Mother the Church has surpassed the greatest of all powers of miraculous human imagination in accomplishing by no other means than that of a "Divinely Inspired Church," which proclaims to have "Never Deceived Anyone," and, which, "Has Never Erred," and is the "Pillar of Truth," always in the right, and always there for the members of its congregation.

Rumors circulate across Europe that the Templars worship a bearded male image. [Perhaps, this is why the Templars shave their heads but not their facial hair]. King Philip of France uses this as another excuse of heresy to arrest Templars and confiscates all their possessions in 1307. Geoffrey de Charney in 1349 writes to Pope Clement VI of his intentions to build a shrine to display the Shroud.

The first public display of the Shroud is around 1355. Upon the death of de Charney, his wife, Jeanne de Vergy, and his son take possession of the Shroud. The "Lost Ark of the Covenant," the ancient Israelite repository of Divine Authority is another quest of the Templars.

Pope Clement VI occasionally rode around the city "... Not in the midst of a marveling crowd, but to insults and sneers... He is the head of pompous processions, mounted on a white horse, feigning Holiness. Before him goes his staff dressed in bright attire, making gestures to attract attention, trumpets sounding and banners fluttering in their hands." ~ Francesco Petrarca, Letters Without A Title.

In Graham Hancock's, "The Sign and the Seal," he points compellingly to Templars having pursued the Lost Ark from Jerusalem to its alleged final resting place in Ethiopia, Africa. Hancock contends that the Ark itself may have been the enigmatic Holy Grail, and from romancers encoded within the Templar's sacred texts lay a secret mission to find and harness this "Holy" power as possessing the Ark would have meant wielding the power of God and the mere possession would have established the Knights Templar as the dominant force on earth.

Evidence of the Templars having excavated the Temple of Solomon, and then of their presence in Ethiopia [where the Ark is believed to exist to this day], exists that the Knights did search for the famous artifact. The Roman Catholic Church, through the Bishop of Troyes, Henry of Poitiers, dislike the popularity the Shroud is accumulating and orders it destroyed. The Shroud is hidden and does not reappear until after the death of the Bishop.

The Bishop Pierre d'Arcis continues the great effort to have the Shroud done away with. In 1389, King Charles VI, of France, sends a constable to confiscate the Shroud, but his emissary is refused admittance into the vault where the Shroud is kept.

Bishop d'Arcis then appeals to Pope Clement VII who orders the Bishop to remain silent regarding the Shroud upon penalty of excommunication. 1457, the inheritor of the Shroud, Margaret, daughter of Geoffrey II, is excommunicated for refusing to surrender the Shroud.

The Shroud is sold to Duke Louis of Savoy, son of Pope Felix V, in return for land and two castles. The Savoy family delivers the Shroud to the Sainte Chapelle in Chambéry, France. A fire nearly destroys the Shroud on December 4th, 1532.

The silver casket constructed to protect the Shroud begins to melt from the intense heat just before being rescued by a blacksmith. In 1578, the Savoy family, again, move the Shroud. This time, to the Chapel of the Holy Shroud in the Cathedral of Saint John the Baptist in Turin.

An amateur photographer, Secondo Pia, in 1898 takes a picture of the Shroud and is astounded by the image he sees in the photographic negative. The face becomes quite evident of a man in agony. During World War II, the Shroud is secreted away to a Benedictine Abbey, at Montevergine, near Naples, Italy. Today, after exhaustive scientific tests, authenticity of the Shroud cannot be undeniably confirmed as to whether or not it is the image of Jesus, other than it is centuries old although many groups use it to attract attention to their cause.

That the Shroud is ancient cannot be denied, however, what is in dispute is the origination date that some investigators have placed at between 1260 and AD 1350. Perhaps in the not too distant future we may have tests that are more conclusive than those now in existence to settle this issue by pinpointing the exact date of the Shroud.

After the 1978 Exposition, the Shroud is methodically examined by a group of American scientists who reveal the Blood Group of the figure to be Type AB [a common Middle Eastern Jewish blood type]. There is modern speculation that the present day Shroud is a hoax perpetrated by the famous Leonardo de Vinci using a new technique he was experimenting with [Leonardo is born 1452].

The figure portrayed on the Shroud appears to have a distinct mark under the head region showing possible signs of decapitation. Many Christians believe the image is that of Jesus. If so, then why does the image show signs of bleeding from the hands and feet? Dead people don't bleed, or was the Jesus still alive [if indeed it is the image of Jesus] when the body was taken down from the cross?

If Christians want to accept this image as that of Jesus, doesn't this negate their faith in Jesus having no bodily vestiges as he ascended into Heaven? Doesn't this negate the fact that he died on the cross?

Others say the Shroud is none other than Jacques de Molay, a member of the Knights Templar and Worshipful Master, who was tortured by the French Inquisition Grand Inquisitor, Guillaume Imbert, who felt de Molay had made a mockery of Jesus and followed the Biblical references as to the crucifixion to impose the same torture upon his unwilling victim in 1307.

The figure in the Shroud of Turin being of large stature [72 inches or six feet tall] compared to Jesus who is acknowledge as being only three cubits [54 inches tall or five feet four inches]. ~For further research on this subject, see: The Turin Shroud: The Illustrated Evidence by Ian Wilson and Barrie Schwortz and The Second Messiah by Christopher Knight and Robert Lomas.

The Templars, exposed to various religious beliefs, may have tried to merge the Christian, Judaic, Islamic, and Celtic Mysteries, for the purpose of creating a "Golden Age Kingdom," centered at Carcassonne, in southern France, where prior to the Inquisition a golden age had already begun to blossom under Cathar and Templar influence. "The Roman Catholic Church tried to kill off all remnants of the Desposyni and their guardians, the Cathars and the Templars, during the Inquisition, in order to maintain power through the Apostolic Succession of Peter instead of the hereditary succession of Mary Magdalene." ~The Rise and Fall of the Catholic Church.

If the Templars desired a 'New World Order,' then we can understand why the Roman Catholic Church was so vehement in its attacks against this Order, which was once the prominence of the Pope. Wolfram von Eschenbach, said to have been a Templar himself, wrote the medieval Grail romance "Parzival." In the Parzival story, Eschenbach dubs the Templars as 'Protectors of the Grail' and the 'Grail Family.'

In this context, another book by Baigent and Leigh, "Holy Blood, Holy Grail," presents a convincing theory for the Templars having pledged themselves to this cause, not in narrative, but in reality, the Grail Family being the actual descendants of Jesus Christ and Mary Magdalene [The secret society of the "Priory of Zion," claiming that they have proof that Jesus did not die on the cross], who, legend says, migrated to France, possibly as founders of the Merovingian Dynasty [dynasty of kings that ruled the Franks, a Germanic tribe, from 481 to 751]. ~From Secret History, By David Lewis

The early Gnostics disagreed with the Orthodoxy of the time, which caused great consternation among the Church Fathers, "Adam was a laughingstock, since he was made a counterfeit type of man by the Hebdomad [The Seventh God], as if he had become stronger than I and my brothers... Abraham and Isaac and Jacob were a laughingstock... David was a laughingstock... The prophets were laughingstocks... They came into being as counterfeits... Moses, a 'Faithful servant,' was a laughingstock, having been named The Friend, since they perversely bore witness concerning him who never knew me... The Archon [The Ruler, God of Israel] was a laughingstock because he said, I am God, and there is none greater than I. I alone am the Father, the Lord, and there is none other beside me. I am a jealous God, who brings the sins of the fathers upon the children for three and four generations,' as if he had become stronger than I and my brothers. Thus he was in an empty glory... I did not succumb to them as they had planned. But I was not afflicted at all... I did not die in reality but in appearance... I removed the shame from me... It was another... Who drank the gall and the vinegar... Who bore the cross... Upon whom they placed the crown of thorns. But I was rejoicing in the height over all... I was laughing at their ignorance. I am Christ, the Son of Man."

~The Gnostic, The Second Treatise of the Great Seth, English translation by Roger A. Bullard and Joseph A. Gibbons, in James M. Robinson, ed., The Nag Hammadi Library in English, translated and introduced by members of the Coptic Gnostic Library Project of the Institute for Antiquity and Christianity, Claremont, California, third edition, Leiden: E.J. Brill, 1988, pp. 368-69.

Christian ignorance is the bulwark of their faith, "We know, on the authority of Moses, that longer than six thousand years the world did not exist." ~Martin Luther, 1483-1546, Lectures on Genesis.

Fantasies abound in Christianity, "The sign of the Son of Man coming on the clouds of Heaven with power and great glory. The evidence of this is largely speculative. The only practical evidence comes from Josephus, who reports that, during the destruction of Jerusalem, there was a quaking on the earth, a great noise, and a bright light shining around the altar and the temple. Furthermore, he saw a vision of chariots and soldiers running around among the clouds and surrounding cities, much like the vision seen by Ezekiel." ~H.L. Nigro, Response to the Preterist Position, see also Ezekiel 1:22-28.

Boniface de Montferrat, one of the leaders of the 4th Crusades marries the widow of Emperor Isaac II Angelus [Empress Margaret who is now 29, was ten years old when first married to Isaac II] She later establishes the Church of Acheiropoietos, now known as the Ancient Friday Church. Portraits of Jesus are of a man clean-shaven until the alleged discovery of the Shroud of Jesus in the 6th century.

From that point on Jesus is now portrayed with a beard [as evidenced by the Shroud's image] Indications are that the Knights Templar may have had secret possession of the Shroud until the 13th century.

AD 440-Pope Saint Leo I has Bishop Hilary of Arles, Gaul, confined by Imperial Decree for disagreeing in the belief in the Trinity.

The lasciviousness of the clergy and its highest authority, the Vicar of Christ, with their immorality already established, Pope Leo the Great declares, "The dignity of Peter suffers no diminution even in an unworthy successor." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 1:289, 294, passim.

And this is the leader of the Roman Church and of our offspring. Bishop Hilary responds with "Language, which no layman even should dare to use." Pope Leo I attempts to establish the successive powers of Saint Peter as the first Bishop of Rome thereby automatically having his powers passed down. With the acceptance of the Pope's actions, he cannot be challenged.

The Apocryphal Acts are denied by the Church as spurious since they do not agree with Catholic Doctrine, "The Apocryphal writings... Which, under the names of the Apostles contain a hotbed of manifest perversity, should not only be forbidden but altogether removed and burnt with fire." ~Pope Leo the Great wrote in the 5th century.

On the devout writings of "Acts of John," Pope Leo I also declares, "...A hot-bed of manifold perversity, which should not only be forbidden, but entirely destroyed and burned with fire."

The Pope is infallible from anyone outside of his authority [his authority being of this world.] This concept will be taken up with later administrations within the Church. Earlier the Gnostics had claimed to have practiced rituals passed down from the Apostles themselves and therefore circumvented the authority of the Church in disclaiming their obligations.

The text is hidden, copied, and distributed contrary to Pope Leo I's declaration. The inquisitiveness of man challenges the professed rights of the Church. It is only through the actions of free thinkers throughout the ages that sacred manuscripts are saved from the fires of the authorities who denied that any other writings existed and when discovered set about to destroy them.

AD 440-461 Pope Leo the Great, who is sometimes considered the first Pope [of influence] by non-Catholics, stops Attila the Hun at Rome [a little bribery enhances his offer], issues a Tome in support of Hypostatic Union, approves the Council of Chalcedon but rejects Canons in 453.

AD 448-Emperor Theodosius II orders all non-Christian books to be burned, to avoid any further future claims of Pagan similarities.

AD 449-The Christians continue their debate: Second Council of Ephesus, Monophysite: Jesus is Divine but not human.

AD450 (?) - 1000 - The Dark Ages: where the Roman Catholic Church reigns with little hindrance and absolute authority [Obedience protects you]. Any challenge to its authority is met with charges of heresy and potential torture.

Heresy is a word born of the hatred, arrogance, and cruelty of those who profess to love their enemies, and who, when smitten on one cheek, allegedly turn the other. To avoid religious controversies, all the Pagan temples of Aphrodisias [in the City of the Goddess Aphrodite] are ordered demolished and all its libraries burned to the ground. The city is then renamed Stavroupolis [City of the Cross].

This word was born of intellectual slavery in the feudal ages when the Catholic Church suppressed, or attempted to stem all thinking not in accord with their professed beliefs. It was an epithet used in the place of argument from the commencement of the Christian era onward, well into the 20th century.

Every conceivable punishment has been inflicted, in the name of their forgiving God, to force all people to hold the same religious opinions. This effort was born of the idea that a certain belief was necessary to the salvation of the soul, which their Christ taught, and the Church allegedly still teaches.

A comprehension of ancient religious tenets will reveal that unbelief to be the blackest of crimes ever perpetrated upon the ignorant masses as God is alleged to hate with an immeasurable and relentless hatred, every heretic in this mundane planet, and all the heretics who have died or murdered by the Holy Mother the Church, are supposed to be, at this moment, to be suffering the most horrendous agonies of the damned. The Church has set itself up as the persecutor of the living and her God burns, for all eternity, the dead, with the able assistance of the soldiers of Christ. ~Note: The word "Hate" is figuratively employed in Scripture for loving less, cf. Matthew 10:37.

With the investiture of the ignorant masses into the New Faith came their tribal, Pagan, and uninformed beliefs, as well as their preservation of a superstitious reverence for Pagan [Polytheistic] Hellenism, "The rude and menial masses, who had hitherto been almost beneath the notice of Greek and Roman culture, flocked in... A source of weakness to the Church and a cause of dissension and superstition." ~Edward Carpenter, Pagan and Christian Creed.

Perhaps the producer of arguably some of the vilest of early anti-Jewish sermons is Saint John Chrysostom, Bishop of Antioch, and later Archbishop of Constantinople who is considered one of the major Church Fathers and still admired for the magnificence of his sermons. Eight of Chrysostom's sermons, which appear as Eight Homilies Against the Jews, are, as their name implies, violently anti-Jewish. Chrysostom is commonly considered the most prominent doctor of the Greek Church and the supreme preacher ever heard in a Christian pulpit.

In 1909, Pope Pius X declares Chrysostom patron of preachers, and Chrysostom's fanatical hatred of the Jews is clearly not considered to be detrimental to the Christian faithful. Addressing the Jews, Chrysostom tells them that their case is lost. God has deserted them, and they can forget about any possibility of atonement. "Your mad rage against Christ, the Anointed One," he tells them it "Left no way for anyone to surpass your sin." ~Saint John Chrysostom, 347-407 C.E.

In 413 C.E., A group of monks sweep through Palestine, destroying sacred Jewish Synagogues and massacring Jews at the Western Wall. [414 C.E.]

No one can dare challenge the Church and its interpretations of Scriptures, and few have copies of the Scriptures as few could read during this period of time. All through the Dark Ages, the Pope is elected, publicly and orally, by the priests and illiterate people of Rome. This led to vicious fights when the 'Holy See' became rich, and the 'Cardinal,' or principal clergy, of Rome used this pretext to secure a monopoly on the election.

The Popes have now crushed the last vestiges of Roman democracy and deceived the people everywhere into submission to their semi-miraculous powers as it was a very profitable monopoly. The people are still allowed to loot the palace and treasury of the dead Pope but the Cardinals from that date expected the man they elected to show his gratitude and during the Renaissance era the shower of favors amounted to millions, and a candidate found it easier to bribe or persuade a handful of Cardinals than a mob. ~From the works of the former Benedictine Monk, J. McCabe, Rationalist Encyclopedia.

It was also during this period that the Church set about to eliminate all literature that refuted the word of the Church and paintings during this era are replete with book burnings showing the Church's condemnation of all literature not Church approved.

The Church goes on to ban education, for the spread of knowledge can only undermine its principles and lead to heresy and during the Dark ages all scientific endeavors cease for fear of torture and death.

"When the Roman Church obtained its freedom and wealth it began to inspire a new era in Catholic religious art by robbing the Pagans of their art and religious idols. The official Book of the Popes, composed in Rome from the early Middle Ages onward, has preserved an amazing list of the artistic furniture [silver, altars, statues, paintings, etc.], that Emperor Constantine filched from the Pagan temples of Rome and donated to the new Christian Churches in their efforts to suppress the masses and help stabilize his corrupt government of immorality... The Middle Ages did not bequeath to Rome any institutions that could be called scientific or literary academies. As a rule, there was slight inclination for such institutions... A special reason why literature did not get a stronger foothold at Rome is to be found in the constant politico-religious disturbances of the Middle Ages... Medieval Rome was certainly no place for learned academies... From the earliest days of the Renaissance the Church was the highest type of such an academy, that is, of the broadest kind of culture!" ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 1, 83, 84.

"The Christian Church Is An Encyclopedia of Prehistoric Cults." ~Fredrick Nietzsche.

The early Christian leaders often accused the Pagans of using preparations, which they claimed were hallucinogenic in their rituals, but they were also guilty of drugging the Communion Cup in order to compete for followers [a fact that the Church does not like to discuss] The most significant heresies dealt with the person of Christ. Many theologians seeking to protect His Holiness by denying his humanity was like that of other human beings, while others sought to protect the monotheistic faith of Christianity by making Christ a lesser Divine being than God the Father.

Mithraism and Gnosticism, the two primary adversaries to Christianity have all but been exterminated by this period. Many of the basic beliefs have been adopted by the early Christians to recruit the converts. The Gnostics believed that "Flesh," or the material world, as fallen, and evil, believing Jesus is a spirit being, who only appears as flesh. ~Dogmatism.

The early Christians will follow a similar dogma, "For what the Law could not do, in that it was weak through the flesh, God sending his own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh, and for sin, condemned sin in the flesh: That the righteousness of the Law might be fulfilled in us, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit" ~Saint Paul, in Romans 8:3-4.

"And all flesh shall see the Salvation of God." ~Luke 3:6.

Paul never met Jesus in the flesh, yet claims revelation, knowledge, understanding, etc. from spiritual beings, etc. "Now to him that is of power to establish you according to my gospel, and the preaching of Jesus Christ, according to the revelation of the mystery, which was kept secret since the world began, But now is made manifest, and by the Scriptures of the prophets, according to the Commandment of the everlasting God, made known to all nations for the obedience of faith..." ~Romans 16:25.

"Brethren, my heart's desire and prayer to God for Israel is, that they might be saved. For I bear them record that they have a zeal of God, but not according to knowledge..." ~Romans 10:1-2.

Christianity is a Universal Religion. Today many Christians interpret this to mean that it is universal to all people, however this misconception has misled them. Christianity is a Universal Religion in that has borrowed from many religions. Christianity borrowed from: Zoroastrianism, Mithraism, and the Egyptian gods Isis and Osiris, as well as from the Jews. The Church then set about to destroy all the documentation, so that it alone would be the Universal Religion of the people. Fortunately, it did not succeed for the early Church Fathers could not read the forgotten languages of the Sumerians, the Babylonians, the Assyrians, and the Egyptians from whom they once borrowed so heavily. It did succeed in destroying many wonderful and valuable libraries.

The culture of the Aztecs was fundamentally almost lost due to the early friars who devastated all that they encountered with the Aztec gods on it. All religious artifacts were melted down before shipping back to Spain.

AD 451-The Fourth Ecumenical Council convenes in Chalcedon; condemns the Patriarch Dioscurus of Alexandria for Monophysitism [the belief that Christ is of One Nature rather than Two Indivisible Natures, human and Divine]; the Council does not resolve the issue, which dominates the Roman Empire's history as a noticeable problem for two centuries.

Emperor Theodosius imposes ban on all non-Christian religions, except Judaism and kindred religion of the Samaritans.

Council of Chalcedon, 4th Ecumenical, now declares that Jesus is a Hypostatic Union: both human and Divine in one, the Chalcedonian Creed is rejected by Oriental Orthodoxy.

Fourth Ecumenical Council, Council of Chalcedon, ordination for money and limitations spelled out by the church authorities. Problems continue with graft and corruption from within [amongst them is the buying and selling of spiritual trinkets. The church makes money from this endeavor although it contradicts their spiritual teachings].

Today, the Cardinals who, through the Pope, control an income of hundreds of millions of lire do not treat themselves shabbily. But no one outside the inner circle knows the facts. Writers on "The secrets of the Vatican" confess that the secret of revenue and expenditure is impenetrable.

Something like 5,000 officials, monks, prelates, priests, impoverished nobles, and grafters dip into the stream of gold, which flows daily into the Vatican treasuries, but each knows little more than his own business. The clerical officials of the Vatican publicity-bureau are as venal as any in the world but they do not overtly reveal this secret.

The sale of titles is another rich source of revenue for the Church. It would, perhaps it would be libel to suggest that the hundreds or so wealthy Catholics who bear Papal titles, such as countess, marquis, Marchioness, knight, etc., in democratic America paid cash for them, but on the general question the French and Italian Catholic writers are candid. Jean de Bonnfon has published a piquant work, "La Menagerie du Vatican," 1906, in which he gives biographical details of the 300 French men and women, the broad minded Vatican grants a [rich] woman a title in her own right.

From a Roman source he quotes that the [pre-war] tariff was 100,000 lire for the rank of duke, 25,000 for a count, 12,000 for a baron, and so on.

Writings known as "Three Chapters" by Greek theologians are considered. 'Monophysitism,' that Christ had only a 'Divine Nature' is denounced by Pope Leo I, and the Church Council of Chalcedon condemns this as heresy as Leo I argues that Christ has 'Two Natures.'

In 452, Pope Leo I personally confronts Attila the Hun, the 'Scourge of God,' and pays a handsome ransom to avoid the pilferage of Rome.

Nestorius of Constantinople; Nestorians declare that Mary was not the "Mother of God."

AD 451 to 500-The philosopher Proclus, 410-485, a most important representative of the later Neo-Platonism, becomes head of the Platonic Academy at Athens, 476 C.E., a philosopher who translates religion into one which the Catholic Church will espouse and modify.

Council of Chalcedon's new edict by Emperor Theodosius II [4th November] emphasizes that "Idolatry" is punishable by death. Assertion of Orthodox doctrine over the "Monophysites," that Jesus Christ has a single, "Divine Nature."

AD 455-The sack of Rome by the Vandals. The spoils of the Temple of Jerusalem, previously taken by Titus, are allegedly among the vast treasures now taken to Carthage.

AD 470-526-Pope John I, imprisoned by the King of Italy, Theodoric the Ostrogoth for alleged forgeries of religious documents [The Forging of documents for the procurement of properties is later to be taken up by the Franciscan and Dominican order in the Philippines].

Egyptian, Syrian and Armenian Christians translate the Bible and liturgy into their own languages and reject terms in which Orthodoxy is formulated [Melchites].

End of the World: The Messiah will come; Rabbi Hanina [3rd Century], believed that the Messiah would come 400 years after Temple Destruction. ~Luther Martin, Date Setters, Guardian of Truth, Sept. 15, 1994.

"Nevertheless, the forging of Papal letters was even more frequent in the Middle Ages than in the early Church." ~Catholic Encyclopedia vol. 9, pg. 203.

The young will soon also be corrupted while under the tutelage of those entrusted with high moral teachings and guidance. The poor Filipino will look to their patron Saints while the Church will oblige them, yet do little but give token assurances of a change in the corrupt system that they helped to erect, but are unwilling to surrender or chance losing their tax-free status in exchange, reluctant to cross the 'Cordon sanitaire' or imaginary protective barrier of non political involvement to help the poor. It is not God who seeks to keep man in Eternal Darkness and ignorance, but those who proclaim to represent God.

Miracles not revealed: "The lame walked, the blind saw, the sick were healed, the dead were raised, demons were expelled, and the laws of Nature were frequently suspended for the benefit of the church. But the sages of Greece and Rome turned aside from the awful spectacle, and, pursuing the ordinary occupations of life and study, appeared unconscious of any alterations in the moral or physical government of the world. Under the reign of Tiberius, the whole earth, or at least a celebrated province of the Roman empire, was involved in a preternatural darkness of three hours. Even this miraculous event, which ought to have excited the wonder, the curiosity, and the devotion of mankind, passed without notice in an age of science and history. It happened during the lifetime of Seneca and the elder Pliny, who must have experienced the immediate effects, or received the earliest intelligence, of the prodigy. Each of these philosophers, in a laborious work, has recorded all the great phenomena of Nature, earthquakes, meteors, comets, and eclipses, which his indefatigable curiosity could collect. Both the one and the other have omitted to mention the greatest phenomenon to which the mortal eye has been witness since the creation of the globe." ~Edward Gibbon, Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire, circa 1776, Vol. I, Chapter XV, Progress of the Christian Religion.

AD 475-How's this for a bit of history? Boethius, [475-524] in his The Consolation of Philosophy, book two, says, "What murders, what ravages were not committed by Nero, that detestable monster who burned the Capitol of the world, strangled its senators, poisoned his brother, ..."

Here we have another slight exaggeration of Nero who did not exactly 'Burn the Capitol of the world,' it was burned in 69 C.E., during the battle for Rome, which was well after Nero's death, and five years after Nero's fire was supposed to have happened. Also, there is no mention of the Christians taking any blame or being executed en mass for the crime.

AD 476-September 4; Emperor Romulus Augustus is deposed in Rome, a date marked by many as the fall of the Western Roman Empire.

Tertullians attitude towards Romulus reveals the great schism between the early Christians and the conventional Pagan worshipping Romans, "Romulus consecrated the Ecurria [games], derived from 'Equi' [horses], to Mars, though they claim the Consualia as well for Romulus on the ground that he consecrated them to Consus, the God, as they will have it, of counsel, to wit, of that very counsel by which he arrived at the scheme of carrying off the Sabine girls to be wives for his soldiers." ~Tertullian.

The Church seldom encouraged reading, and many were illiterate, as was their leadership in the Church, "In the year, 476, Zeno, the Isaurian, burned 120,000 volumes in the city of Constantinople. During the year 640, Amrou, the Saracen, fed the baths of Alexandria for six months with the 500,000 books that had been accumulating for centuries in its famous library of the Serapion. Yet books were so scarce in Rome at the close of the 7th century that Pope Martin requested one of his Bishops to supply them, if possible, from Germany. The ignorance of ecclesiastics in high station was alarming. During this century, and for centuries afterward, there were many Bishops and Archbishops of the Church who could not sign their names. It was asserted at a council of the church held in the year 992, that scarcely a single person was to be found in Rome itself who knew the first elements of letters. Hallam says, 'To sum up the account of ignorance in a word, it was rare for a layman of any rank to know how to sign his name.' He repeats the statements that Emperor Charlemagne [742-814] could not write, and Frederick Barbarossa could not read. John, king of Bohemia, and Philip, the Hardy, king of France, were ignorant of both accomplishments. The graces of literature were tolerated only in the ranks of the clergy; the layman who preferred letters to arms was regarded as a man of mean spirit. When the Crusaders took Constantinople, in 1204, they exposed to public ridicule the pens and inkstands that they found in the conquered city as the ignoble arms of a contemptible race of students." ~Statistical Method Proves Cicero Work Is A Forgery, <http://www.tcnj.edu/~colrel/releases/1999/cicero.html>

AD 480-547-Benedict of Nursia, later to become Saint Benedict, is shocked by the immoral standards in the city of Rome and the clergy, retires to live in a cave. His saintly life attracts attention and he is invited to become abbot of monks in Northern Italy who dislike his strictness and they try to poison him. He is forced to leave and establishes his own monastery.

St. Benedict of Nursia, finding his resolution to remain chaste at the point of yielding, threw himself into a thicket of brambles and nettles, into which he rolled until his naked body was lacerated from head to foot and the desires of the flesh were effectually conquered.

Men have no monopoly on erotic dreaming as female devotees of religious orders also mutilated themselves in order to stifle the natural impulses of sexual desire.

"These impurities and the fire of concupiscence which the evil spirit caused me to feel, beyond all that I can say, forced me to throw myself onto braziers of hot coal.... At other times, in the depth of winter, I have sometimes passed part of the night entirely naked in the snow or in tubs of icy water." ~The erotica experiences of Sister Jeanne des Anges, Superior of the Convent of the Ursulines of London, as described in her autobiography

There seems to be no limit to the self-inflicted tortures that these religiously fanatical human beings endured for the sake of "Purity."

Tempted by an evil spirit in the semblance of a beautiful and voluptuous young maiden, Saint Benedict found his resolution to remain chaste by throwing himself into a thicket of brambles and nettles, in which he rolled his naked body until it was fully lacerated from head to foot, and his desires of the flesh were sufficiently conquered.

The blessed Angela de Fulginio tells us that, until forbidden by her confessor, she would place hot coals in her private parts, hoping by the use of material fire and heat to extinguish the burning lust that would surge through her body. ~From The Ten Commandments by Joseph Lewis.

AD480-524-From Boethius, a Roman philosopher and statesman the Roman Church gains its attitude towards woman that we know today. Boethius won the esteem and confidence of King Theodoric of the Ostrogoths, the rulers of Rome, and in 510 was made a consul.

Boethius is accused by his enemies of plotting treason, and, although innocent, is imprisoned in Pavia and executed. During his imprisonment he wrote De Consolatione Philosophiae, The Consolation of Philosophy, 523, although written by a non-Christian, it contained many elements of Christian ethics that it were highly regarded in Europe during medieval times. "Philosophy is the least degree of intellectual illusion ... The least degree of mental error, since all other forms of learning contain a greater percentage of fallacy." ~Manly P. Hall.

End of the World: A Roman priest, and theologian, in the 2nd and 3rd centuries, predicted Christ would return in 500 C.E., based on the dimensions of Noah's ark. ~Library of date Setters of the End of the World.

End of the World: Return of Jesus Christ, the Messiah; Hyppolytus [170-236 C.E.] and Lactantius [250-330 C.E.] say that the year 500 C.E., would be the time for the second coming of Christ. ~Luther Martin, Date Setters, Guardian of Truth, Sept. 15, 1994.

AD482-Many Pagans of Asia Minor are ordered exterminated after a desperate revolt against the Roman Emperor and the Orthodox Church.

AD 483-492-Pope Saint Felix III, married with two children, his father is also a priest.

AD483-565-Emperor Justinian is portrayed as a great and enlightened monarch, for Christian purposes, it was necessary to have at least two "Great" Christian monarchs in the five centuries, which followed the establishment of the new religion to establish a history and attain credibility. Justinian married a loose actress who had the worst reputation for obscenity in Constantinople.

Masefield's historical romance is richly informed about the vicious life of the Greeks, but quite false in its delineation of the characters of the Emperor and Empress, King and Queen, or Basileus and Basilissa. Bishop John of Ephesus, to whom Theodora was very generous, ingenuously, in a small historical Syriac work, calls her "Theodora of the Brothel," and, though the purple [a royal color worn only by monarchs] persuaded her to alter many of immoral ways.

Theodora has ferocious in temper and is quite unscrupulous in nature. There is no evidence regarding any improvement in the taste or character of Justinian after his accession. His Empire grew with the Generalship of Narses and Belisarius, two outstanding commanders.

Eulogists point to the 'Justinian Code,' or reformed Code of Greek-Roman law, as a proof of his ability and beneficence, but it was notoriously compiled by Trebonian, his chief lawyer. ~see Dean Milman, History of Latin Christianity, and Rationalist Encyclopedia by Joseph McCabe.

In 529 [by the priest-prompted edict of Emperor Justinian] "The schools of philosophy were closed. From that date Christianity had no rival." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 2, 43.

The Imperial Law of the Christian Emperor, Justinian, titled "Pagans Forbidden to give Instruction," forced the State to abandon education and eventually, "... The State schools of the Empire had fallen into decay.” ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 13, 555.

The Church, inspired by its Holy Ghost, is the now the sole inheritor and mentor as well as instructor of Christendom.

End of the World: But, civilization does not come to an end as the Church anticipated, “The internal peace and prosperity were no less remarkable than the absence of war. Trade and commerce flourished; new routes were opened, and new roads built throughout the Empire, so that all parts of it were in close touch with the capital. The remarkable municipal life of the period, when new and flourishing cities covered the Roman world, is revealed by the numerous inscriptions that record the generosity of wealthy patrons or the activity of free burghers... Guilds and organizations of all conceivable kinds, mainly for philanthropic purposes, came into existence everywhere. By means of these associations the poorer classes were in a sense insured against poverty... The activity of the Emperor was not confined to merely official acts; private movements for the succor of the poor and of orphans received his unstinted support. The scope of the alimentary institutions of former reigns was broadened, and the establishment of charitable foundations such as that of the 'Puellae Faustinae' is a sure indication of a general softening of manners and a truer sense of humanity. The period was also one of considerable literary and scientific activity... The most lasting influence of the life and reign of Antoninus was that, which he exercised in the sphere of law. Five great Stoic jurisconsults [named] were the constant advisers of the Emperor, and under his protection they infused a spirit of leniency and mildness into Roman legislation, which effectually safeguarded the weak and unprotected, slaves, wards, and orphans, against aggressions of the powerful... An impulse was given in this direction, which produced the later Golden Period of Roman jurisprudence under Septimius Severus, Caracalla, and Alexander Severus.” ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 1, 587.

“Woman is a temple built upon a sewer.” ~Boethius, Roman Philosopher supporting Christian thinking

Roman Egypt was governed by a prefect, whose duties as commander of the army and official judge were similar to those of the pharaohs of the past. The office, therefore, was one with which the native population was familiar. Due to the immense power of the prefects, however, their functions were eventually divided under Emperor Justinian, 483-565, who placed the army under a separate commander, directly responsible to him. ~Microsoft Encarta Encyclopedia, 1998.

The Christians will desecrate the great Gods of the Egyptians by chiseling away the images and carving into the stone their own icons, a dastardly act of religious intolerance, which will not be repeated again until the 21st century when the Taliban in Afghanistan destroy the images of Buddha. The desecration left behind by the early Christians is still visible today when one visits the great pyramids in Egypt.

The Emperor Justinian declares, “... Anyone who tempts a Christian to turn his back on his religion and then converts him to Judaism will lose all his possessions and be punished by death; ... Sexual relations between Jews and Christians are forbidden under threat of severe punishment; ... If Jews dare to circumcise Christians, they will lose all their possessions and will be banished for life; ... Jews may no longer claim any public office they have held; ... Anyone daring to build a new synagogue will be fined fifty pounds of gold, will have his entire fortune confiscated, and will be punished by death.” ~Exodus by Marc Chagall, 1952-66.

Bishops at the 6th century Council of Macon voted as to whether or not women actually had souls, as this would make them almost equal to man. In the 10th century Odo of Cluny declared, “To embrace a woman is to embrace a sack of manure...”

The Christian Church has created an enemy and vociferously attacks it. Christianity represents, “Exclusive male language for God, the view that males are more like God than females, that only males can represent God as leaders in Church and society...”

On the other hand, it has reconstructs and redefines, “Basic theological symbols of God, humanity, male, female...” in a “Gender-inclusive and egalitarian way.” ~Rosemary Radford Ruether, Christian feminist theologian, The Emergence of Christian Feminist Theology.

And Lutherans at Wittenberg debate whether women are really human beings at all. Orthodox Christians held women responsible for all of man's sin. As the Bible's Apocrypha states, women are to be forsaken.

“Of woman came the beginning of sin/ And thanks to her, we all must die.” ~From The Witch Hunts: The End of Magic and Miracles 1450-1750 C.E. by Helen Ellerbe from The Dark Side of Christian History.

To Pope Pius XII, “I like your Christ, but I do not like your Christians.” ~Mahatma Gandhi

AD 484- The Pope's excommunication of the Patriarch Acacius of Constantinople leads to the first great schism between the Western and the Eastern Churches [484-519] due to conflicting Biblical interpretations.

AD 484-519 Acacian Schism, over Henoticon divides the Eastern [Greek] and Western [Latin] churches.

AD 486-Underground Pagan priests are exposed, arrested, mocked, tortured and executed in Alexandria, Egypt.

AD 488-Eutyches, a monk, is condemned for stressing the Divinity of Christ, which teaches the humanity of Christ, and that Jesus was not made of the same substance as that of other men.

Because of the presence of the Divine in Jesus the Christ, His flesh was not like that of ordinary humans. The Romans considered His flesh as perfect but just like ours. According to the monophysite theory, Jesus Christ has only one nature, not two. ~From the Jesus-people to Early Christianity 30-110AD by Wim van den Dungen, Antwerp, 2010. Fundamentalist Christians base their feminist perspectives upon the Biblical significance of the fact that the Son of God assumed his human nature in a male form; that God is male.

Today, Fundamentalists guard their stubborn idiosyncratic monotheistic thinking by curtailing all outside interference via thought, books, mass media, etc., "The Fundamentalist belief system is one that purports to have all the answers. It also claims to be the only way, all deviations lead to Hell. It follows then that parents who believe this would be very concerned about what their children believe. Any alternative ways of thinking about major life questions would be highly threatening. Consequently, the Fundamentalist household rarely encourages children to explore their own thoughts, to be open-minded about ideas, or to come to their own conclusions. In fact, fundamentalist parents are typically vocal in their opposition to the teaching of critical thinking skills or values clarification in schools." ~Marlene Wineill, Leaving the Fold, Oakland, CA: New Harbinger, 1993, p. 120.

AD 491-Armenian Orthodox split from East [Greek] and West [Latin] churches.

Sporadic persecutions continue against the Pagans of the Eastern Roman Empire. Among others, the physician Jacobus, and the philosopher Gessius, are executed. Severianus, Herestios, Zosimus, Isidorus and others are also tortured and imprisoned. The proselytizer Conon and his followers exterminate the last non-Christians of Imbros Island, Northeast Aegean Sea, and the last worshipers of Lavranus Zeus are exterminated in Cyprus.

AD 492-496-The Third Black Pope: Pope Saint Gelasius, was born in Rome and renowned for his holiness, kindness and scholarship. He saved Rome from a severe famine, composed a book of religious hymns for church use, and was known for his concern for the poor. He also clarifies church teachings on the Eucharist. The black Popes are a suppressed fact due to the bigotry condoned within the Church and its fear of losing its financially endowed white members.

AD 494- Pope Saint Gelasius I declares, in a letter to Emperor Anastasius, that the Pope has power and authority over all the Emperors in regards to spiritual matters.

Women Priests In The Church: Women's participation in the leadership of small communities will come to an end when Pope Gelasius decrees that women can no longer be ordained to the priesthood, which is proof that women once served as spiritual leaders in the early Catholic Church, but women's roles in the church diminished as the male dominated role of Popes and Bishops marched in lockstep with the unsound principles of the Roman authorities.

Priests had the privilege of getting marriage, until corruption and greed made it necessary to set aside this dispensation [The Roman Legionnaires practice of abstaining from marital relations to conserve energy before a battle or a sporting event finds its way into liturgical practice].

History supports a married priesthood, and for the first 1200 years of the Roman Catholic Church's existence, priests, Bishops [as well as 39 Popes] are married. Celibacy did exist in the 1st century among austere sects of hermits and monks, but it is, in spite of everything, considered an optional, alternative lifestyle; celibacy is medieval corrupted politics brought about by the discipline of mandatory celibacy for priests imposed by an already equally corrupted Church oligarchy. Saint Peter, the first Pope, who is alleged to be closest to Jesus, is married, and all of Jesus' Apostles, except for young John, are married, and with families.

AD 495-May 13 Vicar of Christ decreed as title of Bishop of Rome by Pope Gelasius I.

AD 496-498-Pope Anastasius II; his father is a priest.

Clovis, King of the Franks, is converted to Catholicism and becomes the Defender of Christianity in the West, and the Franks become a Catholic people.

AD 498-The Constitution of Saint Silvester, Pope from 314-335, is believed to be a forgery.

"In the West, Pope Saint Silvester is so venerated even before Saint Martin of Tours, as can be shown from the 'Kalendarium' published by Fouteau, a document, which is certainly of the time of Pope Liberius." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. IV, Praenotata, compare with Kalendarium.

Two Popes are elected concurrently and the struggle for power continues for three more years. Falsification of documents is a tool used by the Church officials to further their efforts, for who would dare call a cleric a liar or a cheat?

AD 499-The Synod of Rome issues a decree on Papal elections due to infighting.

AD 500- Priests began dressing in a different manner than laypeople. Incense is introduced in Christian church service; first plans for the Vatican. Incense is introduced in Christian church service to disperse the stench in funeral services.

End of the World: A Roman priest living in the 2nd century predicts that Christ will return in 500 A.D., which he bases on the dimensions of Noah's Ark. This is the first year-with-a-nice-round-number-Christian panic. The anti-Pope, Hippolytus, and an earlier Christian academic, Sextus Julius Africanus, also predicted Armageddon at about this year.

AD 514-523-Pope Saint Hormisdas is the father of Pope Saint Silverius, 536-537, who is not considered "Illegitimate," for it is not proper to call Pope Saint Silverius illegitimate, because the rule of clerical celibacy was not firmly established in the early Church.

Pope Saint Hormisdas is married before his ordination. The Essene priests practiced it, BC 8, and Saint Augustine reluctantly adapted to it in 354, and the Church espoused it if one really wishes to be closer to God.

In 1024, Pope Benedict VIII officially approves of clerical celibacy along with Pope Calixtus II in 1123, Pope Innocent II in 1139, and confirmed again in 1967 by Pope Paul VI. Celibacy is based on the Church's interpretations of Corinthians. ~See Corinthians 7:6-7, and Matthew 19:12.

It's ironic, regarding celibacy, illiteracy being predominant within the Catholic faith, that perhaps the Popes could not read the Bible or this proves that the Church is changing its interpretations of Scripture which also disproves their claim that celibacy was not official [Is the Bible then not official prior to their decision?]. Anyway, it was forbidden for the lay to own a Bible on pain of death. For centuries, the Roman Catholic Church tortured people who wanted to read the Bible in their native language.

"The word 'Bible' was first applied to the books collectively by Saint Chrysostom [347-407] in the 5th century. And as in the case of the Old Testament, so in that of the New, copyists felt at liberty to change the language to suit their own ideas by taking our texts and inserting new ones." ~A Short History of the Bible, Being a Popular Account of the Formation and Development of the Canon by Bronson C. Keeler. The Book Tree, Escondido, California, 1997, 1881.

"When any person made a present of a book to a Church or a monastery, in which were the only libraries during these ages, it was deemed a donative of such value, that he offered it on the altar 'Pro remedio animae suae,' in order to obtain the forgiveness of his sins." ~William Robertson, Murat, vol. iii, p. 836. Hist. Liter. de France, t. vi. p. 6., Nouv. Traité du Diplomat. par deux Bénédictins, 4to. tom. i. p. 481.

AD 515-Full body Baptism becomes obligatory even for those that already claim they are Christians. The Emperor of Constantinople, Anastasius, orders the massacre of the Pagans in the Arabian city Zoara and the demolition of the temple of local pagan God, Theandrites.

AD 519-End of the first schism of 484: reconciliation of the Western and Eastern Christian Churches.

AD 522-The Catholic Church comes out strong against contraception, which will be reiterated again in the 21st century by Pope Benedict XVI, "Who is he who cannot warn that no woman may take a potion [an oral contraceptive] so that she is unable to conceive or condemns in herself the nature, which God willed to be fecund? As often as she could have conceived or given birth, of that many homicides she will be held guilty, and, unless she undergoes suitable penance, she will be damned by Eternal Death in Hell. If a woman does not wish to have children, let her enter into a religious agreement with her husband; for chastity is the sole sterility of a Christian woman." ~Caesarius of Arles, Sermons: 12, 522 C.E. On marriage and concupiscence.

"I am supposing, then, although are not lying [with your wife] for the sake of procreating offspring, you are not for the sake of lust obstructing their procreation by an evil prayer or an evil deed. Those who do this, although they are called husband and wife, are not; nor do they retain any reality of marriage, but with a respectable name cover a shame. Sometimes this lustful cruelty, or cruel lust, comes to this, that they even procure poisons of sterility [oral contraceptives]... Assuredly if both husband and wife are like this, they are not married, and if they were like this from the beginning they come together not joined in matrimony but in seduction. If both are not like this, I dare to say that either the wife is in a fashion the Harlot of her husband or he is an Adulterer with his own wife." ~Saint Augustine, on Marriage and Concupiscence, 1:15:17, 419 C.E.

No contraceptives in the Catholic faith are allowed, "Why do you sow where the field is eager to destroy the fruit, where there are medicines of sterility [oral contraceptives], where there is murder before birth? You do not even let a harlot remain only a harlot, but you make her a murderess as well... Indeed, it is something worse than murder, and I do not know what to call it; for she does not kill what is formed but prevents its formation. What then? Do you condemn the gift of God and fight with his [Natural] laws?... Yet such turpitude... The matter still seems indifferent to many men--even to many men having wives. In this indifference of the married men there is greater evil filth; for then poisons are prepared, not against the womb of a prostitute, but against your injured wife. Against her are these innumerable tricks." ~Saint John Chrysostom, Homilies on Romans 24, 391 C.E.

AD 523-Emperor Justin I outlaws the Arian heresy and campaigns to suppress Arianism throughout the Empire.

AD 525-Dionysius Exiguus [500-560], aka Denny the Dwarf, a Roman theologian and mathematician, in his "Easter Tables" wrongly dates the birth of Jesus Christ as December 23; 753 years after the founding of Rome, which took place in 753 [Dionysius Exiguus defines the Christian calendar (A.D.)]

Constance becomes Bishop's see.

AD 527-565- Justinian I, becomes the Roman Emperor in Constantinople, aided by wife his Theodora [an actress, and perhaps a harlot, and Monophysite] and his Generals Belisarius and the eunuch Narses, attempt to recover Western Empire from the invading Vandals and Goths, lost over time to various conquerors; reconquest of the West is accomplished at a high price, the neglect of the Balkans and Asia; end the practice of regional governors, buying their posts, and recouping the costs from weighty taxes.

AD 528-Emperor Justinian prohibits the alternative Olympian Games of Antioch, and orders execution-by fire, crucifixion, tearing to pieces by wild beasts, or cutting to pieces by iron nails, of all who practice sorcery, divination, magic, or idol worshiping, and prohibits all teachings by the Pagans [the ones suffering from the blasphemous madness of the Hellenes]. ~Note: Later the Orthodox Church will support idol worshiping in order to convert more Pagans.

The Code of the Emperor Justinian decrees that in Christian Byzantine society the Jews can no longer read their sacred books in the Hebrew language in their Synagogues, and the Mishnah and other rabbinic interpretations are also banned.

Sexual indiscretions are not unique to the 20th century. Bishops from various provinces are accused of living immorally, in matters of the flesh, and of indulging in homosexual practices. Amongst them was Isaiah, Bishop of Rhodes, an ex praefectus vigilium at Constantinople, and approximating the judicious Bishop from Diospolis, in Thrace named Alexander.

In accordance with a sacred ordinance they are brought to Constantinople and examined, then condemned by Victor the city prefect, who orders them punished; torturing Isaiah severely, exiling him, having amputated Alexander's genitals, and then paraded around on a litter.

The Roman Emperor [sc. Justinian I] immediately decrees that those who are detected [caught] in pederasty [anal intercourse] should have their genitals amputated. At this time many homosexuals are then arrested and died soon after having their genitals amputated. From then on there is fear amongst those still afflicted with homosexual lust [unnatural vices]. ~John Malalas: On Isaiah of Rhodes and Alexander of Diospolis from World History, 18:18 As translated in John Malalas, The Chronicle, trans. Elizabeth Jeffreys, Michael Jeffreys and Roger Scott, et al., Melbourne: Australian Association for Byzantine Studies, 1986, pg. 253.

AD 529-Justinian I, Byzantine Emperor, expels all Pagan teachers, and professes the new Christian faith under Pope John II.

Emperor Justinian outlaws the Athenian Philosophical Academy and has its property confiscated [giving the property of the Church].

AD 529-Monte Cassino: Saint Benedict of Nursia founds Benedictine monasteries. Monasteries, in general, are founded by those religious dissidents, which the Church allows, if their religious beliefs and practices do not differ widely from those of the Mother Church.

Emperor Justinian closes the 1000-year-old School of Philosophy in Athens, an action directed against Paganism rather than the Greek philosophies, which have intruded Catholicism causes many professors to leave to Persia and Syria.

Saint John Chrysostom describes Pythagoras as a sorcerer and a barbarian, and within half a century, Imperial edicts require the burning of all non-Christian books. Many libraries of antiquity had been attached to Pagan temples, academies, and public baths and will suffer in the general attack by zealot Christians on these vulgar Pagan edifices.

Not everyone interprets Scripture according to the Orthodox faith, “Even the Christian religion, though its precepts are delivered, and its institutions are fixed in Scripture with a precision, which should have exempted them from being misinterpreted or corrupted, degenerated during those ages of darkness into an illiberal superstition. The barbarous nations when converted to Christianity changed the object, not the spirit of their religious worship. They endeavored to conciliate the favor of the ‘True God’ by means not unlike to those, which they had employed in order to appease their false deities. Instead of aspiring to sanctity and virtue, which alone can render men acceptable to the great author of order and of excellence, they imagined that they satisfied every obligation of duty by a scrupulous observance of external ceremonies. Religion, according to their conception of it, comprehended nothing else, and the rites, by which they persuaded themselves that they could gain the favor of Heaven, were of such a nature as might have been expected from the rude ideas of the ages, which devised, and introduced them. They were either so unmeaning as to be altogether unworthy of the Being to whose honor they were consecrated, or so absurd as to be a disgrace to reason and humanity.” ~William Robertson, 1721-1793, History, p. 19.

Plato's Academy, and the last of the Pagan schools, are closed by Justinian in 529 C.E. In contrast to the physical assault upon science and Paganism, Imperial benefaction and affluence from the elite continues to pour into a plethora of new Christian churches, monasteries and nunneries glorifying the Christian God and securing for their patrons 'A place in Heaven.' Starved of funds, as well as legality, scientific research inevitably withers and dies. ~Firmicus Maternus by Patrick Healy.

Born Again? The Egyptian worshipers of Attis believed that, “He whom they had buried a little while earlier had come to life again.” ~Firmicus Maternus, The Error of the Pagan Religions, Ch. 3.

Attis followers were baptized in this way: A bull was placed over a grating, the devotee stood under the grating. The bull was stabbed with a consecrated spear, and, “Its hot reeking blood poured in torrents through the apertures and was received with devout eagerness by the worshiper... Who had been born again to eternal life and had washed away his sins in the blood of the bull.” ~Frazer, Attis ch. 1.

Emperor Justinian's Code of Civil Laws-the Codex Vetus is issued.

Justinian closes Hellenic Greek philosophy in Athens because of Hellenism/Christianity divergences.

AD 530- It is not known at what date India first commenced to have resident Catholic Bishops; but between the years 530-35 Cosmas Indicopleustes in his “Topographia” informs us of the presence of a Bishop residing in Caliana, the modern Kalyan at a short distance from Bombay, India.

That residence was, in all probability, chosen because it was then the chief port of commerce on the west coast of India, and had easy access and communication with Persia. We know later of a contention, which took place between Jesub of Adiabene the Nestorian Patriarch and Simeon of Ravardshir, the Metropolitan of Persia, who had left India unprovided with Bishops for a long period. ~Alexandria by Dan Sewell Ward.

It is not till the year 530 C.E., a full five centuries after the supposed birth of Christ, that a Scythian Monk, Dionysius Exiguus, an abbot and astronomer of Rome, a.k.a. Denny the dwarf, was commissioned to fix the day and the year of Jesus' birth. A nice problem, considering the lack of chronological discipline of that period! For year he assigned the date, which Christianity has now adopted, the day and month of the 25th of December, a date, which had been in popular use since about 350 B.C.E., and the very date, within a day or two, of the birth of numerous [previously known] Pagan Sun Gods.

AD 532-The inquisitor Ioannis Asiaticus, a fanatical Christian monk, leads a Crusade [one of the first] against the Pagans of Minor Asia.

Riots in Constantinople, known as the Christian City [thirty thousand-30,000 Christians are slain by Roman Guards loyal to the Emperor]. Empress Theodora, a former prostitute, stays to fight while her husband, the cowardly Emperor Justinian, in fear, prepares to depart.

Roman Emperor, Constantine the Great founded this great Christian Empire and claims to have seen a cross in the sky superimposed on the sun [Chi-Rho, in a circle], a claim Constantine does not speak of until four years after the alleged incident.

It [the cross with a circle superimposed upon it] came from his family God. It represented the initials of the name of Christ in the form of a Sun Wheel. He goes on to win in battle. Constantine is a syncretist and his statue bears the rayed crown of the Sun God, although many Catholic writers still claim him as one of their own, he was a pagan, until his death bed. The Nicene Creed [Trinity] is compiled during Emperor Constantine's time.

AD 533-535-Pope John II, the first Pope to change his given election name to that of Mercury, a Pagan God.

Christian Influence: Byzantine Emperor Justinian I, decrees that homosexuality and blasphemy are equally to blame for famines, earthquakes, and pestilence, and orders castration for homosexual offenders.

AD 533-The works of Origen are condemned during the Second Council of Constantinople [not all of his works, only that, which does not agree with the new Church Doctrines]. Origen is remembered for his strong views and also for his self-castration, believing he would be closer to heaven. ~Matthew 19:12.

John II becomes the first Pope to change his name. The practice does not become general until the time of Pope Sergius IV [1009].

Councils of Orleans, 533-541 C.E., prohibited marriages between Christians and Jews and forbade the conversion to Judaism by Christians.

AD 534- Justinian replaces Codex Vetus with Codex Repeitae Praelectionis

AD 535-536-Pope Saint Agapetus I, whose father is Gordianus, a Catholic priest. "Pope Saint Agapetus I was the son of a Roman priest slain during the riots in the days of Pope Symmachus. His first official act was to burn in the presence of the assembled clergy the anathema, which Pope Boniface II had propounded against the latter's rival Dioseurus." ~Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. 1, p. 202.

AD 536-537-Pope Saint Silverius, married, wife's name is Antonia, his father is Pope Saint Hormisdus, 514-523 C.E.

AD 537-555 Pope Vigilius is involved in the death of Pope Silverius, conspires with Justinian and Theodora, and on April 11, 548 issues Judicatum supporting Justinian's anti-Hypostatic Union; excommunicated by Bishops of Carthage in 550. Pope Vigilius replaces Pope Silverius after he trumps up charges per orders of Empress Theodora. Religion is a financially successful venture and the Empress wishes to control this lucrative religious business. The Romans vent their anger on Vigilius' successor and friend Pope Pelagius I.

Emperor Justinian decrees that the Jews must still maintain [pay for] municipal government, even though they are forbidden to hold any public offices.

AD 538- The Code of the Emperor Justinian decrees that in Christian Byzantine society, Jews can no longer read their sacred books in Hebrew in their synagogues, and the Mishnah and other rabbinic interpretations are banned.

The Third Synod of Orleans decrees that Jews cannot show themselves in the streets during Passover Week.

AD 540-604-End of the World? -Pope Gregory I, Saint; also known as Gregory the Great, Saint Gregory, great-grandson to Pope Felix III, politically connected, convinces the nobles that the End of the World is near and convinces many of them to leave their estates to the Church. Many of the nobles, deceived by Pope Saint Gregory, think the world will end soon, sign over their lands so that they may receive benedictions from the Church and insure their ascent to Heaven.

Pope Gregory the Great [Saint] actually renounces the title given to him of "Universal Pope," of being the "Pontifex Maximus." Pope Gregory the Great criticizes use of the title "Universal Bishop" and denies Peter was a "Universal Apostle," "Your Blessedness has also been careful to declare that you do not now make use of proud titles, which have sprung from a root of vanity, in writing to certain persons, and you address me saying, As you have commanded. This word, command, I beg you to remove from my hearing, since I know who I am, and who you are. For in position you are my brethren, in character my fathers. I did not, then, command, but was desirous of indicating what seemed to be profitable. Yet I do not find that your Blessedness has been willing to remember perfectly this very thing that I brought to your recollection. For I said that neither to me nor to any one else ought you to write anything of the kind; and lo, in the preface of the Epistle, which you have addressed to myself who forbade it, you have thought fit to make use of a proud appellation, calling me Universal Pope. But I beg your most sweet Holiness to do this no more, since what is given to another beyond what reason demands is subtracted from yourself. For as for me, I do not seek to be prospered by words but by my conduct. Nor do I regard that as an honor whereby I know that my brethren lose their honor. For my honor is the honor of the Universal Church: my honor is the solid vigor of my brethren. Then am I truly honored when the honor due to all and each is not denied them. For if your Holiness calls me Universal Pope, you deny that you are yourself what you call me Universally. But far be this from us. Away with words that inflate vanity and wound charity. And, indeed, in the synod of Chalcedon and after wards by subsequent Fathers, your Holiness knows that this was offered to my predecessors. And yet not one of them would ever use this title, that, while regarding the honor of all priests in this world, they might keep their own before Almighty God." ~Book VIII, Epistle XXX: To Eulogius, Bishop of Alexandria.

Wherever she went, the Church would use the ignorance of the indigenous peoples to enrich her coffers. Stealing, falsifying, and eradication of whole peoples is not unknown. "Do not move your neighbor's boundary stone set up by your predecessors in the inheritance you receive in the land the Lord your God is giving you to possess." ~Deuteronomy 19:14.

Today this would be claimed as one of the biggest hoaxes [fraud] perpetrated upon man by a [great?] religious leader, unfortunately for the nobles, the World Does Not End, and of course, the Church refuses to return the lands when the world does not end.

This leads to further future disputes with royalty regarding their lands that they believe were taken by deception. Within a short period, the Pope becomes the richest man and largest slaveholder in the known world, and many nobles have lost title to their lands. The Roman Church, contradictory to their present day teachings, believed in slavery and supported the belief in having slaves until the 18th century. ~See Leviticus, Chapter 25, verses 44 to 46 for the basis of the End of the World beliefs and Timothy, Chapter 6, verse 1.

Saint Ignatius of Antioch refused the request of Christian slaves to have their freedom purchased out of the common fund, while Saint Augustine also taught that slavery is God's will and that Christianity did not make slaves free but made merely good slaves out of bad ones. ~The City of God 19.5.

Both Saint Ignatius of Asia Minor and Barnabas of Alexandria condemned Sabbath-keeping.

"Early in the 11th century Pope Benedict VIII condemned the children of priests to be slaves, and Pope Clement, did likewise to the whole population of Venice in 1309. Pope Paul III, decreed slavery for all Englishmen who supported King Henry VIII of England. Papal licenses were granted to the Kings of Portugal in the 15th century to conquer 'heathen' countries and reduce their inhabitants to 'everlasting slavery.' Altogether, more than eighteen hundred years of Christianity supported the notion of slavery." ~Slavery, an article in A Dictionary of Common Fallacies, p. 235, which was based on an article in The Humanist, October 1959, p. 3. The Feast of the Nativity of Saint John is set down in the Papal calendar for the 24th of June, or Midsummer-day. The very same period was equally memorable in the Babylonian calendar as that of one of its most celebrated festivals. It was at Midsummer, or the summer solstice, that the month called in Chaldea, Syria, and Phoenicia by the name of "Tammuz" began; and on the first day, that is, on or about the 24th of June, which was celebrated as the grand original festivals of Tammuz. ~Ezekiel 8:14.

The Papacy sent its emissaries over all of Europe, towards the end of the 6th century, to gather in the Pagans into its religious fold, and this festival was found to be quite in vogue in many countries, and upon the advice of Pope Gregory I, by all means the Church should meet the Pagans half way, and so bring them into the Roman Church, the Gregorian policy was carefully observed, and the midsummer day, that had been hallowed by Paganism to the worship of Tammuz, was incorporated as a sacred Christian festival in the Roman calendar. What was to be the name of this Pagan festival, when it was baptised, and admitted into the ritual of Roman Christianity?

To call it by its old name of 'Bel' or 'Tammuz', at this early period would have been too bold. To call it by the name of Christ was difficult, inasmuch as there was nothing special in 'His' history during that period to commemorate. But the subtlety of the agents of the 'Mystery of Iniquity' were not to be baffled.

If the name of Christ could not be conveniently tacked to it, what should hinder its being called by the name of His forerunner, John the Baptist since John the Baptist was born six months before the Lord? One of the many sacred names by which Tammuz or Nimrod was called, when he reappeared in the Mysteries, after being slain, was 'Oannes.'
